
Where hee ſaith, that Zion was filled with iudgement and iuſtice, it is another confirmation; to wit, that God will ſhew ſignes of his ſpeciall fauour, when the Iewes ſhall be deliuered from the tyrannie of the Caldeans. And it was no leſſe then needfull, to ſet the author of ſo great a benefit before their eies: for we ſee how peruerſly we darken his glorie by our ingratitude. To be filled with iuſtice and iudgement, ſignifies, that God will liberally and abundantly ſhed abroad his grace in the reſtauration of his Church. Neither will the ſenſe be much impertinent, if we refer this to a right politike order, when all things are iuſtly and wel mannaged: for without that, the Church ſhall neuer floriſh, though all things elſe ſucceed according to our wiſh. We muſt meaſure our proſperous eſtate then by iuſtice and iudgement rightly executed, and not by the ouerflowing of theſe corruptible things.

He hath filled.

1

2

Verſ. 6. And there ſhall be ſtabilitie of thy times, ſtrength, ſaluation, wiſdome, and knowledge: for the feare of the Lord ſhall be his treaſure.

HEe promiſeth that the eſtate of the kingdome ſhall ſtill bee happie and glorious vnder Hezechias, hauing reſpect principally to that wofull and miſerable ſcattering which was ſeene in Achaz his daies. For albeit the enemie was expulſed, yet was there ſmall hope that the Iewes (being in ſuch extremitie) ſhould haue recouered their firſt condition. As touching the words, ſome tranſlate thus; There ſhall bee in thy times, truth, ſtrength, and ſaluation: as if the Prophet ſhould relate what felicitie the people ſhould inioy vnder this holy King: and they thinke that euery word containes in it ſo many benefits of God. Others take the word ſtabilitie, for fidelitie; as if the Prophet ſhould haue ſaid; that it ſhould bee in ſtead of ſaluation and ſtrength. Otherſome draw a ſenſe from hence a little differing; to wit, that ſtrength, ſaluation, and knowledge, ſhall bee ſtable vnder Hezechias. But when I ſcan the words of the Prophet conſiderately, I had rather make another diſtinction; to wit, that ſtabilitie, ſtrength, and ſaluation ſhall reigne in wiſdome and knowledge vnder Hezechias: and ſo, that which is by and by added, the feare of the Lord ſhall be the treaſure of this good King, will follow and agree well. For in time of peace, euery one deſires to be ſecured: yet how few are there that care to vſe the meanes to inioy ſo great a benefit? Nay, doe not the moſt part pamper themſelues as ſwine in the ſtie? ſo as whileſt blind couetouſneſſe drawes all the world after things earthly, few make any reckoning of that incomprehenſible light of the heauenly doctrine.

The Prophets meaning then is, that the Churches felicitie ſhall be ſtable, when wiſdome and knowledge beares ſway therein, and that ſtrength ſhall long indure, when the knowledge of God is aduanced: thirdly, that eternall ſaluation ſhall dwell there, when men ſhall be taught rightly to know it. This is a verie excellent place: from whence we may learne, that ingratitude ſhuts out Gods bleſſings from vs: that is, when we forſake them to wallow our ſelues in earthly and carnall deſires: alſo, that although all the benefits we could imagin or deſire, were giuen vnto vs, yet ſhall all turne to our ruin and deſtruction, vnleſſe they bee ſeaſoned with the ſalt of faith and knowledge.

1

2

3

No benefits of God ſweet and ſauorie to vs, vnleſſe they be ſeaſoned with the ſalt of faith and knowledge. Where the light of Gods word is quenched, our greateſt proſperitie is worſe then the worſt thing the world can afford without it.

Wee may therefore hence conclude, that the Church hath no ſtrength, vnleſſe the knowledge of God preceede all other benefits, and that ſhe then truly floriſheth, whileſt ſhe willingly confeſſeth to hold all the graces ſhee hath of Gods free bountie. But where this light of the word is wanting, and the true knowledge of God is either dimmed, or put out, the greateſt proſperitie we can inioy, is worſe then all the miſeries the world can afford. I therefore refer ſtabilitie, ſtrength, and ſaluation, to one & the ſame thing; to wit, that the Church ſhall haue ſtabilitie, when blindneſſe and error being baniſhed, men ſhall begin to learne the knowledge of God.

By this wee ſee what Church there is amongſt the Papiſts, (a pompous and glorious one it is indeed in outward ſhew); but where is this knowledge? Therfore cā ſhe not be ſtable; neither is ſhe the Church of God. If the Lord then ſhew vs that fauour, that the light of faith may ſhine truly amongſt vs, other blessings no doubt shall easily flow vnto vs: and if it fall out we be shaken with diuers stormes, yet God will vphold vs alwaies with his hand. Now when he saith, thy times, he speakes to Hezekias, not as to a priuat person, but as to the head of the people, vnder whom also the whole bodie is comprehended.

But seeing the kingdome of Hezekias was but a little shadow of Christ his kingdome as we haue touched before, these things therefore ought to be referred vnto Christ, in whom are hid all the treasures of wisdome and knowledge. We are also to note these titles which are vsed to set forth the commendation of Gods word, and the doctrine of the Gospell: S. Paul also doth the like, Coloss. 1.9. when he saith, Teaching in all knowledge and wisdome: for by this praise, he extols the dignitie of the Gospell. Whence we also gather, that where Iesus Christ is not truly knowne, there men are destitute of true wisdome, although they be expert in all other sciences, which without this are all but vanitie.

Coloss. 2.3.

Moreouer it seemes the feare of God should be added for an exposition, that the Prophet might the better manifest that the knowledge whereof he spake was the gouernesse of pietie, being neither idle nor vaine, but penetrating with efficacie into our hearts to conforme vs to the feare of God. See therefore why this feare is elsewhere called knowledge, Prou. 1.9. and 9.10. yea, the beginning of it, that is to say, the summe and principall part of wisdome. And those deceiue themselues which take the word beginning for the first rudiméts or elements, seeing Salomon meanes the beginning, and the end: for as men are fooles vntill they haue submitted themselues vnto the word of God, so the perfection of wisdome flowes from teachablenes, or the obedience of faith. The feare of God then is called his treasure, because without it all prosperitie is but miserie: whence it yet further appeares that all the parts of a prosperous life consists in the knowledge of God, which we attaine by faith.

Knowledge the gouernesse of pietie.

The feare of God not only the beginning, but also the end of wisdome.

All outward felicitie meere beggerie without the feare of God.

Also vnder the person of this king he shews that it is an inestimable treasure to serue God in such deuotion and humilitie as is meete: and further he esteemes all them miserable and forlorne people which are void of this feare of God. On the contrarie, blessed and happie are all those which feare him, albeit of the world they be iudged the most miserable of all others. But what feare speakes he of here? Euen of that which conteines in it true obedience, and a reformation of our minds and affections. For the wicked haue a feare of God, but they feare him as malefactors doe their Iudge. Such a feare deserues no such praise, because it proceeds not from the true knowledge of God, nor from a readie desire to serue him. It therefore is directlie contrarie to that wisdome whereof our Prophet speakes, who hath so applied these things vnto Hezekias, that in the meane while they also appertaine to the whole bodie of the people, as we haue said before. Whence we gather, that they haue relation vnto the people as well as the king: but much more vnto Christ, who was filled with the Spirit of the feare of the Lord (as we haue seene in the 11. Chapter) to make vs partakers with him of ỹ same grace.

These things haue reference first to Hezekiah, secondly to the people, but especiallie to Christ.

Vers. 7. Behold, their messengers shall crie without, and the Ambassadors of peace shall weepe bitterlie.

8. The paths are wast: the wayfaring man ceaseth: he hath broken the Couenant: he hath contemned the Cities: he regardeth no man.

IT is not very certaine whether Isaiah here mentions the perplexitie and danger in which the Iewes were, the rather to set forth the greatnes of their deliuerance: or, whether he foretels the calamitie which was to come, that the faithfull should not faint vnderneath it. For mine owne part, I thinke this is not to be referred to the historie of that which already happened: for in regard that sharp and sore temptations were at hand, it was necessarie that the faithfull should be fortified to wait patientlie for the help of God euen then whē things should be growne desperate. Howsoeuer it be, it is a wofull and lamentable description of the wast of the Church; that in these dangers the faithfull might hold fast their confidence: secondly, that seeing themselues deliuered, they might acknowledge they were no other way rid from them but by the wonderfull power of God. 1 2

The signe of a desperate estate is noted out, when he saith, that the Ambassadors which were sent to appease this tyrant, could obteine no truce, for which cause they returned with bitter sorrow and teares, not being able to hide the same in their iourney, but were willing to manifest to others what was in their hearts, in regard they were in such a wretched estate. No doubt but Sennacherib with proud and scornefull reproaches refused the conditions of peace which were offred him, so as the Ambassadors were constreined openly to lament and crie, as hauing forgotten the dignitie of their persons; and letted not to publish the answer which this tyrant gaue them, euen before they returned to the King their master to giue an account of their Ambassage. Others by the Ambassadors of peace, vnderstand those which were wont to proclaime peace: but this interpretation is vnapt, and as I thinke, too farre fetched. By the Ambassadors of peace, I vnderstand those which were sent to appease Senacherib, and to redeeme peace with any conditions.

In the next verse he addes, that the waies shall be so stopped vp that there shall be no commers or goers, as it falles out when open warres are proclaimed. Now it seemes that the Prophet brings in the Ambassadors, telling how it shall not be lawfull for them to passe to nor fro any more, the passages shall be so dangerous. As touching that which followes, he hath broken the Couenant, some expound it, as if the hypocrits complained that God kept not his promise. But if this be referred ferred vnto God, ſuch a complaint may be attributed not onely to the hypocrits, but to the faithfull alſo, who ſometimes expoſtulate the matter on this wiſe with the Lord: but I like not this ſenſe. And therefore I rather thinke the Prophet continues to ſet forth the crueltie and vnappeaceable furie of Sennacherib, who diſloyally brake the couenant which he made before with Hezechias. For albeit he promiſed truce; yet as ſoone as any occaſion offered it ſelfe to inuade Iudea, he falſified his faith, and began warre afreſh. Thereunto appertaines that which is in the end of the verſe, he conſumed the Cities, and regarded no mans perſon: wherein he ſhewes, that the crueltie of this tyrant was ſuch, that bee could not be withheld, neither by feare, nor ſhame.

Verſ. 9. The earth mourneth and fainteth: Lebanon is aſhamed, and hewen downe: Sharon is like a wilderneſſe, and Baſhan is ſhaken and Carmell.

10. Now will I ariſe, ſaith the Lord, now will I bee exalted, now will I lift vp my ſelfe.

HE here more fully expreſſeth after what maner they ſhould ſee the eſtate of Iudeah miſerably diſtreſſed, yet ſo, that their faith in the end ſhould breake forth as out of a bottomleſſe gulfe. He alſo names the places particularly, to wit, Lebanon, Baſhan, and Carmell, which are far diſtant one from another, being as it were the borders of the holy land: all which is to ſhew, that no corner ſhall be ſpared, or reſt in ſafetie. And in the deſcription of this deſolation, hee attributes to euery ſeuerall place, that which agreed with the ſituation of it; as to Lebanon, ſhame and confuſion: becauſe glory and beautie are attributed vnto it in other places, in regard it was repleniſhed and adorned with great and goodly trees. As touching Sharon, becauſe it was a plaine and fertile ſoile, he ſaith, it ſhall be like a wilderneſſe. That Baſhan and Carmell is ſhaken, becauſe there grew abundance of fruits. Thus he alludes to the nature of theſe places, and deſcribes the miſerie and calamitie which ſhould befall the ſame, that hee might the better amplifie and ſet forth the mercy and goodneſſe of God, which ſhould be the cauſe of their deliuerance, albeit for the preſent, they ſaw themſelues as good as forlorne. For here was cauſe to behold the immediat hand of God. Vnleſſe any had rather ſay, that the Prophet recites a thing already done, to ſtir the people vp to thankſgiuing.

1. King. 7. 2. Pſal. 92. 12. Chap. 35. 2.

Verſe 10. Now I will ariſe] The particle now, is of great weight: alſo this double repetition, I will be exalted, I will ariſe: for we muſt note the time to which this is to bee referred; to wit, euen to that in which the Church in mans iudgement was brought to nought: for then will it bee ſoone enough for God to yeeld her ſuccour. There is here therefore a compariſon of things contrary: for hee ſets the horrible calamities before the faithfull, which ſhould oppreſſe & eaſily ouerwhelme them, had they not been fortified with ſome conſolation. As if he ſhould ſay, The Lord will indeed ſuffer you to bee brought to the extremitie; but when you ſhall lie as it were at the laſt gaſpe, and in vaine ſhall haue proued all waies to diſpatch your ſelues thereout, himſelfe will ariſe for your deliuerance. For it is of neceſſitie that wee be thus afflicted and preſſed to the vtmoſt; to the end wee may know God to be the onely author of our ſaluation.

The word now therefore ſignifies a time of extreme miſerie. A man would thinke this to be a ſtrange kind of dealing in the Lord: but the anſwere is at hand; God thus defers his ſuccour, becauſe it is good, firſt that the patience of the faithfull ſhould be exerciſed: ſecondly, that their faith ſhould bee tried: thirdly, their fleſh tamed: fourthly, that they might be the better ſtirred vp to feruencie in praiers: fiftly, that they might be raiſed vp in the hope of the life to come. And therefore this blocke is laid in our way, leſt they ſhould preuent the time which the Lord allotted out vnto them.

Afflictions exerciſeth our patience, tries our faith, tames the fleſh, quickens praier, and raiſeth vp in vs the hope of the life to come.

The repetition is very weightie, and is added for the greater confirmation of the matter: for when things ſtand perplexed, wee thinke our ſelues vndone; whereas we ſhould hope aboue hope, becauſe then is the time when the Lord vſeth chiefly to manifeſt his power. For this cauſe he exhorts the faithfull to be of good courage, in ſetting before them theſe commendations of his glorious puiſſance; that none needs to feare, but valiantly to buckle with the pride of their enemies.

Verſ. 11. Yee ſhall conceiue chaffe, and bring forth ſtubble: the fire of your breath ſhall deuoure you.

12. And the people ſhall bee as the burning of lime: and as the thornes cut vp ſhall they be burnt in the fire.

NOw hee turnes his ſpeech againſt the enemies of the Church, which vainelie and fooliſhly exalt themſelues: for when God ſhould once begin in wonderfull manner to vtter forth his power, they ſhould then haue triall of the vanitie of their enterpriſes, and ſhould be able to bring nothing to paſſe, although by great troopes they aſſembled themſelues together, to put their plots in execution. For the Lord ſcornes their rage, in regard they imagined they were Lords of the world; whereas he in a moment can cut them off, notwithſtanding all their preparations. Now it is an vſuall maner of ſpeech in Scripture, to call mens deliberations and enterpriſes conceptions. The ſimilitude is taken from women with child. And therefore it is ſaid, that men conceiue & bring forth, when they imagin and put ſome wicked thing in execution: but our Prophet telles them, that ſuch conceptions ſhall turne to nothing, and that the birth also shall vanish into smoke, so as they shall not prosper in any thing which they take in hand. What neede we then to feare all these goodly and gay shewes which our enemies make? For say, that God suffers them for a time to consult, to imagin, and rage against vs, yet in the end he wil scatter all that they haue rashly, and proudly done, as chaffe before the winde. Let vs also know that this which Isaiah hath propheſied against Senacherib, doth likewise appertaine to all the enemies of the Church and faithfull people.

Pſal. 7. 14. Iſai. 59. 4.

that

Where he denounceth that they shall be deuoured by the fire of their owne breath, or spirit. Some are wont to expound it, Your spirit is like a fire which shal consume you: but this similitude is both vnapt and absurd. The true exposition is cleare enough, The fire which your breath hath kindled, shall deuoure you: for we are wont to kindle the fire by blowing of it. He teacheth then that the fire which the wicked haue kindled by their wicked deuices, shall turne to their ruine, because they shall be consumed by them.

See Chap. 50. 11.

Now this sentence is the same which the Scripture so often and so diuerslie repeates, as, They shal fall into the pit which they haue digged: In the nets which they haue laid are their owne feet taken, Psal.7.15. Their sword which they haue drawne shall pierce their owne bowels, and their bow shall be broken, Psal.37.15. The Prophet shewes then that this wretched tyrant (which had destroyed all Iudea, and laid siege with great force against Ierusalem) as likewise the rest of ỹ Churches enemies, should draw ruine vpon their owne heads, and in the end vtterlie perish. In a word, the fire which themselues had kindled should be the only meanes to consume them.

Afterwards he compares them to the burning of lime, in regard ỹ their flintines should be mollified, euen as the fire desolues the stones, so that they should be brought to pouder and dust very easilie. Questionles the wicked rush themselues vpon their owne destruction by their owne headines, so greedie they are to doe hurt. The similitude of thornes is no lesse proper, for albeit they wound thẽ shrewdly which touch them, yet there is no wood that burnes so violentlie, or is sooner consumed. The like is to be seene in lime, for the fire softens and desolues it, notwithstanding it be neuer so hard at the first. This he saith shall befall the Caldeans, because the Lord shall cut them off in an instant, albeit they were then feared of all: and that their consumption should be brought to passe, when there was no appearance thereof at all. As oft then as wee see the enemies of the Church heape vp treasures, and gather men and munition together to bring vs to wrack, and to put all the world in an hurliburlie, let vs assure our selues they are kindling the fire in which themselues shall miserablie be consumed.

Whatsoeuer preparations the enemies of the Church make to consume her, is but the kindling and blowing of that fire which in the end shall consume themselues.

We know this was fulfilled in Senacherib, for time was the best expositor of the truth of these propheſies, how incredible soeuer they seemed then. Let vs hope then against hope that the same wil befall those that tread in the steps of this tyrant, and by this and infinite other examples let vs fortifie our selues and others in our miseries and calamities, out of which doubtlesse we shall be deliuered, and shall behold the horrible vengeance which shall fall vpon our enemies.

Verſ. 13. Heare, ye that are farre off, what I haue done: and ye that are neere know my power.

Isaiah makes a Preface here, as one minding to speake something of great importance: for he calles for audience of his hearers, which men are wont to doe when any excellent or matter worthie of note is to be propounded. He speakes to them that were neere, which should be eie-witnesses as it were of this spectacle: also he calles those a farre off, which should heare of it by report. As if he should say, Such shall be the power of God, that it shall not only be manifested to some neere bordering nations, but also to those that are very farre remote from them. His meaning is then, that God will make his worke knowne by some notable and speciall signe of his presence. Why so? Because the wicked which before quietlie reposed themselues in safetie as being exempt out of all danger, should now on the sudden be surprized with feares and terrors.

Verſ. 14. The sinners in Zion are afraid: a feare is come vpon the hypocrits: Who among vs shall dwell with the deuouring fire: who among vs shall dwell with the euerlasting burning.

Obiect. BVt some might replie, that there is no such great matter here to vse so solemne a Preface, as to summon all the world to heare, was it a thing of so great importance that the wicked should be affrighted? I answere, If all Anſ. be well considered it will be found no small testimonie of Gods power to awaken sinners out of their drouzines, and to make them (will they nill they) feele that God is their Iudge, but then especiallie, when they haue couered their contempt of God vnder the maske of hypocrisie. For albeit it is a matter of great difficultie to awaken ỹ prophane ones, when their hearts are indurate: yet the obstinacie of hypocrits farre exceeds theirs, who thinke God much beholding vnto thẽ. They are so bewitched then we see, that they contemne all threatnings, and scorne the iudgements of God, and with their flouts & mocks they reiect all the propheſies, so as it is a miracle to ouercome one of them who so obstinately resist. Thinke therefore that it is not without cause that our Prophet is so sharp in rebuking of them. For doubtlesse he galles the bastard Iewes by mentioning Zion: who shrouding themselues vnder the shadow of the Temple, thought themselues secure in so inuinsible a fortresse, that no harme could befall them. And truly, there are none more proud or hautie then they (as hath bin said) which glorie so much in the name of God, and in the titles of the Church.

It is a miracle to subdue an obstinate hypocrite.

The

The word Manephich, is trãſlated Hypocrits; but it may alſo bee generally taken for traytors and reuolters. Seeing they were ſo wicked then, as to mocke at God himſelfe, and his true Prophets, he denounceth, they ſhall feele him to be a ſharp and ſeuere Iudge, that ſo they might ceaſe to take pleaſure in their ſubtilties.

He addes a confeſſion, which hath an appearance of humility; the better to ſhew, that ſuch hypocrits as doe not willingly obey the word of the Lord, ſhall in the end feele by experience (the miſtris of fooles) how terrible Gods iudgements are. When laughter ſhall be turned into gnaſhing of teeth, then they ſhall begin to confeſſe, that all their force was nought elſe but ſtraw and ſtubble. Now for the wordes: ſome tranſlate; Who ſhall dwell for vs? others; Who among vs ſhall dwell? If we ſimply reade it, For vs; this will bee the ſenſe; who dare oppoſe himſelfe againſt the fire? or, Will put himſelfe between it and vs, that the flame thereof touch vs not? The other interpretations will beare the ſame ſenſe; but the expoſitors differs in this, that ſome refer it to the King of Aſſyria; and others, vnto God: which latter, I rather receiue, as I haue ſaid alreadie. For albeit the Aſſyrian was as a fire that burnt vp the country by his heate; yet our Prophet meant to expreſſe a more terrible thing then it; to wit, that inward torment and vexation of minde, wherewith the wicked are racked, the ſtings of conſcience which cannot be auoided, and that vnquenchable fire of offences which ſurmounts all torments. So then it is iuſtice with God to deale with ſinners as they deale with him. And therefore the Lord is called (in reſpect of them) a deuouring fire, by Moſes, Deut. 4.24. For the Prophets (as hath been often ſaid) borrow their phraſes from him: and the Apoſtle in Heb. 12. 26. doth the like.

Deut. 9. 3.

The Prophet himſelfe confirmes this expoſition, ſhewing the cauſe of this feare: for ſome might obiect, that God was too ſeuere to terrifie men thus aboue meaſure. Indeed he is wont to ſhew himſelfe louing and gracious to the faithfull; but therewithall ſeuere and terrible to the wicked. Some thinke that the Prophet meant to conuince all men of ſinne, that hauing ſcattered all truſt of merit (into the aire) they might with all reuerence and humilitie, flee vnto Gods free grace by true repentance. As if he ſhould ſay; None can ſtand before Gods iudgement ſeat, vnleſſe he be perfectly iuſt: and therefore that all conſequently are accurſed. But he rather ſpeakes in the perſon, and according to their meaning, who before ſcorned al threatnings: and ſo he now brings them in trembling and asking, who ſhall dare to preſent himſelfe before the face of God? For this dolorous complaint, is a ſigne of that terror which he ſpake of erewhile: where being conuinced of their weakneſſe, their diſtreſſe extorted forth theſe words; Who is able to abide the Lords preſence? Now becauſe they ceaſed not to exalt themſelues againſt God, notwithſtanding theſe words were drawne from them againſt the haire, as we ſay: therefore the Prophet, that he might preuent their wicked replies, anſwers on Gods behalfe, that he is not terrible and fearfull to men naturally; but it falles out ſo by their owne default, in regard themſelues are affrighted with the ſenſe of their owne guiltineſſe; ſo as God ſuffers not their conſciences to be at any quiet.

1
2

Verſ. 15. Hee that walketh in iuſtice, and ſpeaketh righteous things, refuſing gaine of oppreſſion, ſhaking his hands from taking of gifts, ſtopping his eares from hearing of blood, and ſhutting his eies from ſeeing euill.

NOw he expreſſeth that more fully which we touched before; to wit, ỹ (theſe hypocrits) had no cauſe to accuſe God of ouergreat rigor, becauſe themſelues by prouoking him to diſpleaſure, did thereby put his fauour far away from them. For hee ſhewes that God agrees with men well enough, if they will ioine and follow iuſtice; if they giue themſelues to equitie; if they keepe their fingers cleane from bribes, and walke in vprightneſſe with their neighbours; but being infected with all maner of corruptions, and giuen to malice, ſlander, couetouſneſſe, extortion, and the like ſinnes, muſt not the Lord aſtoniſh ſuch with feares, and ſhew himſelfe terrible vnto them? In a word, the Prophets meaning is to ſtop the mouthes of the wicked ſcoffers, that ſo they might ceaſe to accuſe God of crueltie, in bringing deſtruction vpon them, ſeeing the whole cauſe thereof was in themſelues. They make many turnings to eſcape Gods iudgement; but the Prophet affirmes, that hee is alwaies good to thoſe which honour him. And albeit Moſes in this ſenſe calles him a conſuming fire, Deut. 9.3. leſt his maieſtie and power ſhould bee contemned; yet whoſoeuer hee be that ſhall draw neere vnto him with a true deſire to pleaſe him, he ſhall feele by the effects, that there is nothing more ſweete and amiable then his preſence. At ſuch time then as God cauſeth the light of his countenance to ſhine vpon the faithfull, they haue peace with him in a good conſcience: whence it followes, that hee is not terrible of his owne nature, but we, (we) by our peruerſitie prouoke him to be ſuch a one vnto vs.

1
2
3
4

Though God titles himſelf a conſuming fire, leſt his maieſtie ſhould be contemned, yet whoſoeuer drawes neere him with a deſire to pleaſe him, ſhall feel nothing ſo ſweet as his preſence.

Now this is ſpecially directed to the hypocrits, who couer their villanies and ſecret miſchiefes vnder the cloke of holineſſe; and thus abuſe the name of the Lord to ſin the more freely. But our Prophet ſetting downe a definition of iuſtice, by examples, doth thereby more cleerly and plainly rebuke their vngodlineſſe. And mentions ſome principall actions touching the conuerſation of men, whereby we may eaſily take triall of our godlineſſe. For he ſets before vs the duties of the ſecond Table (as he hath done often alreadie) which is the beſt way to diſcouer who indeed is a religious man. For as gold is tried by the fire, ſo by a mans ordinarie cariage of himſelfe, may you find how he is affected in the ſeruice of God. The mutuall benefits which wee doe one to another, will manifest what pietie is in the heart.

of

By the word to walke, this similitude of the way, so familiar in Scripture, is to be vnderstood, when it speakes of the Christian course, or of a continuall perseuerance: Psal. 119.1.5. and 122. By iustice, he meanes not an exact obseruation of the Law, but that equitie which is required in the second Table: but wee will not stand to discusse the word curiously. Afterwards he descends to the principall parts of true vprightnesse: and because the tongue is the chiefe instrument whereby man gouernes his actions, he puts that in the second degree after iustice. For he that withholds it from euill speaking and slander, and abstaines from lying, periury, and flatterings, whereby he might any way offend his neighbour; such a one is said to speake righteous things.

The tongue.

The other kind is compriſed vnder these words, and despiseth againe, &c. He might well haue said in a word; Hee which despiseth monie; but he spake plainely, and therein applied himselfe to their rudenesse: for he that desires gaine, polluteth and vseth all dishonest and indirect meanes to inrich himselfe, hee wil not sticke to vexe and oppresse the poore and needie; neither cares he, so he may get mony, whether it come in by right or wrong. What is to be said of them then which haue their hands alwaies open and stretched forth to take: nay, which with talents grapple whatsoeuer comes to net. And not content therewith, will prostitute themselues vnto gaine, as shamelesse harlots will doe, to trap those that are destitute of wisdome. Is it any wonder if God thunder against such, to roote them out wholly?

Hands.

Takers of bribes.

Lastly, he requires that some signe and testimonie of integritie may also be seene euen in the eares. By blood, he meanes murthers and manslaughters; but he therewithall comprehends all sorts of wicked conspiracies, that the eares may neither be open to hearken, nor yet to giue any consent thereunto. For hee meanes not that wee should shut our eares against the cries of the poore, when they are wronged and oppressed; but that we should detest all such counsels, by which the wicked goe about to destroy innocents; that wee should not so much as lend our eares to such, neither in any wise to bee carried away by their solicitations vnto euill. Lastly, hee requires the same puritie in the eies. To conclude, he teacheth vs to restraine all our senses, in such wise, that we giue no occasion to the wicked to thinke we doe in any sort approue of their doing; euen as wee meane to escape God his vengeance & wrath, of which he spake before.

Eares.

Eyes.

Verſ. 16. He shall dwell on high, his defence shall be the munitions of rockes: bread shall be giuen him, and his waters shall be sure.

TO the end the Iewes might know that God had iustly chastised them, and that they might indeuor to make their peace with him, the Prophet affirmes, that this blessing is ready to fall vpon the iust and vpright, such as hee described them to bee in the former verse: for they were not to feare this deuouring fire of which hee spake, in regard they were out of all danger thereof.

They shall dwell on high in a safe place. The wicked indeede were to feare; for it should surely deuoure froward speakers, oppressors, deceiuers, and such as applied their hands, tongues, eares, and eies, to fraud and vnrighteousnesse. As if he should say; I would not haue you to wonder if he be seuere towards them, and yet he is not so much their Iudge, as the guiltinesse of their owne euill conscience, who like an executioner, is still at their elbow, miserably to torment them. The onely way therefore to be feareleſse in Gods presence, is willinglie to keepe our selues in his feare.

The onely way to be feareleſse, is willinglie to keep our selues in Gods true feare.

By high places, hee meanes those that are most safe and free from all danger: in a word, such as the enemie is not able to inuade by any force: which he sufficiently confirmes in the next words, by placing the iust in the rockes. To the sure dwelling, he addes abundance of outward blessings: as if hee should say; Nothing shall be wanting to those which serue God in sinceritie & vprightnesse. Why so? Because he will not onely saue them free from hurt, but will also furnish them to the full, with whatsoeuer good things they shall stand in neede of in this their short pilgrimage. For by bread and water, he meanes all things necessary for the sustentation of this present life.

Next, he promiseth sure waters: (for albeit the wicked haue abundance for a time, yet their waters faile in the end, as God threatens in the law.) Now the like may bee said touching the word bread, because it is an epithite belonging as well to the one as to the other: and it is as much as if he had said; that all the faithfull shall be sure of food. For the lions often lacke and want their pray; but those that feare the Lord, shall want nothing that is good: Psal. 34. For as in his owne nature he is bountifull, so is he neuer weary of giuing, because his goods diminish not by his great liberalitie.

Deu. 28.38. 39.40.

God is neuer wearie of giuing, neither doth his goods diminish by continuall giuing.

Now because the life of man is subiect to sundry perils, and that it sufficeth not to haue prouision and plentie of foode onely to sustaine vs, vnlesse the Lord also keepe and defend his by his almightie power, therefore we are diligently to obserue what was said before; to wit, that the faithfull are lodged in a safe place. For the Lord performes the office of a faithfull shepheard, who is not onely carefull to prouide food for his sheepe, but also preserues them from the rage of theeues and rauening wolues. To be short, he holds them vnder his sauegard, that no aduersitie might annoy them. Are our enemies busie then at any time to molest vs? Let vs thinke it a iust iudgement of God vpon vs for our sinnes. Hath he reiected vs? It is because wee haue deserued it. And thus we must impute all the euill which oppresse vs vnto our sinnes, as the

Psal. 23.1.

Our sinnes the cause of all our euils.

the onely cauſe thereof. Yet let not thoſe who haue kept faith and a good conſcience, think that God hath forſaken them: but to the laſt breath, let them reſt ſecurely vpon theſe promiſes which the Lord hath here made; to wit, that he will be a ſure rocke of defence vnto them. I grant that none can be ſo pure or fully perfect, that he ſhould be able to beare the preſence of God: for if he marke our iniquities, who ſhall ſtand? as ſaith the Pſalmiſt; All of vs then haue need of a mediator, by whoſe interceſſion our ſinnes may bee pardoned. Which doctrine it was not our Prophets meaning to reiect, which is plentifully diſperſed thorowout the whole Scriptures: but his driſt here was, to beat downe the wicked, who are alwaies gaulled & purſued with the ſting of an euill conſcience. Which wee are dilligently to obſerue againſt our popiſh Doctors, who abuſe theſe and the like places, where workes are cõmended, that they might aboliſh the righteouſneſſe of faith; as if the remiſſion of ſinnes, which wee receiue by the benefit of Chriſts ſacrifice, were to be excluded.

Pſal. 130. 3.

Verſ. 17. Thine eyes ſhall ſee the king in his glory: they ſhall behold the land a far off.

ALthough the Prophet changeth the perſon, yet this verſe ought to be ioined to the former; becauſe hee ſpeakes to the true ſeruants of God, & promiſeth them yet another benefit, to wit, that they ſhall ſee the King in his glory. Such a promiſe was very neceſſarie to ſuſtaine the hearts of the faithfull, when things were thus confuſed and deſperate in the land of Iudea. For when Ieruſalem was beſieged, the King was ſhut vp within the Citie, inuironed with diſloyall counſellers, the people inconſtant and mutinous, euery one expected preſent ruine, and as it ſeemed, no hope of a better eſtate was left. But the kingly power in Dauids race, was a ſingular pledge of Gods fauour towards them. Iſaiah then preuents this danger as you ſee. Thy King for a time, ſaith he, will ſeeme vile and contemptious, yet ſhall thine eyes ſee him eſtabliſhed in his former maieſtie and dignitie.

1

First then let vs obſerue heere, that God beſtowes an ineſtimable fauor vpon vs, when the Commonwealth inioyes peace, and when he ſends vs good Princes, which gouernes all things faithfully and ſincerely; for there God rules ouer vs by their hand. This benefit therefore being no ſmall one, our Prophet was not forgetfull to mention it, in promiſing ſo happy an eſtate to the ſeruants of God.

God rules where good Magiſtrates rule faithfully.

2

But herewithall we muſt obſerue, that this kingdome was a figure of the kingdome of Chriſt whom Ezechias repreſented: for the fruit of this promiſe would bee of no great value, vnleſſe we come to him, vnto whom all theſe things are to be referred. And leſt any ſhould take mee as a forger of allegories, which I profeſſe to flee, let ſuch a one know, that I expound not this ſimply of Chriſt. But in as much as the ſtedfaſtneſſe of this vading kingdome is no where elſe to bee found, but in him; the figure, which Hezechias bare, lead vs to Chriſt as by the hand. Iſaiah then promiſeth here the reſtauration of the Church, in which, two members are to be conſidered. Firſt, that the King ſhall appeare in his beautie: ſecondly, that the bounds of the kingdome ſhould be inlarged. Now we know ỹ Chriſt is ſo disfigured in outward appearance, that the world deſpiſeth him; becauſe nothing is to bee ſeene in him that is faire or pleaſant; but at the laſt, his maieſtie, his magnificence, and beautie ſhall appeare. His kingdome ſhall floriſh, and ſpread it ſelfe far and wide, albeit the wicked now are Lords of all, and doe ſo afflict the ſeruants of God, that they can ſcarcely inioy one foote of ground in peace and ſafety; yet with firme hope muſt we wait and looke for our King in his glory, who at length will ſit him downe in his glorious and beautifull throne, and will inrich his people with great honours.

1

2

Calvin no forger of allegories.

See Chap. 53.

Verſ. 18. Thine heart ſhall meditate feare: where is the Scribe? Where is the receiuer? Where is hee that counted the towers?

THe faithfull are againe aduertiſed of the calamities which were at hand, leſt being ouertaken therewith vnawares, they might happily fall vnder the burthen. Some tranſlate the verbe to meditate, in the preter-perfectence: others, in the future tence; becauſe this change of time is much vſed among the Hebrewes. For mine owne part, I willingly retaine the future; ſhall meditate: which the Prophet alſo in his owne language doth: for as I take it, hee rather warnes the people of the euils which were neere, then relates what they had ſuffered before. Now when he asks, where is the ſcribe? he liuely beates into their eares, the voice of them who being affrighted, would cry on this manner, where is the ſcribe? where is the receiuer? the rather to touch them to the quicke.

If any thinke it to be a broken ſentence, becauſe hauing ſpoken in the former verſe of the beautie of the King, he now prophecieth terrors. I make no queſtion but the Prophet by way of compariſon, amplifies the fauour of God; to wit, that the faithfull being deliuered, might the better eſteeme of their condition. For men are naturally forgetfull and peruerſe, when they ſhould ſet themſelues to publiſh Gods praiſes: and being once eſcaped, they let ſlip the acknowledgement of the great dangers frõ which they were freed. It was therefore needfull to ſet before them the diſtreſſes vnder which they ſhould bee held, that they might the better apprehend the greatnes of the benefit which God ſhewed them. There is yet another reaſon why this people were to be aduertiſed touching this feare; namely, hauing ſpoken before touching the beautie of their King, hee would not haue them ſo relie vpon it, as to promiſe vnto themſelues ſuch tranquilitie, as ſhould be exempt from all troubles; but rather to be prepared to vndergo all sorts of greeuances and vexations. And yet, that they should know also that God cared for the kingdome of Iudah, and in his good time would deliuer them out of the hands of those tyrants which held them tributaries and besieged them.

The estate which the Prophet heere describes is very miserable: for is it not a pitifull thing to see a people of a free condition so pressed vnder such a barbarous tyrannie, that all their goods must come to be praised, their houses, possessiõs, families, & seruants registred? Many of our times which haue not bin acquainted with these things, haue yet some little taste how irkesome this seruitude is, when their goods are praised to the vttermost mite: and not onely their yeerely rents which are certaine, but also the hope of future gaine: and not mony and possessions alone, but their names also are taken. Such deuices there are to impose new tributes, not vpon viands onely, but euen vpon the smallest things: so that tyrants rake to themselues a great part of that, which the poore people can hardly beare: yet all these, and infinite other calamities will nothing abate the pride, excesse, and rebellion of men. What will they be thinke you, being freed from these taxes? will they not easilie forget all the euils past, and the fauour of God also, and bee worse then euer they were before, in running into all leaud and wicked behauiour.

Note.

It is not without cause then that the Prophet laies these things thus before his people, lest after their deliuerance they should range after their lusts. As if hee should say; What a shame were that? nay, rather acknowledge the goodnesse of God, who hath dealt so mercifully with you, and cleaue vnto him with your whole hearts. Some haue falslie imagined, that Saint Paul alledgeth this place in 1.Cor.1.20. But so he should mistake the Prophets meaning, and should apply these words to a wrong sense. The cause of the error grew from the word Saibe, which is not taken here for a teacher. For Isaiah calles him a Scribe in this place, who tooke the names of men and their families, and inuentories of their possessions and houses. To be short, hee which kept the register of all the taxes and tributes.

What is meant by Scribe in this place.

By the poiser, he meanes him which receiued the imposts, for hee weighed the monies which were paied in: such as are our receiuers and treasurers at this day. He addes yet a third sort, which was the most intollerable of all; to wit, hee that counted the towers or chiefe houses, for they made search, and viewed euery house, to know which were the richest, that they might get the more pence out of it. Tyrants haue such at command, who like bloodhounds, haue skill to hunt and smell out fat purses; that so, besides the ordinary taxes they may raise an extraordinary impost. No doubt but the sight of such exactors was greeuous to the poore people, and not without cause: for they neuer left them, till they had sucke their blood to the verie marow. If any by this word had rather vnderstand the officers of the King himselfe, who had the charge to pull downe the houses adioyning to the walles; I hinder him not for following his opinion. I rather think it likely that the Prophet speaks of the exactors, which the conquerours set ouer them, whom they had vanquished, that they might the more securely hold their own, as they say.

Bloodhounds in Common wealths.

Vers.19. Thou shalt not see a fierce people, a people of a darke speech, that thou canst not perceiue, and of a stammering tongue, that thou canst not vnderstand.

SOme translate the word Naaz, Strong; others, Impudently: but I verily thinke he meant to set forth the cruelrie of the Assyrians, which he presently declares, saying; There is no communication to be had with them, for they speake a strange language, which thou canst not perceiue. For there is nothing that moues men more to mercy, then an interchangeable speech, by which one may take knowledge of anothers misery. But if this be wanting, what is left to cause an hard heart to relent? Alas, they know not what thou saiest, and therfore thou canst looke for no more compassion from them by thy intreaties, then if thou hadst to deale with wilde and sauage beasts. Thus the Prophet further aggrauates the wofull estate of this people, that by contraries he might let them perceiue, how exceeding bountiful God was towards them, when he deliuered them out of so great a feare. As in another place the holy Ghost magnifies the grace of God, in that hee preserued his people in Egypt, albeit they vnderstood not their language. Psal.81.5.

Vers.20. Looke vpon Zion, the Citie of our solemne feasts; thine eies shall shall see Ierusalem a quiet habitation, a tabernacle that cannot be remoued: and the stakes thereof can neuer be taken away, neither shall any of the cordes thereof be broken.

MAny read it in the vocatiue case; Looke O Zion: but it is better to reade it as I haue translated it; Looke vpon Zion. The Prophet propounds a promise touching ỹ restauratiõ of ỹ Church, of which ỹ faithful were to make speciall account: for if the Church shake or fall, where is their prosperitie? But he shewes that she shall be in such wise restored, that he sets the thing euen before their eyes; whereas indeed he speakes of a thing to come. And this he doth that his words might be ỹ more effectuall. As if he should say; Thou shalt see Zion restored, and Ierusalem florishing yet once againe. And albeit you now see all things confused and ouerwhelmed, so as you thinke Zion is laid in the dust, yet euen in Zion shall you haue a safe and quiet dwelling place.

A promise touching the restauration of the church

The Prophets are wont to speake of things to come, as if they were already accomplished.

In calling it a Citie of solemnities, he shewes wherein the restauration of Zion did chiefly consist, conſiſt; to wit, becauſe the people flocked thither to heare the law, to renue their couenant with God, to call vpon his name, and to offer ſacrifices: for when they were depriued of theſe things, they were as ſheep ſcattered without a ſhepheard, or as a bodie ſeparate from the head: in a word, as a people vndone, and depriued of all ioy. And therefore the captiues in Babylon ſorrow for nothing ſo much as that they were baniſhed from Zion, and could not inioy the comforts which there they were wont to finde, Pſal. 137. 5. It alſo appeares plainlie enough by many places that it hath bin the chiefe complaint of all the faithfull.

Wherein the reſtauration of Zion chiefly conſiſted.

Moreouer, he calles Zion, a Citie, becauſe it ſtood in the midſt of the Citie; and it is alſo called the citie of Dauid. The compaſſe of the whole Citie of Ieruſalem was very large, for there was a double wall, as we haue ſhewed you heretofore, which is to be ſeene alſo in many other Cities. Note we here that in the reſtauration of the Church conſiſts the fulnes of all bleſſings, as the only bliſſe which we are to deſire and wiſh for; all other benefits abound they neuer ſo much, wat we this, are nothing: as on the contratie, enioy we this; we enioy all things; for we can no way be miſerable, as long as Ieruſalem, that is to ſay the Church, floriſheth. But when doth ſhe floriſh? When God ſits as chiefe in our aſſemblies, and when we couenant in his name to cleaue vnto him for euer. The vnbeleeuers are forward to crowne themſelues as it were with the title of Gods name, as if their aſſemblies were gathered vnder his enſigne: but all is hypocriſie. For though they draw neere to him with their mouthes, yet their hearts are farre off from him, neither will they haue him nor his lawes to beare ſway amongſt them in any thing.

In the reſtauration of the church conſiſts the fulnes of all bleſſings.

1 2

In the next place Iſaiah ſaith, that the faithfull, which a long time had been toſt to and fro with many tempeſts, ſhould now at the laſt haue a ſure and quiet abode in the Church of God. But howſoeuer the people had ſome ſmall taſte hereof vnder Hezekias, yet the full accompliſhmẽt therof is performed in Chriſt only: vnderſtand me not, that euer ſince, Gods children haue had ſafe and quiet dwelling in this world. No, this reſt is now hidden, for wee are faine to wander and ſtray vp and downe here; and are driuen many times to ſhift from poſt to piller without any certaine abode, toſt with diuers tempeſts and whirlewinds, we are on euery ſide aſſailed with infinit enemies, and yet theſe combates muſt we ſuffer, ſo as we can hardlie get ſo much as a minutes reſt here. Thinke not then that God promiſeth ſuch a peace as carnall ſenſe can comprehend. No, we muſt diue into the deepeſt thoughts of our hearts, reformed by the holy Ghoſt in righteouſnes and holines, if we will enioy this peace which paſſeth vnderſtanding, as Paul ſaith, Phil. 4. 7. This peace ſhall we be ſure to enioy as the Lords gift, if we remaine in the true Church.

What maner of peace and quietnes it is which the faithfull inioy in this world.

By tabernacle, and cords, he fitlie and aptlie deſcribes the condition of the Church. For he might haue called it a citie well founded; but he calles it a Tabernacle, or Tent, which is apt in an inſtant to be remoued from place to place. To teach vs, that although the eſtate of the Church ſeeme to haue litle ſtabilitie in it, and is ſubiect to many changes, yet that ſhe ſhall ſtand ſteadie and vnmoueable for all that: ſhe ſhal ſtand againſt all ſtormes and tempeſts, againſt all the furie of enemies, although we thinke it vnpoſſible, and can no way comprehend the reaſon of it. Faith alone is it that can make things ſo repugnant to agree together, to wit, that there is ſafer dwelling in a ſillie tent, then in the ſtrongeſt Caſtles in the whole world. With this buckler muſt we beare off Satans blowes, which otherwiſe would ſhake and ſhiuer vs to pieces as oft as we ſee the Church not a little tottering only, but caried cleane away as with a whirlewind now hither, now thither. Who would thinke there were any ſafetie, or place of reſt to be looked for in theſe tempeſtuous whirleings? But becauſe the Lord will not haue his ſeruants altogether hampered in the things of this life, that they may depend wholly vpon him; this promiſed protection of his ought to be more eſteemed of vs, then thouſands of other ſtayes beſides.

The Church rather called a Tabernacle then a Citie.

Though the Church in this world be ſubiect to many changes as the Mõne, yet ſhall ſhe ſtand vnmoueable againſt all ſtormes and tempeſts whatſoeuer, as is proued in the verſe following.

Verſ. 21. For ſurely there the mightie Lord will be vnto vs as a place of floods, and broad riuers, Whereby ſhall paſſe no ſhip with oares, neither ſhall great ſhip paſſe thereby.

THe two particles Chi, and Im, ſtand often for a double affirmation; but they are put here for expoſitiues: we may alſo tranſlate, For if, but I willinglie retaine that which is cleareſt. Well, the Prophet giues a reaſon why the Church which reſembles a reſtleſſe pauilion, is notwithſtãding ſteadier then Cities well founded: to wit, becauſe her Lord the Almightie is in the midſt of her, for ſo ſhe ſhall not be ſhaken, as is ſaid Pſal. 46. 5. Separate God frõ the Church once, and ſhe will fall of her ſelfe though no man put his leaſt finger to it. For wherof doth ſhe conſiſt, but of a ſort of poore weake and fraile creatures, yea, the fraileſt of all others. But whẽ God dwels in the midſt of vs, then he ſuſteines and beares vp this feeble and weake nature, and is to vs as a ſtrong rampart, deepe trenches; yea, euen as walles and riuers which compaſſe in a Citie round about. Now the Prophet had reſpect to the ſituation of Ieruſalem, which had nought elſe but a litle riuer, nothing ſo large and boyſterous riuers as Babylon and other Cities had. For they were commanded before Chap. 8. 6. to content themſelues with the only power of God, & not to couet after theſe great floods; as if he ſhould ſay, We ſhall ſurely be inuincible if God be reſident amongſt vs, becauſe his defence will be a ſhield and buckler of proofe.

The Church inuincible as long as God hath his abode in the middeſt of her. Content thy ſelfe with a meane eſtate, for that which may be for thy aduantage one while, may turne to thy hurt at another time.

The ſhip ſhall not paſſe.] Great riuers haue this incommoditie, that they make paſſage for the enemies to ariue therein with their ſhips ſometimes more then were to be wiſhed: and thus that which ſerues at one time for a help, many times may afterward turne to our hurt and losse. But the Lord saith, he will so serue as a viuer, that yet the entrance of no enemie need to be feared, in regard of any such incommoditie. Now hee mentions two sorts of vessels, to wit, gallies, and ships of burthen: and thus he shewes that the enemie shall no way preuaile. From hence wee may 1 gather two very profitable doctrines. First, neither to seeke, nor wait for saluation at the 2 hands of any, but from God alone. Secondly, that it is in vaine to gather together much artillerie and defences, because they shall not onely become vnprofitable vnto vs, when God is against vs, but shall turne to our owne ruine and destruction.

Vers. 22. For the Lord is our Iudge, the Lord is our law-giuer, the Lord is our King: he will saue vs.

The maner how God sits in his Church. 1. 2. 3. King.

NOw the Prophet shewes how God visits in the middest of his Church; to wit, by being serued and acknowledged as Iudge, lawgiuer, and King. For those who obey and submit themselues vnto God, as to their King, shall effectually feele that he is the safe keeper of their saluation: but those that glory in this falsly, shall looke for saluation from him in vaine. Submit wee our neckes therefore onely to his yoke. Let vs harken vnto his voice, and obey him: then will he for his part manifestly shew himselfe to be our defence and protection. But if we contemne his voice, and rebell against his Commandements; what maruell is it, if in dangers he leaue and forsake vs? The true Church then, as you may obserue, is she who acknowledgeth God for her King and lawgiuer. With what face then dare the Papists brag, that they are the Church of God, seeing they reiect the lawfull gouernment established by Moses, the Prophets, and by Christ himselfe, to bring in their own deuices and trumperies in stead of the same? They exercise a cruell tyranny ouer the consciences of poore men and women: and in taking that libertie away, which Christ hath purchased, they miserably vexe the poore soules of his seruants, and as much as in them lies, would draw them into perdition with themselues.

Lawgiuer.

That is the true Church, which acknowledgeth God for her Lawgiuer and King.

Papists exercise a cruell tyranny ouer the consciences of poore men and women.

But it is Gods office alone to sit in mens consciences, seeing he is the onely Iudge and lawgiuer, whose right it is to rule vs by his word. The Prophet conioynes three words together here; Iudge, lawgiuer, and King; because it is a thing of such great importance, as ought not slightly to bee passed ouer. If wee then suffer our selues to bee gouerned by his word, hee will neuer forsake vs. Thus in few words, wee haue the onely meane set before vs how to obtaine saluation.

Iudge.

Vers. 23. Thy cords are loosed: they could not well strengthen their mast, neither could they spread the saile: then shall the pray bee diuided for a great spoile; yea, the lame shall take away the pray.

HEe turnes his speech to the Assyrians, in whose person hee also speakes to all the enemies of the Church. For hauing promised her such stabilitie, as shall neuer be shaken, he taxeth now the fond confidence wherewith the wicked are puffed vp; as if they were so well rooted, that it were vnpossible euer to displant them. Be it then that for a time they built their hopes vpon their riches, as vpon a strong Citie, and that the same was as an high wall vnto them in their imagination: whilest they were so besotted therewith, yet Isaiah propheceies their sudden destruction to be at hand, because Gods hand vpheld them not. Now hee goes on with the similitude which he vsed in the 21. verse, where he compared the Church to a very strong place, well inuironed with goodly riuers: by reason whereof, the enemy could not approch vnto her. Now he compares the estate of the wicked to ships: signifying thereby their tottering foundation; notwithstanding they plaied the bugbeares, and were caried with such furie and rage, as it seemed they would beare downe all before them with a breath. Although they had furnished themselues then both with great ships and gallies to ioyne in one the regions, which lay far distant one from another, and so meant to make themselues Lords of sea and land: yet should they feele that all was but vapors and smoke. The Lord would turne ouer their ships, breake downe their masts, and cut off their Cables, and sinke all into the bottome of the sea. Let vs not altogether then stand wondering and gazing at the strength, violence, or audaciousnes of our enemies; but let vs looke vp vnto the Lord, & wait for that day wherein he will tumble their furie and violence vpon their owne heads.

Verse 21.

Vers. 24. And none inhabitant shall say, I am sicke: the people that dwell therein, shall haue their iniquitie forgiuen.

NOw the Prophet returnes againe to the Church; for the ruine which he threatned should fall vpon the Assyrians, tended not a little to the consolation of the faithful: for what securitie could the Church haue had, vnlesse God had opposed his helpe against the power of so many enemies, which assailed her on euery side? Hauing in a word then touched the state of the wicked; to wit, that they shall all be brought to nought, because they persecute the children of God; he aptly returnes where he left, to wit, that God will omit no occasion that may make for the good and saluation of his Church. He saith then that the Citizens of the Church shall be freed from all incommodities, because by the fauour of God, they shall inioy an happie estate.

The second part of the verse serues for an exposition of the former: for sinnes being forgiuen, the graces of God shall flow in vpon vs without without any let or ſtay. Whence we gather, that all the miſeries which aſſaile vs, proceeds from no other cauſe then from our iniquities. Otherwiſe, the reaſon which hee yeeldes, ſhould be improper and far fetched: but this principle is to be holden, that all the miſeries which God ſends vs, are ſo many tokens of his wrath. Thence it followes that God muſt needes vſe vs with a fatherly reſpect, when our ſinnes are pardoned; and out of his loue, to giue vs whatſoeuer is good for vs.

All our miſeries proceedes from our ſinnes. A Principle.

Therefore if we deſire to be eaſed of our troubles, keep we this order. Aboue all things let vs ſeeke reconciliation with God; for the cauſe being remoued, the effect ſhall forthwith vaniſh away. But becauſe our deſires are not well nor rightly ordered, caring onely to get away the rod from our backes, and neuer conſider deeply of the cauſe: we needs not wonder if wee lie groueling ſtill vnder the ſmart thereof. They therefore deceiue themſelues which would bee freed from croſſes, and yet will delight in their ſinnes: nay, if ſuch ſhould be vnder no aduerſitie at all, yet ſhould they not ceaſe for all that to be miſerable people: for what reſt or tranquilitie of mind can they inioy, whileſt their conſciences in euery place purſues the with the guilt of their iniquities?

What courſe wee are to take, that would bee eaſed of our troubles.

They deceiue themſelues, that would be freed fro croſſes, and yet delight in their ſins.

Wherein conſiſts true felicitie then? In hauing obtained forgiueneſſe of ſinnes, and in feeling ſenſibly, that all the good things we receiue from God, are ſo many pledges of his fatherly good will towards vs. Learne we alſo, that it is impoſſible to pleaſe him, or be accounted among the number of his children, vnleſſe hee ceaſe to impute our ſinnes vnto vs. There is nothing then but free reconciliation alone, which can make vs well pleaſing in his ſight; nor nothing but that, which can make way for his loue to be ſhed abroad in our hearts.

Now albeit we be continually vnder the croſſe, yet that breakes not off the promiſe; for the faithfull content themſelues with this comfort and conſolation in the middeſt of all their afflictions; to wit, that God is their God, and ceaſeth not to hold them for his deere children, though he correct them. For being regenerate by his Spirit, they begin to taſte of that happineſſe which Adam inioied in full meaſure before his fall: but being burthened with many ſinnes, therefore haue they needs of a continuall waſhing: and yet God ſo tempers his bitter potions, that he ſupports their infirmities ſtill. He alſo lets them ſee that he hath a care of their welfare, by moderating the ſharpneſſe of his ſtripes, if he doe not at once ſet them free. It is not without cauſe then you ſee, that our Prophet exempts the renued Church from common miſeries, becauſe they carrie in them a ſtampe of Gods curſe.

In what the faithfull find contentment in afflictions.

Daily defilings needes daily waſhings.

Hence alſo we may note how childiſh the diſtinction of the Papiſts is, touching the forgiueneſſe of the ſinne, but not of the puniſhment; as if wee were able to ſatisfie Gods iuſtice. But the Prophet teacheth vs another leſſon, as wee may eaſilie gather from other places of their writings. But if we had but this onely text, can any man ſpeake more plainly, then to ſay, that afflictions ſhall ceaſe, becauſe iniquitie is forgiuen? Truly it is all one as if it had been ſaid; The puniſhments ceaſeth, becauſe the fault is pardoned. I grant that God ſometimes afflicts the faithfull, albeit he forgiues the fault: but it is to the end that by this ſtroke of the rod, he might make them wiſer for the time to come; and not to exact a ſatisfaction of them, as if he had been reconciled vnto them by halues. But our Papiſts will needes haue ſuch puniſhments ſtand for ſatisfactions: as if the ſinner in part ſhould thereby redeem himſelfe; which, wee know, directly croſſeth the doctrine of free remiſſion of ſinnes. And thus their fond inuentions, both concerning ſatisfactions, and Purgatory, falles to the ground.

A childiſh diſtinction of the Papiſts.

Satisfactions and Purgatorie.

It is alſo to be noted, that this priuiledge belongs onely to the houſhold of faith: for out of the body of Chriſt, which is the communion of Saints, what hope of reconciliation with God is there left? That is the reaſon why wee are taught in the Symbole to ſay, I beleeue, the catholike Church, the remiſſion of ſinnes. For as God loues none but thoſe whom hee findes members of his onely Sonne; no more beſtowes hee his free imputation vpon any, but ſuch as are liuely members of his body. What remaines to thoſe that are without then, and are ſtrangers from the Commonwealth of Iſrael, but that they muſt needes periſh vnder the curſe? Therefore to forſake the true Church, is manifeſtly to renounce eternall life.

Two Articles in the Symbole.

To forſake the Church, is to renounce eternall life.

THE XXXIIII. CHAPTER.

Verſ. 1. Come neere yee nations, and hearken yee people: let the earth heare, and all that is therein; the world, and all that proceedeth thereof.

HItherunto our Prophet minding to comfort the children of the Church, hath preached as it were in the midſt of their aſſembly. But now he directs his ſpeech vnto the Gentiles, and takes vp the ſame argument ſtil, albeit after another maner then before. For hauing ſhewed that the Lord hath ſuch care ouer his Church, that hee will alwaies prouide meanes for her ſafetie: hee now alſo addes that which we haue ſeene heretofore; to wit, that he will at laſt take his peoples cauſe in hand, and reuenge their quarrell, though for a time hee hath ſuffered the wicked to take their penniworths of them. He continues to handle the ſame matter then, but by a conſolation ſolation of another kind. For he ſhewes how ſeuerely God will plague thoſe wicked ones, which haue perſecuted his Church. The Prophet according to his office therefore, ſummons them by proclamation on Gods behalfe (that he might the better awaken them) to aſſemble themſelues together, and appeare before his iudgement ſeat. For thus the wicked muſt be rouzed out of their ſecurity, who in time of proſperitie deſpiſe all admonitions; thinking that God either will not, or cannot puniſh their iniquities. Yet in ſpeaking thus vehemently, his greateſt reſpect was to the Church: for otherwiſe hee found but deafe eares among the nations, they would haue profited nothing at all by it.

In this place hee addreſſeth his ſpeech to the Idumeans, who were like enough proudly to deſpiſe theſe threatnings, and therefore he calles heauen and earth to witneſſe againſt them, ſaying, that the iudgements which God will execute, ſhall bee ſo apparant and manifeſt, that not onely all people, but all the inſenſible creatures alſo ſhall ſee it: for it is the maner of the Prophets to ſpeake thus to the dumbe creatures, when men indued with reaſon and vnderſtanding, grow deafe; as wee haue ſeene before in the firſt Chapter.

Verſ. 2. For the indignation of the Lord is vpon all nations, and his wrath vpon all their armies: hee hath deſtroyed them, and deliuered them to the ſlaughter.

BY nations, he meanes thoſe enemies which bordered vpon the Iewes, who were inuironed with many Countries: for they had as many enemies almoſt, as borderers. Now albeit there were other cauſes of this malice, to wit, enuie: yet becauſe they were of a contrarie religion, that did wonderfully inflame their rage againſt them, in regard they thereby condemned their ſuperſtitions, which cauſed the Lord the rather to promiſe his helpe, as a Iudge to reuenge their quarrell.

He addes, vpon all their armies, becauſe the Iewes were but an handfull of people, being compared with other nations. Although theſe nations then boaſted, becauſe of their great armies, and deſpiſed the ſmall number of the Iewes; yet the Prophet affirmes, that God can eaſily conſume their multitudes, & bring them all to nought, rather then he will hazard the loſſe of his little flocke, whereof he is the ſhepheard. And albeit hee ſpeakes of things to come, yet vſeth he the preſens tence, becauſe he might ſet the thing before the eyes of the poore Iewes, which were almoſt ouerwhelmed with afflictions. For, as I haue touched before, he foretels not theſe things in reſpect of the Idumeans, who would receiue no inſtruction; but in reſpect of the Iewes, whom he meant to comfort, becauſe they were miſerably vexed by their enemies.

The Prophets vſe the preſent tence when they ſpeake of things to come, to ſhew the certaintie of their prophecies.

Verſ. 3. And their ſlaine ſhall bee caſt out, and their ſtinke ſhall come vp out of their bodies; and the mountaines ſhall be melted with their blood.

BY this circumſtance hee ſhewes that the deſtruction ſhall be great: for if but a few perſons be ſlaine, they burie them. But when ſo many are ſlaine, that thoſe which be left aliue, are not able to burie them, they care not much to leaue them vnburied: ſo as the ſtinke of the carkaſes, as yee know, aſcends and corrupts the ayre. Thus it appeares that God is ſtrong enough to rote out infinit armies. It may be alſo the Prophet meant to ſet forth this iudgement of God at large, becauſe beſides the killing of the nations, there would be ſhame and diſgrace brought vpon them, in regard their dead were depriued of the right and honour of buriall. Afterwards he amplifies the horrour of the diſcomfiture, in ſaying, that their blood ſhall flow from the mountaines, as if they were diſſolued or molten: as when breaches of great riuers doe violently deſcend, and carry earth and all before them. And thus he againe ſhewes, that no meanes ſhall be left them to eſcape, becauſe the ſlaughter ſhall bee no leſſe in the mountaines, then in the plaine where the battell is pitched.

Verſ. 4. And all the hoſt of heauen ſhall bee diſſolued, and the heauens ſhall bee folden like a booke: and all their hoſtes ſhall fall, as the leafe falleth from the vine, and as it falleth from the figgetree.

Iſaiah vſeth here an exceſſiue manner of ſpeech, as others of the Prophets likewiſe often doe, to ſet forth the terror of Gods iudgement, and deepely to wound dull and dead hearts. For otherwiſe, his ſpeech would haue been of no force, neither would it much haue profited the careleſſe and ſecure perſon. He addes then, that the very ſtarres themſelues ſhall bee darkened in this waſte, as if they were conſtrained to fall: the better to manifeſt the waſting which ſhould be there. For when the heauens are clowdie and gloomie, it ſeemes the cloudes wrap and fold themſelues vp one in another, the Sunne and ſtars begin to grow wan and weake, and the whole frame of the heauens ſhake, as if they were readie to fall. Now he ſhewes the like ſhall happen at this time, becauſe euery thing ſhall ſhew ſignes of ſorrowe and lamentation.

But this muſt be referred to the apprehenſion of men, for the heauens moout not out of their place: but when the Lord manifeſts ſome tokens of his diſpleaſure, wee are as much terrified therewith, as if the heauens were ready to fall vpon our heads, and to burie vs vnder them. Not that ſuch things befall the heauens; but he ſpeakes as it were to braſen faces, whom hee was faine thus to awake, that they might not take him as if hee told told them a tale of Robbin Hood, as they ſay; no, you ſhall bee ſo ſmitten with feare, ſaith he, that you ſhall imagin the very heauens are readie to fall about your eares. This is the iuſt reward of a drouzie conſcience, to wit, that wicked perſons which cannot bee touched with any feare of God, ſhall be afraid of their owne ſhadow, and ſhall as much tremble at the falling of a leafe, as if the Sunne and ſtarres fell from heauen. And thus he alſo notes a wofull change, which ſhall trouble and mingle all things together.

The reward of a benummed conſcience.

Verſ. 5. For my ſword ſhall be drunken in the heauens: behold, it ſhall come downe vpon Edom, euen vpon the people of my * curſe, to iudgement.

* Or, diſcomfiture, in iudgement.

HE ſaith that the ſword of the Lord is drunke with blood, as when one hath made a great ſlaughter, ſwords are bathed in blood. And that the ſpeach might haue the more force, he brings in the Lord himſelfe vttering of it. But why, ſaith he, it is in heauen? For God calles not men vp thither to puniſh them, but executes his iudgemẽts here below in earth, and that by the hands of men. But the Prophet reſpects that ſecret counſell of God, by which he deliberates and ordaines all things before the execution therof: he vnderſtands it not then of the act it ſelfe, but commends the efficacie of his owne propheſie, in regard that by the immutable counſell of God this ſlaughter ſhould certainely fall out. Alſo he meant to informe the faithfull hereby, that God examins the doings of the wicked in heauen, howſoeuer they giue themſelues to all iollitie on earth, and go on in their bad courſes vnpuniſhed. Laſtly, that the ſword wherewith they ſhould be ſlaine was alreadie bathed in blood in God his account, euen when he is only determined to puniſh them, which he will aſſuredlie performe, notwithſtanding all their proſperitie.

My ſword.

Note.

1

2

3

Gen. 18, 20. Sodome burnt alreadie in Gods account, whileſt ſhe gaue her ſelfe to drunkennes, diſſolutions, and execrable villanies: as much may likewiſe be ſaid of all other wretched people which lie fettered in Satans chaines, to be ſlaine by the ſword of the Lord of hoſts, euen then when they wallow themſelues moſt in their voluptuouſnes. Let vs not therefore ſtand gazing vpon the proſperitie of the wicked, whileſt they inioy more then their hearts can wiſh; neither let vs linger after the ſame: for albeit no man moleſt them, yet are they not far off from ruin. Why ſo? poore ſoules! God is againſt them.

But our Prophet names the Idumeans here, who were enemies to Gods people, notwithſtanding they were of affinitie with them, and bare the ſtamp of the ſame religion, for they were children of Eſau, and of the ſtock of Abraham, as was ſaid before. As at this day, what greater enemies haue wee then the Papiſts, which are baptized with the ſame baptiſme that we are, and make profeſſion of the name of Chriſt? and yet they furiouſlie perſecute vs, and would haue vs vtterlie rooted out, becauſe we condemne their ſuperſtitions, and Idolatries. Euen ſuch were the Idumeans, and therefore the Prophet culled them out from amongſt all the reſt of the enemies of the Church.

Gen. 36, 8.

Papiſts the greateſt enemies the Church of God hath.

In calling them the people of his diſcomfiture, he confirmes the former ſentence: for it is as much as if the Lord had ſaid, It will be but in vaine for you to thinke you can eſcape my hands, ſeeing you are alreadie ordeined to deſtruction. For by this phraſe of ſpeech he pronounceth definitiue ſentence vpon them, as being alreadie condemned in his heauenlie decree, and that no leſſe, then if at that preſent they had been put apart, and cut away from off the land of the liuing.

And leſt it might ſeeme that God did them any wrong, he addes, in iudgement: for there is nothing vnto which men are more prone then to accuſe God of crueltie: ſo as the greateſt part can not be brought to acknowledge him their competent Iudge, eſpeciallie if he chaſtiſe them ſomewhat ſeuerely. Iſaiah therefore ſhewes, that this ſlaughter muſt needs be mixt with equitie, ſeeing God neuer exceeds in ouermuch ſeueritie.

Verſ. 6. The ſword of the Lord is filled with blood: it is made fat with the fat, and with the blood of the lambs, and the goates, with the fat of the kidneys of the rammes: for the Lord hath a ſacrifice in Bozrah, and a great ſlaughter in the land of Edom.

HE goes on ſtill with the ſame argument, but by another deſcription, which amplifies the matter greatlie: wherein his drift is to rouze vp the wicked who were wont to gibe and geere at all admonitions, as we haue ſaid before. Is it not needfull then that Gods iudgements ſhould be diſciphered out in liuely tables to wound the hearts of the enemies, and to animate the minds of the faithfull with an holy pride in aſſurance that their foes can not any way ſhift it for all their ſtoutnes and rebellion, but that they muſt be brought to the ſhambles like beaſts as ſoone as God doth but hold vp his finger, as they ſay?

He compares their deſtruction to the ſacrifices: for as they were wont to ſacrifice beaſts for the ſeruice and honor of God, ſo ſhould he be glorified by the ſlaughter of this people. The Prophet then confirmes that here which he hath ſaid before touching the iudgement: for when the Lord executes Iuſtice, his glorie ſhines thereby; men reuerence and worſhip him, ſo as the deſtruction of the wicked you ſee is rightlie compared to ſacrifices, which were a part of his ſeruice. Verſ. 5.

Indeed there was no great pleaſure in beholding the ſacrifices: for the cutting their throats, the guſhing out of the warme blood, and the ſtinck of the ſmoke ſerued rather to driue men away; yet the honour and glorie of God ſhined euen in theſe things. So, this deſtruction of the Idumeans no doubt was an horrible ſpectacle to looke vpon, and made no ſuch goodly ſhew, as to bring one in loue with the ſight of it: but that the faithfull euen in this reſpect, might learne to ſanctifie the name of God, they were commanded to lift vp their eies to heauen, becauſe God in executing ſuch a vengeance, did as it were erect and ſet vp ſo many altars for his ſacrifices. And becauſe they had vniuſtly afflicted the Church of God, and had cruelly intreated his choſen, without all compaſſion or humanitie, Iſaiah pronounceth that the offering vp of their blood, was a ſacrifice acceptable and of a ſweet ſmelling ſauor vnto God, becauſe it is the execution of his iudgements.

By lambs and goates, vnder a figure he means the people which ſhould be ſacrificed: and in alluding to the ſundry kinds of offerings, he comprehends all the people, as well ſmall as great: to ſhew, that when God ſhall take his enemies in hand to puniſh them, hee will not let ſo much as any one of them eſcape. He mentions Bozrah, which was the chiefe and head Citie of the Country, in which the greateſt ſlaughter ſhould bee executed: and in the next place addes the land of Edom, through which this diſcomfiture ſhould paſſe, without ſparing any corner of it.

Verſ. 7. And the vnicornes ſhall come downe with them, and the *heifers with the bulles: and their land ſhall bee drunken with blood; and their duſt is made fat with fatneſſe.

*Or, calues.

THis verſe is annexed to the former, for it is no new thing he ſpeakes of, but hee continues the ſame figure, amplifying what hee had ſaid touching goates and lambes: to which, hee not onely addes calues, but wilde beaſts alſo. The ſumme is, that Gods vengeance is bounden, ſo as he will ſpare neither age nor eſtate; for he will put to the ſword as well the cruell and proud Giants, with their vaine brags, as the feeble weakling: as if one prepared a ſacrifice, in which, beaſts of all ſorts were mingled one with another. Neither ſhould any thinke it abſurd, that lambs are coupled with cruell beaſts in this ſacrifice: for by the word lambs in this place, hee meanes not harmleſneſſe and innocencie; but the poore and weake are called ſo by compariſon, becauſe their meane condition held them vnder ſome appearance of modeſtie.

Now albeit it may ſeeme ſtrange that the Lord ſhould thus ſmite his enemies, without ſparing of any at all; notwithſtanding by the word ſacrifice, he ſhewes he doth nothing but that which is iuſt and equall, and for which he ought to be praiſed. And indeed whoſoeuer ſhall examin this fact, ſhall be inforced to lay his hand vpon his mouth, and to confeſſe, that God had iuſt occaſion to cut them off all, not one excepted. The like end are all reprobates to looke for; namely, to be ſacrificed by the hands of thoſe that are as wicked as themſelues. Some take the word Abbirim, for Strong: I had rather follow them which tranſlate it Bulles, it being ſo taken, Pſal. 50. Albeit by Bulles here, vnder a figure, he meanes the ſtrong and mighty.

Verſ. 8. For it is a day of the Lords vengeance, and the yeere of recompence for the iudgement of Zion.

THis verſe muſt be ioyned to the former, for it containes the end why the Lord corrected the Idumeans ſo ſeuerely, namely, becauſe he meant now to maintaine and reuenge the quarrell of his people. For had he not added this reaſon, that which hee ſpake before, might haue ſeemed not onely darke, but improper. For it would be but a flitting and vncertaine knowledge of things, vnleſſe in the conſideration of Gods puniſhing of the wicked, we did alſo therein ſee, that hee manifeſts the continuall care and loue which he hath to his choſen, in the preſeruation of them. Now that which is here ſaid of the Idumeans, ought to bee applied to all the enemies of the Church; for vnder this one particular, our Prophet comprehended them all: and for this cauſe are we to cheere vp and refreſh our hearts with this conſolation in time of aduerſitie, and to ſuſtaine the iniuries which are done vs, which God ſhall reuenge himſelfe. For is he called the auenger, thinke you, for nought? See Pſal. 94. 1. It is not our Prophets meaning then alone to ſay, that God hath power ſufficient to puniſh the wicked when he thinks good, but alſo that he reignes in heauen, to reuenge all wrongs in due ſeaſon.

From particular threatnings, wee may deſcend to the generall.

1
2

1
2

But the two words, day and yeere, is to bee noted: for thereby he giues vs to vnderſtand, that God ſleepes not in heauen, whileſt hee ſeemes to winke at the enemies crueltie; but onely deferres to puniſh, till the appointed time; to the end the faithfull might learne in the meane ſpace, to poſſeſſe their ſoules in patience, and ſuffer him to gouerne all things according to his incomprehenſible wiſdome. Luke 21. 19

Verſ. 9. And the riuers thereof ſhall be turned into pitch; and the duſt thereof into brimſtone; and the land thereof ſhall be burning pitch.

THis whereof he ſpeakes, hath relation to that which went before; in which hee addes a more ample declaration of this deſtruction. We told you erewhile why the Prophets doe liuely repreſent and ſet forth Gods iudgements in ſuch plaine tables as it were; euen to bring men vpon the ſcaffold, thereby conſtraining men to take knowledge of thoſe things, which otherwiſe they would neither ſee nor comprehend; and if they did, yet they would vtterly forget them as ſoone as they had ſeene or apprehended them. But beſides this, we muſt note that the Prophets ſpake of ſecret and hidden things, which ſeemed altogether incredible: for many thought the Prophets bolted out things at a venture in theſe matters. There needed many confirmations therefore: and ſuch are thoſe that he vſeth in this, and other the like places.

in

The ſumme then is, that he ſpeakes of ſuch an horrible change, as ſhall vtterly waſte the land of Edom. Moreouer, he alludes to the deſtruction of Sodome and Gomorrah: Gen. 19.24. which is a forme of teaching much vſed among the Prophets: for in this ruin we haue (as Saint Iude telles vs) a perpetuall example of Gods wrath againſt the reprobate: neither is it without cauſe that the Prophets doe ſo often renue the remembrance thereof, for they would haue all men learne thereby to tremble at Gods iudgements. Hitherunto appertaines that which is ſaid in the verſe following. Iude 7.

Verſ. 10. It ſhall not bee quenched night nor day: the ſmoke thereof ſhall goe vp euermore: it ſhall be deſolate from generation to generation: none ſhall paſſe through it for euer.

QVeſtionleſſe the Prophet vſeth an exceſſiue manner of ſpeech; but the Lord is conſtrained thus to deale with vs, to awaken our dulnes; for an vſuall forme of ſpeech would not moue or affect vs. In ſaying then, that the wrath of the Lord againſt the Idumeans, reſembles a fire that neuer goes out, he takes from them all hope of pardon: for as they ceaſed not to prouoke him, ſo ſhould they find him a ſeuere Iudge vnto them. And Malachi notes it as a ſigne of the reprobation of this people, that the Lord was angry with them for euer: Malachi 1.4. The oppoſition muſt be ſupplied, becauſe Gods children alwaies receiue ſome conſolation, leſt they ſhould be diſcouraged. But we need not ſtand long vpon this matter: it ſufficeth that we haue the drift and ſcope of the Prophets words.

Verſ. 11. But the pellican and the hedgehog ſhall poſſeſſe it, and the great owle and the rauen ſhall dwell in it: and he ſhall ſtretch out vpon it the line of vanity, and the ſtones of emptineſſe.

AS touching theſe creatures which Iſaiah here mentions, there are diuers opinions: neither are the Hebrew expoſitors themſelues well reſolued touching the ſame: yet wee may perceiue the Prophets drift well enough; to wit, that hee ſets out the face of a Country laid waſte & deſolate. For doubtleſſe he ſpeakes of hideous monſters in nature, which come not among men, neither are they acquainted with them. And this he doth the rather to deſcribe the horror of this deſtruction. The firſt member of the verſe then is cleere enough of it ſelfe: but there is ſome difficultie in the ſecond. Some expound theſe words, lines of vanitie, by an *antiphraſe, and vnderſtand it of the Iewes: but I rather thinke it ſhould bee referred to the Idumeans, as the former words are. And to the end we may the better know that this is the Prophets true meaning, the ſame words are found in the firſt Chapter of Malachi, verſe, 4,5. who came long after our Prophet: in which place, hee confirmes that which Iſaiah here denounceth. Though Edom ſay, we are impoueriſhed, but we wil returne & build the deſolate places; yet ſaith the Lord of hoſtes, they ſhall build, but I will deſtroy it; and they ſhall call them, the border of wickedneſſe, and the people with whom the Lord is angry for euer. And your eies ſhall ſee it, and yee ſhall ſay, The Lord wil be magnified vpon the borders of Iſrael. Malachi then plainely expounds that which Iſaiah ſpake ſomewhat darkly in his time: Iſaiah ſaith, the Idumeans ſhall build in vaine: the other, that they ſhall ſpread the lines of vanitie: for it is all one in effect as if he had ſaid, that the maſter-workmen (as Maſons and Carpenters) ſhall but loſe their labour in going about to build the Cities againe: for men of ſuch craft, vſe ſmall lines and plummets to meaſure their works by. Thoſe then that ſhould take in hand the reſtauration of Edom, ſhould beſtow coſt in vaine: for they ſhall be ſo confounded, that they ſhall not know at what end to begin, nor where to make an end. And albeit God vſeth to mitigate the miſeries which he ſends vpon others, by ſome conſolation in the end, yet they muſt looke for none at all.

*A figure, that hath a contrarie meaning.

Hence we may collect a very profitable doctrine, which is this: doe wee at any time ſee that cities heretofore ruinated, are now built againe and brought into ſome good faſhion? Therein wee may behold a ſingular note of Gods fauour: for the labour of Maſons and handicrafts men would haue been to no purpoſe, vnleſſe the Lord had put his hand both to the beginning, middeſt, and end thereof; for what can proſper, vnleſſe he guide things from the laying of the firſt ſtone, to the laſt: and likewiſe, vnleſſe hee keepe them vnder his protection? Men may well diſburſe great ſummes of monie then, yet in vaine: yea, they ſhall vexe themſelues, without bringing to paſſe, vnleſſe hee be pleaſed to gouerne the buſineſſe, and to powre out his bleſſing vpon that which they take in hand. His onely bleſſing therefore makes rich: and that alone is it which vpholds vs in any eſtate or condition. For which cauſe it is ſaid, that his hands built Ieruſalem: Pſal. 47.2. Now as touching that which Iſaiah here threatens againſt the Idumeans, the holy Ghoſt pronounceth the like elſewhere, againſt the houſe of Ahab: meaning that it ſhould bee raced euen with the ground: 2. King. 21.13.

Except the Lord build the houſe, they labour but in vaine that build it: Pſal. 127.1.

Pro. 10.10.

Verſ. 12. The Nobles thereof ſhall call to the Kingdome, and there ſhall be none: and all the Princes ſhall bee as nothing.

THis text is diuerſly expounded: but I will not trouble you with the reciting of the expoſitions; for in refuting of them, I ſhould make my ſelfe more worke then needes. That which is moſt probable, is this, They ſhall call the Nobles of Edom to rule, but it ſhall be in vaine: As if he ſhould ſay, In ſo miſerable an eſtate there ſhall none be found that will willinglie beare rule, or take vpon him the gouernment of ſtate-matters. This ſentence is read elſewhere, yea, we haue had the ſame in a maner before, albeit ſomewhat differing in words. Now this maner of ſpeech leads me to think, that the Prophet meant cloſely to taxe the pride of this people, who were waxen ouerhaughtie, by reaſon of their peace and abundance. For as much then as the Idumeans being ſeated vpō high mountaines grew proud, the Prophet ſhewes, that they ſhould be brought downe with ſhame, ſo as none of the Nobilitie ſhould be left, neither ſhould there remaine any man of great place: for when kingdomes are ruinated, all gouernment is alſo aboliſhed. The people are as a bodie without an head, neither is there any diſtinction of perſons, or places.

the

Chap.3.6.7.

Lords without Lordſhips.

Thus then by way of ſcorne he ſaith, that theſe braue Nobles which were ſo highlie exalted, ſhalbe as Lords without Lordſhips, which appeares yet better by the ſecond member where it is added for expoſitions ſake, that they ſhall be brought to nothing. The ſumme is, that Edom ſhall reſemble a bodie ſhattered in peeces, in which ſhall appeare nought elſe but an horrible confuſion of all things. Oh fearefull curſe of God! What doe men differ from beaſts, I pray you, if they want the execution of good lawes? Is their condition any whit better? No ſurely. The beaſts may well be without any head or gouernour, becauſe they will not offer crueltie to thoſe of their owne kinde: but Lord, what is more cruell then man, if he be not kept vnder! Is he not caried an end by his paſſions as a furie of hell to runne out into all diſſolutions?

Verſ. 13. And it ſhal bring forth thorns in the pallaces thereof, nettles and thiſtles in the ſtrong holds thereof, and it ſhall be an habitation for Dragons, and a court for Oſtriches.

HE continues on his ſpeech, wherein he ſets forth an Image of an horrible deſolation: to wit, when beautifull houſes and pallaces are razed euen with the ground; or, ſo laid on heapes, that men can haue no vſe of them: being rather fit for thornes, briars, and nettles to grow in, then for dwelling places, which is farre worſe, then if they had bin conuerted into meadow or errable ground. But ſee how the Lord puniſheth the pride of ſuch as delight in building of ſumptuous houſes, and gorgeous pallaces; they thinke to make their names immortall, as it were: but God driues them out, and makes neſts therein for birds; and dennes for wild beaſts: and thus they ſerue as perpetuall enſignes of their vaine ambition, who by ſuch buildings thought to make thēſelues garlands of their owne renoume and excellencie. Mens places then are inhabited of ſuch beaſts, who repreſent the nature & diſpoſitions of thoſe which built and dwelt in thoſe ſo goodly houſes.

How God puniſheth the pride of ſuch as delight in building ſumptuous houſes.

The houſes of men inhabited by beaſts, anſwerable to their natures that dwelt in them.

Now this ouerturning of order is alſo a wofull ſigne of Gods wrath; to wit, when the earth which was created for the vſe of man, is cōſtreined to receiue inhabitants of other kinds, and to ſpew out their right and lawfull owners: but by meanes thereof no doubt it ſhall be purged of that filthines wherewith it was in times paſt defiled.

A note of Gods curſe in this change.

Verſ. 14. There ſhall meet alſo Ziim and Iim, and the Satyre ſhall crie to his fellow, and the Skritch-owle ſhall reſt there, and ſhall finde for her ſelfe a quiet dwelling.

15. There ſhal the Owle make her neſt, and lay, and hatch, and gather them vnder her ſhadow: there ſhall the Vultures alſo be gathered euery one with her make.

SOme affirme that theſe beaſts are Fayries, others, Hobgoblins; others, Satyres: neither do the Hebrues themſelues agree about the proper ſignification of their names. But what need we ſtand much about the matter? It ſufficeth vs that wee haue the Prophets ſcope and drift. He meant to decipher out an horrible deſolation. As if he ſhould ſay, Idumea ſhall be laid ſo waſt, that it ſhall be left without inhabitants: for in ſtead of them it ſhall be repleniſhed with wild beaſts. See here the iuſt reward of thoſe vaineglorious fooles, which built ſuch ſumptuous pallaces to continue the perpetuall memorie of their names forſooth. And here by the way alſo is a prediction of the chaſtiſement wherewith this curſed nation was to be ſcourged for their crueltie, in regard they whollie bent themſelues to ſeeke the ouerthrow and deſtruction of their brethren and neighbours.

The like was threatned before Chap. 13.21. 22. againſt Babell.

Now howſoeuer it be doubtfull whether the Prophet ſpeakes heere of * Fates, * Hobgoblins, or * Satyres, yet all agree that theſe words ſignifie ſuch beaſts as haue the faces of men. We alſo ſee how cunning the Deuill is by diuers illuſions, ghoſts, and fearefull apparitions; by ſounds, and hidious noyſes, to inchant deſolat places: but of this wee haue ſpoken in the 13. Chap. Now this vice which God hath ſo ſharplie puniſhed in one people, is almoſt common to all: for who is he that builds ſuch ſtately houſes, but the price therof is wrung out of the poore? ſometimes by violence and extorſion; ſometimes by continuall moleſtations; ſo as the very morter, ſtones, & wood, are repleniſhed with blood, in Gods ſight: Therefore the ſtone ſhall crie out of ỹ wall (ſaith Abacuck) and the beame ſhall anſwere vnto it, Woe to him that builds a Towne with blood, &c. Let vs not wonder at theſe ſtrange iudgements and horrible changes then, when wee ſee that ambition drawes with it theſe wicked extortions and robberies, but rather let vs ſeriouſlie therein conſider Gods iuſt reuenging hand.

* Ladies of the Fayries or Elfes.

* A Skritch-owle, or an vnluckykind of bird.

* Gods of the wods, hauing the head of a man, and bodie of a goate.

Sumptuous buildings for the moſt part reared vp by extortions. Abacuk. 2. 11.

Verſ. 16. Seeke in the booke of the Lord, and reade: none of theſe ſhall faile, none ſhall ſhall want her make: for his mouth hath commanded, and his very ſpirit hath gathered them.

BY the booke of the Lord, ſome vnderſtand this prophecie; as if he ſtirred them vp to reade it diligently: and ſo it is, as if he ſhould ſay, not one title of it ſhall faile, when the time is expired: as he addes by & by after. Others expound it more ſubtillie of Gods eternall decree, thus; Search whether he hath not ſo ordained it: but this expoſition is too farre fetched. I expound it of the law it ſelfe therefore, which by way of excellencie is called the booke of the Lord, becauſe out of it, the Prophets drew all their doctrine, as we haue often told you heretofore. That the noueltie of ſuch a fact then, ſhould not make them reiect this prophecie, Iſaiah ſaith, that they were aduertiſed of it long before: and thus hee priuily taxeth their incredulitie, for remaining ſo groſſe conceited, as to eſteeme this thing altogether new and vnheard of.

The word Law expounded.

Now he hath good reaſon to bring them to the law, wherein God ſo often declares that he will haue care of his people, and will puniſh the wicked ſort. Seeing Moſes therefore ſpake of it ſo long agoe, the Prophet ſaith, that none ought to be ſo incredulous touching the truth of his prophecie, ſeeing he telles them of no ſtrange matters, but onely confirmes that which Moſes hath long ſince teſtified and taught. This I take to be the natiue ſenſe of our Prophet, who by theſe words meant to fortifie the Iewes, to the end they ſhould wait with patience for the promiſe of the Lord, as being aſſured that the euent would manifeſt the truth of thoſe things, which were alreadie foretold to fall vpon the Idumeans, and other enemies of the Church. Why ſo? Becauſe Moſes had teſtified (without cauſe of blame) that God would alwaies protect and defend his people. Againe, it was needfull they ſhould be aduertiſed hereof, that when the Idumeans ſhould be thus dealt withall indeed, they might not thinke it fell out by chance, but might acknowledge God the author of this iudgement. For ſuch is the peruerſitie of mans nature, that he beleeues not, though he be forewarned, till the very pinch: and beſides, hee is giuen to attribute that vnto fortune, which proceedes from the iuſt iudgement of God. Iſaiah therefore preuents theſe inconueniences, in willing them to aske of Moſes touching the truth hereof, becauſe hee was reuerenced of all, in reſpect of his authoritie.

None of them, to wit, of the beaſts: for the Hebrewes vſe theſe two wordes Iſch, and Iſhah, not only when they ſpeake of men and women, but alſo of males and females of all kinds. For his mouth. He confirmes that which he ſaid before; for albeit Gods works be manifeſt inough, yet he makes vs comprehend them better by his mouth, that is to ſay, by his word, that thereby wee may haue a clearer ſight of them: and this is the right viewing of the works of God, to wit, when with a quick eie we behold them in the cleere glaſſe of his word. For we are too bold and preſumptuous, and giue our ſelues the raines too much, vnleſſe we be guided by this heauenlie doctrine, as it were by torch-light. The pride and ouerweening of men therefore is here to be repreſſed, who will call into queſtion, and cenſure the iudgements of God and all his workes, without being ruled by his word: for if they would ſeeke in his booke, and aske at his mouth, wee ſhould ſee greater pietie and religion in them then there is.

Men erre, becauſe they ſearch not the Scriptures, Mat. 22.

Now the Prophet in ſpeaking of the mouth of the Lord, meant to confirme that which was ſaid before touching this iudgement; the reaſon is, becauſe nothing can faile of that which iſſues out of his ſacred mouth. Iſaiah affirmes it to be a thing impoſſible then, that that which is once decreed of God, which he alſo hath cõmanded him to publiſh in his name, ſhould euer be called backe by any meanes. And thus with this buckler, hee repulſeth all the difficulties which eaſilie ariſeth, as oft as the promiſes of God doe ſurmount our reach.

I grant he ſometimes threatens with condition, as he threatned Abimelec, Gen. 12. 17. and Pharaoh, Gen. 20. 3. and the Niniuites, Ionah. 1. 2. whom afterwards hee pardoned, becauſe they repented: but if he haue once determined to puniſh men indeed, hee will ſhew by the effects, that hee is both true of his word, and able to performe it, as well as hee is able to deliuer his in the time of neede.

This the Prophet expreſſeth againe when he maketh the mouth and ſpirit or breath to conſent together: for albeit the ſpirit of the mouth and the word, doe often ſignifie one and the ſame thing; and that the Hebrewes are wont to repeate one thing twice: yet here he makes an elegant alluſion vnto the breath, from which the words proceed, and of which they be formed: as if he ſhould ſay; this prophecie ſhall not want his efficacie, becauſe God, who by his voice hath commanded the brute beaſts to poſſeſſe Idumea, wil alſo draw them thither with his onely breath.

Now hee ſpeakes of a ſecret inſpiration. What maruell is it then, if all beaſts aſſemble themſelues together at Gods firſt becke; as we ſee it came to paſſe in the deluge; yea euen in the creation of the world; when Moſes teſtifies, that at Gods commandement all beaſts came by and by vnto man, to ſubiect themſelues vnder his gouernment? Gen. 2. 19. & 7. 15. And would they not thinke you haue been ſubiect and obedient to him ſtill, if he himſelfe had not been depriued of this authoritie by his owne rebellion? But being now reuolted from God, the beaſts forthwith began to band themſelues againſt him, and to offer violence vnto him.

The brute beaſts would haue been ſubiect to man, if man himſelfe had been ſubiect to God.

Verſ. 16. And hee hath caſt the lots for them, and his hand hath diuided it vnto them by line: they ſhall poſſeſſe poſſeſſe it for euer, from generation to generation.

HE ſaith, that theſe monſters and wilde beaſts are ſo put into poſſeſſion of theſe places, that they can not be eaſily chaſed from thence, becauſe God (himſelfe) hath aſſigned it vnto them as their lot and inheritance. By this then he ſhewes, that whole Edom is vnder the Lords commandement, that is to ſay, to caſt out the inhabitants thereof, and to giue the poſſeſſion thereof vnto whom it pleaſeth him, namely, to the Dragons, Oſtriches, Satyres, Owles, Vultures, and ſuch like.

1 We muſt not promiſe to our ſelues a perpetuall abode in any place.

Hence let vs gather, that it is in vaine for men to promiſe vnto themſelues a perpetuall abode in any place whatſoeuer, further forth then they be readie to depart both out of place, yea, and calling to, as ſoone as God ſhall be pleaſed to diſpoſſeſſe them. For we hold our places but as tenants at will in the place where he ſuſtaines vs, nay, as pilgrims and ſtrangers, whether we be in the countrie of our naturall birth, or out of it. If he be pleaſed to giue vs a quiet habitation in a certaine place for any long time together, we inioy it only by his ſpeciall fauor: for as ſoone as he ſpeakes but the word, we muſt of neceſſitie be packing thence. Moreouer, if we acknowledge he hath giuen vs to continue in any Countrie, there we may be bold to dwell ſafely and quietlie: for if he will maintaine the beaſts right in keeping them ſafe in the place which he hath aſſigned them, will he not much more preſerue men, for whoſe ſakes he hath created heauen, earth, and the ſea, with all that therein is?

2 We muſt impute it to a ſpeciall fauor of God if he ſuffer vs to inioy our abode in any place for a long ſpace.

THE XXXV. CHAPTER.

Verſ. 1. The deſert of the wildernes ſhall reioyce: and the waſt ground ſhall be glad and floriſh as the roſe.

THE Prophet ſpeakes heere of a maruelous change, for hauing in the former Chapter ſet forth the deſolation of Idumea, and ſhewed how it ſhould be brought vnto a deſert, now on the contrarie he promiſeth that the deſert ſhall be made a frutefull place, ſo as the barren and fallow field ſhould become fat and floriſhing, and the ſolitarie and waſt places ſhould be inhabited with people. This muſt needs be
1 the peculier worke of God, for as he bleſſeth
2 the whole earth, ſo alſo with this bleſſing
3 doth he ſprinckle ſome parts of it more ſpa-
4 ringlie, others more liberallie: ſometimes he withdrawes it altogether, becauſe of mans vnthankfulnes.

This text is diuerſlie expounded. Not to meddle with the fond gloſſes of the Iewes, who draw this and the like places to the temporall kingdome of the Meſſias, whom they forge at their pleaſure. Some expound it of Iudea, others referre it to the vocation of the Gentiles. But let vs aduiſe our ſelues well, whether it will not agree better ſo to expound it of Iudeah, that vnder it we alſo comprehend the whole world. For he hath ſo propheſied the deſtruction of the whole world, that in ỹ meane while he ſpared not Iudeah, contrariwiſe in as much as iudgement began at his owne houſe, or ſanctuarie, the waſt of the holie land was foretold in the more lamentable termes, to the end it might ſerue as a ſpeciall example. Hauing therefore aptlie and fitlie begun with Iudea, he now calles all the world a deſert, becauſe the wrath of God wholie ouerflowed it as a deluge. I therefore 1 willinglie referre this place to Iudea firſt, and
2 next to other parts of the world: as if he ſhould ſay, When the Lord ſhall haue puniſhed men for their iniquities, and ſhall be auenged vpon the Iewes and Gentiles, then the deſert ſhall be conuerted into an habitation, and God ſhall renew the face of the whole earth.

This reſtauration is an excellent teſtimonie of the goodnes of God: for are we not all worthie to periſh, and to be vtterlie conſumed, when we prouoke God by our reuolt, but eſpeciallie thoſe whom he hath adopted for his peculier people? But Iſaiah had ſpeciall reſpect vnto the Iewes, leſt they ſhould faint in their ſcattering.

How and when this propheſie ſhall be accompliſhed.

Let vs now ſee how this propheſie was accompliſhed, or when it ſhall be accompliſhed. The Lord began ſome reſtauration of his Church when he brought his people out of of Babylon, but that was but a ſmall beginning: I am not afraid therefore to ſay, that this, and the like places, are to be referred vnto Chriſt and his kingdome: for it can not otherwiſe be vnderſtood nor fulfilled, if we compare other propheſies with this. But whē I ſpeake of Chriſtes kingdome, I vnderſtand not only that which is here on earth, but that alſo which ſhall be accompliſhed at the laſt day, which for this cauſe is called the day of reſtoring & refreſhing, Acts 3. 21. becauſe the faithfull finde no permanent reſt till then. The reaſon then why the Prophets ſpeake ſo magnificallie of Chriſtes kingdome is, in regard that they haue an eie vnto that great and notable day wherein the true and perfect felicitie of the faithfull ſhall be eſtabliſhed.

The Churches reſtauration began in the returne from Babel, proceeded at Chriſtes firſt comming, and ſhall be fullie accompliſhed at his ſecond appearing.

The Prophet therefore hauing ſpoken of theſe horrible diſcomfitures, and hauing likewiſe foretold the miſerable confuſion that ſhould befall the whole world, he now comforts ỹ faithfull by this promiſe, telling them for certaine, that all things ſhall be reſtored. But this is only brought to paſſe by Chriſt, in whom we may be ſaid to be renued and gladed in deed, for he it is who reſtores and puts in order whatſoeuer was and is confuſed: for out of him, what is there in heauen or in earth but ſtinch, confuſion, and deſtruction. But wee are to note it diligently in the firſt place, that the world was fitted by ſuch chaſtiſements to receiue ſo great a fauour; and that by meanes thereof, this benefit of Chriſt might ſhine themore gloriouſly, which would haue ſeemed but darke and obſcure, if things had been already ſet in perfect order. And therefore it was needfull that the proud and haughtie hearts ſhould be tamed and humbled, that the taſte of this grace and power of Chriſt might be the more welcome.

Verſ. 2. It ſhall floriſh abundantly, and ſhall greatly reioyce alſo and ſay: the glorie of Lebanon ſhall be giuen vnto it: the beauty of Carmell, and of Sharon; they ſhall ſee the glorie of the Lord, and the excellency of our God.

HEe now more fully expreſſeth how great the effect of this grace of Chriſt is, by whoſe power and vertue, the things which before were deſolate and in poore eſtate, doe now floriſh. This repetition then ſerues for an amplification: and the verbe twice vſed, may be doubly expounded; that is, either to ſignifie the prolonging of time in the continuall growth: as if he ſhould haue ſaid, It ſhall not floriſh with a tranſitorie beautie, which vaniſheth away by and by, but with a continuall freſhneſſe, ſtedfaſt and permanent, that ſhall neuer fade nor fall: or, to note out the increaſe and continuall, or yeerly growth: for Chriſt inricheth vs, that from day to day he may augment his graces in vs.

The ſimilitudes following, doe further ſet forth this fruitfulneſſe: for hee contents not himſelfe to ſay, that there ſhould be plentiful haruеſt, whereas before it was a wilderneſſe, and that the dry places ſhould wax greene, but hee addes that there ſhall be ſuch a glorie and excellencie, as is in Libanus, Carmel, and Sharon: and albeit Carmel ſignifies a field that is tilled and fruitfull, yet here it is a proper name, as the other two be. Now we haue ſeene heretofore, that theſe mountaines were much renowned, and held for the moſt wealthy places of all Iudeah, in regard of their goodly ſituation and abundance of fruits. Chap. 33. 9.

They ſhall ſee the glory.] He now expounds that in plaine termes, which before he ſpake figuratiuely. Men are barren and emptie of all good things by nature, till they haue learned to know God aright: and therefore the beginning of our fruitfulneſſe is, that wee haue life put into vs by his preſence, which cannot bee brought to paſſe without an inward feeling of the power of faith. For I make no queſtion, but the Prophet meant to raiſe vp our mindes higher, to the end wee might bee brought to the conſideration of the abundance and fruitfulneſſe of heauenly graces. Men may be filled with bread and wine, and ſuch like, and yet in the meane while may be ignorant that God is the giuer thereof, and therefore ceaſe not to bee miſerable ſtill; nay, which more is, abundance rather blindes them, and oftentimes makes them grow rebellious: but when God manifeſts himſelfe, and cauſeth vs to ſee his glory and excellencie, it comes to paſſe, that beſides the ſight of theſe bleſſings, we inioy them to our ſaluation.

Verſ. 3. Strengthen the weake hands, and comfort the weake knees.

WEe may expound this place generally, as if he ſhould ſay; Let thoſe that feele their hands weake, put ſtrength to them, and let thoſe who feele their knees trembling and weake, be of good comfort, and be ſtrong: but the verſe following ſhewes, that all this belongs to the Miniſters of the word. For he ſpeakes to the teachers of the Church, & commands them to exhort, to prouoke, and quicken vp the feeble, which were weake and fainthearted, to the end hee might make them more conſtant and cheerefull. Now this is brought in to very good purpoſe, becauſe it could not be choſen, but that ſo many ſignes of Gods wrath (of which I.e ſpake before) ſhould not terrifie and make the ſtouteſt of all to tremble. For ſeeing aduerſities doe alwaies caſt vs downe, who is not afraid when God ſhewes himſelfe angry againſt our ſinnes, and proclaimes open war againſt vs? But the Prophet giues them in charge to cheere vp the ſorrowfull hearts, and thoſe that were as good as dead: and in the verſe following hee ſhewes how this ſhould be done.

The Miniſters of the word.

The ſorrowfull hearted ought to be comforted.

Verſ. 4. Say vnto them that are fearefull; Be you ſtrong, feare not: behold, your God commeth with vengeance, euen with a recompence, and will come and ſaue vs.

BEcauſe it is God onely who makes his word effectuall in our hearts by his holy Spirit, and puts this ſtrength into it, whereof he hath ſpoken, (for by faith onely wee liue and ſtand) therefore Iſaiah addes this promiſe, touching the grace that was to come, ſaying, Behold, your God will come. In the firſt place we haue to note, that Gods meaning is not to withdraw or keepe his grace in ſecret, but rather that it be publiſhed and communicated to all, to the end trembling hands and hearts may be ſtrengthened, and their ſpirits reuiued. This is the onely meanes to inable vs to ſtand in the moſt deſperate tentations: for if wee be not ſet vpon our feete by the word of the Lord, we muſt needes quaile and loſe our hope. The Miniſters haue this charge then; to wit, to comfort the heauy hearted, to confirme the weake, and to ſtrengthen thoſe that are ready to fall.

The efficacie of the word noted.

Wee haue alſo to note of what exceeding force the word is, ſeeing it is able to ſtrengthen the weake hands, and to comfort the feeble knees: for if it had not power to inſpire this life into men, the Prophet would neuer haue ſpoken thus. And yet, if God ſhould onely ſmite the eares in ſpeaking, and ſhould not therewithall cauſe the ſame to ſinke into our hearts, all would be to no purpoſe. In that he attributes this efficacie vnto the word then, let vs alſo therein know that it is himſelfe from whom that power proceeds, that ſo it might not be ſpoken fruitleſlie, but might worke inwardlie vpon the conſcience, not at all times, nor vpon all, but then, when it pleaſeth him thus to worke by the ſecret power of his holy ſpirit.

The Lord works not vpon all, nor at all times, inwardly vpon mens conſciences.

Hence we gather, that by the ſame word we be brought into the right way of Gods ſeruice, for without it we ſhould remaine ignorant, all our reaſon would faile, and not only ſtagger, but our infidelitie would make vs become wholie brutiſh. It is more then need then that the Lord ſuccor vs this way, that our feares being appeaſed, & our weaknes ſtrengthened, we may be fitted to walke on in our chriſtian courſe. For if we had theſe words Feare not, Behold your God, well fixed in our hearts, all faintings would ſoone vaniſh. Men no ſooner feele that God is neere vnto them, but they caſt away feare, or at the leaſt ſo reſiſt it, that they are not ouercome of it. In nothing be carefull ſaith S. Paul, for the Lord is at hand, Philip. 4. 5. and 6. of which ſentéce we haue intreated at large elſewhere. It ſeems alſo that the Apoſtle to the Hebrues alludes to this place, Chap. 12. 3. and 13. where hauing forbidden them to be grieued or diſcouraged with Gods correction, he recites the words of our Prophet, and applies this ſentence to all the faithfull, that ſo they might ſtirre vp themſelues vnto perſeuerance, and conſtantlie to hold out vnto the end, in regard they were to ſuffer many aſſaults.

How to be eaſed of fainting fits.

Neither is it ſuperfluous that the Prophet addes your God: for if we be not aſſured that he is ours, his comming ſhall bring vs terror rather then comfort. Therefore he ſets not God forth here in his Maieſtie, which caſts downe the pride of the fleſh; but his grace which comforts the afflicted & weake. We ſee then it is not without cauſe that he thus adornes God with this title, namely, that he is the protector of the faithfull, to retaine them in ſafetie.

Obiect. If any obiect that God muſt needs be dreadfull when he comes to puniſh in his wrath: Anſ. I anſwere, that this vengeance is threatned againſt the wicked, and the enemies of his Church; ſo that albeit it be terrible vnto thé, yet it ſhall bring conſolation to the faithfull. This is the cauſe why he addes, that he will come to ſaue: for otherwiſe the Iewes might haue replied, What benefit ſhall the deſtruction of the enemie bring vs? What ſhall we be the better for it? Should wee delight in their calamities? This is the cauſe I ſay why he ſaith expreſſlie, that he will turne this vengeance and recompence (touching their enemies) vnto their ſaluation: for the ſaluation of the godly is alwaies ioined with the puniſhment of the wicked. We ſhewed in the ſeauenth Chapter verſ. 4. how the faithfull are deliuered from perplexed cares by this fauor of God, and by the hope of his defence. For the preſent, let vs obſerue, that God is readie armed with vengeance, to the end his children may learne to reſt vpon his help, and not to thinke him idle in the heauens: this is the cauſe of theſe repetitions, for infidelitie hath gotten ſuch faſt rooting in vs, that is not plucked vp by and by.

The punishment of the wicked is alwaies ioined with the ſaluation of the faithfull.

In the end of ỹ verſe there may be a double reading, to wit, either that God ſhall come with a recompence, or, that he will come with the recompence of God; chooſe whether of the two you like beſt, for the ſenſe is all one. Notwithſtanding if you reade Elohim in the genetiue caſe, Recompence ſhall be called the recompence of God, becauſe it properlie belongs vnto him, that ſo the faithfull may know aſſuredlie that he is no leſſe a rewarder, then God.

Verſ. 5. Then ſhall the eies of the blind be lightened, and the eares of the deafe opened.

6. *Then ſhall the lame man leape as an heart, and the dumb mans tongue ſhall ſing: for in the wildernes ſhall waters * breake out, and riuers in the deſert.* * Or, be digged.

HE ſpeakes ſtill of the promiſe touching the reſtauration of the Church, that he might comfort the harts of the faithfull who ſhould be ſharplie aſſaulted with the grieuous calamities of which he had foretold. Now ſeeing Chriſt is the fountaine from whence this reſtauration ſprings, we muſt of neceſſitie ſtill haue recourſe vnto him, if we will haue the right vnderſtanding of that which Iſaiah ſaith in this place, for by him alone it is in deed that we are begotten againe to the hope of the heauenlie life. Now it is not vnlike but our Prophet alludes to the prophcſie which we haue ſeene in the 29. Chapter verſ. 9. 10. where he threatens the Iewes with a fearefull blinding of their eies, and an hardening of their hearts, for which cauſe he here promiſeth that at Chriſtes comming mens mindes ſhall be enlightened and cleared by regeneration, whereas before they ſate in darknes.

There is great force in the word Then; for thence wee may gather, that being out of Chriſt we are dumb, blind, and lame: in a word, void of all abilitie to performe any thing that is good; but Chriſt renues vs by his ſpirit, that in him we may recouer our true health.

Being out of Chriſt, we are ſpirituallie blind, dumb, and lame.

By tongue, eyes, eares, and feete, he meanes all the faculties of our ſoules, which in themſelues are ſo corrupted, that we can not draw thence ſo much as a good thought; till we be made new creatures by the benefit of Chriſt: for our eies can not ſee the truth, our eares can not vnderſtand it, neither can our feete walke in it, vntill we be vnited vnto Chriſt. The vnderſtandings of men indeed are very accute in apprehéding miſchiefe, their tongues eloquent and prompt vnto ſlanders, periuries, lying, and vaine ſpeach, their hands and fingers but too nimble to theft and violence, their feete to ſhedding of blood: in a word, all the powers both of ſoule and bodie not only inclined, but Eyes. Eares. Feet.

We are naturallie prone and wiſe to do euill, but to do well we haue no knowledge. Iere. 4. 22.

but alſo ſet on fire to doe wickedly. But come we to the performãce of that which is good, euery finger is a thumbe, as they ſay. Is it not more then needfull then that wee be reformed by the power of God, that thence wee may beginne to vnderſtand, comprehend, ſpeake, and put in execution thoſe things 1.Cor.12.3. which God hath called vs vnto? for none can ſo much as ſay, that Ieſus is the Lord, but by the holy Ghoſt.

This reformation then we ſee proceedes onely from the grace of Chriſt: thoſe therefore which are conuerted vnto him, doe recouer new ſtrength, whereas before they were wholly vnfruitfull, and as good as dead. For out of him, we are either depriued of all good things; or elſe they are ſo corrupted in vs, that they can be applied to no right vſe, but are rather prophaned by our abuſing of Mat.1.11.5. & 15.3. them. Ieſus Chriſt hath both fully teſtified and taught the truth of this point, when hee gaue ſpeech to the dumbe, ſight to the blind, legs to the lame and impotent: but that which he did to the body, was but a glimpſe of that which he works much more abundantly and powerfully in our ſoules.

In ſaying that the waters ſhall be digged out, he addes other benefits wherewith the faithfull are inriched ſoone after the eſtabliſhing of Chriſt his Kingdome: as if hee ſhould ſay; You ſhall not neede to feare any want, after you be reconciled vnto God through Chriſt; for plentifull and perfect felicitie ſtreames from him vpon vs. But theſe things the Prophet ſets before vs vnder borrowed ſpeeches.

Wee are poore and beggerly, till God inrich vs with Chriſts benefits.

Firſt, he ſaith the waters are digged. For whereas all things were barren before, now there ſhould be great abundance. How poore and beggerly are we then, vnleſſe God, for the loue which hee beares to Ieſus Chriſt, powres out his bleſſing vpon vs; which Ieſus onely brings with him from his heauenly Father, and then imparts it to the members of his body. I denie not but the wicked thriue wonderfully in outward abundance; but all is accurſed of God; becauſe they are out of Chriſt: from whom onely flowes that true and ſauing influence of all riches. Truly it were much better to wiſh death, rather then the abundance of wine and oyle, with which wee muſt needes ſwallow the curſe of God. When Chriſt then ſhall beginne to manifeſt himſelfe, then ſhall riuers and waters flow forth, to the healthfull vſe of the faithfull.

Death is rather to be wiſhed, then that abundance with which we muſt needes ſwallow Gods curſe.

Verſ. 7. And the dry ground ſhall be as a poole, and the thirſtie as ſprings of water: in the habitations of dragons, where they lay, ſhall bee a place for reedes and ruſhes.

HE confirmes the former ſentence; to wit, that Chriſt ſhall come to ſatisfie his choſen with abundance of all good things. Why ſo? Becauſe waters ſhall iſſue and flow out of the dry ground. But we muſt remember what I ſaid erewhile; to wit, that the Prophet here deſciphers out vnto vs, an image as it were of euerlaſting happineſſe: for howſoeuer this outward change appeared not viſible to the eye at Chriſts comming; yet Iſaiah not without good cauſe affirmes, that vnder his gouernment, all things ſhall be fruitfull: for hee hath ſaid before, that without him all things are accurſed vnto vs. This whole world will bee but as a parched heath and wilderneſſe, where lions, dragons, and wild beaſts range after their pray, vntill the kingdome of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt bee erected and ſet vp amongſt vs: let it bee once eſtabliſhed; the faithfull ſhall feele no want at all.

The world but a wilderneſſe without Chriſt.
Pſal 67.9.7.
Pſal.34.11.

The Lord did ſet his ſeale to the truth of this doctrin, whē he deliuered his people out of Babylons captiuitie. Yet we are to ſeek the accompliſhment of this prophecie in Ieſus Chriſt, who ſets all things that are out of frame, in their perfect eſtate againe. For that deliuerance was but a darke ſhadow of this; and yet wee are not to ſeeke the full accompliſhment of this promiſe in this world; neither, becauſe as our bleſſednes conſiſts onely in hope, ſo muſt wee frame our mindes to wait for the ſame till the laſt day; when wee ſhall be put into the full poſſeſſion of our happineſſe, which now for the preſent is hidden as it were from vs. It ſufficeth vs that God giues vs ſome ſweete taſte thereof in theſe our conflicting daies, that with the greater affection wee might learne daily to aſpire to that full felicitie which is reſerued for vs in the heauens.

As our full bleſſednes conſiſts in hope, ſo muſt we patiently wait for the ſame till the laſt day.

Verſ. 8. *And there ſhall bee a path way, and the way ſhall bee called holy: and the polluted ſhall not paſſe by it: for he ſhall be with them, and walke in the way, and the fooles ſhall not erre.

*Or, ſhall go.

THE Prophet promiſeth the Iewes heere, that they ſhall bee ſet at libertie to returne home againe into their country, to the end that being afterward carried captiue into Babylon, they might not imagin it to be a perpetuall baniſhment. And yet me thinkes this ſentence ſhould extend it ſelfe further. For as heretofore hee promiſed them abun- Verſ.7. dance and ſtore of bleſſings, where there was nothing but barrennes; ſo he ſaith now, that the place where none dwelt, ſhall be inhabited and frequented by multitudes. To bee ſhort, that Iudea ſhall be in ſuch league and amitie with other nations, that one of them ſhall mutually paſſe to the other without any danger at all: for where places are not inhabited, what traffique can men haue there? You ſhall ſee no man paſſe to and fro there. He ſaith then it ſhall come to paſſe that the Iewes ſhall haue egreſſe and regreſſe (as we vſe to ſpeake) to traffique with others, after they are come home, and ſhall bee ſetled in their Country.

But it is not without cauſe our Prophet addes, that the way ſhall be holy. For where there is much concourſe of people, vices and corruptions haue their ſwinge on euery ſide. How could it bee auoided then, but theſe great troupes muſt needs pollute the land, yea, and infect one another with a mutuall contagion. The Prophets meaning is then, that not only the land, but the minds of men ſhould be purged and renued by the benefit of Chriſt, that both the one and the other which in times paſt were wont to be prophaned by their vncleanes, ſhould now be ſanctified. And yet we muſt keepe that in minde which I haue touched before, to wit, that the Iewes whoſe way ſhall be made holy, ſhould returne into their countrie again to ſerue their Redeemer therein. As if he ſhould ſay, The land ſhall be purged from thoſe filthie ſinkes which in times paſt were in it, that it may be inhabited by the true ſeruants of God.

He ads alſo a more ample expoſition when he ſaith, that no polluted ſhall paſſe by this land now hallowed by the Lord for his children. As if he had ſaid, God will ſo ſeparate the faithfull from the prophane, that they ſhall no more be mingled one with another: and this doubtleſſe was to be eſteemed as one of the principall bleſſings that the Church receiued. But this is not accompliſhed in this life, for hypocrits and contemners of God intrude theſelues pell mell into the Church, and many times hold great places in it: and yet we may ſee ſome ſigne of Gods fauor this way, when he takes off the ſcumme from his Church by diuers meanes; only we muſt wait for the full purgation of it vntill the laſt day: yea, euen the ſeruants of God theſelues, who are regenerated by the worke of his holy ſpirit, are yet compaſſed about with many corruptions: for albeit the Lord hath begun to ſanctifie them, yet it ſhall not be perfected in this life: their old man is not whollie mortified, but only tamed and repreſſed to giue way for obedience to the new. Now becauſe the Lord liues and reignes in them, and ſubdues their luſts, they are called holy, in reſpect of ỹ principall part of regeneration in them.

The Church ſhall not be fullie purged till the Laſt day.

The elect are called Saints, in regard the principall part is regenerated.

The expoſitors turne the end of the verſe diuerſlie, where he ſaith, he ſhall goe with them: for ſome tranſlate, They ſhall walke that way, and ſhall not erre after they haue been accuſtomed to walke in it, no, not they which knew it before others. This way ſhall be for the children of Iſraell, thoſe which walke in it ſhall not erre though they be fooliſh. But me thinks the pronowne demonſtratiue he, may better be referred vnto God. As if the Prophet had ſaid, God ſhall goe before you to prepare the way, and the ſcope of the text alſo requires it to be ſo vnderſtood: for it was not enough for them to haue an open way, vnleſſe God went firſt before to direct his choſen. Our Prophet then magnifies this ineſtimable grace, by bringing in the Lord walking with his people: for if he ſhew vs not the way we ſhall alwaies erre, being of our ſelus whollie addicted to vanitie. Nay, though the way be plaine, and be before our eies; yet can not wee diſcerne it from that which is crooked: and although we haue made ſome good entrance, yet will our follie carrie vs hither and thither out of it by and by.

But our Prophet relles vs, that we ſhall not neede to feare miſſing of the way when we follow God, whileſt he goes before vs; ſeeing it pleaſeth him to take this office vpon him. It is very likely alſo, that he alludes to the hiſtorie of the firſt deliuerance, becauſe God then led his people in the day vnder the cloude, and in the night vnder a piller of fire, Exod. 12, 21. Therewithall he alſo ſhewes how needfull it is that God ſhould gouerne vs: he alſo taxeth vs all of follie (be wee neuer ſo wiſe in our owne conceit) when he addes that the fooles ſhall erre no more: for God lets them wander by crooked paths, which thinke themſelues wiſe enough to be their owne guides: if we therefore deſire to keepe him in the way with vs, let vs acknowledge that we ſtand in neede of his direction. In the meane while he offers vs a good recompence when he promiſeth that all ſuch as forſaking their owne counſels ſhal be content to follow him, ſhall not erre in any thing though they be none of the wiſeſt. And yet his meaning is not that the faithfull ſhall remaine fooles ſtill after the Lord hath taken them by the hand: but he ſhewes what they were, before God vouchſafed to leade them the right way.

Verſ. 9. There ſhall be no lyon, nor noyſome beaſts ſhall aſcend by it, neither ſhall they be found there, that the redeemed may walke.

HE addes yet another fauour of God, and that is, that the people ſhall be deliuered frõ all dangers, though they walked through the deſerts. Before, among other curſes of God he put this; that wild beaſts ſhould meet the Iewes in all places which way ſoeuer they trauailed: but now, being receiued into fauor, they ſhould be aſſailed neither by lyons, nor any other cruell beaſts, becauſe God would chaſe them away, that his redeemed might paſſe without hurt or danger. For albeit they had libertie to returne, yet they might well meete with many impediments in the way, and therefore he ſaith, The Lord ſhall remoue all anoyances that might any way ſtop their paſſage. Hence we gather a very neceſſarie doctrine, to wit, that the Lord not only begins the worke of our ſaluation, but cõtinues it vnto the very end, leſt otherwiſe his grace might be fruteleſſe and vaine in vs. Firſt then he opens the way to giue vs entrance. Secondly, he makes it plaine and eaſie, and takes away all impediments. Thirdly, he goes with, and before vs in the way. Laſtly, he ſo continues forth this grace in vs, that at the laſt he brings vs vnto his perfection. We muſt make vſe of theſe foure points euery day. For albeit our hearts be ſet (whileſt we liue in this world) to aſpire to our inheritance which is in heauen, yet Satan laies many ſtumbling blocks before vs, and we are inuironed on euery ſide with infinit dangers, but the Lord who hath ſet vs in this way, and goes before vs, leading vs by the hand, will neuer leaue vs in the midway, but wil fullie perfect that vnto the end which he hath begun in vs by his Spirit. We may alſo obſerue, that the mouthes of rauening and wilde beaſts are muſled ſo by the grace of God,

Chap. 30.6.

He that begins a good worke, will accompliſh it vnto the day of Chriſt Philip. 1.6.

1
2
3
4

We ought to make vſe of this doctrine for the whole courſe of our life.

God, they cannot hurt vs, nor exerciſe their crueltie vpon vs; according as it is ſaid in Hoſe. 2. 18. I will make a couenant for you with the beaſts of the field, and with the birds of the aire.

Verſ. 10. Therefore the redeemed of the Lord ſhall returne and come to Zion with praiſe: and euerlaſting ioy ſhall be vpon their heads; they ſhall obtaine ioy and gladneſſe, and ſorrow and mourning ſhall flee away.

THe Prophet confirmes the former doctrine; to wit, that nothing ſhall hinder the Lord from working the full redemption of his people; becauſe he hath decreed it. He calles them the redeemed of the Lord: firſt, that he might prouoke them to the conſideration of his power: ſecondly, that they ſhould not meaſure the promiſe of their returne, by looking vnto humane helpes. Moreouer, hee ſhewes that they ſhall come to Zion. Thereby giuing them aſſurance, that God will not bring them out of Babylon, to leaue them in the way. Hence we learne, that we cannot enter into Zion, which is the Church, vntill God haue redeemed vs: for in this example of the ancient people, we haue a patterne ſet before vs, in which wee may ſee that no man is deliuered from vnder the tyrannie of the diuell (whoſe vaſſals we are all of vs by nature) vntill God haue preuented vs by his grace. For who is ſufficient to be his owne redeemer? Now becauſe the worke of this redemption belongs in particular vnto the kingdom of Chriſt, it thereupon followes, that hee is onely the finiſher of it; as himſelfe ſaith, Iohn 8.36. Againe, it is not enough to be once redeemed: for marke what the end of it is here, to wit, that he might remaine in the Church of God, and grow daily from faith to faith. Hath Chriſt redeemed vs then? let vs aime at this marke with all our might.

We cannot enter into the Church till God haue redeemed vs.

If any ſhall reply, that we need not goe far to be receiued into the Church, for wee are brought into it by Baptiſme: I anſwere, the Prophet vnder this figure, ſpeakes of the whole courſe of our life; becauſe the redeemed of the Lord are then ſaid to bee truly come into Zion, when hauing ended this their pilgrimage, they enter into the poſſeſſion of the heauenly life. We may therewithall alſo note that the more we profit in the grace of God, and proſper in the Church, the neerer we are vnto him.

Obiect.

Anſ.

By the words of ioy and gladneſſe, he meanes there ſhall be ſuch felicitie vnder the Kingdome of Chriſt, that we ſhall haue ample matter of reioicing. But wherein doth true ioy and gladneſſe conſiſt? And ſurely the true and onely way to obtaine gladneſſe, is to feele that God is reconciled vnto vs, whoſe fauor alone is ſufficient to yeeld vs perfect felicitie; yea ſo far, as to make vs reioyce in tribulation: Rom. 5.1,2,3. Contrariwiſe, what can comfort or glad vs, if God bereaue vs of this reconciliation? Hence wee gather a ſure doctrine; to wit, the faithfull cannot be ſaid to reioice as they ought, vnleſſe they ioine praiſes vnto God therewith: this ſpirituall ioy therefore muſt be diſtinguiſhed from carnall and prophane ioy and delights, into which the wicked plunge themſelues; for they reioice indeed, but the iſſue ſhewes how dangerous this laſciuiouſneſſe of the fleſh is, when wee flatter our ſelues in the contempt of God. It is not without good cauſe therefore that S. Paul calles this ioy ſpirituall; for it conſiſts not in the inioying of earthly things, as in riches, honours, treaſures, which periſh and come to nothing in a moment; but this ioy is ſecret, it hath his ſeat in the heart, and out of it can it not be remoued nor taken away by any meanes whatſoeuer, though Satan indeuors with might and maine vpon all occaſions to diſturbe and afflict vs.

And therefore our Prophet addes verie well, that it is euerlaſting, and driues away all ſorrow: for albeit the children of God do euery day vndergoe many anguiſhes, yet ſo great is the power of their conſolation which they haue by the Spirit, that in the end it ſwallowes vp all ſorrow and mourning. We glorie, ſaith Paul, Rom. 5.3. euen in our tribulations: now this glorying or boaſting cannot be without ioy. The Apoſtles went away reioicing from before the Councell, that God vouchſafed them the honour to ſuffer rebuke for the name of Ieſus: Act. 5.41. I grant ỹ faithfull are not exempt vtterly from ſorrow: nay, they are oftentimes plunged in great diſtreſſes: it is moſt true, but they are not ouercome of them, becauſe by faith they looke directly vnto this redeemer, by whoſe power they are more then conquerors. For they may bee compared to one that being gotten vp to the top of ſome high mountaine, beholds the Sunne, and is gladded with the brightneſſe of it; and in the meane while ſhould ſee others vnderneath him below in the vallies, ſo choked and ſtifled with fogges and miſts, that they could not behold this light.

Simile.

The hiſtorie contained in the next Chapter, and that which followes, is as it were a ſeale ſet vnto the former prophecies.

THE XXXVI. CHAPTER.

Vers. 1. Now in the fourteenth yeere of King Hezekias, Sennacherib King of Ashur came vp against all the strong Cities of Iudah, and tooke them.

IN this Chapter, and in that which followes, the Prophet recites an excellent historie, which is set 1 as a seale vnto the doctrine of the prophesies before going, touching the afflictions of his people: in which also, God promised to shew them mercy by repulsing the Assyrians, that so hee might deliuer Ierusalem and the holy land out of their hands. By this so manifest an effect then, the people perceiued that the Prophet had not foretold these things in vaine. Furthermore, God had also a 2 purpose to informe the posteritie to come, albeit those, which then liued had no lesse need of such a spectacle then their predecessors. Our Prophet hath often threatned that Gods vengeance was at hand; that the Assyrians taried but till God gaue them a signe to imploy themselues as his scourges in his seruice: on the other side, he published promises of consolation touching the Iewes; to wit, that God would succor them when all things should be brought to an after deale. And these things were all fulfilled, but the greatest part of the people closed their eies, when they should haue beheld these famous iudgements of God: nay, which was worse, they shamefully despised the succour which God offered them. By all which circumstances, their sottishnesse was altogether inexcusable.

The ends and vses of this history. But this serued no doubt for the comfort of the little flocke, who would not by their infidelitie cast disgrace vpon so excellent warnings, but rather by beleeuing, indeuoured to purchase credit vnto them, for their sakes that should succeede. And the Prophet for his part was hereby incouraged to hold on his course with the greater affection, and with the more inuincible constancie, when he saw before his eies, that God did as it were from heauen so gloriously confirme the doctrine which he had preached. And because 3 the truth of God is neuer honoured according as it deserueth, if it bee not furnished with infallible testimonies of his mightie power, he being willing to relieue our infirmitie, makes vs here behold as in a glasse, his workes and word ioined together; so that looke what the Prophet taught vpon earth, God confirmed from heauen. But his calling 4 was then manifestly confirmed indeed, when the Lord deliuered Ierusalem from the siege of Sennacherib, all things being then in such a desperate case, that the faithfull could not, but confesse that they were rid out of death by his onely power. Now yee see the reason why I haue said, that this historie is as an authentique seale set to the former doctrines, the which (if it had been wanting) would not haue bin beleeued.

In the fourteenth yeere.] It is not without cause that he notes this circumstance of time, in which these things were done. For Ezechiah had then established the worshippe of God in his Country: and not content therewith, he had also summoned the Israelites by posts and messengers sent from all parts, with commandement that they should come to Ierusalem to offer sacrifices; to forsake that their long reuolt, that with one consent they might be reunited againe into their most holy faith, & serue God according to his word. Read 2. Chro. 30 31. 32. Chapters. Euen when the Kingdome was brought into this good order; to wit, when superstitions were abolished, the Temple purged, and Gods true worship erected and set vp: then came the Assyrians to assaile Iudea, who wasted the Country, tooke the Cities, and subdued the land vnder his command. Ierusalem onely remained, within which Hezechiah was mued vp as in a prison. 2. King. 18. 4 Note.

Let vs consider a little now in what dumps this good King and his subiects were cast: for if we iudge of this calamity according to reason vnreformed, a man would thinke that God did vniustly suffer his seruant to bee brought into such extremities; because it seemed in some sort, that his godlinesse might deserue protection at Gods hands, and that hee should haue exempted him from all incumbrances; because his whole desire was bent to serue his God purely. For we may wel thinke that God brought not this scourge vpon him now for his negligence, excesse, or wantonnesse; much lesse for his superstitions or idolatry, seeing at the very first entrance into his Kingdome, he imploied himselfe to the vtmost, with exceeding diligence to establish religion in the puritie of it. What was Gods purpose herein then? Surely hee meant to try the faith and patience of his faithfull seruant.

Vers. 2. And the King of Ashur sent Rabshakeh from Lachish towards Ierusalem vnto King Hezekiah with a great host, and hee stood by the conduit of the vpper poole, in the path of the fullers field.

THe order of the historie may seeme somewhat here to be altered: for hee said before, that Sennacherib had taken all the Cities of Iudah: vers. 1. and now hee sends Rabshakeh from from Lachiſh which he had beſieged: Lachiſh was not taken yet then. But we are to note that oftentimes the courſe of an hiſtorie is diſioynted, ſo as that is recited laſt which was done firſt. Beſides the Scripture haue this figure frequēt in them (as in this place) where it is ſaid, that all ỹ ſtrong Cities were taken, although ſome no doubt eſcaped, which Hezekias notwithſtāding was vnable to ſuccour. It ſeemed then that the Aſſyrian was become Lord of the whole land, ſeeing nothing was left but Ieruſalem, in which Hezekiah was impriſoned.

This hiſtorie is deſcribed more at large in the ſecond booke of Kings 18. & 19. Chapters, where it is ſhewed that Hezekiah vſed all the meanes he could to redeeme his peace, for he would haue had it almoſt vpon any condition. He gaue 3000. talents of ſiluer, and 30. of gold, which this tyrant exacted, for payment whereof, he was driuen to rob the Temple of the veſſels that were in it, and of the plates of gold which were faſtned vpon the gates thereof, becauſe his owne treaſure was ſpent. But as ſuch inſatiable gulfes can neuer be filled, ſo when he had receiued this money he then falles to demaund greater things, and impoſed vpon him harder conditions then the former, that he might vex and afflict this good King to ỹ full. For hauing once wrought vpō his mildnes, he thought the ſecond time to draw him to whatſoeuer himſelfe liſted, only he waited for fit opertunitie to begin warres afreſh.

But the people no doubt for their parts had well deſerued to be thus ſcourged for their wickednesſes, according as it had been before propheſied: for albeit religion floriſhed in outward ſhew, yet their liues remained vnchanged, impietie ouerflowed, and their hearts were as foule within as euer they were before. For as much as the people repented not of their ſinnes then, was it not needfull they ſhould be chaſtiſed with the greater ſeueritie in regard of ſuch a malitious obſtinacie? But becauſe the meaſure of their iniquities was not yet full, God pacified the rigor of his wrath, and gaue them an admirable deliuerance when all things were become vtterlie deſperate.

Verſ. 3. Then came forth vnto him Eliakim the ſonne of Hilkiah, the ſteward of the houſe, and Shebna the Chancellor, and Ioah the ſonne of Aſaph the Recorder.

MEntion was made of this Eliakim in the 22. Chapter: to him the Lord promiſed the chiefe place in the kingdome after the death of Shebna. But it ſeemes this was but a vaine and idle promiſe, ſeeing he is ſent to the enemie to ſue for fauour, as one, being readie to yeeld and ſubmit himſelfe to the mercie of ſuch a cruell Tyrant. This might alſo aſtoniſh the hearts of the faithfull, euen to make them call the truth of Gods promiſes into queſtion. Beſides, this good king was ſo deſtituted of good ſeruants, that he was conſtrained to ſend Shebna with the reſt, though he knew him to be a diſloyall traytor. The word Sopher ſignifies a Scribe, and therfore it is often taken for Teachers, or ſuch as are learned: ſometimes for thoſe that keepe bookes, and haue the diſpoſing of the rowles or charters of Kingdomes. I haue tranſlated it Chancellor: for it can not be referred to the knowledge of the Law: we may alſo gather that this Shebna was in great credit, though he were put from the eſtate of being ſteward, or great maſter of the kings houſhold. The word Mazkir ſignifies a ſecretarie, or a maſter of the requeſts.

Verſ. 4. *And Rabſhekeh ſaid vnto them, Tell you Hezekiah * I pray you, Thus ſaith the great king, the king of Aſhur, What confidence is this wherein thou truſteſt?*

* This clauſe I pray you, is not in Maſter Calvins text.

THe Prophet ſhewes that theſe three Ambaſſadors (which repreſented in a maner the whole ſtate of the kingdome) were not only repulſed, but receiued diſgracefullie, & galled with inſupportable iniuries by the Captaine of this Tyrant. For he is ſo impudent as to aske how Hezekias durſt preſume to rebell, no leſſe then if he had bin a man conuinced of Rebellion. Some expound the particle Na, I pray you, but it can not well ſtand with the honor (as you would ſay) of ſo proud and inſolent a Tyrant, to come vnto them by way of intreatie. He ſpeakes rather like thoſe who impoſe conditions vpon others, who are either vanquiſhed, or are readie to yeeld themſelues for feare, whome ſuch are minded to receiue to mercie, which we commonlie call, Sommer, that is, To call vpon, or To Summon one. But that his Summons might be of the greater authoritie, this Captaine ſpeakes in the perſon of his King: and with big words ſets forth his greatnes; the rather to daunt the heart of Hezekias, when he ſhould heare he had to deale with ſo powerfull an enemie. For his meaning was not only to ſay that Hezekiah was farre inferior to his Maſter the chiefe Monarch of the world; in compariſon of whom, Hezekiah was to be eſteemed no better then a meane Gentleman: but he calles him the great King, the King of Aſhur; that by theſe titles of his power and magnificence he might as it were darken the glorie of all other Kings, that ſo all might ſeeme to reſt in him alone. Which thunderbolts had bin ſufficient to haue terrified and feared the heart of Hezekiah, eſpeciallie ſeeing he was mued vp, as I ſaid before, within the walles of the Citie, out of which he could not eſcape; much leſſe was he any way able to make his partie good againſt the violence of this Tyrant.

Verſ. 5. *I ſay, * Surely* I haue eloquēce, but counſell & ſtrength are for the warre: on whom then doeſt thou truſt, that thou rebelleſt againſt me?

* Or, they are but words of the lips.

WHereas we reade in the holie hiſtorie, Thou haſt ſaid, it may be expounded thus, to wit, that Rabshekeh makes as if hee knew Hezekiah his thoughts: as if hee should say; Thus thou deliberatest with thy selfe. But the sense comes all to one, though we reade this word in the first person: for Rabshekeh speakes as one that had gaged the depth of Hezekias his enterprises, and had been made acquainted from point to point with all his purposes; and therfore scoffingly reproching him, saith, I perceiue thy consultations well enough: but alas! they are but vvords of the lippes.

Now this clause is diuersly expounded: some reade, Thou saiest thou hast not the words of the lips onely: that is, thou braggest not onely of eloquence, but of courage and counsell. Others, Thou hast speech indeed, but counsell and strength are fit for war. But I approue not of them who take vvords for praiers; for that would bee a sense constrained, and too far fetched.

Thus vnderstand it then; Hezekias hath words of the lippes: that is to say, hee tickles your eares with goodly discourses and sweete promises, to keepe you from reuolting: he hath indeed plentie of words, as they say, but of vs hat value are they to wage warre against a mightie potentate? as if he should say; I am not ignorant what Hezekiah doth, nor vpon what principles he staies himselfe, euen vpon sweete wordes: but these are nothing worth to wage warre withall; for counsell and strength are needfull for that. It may also be well referred to the Egyptians: as if hee should say; that Hezekias plaied the foole to suffer himselfe to bee gugled with faire promises. For we need not doubt but the Egyptians were forward enough in promising mountaines and wonders, although they were slow enough in performing anie thing. But forasmuch as he will speake of this matter anon, I willingly thinke that he derides Hezekias, as one who being stript of all furniture fit for warre; onely entertained his people with wordes full of vaine boasting.

Vers. 6.

Vers. 6. Loe, thou trustest in this broken staffe of reede on Egypt; whereupon if a man leane, it will goe into his hand, and pierce it: so is Pharaoh King of Egypt, vnto all that trust in him.

IT is very likely that this is distinguished from the former sentence. For hauing said that Hezekias entertained his people onely with glozing and flattering words, & thence concluding that his confidence was vaine: he comes now to other particulars, and indeuors by all meanes to weaken the hearts of the people, that by the discouraging of them, he might with the greater facility cause them to yeeld. Firſt, he labours then to bring the King into disgrace with his subiects: secondly, he awakens the hearts of the subiects, by telling them that the helpes vpon which they relied concerning Egypt, should no way help them; and therefore they were very vnwise to expect any succour thence.

1 2

First, he compares Egypt to a staffe of reede; because of their weakneſſe: then by way of amplification he addes, that it is broken: thirdly, that it is so far from staying him that leanes vpon it, that it will rather pierce his hand. The summe of all which is, that the confidence which the Iewes had in the Egyptians, should not onely be frustrate, but also hurtfull. And no doubt but Rabshekeh had had good cause thus to tax them, if Hezekias had indeed relied vpon the Egyptians. But he falsly & shamefully accuseth this good King of that whereof he neuer had so much as a thought. And yet God in the meane while paied this rude and rebellious people home with this reproch, which they worthily deserued, in suffering so wretched a caitife, thus to scorne their reuolt and disloialtie. Our Prophet had sharply censured this offence before, but his reprehensions were reiected; euery one turned away his eares: was it not good reason then that the Iewes, who so vnworthily disdained the Prophet, speaking vnto them in the name of God, should be sent to schoole to such a Master as railing Rabshekeh was.

1 2 3

They that cannot indure to heare Gods voice in the ministerie of his word, shall be forced to heare of the same things by such as shall be little to their liking.

By this example we are admonished, that it is no maruell if at some time vnbeleeuers (who cast off the counsel of God, which tends to their saluation, setting light by all prophecies) bee forced to heare these and the like flouts from their enemies, with which Rabshekeh the Captaine of the Kings armie heere proudly and disdainfully scornes the Iewes. Also we may see how great difference there is betweene the admonitions of the Lord, and the reproches of Satan. When God would withdraw our mindes from trusting in the arme of flesh, he pronounceth this generall curse; Woe be to him that trusts in man. That all the world being brought to nothing, wee might content our selues with him alone. But to encourage those whom before he had cast downe, hee sets this remedie before them; Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord, and whose hope the Lord is, &c. Ier. 17. 5. & 7. Contrariwise, Satan accusing vs for our vaine hopes, therewithal sollicites vs vnto dispaire, drawes vs from euill to worse; and in the end, to vse vnlawfull meanes, as Rabshekeh heere doth; who scornes the hope which the Iewes had in the Egyptians helpe, that hee might bring them from that to rest vpon God onely: but hee puts the Assyrians betweene, as if saluation could appeare from no place elsse. He names Pharaoh, but he also comprehends all Egypt.

What difference there is betweene the Lords admonitions and Satans reproches.

Vers. 7. But if thou say vnto me, We trust in the Lord our God, is not that he whose high places and whose altars Hezekiah tooke downe, and said to Iudah and to Ierusalem, Ye shall worship before this altar.

Rabshekeh vseth an argument which consists of these three members; to wit, either Hezekiah thinks himselfe strong enough to reſiſt, or hee lookes for helpe from Egypt, or, he truſts in God. If he reſt vpon his owne ſtrength, it is his folly; for what is he in comparison of my maſter? As for Egypt, let him neuer expect helpe thence, but rather hurt and loſſe. His onely ſtay that he reſts vpon, muſt be the helpe of God; but hath he not ouerthrowne his altars, and aboliſhed his ſeruice? will hee not therefore rather puniſh then helpe him? Rabſhekeh then in a word ſtrips this good King at once, of all ſuccour both of God and man. Satans drift in this, was not onely to pierce the heart of the King, and to ouerwhelme him vnder the burthen of this affliction; but alſo to ſtir vp the Commons (who commonly are factious and inconſtant) to rebellion. Many whereof no doubt yet doted vpon their old ſuperſtition, and would eaſilie haue been drawne to a reuolt by this ſubtile deuice; becauſe the ancient religion forſooth, which had long cuſtome ioined with it, was now changed by Hezekias, who in their conceit was iuſtly puniſhed for his raſhneſſe. For example, if any thing now fall out otherwiſe then well, the Papiſts by and by cry out with open throats, that it is a iuſt vengeance of God vpon vs, becauſe we haue beene ſo bold to aboliſh their traditions and ceremonies, receiued for ſo many hundred yeeres.

to

Verſ. 8. Now therefore giue hoſtages to my Lord the King of Aſſur, and I will giue thee two thouſand horſes, if thou be able for thy part to ſet riders vpon them.

HIs concluſion is, that Hezekias ſhall doe beſt to yeelde himſelfe without trying it out by fight, and to promiſe obedience for euer vnto the Aſſyrian. Which, that he may the rather perſwade him vnto, hee caſts his powerſie againe in his teeth. As if hee ſhould ſay; If I ſhould giue thee two thouſand horſes, were thou able to furniſh them with ſufficient riders amongſt all thy people? For hee offers him not horſes by way of honor, or that he meant in good earneſt ſo to doe; but rather to afflict and wound the heart of this good Prince. The clauſe, I will giue thee, muſt be thus reſolued; Although I ſhould giue thee two thouſand horſe, yet were not thou able to finde horſmen enough for them. I am not ignorant what the expoſitors write vpon this place: but whoſoeuer ſhall conſider euery circumſtance well, will eaſilie iudge that this was ſpoken in contempt.

Verſ. 9. For how canſt thou deſpiſe any Captaine of the leaſt of my Lords ſeruants, and put thy truſt on Egypt for chariots and horſmen?

HEe now confirmes the former ſentence, & ſhewes that Hezekias is ſo far off from reſiſting the power of Sennacherib, that hee is ſcarſe worthy to be compared with the leaſt of his Captaines. But what is the reaſon that he lifts himſelfe thus arrogantly? No doubt becauſe the Iewes ſhould not preſume any thing at all in regard of the abſence of the King of Aſſur, who was now beſieging Lachiſh. For albeit he was not yet come with all his hoſt, Rabſhekeh brags notwithſtanding, that his Leiftenants are ſtrong enough; to the end Hezechias and the people might without delay yeelde themſelues vnder his obedience.

Verſ. 10. And am I come now vp without the Lord to this land to deſtroy it? The Lord ſaid vnto me; Goe vp againſt this land and deſtroy it.

NOw he ſets vpon Hezekias another way; namely, that he ſhall aſſemble his forces in vaine, together for his defence. For he pretends that the King hath not now to deale with a mortall man like himſelfe, but rather with God himſelfe; becauſe he is come vp to deſtroy the land of Iudeah at his appointment. As if he ſhould haue ſaid; As many of you as ſhall reſiſt me, ſhall reſiſt God: and then your reſiſtance will be to ſmall purpoſe. Hence let vs learne, that albeit we be giuen to piety, faithfully indeuouring by all means to aduance the Kingdome of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, yet wee muſt not looke for all that to be exempt from all croſſes, but rather to fit our ſelues for the bearing of them. For the Lord will not alwaies crowne our vertuous life with earthly rewards: truly ſuch recompences were vnfitting for vs. As namely, abundance of riches, inioying of outward peace, and hauing all things that heart can wiſh. For are not the wicked therefore eſteemed the onely happy men in the eies of the world, becauſe they are frolike, quiet, healthfull, and haue the world at will. Thus then it might ſeeme that our condition ſhould be no better then theirs.

God crownes not vertue alwaies with earthly honours.

But it behoues vs alwaies to ſet this example of good King Hezekias before our eies, who after he had wholly bent himſelfe to reforme religion, and to ſet vp the pure worſhip of God, was yet ſharply aſſailed with afflictions, ſo far forth, as he was not far off from deſpaire; to the end, that when we ſhall think we haue done much, wee be ſtill ready notwithſtanding to ſuſtaine all ſorts of combates and perſecutions. Neither to be out of heart, if at the firſt our enemies be too hard for vs; in ſuch wiſe, that we looke euerie moment to bee ſwallowed vp aliue of them. For theſe great crackers, and haughtie ſpirits, will eaſilie bee taken downe, after they haue caſt vp their firſt bubbles: yea, after they haue ſpit forth their venom, all their pride will quickly vaniſh and come to nought.

Note.

Rabſhekeh magnifies the greatneſſe and power of his King, to affright the heart of King Hezekias, ſee I pray you what courſe the wicked ſort takes with vs: they aſſaile vs by threats, they labour to ſhake our faith and patience by many feares; or rather, Satan himſelfe doth it indeede in their perſons. For who ſees him not ſpeaking heere in the Satan ſpeaks by the mouth of Rabſhekeh.

the perſon of this railing miſcreant? Nay, which more is, he takes vnto him euen the perſon of God himſelf, and ſo transformes himſelfe into an Angell of light. For what ſaith the Holy Ghoſt in other places? He that reſts vpon the help of man, ſeeks his owne deſtruction, becauſe man is a thing of nought, weake and brittle. Doth not Rabſhekeh affirme the ſame here? Speakes he any otherwiſe then if he were a Prophet ſent of God? It behoues vs therefore wiſely to diſtinguiſh betweene the voice of God, and men, who deck and adorne themſelues with his name vnder falſe pretences, for the Deuill can turne himſelfe into many ſhapes, that he may appeare in the likenes of God. But this rayler had no cauſe at all to reproach Hezekias with this, as hath been ſaid: for he truſted not in his forces, neither was he puffed vp in any confidence of the ſtrength of Egypt.

2.*Cor.*11.14

*Iere.*17.5.

We muſt wiſely diſtinguiſh betweene the voice of God, and the voice of mẽ.

It is the portion of the faithfull to be railed vpon when they do the moſt good.

But it is our portion euen then to be railed on when we doe the moſt good. Satan hath skill enough in deed to aſſaile vs by ſuch engins, and cauſleſſie to make vs ſtinke as it were in the preſence of men, which I confeſſe is a very dangerous temptation; for we deſire to maintaine our credits with men, and are much offended when they take that in euill part which is done with an honeſt and vpright affection; and therefore Satan labors in nothing more, then by ſlanders to caſt diſgrace vpon that which we haue done with pure conſciences, for either he forgeth againſt vs ſome crime whereof we are innocent, or chargeth vs with falſhood, imputing things vnto vs which we neuer meant. But our integritie muſt be vnto vs as a braſen wall, whereby we may remaine vnmoueable, as Hezekias here doth againſt all ſuch accuſations and ſlanders.

1

2

The integritie of the faithfull ought to be vnto them as a wall of braſſe, to fortifie them with inuincible conſtancie.

As touching the latter member of this ſentence, wherein Rabſhekeh taxeth the King, becauſe he had aboliſhed Gods true worſhip: who ſees not that this is a meere ſlander. Hezekias had indeed ouerthrowne the Idols, and the Idolatrie which God abhorred. But what maruell is it if the Infidels know not how to diſtinguiſh betweene the falſe god and the true, betweene religion and ſuperſtition? but we haue too much experience of this euen amongſt our ſelues. For the Papiſts who are plunged ouer head and eares in their ſuperſtitions, accuſe vs for aboliſhing infinite humane traditions, and complaine that we haue almoſt cleane ouerthrowne Gods whole ſeruice, and thus they ſtand railing at vs as this Rabſhekeh doth. Should God helpe theſe heretiques who haue deſtroyed his Altars, profaned his Temples and all things elſe, which were by vs ſet vp in ſuch a decent and goodly order? For the Papacie was all glorious without, euery one admired it: but alas, we retaine nothing but a few bare and naked ceremonies altogether without pomp. Will you ſee the reaſon then why they thinke the ſeruice of God is ouerthrowne? It is becauſe they meaſure it by outward things. Therefore when any aduerſitie befalles vs, then by and by they crie out: nay, it is well enough, all the fault is in thẽſelues. Theſe heretiques haue brought the whole world vnto ruine by their hereſies. And if they ſee vs plunged into any miſerie, then they open their mouthes wider againſt vs then euer before. Yet muſt we ſtill remaine ſtrong in the faith againſt ſuch horrible outcries, and muſt alſo let them know, that that which they pretend to be the ſeruice of God, is not; but is rather meere dotages, which we haue worthelie aboliſhed: yea, we muſt not let to tell them, that all ſuch things as haue been forged in mans braine appertaines not at all to Gods worſhip, but are to be eſteemed as the illuſions of Satan, being of all other things the moſt dangerous. We ought then as you ſee to ſtand out with an inuincible faith againſt all ſorts of theſe imputations, whereby Satan indeuors to darken and ſmother the light of true religion.

Vnbeleeuers know not how to diſtinguiſh betweene religion and ſuperſtition.

The raylings of Papiſts.

But one might haue thought it ſtrange at the firſt bluſh, that Hezekias had ouerthrowne all the Altars but one; and prophaned all the Temples, only one excepted: but this only defence may ſerue in ſtead of many, that nothing was done for which he had not good warrant out of Gods word; and therefore was he contented with one Altar, becauſe God had forbidden them to erect many: he brake downe all the Images, becauſe they had been vnaduiſedlie erected and ſet vp, againſt the doctrine of the law. We at this day haue the ſame difference with the Papiſts, for they blame vs for nothing more, then that wee haue caſhered an infinite number of their bald Ceremonies, and haue only retained thoſe things which God hath ordeined. But in this matter we are not to diſpute to nor fro touching ŷ which may pleaſe mẽ; but rather how we may approue our actions vnto God.

2.*King.*18.4 *Exod.*20.4.

Verſ. 11. Then ſaid Eliakim, and Shebna, and Ioah, vnto Rabſhekeh, Speake I pray thee to thy ſeruants in the Aramits language (for we vnderſtand it) and talke not with vs in the Iewes tongue, in the audience of the people that are on the wall.

WEE further ſee by this circumſtance how farre Hezekias abaſed himſelfe, whilſt he ſought by mild intreaties vnto the ſeruãs of his enemie, by his Embaſſadors. Secondly, the pride of Rabſhekeh, in reiecting ſo curriſhlie theſe humble requeſts. Thirdly, the indignitie of ſuch a refuſall, which is the greater, in regard the ſute was for the obteining a thing of ſo ſmall importance. Hereby it is manifeſt that Hezekias was ſo carefull to appeaſe the rage of this Tyrant, that almoſt quite forgetting his royall dignitie, he endeuored to pacifie him with as lowly termes as was poſſible: if we be therefore wrongfullie oppreſſed, let vs not thinke much to part with ſome of our right in giuing ſoft anſwers.

1

Verſe 12.

2

3

Now in that he thus humbled himſelfe in the ſenſe of his owne weakenes, becauſe he was vnable to reſiſt the Aſſyrian, it ſerues greatlie for the ſetting forth of Gods glorie, becauſe he ſaued this people as it were our Hezekias his example worthie our imitation.

of

of the lions iawes: for this deliuerance had neuer been ſo glorious, if they had bin freed onely from ſome pettie danger. But ſeeing they were at the pits brinke, the power of God ſhines ſo much the more, in that by ſo rare a miracle he chaſed away and diſcomfited the enemie, who now had put his knife to their throats as it were.

The Ambaſſadors beſought Rabſhekeh that he would not ſpeake thus before the people; becauſe they were naturally mutable and inconſtant, and therefore might ſuddenly be drawne to reuolt: ſecondly, they were timerous, and therefore would quickly tremble euen at the ſhaking of a leafe: and therefore they requeſt Rabſhekeh not to ſpeake in the Iewes language, for they ſought nothing elſe but how they might find a fit meanes to redeeme their peace. This good King likewiſe did all hee could to appeaſe the rage of the tyrant, but to no purpoſe; for the Ambaſſadors obtained nothing of Rabſhekeh. The more he intreated, the fiercer grew hee, and ouerflowed in all pride, as the propertie of the inſolent is to doe.

Verſ. 12. Then ſaid Rabſhekeh; Hath my maſter ſent mee to thy maſter, and to thee to ſpeake theſe words, and not to the men that ſit on the wall, that they may eate their owne dung, and drinke their own piſſe with you?

WE ſee here the madneſſe and wouluiſhneſſe of this tyrant: whence alſo wee may perceiue, that the ſtate of King Hezekias was in great danger. For Rabſhekeh ſpeakes here like a conqueror, and behaues himſelfe towards Hezekias, as if hee had been no King at all, but rather his vaſſall or ſlaue. In that we ſee him then thus ſwollen with pride, we muſt needes thinke that Hezechias on the other ſide was not a little caſt downe, euen as one ouerwhelmed with ſorrow, and left deſtitute of all ſuccour: ſo as both in his owne, and all mens iudgements elſe, there was no way but one with him. Let vs alſo gather hence, that Rabſhekeh was not ſent thither to offer any conditions of peace, but rather to receiue the King to mercie, and to terrifie the people; for the bringing whereof to paſſe, Sennacherib had giuen him a puiſant armie.

Hee alſo makes his bragges, that he hath not to doe with the King, ſo much as with the people; to whom he ſpake forſooth for their benefit and commoditie. Now that hee might make them quake and tremble yet more, he ſets before them the miſeries and calamities into which they plunged themſelues, if they harkened vnto Hezechias; to wit, that they muſt needes die for hunger; becauſe the extremitie would be ſo great, that of force they ſhal be conſtrained to eate their owne dung, and to drinke their owne piſſe. They ſhould therefore ſhew themſelues wiſe, and ſuch as had care of their owne ſafetie, if they forthwith yeelded themſelues to his mercie.

Verſ. 13. So Rabſhekeh ſtood and cried with a lowd voice in the Iewes language, and ſaid; Heare the words of the great King, of the King of Aſſur.

THe Propher ſhewes by what practiſes Rabſhakeh indeuoured to diſcourage the hearts of this people. And firſt hee telles vs that he ſpake in the Iewes language, notwithſtanding that the Ambaſſadors had beſought him to ſpeake in the Aramites. Now it muſt needs be a great corasiue to the hearts of the faithfull, to heare this holy tongue, which was dedicated to the myſteries of heauenly wiſdome, to be thus prophaned and proſtituted to ſuch horrible blaſphemies: neither could it be auoided, but this tentation ſhrewdlie ſhaked the vnfirme and weake. But hence we may note, that there are no enemies more noiſome then thoſe that ſpeake in our owne tongue. Of which, we haue experience now in very many who learne our tongue, that is to ſay, our manner of ſpeech; that they may the better inſinuate themſelues into the eares of the ſimple and ignorant, to turne them away from the truth. Verſe 11. No enemies worſe then thoſe that ſpeake out owne language.

Thirtie yeeres agoe the Papiſts had a barbarous language, vtterly eſtranged from the ſtile of the holy Ghoſt: there was ſcarcely to be heard amonſts them, one word that ſauored any thing at all of Chriſtianitie: but now they haue learned to varniſh ouer their blaſphemies with the language of Canaan, that ſo we might take them for honeſt men. And thus wee ſee the diuell hath filed and furbuſhed their tongues; for he is their father and inſtructer, as hee was in times paſt vnto Rabſhekeh. Note.

When it is ſaid, he ſtood vp, it is to ſet forth the pride and inſolencie of this varlet, for his outward geſtures manifeſts ſufficiently how arrogantly he behaued himſelfe. No doubt he ſtood before; but now hee raiſeth vp himſelfe, to be the better ſeene and feared of the Iewes. And hauing yet once againe told them the greatneſſe of his King, he addes vnto it the meſſage with which he was ſent. For it is one of Satans policies with high wordes to ſet forth the power of our aduerſaries, and to make the dangers ſeeme greater then they be indeed, to bring vs out of heart: for wee faint by and by, as ſoone as our eies are but a little dazeled with the glory of earthly things. Againſt it therefore we are to oppoſe the power of God, which will be ſufficient to arme vs with ſtrength, againſt all the powers of darkneſſe. The enemies ceaſe not to brag proudly, euen with open mouth of their greatneſſe and power, and ſcorne our feebleneſſe and weakneſſe; but if the Lord be with vs, what ſhould aſtoniſh vs? Satans policie.

Verſ. 14. Thus ſaith the King; Let not Hezekiah deceiue you: for he ſhall not be able to deliuer you.

IN giuing to his Maſter the title of a King, he ſpeakes of Hezekias as if hee were but ſome some common person, and giues him no title at all. Also, not content to continue his slanders against this good man, he now disgorgeth his venome euen against God himselfe, calling the trust & confidence which Hezekias had in his fauor, (whereunto he also exhorts all his) nothing but impostures and deceipts.

Slanders of the Papists.

Wee at this day are assailed with the like slanders of the Papists, when they say, we do nothing else but seduce and leade men into perdition, by teaching thé to trust perfectlie in one only God. But we neede not maruell much if they cast those reproches vpon vs which were cast vpon this good King, seeing they proceed from the same author and father of lies, euen the Deuill. Where he saith, Ezekias is vnable to deliuer his people, it was very true in deed, vnlesse God did also put to his hand. Neither did Hezekias attribute this vnto himselfe, to rob God of his honor: but freelie protested, that his owne safetie, and the safetie of his people depended vpon God only. But it was needful that this aduersarie should disguise his words, as the wicked doe at this day, whé they meane to defame our doctrine, for they forge faire and goodlie pretexts to make our words heretical in shew, so as they easily deceiue the hearers, vnlesse they haue their eies in their heads, to consider of all things wisely.

Vers. 15. Neither let Hezekiah make you to trust in the Lord saying, The Lord will surely deliuer vs: this Citie shall not be giuen ouer into the hand of the King of Ashur.

NOw Rabshekeh recites Hezekias his exhortation, by which he encoraged the people, and addes his refutation, as if it had been but a vaine speech, euen the inuentions of his owne braine: whence it appeares, that the wicked make none account at all of the power of God, although they can speake of it to serue their owne turne. For albeit he denies not plainly that God is able to help his people if he would, but makes them beleeue he is angrie with them, and therefore is their enemie, yet in ouerthrowing their faith (as much as in him lies) he abolisheth the power of God, because his meaning was so to smite the hearts of this poore people with terror, that they should be constreined through despaire to subiect themselues to the lawes of this victorious Tyrant.

Moreouer, by another subtletie he also indeuors to wring frō them their trust in Gods help, in that he allures them as we shall see in the next verse with promises of inioying plétie and ease. For what is able to worke in vs a desire to reuolt from God sooner, then whé we are drawne thereunto with the shew of profit and pleasure. If the world begins once to smile a little vpō vs, and to glad our hearts, then behold the hope of eternall life begins forthwith to vanish, for our senses alwaies dote vpon presens things. Rabshekeh hauing armed himselfe with this engin, giues them this admonition, Depend not vpon vncertaine hopes, rather take that which is certaine. This maner of speech hath great efficacie in it to allure vs to a reuolt. For men are apt to nothing more, then to be possessed of that which may bring them profit: and it is exceeding irksome and tedious vnto them to be deferred, or to hang in suspence, so as to preferre the good which is yet farre off, before the commodities which are before their eies. See Rabshekehs argument then: Hezekias promiseth you help from God, but you see no such matter: he therefore seekes to captiue your wits in the expectation of things vncertaine: but the King my Master will not only promise, but wil performe in giuing you those things which you see. This might seeme to be a very strong argument. But let vs finde out the fallacie, for Satan is often wont by such sleights to turne vs from depending vpon Gods prouidence.

Wee must walke by faith, and not by sight. 2. Cor. 5. 7.

The Lord calles vs to the hope of eternall life which as yet is hidden from vs: (for we hope for the things which wee see not.) Hee promiseth that he will be our Sauiour: in the meane while he suffers vs to languish and faint many times, so as it seemes all our hope is but in vaine, if we only keepe our eies fastned to the estate of present things. Satan sets now vpon vs, and thus begins to whisper in our eares. And why doest thou hope thus in vaine? What is the fruite of thy faith? What expects thou out of this world? In a word, we must be armed to wrestle thus against Satan euery day. When Christ calles vs to heauen, Satan indeuors to hold vs groueling to the earth. We must therefore stick close to the promises which are set before vs, that hoping aboue hope, we may stand fast in the Lord, and neuer suffer our selues to be seduced nor withdrawne from trusting in him by any allurements whatsoeuer.

Rom. 8. 25.

Wee haue need to put on the whole armor of God. Ephes. 6. 11.

Vers. 16. *Hearken not to Hezekiah, for thus saith the king of Ashur, * Make appointment with me, and come out to me, that euery man may eate of his owne vine, euery one of his owne fig-tree, and drinke euery man the water of his owne well.*

* Or, make a blessing.

WHilest he deuiseth how to estrange the peoples hearts from Hezekias, he therewithall entiseth thé vnto present pleasures, that they may quite forget God, and wait no longer vpon him. As if he should say, Trust not in God, Trust rather in my King. See how Satan playes the Sophister: for in darkening Gods goodnes by his fogges and mists, and masking vs with vailes of false hopes, he sets vp the creatures in stead of the Creator, to wrap vs vp in his nets.

Well, Rabshekeh presents profit, pleasure, and ease before them by this vaine brag; to wit, God offers you benefits, but they are far off: I haue mine here in mine hand. Now albeit he vseth Hezekias his name here, yet vpon the matter, the comparison stands betweene God and the Assyrians. For Hezekiah being indeed the true seruant of God, he played not the hypocrite in boasting of his trust and confidence falſly: but reſting vpon the immutable and vnchangeable promiſes, hee faithfully exhorted the people (as his dutie was) to reſt quietly vpon God. Contrariwiſe, Rabſhekeh clothes his King with Gods ſpoiles as it were, and as the ſeruant and vaſſall of the diuell, indeuoured to withdraw the peoples minds from their true allegeance vnto God, to all impietie.

dence

To make bleſſing with him, ſignifies friendly to pacifie: as if he ſhould ſay; Fight not, venture not your ſelues that way; but yeeld your ſelues, and ſubmit you freely to my King. Now Sennacherib not onely craues audience, but would alſo haue them to do homage and fealtie; which that he might the better draw them vnto, hee couers this odious terme of ſeruitude, with the word bleſſing. Hee counſels them to redeeme their peace and other commodities, which they inioied before at his hands, by this woſull reuolt; to wit, that they ſhould forſake Hezekias to cleaue vnto him. Now it was the moſt ſeruile and miſerable condition that might be, to forſake this good King whom God had eſtabliſhed, who alſo bare the image of Chriſt: for what was it elſe but to renounce God himſelfe, who had erected and ſet vp in the middeſt of them this ſigne of his heauenly fauour?

Verſ. 17. Till I come and bring you into a land like your owne land, euen a land of wheat and wine, a land of bread and vineyards.

NOw hee addes a condition much more vile then the former: for he ſhewes that peace can no way be procured with Sennacherib, but by yeelding themſelues vnto baniſhment. And what was that but to forſake Gods true worſhip, to throw themſelues into ſuperſtitions; and willingly to caſt themſelues out of that inheritance which God had giuen them? But in regard that Rabſhekeh ſpeaks to men deſolate, and ſuch as were aſtoniſhed with the preſent danger, hee boldly challengeth of them, whatſoeuer himſelfe liſteth; to the end they may at the leaſt procure the ſafetie of their liues.

And here wee ſee as in a glaſſe, that his words are nothing elſe but a liuely repreſentation of thoſe temptations & aſſaults, wherewith Satan daily laies ſiege againſt our faith. For all his practiſes tend onely to plucke vs away from our confidence in God, by the allurements and pleaſures of this world. What? is it not good to ſleepe quietly in a whole skinne, and to redeeme thy peace any way? Thou wouldeſt be happy; doth not happines conſiſt in the plentiful inioying of all things? But then eſpecially he aſſailes vs thus, when he ſees vs in miſerie; then is he bold, & dares more vehemently ſollicite vs to ſhake off Gods yoke; but ſo, that ſtill he doth it with ſetches and cloſe conueiances, as hee may beſt couer our reuolt with the ſhew of ſome good.

Now when he hath gotten vs in his nets ſo far forth, that wee eſteem better of things preſent, then of thoſe to come, he addes this condition with it alwaies; to wit, that we will now be his ſeruants, and runne at his becke: and this we can by no meanes eſcape, when hee hath once tickled vs with his deceitfull hopes, and with the taſte of earthlie things. Satans conditiõs which he vſually addes to his temptations.

But becauſe this word exile, ſounded ſomewhat harſhly and vnpleaſantly in the eares of this people, it being no eaſie matter for them to leaue the ſweetneſſe of Iudea; Rabſhekeh willing to let them know that they ſhould looſe nothing by abandoning their Country, telles them, that the Country into which they ſhold be caried, was no leſſe fruitfull and plentifull then theirs. And thus hee went about to dazle their eies, that they might not thinke thẽſelues to be looſers any way by the bargaine. Yet doth he finely omit that which was the principall, to wit, the ſeruice and worſhippe of God, the Temple, the Kingdome, and ſacred order & gouernment, with other matters appertaining to the heauenly inheritance. For alas! without theſe, what felicitie is there? Wherefore let euery one of vs in the feare of God learne, to fix the right knowledge of ſpirituall benefits faſt in our hearts: for it is not for nought that Dauid ſaith, he would rather be a doore keeper in the houſe of his God, then (with all the delights and pleaſures of this world) to dwell in the tents of the vngodly. For he that once ſuffers his heart to be glewed to the loue of earthly things, is in danger thereby to depriue himſelfe of true happineſſe. For this is that horrible iudgement whereby God often auengeth himſelfe vpon mens incredulitie. Let all the faithfull therefore feare before God, and beware that they faint not vnder anie calamities or afflictions whatſoeuer. Pſal. 84. 10.

Verſ. 18. Leſt Hezekiah deceiue you, ſaying; The Lord will deliuer vs. Hath any of the gods of the nations deliuered his land out of the hand of the King of Aſſur?

HEere is now another argument differing from the former; by which he labours to ſeduce the peoples hearts from their allegeance to King Hezekias, and from their truſt and confidence in God. He bragged before that he was Gods ſeruant, ſent of him to deſtroy the land of Iudea: for which cauſe he promiſeth vnto himſelfe aſſurance of the victory. But now the miſcreant feares not to aduance himſelfe againſt the Lord of hoſtes. For you muſt know that the wicked doe not alwaies at the firſt chop diſcouer all their impietie touching their contempt of Gods maieſtie; but the Lord by degrees laies open their thoughts, and conſtraines them to caſt vp the poiſon which lay hid within them. This wretch now then goes on further in his blaſphemies, and feares not to ruſh againſt the higheſt Maieſtie, as if hee were the ſtronger. Verſe 10. Note.

But he ſpeakes in the perſon of his Maſter, who had obtained great victories ouer many mightie nations, which indeede had their gods; vnder whose protection they thought themselues safe. Sennacherib hauing subdued these, thought also that he had ouercome their gods, vpon whose help they rested. Thence it comes that he puffes vp himselfe so farre in pride, that he dares iustle against the liuing God: yea, he is caried away with such madnes, that he feares not to oppose his strength against the power of the Almightie.

You see then, that albeit the wicked seeme at the first to be farre from the contempt of Gods maiestie, yet in the end they manifest that they attribute all to themselues, and vterlie exclude him. In words I grant they will giue the praise of their victories vnto their gods, but forthwith they sacrifice vnto their owne nets, and offer incense to their yarne, as Abacuk saith, 1. 16. which practise our hypocrites imitate at this day. For if they obtaine any victorie, they by and by runne and thanke their Idols: but when that is done, they also thanke their owne counsels, policies, manhood, and their forces: so as a man may well perceiue that vpon the matter they attribute all their successe vnto themselues, and not vnto their Idols. In this his prowd boasting then, he shewes himselfe to be a lyar, when he acknowledged God the author of his victories.

On the other side it could not be but the heart of good King Hezekias must needs be wonderfullie grieued in hearing God to be thus charged with breach of his promises, whē this wicked one railed thus against God, and matcht him with Idols. But these things are written, to the end we might consider the patience of this good King, and also follow his example when the like shall befall vs.

Hezekias his patience worthie our imitation.

Haue any of the gods of the nations?] When he opposeth himselfe against all Gods, as one that had ouermatcht them, it is so farre from common sense, that the wicked themselues do shudder and tremble at it: and yet if the Lord doe but a little presse them, he easily drawes forth of them such confessions as this. When they haue premeditated what they will say, then they can faine themselues Gods seruāts forsooth, but soone after he inforceth them to confesse and vtter forth that which was concealed within. Let vs know then that superstition is alwaies ioined with pride, so as it is vnpossible but he should aduance himselfe aboue all that which is called God, which in his heart acknowledgeth him not. We neede not wonder then that wicked men are prowd and rebellious, for it is only the pure and right knowledge of God which is able to humble our stout hearts. And yet this miscreant is no way excused, for casting the vanitie and feeblenes of these Idols iustly in their teeth: for wee must looke at his intent and pride, seeing he scornes not so much the superstition and vaine confidence of the Gentiles, as through their sides to wound (if he could) euen the highest Maiestie. Euen as that tyrant Dionysius, who resisted God, and prouoked him to the fight, whilest he scorned his owne Idols: for against his conscience he derided the God which he could scarcely comprehend in his shallow braine. The like is to be said of all other Infidels, who haue mocked at false religions, which they thought were of God.

Dionysius.

Note we here also the other blasphemie by which the diuine Maiestie is wickedlie violated, when Rabshekeh couples the true God with the false, as if he were one of their consorts. For what blasphemie is greater then to match the immortall God, the author of all things, with dunghill gods: truth with lyes, glorie with ignominie, and hell with heauen? The Lord our God is great, and worthie to be praised, saith Dauid: yea, he is to be feared aboue all gods: for all the gods of the Heathen are Idols, but the Lord made the heauens, strength and glorie are before him, power and beautie are in his sanctuarie, &c. Psal. 96. 4. 5.

Vers. 19. Where is the God of Hamath, and of Arpad? Where is the God of Sepharuaim? Or how haue they deliuered Samaria out of mine hands?

20. Who is hee amongst all the gods of these lands, that hath deliuered their countrie out of mine hand, that the Lord should deliuer Ierusalem out of mine hand?

SOme thinke Hamath to be Antioch in Syria: Arpad, that Citie whence people were taken to inhabit Damascus, and that Sepharuaim was situated in this countrie. If these things be so, then Rabshekeh recites here the ancient names of the Cities whence in times past many nations came forth: but afterward they not only lost their renowme, but their proper names also, that such a change might the rather affect and moue them. Howsoeuer it be, he expresslie notes out the neighbour cities which were best knowne by name to the Iewes, that the ruin of them might touch them the more neere: neither do I doubt but these places were of Syria, and Israel. As if he should say, You see these two kingdomes subdued, which notwithstanding had so many gods and patrons, and doe you thinke that your God can resist me? The expositors take the particle Chi for an interrogation in both places. Haue the gods of the nations deliuered them? Shall your God deliuer you then? But that the sense might runne the better, I had rather translate it thus, Let your God deliuer Ierusalem out of mine hand? This seemes also to be spoken tauntinglie, as if in scorne he should haue said, Yea, I warrant you, your God will deliuer you, as the gods of the Gentiles deliuered those that worshipped them. Now this ignorance of the wicked proceeds from this, they know not that God punisheth mens sinnes when aduersitie befalles them. First of all then they deceiue themselues by making an ouerthwart comparison: Oh, I haue ouercome this or that people, therefore it is I that am the efficient in this matter: for they know not that God by their their hands executes his wrath vpon the people, whom he for their iniquities hath deſtinated to deſtruction. For though they will not vtterly denie but they haue receiued ſomewhat in their victories from him, howbeit it is but fainedly, becauſe they neither ſee his will nor his iuſtice therein.

In the next place they ſtep one degree higher; that is, euen to equall themſelues with God: I haue ouercome them whom God protected; & therefore I haue alſo ouercome himſelfe. Heere is a liuely deſcription of that which we ſaw before in the tenth Chapter. Ha! Aſhur the rod of mine indignation: but he thinks not ſo. There the Lord admoniſhed the faithfull, that although Sennacherib in his outragious pride, ſtroue to aboliſh all diuinitie; yet he was alwaies to hold this principle, that hee could put nothing in execution, but what God himſelfe from heauen ſhould ſuffer.

It is our parts then to acknowledge that God corrects vs by the hands of wicked men, who are the rods of his wrath: and therefore to turne our eies from them, and caſt them vpon him, who iuſtly corrects vs for our
A good leſſó. tranſgreſſions. If the wicked preuaile, let vs not thinke that Gods arme is therefore broken: but let vs know that we were vnworthy of his helpe. For he it is that armes tyrants againſt vs for our ruin; hee puts weapons and munition into their hands, hee driues them to and fro which way ſoeuer he thinks good, and deliuers vs vp into their hands, when we haue ſhaken off his yoke of obedience from our neckes.

1 2 3 4

Turke. When we ſee the Turke to ſwell ſo proudly as he doth at this day againſt vs, and is alreadie become maſter of an infinit multitude of Chriſtians: we muſt not be troubled at it, as if Gods arme were ſhortened, or as if hee wanted power to deliuer vs. No, but wee ought rather to conſider how many waies thoſe of Grecia & Aſia haue prouoked Gods wrath againſt them, whileſt ſo many villanies and abominations haue had the full ſwindge in theſe countries, whileſt ſo many horrible impieties and ſuperſtitions haue bin ſuffered
Note. to raigne there. It was requiſite then that the chaſtiſement ſhould be the ſharper, that the iniquities of ſuch as made profeſſion of Gods name in hypocriſie, might bee ſuppreſſed. Thence hath the proſperitie of the Turke ſprung; thẽce followed thoſe horrible waſtes which we ſee in all the eaſterne parts. And yet how inſolent is the Turke? How ſets he vp the creſt, ſcorning our religion, and wonderfully extolling his owne, or rather worſhips himſelfe indeede, and ſacrificeth to his yarne, as was ſaid before out of Habaunck of other infidels.

Let vs be warned to lay theſe iudgements of God neere to our hearts, and not imagin that the Turke was able of himſelfe to conquer ſo great an Empire, but that it was the Lord who let him looſe thus to puniſh the iniquities of men. But his pride in due time ſhall
The Turkes pride ſhall be repreſſed in due time. be repreſſed. Now albeit proſperitie in it ſelfe be a teſtimonie of Gods fauour, yet we muſt not begin there, if we will iudge thereof as is meete. For ſo play the Turkes and Papiſts: if they obtaine the victorie, they conclude by and by that they haue God at their becke forſooth. But whẽ we know him as we ought, his benefits ſhall come to vs in their order; to wit, they ſhall ſerue as teſtimonies to aſſure vs of his fauour and power. And yet wee muſt bee exceeding warie how we attribute any thing to our ſelues: for our mindes are no ſooner poſſeſſed with a falſe confidence, but we ſhall be ſo tranſported & caried away with furie, that God ſhall bee found no more worthy afterward to be matched ſo with vs. At the firſt, the wicked will deteſt ſo much as manifeſt an impietie; but when they are once beſotted with diueliſh pride, to aray themſelues with God his ſpoiles, it is then eaſie to fall into this beaſtly ignorance. I grant that Sennacherib had ſome ſhew of pietie; for wee ſhall reade afterward, that hee was ſlaine in his Temple whileſt he was worſhipping Niſroch his God, to procure his fauour and good will: but as he here confounds the Creator of heauen and earth, with the gods of the Gentiles, ſo alſo when occaſion ſhould haue offered it ſelfe, hee would haue made no bones at all to haue railed vpon his owne Idoll. Chap. 37. 38.

Verſ. 21. Then they kept ſilence, and anſwered him not a word: for the Kings commandement was, ſaying; Anſwer him not a word.

THis is added that wee might yet better conceiue in what a wofull caſe Iudea was: for this good King hauing but weake meanes left, is conſtrained to put vp all wrongs, and to let his enemie haue the laſt word. He had ſent his Ambaſſadors to appeaſe his furie: when this preuailed not, hee forbids them to commune with him, that they might no further inſenſe this cruell woolfe, who was but too much inraged before. Yet it is not eaſilie diſcerned whether the Prophet ſpeakes here of the Ambaſſadors, or of the people, to whom Rabſhekeh vttered theſe blaſphemies. It is moſt likely that it ſhould be referred rather to thoſe which kept the walles, who notwithſtanding ſtood ſtill without tumult, albeit the enemie gaulled them to the quicke by his reproches; becauſe they obeied the commandement of their King. Whence we
A paterne for true ſubiects. gather, that it is a ſingular grace of God to ſee a peaceable and an obedient people, eſpecially when all things are confuſed and at the laſt caſt.

But ſome may obiect, that it was no time
Obiect. now to command them ſilence, when ſuch blaſphemies were diſgorged againſt God: for we are not to diſſemble the matter, whileſt the wicked ſtand breaking their ieſts vpon his Maieſtie, no, though it were with the danger of our life? At leaſt wee ought to make it ſome way appeare, that we cannot indure to heare his honour and glory to be trod vnder foote. But it is not ſaid, that they held their
Anſ. peace, as giuing conſent to that which hee ſpake, or to approue of thoſe blaſphemies which he belched out againſt God, which no doubt vexed them ſore, albeit they vttered neuer a word. For the Ambaſſadors ſorrowed and wept, & from their inward griefe which preſſed them, proceeded the renting of their garments: by which outward ſigne, they teſtified that they abhorred his blaſphemies. Now in as much as it had been but time loſt, to haue reaſoned the caſe with Rabſhekeh, they returne quietly without any word at all: the people on the other ſide, who could haue gotten nothing by contending, are content to oppoſe their ſighes againſt this miſcreants pride.

Verſe 22.

A commendable magnanimitie.

And truely it is a very commendable fortitude not to be bowed, but quietly to keepe our ſtandings, when it is not permitted vs to anſwer. Hence learne, that we are not to contend againſt the wicked at all times, when they teare the bleſſed name of God in peeces by their outrages; becauſe in ſo bitter a combat, and amiddeſt ſo manie railings there is no roome left for defence of the truth.

A good caueat.

And yet we muſt not ſo giue the raignes to our cowardlineſſe, that we ſhould thinke our ſelues excuſed, if wee keepe ſilence when the wicked lift vp themſelues againſt God. For our ſilence is not to be approued of, vnleſſe in ſome ſort we ſhew that it greatly diſliketh vs, and that we giue them to vnderſtand, as much as in vs lieth, that there is nothing more inſupportable to vs, then to heare the holy name of God rent in peeces. Wee muſt giue teſtimonies of our zeale then, leſt the enemies ſhould thinke that we lightly eſteemed the honour of God, in that wee are not moued when they blaſpheme.

Verſ. 22. Then came Eliakim, the ſonne of Helkiah, the ſteward of the houſe, and Shebna the Chancellor, and Ioah the ſonne of Aſaph with rent clothes, and told him the wordes of Rabſhekeh.

NOw wee ſee that Eliakim and the other Ambaſſadors were not ſilent, as if they had approued of the impieties of Rabſhekeh, or, that they temporiſed in reſpect of the danger: for they rent their garments, and thereby ſhewed how much they were offended with theſe blaſphemies. I except the hypocrit Shebna, who was forced with ſhame to doe as others did, though but for faſhions ſake onelie. The Iewes and other eaſterne people were wont to rent their clothes, when they meant to ſhew their great deteſtation of ſomething: for as their conſtitutions were much more fierce then ours, who dwell in theſe cold Countries, ſo were they more violent in their outward geſtures, maner of their attire, goings, and ſuch other ſignes. We muſt alſo note in this place, that thoſe who paſſed by the iniuries which were done to their owne perſons, yet rent their clothes when they heard the name of God blaſphemed: for thoſe that are vnreconcileable in a particular iniurie, where patience is required, and are not mooued when they heare the holie name of GOD rent with reuilings, ſuch ſhew (I ſay) that they haue no zeale at all in them.

THE XXXVII. CHAPTER.

Verſ. 1. And when Hezekiah heard it, he rent his clothes, and put on ſackcloth, and came into the houſe of the Lord.

THe Prophet ſhews that nothing remained to this good King but one onely hope of ſaluation; namely, to powre out his complaints into Godsboſome, who is a iuſt iudge: according as it is ſaid, Pſal. 123. 2. The eies of the faithfull wait vpon him, euen as the eies of bond ſeruants wait vpon their maſters and miſtriſſes, when they are oppreſſed. When Ieruſalem then ſeemes loſt, Hezekias deſtituted of all humane helpes flees vnto God for his protection. And thus he confeſſeth, that this is the onely remedie when things are become deſperate. Now herein Gods grace ſhined in ſuch wiſe, that it was a manifeſt miracle ſhewed to all, when the King with all his ſubiects were deliuered out of the mouth of the lion. This circumſtance therefore is to bee noted, to the end wee may take knowledge of the excellencie of ſo great a benefit.

God calles vs to him by extreme perils, therefore we muſt not be ſlothfull in craſuing his aid & aſſiſtance.

Heere we are alſo taught what courſe to take in extreme dangers: wee muſt not bee ſlothfull nor idle in craſuing helpe of God, who by this meanes calles vs vnto him. Wee muſt not then ſtand amazed nor diſmaied, but rather be pricked forward by our neceſſities, which preſſe vs to ſeeke his aſſiſtance: for that vſe Hezekias makes of his afflictions. He goes forthwith into the Temple, no otherwiſe then into a place of refuge, to hide himſelfe and his people vnder the ſhadow of Gods wings.

Hezekias his modeſtie.

Thereunto hee alſo ioines the outward ſignes of repentance, he rents his garments, he puts on ſackcloth, and couers himſelfe with aſhes, & doth other things, which were then ſolemne ſignes of godly ſorrow, by which (being vnder ſore afflictions) they condemned themſelues before God as poore malefactors, and humbly ſought pardon of him. Now the modeſtie of this holy King is wonderfull, ſeeing he is not aſhamed to proſtrate himſelfe in in the preſence of his God, though he had brought ſo worthie things to paſſe, and was adorned with ſo many rare and excellent vertues. On the other ſide we may behold in him a wonderfull courage of mind, and ſtedfaſtnes of faith, in that the weight of ſo great a triall hindred him not freely to ſeeke vnto thas hand for help which ſharplie aſſailed him. There is not one amongſt an hundred to be found but will murmure if God doe touch him but a little more then ordinarie; yea, they will be readie (if they haue done any good) to twite God in the teeth with it, and thinke themſelues but hardlie recompenced for the ſame at his hands. Others will complaine and ſay, It is but in vaine and time loſt to ſerue God, when they ſee things fall not out as they would haue them. But wee ſee none of theſe things in Hezekias, for he is not aſhamed to confeſſe his fault, notwithſtanding he was indued with the true feare of God.

Hezekias his ſtedfaſt faith.

Therefore if we deſire to ſeeke reconciliation with God, and to feele his fauor in the day of aduerſitie, let vs giue ſome teſtimonies of our repentance, and francklie acknowledge and confeſſe our ſinnes: for afflictions comes not out of the duſt, Iob.5.6. but God ſolicits vs thereby to amendment of life. I grant that ſackcloth and aſhes ſerue to little purpoſe, vnleſſe the affection of the heart go formoſt: for hypocrites (as we know) are but too forward and ouer-liberall in their ceremonies. The Holy Ghoſt (as wee haue ſeene before) requires theſe exerciſes, and giues them their iuſt commendation; yet ſo, as they be alwaies vſed to a right end. And no doubt it was alſo a ſigne of ſingular modeſtie and meeknes, to ſee this good King and all the people by theſe helps to ſtirre vp one another to the feare of God: alſo, in that he clothed himſelfe with this deformed and baſe apparell the more freely to confeſſe his fault, which is an humilitie that Kings and Princes are aſhamed to imitate.

Verſ. 2. And hee ſent Eliakim the ſteward of the houſe, and Shebna the Chancellor, with the elders of the Prieſts clothed in ſackcloth, vnto Iſaiah the Prophet, the ſonne of Amos.

3. And ſaid vnto him, This is a day of tribulation, and of rebuke, and blaſphemie: for the children are come to the birth, and there is no ſtrength to bring forth.

BY this Ambaſſage he not only meant to call Iſaiah to lament this calamitie with him, but alſo to haue ſome conſolation from the mouth of the Lord; for if prayers be not grounded vpon the word of God, they will be but ſo many words caſt into the ayre. Wee know that the vnbeleeuers will make both loude and long prayers, and yet flee away from God, either by deſpiſing, or in vtter reiecting his promiſes. Here is a ſigne of Hezekias his true deuotion then, that being kindled with the zeale of prayer, he addes thereunto a cõfirmation of his hope, leſt he ſhould faint vnder the temptation; alſo, in that he keeps himſelfe cloſe to the meanes ordained of God, and deſires to heare his voice by the mouth of his Prophet Iſaiah. For albeit he reſted vpon none but God only, yet he reiects not the teſtimonie of a mortall man like himſelfe: and this is the cauſe why the title of the Prophet is here expreſſie mentioned, becauſe he ſent to Iſaiah to be confirmed by ſome new propheſie. And thus he names him, not as a priuat man, but as the ſeruant of the Lord, whoſe office it was to comfort the King by ſome word of conſolation.

Prayers vnſtable, vnleſſe they be ſupported by the word.

There are two notable remedies then by which we are ſuccoured in affliction. Firſt, we muſt call vpon God for his deliuerance: Secondly, we muſt ſend for the Prophets of God (if they be to be found) that they may giue vs ſome word of conſolation: for it is their charge to comfort and refreſh the afflicted, by ſetting the pretious promiſes of life before them. But if Prophets be wanting, yet we ſhall haue ſufficient and full conſolation in the word it ſelfe. For we muſt aske counſell of theſe Prophets which God hath ſent, not only during the terme of their liues, but for euer afterwards, and of thoſe that ſucceed them: for although themſelues be dead, yet we haue their bookes ſtill with vs: their doctrine liues, and ſhall remaine for euer: but the ſumme is, we muſt alwaies aske counſell of God.

Two ſoueraigne remedies by which we may receiue comfort in affliction.

2. *Pet.*1.19.

Some may demand, whether Hezekias was not ſufficiently inſtructed, and furniſhed with the promiſes, was it not a ſigne of infidelitie in him then to ſeeke for new promiſes of the Prophet? I anſwere, It is not to be imputed to him for infidelitie or diſtruſt that he ſeekes a new promiſe, becauſe being beſt acquainted with his owne infirmitie, he was not aſhamed to ſeeke new confirmations of his faith. The fleſh alwaies ſolicits vs to diſtruſt, therefore we ought not at any time to deſpiſe new ſupplies: nay rather it ſtands vs in hand to vſe all the beſt meanes we can to beate back the multitudes of temptations which dayly preſſe vs. For Satan inuirons vs ſo cloſe on euery ſide, that if we be not well furniſhed indeed, it is not poſſible for vs to wind out of his ſnares and intanglings. Although we be well inſtructed in Gods word then, and haue learned that he will ſurely help vs in the day of trouble, yet when ſome extraordinarie ſurge or waue ariſeth, it is all the need then to get vs to the mouth of the Lord againe and againe, and ſtill to ſeeke out new confirmations to comfort, quicken, and ſtrengthen our faith. We haue no particular propheſies now, but we ought to applie the generals to our particular vſes, becauſe they were written for our learning, Rom.15.

Queſt.

Anſ.

The fleſh euermore ſolicits vs to diſtruſt, therefore we ought neuer to deſpiſe new ſuccors.

Although our faith be well confirmed in the promiſes, yet vpon new aſſaults we ought once yea twice to get new confirmatiõs from the mouth of the Lord.

In that Hezekias ſent Ambaſſadors to Iſaiah, and went not himſelfe, it was becauſe he praid in the Temple: for it appeares the mourning was generall, in regard that both the elders and counſellers were clothed in ſackcloth, it is alſo very probable that the King had proclaimed a publike faſt. Let vs alſo note, that Iſaiah liued not in the Kings houſe to giue himſelfe to iollitie there : but in his abſence, God meant to proue the faith of this good King.

Verſ. 4. If ſo bee the Lord thy God hath heard the words of Rabſhekeh, whō the King of Aſhur his maſter hath ſent to raile on the liuing God, and to reproch him with words, which the Lord thy God hath heard, then lift thou vp thy praier for the remnant that are left.

Obiect. IT ſeemes that Hezekias doubts whether the Lord would heare or no : for the particle Vlai, is tranſlated, if peraduenture ; and it is taken in this ſenſe almoſt throrowout the whole Scripture. But we muſt note that the faithfull are accuſtomed to ſpeake thus, though they bee moſt aſſured that God will ſuccor them. They are indeed ſomewhat perplexed, but it is onely in regard of the difficultie, of the temptation wherewith they are preſſed. Hezekias might well doubt, if we looke vpon the eſtate as it then preſently ſtood: but hauing turned his eies towards the word of God, hee became more certaine of Gods will, and then ceaſed to tremble any more. Now becauſe it cannot be auoided, but the fleſh will alwaies fight againſt the ſpirit in the faithfull, and ſo ouercharge them, that they are faine ſtill to drag ỹ wing or to traile the leg after them, they ſometimes fit their words according to the difficultie which preſents it ſelfe before them. And in other places we may obſerue, that Gods ſeruants haue ſpoken on this manner, though the matter were out of doubt. For when Saint Peter exhorted Simon the Magician to repentance, he addes ; If paraduenture the thought of thine heart may be forgiuen thee : but hee therein counſels him not to tremble, or to pray in vnbeliefe, becauſe ſuch a praier had been in vaine : but he ſets before him the greatneſſe of his ſinne, that hee might quicken him vp with the greater feruencie to awaken at the laſt, that hee might proue a true conuert indeed. This word if then, is not put here in a doubtfull ſenſe, but ſignifies that which wee vſually ſpeake, it may be, when we dare hope or promiſe ſomething to our ſelues.

Anſ.

Acts 8.22.

Neither doth Hezechias ſpeake thus, as if God vnderſtand not what the wicked ſay, or as if he were vtterly ignorant of it, but becauſe this principle was fixed in his heart; to wit, that the Lord is neer vnto all ſuch as call vpon him in truth : he now therefore armes himſelfe with praiers, and is fully reſolued to withſtand all diſtruſt. And for as much as he could not attaine the goale without great ſtrife, he ſaith, peraduenture, or, it may be. Note alſo that he addes heere two ſorts of hearing, which in part reſolues this queſtion. True it is that at the firſt there ſeemes to be ſome repugnancie in theſe words ; It may be hee will heare the words which he hath heard : but it is a very apt kind of ſpeech ; for Hezekias is certainly perſwaded that nothing is hidden from God. He onely diſputes in himſelfe, whether God would examin this miſcreants blaſphemies. For in regard that he often defers his puniſhments for a time, and ſeemes to winke at mens impieties, it ſeemed that hee now alſo tooke no knowledge of theſe blaſphemies. Laſtly, he takes it for granted, that all things are manifeſt & naked before Gods eies: onely he askes in ſome perplexitie, whether the Lord indeed will ſhew himſelfe diſpleaſed with Rabſhekehs railing, by ſome outward ſigne or no ; that is, not to let him eſcape any longer vnpuniſhed ? To be ſhort, he deſires to ſee the execution thereof, which is then performed, when God ſets thoſe things in order againe, which before were out of frame and confuſed ; and when hee ſhewes himſelfe the Iudge. For then wee proue by experience, that he hath indeed had reſpect vnto the welfare of his people. Thus Hezekias askes; Lord, couldeſt thou not heare the blaſphemies of Rabſhekeh, to reuenge the ſame ? or, art thou not able to ſhew that the glory of thy name is deere and precious vnto thee ?

When he calles the Lord Iſaiahs God, his meaning is not as if hee were peculiarly ſerued by one man onely; neither doth he hereby cut off himſelfe from the number of the faithfull : but becauſe praiers flow from doctrines, this holy King ſpeakes honourably of the Prophets miniſterie, and teſtifies, that he is the true ſeruant of God. Sometimes this relation extends it ſelfe further; for all the faithfull doe iointly call vpon God, who holds them all in the number of his people. But he is called Iſaiahs and Pauls God, in regard of their particular calling.

How God is ſaid to be the God of Iſaiah and Paul.

Lift vp praiers.] This is the ſecond cauſe for which Hezekias ſent his Ambaſſadors vnto Iſaiah; to wit, that he might alſo inioy the benefit of his praiers with others. In which we ſee, it is not the Prophets office onely to comfort the afflicted, by ſetting the promiſes of life before them, but alſo to pray for their ſaluation. Let not the Miniſters and Preachers of the word thinke that they haue diſcharged their duty then, when they haue exhorted and taught thoſe that depend vpon them, vnleſſe they adde praiers thereunto; for it is all our duties ſo to doe. But Hezekias ſent to the Prophet chiefly, that hee might ſhew the way vnto others by his example.

It is the Miniſters duties not onely to comfort his people out of the word, but alſo to lift vp his praier vnto God for thē in their diſtreſſes.

To lift vp praier, ſignifies nothing elſe but to pray; yet the phraſe of ſpeech is to be noted, for it ſhewes how our affections ought to be ordered in praier. The Scripture in euery place wils vs to lift vp our hearts vnto heauen, for otherwiſe we ſhall pray without any due reuerence at all to Gods Maieſtie. Beſides, our blockiſhneſſe is ſo great, that as ſoone as we enter into praier, there comes groſſe imaginations touching the maieſtie of God into our mindes; ſo as if he ſhould not call vs away from them vnto heauen, wee would rather ſeeke him vnder our feete, then there.

What is meant by this phraſe, To lift vp praier.

Lam. 3.41.

To lift vp praier then, is ſo to pray, that our hearts be not glued to the earth, nor yet that we conceiue ought of God, that agrees with carnall or fleſhly conceits : but attributing ting that vnto him which ſutes beſt with his diuine nature; alſo that we aſpire vnto heauen with an ardenſie of zeale, and with all our affections. It is in this ſenſe that Dauid ſaith; Oh, let my praier come before thee as incence, and let the lifting vp of my hands be as the euening ſacrifice.

Moreouer, Hezekias deſires Iſaiah to pray for the remnant that were left. This circumſtance might ſerue to bow the Lord: not that he is to be bowed, as men are: but thus hee deales with vs, and is contented to ſtoope downe to our weakneſſe. Be it that our caſe is ſo deſperate then, as we are euen at the pits brinke, as they ſay; yet muſt we lay forth our miſeries before God, that thereby wee may gather ſome conſolation; becauſe himſelfe proteſts, that he hath reſpect vnto the poore and needie. Yea, the neerer we are to deſtruction, with the greater affection ought we to craue his aid and aſſiſtance; as wee ſee Hezekias here doth, when all things were become deſperate.

Pſal. 9.9.18. & 10.17.18.

Verſ. 5. So the ſeruants of King Hezekiah came to Iſaiah.

6. And Iſaiah ſaid vnto them; Thus ſay vnto your Maſter, Thus ſaith the Lord; Bee not afraid of the wordes that thou haſt heard, wherewith the ſeruants of the King of Aſſur haue blaſphemed me.

AS the Prophet hath told vs before, that the onely refuge the King had, was to aske counſell at Gods mouth: ſo now hee ſhewes that it was not in vaine, becauſe hee receiued ſuch comfort and conſolation from him as his heart deſired.

If in our diſtreſſes wee powre out our hearts before God, he will neuer diſappoint vs of our hope. Note.

By this example we are admoniſhed, that if we ſeeke reliefe from the Lord, by diſcharging all our cares into his boſome, wee ſhall neuer be left ſuccourleſſe. And albeit ſuch Prophets, as Iſaiah was, are not alwaies to be had in the world, yet will he not faile to meet thoſe that wait for his helpe in due ſeaſon, and with ſuch meanes as ſhall be anſwerable to their neceſſities.

Now Iſaiah ſaith in the firſt place, that he anſwered them in the name of God: for hee affirmes that God is the author of this his meſſage. The Prophets were alwaies to haue regard that they ſpake nothing of their owne heads: alſo, it was neceſſary that God ſhould come betweene with his authority, in a matter of ſo great conſequence. Thus then our Prophet ſhewes, that God preuented (as it were) the praiers of this good King. The falſe Prophets brag much of Gods name, yet falſely: but Iſaiah being the very organ of the holy Ghoſt, doth iuſtly come in his name that ſent him: and in that hee forbids him in the firſt place to feare, he therein would haue Hezekias to hold faſt his confidence, or at leaſt to wait in hope and ſilence.

As oft as we heare this voice, Feare not: that peace which faith brings forth is commended vnto vs.

As oft as we heare theſe words feare not, let vs know that peace which faith begets in vs, is here recommended vnto vs: for all they which in reſting vpon God, doe wait for deliuerance from him out of their trials, ſuch obtaine victory by their patience, ouer all feares, ſo as they inioy ſweet peace in the middeſt of the ſharpeſt troubles. Moreouer, that this good King might with the more cheerfulneſſe expect a ioyfull and an happy iſſue, our Prophet plainely ſhewes, that God takes himſelfe as a partie in this cauſe, which he now minds to take into his owne hands: for he cannot indure that the wicked ſhould abuſe his name. And therefore they are to looke in the end, that he will ſhew himſelfe a iuſt Iudge in puniſhing them for the ſame.

By the word ſeruants, hee amplifies the indignitie of the fact: for had the King himſelfe vttered theſe blaſphemies, it had bin a thing inſupportable, that the Lord of glory ſhould haue bin ſo proudly diſdained and reproched by a mortall man; much leſſe then ſhould he indure to be railed vpon in ſuch wiſe by one of his vaſſals. And thus the condition of the perſon that railed, makes the offence more odious.

Verſ. 7. Behold I will ſend a blaſt vpon him, and hee ſhall heare a noiſe and returne to his owne land: and I will cauſe him to fall by the ſword in his owne land.

SOme tranſlate; I will put my Spirit within him: as if the Prophet ſpake of ſome ſecret inſtinct of heart; but this is too conſtrained. The ſimilitude is very apt, in that hee ſhewes God hath a whirle-wind in his hand, which ſhall driue Sennacherib away before it into another place. The holy Scripture is often wont to vſe ſuch a kind of ſpeech, in comparing the wicked to ſtraw and chaffe; becauſe God is able with the leaſt blaſt of his mouth to ſcatter them whither ſoeuer hee will; euen then when they thinke themſelues at the ſtrongeſt. Hee compares the trouble then which fell vpon the hoſt of Sennacherib, to a whirle-wind, which carried him violently out of Iudea. In the next place, he ſheweth that it will bee as eaſie for God to chaſe this enemy away, as it is for a whirl-wind to driue chaffe or ſtraw before it. The like is to bee ſaid of all tyrants, bee they neuer ſo ſtrong and mightie.

Pſal. 1.4.

We may perceiue that the clauſe, hee ſhall heare, is added by way of expoſition: & therefore I had rather reſolue it into a particle of ſhewing the cauſe, thus, For hee ſhall heare a noiſe. For he ſpeakes of this blaſt, which as ſoone as it was blowne, it forthwith repulſed and conſtrained Sennacherib to returne into his owne Countrie, by reaſon of the newes which he heard from Egypt and Ethiopia.

The enemies of the church compared to chaffe.

When the Prophet addes, that this tyrant ſhould fall by the ſword, it is as much as if he had ſaid; hee vexeth others, and indeuors to inlarge his Monarchy; but God will raiſe him vp enemies in the middeſt of his owne Country, which ſhall bring him to nought. Many expound; the Country, or, the land of Israel: but it is too constreined, for it is spoken of ỹ countrie of the Assyrian. And there is in this clause a close opposition: He which conquered the Kingdomes and Cities of other Princes, shall not be able to defend his owne, but shall there be slaine.

Vers. 8. So Rabshekeh returned, and found the King of Ashur fighting against Libnah: for he had heard that he was departed from Lachish.

HE shewes now how Rabshekeh returned to his King without striking any stroke, and returned not to the place where he left him: for his meaning is, that Sennacherib had raised vp his siege before Lachish, and was gone downe into Egypt to lay siege to Libna, which some thinke to be Pelusium: others say, it was a Citie of Iudeah. For it is very probable, that hauing heard newes of the ariuing of the enemie, he directed his armie towards Egypt, to stop the passages before them. Now albeit the Lord abated the furie of this tyrant by new warres, that he might thereby giue some rest to the Iewes, yet he would not ouercome him by the hand of man, but only manifests and brings his vntamed pride forth vpon the stage, because he ceased not still to belch out his wonted blasphemies, notwithstanding himselfe was in great danger, as we shall see afterward.

Vers. 9. He heard also men say Tirhakah king of Ethiopia, Behold, he is come out to fight with thee: and when he heard it, he sent other messengers to Hezekiah, saying,

BY that which followes we may coniecture what the cause was why the Assyrian so suddenlie departed frō Iudeah. For the Kings of Egypt, and Ethiopia had made a league one with another against Senacherib, because they saw he grew too mightie, and ceased not to inuade Countrie after Countrie: for they thought if his violence were not resisted betimes, they might be sure to looke for the like measure. These Kings meant not to defend Iudeah by working his woe, but respected their owne safetie, because the power of so mightie a man is for the most part worthelie had in suspition of other Princes and their people. It is wisely done of them therefore that in foreseeing dangers, they ioine their forces together to make resistance ere it be too late: for they had been easily ouerrunne had they been separated one from the other. Thus you see why they ioine their forces into one, to wit, that they may withstand the violence and furie of this Tyrant.

Note.

The Assyrian being intangled in so desperat a warre, send new Ambassadors to Hezekias, thinking by threats to inforce him to yeeld: wherein we may see how Tyrants are caried away with pride, and an ouerweening of their owne greatnes, so as they thinke to make all the world to tremble & quake at their words, or at the only hearing of the sound of their names, or at the sight of their very shadow. This man being somewhat preuented by a new & difficult busines, thinks notwithstanding to subdue Iudeah, whence he was forced to depart. It may be he was ashamed to be thus disappointed of his purpose, and thus abruptlie to raise vp his siege: but he thinks to obtaine that in his absence which he could not accomplish in his owne person. Howsoeuer, the Lord did wonderfullie worke in succoring his poore seruants, who esteemed thēselues as sheepe appointed to the slaughter. Now that he might abate the rage of this Tyrant, he occupies his head, and fils his hands with such intricate businesses, as out of which he could not easily wind himselfe: as if one should hamper a furious beast, or should hold him fast by the snout, as the Prophet wil shew anon. I grant, their cruell and reuengefull natures are not tamed thereby, but yet they are so restrained, that they can not doe the hurt they would.

Wee see the truth of this now amongst vs. How many tyrants are there which thirst after the ruin of the Church? How many plots do they lay to bring it about? How busie are they in corners, secretlie taking counsell together? And with what power and policies are they indued? But when they thinke to haue their purpose, it may be the Lord suddenlie descries their designes, and raiseth vp enemies against them. Sometimes hee sets them together by the eares, and brings the cruelties which they thought to execute vpō his children vpon their owne heads. Yet they continue as obstinate and as fierce as euer they were before, and cease not to imagin mischiefe still: as this Sennacherib; he is hindred of his purpose you see, yet hee is not wearie of molesting this good King, but domineers ouer him with maiesticall tearmes, as if he had been a poore slaue: yea, he commands him as if he were his vassall. And not content with that, he proudly exalts himselfe euen against the Lord of glorie, and goes beyond the pride of his Captaine Rabshekeh. For although Rabshekehs words and his are all one in sense, yet hee offers outrage against the Lord with greater impudencie, and with an open throat as it were.

God will turne the counsels of all Achitophels to foolishnes. 2. Sam. 15. 32. and 16. 23.

Vers. 10. Thus shall ye speake to Hezekiah King of Iudah, saying, Let not thy God deceiue thee in whom thou trustest, saying, Ierusalem shall not be giuen into the hand of the King of Ashur.

WHat an horrible blasphemie is this? He accuseth God to be a lier and a deceiuer, as if he plaid fast and loose with those that put their trust in him. For take away his truth from him, and what remaines? That is the thing he most esteemes. But he drew these words out from the mouth of this miscreant, who before seemed to reuerence some god. It is not long you see then but he discouers himselfe to the full. Whereas he saith in the person of God, that Ierusalem shall not be giuen,

Some

Some do thence coniecture, that the traytor Shebna had informed the king of Aſhur of Iſaiahs propheſie, and the words doe ſound ſomewhat that way, but there is no neede of any ſuch coniectures, for the Aſſyrian knew well enough that Hezekiah truſted in God. The promiſes made to Dauid, and ſo conſequently vnto him, were not vnknowne. This is my reſt, here will I dwell for euer, for I haue a delight therein: Pſal. 132. 14. Not that this tyrant ſtudied the prophecies to profite by them; but they were manifeſtly knowne to all, yea, that the Iewes did wonderfully glorie in them, and often boaſted of Gods helpe and protection againſt their enemies. This tyrant oppoſeth his blaſphemies againſt the promiſes; Let not thy God deceiue thee: and thus he flies in Gods face as it were, as if hee had been too weake to defend Ieruſalem; and as if himſelfe was not onely ſtronger then all men whatſoeuer, but alſo ſtronger then the Lord of hoſts.

He goes about to proue this by examples. 1 He firſt had vanquiſhed other nations which worſhipped other gods. 2 Secondly, he takes an argument from the power of his predeceſſors; They were ſtronger then the gods of the nations, but I am more mightie then they by many degrees: therefore the God of Iſrael ſhall not ſtand before me. See how the wicked are wont to grow more and more in their ouerweening, by hauing good ſucceſſes; ſo as they euen forget that they are men. For they not onely attribute a diuine maieſtie vnto themſelues, but thinke they are a degree aboue that alſo. Which more is, when they haue reiected all differenee betweene good and euill, they take pleaſure in doing miſchiefe, they glory in the ſinnes of their anceſtors, and thinke themſelues no ſmall fooles, in that they came of ſuch theeues and robbers. For he that ſhall note the riſing of theſe Monarks well, it often falles out that he which is growne the mightieſt, may well bee called the rich ſonne of a great theefe.

Tyrants grow proud by hauing good ſucceſſes.

Tyrants glory in their ſhame.

A rich ſonne of a great theefe.

This tyrant cares not whether it were by right or wrong, that his predeceſſours conquered ſo many Countries: for ſuch neuer reſpect equitie, when they meane to make themſelues great: let them haue the ſtronger ſide, and then it is no matter by what meanes they come by it, iuſtly or vniuſtly, all is one ſo they haue it; all is fiſh that comes to net, as they thinke. They put in practiſe the ſaying of a certaine Poet; If a man will bee wicked, let him get might, that he may be ſo. This vice hath not raigned in one age onely, but wee feele by experience, that it hath the full ſwindge now more then euer heeretofore.

The ſaying of a Poet.

Verſ. 11. Behold thou haſt heard what the Kings of Aſhur haue done to all lands in deſtroying them, and ſhalt thou be deliuered?

1 WEe muſt here note a double compariſon; for he compares Hezekias to other Kings of Iudah (his predeceſſors) which were more mightie then hee, and yet were ouercome by the Kings of Aſſyria. But Sennacherib 2 on the contrary, being more mightie then any of the reſt, proudly aduanceth himſelfe: it followes then that Hezekias is not able to reſiſt him. The other compariſon is of the Kings of Aſſyria, and Sennacherib himſelfe, with the idols of the Gentiles. If the idols then could Verſ. 12. not protect the people which honoured them; it thereupon followes, that the God of Iſrael is no more able then they, to ſaue his people. But when we read here how ſharply the faith of Hezekias was aſſailed by theſe wonderfull tentations: let vs furniſh our ſelues with the like artillerie, and prepare our ſelues to the fight. Yea, whileſt time laſts, let vs carefully ſtore our ſelues, that we may conſtantly and couragiouſly reſiſt when the like danger ſhall approch. If Satan obiect vnto vs the ruin of many nations, let vs diſtinguiſh our condition from theirs: for albeit we are indeed ſubiect to the ſame calamities, yet we haue ſure promiſes touching our ſaluation, which the others had not.

We muſt buckle our ſpirituall armour about vs, to reſiſt tentations before they come.

We muſt diſtinguiſh betweene infidels and our ſelues.

Verſ. 12. Haue the gods of the nations deliuered them which my fathers haue deſtroyed: as Gozan, and Haran, and Rezeph, and the children of Eden which were at Telaſſer?

13. Where is the King of Hamath, and the King of Arpad, and the King of the Cities of Sepharuaim, Henah, and Iuah?

MEntion is made of Gozan, in 2. King. 17. 6. And thence we may garher that it was a Citie of the Medes, although others affirme that it was ſituared in another Country: but it ſufficeth that it ſtood eaſtward from Iudeah. Touching Charan, it is often mentioned in the Scriptures. Plinie ſaith it Plinie. was a Citie of Arabia: but it is commonly placed in Meſopotamia. Which is confirmed by Abrahams voyage, who came thence with his father, when he departed out of Caldea: Gen. 11. 31. Act. 7. 4. The prophane Hiſtoriographers call it Charras in the plurall number, and ſay that Craſſus and his ſonnes were ſlaine there.

Verſ. 14. So Hezekias tooke the letter of the hand of the meſſenger, and read it: and he went vp into the houſe of the Lord, and Hezekias ſpread it before the Lord.

THe Prophet now ſhewes what refuge Hezekias fled vnto in his great affliction; to wit, he went forthwith into the Temple to bewaile his miſery (which hee could not remeadie) before the Lord, and to diſcharge his cares and ſorrowes into Gods boſome. For it was no confuſed or diſordered complaint, but by praiers & teares he meant to bow the Lord to his requeſt, that hee might yeeld him ſuccour. By this example we are

The onely way to escape out of trouble.

are taught, that there is no easier way to wade out of our calamities when they presse vs, then by casting our burthen vpon the Lord: for all comforts besides, shall doe vs more hurt then good, if this be wanting.

He spreads not the letters before the Lord, as if he had been ignorant of them; but God is well pleased we should deale thus with him: therein applying himselfe to our infirmities. For our praiers, teares, and complaints, discouer not our necessities before his eies, seeing he knowes them all before wee once begin to open our mouthes; or to aske ought at his hands. But we now speake of that which is profitable for vs; to wit, that God may shew that hee hath heard the blasphemies of our enemies; so as those who haue vttered them, may not escape vnpunished. This is the reason and end wherefore Hezekias spread the letters of this cursed tyrant before the Lord, namely, to put the greater edge vpon his praiers, and to kindle and inflame his zeale more and more.

Mat.6.8.

Vers. 15. And Hezekiah praied vnto the Lord, saying;

16. O Lord of hostes, God of Israel, which dwellest betweene the Cherubims: thou art very God alone ouer all the kingdomes of the earth; thou hast made the heauen and the earth.

BEcause Sennacherib had been the instrument of Satan to shake the faith of Hezekias, hee now opposeth his rampart against him; to wit, that God is the Lord of hosts, and therefore of infinit power. For there is no doubt but hee rouseth vp his spirits, in assuring himselfe to obtaine that he askes, when he adornes the Lord with these excellent titles. Will we haue our praiers to preuaile with God? let vs hold this principle; that God will bee found of them that seeke him: Heb.11.6. But this good King had speciall need to lay hold of this sentence; to wit, that Gods power alwaies remaines one and the same, albeit the wicked striue to leſſen it by their railings & scoffes; and to take heart the more freely and boldly vnto him, to set himselfe valiantly against the lets by which Satan indeuoured to hinder his course. Now herein we may behold the heroicall magnanimitie of this good King, who ceased not to resist this tyrant for the maintenance of Gods power, but bare a loyall affection inwardly in his heart thereunto, and also made God a witnesse of his inward affection. Before he begins to frame any praier then, he breaks through the fallacies whereby Satan went about to put him to the wall: so that hee not onely magnifies Gods power, but maintaines the soueraignte which hee hath ouer the whole world.

A principle euer to be held, namely, that God will alwaies be found of them that seeke him.

Now hee meditates on these things, the better to confirme himselfe in the assurance which he had in Gods prouidence, by which all things in heauen and in earth are ordered and disposed. And this foundation ought all the faithfull first to lay, that so they lose not their labour in praying. The Kings praier had not been of such force and efficacie, if he had onely said, Incline thine eare O Lord, and heare, &c. or such like wordes: as when hee keepes this principle first in his heart; that God hath care ouer al the works of his hands. For he perswades himselfe that God will take this cause into his owne hands, and will not suffer the tyrant thus proudly to aduance himselfe; but will rather speedily put him downe, sith the gouernment of the whole world belongs vnto him. Also, seeing Sennacherib attributed that vnto himselfe, which of right appertained vnto God; that hee could not escape vnpunished.

Where he subiecteth all the kingdomes of the earth vnder Gods hand and power, he applies it vnto his owne particular vse. In the meane while, such a title neuer agrees to any but to God onely; because hee rules ouer all Kingdomes. Notwithstanding he denies not but Kings, Princes, and Magistrates haue their iust titles; yet so, as thēselues be subiect vnto God, & maintaine his right & dominion: for it belongs onely to God to be King of Kings, & Lord of Lords, as S. Paul saith. Not that hee therefore aboliſheth the names of Kings and Lords, with their dominions, but shewes that all depends vpon God onely, how great or mightie soeuer they be; that they should not thinke themselues haile fellow well met with him, but that they ought rather to acknowledge him to be their Lord and King. Kings then hold their authoritie, as you see; if so be they will keepe the mid way betweene God and men, and will not presume to climbe higher.

1.Tim.6.15.

Moreouer, Hezekias gathers this title from the very creation; for it is not possible that the Creator of heauen and earth should euer forsake the workes of his owne hands; nay, doe we not see on the contrary, that he gouernes mankind by his prouidence, which is the chiefest part of the world? It were too absurd a thing then to limit the creation within so narrow bounds, that it should onely serue as a witnesse of a certaine power of God, that lasted but a while, and stretched it selfe to a few things: no, it ought to bee extended to a continuall working in all things. By this it appeares, that those tyrants which will take liberty to rule as they list, do therein bereaue God of his honour; and therefore when things fall out otherwise then well vnto them, they may iustly impute it to their owne pride and presumption.

Hezekias also alleageth other epithetes, for the confirmation of his faith. And first, in that he calles him the Lord of hosts, he againe extols his power: but when he addes, the God of Israel, he notes out a more neere and particular presence: for it was no small signe of Gods loue, to haue taken the safetie of this people into his owne custodie. Hereunto appertaines his sitting betweene the Cherubimes: as if he should say; Thou hast placed thy throne here, and hast promised protection to such as call vpon thee before the Arke of the couenant: now resting my selfe vpon this promise,

I come

Exod.25.18. I come to thee as to the only gardian of my ſafetie. But Hezekias doubtleſſe had reſpect to the forme of the Arke, which was ſhadowed with Cherubims. Some expound theſe Cherubims, Angels, as if it were ſaid, God reignes in heauen, and ſits among the Angels. But this expoſition ſutes not. For it is ſaid, that he ſits betweene the Cherubims, becauſe of the Arke which was thus compoſed. Now wee know it was a true and certaine ſigne of Gods preſence, albeit his power was not ſhut vp within the ſame: but Hezekias in mentioning thereof meant to affirme, that God was there preſent, becauſe he had vouchſafed to gather his people vnto him, by ſtretching his wings (as you would ſay) ouer them. For as much then as there is a great diſtance of place betweene God and vs, Hezekias layes hold vpon this notable pledge of adoption, and yet kept he his mind free from being tainted with any carnall conceits touching Gods Maieſtie, whereinto the ſuperſtitious plunge themſelues, who ſtriue by all meanes to draw him downe from heauen: but the King contenting himſelfe with faith in the promiſes which he had receiued, concludes, that he needed not to ſeeke farre for Gods fauorable preſence.

Let vs obſerue this phraſe of ſpeech well therefore, which teacheth vs to mount by little and little vnto heauen by the light of the promiſes which doe ſhine clearely before vs: yet ſo, that in ſeeking ſuccour, we imagin not that God ſhould be abſent from vs, ſeeing he hath choſen his dwelling place in the mids of vs. For in regard that his Maieſtie much ſurmounts heauen and earth, it is not lawfull for vs to bound him within the narrow ſcantling of our vnderſtanding: yet we may comprehend him according to the ſmall meaſure thereof, becauſe he hath reuealed himſelfe vnto vs by his word: not that we muſt needs pull him downe from his heauenlie throne therefore; but that our minds which are of themſelues weake and dull, might by degrees approach neerer and neerer vnto him: for we haue good reaſon to preſſe with boldnes towards his highnes, in regard he calles vs vnto him by his word and Sacraments.

If the ſpirituall knowledge of God beares ſway in our hearts, we ſhall not need to tye his preſence to ſtocks or ſtones.

And if we conceiue of theſe things aright, the ſpirituall knowledge of God ſhall alwaies beare ſway amongſt vs, ſo as wee ſhall not need to tye the Lord any more to ſtones nor ſtocks. No, we ſhall imagin nothing of him that is earthlie or carnall: for the neeter we ſhall draw towards him, the more will we endeuour our ſelues to vſe all lawfull meanes which he ſets before vs, that our ſpirits may not reſt vpon earthlie things: for he applies himſelfe to our ſhallownes only, to the end that his Sacraments might ſerue vs as ladders to climb vp vnto him by: but this ſuperſtition hath peruerted and turned it to a cleane contrarie vſe.

Verſ. 17. Incline thine eare, O Lord, and heare: open thine eyes, O Lord, and ſee, & heare all the words of Sennacherib, who hath ſent to blaſpheme the liuing God.

HEnce we gather in how great perplexitie Hezekias was: for the vehemencie of his prayer diſcouers vnto vs a wonderfull meaſure of griefe, ſo as a man may ſee that he indured great combates which he ouercame not without much adoe. For albeit the affection and zeale of his prayer ſhewes the ſtrength and power of his faith; yet he therein repreſents vnto vs as in a glaſſe his paſſions that boiled within him. As ſoone then as we are to indure any ſuch aſſaults, let vs learne from the example of this good King to oppoſe againſt the paſſions wherewith we are toſſed, that which may beſt ſerue for the confirming of our faith, that by the tempeſt it ſelfe we may be brought to a ſafe and quiet hauen. Let not the ſenſe of our weakenes any whit aſtoniſh vs then; no, not when feare and dread ſhall preſſe vs aboue meaſure as it were. For the Lord will haue vs wreſtle valiantlie euen till we ſweate and tremble, becauſe we muſt not thinke to goe to heauen in a fetherbed, or at eaſe, as we vſe to ſpeake, but after many combates God hath promiſed an happie iſſue to them that fight as they ought to doe, which in the end he will vndoubtedlie beſtow vpon vs.

God will haue vs wreſtle till we tremble and ſweate.

But why doth Hezekiah deſire God to heare? Thinks he that he ſleepes, or vnderſtands not? No ſuch matter. But wee are wont to ſpeake thus in ſome deſperat caſes, either when wee thinke God abſent, or when hee ſeemes to make light account of our afflictions. Wee ſee he was ſo perplexed then that God (as he thought) had forgotten him; that is to ſay, according to the ſenſe of the fleſh: for had he not beheld him preſent by the eies of faith, he had vtterlie quailed. It is as much then as if Hezekias had deſired the Lord euen effectuallie and openlie to ſhew ſome worke for his ſaluation, which he had long hoped for before in the ſecret of his heart.

1
2

But why doth he pray that God would open his eies, and ſee? It is as much as if he had ſaid, Lord, let it appeare that thou haſt care of theſe matters. Now he ſufficientlie ſhewes where his paine held him moſt, namely, he longed to ſee ſome vengeance ſhewed vpon theſe blaſphemers which offred ſuch outrage againſt Gods Maieſtie: for albeit this good King tooke great thought for the preſeruation of his kingdome and people, yet had he reſpect vnto Gods glorie aboue all other commodities whatſoeuer. And truly the aduancement thereof ſhould touch vs neerer, and moue vs more then any thing elſe, eſpeciallie when we know that his glorie and our ſaluation are things that can not be ſeparated.

Hezekias reſpected Gods glorie aboue all things whatſoeuer.

Thus Hezekias hauing brought forth this Tyrant vpon the ſtage as a blaſphemous and hatefull enemie of God, becauſe Ieruſalem gloried in this title, The God of Iacob, and in his protection, he thereupon concludes, that God can by no meanes caſt off his Citie which he hath taken into his owne cuſtodie, vnleſſe therewithall he ſhould renounce his owne nami

name alſo. Seeing the Lord then of his infinit bountie is pleaſed to ioine his glorie with our ſaluation, let vs hold faſt theſe promiſes, and let vs fortifie our ſelues with them, namely, that although the wicked goe on in a vaine hope, thinking to ſcape ſcotfree whileſt they blaſpheme God, and caſt vp that poiſon out of their hearts which lurked before in them, yet there is not a ſillable thereof which he vnderſtands not, and he will in his due time bring them to an account for the ſame.

Verſ. 18. Truth it is, O Lord, that the Kings of Aſſour haue deſtroyed all lands, and their countrie.

19. And haue caſt their gods in the fire: for they were no Gods, but the worke of mans hands, euen wood or ſtone: therefore they deſtroyed them.

HEzekias begins here to put a difference betweene the true God and the falſe, which we alſo had need diligentlie to do: for the wicked that are not enlightened haue many confuſed thoughts of ſome diuinitie, which by and by vaniſheth away, ſo as either they thinke there is no God at all, or if there be, yet they regard him not. But God would not haue vs lightlie touched with ſome idle or vading conceit of him, but that we ſhould acknowledge him to be the true God, who by the brightnes of his power ſcatters abroad all the darknes of ignorãce. It is not enough then you ſee to acknowledge a diuinitie of I can not tell what, as prophane ones do, but God ought to be ſo knowne and receiued, that he be diſcerned from all Idols; and the truth ſeparated from lyes. And queſtionleſſe, when he hath once cleared our iudgements; all opinion of falſe religions which poſſeſſed our minds before, will immediatlie fall to the ground.

What knowledge of God is required to be in Chriſtians.

And ſo much the rather are we to hold faſt this doctrine, by how much the more many pleaſe themſelues in fond ſpeculations, thinking it ſufficient for them if they acknowledge a God at randon. Whether they ought to worſhip the god of the Turks or Iewes they know not: and thus they houer in the ayre, and touch neither heauen nor earth, as they ſay. There is not a worſe plague to be found, then ſuch an imagination, for thereby the true God and Idols are mingled together, whoſe Maieſtie is then tumbled downe from his throne, vnleſſe hee bee held as ſupreme head, and all falſe gods with their worſhip laid at his feet. The beginning of true pietie therefore conſiſts in a wiſe diſtinguiſhing of this only God, from all the troupe of idoll gods.

But Hezekias vſeth two reaſons by which he ſhewes they were no Gods. Firſt, becauſe they were made of corruptible matter: Secondly, they were the worke of mens hands. Now what is more abſurd then to ſee a man ſo much paſt ſhame as to be the forger of a God; not only becauſe himſelfe is not eternall, and God is: but becauſe he can not conſiſt by his owne power, not ſo much as one minute of an howre. For example, let all the world doe their vtmoſt to put all the wit & force thereof into one man if it could be, yet is he not able to make a poore flea: what pride is it then for a man at his pleaſure to put his hands to the worke, and to forge as many gods to himſelfe as he liſt? for ſeeing all that is in vs is meerely earthlie and tranſitorie, we can expect but treene gods to come from the worke of our owne hands. Adde further, that it is the greateſt follie in the world to imagin vnder pretext of arte, to faſten a kind of diuinitie to a corruptible and an inſenſible block; as if a peece of wood or ſtone began then to be god, as ſoone as it hath ſome purtraiture giuen vnto it. Thus we may eaſily ouerthrow all the ſuperſtitions which men haue inuented: for ſtedfaſtnes and conſtancie muſt be ſought further off then in mens ſhallow braines: nay, I ſay more, all that which they haue inuented in that ſhop, is condemned as lyes, and things of nought.

All the world not able to forme a ſillie flea.

No follie like this, to imagin that a piece of wood ſhould become a God as ſoon as the workman by arte hath giuen ſome forme or ſhape vnto it.

Verſ. 20. Now therefore, O Lord our God, ſaue thou vs out of his hand, that all the kingdomes of the earth may know that thou only art the Lord.

NOw this good King in the concluſion of his prayer ouercomes all feare, againſt which he had fought a long time; for there is no doubt but the helps wherewith he hath hitherunto furniſhed himſelfe, did much incourage him with boldnes to adde this ſhort clauſe. Now albeit God deliuers vs not alwaies from outward troubles, yet in regard he had promiſed to preſerue and keepe the Citie, Hezekias was bold to beleeue that this tyrant which plotted his ouerthrow, ſhould little auaile by any of his deuices. And whereas he againe vrgeth the Lord with this motiue, That his glorie ſhall be wonderfullie aduanced, by the deliuerance of this Citie: thence we gather, that we ought to wiſh nothing more then to ſee the ſame floriſh euery maner of way: for it is the principall end of our ſaluation, from which we muſt not turne one iot, if we thinke to find him mercifull vnto vs. In the ſecond place we gather hence, that ſuch are vnworthie of Gods help, who contenting themſelues only with their owne ſaluation, either forget, or ſet light by the end for which they are ſaued. For God by this vnthankfulnes is not only diſhonored, but they therein offer him great outrage in ſeparating thoſe things which at any hand ought to be ioined together. Doth not the glorie of his name ſhine in our ſaluation? And is it not the chiefeſt comfort and conſolation we haue, that it doth ſo, as we haue ſaid alreadie? Yes doubtleſſe.

1

Moreouer, Hezekiah not only deſires that the God of Iſrael may be onlie exalted of men, but would haue him exalted ſo farre forth, that all Idols alſo might be aboliſhed: for many Idolaters at that time would haue bin content that the true God had bin worſhipped amongſt the reſt of their dunghill gods; but becauſe he can away with none to ſit

check-mate

check mate with him, all the gods which men haue forged muſt bee brought to nought, that hee onely may obtaine the ſoueraigne Monarchy.

Verſ. 21. Then Iſaiah the ſonne of Amos ſent vnto Hezekiah, ſaying, Thus ſaith the Lord God of Iſrael; Becauſe thou haſt praied vnto me concerning Sennacherib King of Aſſur,

22. This is the word that the Lord hath ſpoken againſt him; The virgin, the daughter of Zion hath deſpiſed thee, and laughed thee to ſcorne: the daughter of Ieruſalem hath ſhaken her head at thee.

NOw behold the fruit of praier: for things being brought to an afterdeale, God ſuddenly reacheth Hezekias his hand, by the miniſterie of our Prophet Iſaiah. Not that hee ſo reached or ſtretched it forth, that the enemie was forthwith put to flight; but in promiſing deliuerance by Iſaiahs mouth, he ſtill exerciſeth the faith of his ſeruant. Now as the Prophet for his part, could not of himſelfe haue giuen this conſolation; ſo had it been but a ridiculous thing to haue promiſed it, vnleſſe Hezekias had alſo beleeued that this meſſage was ſent him from God. He therfore contented himſelfe with this bare promiſe, waiting in ſilence till God ſhould manifeſt his power. Now by this wee are taught, that it is our dutie at all times to aske counſell of the Lord, if we meane to feele his comforts in our afflictions and diſtreſſes: for if we ſet light by the meſſage which he ſends vs by the miniſterie of his faithfull ſeruants, we are then vtterly vnworthy to receiue any conſolation from him. But albeit wee be neuer ſo well inſtructed, and filled as it were with the knowledge of this doctrine, yet it ſtands vs in hand to know it euery day better and better, ſtill drawing thence new teſtimonies to confirme our faith withall, to the end we may haue remedies at hand when new aſſaults ſhall befall vs, and may not at any time bee deſtitute of comfort in the middeſt of our greateſt calamities: for hee that is beſt furniſhed and fortified this way, can neuer bee too well prouided. We haue in Hezekias here a ſingular example of faith and conſtancie; and yet the Lord contents not himſelfe to haue comforted him once, and by one prophecie onely; as in verſe 6,7. but he now confirmes his faith many waies; that we who are far ſhort of that conſtancie which was in him, might learne to know what need wee haue of many helpes for the ſuſtaining and vpholding of our faith continually.

God will haue our faith ſtill exerciſed.

1

2

Becauſe thou haſt praied vnto me.] The holy hiſtorie expreſſeth no more but this verbe, I haue heard thee: the word becauſe therefore is a relatiue in that place: but here it is an expoſitiue, or a particle of giuing a reaſon, as in many other places. For it is forced and conſtrained to ſupply the verbe To heare; as manie expoſitors doe: and the ſentence runnes well being reade as it is; when God therein ſhewes that he will ouerthrow all the practiſes of Sennacherib, and repreſſe his violence and furie, becauſe Hezekias hath praied. As if he ſhould ſay; I giue thee ſuch an anſwer as fits thy requeſt. And doubtleſſe whoſoeuer he be that directs his praier vnto God, hee ſhall in the end feele how much the Lord is inclined to anſwer: indeede hee often holds his peace, and offers vs no conſolation by his word, but it is becauſe wee haue been mute in our afflictions.

Aske, and it ſhal be giuen you. Mat 7. 7 See Ezech. 36.37.

The ſumme of the prophecie comes to this; that Hezekias, as feeble and deſtitute as hee was of all ſuccour, yet needed not for all that to feare in beholding this tyrant ſo to aduance himſelfe: for God would be the moderator in this caſe, who proteſts that hee will take the quarrell into his owne hand: as if he ſhould ſay; Sennacherib indeed hath offered outrage againſt thee and thy people, but the weight of it falles vpon my Maieſtie. And thus he ſhewes that hee will be reuenged of the heathen that knew not his name; and withall admoniſheth the faithfull not to ſorrow as men without hope, if the world for a time doe tread them vnder foote, for he hath ſtore of ſuccours readie in heauen to ſuſtaine their infirmities. But it hath much greater force, in that he ſpeakes to the whole Church, then if he had ſpoken to Hezekias particularly: for this circumſtance augments the indignitie of the fact, becauſe Sennacherib ſcorned the meane eſtate of this poore people, as if Gods helpe had been a matter of nothing. The Prophet then taxeth the blindneſſe of this Tyrant, who hauing no reſpect vnto God, thus proudly inſulteth ouer his poore and deſolate Church.

It is an vſuall thing in the Scriptures, to call Cities daughters: ſometimes goodlie Cities alſo are called virgins, as we haue noted before in another place. But heere Iſaiah meant to note out Ieruſalems weakneſſe, who was as a poore virgin, ſuccourleſſe and comfortleſſe, which this vile ruffian, and curſed cutthrote vexed and reuiled: whereas God on the other ſide, as the father to whom this iniury was offered, ſhewes that he is acquainted well enough with the plots of this miſcreant, as alſo in what eſtate the whole land of Iudea was.

1

2

Verſ. 23. Whom haſt thou railed on and blaſphemed? And againſt whom haſt thou exalted thy voice, and lifted vp thine eies on high? euen againſt the holy one of Iſrael.

IN the verſe before going, he deſcribed the matter as if it had been ſeen and heard of all: now hee raiſeth their thoughts higher, ſhewing that the Tyrant hath not onely bent himſelfe againſt Ieruſalem, but againſt her God alſo. Let this place come to our remembrance as oft as we are expoſed to the ſcoffes and taunts of the wicked: for albeit wee are forlorne, and there be no eye to pitie vs, nor any any to plead our cauſe, in regard of the enemies rage which is more and more inflamed againſt vs, yet our God is at hand, who will couer vs in ſuch wiſe, as we ſhall haue ſtrẽgth and defence ſufficient: for all they that perſecute vs, doe not onely war with vs, but with him which is the liuing God. Theſe things were not written for one age alone; but rather as this promiſe is perpetuall, I will be thy buckler, and thine exceeding great reward: A friend to thy friends, and an an enemie to thy enemies: Gen. 17. 7. ſo, euen then when wee haue leaſt meanes and ſtrength to reſiſt, let vs bee ſo much the more reſolued, that the hand of our God is the neerer to deliuer vs. Since God hath been pleaſed then in the perſon of Abraham to ſtrike a couenant with vs, vpon condition that himſelfe will alwaies take our quarrell into his owne hands: let vs aſſure our ſelues, that he will faithfully performe his promiſe, and will manifeſt it, that the wrong which is done vnto vs, redounds to his owne perſon. In a word, he is ſo made one with vs in his Chriſt, that hee will haue ours made his, and that which is his, made common to vs.

This ſentence ought to be called to mind whē the Church is afflicted.

Gen. 15. 1.

God perfects his power in weaknes.

To be ſhort, hee is ſo conioined with vs, that he meanes to make a communitie of all that is his and ours together. And therefore hee tooke the outrages and wrongs which Sennacherib did to the Church, as done to his own perſon: to ſhew, that wicked men greatly abuſe themſelues, when they are puffed vp with an ouerweening of their own greatneſſe, as if therefore forſooth they ſhould eſcape vnpuniſhed, when they haue trod the poore Church vnder their feet. For we know they baſely eſteeme of God his prouidence, and eſpecially when they ſee the faithfull lie panting vnder the burthen of the Croſſe and afflictions, they thinke them vnworthy the ſuccor of God: who for that cauſe awakes himſelfe as it were, and declares by vnanſwerable arguments, that he is no leſſe wronged when his little flocke is thus halled to and fro, then if open violence were offered to his owne Maieſtie. Let it be granted then that our enemies thinke our God cares not for vs, when outward meanes faile vs, and that they then ſpoile with greater liberty, as if we were giuen into their hands for a pray; yet God on the contrarie affirmes, that our ſaluation is deere and pretious ſtill vnto him.

But our Prophet with many wordes ſets forth the pride and inſolencie of this tyrant, as of a man altogether inſupportable; to wit, in his ſpeeches, lookes, and geſtures which hee vſed with head, hands, feete, and all the parts of his body: for as ſuch proud tyrants haue a vaine conceit of their owne greatneſſe, ſo they aduance themſelues, and behold others with a ſcornefull eye; as if they were ſome pettie gods, newly fallen from the cloudes. For a concluſion, Iſaiah addes, that albeit the affaires of this people went but meanly forward, yet God notwithſtanding, who holds them vnder his protection, remaines in heauen, and is as almighty as euer he was: wherein he taxeth the madneſſe of Sennacherib, who eſteemed the people according to the outward appearance, neuer conſidering that they were dedicated and conſecrated vnto God. That wee then may reſt ſafely and ſecurely vnder his power and protection, and that he may ſpread his armes ouer vs for our ſuccour in the time of neede; we muſt for our parts be ſure that we be his Iſrael; which wee ſhall be, if reſting vpon his word and promiſes, wee quietly ſit vs downe vnder the ſhadow of his wings.

Verſ. 24. By thy ſeruants haſt thou railed on the Lord, and ſaid; By the multitude of my chariots, I am come vp to the top of the mountaines, to the ſides of Lebanon, and will cut downe the high Cedars thereof, & the firre trees thereof: and I will goe vp to the heights of his toppe, and to the forreſt of his fruitfull places.

SEe how the indignitie and ſpightfulneſſe of this outrage is further amplified; for the iniurie that is offered by a ſeruant, is not ſo eaſilie put vp, as when it is done by the maſter; becauſe the baſeneſſe of the perſon makes the wrong euermore intollerable. And therefore the proud ones of the world, when they will threaten in the moſt deſpightfull ſort, they will brag that their wils ſhall be executed by their ſeruants and horſekeepers: that they may make it knowne, how baſely they eſteeme of thoſe whom they purpoſe to miſchiefe. By this circumſtance then the Prophet meant to ſhew how execrable this blaſphemie was, when Sennacherib was not content to vomit it out of his owne mouth; but had ſet on his ſeruant Rabſhekeh, to make him rent the ſacred name of God in peeces.

As touching that which is recited afterward in the perſon of Sennacherib, ſome take it generally for the former victories which hee had wonne, and by this meanes had ſubdued many nations, as we haue ſaid before: but I had rather take it more particularly, in referring it to this laſt ſiege. For when he ſaw the whole land in a maner vnder his obeiſance, and the mountaines which inuironed all the Coũtry, poſſeſſed by his ſouldiers, he brags as if he had gotten all, and threatens that hee will inioy the caſtels, mount Libanon with his Cedars, fir-trees, and other commodities: as if he ſhould ſay; Nothing ſhall let me to be maſter of all the forts of Iudah, and to deale with the Country as I thinke good. See how Tyrants glory that the good ſucceſſes of their warres are in their owne hands, although often conſtreined to acknowledge the fight to be dangerous.

Verſ. 25. *I haue digged and drunke the waters, and with the plant of my feete haue I dried all the riuers * cloſed in.*

* Or, of the ſiege.

THis Tyrant proceeds here, glorying ſtill in his forces, and threatens to bring ſo mighty mightie an armie, that the multitudes of his souldiers shall be able to drinke the fountaines and riuers of Iewrie drie. By the riuers of the siege, some vnderstand the riuer Shilo, and the Cisterns which the besieged Iewes could not lose but they must forthwith perish for thirst. Yet in the first member he seemes to affirme, that he feares no want of water, though the whole countrie were destitute of it, because he hath men enow to digge pits. In the second place he saith, he is furnished with meanes sufficient to drie vp all the waters of the Citie, thinking thus to terrifie the Iewes. His meaning in a word is, that Ierusalem will not be able to indure the siege, nor be able to stand out long against him, but must forthwith be constreined to yeeld. Now when the wicked make their vants on this maner, God sits in heauen, whence at the last he will denounce his iust sentence against them. For the Prophets discourse tends to informe vs of Gods iust and wonderfull iudgement against this Tyrant.

The prophets drift in this narration.

Vers. 26. Hast thou not heard how I haue of old time made it, and haue formed it long agoe? And should I now bring it, that it should be destroyed and laid on ruinous heapes as Cities defenced?

THe expositors for the most part expound this verse as if the Lord should say, That this Tyrant neither hath done nor shall doe any thing but that he hath foretold by the mouth of his Prophet, and thus affirmes, that himselfe is the author of these things. But I expound it otherwise; to wit, that Ierusalem shall be deliuered by Gods assistance, because he is the protector of it: and that his speech might haue the more weight, he names not the Citie, but vseth the pronoun demonstratiue, as if all other Cities were nothing in Gods account in comparison of this.

Others referre these words, I haue made it, to the deliuerance which depended vpon the secret counsell of God: but whosoeuer shall diligentlie weigh the scope of the Prophets words, will confesse that it is here spoken of Ierusalem. God complained, as we haue seene, that he was so despightfullie blasphemed; and yet in reciting the words of Senacherib he only mentioned Libanon, and the quarters adioining: now to shew that vnder the name of Libanus, warre was proclaimed against himselfe, he affirmes (as in many other places) that Ierusalem was founded with his hand, and built at his command: whence it followes, that Senacherib could not ouerthrow it, vnlesse he first plucked God downe from his throne.

This doctrine is often met withall in the Scriptures, and wonderfull comfort is conteined in it, vpon which the faithfull may at all times boldlie leane in all their trials and afflictions, be they neuer so hard and difficult to be borne; to wit, that they shall euer be preserued vnder Gods protection, because he hath elected them. For thus stands the argument, I haue made and formed the Church: the saluation of it shall stand for euer, because I will not leaue the worke that I haue begun vnfinished, but will bring it vnto perfection. In a word, the Lord testifies that he will goe on with his worke, and will preserue it, because it concernes his owne honor, and our saluation. Phil. 1. 6.

Gods argument in this place.

Moreouer, he is called the former of his Church in another sense then that in which he is said to be the Creator of heauen and earth: for we are his peculiar workmanship, saith S. Paul, being reformed by his Spirit: of which point we haue spoken heretofore in other places. This worke therefore of all others is the most excellent, yea, aboue the creation of the whole world. Be it farre from any man therefore to affirme that he was incorporated into the Church by his owne power or industrie: for it is not without cause that we are called his workemanship, Ephe. 2. 10. Ephes. 2. 10.

But it may be demanded why the Lord saith he formed Ierusalem long agoe, for there were many Cities more ancient then it. I answere, that this ought not to be referred to the outward forme or building, but to the eternall decree of God, according to which he had chosen this Citie for his dwelling place. For albeit it was then only said when the Arke was made, This is my rest, here will I dwell, Psal. 132. 14. And by Moses, I will come vnto thee into the place wherein I shall put the remembrance of my name, and I will blesse thee, Exod. 20. 24: yet had God long before ordeined it. For we were chosen before the foundations of the world were laid, as S. Paul teacheth, Ephes. 1. 4. And S. Iames saith, That we were begotten by the word of truth, that we might be the first fruites of his creatures, Iam. 1. 18. He will then conserue vs aboue all his creatures, and will neuer suffer vs to perish. Now as Christ is called the first borne of euery creature, Colos. 1. 13. so the Church also, which is his bodie, obteines in this world the preheminence of dignitie and honour. Quest. Ans.

I leaue the Rabbins to their rauings, when they say, that God created the Messiah and Ierusalem with a throne of glorie before he formed heauen or earth. But we must hold this principle, that he will be the faithfull gardian of his Church, seeing he hath vouchsafed to preferre it before all the world besides. Ranings of the Rabbins.

As touching that which followes in the end of the verse, And should I now bring it to this point? Some draw it to a sense altogether wrested. I denie not but the Prophets words are in the preterperfectence; Now I haue brought it, and put it: but because ỹ change of the tence is very familiar and vsuall in the Hebrue tongue, it is certaine that the Prophet hauing affirmed that God is in such wise the former of his Church, that it is the chiefest of all his works, he now thence concludes, that it can not be ruinated as other common things are. It must be read by an Interrogation then, Shall I bring it now, or, should I suffer it to be brought? As if he should say, Should I suffer it to be raced as other Cities which are quite ouerthrowne and laid on heapes? For he compares Ierusalem with other Cities which were destroyed and subdued by the Assyrian, that so they they might know that this Tyrant should not so easily obtaine that which he desired, because the difference is great betweene it and other Cities which haue beene raced to the foundation. It must not be compared then with other Cities how well fortified soeuer they be, because they with the earthlie matter of which they consist, shall easily fall: but albeit the Church be but weake and feeble in outward shew, yet hath shee such a stable and firme foundation laid in Gods secret election, that it can neuer be ouerturned by any tempests whatsoeuer.

The glory of the Roman Empire gone.

We see strange changes haue befallen the world: Commonwealths haue been turned topsie turuie, Empires abolished, mightie nations subdued, and their renowne and glorie extinguished. What is now become of the glory of the Roman Empire? What is become of the Nobles of this people, who were the Lords of all the earth? If any reliques thereof remaine (which is very small) is it not brought vnder the miserable slauerie of that cursed monster, I meane Antichrist, who exerciseth his tyranny ouer al the earth? Where is now the liberty which Rome once inioied? Where is that goodly forme of a Commonwealth, which was once to be seene there? Rome may now well be called the shop of all mischiefe and impietie, and a cage of euery vncleane bird? But in the midst of all these horrible confusions, the Lord shewes that he wil preserue Ierusalem; that is to say, his Church: and albeit among these changes, she be tossed vp and downe, and diuersly afflicted, yet she shall stand fast notwithstanding. At least, the shakings and persecutions which she suffers, shall not hinder her so, that by many resurrections (as it were) she should not still be reuiued and multiplied from age to age. Now although the members of the Church are not alwaies of one ranke in this world, yet it is one and the same body knit by ioints and bands to one head Iesus Christ. Thus then, The Lord will keepe and defend the Citie, and will cause the children of his seruants to continue, that their seede may be established for euer: Psal.102.28.

That Antichrist of Rome, an execrable monster.

Rome may now be called the shop of al impiety.

*Or, For the. *Ebr. are short in hād.

Vers. 27. Whose inhabitants haue small power, and are afraid and confounded: They are like the grasse of the field and greene hearb, or, grasse on the house toppes, or corne blasted before it be growne.

THe Prophet now better expresseth that which hee touched in briefe before, to wit, that the estate of the Church is not to be iudged according to that which she is in this world: for though the strongest Cities be taken, that the most valiant doe faile in heart, and fall into their enemies hands; yet the Church shall remaine and florish, because she rests not vpon her owne strength, neither hath she her foundation from earth, but from heauen. For there is a close opposition here betweene strong Cities which the inhabitants cannot keepe, because they are frighted and troubled; and the Church of God, which being vpheld by his onely grace, sustaines all assaults, and is neuer vanquished: for she referres all things to God onely, who giues her beginning and being, continues her strength, indues her with constancie and all sorts of benefits: in a word, with all the parts of her saluation. Hence we are taught, that all the fortresses in the world are nothing, vnlesse God be the watchman. All the forces of men are but as shiuering reeds, vnlesse they be sustained by his power: castels, ramparts, and weapons, bee they neuer so many and inuincible, without him, shall serue their turnes nothing at all.

This is yet better expressed by the similitudes which are added. For it was necessarie that the faithfull should bee well informed touching the loue and singular affection which the Lord bare towards them, lest they should be offended at the prosperitie of the prophane and wicked. Albeit humane forces then be neuer so glorious in outward appearance, and make all the goodly shewes that can be deuised; yet the Prophet affirmes that it is but like the grasse and flowers of the field, which are greene and florish for a time, and suddenly are gone. He abaseth them more by the other similitude which hee ads touching the grasse vpon the house tops, whose stalkes are high and easie to be seene of all: but if they grow vpon any high place, then are they neerest their withering, being neuer fit for any vse: as the Psalmist saith; for the reaper filles not his hand, nor the gleaner his lap; and therefore the passers by say not so much as God speed you: Psal.129.6,7. So albeit the enemies of the Church be like the tall Cedars, whose toppes touch the heauens as it were, and florish by inioying the world at will, yet shall they in a moment wither and come to nothing. As the corne then which growes on the ground, serues to much better vse then the vnfruitfull grasse which growes on the house top, so the Lord shewes that the base and abiect condition of his seruants, is much more excellent then theirs, who by reason of their power, exalt themselues so farre, as to iustle against the Lord of heauen and earth.

The first Simile.

The second Simile.

Some thinke that that which is added touching the corne blasted, should be the fourth similitude: but as I thinke the Prophet would haue it serue as an exposition of the former similitude: as if he should say; This grasse shall wither away afore it is come to a stalke or to any ripenesse. As the Psalmist also saith, It withereth before it be plucked vp.

Vers. 28. But I know thy dwelling, and thy going out, and thy comming in; and thy furie against me.

HE returneth and toucheth the insupportable pride of this Tyrant, who attributed I wot not what to himselfe, as if he had been inferiour to none: yea, he durst blaspheme and raile vpon the liuing God, as if he had been nothing in comparison of him. But God takes downe his pride and arrogancie:

cie: as if he ſhould ſay, yet doe I know all thy hauntes well enough; yea, thy ſitting downe, and riſing vp. The wicked exalt themſelues, thinking they ſhould be ſubiect to none, no not to the prouidence of God it ſelfe: but he ſhewes, that they haue no more power but that which is giuen them from aboue.

Sitting and going forth is taken here for conſultations, imaginations, and enterpriſes of the profane and wicked, who inuent ſundrie plots how they may ouerwhelme and deſtroy the people of God: but on which ſide ſoeuer they turne themſelues, and what way ſoeuer they take to bring their purpoſes to paſſe, yet they ſhall not performe a iot more then God hath willed. For they are reſtrained by his prouidence, which drines them to and fro, and often turnes their wicked plots to a good end, though they meant the cleane cõtrarie. But God (whoſe proper office it is to direct mens paths, Pro.20.24.) conducts them which way it pleaſeth him.

He ſaith alſo, I know thy furie: thereby minding to ſhew, that whileſt the wicked play the bedlems on earth, God ſits ſtill in heauen laughing their madnes to ſcorne. And becauſe Sennacherib behaued himſelfe malepertly, and thought to goe ſcot-free, the Prophet addes theſe words expreſſlie, to the end the faithfull ſhould not imagin this to be new, or vnknowne to the Lord, or as if he eſteemed them not.

Verſ. 29. *Becauſe thou rageſt againſt me, and thy tumult is come vp into mine eares, therefore will I put mine * hooke in thy noſtrils, and my bridle in thy lips, and will bring thee back againe the ſame way thou cameſt.*

* Or, ring.

THe more the wicked are caried away with rage, furiouſlie exalting themſelues againſt God, the more ſeuerely doth he at the laſt oppoſe himſelfe againſt their pride: He lets them take their ſwinge for a time, and ſuffers them to inioy the world at will, but after long forbearance he tames them, and reſtraines them, leſt they ſhould thinke they had all vnder their command. Sennacherib is a ſingular example hereof, for the more audacious he is to ſome out his rage and furie againſt God, the more heauie did he feele his wrath to fall vpon him whom he thus braued: which all the pack of perſecuters ought to expect as well as he.

Now he doth aptlie and pleaſantlie ſcorne the fond ouerweening of this Tyrant, as if he ſhould ſay, I ſee well enough how the world goes, I ſhall gaine nothing by handling thee gentlie, becauſe thy wrath is become deſperate: ſeeing then thou canſt not be tamed, Verſe 28. I will hamper thee like a wild beaſt. And thus God ſhewes more plainely, that he is not only acquainted with the plots and imaginations of this miſcreant, but ſo moderates and holds back his tyrannie, that in ſpight of his teeth he leades them whither ſoeuer he liſts: as if a wilde beaſt haue a ring put thorow his ſnout, a man may leade him whither he will. Some tranſlate the word Kaki, an hooke, but I had rather expound it a ring: becauſe an hooke is fitter to catch fiſh withall then wilde beaſts. Sennacherib then was conſtreined to turne from whẽce he came, and haſtned away without doing any thing; although his purpoſe was to haue poſſeſt Egypt and Iudah wholly: neither would he haue been diſappointed of his purpoſe willinglie if God had not drawne him away by his ſecret worke.

Verſ. 30. And this ſhall be a ſigne vnto thee, O Hezekiah, Thou ſhalt eate this yeere ſuch as groweth of it ſelfe: and the ſecond yeere ſuch things as grow without ſowing: and in the third yeere ſow yee, and reape, and plant vineyards, and eate the fruite thereof.

NOw he directs his ſpeech vnto Hezekias and to all the people: for he ſpake not before to Sennacherib as if he had heard him; but it was to the end he might the better quicken vp the people to be of good courage, ſeeing the Lord did thus deſpiſe this Tyrant. If he had only ſaid, Hezekias, be of good comfort, albeit Sennacherib inſults ouer thee, yet I will repreſſe his pride when I ſee it fit; theſe words (I ſay) had not been of ſuch efficacie, as when togeather with the ſame he turnes his ſpeech towards the Tyrant himſelfe, in thundring from heauen vpon him: for by this meanes he imboldens the faithfull to ſet light by all his threates. Therefore hauing firſt ſpoken to the Tyrant, now he turnes himſelfe very fitlie vnto Hezekias and to the people, promiſing them deliuerance: and that not only out of the pawes of this cruell beare, but alſo that Hezekias ſhould inioy his kingdome ſtill in peace and proſperitie, and that the reſt of the people ſhould likewiſe haue all things neceſſarie for an happie and quiet life. And thus he amplifies the benefit of their deliuerance, the rather to ſhew that he will not only ſuccor his people in one kind only, but many waies: for in deed his deliuerãces are not only limitted to once or twice, but he would haue vs feele his benefits in large and in abundant meaſure, that the fruit thereof might laſt for a long time.

But it ſeemes the Prophet fits not his ſigne Obiect.
to the preſent purpoſe, ſeeing that which he promiſeth came not to paſſe till after they were deliuered: for if God meant hereby to comfort theſe poore beſieged ones, it was now ŷ fitteſt time (one would haue thought) to haue ſhewed his power, and not to haue deferd it till the ſiege had been raiſed. I an- Anſ.
ſwere, there are two ſorts of ſignes, one goes Two ſorts before, and leades vs by the hand as it were of ſignes.
to the thing promiſed, the other comes after 1 and confirmes it, that it may ſtick faſt in our 2 memories, neuer to be raced out. As for example, when the Lord brought Iſrael out of Egypt, he gaue many ſignes afore hand vnto Moſes, but afterward he ordained one which ſhould follow the deliuerance: to wit, You ſhall ſacrifice vnto me three daies, Exod.3.12. Why ſo? To the end they ſhould not forget ſo great a benefit, but might yeeld him thanks, after they had had experience of ſo exceeding a fauour.

Such a ſigne is ỹ which Iſaiah here deſcribes: & queſtionles, it ſerues alſo for a good cõfirmatiõ of our faith, to haue ſuch an euerlaſting teſtimonie as it were ſtill before our eies, which may cauſe vs to conſider how many mercies ỹ Lord hath ſhewed vs. Now though the enemie was driuen back, yet there was great likelihood of famine to inſue, which vſualie followes warres: for it is not poſſible but great dearth muſt enſue where the fields haue beene waſted and ſpoiled. But againſt this neceſſitie which was likely to befall, the Lord promiſeth continuance of foode, and propounds this as an euident ſigne of their deliuerance, the better to perſwade the people that he was the author thereof, or at the leaſt, to fixe the memorie of it the faſter in their minds. This was a thing incredible, and ſeemed farre to ſurmount all their capacities: but it was needfull that the faith of Hezekias and the peoples alſo ſhould be thus awakened, that hauing intelligence of ſo rare a deliuerance, they might be the better prepared to hope, and that the iſſue alſo might ſhew how it came not to paſſe by chance or fortune; vnto which, for the moſt part, theſe ſo many admirable workes of God are attributed.

The Prophets meaning then is, After the Lord ſhall haue fraied the enemie away, he will hold him ſo ſhort, that he ſhall neuer be able to renue his armie againe: and thus thou ſhalt liue quietly in thy kingdome, which ſhall bring thee forth fruit in ſuch abundance, that thou ſhalt want nothing. Now in regard that part of their ſtore was ſpent, and the reſt waſted, as it comes to paſſe ordinarily in ſuch publike calamities, and that it was not permitted them to till the earth, being now either beſieged, or elſe fled; hee promiſeth them corne without ſowing, vnto the third yeere.

Verſ. 31. And the remnant that is eſcaped of the houſe of Iudah, ſhall againe take roote downeward, and beare fruit vpward.

THis appertaines to the former ſentence: for his meaning is, that the Lord will deliuer Ieruſalem in ſuch wiſe, that he will care for it alſo for the time to come, and will keepe it vnto the end. Truely all the benefits the Lord beſtowes vpon vs, are ſo many ſignes and teſtimonies of his perpetuall good will towards vs; to the end wee might aſſuredly know, that hee will neuer leaue nor forſake vs. But in this ſentence wee are chiefly to obſerue that which we haue alſo touched before; to wit, that the Lord defended Ieruſalem, becauſe hee had pitched his Sanctuarie there, out of which alſo the Meſſiah was to come. The word Peleath, properly ſignifies Deliuerance; but it is here vſed as a nowne collectiue, which ſignifies thoſe that are deliuered, or, are eſcaped: as in other places the word captiuitie, is taken for the captiues. Now it is not without cauſe that he promiſeth increaſe to this little remnant: for albeit the ſiege was raiſed, yet the people being much diminiſhed, they had ſmall cauſe to reioice: & it was a thing very vnlikely to expect a full reſtauration of ſuch an handfull of people.

That he might a little reuiue their ſorrowfull hearts then, he ſhewes that the Country ſhall be filled with inhabitans, no leſſe then if a faire and goodly plump of trees ſhould fill the granges which were emptie before. But it was not onely the waſte of the land of Iudah, which wounded the hearts of the faithfull thus with ſorrow, but the great diminution of the ten Tribes their brethren, which had alſo beene carried away captiues. Now albeit they were thus ſcattered, yet Iſaiah promiſeth that God would ſet them againe into their firſt eſtate, ſo as they ſhould multiply into an infinit number: for the Lord often ſuffers his to be diminiſhed & brought to nothing, that his glory may the better appeare afterwards in their deliuerance. And we at this day are to expect the like fauour from God, which he hath heretofore ſhewed to his people, that when wee ſee the Church at ỹ laſt caſt, giuing vp the ghoſt as it were; yet thẽ we may aſſure our ſelues notwithſtãding, that God hath meanes enow readie at hand to multiply this ſmall remnant againe. For ſuch a reſtauration muſt not be meaſured according to the ſcant ell of our reaſon.

God often ſuffers his people to be brought to low ebs, that his glory might the better appeare in their deliuerance.

But hee ſaith, the Church ſhall bee brought to ſo low an ebbe, that euerie one will eſteeme it quite forlorne, euen as if it were plucked vp by the rootes: and truly the kingdome of Iſrael was a moſt ſorrowfull ſpectacle of this plucking vp. Yet the Prophet in the name of God promiſeth ſuch an increaſe, that the tree which was ſtubbed vp by the rootes, ſhall againe take deeprooting downwards. Albeit the church then haue not that goodly outward hew & beautie which the kingdomes of this world haue, yet will the Lord giue it ſuch an inward and ſecret power, that by meanes thereof ſhee ſhall floriſh and grow; contrary to all hope and reaſon of fleſh and blood. Let vs not be out of heart then though the Church ſeeme to want rootes: neither let vs not thinke ſhe hath none, becauſe they appeare not to our ſight; for the Lord hath promiſed ſhe ſhall take roote downward.

The Church of God muſt liue by faith, and not by ſight.

Now hee addes the fruit alſo; becauſe the Church floriſheth not onely as the graſſe on the houſe top, which is the eſtate of the wicked, as we obſerued in the 27. verſe; but ſhee ſhall bring forth plentifull increaſe: and thus the Lord will finiſh in her the good worke he hath begun.

Verſ. 32. For out of Ieruſalem ſhall goe a remnant, and they that eſcape out of mount Zion: the zeale of the Lord of hoſts ſhall doe this.

BEfore, hee promiſed the deliuerance of the Church vnder the ſimilitude of rootes and fruits: now hee ſets it forth in plaine tearmes, without any figure. In theſe words therefore therefore he alludes to that ſiege of Sennacherib, which incloſed this ſmall remnant of people vp in Ieruſalem, as in a priſon; by meanes whereof they were brought to great extremitie. Now ſaith he, they ſhall come forth: that is to ſay, all paſſages ſhall be laid open, ſo as you ſhall walke to and fro againe at liberrie without any annoyance. For going forth, is here oppoſed to the ſtraits into which the poore Iewes were brought, in regard of the feare of their enemies. Albeit, this word not onely ſignifies libertie to goe and come, but the multiplying of the people which were few in number. When the land of Iudeah then was ouerſpread againe with great troopes, and that out of theſe ſmall remnants there came forth men and women like flocks of ſheepe, which were diſperſed into all the quarters of the world, it could neuer haue bin brought to paſſe, vnleſſe the Lord of this little handfull, had created, I will not ſay one, but many peoples.

Iſa. 30 26. 17.18.19. 20. & 31. 10,11.12,13. Zach. 8.2.3. 4.5.6.7.8.

He not onely oppoſeth the zeale of the Lord againſt the counſels of men, that hee might magnifie the excellencie of this worke; but alſo admoniſheth vs that it ſufficeth of it ſelfe for all reaſons wherefore the Lord ſhewes ſo wonderfull and admirable ſignes and tokens of his power. The matter in outward appearãce was incredible, as we haue ſaid: for there were many impediments on euery ſide, and helpes none at all. Thus God manifeſts then, that the loue he beares to his Church is ſuch, that it ſhall be no hard matter with him to worke extraordinarily for the maintenance of it. Hee vſed the like phraſe of ſpeech in Chap. 9.7.

Verſ. 33. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord concerning the King of Aſſur; Hee ſhall not enter into this Citie, nor ſhoote an arrowe there, nor come before it with ſhield, nor caſt a mount againſt it.

NOw he comes to the deliuerance whereof he ſpake before: for firſt, God promiſed to driue away Sennacherib, verſ. 29. ſecondly, hee promiſeth to furniſh the people with neceſſarie foode, albeit the Country was pilled and waſted: verſ. 30. Laſtly, that he will cauſe this ſmall remnant to increaſe into an infinite multitude: verſ. 31.32. Now hauing ſpoken of the two laſt points, he returnes againe to the firſt; becauſe without it, the other twaine had been little to purpoſe; to wit, vnleſſe the people had bin deliuered out of the hands of this Tyrant. God therefore promiſeth that himſelfe will ſtand as a braſen wall, to keepe him from entring in vpon them: yea, he would ſo preuent him, that he ſhould not ſo much as come neere to aſſaile them at all. For he ſaith, the enemies ſhall not ſhoote an arrow there. I thinke the word Sollah, ſhould be taken here for a croſſe-bow, or other inſtrument of war, with which they ſhot darts; rather then for a mount, for mounts cannot be caſt.

1 2 3

Verſ. 34. By the ſame way hee came ſhall he returne, and not come into this Citie ſaith the Lord.

WEe haue ſaid before, that to returne by the ſame way, ſignifies, To goe his way without performing any thing; as wee vſe to ſay in our common prouerbe; Hee went as wiſe as he came, when one returnes without doing that which he came for, and is preuented in all his enterpriſes. To confirme this, he addes that the Lord hath ſaid it. For no ſooner hath he (which cannot lie) ſpoken, but we ought forthwith to receiue and imbrace his word; and that no leſſe then if all impediments being taken away, we ſaw the effect by and by to take place.

Il n'en eſt retourné comme il eſt venu.

Verſ. 35. For I will defend this Citie to ſaue it, for mine owne ſake, and for my ſeruant Dauids ſake.

THis is the confirmation of the former ſentence, why Sennacherib ſhall not come into Ieruſalem; to wit, becauſe the Lord is her protector. The Prophet here then commands Hezekiah and all the people to turne their eies towards God, in regard the ſight of this Tyrant was ſo terrible vnto them, that they could doe nothing but tremble. As when we at this day ſhould conſider the power of our enemies, it would make vs quake for feare; in ſo much ỹ there ſhould reſt ſcarſly one dram of hope in vs: but we muſt notwithſtanding looke directly vp vnto God, and lay hold vpon his promiſes, and to fenſe our ſelues with them, as with a ſhield. It is to him, to him alone, I ſay, that we muſt turne our eies, ſeeing he hath power enough in himſelfe for vs to repreſſe the power of mortall man. For this promiſe muſt not be reſtrained to Hezekias his time onely, but it extends it ſelfe to all ages. And yet the Prophets words haue a more ample ſenſe: for he affirmes, that God himſelfe is the protector and keeper of the Citie, becauſe he had taken it into his cuſtodie. Thence therefore he concludes, that it muſt needes be out of danger, becauſe his defence is all-ſufficient.

This promiſe muſt not be reſtrained to Hezekias his time onely, but to ours alſo.

When he ſaith he will do it for his own ſake, he thereby brings Hezekias and all the people to the conſideration of the free couenant. The Iewes had been often rebuked, and that very ſharply; yet did they not ceaſe euen of ſet purpoſe to prouoke the wrath of God againſt them: in which regard, they not onely deſerued to be left to themſelues in the time of need, but that he ſhould inflict vpon them euident ſignes of his fearefull wrath and indignatiõ. That deſpaire might be preuented then, hee teacheth them that God will bee their defence: not that hee findes the cauſe thereof in them, but becauſe he reſpects his own name. Why ſo? Firſt, that his word might ſtand faſt, which was, that hee would neuer caſt off the poſteritie of Abraham, which hee had adopted, nor aboliſh his worſhippe, nor put out the remembrance of his name, though the Sanctuarie ſhould be deſtroied: 2 ſecondly, leſt hee ſhould expoſe his name to the blaſphemies & ſcornes of the heathen. There is therefore a ſecret rebuke included here, which this people deſerued to be galled withall, and that iuſtlie: for Hezekias no doubt had more adoe to quiet and ſtill the Iewes from their murmurings, then to chaſe away the enemie: for they tooke on no leſſe, then if all had been loſt. We muſt not thinke then that God had reſpect to the deſerts of the people, or to any other particular cauſe, but ſolely to his owne glorie. For wee muſt ſupplie a cloſe antitheſis here, which is expreſſed by Ezechiel: I do not this for your ſakes O houſe of Iſrael, but for mine holy names ſake, Ezech.36.22.

Ezek 31.32.

What refuge we are to flee to, in the conſcience of our vnworthines.

Now ſeeing the ſame reaſon holds ſtill in reſpect of vs, let vs boldlie oppoſe this buckler againſt all our ſinnes: Lord, although we are worthie by thy iuſt iudgements of a thouſand deaths, yet be thou pleaſed to accept of thine owne free mercie and goodnes to keep thy promiſe with vs. I grant, that hypocrites gaine nothing by this, that God is ſaid to be the perpetuall protector of his Church: but vnto this rock muſt all the faithfull learne to flee for refuge, though they come emptie handed of any thing of their owne to appeaſe his wrath withall: for he will neuer ſuffer his Church to periſh, becauſe he hath built and eſtabliſhed it with a purpoſe to keepe it: but the cauſe that moues him to doe it is nothing elſe but his owne free and infinit loues ſake.

Furthermore it is diligentlie to be noted when he addes, for Dauid my ſeruants ſake: for albeit it had been ſufficient for God to haue ſought the cauſe of our ſaluation only in his free and vndeſerued loue which he beares to his people: yet it is not without cauſe that he placeth a moſt certaine pledge of it in Dauid, in whoſe hand he had renued the couenant, promiſing to be his father. Neither doth the Prophet propound him here as a priuate perſon, but as that holy King, whoſe throne was eſtabliſhed by God, that vnder his gouernment ỹ Church might inioy peace and ſafetie. In a word, he was the mediator as it were betweene God and man, in which reſpect he was ſuperior to the very Angels: for he repreſented the perſon of Ieſus Chriſt.

2.Sam.7.14.

Now albeit ſoone after his Throne was throwne downe, and the Diadem torne in peeces, yet was not this confirmation vaine, that God would ſtill for a time keepe the Citie, becauſe he would in no ſort breake his promiſe made to Dauid in his truth, touching the perpetuitie of his kingdome. For wee know that his ſucceſſors loſt not the principalitie by the exile of the people till Chriſt came; who for this cauſe in Hoſea 3. 5. is called Dauid. By this we ſee how ridiculous the Papiſts are, whē they affirme we are pardoned by the merits of Saints: for there is great difference betweene the Saints and Dauid, in regard of the promiſe which was made vnto him. He might as well haue named Abraham, or any other renoumed Patriarke in the Church: but becauſe he now ſpeakes of the Church, and of the eternitie of Chriſtes kingdome, he ſpeciallie names him, whom aboue all others had expreſſlie receiued this promiſe, Behold, this is my reſt, here will I dwell: for I haue a delight therein, Pſal.132.14. Seeing the Prophet then reſpects the promiſe, and not the perſon, the Papiſts then are worthilie branded with ỹ name of abſurd Doctors, in thinking that the interceſſion of Saints (a dreame of their owne deuiſing) can be any whit confirmed by this place. Nay, that which they pretend here, directlie croſſeth their error: for Dauid which is heere placed betweene, beares the image of the only Mediator, who aboliſheth all newfound interceſſions. Reade 1.Tim.2.5. 1.Iohn 2. 1. 2.

Ezech.21. 26. 27.

Pſal.132.11.

Ieré.30.9. Ezech.37. 24.

Papiſts ridiculous in vrging the merits of Saints as a cauſe why God ſhould pardon vs.

The Prophet reſpects the promiſe, not Dauids perſon.

Verſ. 36. Then the Angell of the Lord went out, and ſmote in the Camp of Aſſhur an hundreth fourſcore and fine thouſand: ſo when they aroſe earely in the morning, Behold, they were all dead corpſes.

NOw the Prophet ſhewes what befell the Aſſyrian, that wee might not thinke the Lords words to be but winde: he teſtifies then that his propheſie tooke effect in deed; that ſo they might be the better perſwaded he was ſent of God, and had ſpoken nothing of his owne head. But this ſo admirable a worke muſt not be reſtrained to this one propheſie alone, but to the whole ſcope of his doctrine, which by this miracle was authoriſed, himſelfe knowne to be the ſeruant of God, and his calling ratified and confirmed. For doubtleſſe he annexeth this norable and rare example of Gods iuſtice as a thing then very freſh in mind, to teſtifie to the end of the world that it was God which ſpake by his mouth.

But now where the Angell made this ſlaughter, it appeares not. The common opinion is, that it happened whileſt Ieruſalem was beſieged; but it might well happen alſo in the way, that is to ſay, when Sennacherib came to lay ſiege againſt Ieruſalem. But I leaue it as a thing in ſuſpence, becauſe it is of no great moment: albeit we may eaſily iudge by the ſcope of the text, that this Tyrant came not ſo neere that he could throw any of his darts againſt the Citie.

Moreouer, we are to reiect an inuention of Satan, who hath indeuored by help of prophane hiſtories to darken ſo manifeſt and admirable a iudgement of God, which affirme, that part of Sennacheribs hoſt died of ỹ plague in the warres of Egypt, by reaſon whereof he was inforced to returne home into his owne countrie. But who will ſay that there died ſo many men of the peſtilence in one night? This father of lies (according to his ancient cuſtome) honors the Egyptians with this miracle, which God purpoſely wrought in fauor of his Church. The fact it ſelfe makes it more then manifeſt, that Ieruſalem was miraculouſlie deliuered, as from the gates of death, ſpeciallie if we way the meſſage which Iſaiah brought, as we haue ſeene before: by which he apparantlie teſtified that God wrought this this worke rather for the Iewes then for the Egyptians.

And leſt any man ſhould imagin this miracle came to paſſe by naturall cauſes, it is expreſſe added, that all this multitude was ſlaine by the ſtroke of an Angell. Now it is no vnwonted thing for God thus to vſe the miniſterie of Angels, in procuring the ſafetie of the faithfull, for whoſe ſakes he hath created all the armies of heauen. It alſo ſerues greatly for the confirmation of our faith, when we ſee there are ſo many thouſands of them which wait for our ſaluation. The Lord himſelfe is ſtrong enough, and his truth it is which onely keeps vs: Rom. 8. 38. For the Angels are but his hands as it were, in regard whereof, they Eph. 1. 21. are called powers and principalities: but hee prouides exceedingly for our weakneſſe, by giuing ſuch celeſtiall miniſters to be our gardians and protectors. And yet the whole glorie muſt be aſcribed to God alone, we are to acknowledge the Angels but his inſtruments; for otherwiſe wee ſhould eaſilie ſlip into the error of the Papiſts, who aſcribing more then is meete to them, doe rob God of his power, to clothe them with it. With which error alſo, the learnedſt men of our time haue bin bewitched, as we know.

Now we cannot affirme certainly whether this were done by the hand of one, or manie Angels; neither is it much materiall: for the Lord is able eaſily to effect one and the ſame thing, by one or a thouſand of them. For he vſeth not their miniſterie, as if hee ſtood in need of their helpe, but rather to ſupport our infirmitie, as we haue ſaid before: yet it is moſt probable, and anſwers beſt to the Prophets words, that one Angell alone had commiſſion to doe this ſeruice. Euen as in the antient deliuerance, one Angell paſſed thorow the land of Egypt in a night, to ſlay their firſt borne: Exod. 12. 29. Sometimes God alſo executes his iudgements by wicked angels: but he choſe one of his voluntarie ſeruants here, to deliuer his Church, as by his hand.

An hundred, fourſcore, and fiue thouſand.] We are not to maruell that this was ſo great an armie, as ſome ignorants doe, who eſteeme it but a fable, when they heare tell of ſuch an huge multitude of ſouldiers; becauſe a leſſe number ſerues the turne now a daies. But hiſtories doe plainly teſtifie, that the eaſterne people mannaged things cleane contrarie to vs; and it is to bee ſeene among them yet at this day. It was no maruell they brought ſo many forth to battel, becauſe they were much more inabled to indure cold and heat then wee, they had more able bodies to labour, they were more ſparing in diet; neither were they giuen to delicious and daintie fare, with which vice our ſouldiers are corrupted.

As touching the manner of this diſcomfiture, here is nothing ſet downe for certaine. Rabbins too bold in coining fables, The Rabbines without any teſtimony or likely coniecture, affirme, that they were ſmitten with thunder and lightning. For as they are bold to coine fables, ſo are they not afraid to auouch any thing that comes in their heads, euen as if they had found the ſame recorded in ſome authentique hiſtorie. But the words ſhew, that this was no ſuch apparant ſlaughter: for the Prophet ſaith, that they lay all dead vpon the earth: if they had bin ſmitten with lightning, euery one would haue perceiued it, neither would the Prophet haue concealed it. The cõiecture of the Rabbines then you ſee, is confuted out of the very text: but I had rather laue off in the mid way. It ſufficeth that wee know thus much; the Lord was minded to deliuer Ieruſalem out of the hand of the Aſſyrian; and he ſmote the hoſt with ſudden death, altogether without mans helpe.

Verſ. 37. So Sennacherib King of Aſſur departed, and went away, and returned, and dwelt at Nineueh.

NOw Iſaiah ſhewes, with what diſhonour this Tyrant retired; who before, in his conceit, had deuoured all Iudeah, and durſt challenge the Lord himſelfe. In that he expreſſeth his recoiling backe, with ſo manie words to one purpoſe, it is to caſt diſgrace vpon his cowardly flight: for it is no ſuperfluous repetition when he ſaith, he departed, hee went his way, and he returned. The name of King is alſo added to his further ſhame. As if he ſhould ſay; See this King, this great King, Chap. 36. 4. whom Rabſhekeh extolled ſo highly, becauſe of his power. Hee came not into Iudeah to returne with infamie; but God for his mercy and truthes ſake droue him out thence, euen as chaffe before the wind. Il partit, il s'en alla, il retourna.

Where it is ſaid, hee returned to dwell in Nineueh, it ſhewes vs further, that hee not onely left his courage, but his forces alſo quailed; for hee would not willingly haue ſtaied at home, if deſpaire had not been as a chaine to keepe him in: he contented himſelfe with his kingdome then, whereof Nineueh was the mother Citie. Afterwards when the Caldeans had ſubdued the Aſſyrians, the Monarchy was tranſported vnto Babylon; to wit, ten yeeres after the death of Sennacherib, in which time Eſar-haddon, (of whom mention is here made) reigned. For Paricadis being winked at, and ſupported by many, the forraigne enemies might eaſilie conquer and ſubdue a nation full of factions: and therefore Merodach hauing made vſe of this occaſion, inuaded the Aſſyrians, and brought them vnder his command.

Verſ. 38. And as hee was in the Temple worſhipping Niſrock his God, Adramelech and Sharezer his ſonnes ſlew him with the ſword: and Eſar-haddon his ſonne reigned in his ſtead.

THe Rabbines giue themſelues the like li- Rabbins bold in coining fables. bertie heere to coine deuices; for they faine that Sennacherib asked his idoll, why he could not vanquiſh the Iewes: and it anſwered, becauſe Abraham meant to haue ſacrificed his ſonne to God. And then this Tyrant following this example, determined to offer vp

vp his sonnes, to get the fauour of his god, but his sonnes being prouoked to wrath by the crueltie of their father, slue him in the temple of his Idols. But what haue we to doe to hearken to such coniectures, in which the Iewes bewray their (more then) shameleſse impudencie?

The miserable end of Tyrants.

We may see heere as in a glasse, the wretched end of Tyrants, whom the Lord cuts off without mans hand, euen then when they thinke to swallow vp all by their furie: and not only so, but exposeth them and their rage to the scorne of all posteritie. Sennacherib 1 came into Iudeah with a mightie host, and returned to his owne house with a few followers, and God the Conqueror leades him 2 captiue by way of triumph. But this is not all, for in the middes of his kingdome, in the 3 middes of the chiefe Citie of his kingdome, yea in his very Temple (the reuerence whereof would haue been a meanes to haue preserued the meanest abiect) he is slaine: not by forren enemies, not by popular sedition, not by traytors, nor by his seruants, but by his 4 owne sonnes, that so his end might be the more ignominious. Herein let vs consider, that these insatiable gulfes who haue delighted to bathe themselues in the blood of others, are slaine by those that are neere vnto them: and cut off by those, of whose loyaltie they seemed to be most secured. Such an act is much more horrible, then if strangers had done it: but thus the Lord punisheth the crueltie of those who with an ambitious desire aspiring to be aloft, spare not the very innocents. There are diuers examples of such things in prophane histories, where the iust iudgements of God may easily be discerned. Senacherib therfore receiues ỹ iust recõpence of his insatiable couetousnes, in that he plotted how to enlarge his Monarchy, and in the meane while takes no order for his busines at home, how to bring vp his sonnes in vnitie: for because he loued some, and cared not for the rest, thence proceeded this conspiracie. To conclude, this Tyrant was not only murdered; but his kingdome also soone after was brought to nought, as wee haue said before: and, that his successor might not deuise any thing against the Iewes, God occupied them at home with ciuill warres, and dissentions.

THE XXXVIII. CHAPTER.

Vers. 1. About that time Hezekias was sick vnto the death, and Isaiah sonne of Amoz came vnto him, and said vnto him, Put thine house in an order, for thou shalt die, and not liue.

NOW the Prophet shewes how sharply this good king was assailed with another kind of tentation; to wit, with so dangerous a sickenes, as there was no hope left of his recouerie: and not only that, but he was also greatlie grieued in regard he receiued sentence of death from the mouth of the Lord, no lesse, then if he had struck him on the head with a thunderbolt from heauen. We cannot certainly affirme in what time this happened, whether afore, or after the siege, neither need we stand long to discusse the matter. It may easily be gathered from the holy historie, that this sicknes fell out about the fourteenth yeere of his reigne, either about the time that the Assyrian came to lay siege to the Citie, or after his deliuerance. For he reigned 29. yeres; in the fourteenth Sennacherib inuaded Iudea: fifteene yeeres are added to his daies by promise made him here from the Lord; here are the 29. yeeres then. Thus it appeares that Hezekias was sicke in the fourteenth yeere of his reigne. All the difficultie is, whether it were in, or after the siege. The likelieſt coniecture as I thinke is, that he fell sick after the siege: my reason is, if it had happened during the siege, no doubt but the Prophet would haue made some mention of it. But he shewed before that Hezekias sent Ambassadors to pacifie Rabshekeh: also, how he went vp into the Temple and spread the letters before God; lastly, that he sent messengers to aske counsell of the Prophet: now all these actions, as you know, should hardlie agree to a sick man: for had this affliction fallen out with the other, the Prophet would not vtterlie haue passed this circumstance ouer in silence. In a matter which is somewhat doubtfull therfore let vs follow that which is the most probable: to wit, that this good king being rid of the enemie, fell forthwith into a grieuous sickne which had almost cost him his life. 1 2 3

In the meane while it is not without cause that this historie is annexed to the former, one following as it were in the neck of another: for thereby we perceiue that God gaue him scarcely so much respit as to take his breath: being escapt the sands, he then falles by and by vpon the rocks. Let vs be admonished therefore that the faithfull are subiect vnto diuers temptations, so as they are first tried by warre, then by sicknesses: yea sometimes afflictions come in so thick and threefold vpon them without intermission, that they indure combates all their life long. Why so? To teach them, that when one billow is ouer, they must expect another to follow presentlie. For they ought to be in such readines, that if the Lord shall be pleased to heape sorrow vpon sorrow, yet they must not breake in sunder, nor yet be discouraged vnder any calamitie whatsoeuer. If he giue them leaue a little to take breath, let them know he doth it in respect of their weaknes: but I aduise such not to imagin that these short truces should presage any long time of peace vnto vnto them: no, let them rather in the meane while gather new ſtrength, that hauing finiſhed their courſe, they may looke for reſt when they haue attained the quiet hauen of Gods kingdome.

The faithfull subiect to diuers temptations, sometimes all their liues long.

Note.

1 Vnto death.] Such a ſickneſſe might well trouble this holy perſonage; for ſuch diſeaſes are commonly dolorous, eſpecially if the vlcer be inflamed. But that which moſt afflicted him was, becauſe ſome ſignes of Gods anger were mixed therewithall, whereby he might iudge that hee was now become his aduerſe partie; becauſe being but lately paſſed out of one greeuous calamitie, he is now ſuddenly ſeazed vpon by death, as one vnworthy to hold his Kingdome any longer. Beſides, hee had then no children; ſo as it ſeemed after his death things were likely to be wonderfully confuſed. Thus then the apprehenſion of Gods wrath doth more wound the conſciences of the faithfull, then any bodily infirmitie whatſoeuer: neither can it be auoided, but they muſt needs forthwith be ouerwhelmed, hauing loſt the ſweet taſte of his fauour. But the Lord minding indeed to adde affliction to affliction, in expreſſe termes tels him, thou ſhalt die. And that it might ſtrike the deeper impreſſion, he takes from him all hope of life: for theſe words, thou ſhalt not liue, are not ſuperfluous; but are added by way of confirmation, or augmentation of the thing. As if he ſhould haue ſaid; there is no way but one with thee. Men are wont to trifle out the time when death hath but areſted them, and they turne their eies euery way to ſpie out ſome ſtartingholes: to the end therefore that Hezekias ſhould not ſuffer his mind to roue vp and downe (as we are wont to doe in vncertaine things) hee telles him twice for failing, that he muſt die. And that he might indeed bid the world farewell, the Prophet warnes him to ſet his affaires in order with all ſpeede; that his Counſel might know what to doe after his death: as if he ſhould haue ſaid; If thou wilt haue death to reſpite thee a while, then ſet thine houſe in an order quickly.

2 Here we ſee then (but I will ſpeake it by the way) that God approues of the practiſe which is vſuall among men. What is that? Men that die giue their kinsfolks or neighbours charge to performe their will, and to take order alſo for diſpoſing of the familie.

Ionathan hath tranſlated; Leaue thine houſe to ſome one: but the conſtruction of the words teach the contrary. Well, we ſee that euery one which paſſeth out of this life, ought to ſhew that he ſtands charged with a dutie; to wit, to take order for his familie for the time to come. Notwithſtanding the chiefe care conſiſts not in teſtaments and heires, but concerning the ſaluation of thoſe whom God hath committed vnto our charge.

3 The apprehenſion of Gods wrath doth more wound the conſciences of the faithfull, then any bodily infirmitie whatſoeuer.

Mens laſt wills and teſtaments approued.

Two things ought to be reſpected in teſtaments.

1

2

Verſ. 2. Then Hezekiah turned his face to the wall, and praied vnto the Lord.

NOw hee ſhewes how Hezekias was affected with this meſſage, that his faith and pietie might the better appeare vnto vs. He neither fumes nor frets as the vnbeleeuers doe, but takes vp his croſſe patiently: he ſtands not to reaſon the caſe with God; to wit, that he had ſuſtained ſorrow enough already at the hands of his enemies, and therefore needed not now preſently to bee ſo roughly dealt withall, by a new kind of affliction. This is indeed the triall of true patience, euen to beare the croſſe quietly: that is to ſay, not for once, but to perſeuere vnto the end, and to bee alwaies ready to indure new aſſaults. But aboue all, we are to bow vnder Gods iudgements, and not to murmure at his ſeueritie, how hard ſo euer the caſe goe with vs: as Dauid alſo confeſſeth, that hee held his peace, becauſe God had done it: Pſal. 39. 10.

The true triall of patience.

To this appertaines that which is added, that he turned his face to the wall. for being caſt downe with ſhame and ſorrow, he gathers in his thoughts, as if hee would leaue the preſence of men, to turne himſelfe wholly vnto God, and ſatisfie himſelfe in him alone. The geſture which he vſeth is a thing indifferent in it ſelfe; but we aduantage our ſelues much when we turne our eies from all ſuch obiects as might carry away our thoughts in praier: for ſo, wee get the greater freedome of ſpirit to powre forth our deſires in the preſence of God. Surely we are all of vs ſhettle witted by nature, a little thing eaſilie diſtracts vs: and therefore we cannot be too carefull in vſing all meanes to hold our thoughts ſhort from wandring. If we be to pray with others, ſhame hinders vs from doing it with ouermuch vehemencie, leſt wee ſhould be taxed of pride and hypocriſie; or we feare to vſe thoſe geſtures that might be thought vnſeemly: it is therefore fit wee ſhould preuent all lets and impediments. Hezekias turnes not his face to the wall then, as one in a paſſion, or rebelliouſly and diſdainfully reiecting the meſſage that was brought vnto him; but as one who by this geſture framed himſelfe with the greater ardencie to this dutie of praier.

Our praiers are much furthered by hauing our ſenſes freed from outward obiects.

Wherefore Hezekias turned his face to the wall.

Whereas hee vtters nothing in expreſſe words, as he did before when he went vp into the Temple in the ſight of the people, it was a ſigne that his thoughts were much perplexed, ſo as it ſeemed his whole body was as it were ſhrunke in with heauineſſe. And yet he leaues vs a ſingular example of pietie, that being iudged to death, he yet ceaſeth not ſtill to call vpon God.

But theſe words, thou ſhalt die, and not liue, did not onely tend to gall him a little, but to pierce and wound him to the very heart: as if God had meant at once by his ſoueraigne power to haue deſtroied him. For it was a ſigne of his fearefull diſpleaſure thus on a ſudden to cut him off in the flower of his youth, and to take him from off the earth, as one vnworthy to inioy the ſocietie of men any longer. Doubtleſſe hee wreſtled not againſt death onely, but againſt hell it ſelfe, and the torments thereof, wherewith for a time he was ſharply aſſailed. Whence it followes, that hee conceiued ſomewhat more in his thoughts, then the Prophet mentions: but howſoeuer howsoeuer he could not by and by dispatch himselfe out of these incumbrances, yet the holy Ghost did suggest into this confused and perplexed spirit of his, such groanes, as could not be expressed. And in truth it had been an vncoth and absurd message, if so bee God had not conforted him inwardly by the secret worke of his Spirit, who was now as good as stricken downe to hell with the outward sound of the Prophets words. Now for as much as hee would neuer haue repented, being seased on by despaire, mortification went formost; next, followed that secret worke of the Spirit, which consecrated this poore dead body a liuing sacrifice acceptable vnto God.

Rom.8.26.

Vers. 3. And said, I beseech thee, Lord, remember now how I haue walked before thee in trueth, and with a perfect heart, and haue done that which is good in thy sight: and Hezekiah wept sore.

IT seemes here that he meant to reason the case with God, and to rip vp his former life vnto him, as one being wrongfully afflicted: but he meant nothing lesse. He rather furnisheth himselfe with arguments to buckle against the sharpe and dangerous temptations which might follow. For when the Lord dealt thus roughly with him, he might thinke himselfe forlorne, forsaken, and reiected, as if God had disliked of all that he had done before: for which cause he fortifies & cheeres vp himselfe, by protesting that all his actions proceeded from the vprightnesse of his heart. In a word, hee concludes that his indeuors were not displeasing vnto God, though hee were presently taken away: and thus he makes way for good hope and praier.

Hezekias opposeth not his merits against Gods righteousnes, but armes himselfe against a sharp temptation.

Hee opposeth not his merits then to the righteousnesse of God, neither complaines he as if he were punished vniustly, but armes his selfe against a sharpe temptation, to the end Gods dealing might not seem too seuere in his eies, in regard that hee had so well reformed and taken away corruptions, which had then the full swinge in his kingdome, but chiefly in the Church.

God admits his children sometime to glory in their well doing.

I denie not but the Lord sometimes admits his children to reioice in the things which they haue well done: not as vanting of their deserts in his sight, but to acknowledge his benefits, and to be so touched with the remembrance thereof, that they may the better fit themselues thereby to beare all their aduersities patiently. Sometimes also the importunitie of their enemies constraines them to glory with an holy boasting, that they may commend their cause to God, as to him that is the Iudge and defender of it: and so Dauid boldly opposeth his innocencie against the slanders of his aduersaries, and that euen before the iudgement seate of God: Psal.7.9. and 17.3. But Hezekiah meant here to preuent Satans sophistrie, whereof the faithfull haue sufficient experience, whilest vnder pretence of humilitie, hee ouerwhelmes them in despaire. We must be very warie therefore, that our hearts be not swallowed vp of it.

It is an old practise of Satan, vnder colour of humilitie, to driue vs into despaire.

Besides, from his words we gather the true rule of a well ordered life; to wit, when the integritie of the heart holds the first place: for there is nothing that displeaseth God so much, as when we goe about to cosen either him, or mē by our dissimulatiō: for as a glistering shew of works is wont to dazle our eies; so nothing prouokes his wrath more thē feined holinesse, in regard his name is thereby most profaned. We know he is a spirit: is it not good reason then that he should be worshipped spiritually, especially seeing he protesteth that a double heart is an abomination vnto him? Hezekiah therefore had good cause as you see, to beginne at the vprightnesse of his heart.

The rule of a well ordered life.
The first rule.
Nothing prouokes God more then fained holinesse. Iob.4.

The word Chalem, which is translated perfect, is nothing else but that integritie and soundnesse of heart which is opposed to hypocrisie; which also appeares by the word truth, according as Saint Paul saith, that the end of the law, is loue out of a pure heart, a good conscience, and faith vnfeined. Moreouer, Hezekias sets downe the fruits which issue from a pure heart, as from the roote; not onely to animate himselfe, but others also, especially concerning those things which might giue them any occasion of stumbling. Hee staggered not then, but meant to remoue the impediments which peraduenture might discourage many. 1.Tim.1.5.

Againe, let vs note how our life must be ordered, if we desire that God should approue of vs; to wit, that we doe nothing vvithout his commandement: for as hee reiects and condemnes all outward shewes, whereby hypocrits would bee thought iolly fellowes; so esteemes he nothing at all of any newfound seruices, wherein the superstitious sort trauaile in vaine, thinking they merit much at his hands, whilest they cast his word behind their backs. But Hezekias, who knew that obedience was better then sacrifices, 1.Sam.15. 22. saith not onely that he ran, (which some often doe, though cleane out of the way) but also that he squared his whole life to the commandements of God, which onely is the competent Iudge thereof. Now from this place wee may gather, how much this holy personage was kindled with the affection of praier: for albeit he sees nothing about him but signes of Gods wrath, yet hee ceaseth not to haue recourse vnto him still, and exerciseth his faith, by powring out his praiers & teares in his presence; which all faithfull hearts ought carefully and diligentlie to practise, and that euen in their deepest distresses.

The second rule.
And haue done that which was good in thy sight.
Hezekiah not onely ran, but he ran well.
God must be sought vnto by praier, when hee seemes most angrie.

Vers. 4. Then came the word of the Lord to Isaiah, saying;

ISaiah went his way, and left his sting behind him, as they say; leauing him as a dead man, whom in the name of the Lord he had adiudged to die. In the meane while we may gather from his song, how restlesse his thoughts thoughts were, or rather, with how great terror he was ſurpriſed. It is not eaſie to define of the intermiſſion betweene the Prophets departure, and his returne: yet it is out of queſtion, that the promiſe both touching his recouery, and life, was not made till he had felt himſelfe forlorne; yea, after he had a long time been toſſed vp and downe with furious ſtormes and tempeſts. For his faith was tried to the vtmoſt when God thus hid his face from him, and ſuffered him to lie plunged in the darkneſſe of death: yet we haue told you already, that the faith of this King was not ſo quenched, but that ſome ſparks thereof appeared, though hee were left deſtitute of all outward comforts. For by the ſecret inſtinct of the holy Ghoſt, he breathed out vnutterable groanes from this bottomleſſe gulfe, which aſcended vp into the eares of the moſt high. From whence we gather, that the faithfull are ſo heard in the day of their diſtreſſe, that the fauour of God manifeſts not it ſelfe vnto them at the firſt cry, but hee deferres of purpoſe to let them feele it, till hee ſees they be throughly humbled.

Now if it were needfull that ſo excellent a king and ſeruant of God ſhould be in a manner thus ouerwhelmed with ſorrowes, that he might be the better fitted and prouoked to deſire Gods fauour, and to ſigh and grone vnto him, being at the laſt caſt, and almoſt ſwallowed vp of the lower hells: let vs not wonder if ſometimes he leaues vs perplexed with feare and anguiſh, and deferres that comfort long which we deſire. But ſome may thinke it ſtrange that God forthwith called back his ſentence, as if he repented himſelfe of that which was gone out of his lips: for there is nothing leſſe agreeable to his nature then to be changeable. I anſwere, Hezekias was not adiudged to death in the decree and counſell of God: but his meaning herein was to trie and examin the faith of his ſeruant. Wherefore in this denunciation there muſt be a condition ſupplied; for otherwiſe Hezekias could neuer haue bowed the Lord, nor diſanulled his irreuocable decree neither by his prayers nor teares. But the Lord threatned him as he did Abimelech king of Gerar for taking Sarah, Abrams wife, Gen. 20. 3. And as Ionas did the Ninenites, Ionas 1. 2. & 3. 4. But it will be further obiected, that it is contrarie to Gods nature to ſpeake one thing & thinke another: for thus his words ſhall loſe their authoritie, becauſe men will eſteeme of his promiſes and threatnings as things of little weight. But wee muſt iudge of the forme of theſe words, as of the ſenſe of thoſe which I haue alreadie expounded. GOD gaue ſentẽce of death vpõ Hezekias, becauſe he would not that he ſhould die: neither had it been needfull nor profitable to haue ſent him this meſſage, had not the remedie been neere at hand. Beſides, as it was the meaning of God to humble his ſeruant with feare and aſtoniſhment, that by a voluntarie condemning of himſelfe he might by prayers and teares eſcape this chaſtiſement: ſo alſo it was no leſſe his purpoſe to bring him low by this ſharp and biting ſpeech, Thou ſhalt die, to the end he might require life, and to haue it reſtored as to him that was now ſhut vp as it were in his ſepulchre. The Prophet ſupplied an infolded condition therefore, which Hezekias eaſily eſpied, although he perceiued it not at the firſt. We can not conclude then that God vſed any diſſimulation here, ſeeing he fits his ſpeech to the capacitie and reach of the perſon to whom he ſpeakes: for it is no vnwonted thing with him to kill before he quicken. He only then holds part of his ſpeech in ſuſpence, that by the outward appearance of death, Hezekias might by little and little be framed to newnes of life.

First obiection.

Obiect.

Anſ.

A condition muſt be ſupplied in the denuntiatiõ.

Obiect. Second obiection.

Anſ.

He only held part of his ſpeech in ſuſpence.

Verſ. 5. Goe, and ſay vnto Hezekiah, Thus ſaith the Lord God of Dauid thy father, I haue heard thy prayer, and ſeene thy teares: behold, I will adde vnto thy dayes fifteene yeeres.

IN his firſt ambaſſage, verſ. 1. he meant only to terrifie Hezekias, and therefore contents himſelfe with a bare propounding of the name of God, *before whoſe iudgement ſeat he ſummoned this poore guiltie perſon: but now when hee brings meſſage of conſolation, he addes a particular title, *to ſhew from what fountaine this fauour proceeded: as if he ſhould ſay; God is now mooued to ſhew mercie, ſo as he will not deale extreamely with thee, becauſe he reſpects the Couenant which he hath made with Dauid.

Why God propounds his name to Hezekias in a diuers forme.

*As in verſ. 1.

*The God of Dauid thy father.

We know there is nothing more hard then to cheere vp the hearts of ſuch as haue deeply taſted of Gods wrath, with good hope of mercie; and to cauſe them indeed to feele that God is now become fauorable and gracious vnto them. This confirmation therefore was neceſſarie, to the end this good king, being forlorne in himſelfe, might perceiue that life was to be reſtored him, whereof he was in a maner vtterlie depriued, becauſe the promiſe touching the perpetuitie of the kingdome of Iudah could no way be broken.

Nothing more difficult, then to comfort the hearts of ſuch as haue taſted deeply of Gods diſpleaſure.

Thus he being in a maner halfe dead by reaſon of this meſſage, Thou ſhalt dye, the Prophet to incourage him puts him in mind of that promiſe which was then familiarlie knowne of all. I haue ſworne once by mine holines, that I will not faile Dauid; His ſeed ſhall indure for euer; and his Throne ſhal be as the Sunne before me, Pſal. 89. 35. 36. Vpon this boord or planck, Hezekias caſts himſelfe to ſaue his life from ſhipwrack in theſe boyſterous ſtormes: for he ſpeakes not of Dauid here as of a priuat man, but as of an eternall King, which had the promiſe, whereupon Hezekias might ſtay himſelfe. I ſay eternall, not in himſelfe, but in the bleſſed ſeed. Now becauſe this eternitie was to be manifeſted at the length in Ieſus Chriſt, of whom Hezekias and the reſt of the kings of Iudah were figures, he had good cauſe to hope well, in regard himſelfe was the ſonne and ſucceſſor of Dauid.

As often therefore as our ſinnes do ſhut vp the way againſt vs from approching vnto God, that we might haue part in his fauor; let this preface be present before vs. For howsoeuer by our own default he be estranged from vs, yet he is the father of Christ our head, in whom our saluation lies alwaies hidden for vs. To be short, God who a little before spake as a Iudge, speakes now as a louing father, by looking vpon the mediator Iesus Christ, who euer appeaseth his anger.

Hauing left him way for hope, he now tels him that his praiers were heard of God: which doubtlesse should be as a goad in our sides, to pricke vs forward to the dutie of feruent praier. For albeit God of himselfe be carefull enough of our saluation, and hath euermore preuented vs by his louing kindnesse, and that not onely whilest we slept, but euen before we were borne: notwithstanding when he signifies vnto vs that all the benefits hee bestowes vpon vs, are as the fruits of our praiers, our slothfulnesse is vtterly inexcusable, if being so liberally inuited to come vnto God, we scorne to open our mouthes to call vpon his name. Yet we must not thinke that our praiers doe therefore merit, because God accepts so fauourably of them; but in giuing that freely, which of fauour he hath promised, he addes this declaration of his liberalitie, to the end he may the better exercise our faith. For it is no small priuiledge to haue accesse into his presence at all times, & frankly to powre out our hearts before him, and familiarly to cast all our cares and anguishes into his bosome. Had not Hezekias praied at all, yet the Lord no doubt would haue taken order by some other meanes, that the gouernment of the kingdome should still haue continued in the stocke of Dauid: but that which he was bound to doe in respect of his truth, is attributed vnto Hezekias praiers, to the end hee might acknowledge how great the fruit was he receiued from his faith, which he exercised in his praiers.

The Prophet mentions his teares, as a signe of his repentance, and also of his zeale and affection: not that they obtaine grace, or that they can appease God of themselues: but to shew that by meanes hereof, praiers which proceede from affection, are distinguished from those which proceede from the lippes onely.

Praiers which proceed from affection, distinguished from those that proceed from the lips onely. Obiect.

In the last place hee addes, that God prolonged the daies of Hezekias fifteene yeeres, which at the first might seeme absurd; because we are created vpon condition, not to passe one iot or tittle of that time which God hath set downe: as Iob saith; Thou hast set him his bounds, which he cannot passe: Iob.14.5. But the solution is easie, that this length of time must bee referred to Hezekias his cogitation: for he was excluded from hope of a longer life, so as he was to account the yeeres following, as the lease thereof renued againe: no lesse then if he had been taken out of his tombe, to liue vpon the earth the second time.

Ans.

Vers. 6. And I will deliuer thee out of the hand of the King of Assur, and this Citie: for I will defend this Citie.

THose who thinke that Hezekias was sicke during the siege, ground their argument vpon this verse; because otherwise they think this promise should be superfluous: but their reason wants weight. For the Assyrian might well gather his forces together againe, and prepare a fresh armie, both to inuade Iudeah, and to besiege Ierusalem. Yea, that discomfiture which he had before, might so kindle his rage and furie, as to giue a new onset. The Iews then, you see, might iustly tremble when any should signifie some newes to them touching the enemies approching. This promise therefore is not superfluous, for with the hope of life, Isaiah secures him from feare of the Assyrian, whom Hezekias might alwaies haue had in some iealousie, if by this meanes the same had not been preuented. In which, we see how God still amplifies and addes new mercies to the former, which he had shewed him: as in the Chapter before going, God promised him abundance of the fruite of the earth, with deliuerance from the siege.

Vers. 7. And this signe shalt thou haue of the Lord, that the Lord will doe this thing that he hath spoken:

8. Behold, I will bring againe the shadow of the degrees, (whereby it is gone downe in the diall of Ahaz by the Sunne) ten degrees backward: so the Sunne returned by ten degrees, by the which it was gone downe.

THe holy historie orderly recites, how Hezekias asked a signe of the Lord, which was granted vnto him: our Prophet wil onely touch it in the end of the Chapter: but it is no new thing with the Hebrewes thus to set those things last, which should be first, &c. Moreouer, the Lord offers some signes voluntarily vnasked. Againe, he grants them to others that require them. Now in regard that the generall vse of signes is to sustaine our infirmitie, God for the most part staies not till they bee asked, but from the beginning hath alwaies ordeined such as himselfe knew would be the most profitable to his Church. If the faithfull then at any time haue desired that their faith might be confirmed by signes, we must not by and by follow them therein; because it was a thing very rare: as to Gedeon, who being taken from the flaile to gouerne the people, he gaue two signes which he asked, to the end he might be the better confirmed in his calling: Iudg.6.17,36. As touching other signes, hee was wont ordinarilie to giue them to helpe mans weakenesse: as to Adam, the tree of life, Gen.2.9. to Noah, the raine-bow in the cloudes: Gen.9.13. afterwards, the cloud, the pillar of fire, and the brasen Serpent in the wildernesse: Exod.13. 21. Numb.21.8. The like is to be said of the Passeouer, Exod.12.3. and of all other sacraments which haue been ordeined both vnder

2. Kin.20.8.

The generall vse of signes.

Signes asked. Gedeons fleece.

Signes giuen vnasked. To Adam the tree of life. To Noah the rainbow. To the Israelites the cloud and pillar of fire. The brasen Serpent. The Passeouer, &c.

der the Law and vnder the Gospell, without being asked of God at all.

Obiect. But it seemes Hezekias offers iniurie to God, in that he beleeues him not vpon his bare word, when he asks a signe.

Anſ. I answere, he is not therefore to be condemned of infidelitie, because his faith was weake: for where is the man to be found that euer had a faith so perfect that was not mingled with vnbeliefe, or which was not faultie? Whereas he seekes some stay to vphold his wauering, he is not to be blamed for it: for hauing imbraced the promise offred him by the Prophet, he shewes himselfe to haue faith in God, in seeking remedie against his distrust. Were there no infirmitie in men, what need should we haue of signes? It is no wonder then if Hezekias asks one, seeing the Lord is pleased to offer the same voluntarilie vnto others. Yet we are to note, that the faithfull haue not asked signes of their owne heads, but were led so to doe by the speciall instinct of the holy Ghost, which may also be affirmed touching miracles: for if Helias asked raine and drought, it is not lawfull for others to do the like, 1. King. 17. 1. Wee are therefore to consider what the Lord permits vs to do, lest whilest hauing neglected his word, we presume to indent with him according to the vnbridled desires of our owne flesh.

The faithfull haue not asked signes of God rashly, but were moued to do it by the speciall instinct of the holy Ghost.

The signe that is here giuen to Hezekias, is the bringing back of the shadow in the dyall with the Sunne tenne degrees, whereby it was ascended, that is to say, gone forward vpon the Horizon. This signe hath affinitie with the thing it selfe, as all other signes also haue: for it is as if he should haue said, Euen as it is in my power to alter the houres of the day, and to cause the Sunne to come back againe, so am I able to prolong thy life. In that the Sunne went not back so many degrees as there were yeeres added to his life, it could not well be done, because there were but twelue degrees in the Quadrangle: for the dayes were diuided into twelue houres longer or shorter, according to the diuersitie of the seasons. Wee neede not busie our heads much then as touching the number, it is enough that the proportion and similitude of the signe and of the thing it selfe sutes so well together.

The signes that God giues, haue affinitie with the things signified.

Fables of the Iewes. The Iewes doe here inuent fables according to their vsuall maner, affirming, that the day in which Achaz died was shorter by ten houres, so as the chastisement inflicted vpon him for his iniquities, were turned to the good of Hezekias, in regard the shortnes of one day was the cause of the length of another. But what ground haue they for this here? Truly not so much as any shew at all: for here is nothing said touching the death of Achaz, nor of any change which then happned, but of the dyall only which he erected.

Vers. 9. The Writing of Hezekias king of Iudah when he had been sick, and was recouered of his sicknes.

ALthough the holy historie mentions not this writing, yet is it worthie our obseruation, and to be kept in continuall memorie: for therein we see that Hezekiah would not by his silence either lightlie passe ouer, or by forgetfulnes blot out the remembrance of so excellent a benefit which he had receiued of God. All the faithfull by his example are taught what to doe when God for their sakes manifests his power miraculouslie, or by extraordinarie meanes: it ought not to suffice them that those of their owne times should be made acquainted withall, but as much as in them is they are so to prouide that the posterities to come may be informed of it, as we see Hezekias here doth by this his song. Dauid in like maner composed many songs to this purpose after he was deliuered out of great dangers; being carefull to haue that sung to the worlds end, which was worthie of euerlasting memorie: see Psal. 18. 2. & 27. But he especiallie whom God hath aduanced to high degree either of honor, or power, euen as one being placed by God vpon a scaffold: he, I say, ought well to know and vnderstand that he is inioined to imitate this godly King in this behalfe: and yet both great and small are diligentlie to beware of ambition, lest whilst they seeme to imitate Dauid and Hezekiah, they seeke to glorifie their owne names rather then the name of God.

What the faithfull ought to do when God works their deliuerance by vnwonted meanes.

Vers. 10. I said in the cutting off of my dayes, I shall goe to the gates of the graue: I am deprined of the residue of my yeeres.

BEhold here a very mournefull song, for it conteines in it complaints rather then prayers. Whence it appeares, that this good King was so straited with distresses, that being oppressed inwardlie, he forceth himselfe to teares and lamentations, and dares not freelie open his mouth to frame a well ordered prayer. In mutterings by himselfe then he layes forth the greatnes of his sorrow: but this may seeme strange if wee consider the cause. Was it beseeming so holie a personage for the desire he had to prolong this transitorie life, so greatly to abhorre death? The first rudiments of the heauenly doctrine do teach vs, that we are but wayfaring men here, and therefore ought swiftlie to runne the race that is set before vs towards eternall life. But Hezekias seemes to be so much giuen to the earth, as if he had neuer tasted so much as one dramme of true godlines. He flees and detests death, as if he had been vtterlie vnaquainted with y word of God. What meanes he then to set downe his boiling passions in this maner? It seemes he meant rather to draw the faithfull by his example to a kind of intemperancie, rather then to keepe them within the lists of Gods hests. Are we not all of vs too much inclined to rebellion of our selues, but we must also haue a Scholemaster to instruct vs?

Obiect.

But if we shall rightlie and aduisedlie consider of the matter, we shall see it was most profitable for vs, that the image of this man (in a maner ouerwhelmed with sorrowes) ſhould be thus liuely painted out before vs in liuely colours. It was not his purpoſe to purchaſe praiſe in the world by preaching his owne praiſes. Truly his praier was an vndoubted teſtimonie of his faith and obedience: but being ſurpriſed with feare and aſtoniſhment, and caſt downe with heauineſſe of ſpirit, he leaues praier, and rather mutters forth paſſionate whiſperings. God therefore in acquainting vs with his infirmitie, meant to inſtruct all his children in humilitie, and therewithall to extol his goodneſſe, by which he was drawne as it were out of the iawes of death.

Anſ.

Now whereas being ready to die, hee bewailes his condition, as if hee had ſet vp his reſt on earth, or as if by death men are brought to nothing; we are to conſider that there was a ſpeciall cauſe of it. For albeit death bee not deſirable in it ſelfe, yet ought the faithfull to mourne daily, in regard they ſerue ſinne too much, whileſt they remaine in this priſon of the fleſh. They are forbidden alſo to lament, as vnbeleeuers do: and on the contrary, they are commanded to lift vp their heads, when they are to depart out of this life, in regard they ſhall change for a better: Luke 21.28. The Church vnder the law was not deſtitute of this conſolation; for albeit the knowledge of the reſurrection was then obſcure, yet that which they had was ſufficient to aſſwage the dolours of the faithfull of that time. For if that falſe Prophet Balaã was cõſtrained to cry out, O let me die the death of the righteous, Numb. 23. 10. how much more cauſe had the faithfull ſo to doe, thinke you, in whoſe eares and hearts ſounded this voice, I am the God of Abraham? Exod. 3.6. But howſoeuer they aſpired to this heauenly life in ſure and certaine hope, yet is it no wonder to ſee that in Hezekias, which Dauid cõfeſſeth of himſelfe, Pſ. 30.8,9. who yet quietly left the world when his time was expired, & died ful of daies: 1. King. 1.10. It appears then that neither of them both were diſmaied ſimply, in regard of the feare of death; but they therein perceiued euident tokens of Gods wrath; and for that cauſe they praied with teares to be deliuered from it. For wee muſt remember that the Prophet was ſent vnto Hezekias, as an Herald of Armes to pronounce ſentence of death vpon him, and that in the name of the moſt high God. Such a meſſage might well drinke vp all his ſpirits, and caſt him as it were into ſuch horrible and fearefull plagues, that in ſeeing nothing but Gods wrath & curſe to ſeaze vpon him, he wreſtled againſt deſpaire it ſelfe.

Thus we ſee how his faith was tried, when being arraigned as it were before the iudgement ſeat of God, he enters into the conſideration of his ſinnes. For firſt, this cogitation
1 might come into his head; What is the cauſe that God ſhould correct his ſeruants ſo ſeuerely, and in the meane while ſpare thoſe that contemne his Maieſtie? And thus Dauid himſelfe was tried, Pſal. 73.3. Secondly, he
2 ſaw himſelfe expoſed as a laughing ſtocke to the prophane, who by this occaſion would
3 inſult ouer true religion. Hee alſo perceiued that his death might cauſe the hearts of all the faithfull to wauer. But aboue al, the wrath 4 of God preſſed him the neereſt, and that no leſſe then if he had been already condemned to the pit of hell, and to the eternall curſe. In a word, ſeeing our onely felicitie is to be at one with God, Hezekias was driuen into no cauſeleſſe feare, when he felt himſelfe ſeparated as it were from this vnion. For theſe words, thou ſhalt die and not liue, verſ. 1. had almoſt wholly ſeazed vpon his ſoule, ſo that he was as a man laid in graue. Which is yet better expreſſed by this clauſe, I ſaid; which not onely ſignifies (in the Hebrewes language) to vtter or pronounce words with the lips, but to bee perſwaded and reſolued of it in the heart. Though God threatens the hypocrits neuer ſo much, yet they gaze about for ſtarting holes, and thinke themſelues ſafe, if they can eſpie any corner wherein to ſhroud themſelues, that afterwards they may bee as iocund as euer they were before. But Hezekias being the true ſeruant of God, neuer minded the ſeeking of euaſions, but giuing credit to the Prophets words, he prepares himſelfe to die, ſeeing God was pleaſed to haue it ſo.

Our onely felicitie ſtãds in our ſpirituall vnion with God.

The meaning of this phraſe, I ſaid.

He ſpeakes in the ſame ſenſe of the cutting off of his daies, feeling that God as his enemie in anger was determined to ſhorte the courſe of his life. For he ſpeakes not after the common maner, when hee ſaith, that a violent death ſhall cauſe him to depart this life; but knowes that Gods iudgement is the cauſe of it. I grant that our life is alwaies cut off, be it that wee die young, or in the prime of our youth, or whether we die old: but it is ſaid of thoſe which die in the flower of their youth, that their life is cut off, becauſe it ſeemes they are taken away too ſoone, as fruit gathered before it be ripe. But Hezekias had another drift, to wit; he ſaw the reſidue of his daies ſuddenly cut off by the ſword of the Lord, in regard hee had prouoked him to anger by his offences. He complaines then that God ſuddenly depriues him of that life, which might haue continued a longer time; as if hee had been vtterly vnworthy to inioy it. Thereunto appertaines that which he ſaith of the reſidue of his yeeres: for albeit we ought to prepare for death euery moment, in regard we are all borne mortal, yet it being denounced heere againſt him as a puniſhment, hee complaines not without cauſe, that he is depriued of the reſidue of his yeeres; which hee was likelie to haue inioied by Gods aſſiſtance.

Verſ. 11. I ſaid, I ſhall not ſee the Lord, euen the Lord in the land of the liuing: I ſhall ſee man no more among the inhabitants of the world.

HEzekias ſhould paſſe his bounds in deſiring ſo earneſtly to continue in the world, were it not that the feeling of Gods wrath augmented his griefe. In regard therefore that hee ſeemes to be violently drawne to death by his owne deſert, euen as one vnworthie worthie to behold the face of the Sunne, he cries out, and pronounceth himselfe miserable, in that for the time to come he shall neither see God, nor man. Among the faithfull this exception is held, to wit, whilest we liue in this world we are absent from God, but hauing put off the hindrances of our flesh, we shall enioy the presence of God. 2. Cor. 5. 6.

I grant there is a restraint in these words, in the land of the liuing. But hereby it seemes that Hezekias ties the sight of God to this life present, as if death did wholly depriue vs of all light and vnderstanding. We are therefore to call to minde that which I said erewhile, to wit, This good King hauing receiued the message as proceeding from the indignation of the Lord, was so terrified therewith, as if he had bin vtterlie depriued for euer of his louing fauor. For if he were vnworthie to liue, how durst he hope for greater things? not that all hope was botted out of his heart, but because he only considers the curse of God, so as he can not so speedilie aspire to heauen to sweeten the sorrow that presseth him, by the sweet taste of a better life. It falles out sometimes that the vnderstandings of the faithfull are so blinded, that for a time they fare as those that are forelorne: but although their comfort seeme for a while to be smothered, yet is it still hidden within, and anon breakes forth. In the meane while Hezekias shewes his pietie, in that (from the lawfull and right vse of this present life) he manifests to all how cumbersome it is vnto him to be depriued of it.

The end of our life and that of the beasts farre different.

The very beasts are loth to die, yet haue they no other vse of their life but to eate and drinke, to labour, and to fill their bellies. But the end of our life is farre more excellent: for we are created and put into this world that we should dayly exercise our selues in the knowledge of God. And in regard that this is the chiefe end of our life, he shewes the vehemencie of his affections, in repeating the name of God twice, I shall see no more, saith he, the Lord, the Lord.

Obiect. Ans. 1

If any obiect, that wee see not God in this world, the answere is easie. For first he is to be seene in his works, in regard that by the creation of the world his eternall power and Diuinitie may be seen, as S. Paul saith, Rom. 1. 20. And therefore Hebr. 11. 3. this world is called the Mirror of inuisible things. But be- 2 cause he manifests himselfe more clearely to the faithfull, therefore Hezekias mournes for the want of this spirituall sight; as Dauid also saith, that those behold the face of God who haue freedome to come into his house, that they may confirme their faith by the exercises of religion. As touching the word men, he is sorrie to be depriued of their societie, because we are borne to aid and comfort one another. Psal. 28. & 42.

Vers. 12. Mine habitation is departed and remoued from me like a shepheards tent: I haue cut off like a weauer my life: he will cut me off from the height: * from day to night, thou wilt make an end of me.

* Or, he will cut me off by leannes or sicknes.

HE goes on with his complaints, disciphering out his life by a very fit similitude, for he cõpares it to a shepheards tent. For such in deed is our present condition here in appearance: but he stands not so much to shew what it is which commonlie falles out to others, as what befell himselfe in particular. The vse of tents was more frequent in those countries then in ours, and oftentimes shepheards change their abode, by reason of shifting their flocks from one place to another. Thus he not only saith, that others dwell for a very little space in an house of clay whilest they passe thorow this world: but that himselfe being quiet in his royall Palace, euen his state was changed, as if a Shepheard hauing pitched his tent for two daies in the field, should the third day be forced to remoue it to another place.

But we are to note, that sometimes he assignes the cause of his death to himselfe, and then also vnto God: and therewithall giues alwaies distinct reasons of his speech. For in 1
making himselfe the author of his griefe, he therein acquites the Lord; and complaines not of him for taking away of his life: but accuseth himselfe, and layes all the fault where it was in deed, for so much his words import, which is expressed in an vsuall prouerb, My selfe hath wouen this web, so as my selfe and none other is the cause of my death. And yet it is not without good reason that in the second place he assignes the cause also vnto 2
God, which before he wholly charged vpon himselfe: for albeit we our selues giue him cause to deale seuerely with vs, yet is he the Iudge, who inflicts his owne chastisements vpon vs. In all our troubles therefore let vs euer learne to magnifie his iust iudgements, because he doth vs but right in executing his office, when he corrects vs according to our deserts.

Wee must euermore magnifie Gods iust iudgements.

Towards the end of the verse, some translate the word Middallah, leannes, or sicknes. Others, In drawing out: the first deriue this noune from the verb Dalal, which signifies to lessen: the others from Dalah, which imports as much as to draw out, in lifting vp. But let the readers consider whether the word to lift vp agrees not best, because it seemes Hezekias complaines that his life is suddenlie smitten downe whilest he indeuored to list it vp, and to draw it out longer: as if God should cause the Sunne to set as soone as it begins to rise only.

By and by after he addes, That he shall be brought to nought in a short space, which he further expresseth by the circumstance of the weight of Gods wrath, which suddenlie consumes men by his only breath. For to be cut off in a day, signifies as much as to die hastilie.

See the exposition of the latter clause of this 12. verse in the next.

Vers. 13. I reckoned to the morning, but he brake all my bones like a lion: from day to night wilt thou make an end of me.

OThers reade, I stayed, or sate downe: the word here signifies that which we vsual-lie say, I made my account. From this verse we may gather, that Hezekias was sicke about two daies: for in the former verse he said the maladie was so vehement, that he looked for nothing but death. That day being past, he euen waits vnto the dawning of the next day following; and from thence, till night: so as he expected death euery minute of an houre. The sense then is; that although hee came to the day breake, yet he ranne hastily to death, by continuall turmoilings: for being smitten with the stroke of Gods fearfull iudgement, hee makes no account to liue. And as the Greekes when they will shew that nothing is so vaine a thing as man, do terme him a daies bird: so this good King puts the life of a day here for that transitorie life of a man, which is but of small continuance.

Man termed a daies bird by the Greekes.

Whereas he compares God to a lion, it is no new thing, albeit God of his owne nature be gentle, mercifull, and louing, and nothing sutes better to his nature then these titles: but we cannot feele this sweetnesse when we haue prouoked him by our vices, and made him seuere by our rebellion. Nay, which is more, there is not the crueltie nor sternnesse of any, nor of all the bruit beasts, that can so amaze or astonish vs, as doth the bare mentioning of the very name of God in this case: but most iustly. For his strokes must of necessitie haue that efficacie in them, as to bring downe all loftinesse, and to humble vs to the very gates of hell, that so being in a maner stripped of all comfort, wee may lie gasping after it, and yet in the meane while apprehend nothing but dread and horror. And of such terrors Dauid speaks in Psal. 22. 17. where he saith; I may tell all my bones. Againe, Psal. 6. 6. I water my couch with teares. Also, My soule is sore troubled: Psal. 6. 3. And the graue hath opened her mouth to swallow mee vp. Now it is needful that ỹ faithful should sometimes bee feared in this wise by the sense of Gods iudgements, that they may be so much the rather prouoked to desire his fauour.

Psal. 38.

Vers. 14. Like a crane or a swallow, so did I chatter; I did mourne as a doue: mine eies were lift vp on high: O Lord, it hath oppressed me, comfort me.

HEzekias cannot fit himselfe with wordes sufficient to set forth the greatnesse of his miserie, which brought him to that extremitie, that he was not able to speake distinctly, but to mutter forth a confused sound of words, euen as those that lie at the point of death. Whence it appeares that he was wonderfully perplexed, seeing his griefe was so great, that hee wanted words to expresse it. His wordes stucke as it were in his throat: nothing could bee heard but whisperings: whereunto appertaines these similitudes of the crane and swallow, which the Prophet here vseth.

Yet euen these confused voices doubtlesse doe pierce the eares of God: and albeit al our senses be surprised with heauinesse, and that our sorrowes haue shut vp our mouthes, yet he beholds our hearts still, and heares the sighes which be breathed from faith. Yea often times such broken sentences are sent forth with more force & efficacie, then words rightly framed, prouided that they proceede from the spirit of God, who stirs vp in vs such gronings, as cannot be expressed: Rom. 8. 25. There is no childe of God but in this case feeles by experience, when extreme sorrow causeth his tongue to cleaue to the roofe of his mouth, and his heart to be closed vp, so as his praiers are but stutterings and stammerings. Some translate that which followes in this sense; Mine eies are sunke in: but so the particle, on high, should not agree. And therefore it is best to retaine the naturall sense, which is; that his eies were wasted with often and much looking: or, that hee ceased not to lift vp his eies on high, albeit he was halfe dead; or was neuer so far out of heart, but he knew well that it was his dutie to wait for succour from God.

Let vs learne with Hezekias to lift vp our eies to the heauens: and let vs also know that our God requires no great rhetorique of vs in our praiers. He confirmes this sentence in turning his speech by and by vnto God, to desire his helpe: for in regard the violence of the disease oppressed him, he intreats the Lord to comfort him. Some translate, Answer for me; which we haue thought best to turne, comfort, or, glad mee: vnlesse any had rather receiue their translation who read it, Make mee to rest. How euer it be, he demands succour of God, to the end the weight of his afflictions might not ouerwhelme him: we also ought to assure our selues in this case, that God will be so much the more ready to comfort vs, by how much the more wee shall be prest on euerie side with many calamities.

Hezekias his example set before vs. God requires no Art of Rhetorike in the praiers of his seruants.

Vers. 15. *What shall I say? For hee hath said it to me, and hee hath done it: I shall walke weakelie all my yeeres in the bitternesse of my soule.

*Or, shall walke in trembling.

THe most thinke that these words are vttered by way of an exclamation, such as proceedes from ioy: as if Hezekias reioiced in hauing obtained his request: but I am of another opinion. For it seemes to me that hee goes on still in his complaints, because hee speakes as those commonly doe, who are oppressed with sorrow: What shall I say? He which hath said it to mee, hath done it. That is to say, life and death are in his hands, I plead but in vaine with him: it is but lost labour to complaine so much as I doe. Many such wordes and sentences are to be found in the booke of Iob. This therefore, as I take it, is the verie true sense of the place. For before, Hezekias looked euery way, to seeif any comfort would present it selfe vnto him: but now, seeing that God had giuen sentence of death vpon him, hee concludes, there is no resisting, I must obey.

Iob 7. 4. & 13. 24.

In the meane while, these words are to be well weighed; to wit, that God accomplisheth that in effect, which hee threatned in words.

For

For thoſe ſay ſomewhat (I grant) but not all, who expound ſimply thus; God hath performed that which the Prophet pronounced of me. Becauſe Hezekias doth not thus barely affirme, that he felt the effect of the word, but ſetting before his eies the power of God, hee puts an end to all his complaints and cries. Thus Dauid in the 39. Pſalme ſaith; I held my peace, Lord, becauſe thou diddeſt it. If the feare of Gods power reſtraines vs not, wee will neuer ceaſe murmuring: and therefore Iob conſidering that he had to doe with God, ſaith; I wil lay my hand vpon my mouth: I will make humble ſupplication to my Iudge: Iob 9.15. Hezekias then puts himſelfe to ſilence, for hee ſaw it was but vaine for him to ſtand diſputing the caſe with God. And thus hee confeſſeth, that hee was but as a dead man, becauſe the Lord made him feele how forcible his threatnings were. By reaſon whereof, this good King concludes, that hee profites himſelfe nothing at all with replies, becauſe diſcourſes to and fro haue no place in this behalfe. I grant that theſe words proceeded indeed from deſpaire: for in feeling God his enemie, he ſhuts vp the gate againſt the paſſage of his praiers. But it is no new nor ſtrãge thing; for ſuch words (which turne vs from praier) now and then to eſcape vs in extreme griefes; prouided that on the contrarie, wee cleaue cloſe to the proppe of praier; yea, although the ſenſe of the fleſh doe ouerſway vs ſo far for a time, as to perſwade vs that all is but in vaine.

Iob 39.37.

Wee may coniecture that this good King was ſo intangled with perplexed thoughts, that he fainted in his languiſhing diſeaſe, but eſpecially in that he ſaw it was the beſt way for him to be ſilent, as I haue ſaid: for hee did but loſe his labour to plead with God, as it ſhall appeare more fully in the courſe of the text. Whence we gather, that he now ſets before him the fearfull power of God, to the end hee may diſpoſe himſelfe to true humilitie.

Moreouer, becauſe the verbe Dadah ſignifies to moue ones ſelfe, to goe ſoftly; ſome expoſitors tranſlate; I ſhall be remoued, or, toſſed: others, I ſhall walke ſoftly. But I verily thinke hee ſpeakes of a weake and trembling gate; for he was ſo weakened, that he thought he ſhould neuer recouer his former ſtrength againe. This trembling muſt be referred to feare; for he addes by and by after, in the bitterneſſe: as if he ſhould ſay; The anguiſh which oppreſſeth mee, is ſo faſt rooted in mine heart, that it can neuer be plucked vp: and thence came this vexatioſſe whereof hee ſpeakes.

Auricular confeſſion.

Now becauſe the vulgar tranſlation hath; I will acknowledge: the Papiſts haue wreſted this place to proue their auricular confeſſion; but ſo vnaptly, that old dotards may laugh them to ſcorne. For it plainely appeares, that he ſpeakes not heere of confeſſion, but of an aſtoniſhment and trembling, wherewith Hezekias ſhall bee ſmitten, euen all the daies of his life, as he himſelfe here ſaith.

*Or, all thoſe that ſhal liue after me, ſhall know the life of my Spirit, becauſe thou haſt made me to ſleepe, &c.

Verſ. 16. O Lord, * to them that ouerliue them, and to all that are in them the life of my ſpirit ſhall bee knowne, that thou cauſedſt me to ſleep, and haſt giuen life to me.

THe Prophets words are ſo ſhort, that it hath cauſed many interpretations, amongſt which, this that followes is the moſt approued: O Lord, others ſhal liue after theſe yeeres: that is to ſay, their life ſhall bee prolonged. As if he ſhould ſay; Seeing thou haſt prolonged my daies, thou wilt alſo cauſe others to inioy the like fauour from thee. But this ſenſe agrees not with the text, and I iudge it too far fetched. I ſhould rather deem Hezekias his meaning to bee this; O Lord, all thoſe which ſhall liue after thoſe yeeres which thou haſt added vnto my life, ſhall know the life of my ſpirit. And therefore the relatiue (which) muſt bee ſupplied; for it is a thing vſuall among the Hebrewes not to expreſſe it: and ſo this will bee no conſtrained expoſition. For it is not to be doubted, neither can it be denied, but hee ſpeakes of the yeeres which the Lord had giuen him as an ouerplus. His meaning is then, that the fauour which God hath ſhewed him, ſhall not bee knowne to thoſe of his time onely, but of the poſteritie alſo. Thus he ſets forth the greatneſſe of the benefit, which ſhall be renowned for the time to come, and ſhall remaine ingrauen in the memories of all, euen after Hezekias ſhall be dead: ſo as it ſhall be called a kind of reſurrection. The word to ſleepe, ſignifies to die; according to the Hebrew phraſe, Gen. 47.30. Thus hee compares his ſickneſſe to death, to which he was ſo nie, that he made none account of life.

1. Cor. 7.39. & 11.30. 2. Pet. 3.14.

Verſ. 17. Behold, for felicitie I had bitter griefe; * but it was thy pleaſure to deliuer my ſoule from the pit of corruption: for thou haſt caſt all my ſinnes behind thy backe.

*Or, thou haſt loued my ſoule in the pit of perdition.

AGaine he amplifies the greatneſſe of his griefe by another circumſtance: for ſudden calamities which we thinke not of, doe trouble vs much more then thoſe which wee ſee approching. His ſickneſſe was the more cumberſome and inſupportable, becauſe it ſurpriſed him vnawares, whileſt he was quiet and in proſperity, thinking nothing leſſe then to be ſo ſoone bereaued of his life. We alſo know that the faithfull now and then doe pleaſe themſelues too much in their proſperitie, promiſing vnto themſelues a conſtant and ſetled felicitie; which Dauid confeſſeth himſelfe was guiltie of: I ſaid in my proſperitie, I ſhall neuer be moued; but when thou hiddeſt thy face I was troubled: Pſal. 30. Nothing therefore could aſtoniſh Hezekias more then to heare he muſt die, when hee made account to liue in peace, his enemie being driuen away and cut off: for I thinke hee fell ſicke after Sennacherib was repulſed, and his hoſt ſlaine; as we haue ſaid before. See then a ſore diſeaſe which now comes to vex him vehemently, in the middes of this ioy and tranquillitie which preſented it ſelfe before his eies.

We muſt not looke to inioy a ſetled eſtate any long time.

This ſhewes, that we muſt make no account to reioyce in any ſetled eſtate long, nor to lull our ſelues aſleepe in iollitie, ſeeing there is nothing ſtable nor ſtedfaſt in this life: but we may be bereaued of all our ioyes in a moment. Therfore whileſt we are in peace, let vs euen meditate of warre, aduerſitie, and perſecutions. Aboue all things, let vs carefullie ſeeke that peace which is grounded vpon Gods fatherlie loue and compaſſion, wherein our conſciences may reſt ſecurely.

The peace which is grounded vpon the aſſurance of Gods fauor, is to be ſought for aboue all things.

Soule taken for life.

The ſecond part of the verſe may be expounded two waies, becauſe the verb Chaſchak ſignifies To loue, and ſometimes To will: This ſenſe agrees not amiſſe, It was thy pleaſure to deliuer my ſoule: but if nothing be ſupplied, the ſenſe will ſtill be perfect, O Lord, thou haſt loued my ſoule when it was in the Sepulcher. It is knowne to all, that the Soule is taken for the life: but the Prophet here extols the bountie of God, who vouchſafed to loue Hezekias though he were halfe dead.

It was thy pleaſure &c.

In the next place he giues the reaſon of it, in bringing vs to the fountaine from whence this deliuerance iſſued: for otherwiſe, one might imagin that he hath ſpoken of nothing hitherunto but of bodily health. But we may now ſee that he looked much higher, to wit,

1 firſt vnto his guiltines before God,

2 ſecondly to the free reconciliation. He confeſſeth in deed that he hath receiued his life anew, but yet he eſteemes his reconciliation with God more then a hundred thouſand liues. Truly it were better for vs neuer to haue beene borne, then to liue long, heaping ſinne vpon ſinne, and ſo to hale downe the more horrible iudgemẽts of God vpon our own heads. Hezekias then reioyceth chiefflie, in that the light of Gods countenance did ſhine clearely vpon him: for our only felicitie conſiſts in hauing him good and gracious to vs. Yet herewithall he ſhewes, that we muſt impute the euils which God laies vpõ vs to our ſinnes: for ſuch as accuſe him of ouer-much ſeueritie, doe nothing elſe but double their owne woe. This good King condemnes not himſelfe of one ſinne only, but confeſſeth himſelfe guiltie of many ſinnes, and therefore ſtood in neede of more then one pardon. If we then deſire to be truly comforted in afflictions, let vs begin heere: for if God be appeaſed towards vs, no euill can hurt vs, ſeeing he delights not to haue his beloued ones lie languiſhing in their miſeries. It fares with vs therefore as with inconſiderate patients, who neuer thinke of their diſeaſe, but only of the accidents thereof, and of their griefes which they feele: but it is more wiſedome for vs to follow the counſell of the skilfull Phyſitian, who conſiders of the cauſe of the diſeaſe firſt, and aboue all things indeuors to remoue that: for they know that outward remedies are not only vaine, but hurtfull, if the inward diſeaſe be not diſcerned. Why ſo? Becauſe remedies in ſuch wiſe applied, do driue the diſeaſe further in, and ſo ſettles & augments it there, that afterwards there is no hope left for healing of it.

Hezekias eſteemes his reconciliation with God aboue an hundred thouſand liues.

To accuſe God of ouermuch ſeueritie, is but to double our owne woe.

Simile.

Hezekias therefore like a wiſe patient, acknowledgeth the cauſe of his ſicknes; to wit, his ſinnes: which being forgiuen, he then knew the puniſhment was likewiſe remitted and ceaſed. Now by this we may ſee the ſottiſhnes of the Papiſts touching their diſtinction between the fault and the puniſhment: for Hezekias teſtifies here that the one was pardoned as well as the other.

Hezekias looked into the cauſe of his ſicknes.

The ridiculous diſtinction of the Papiſts betweene the fault, and the puniſhment.

Wee are alſo to obſerue this phraſe of ſpeech which the Prophet vſeth, to wit, Thou haſt caſt all my ſinnes behinde thy backe: for his meaning therein is, that God had whollie aboliſhed the remembrance of them. As in Miche.7.9. Thou haſt caſt all their ſinnes into the bottome of the ſea. And in Pſal.103.12. He ſeparates our ſinnes as farre from vs, as the Eaſt is from the Weſt. All which ſentences may aſſure vs that God will neuer impute the ſinnes vnto vs which he hath once pardoned. If it fall out that we be corrected afterwards, he doth it not as a iudge, but as a tender and mercifull father, that he might thereby inſtruct and keepe his children in awe. The Papiſts therefore deceiue themſelues in dreaming that the corrections which follow are ſatisfactions or recompences, as if he would exact that at our hands, becauſe he is loth freelie to remit all. No, Gods only purpoſe in correcting vs is, that he may thereby prouide for our ſaluation for the time to come.

Afflictions no ſatisfactions.

Verſ. 18. For the graue cannot confeſſe thee: death can not praiſe thee: they that goe downe into the pit, cannot hope for thy truth.

WHere he ſaith, that he can not ſet forth the praiſes of God if his life be taken away, he promiſeth to do it, if ſo great a benefit may be granted vnto him; and therewithall ſhewes, that the only cauſe why he deſires to liue, is, that he might praiſe God. Now albeit there is not a better ſigne of a godlie heart then to deſire life, vpon condition to glorifie God continuallie by the ſame: yet it ſeemes Hezekias ſpeakes ſomewhat too ſtrictly. For the faithfull glorifie God no leſſe by their death, then by their life: by death they come to be perfectlie conioined with him, and neuer ceaſe to ſing his praiſes with the elect Angels. But there is yet another difficultie which moued Hezekias ſo much to flee death, and ſo earneſtlie to deſire to liue ſtill on earth. Which ſecond queſtion, albeit we haue diſcuſſed heretofore, yet the readers ſhall againe be put in minde that this terror proceeded not from the only apprehenſion of death: for when the houre came that he ſhould die, he recoiled not back, but willinglie went vnto his God. But at this time being ſmitten with the ſenſe of Gods wrath, his only ſorrow is, that his ſinnes had bereaued him of his life, fearing he ſhould neuer taſte any of Gods bleſſings or fauours afterward. Hereupon alſo depends the ſolution of the firſt queſtion: for what maruell is it if this good man ſeeing he muſt die, his death alſo proceeding

The faithfull glorifie God no leſſe by death then by life.

The cauſe why Hezekias was ſo loth to die.

ceeding from the anger of God kindled againſt him, to take vengeance on his ſinnes: what maruell is it, I ſay, if he ſorrowed and lamented to be condemned to die, as one vnworthy to bee imploied any longer in the aduancement of Gods true religion and ſeruice?

Whoſoeuer he be that is once ſtrucke with this thunderbolt, can not freelie magnifie the name of the Lord, neither in life nor in death, but muſt needes be mute, becauſe deſpaire hath ouerwhelmed his ſpirits. In this ſenſe Dauid ſaith; In death there is no remembrance of thee: Pſal.6.5. And the whole Church in Pſal.115.17. ſaith; The dead praiſe not thee, O Lord, neither any that go downe into the place of ſilence. Why ſo? Becauſe thoſe who feele the guilt of their ſinnes, and Gods anger preſſing them, want matter of thankſgiuing. And yet wee muſt note, that when the Saints ſpake thus, they conſidered not what their condition ſhould bee after death; but from the dolour which they felt they onely looked to the end for which God had created & preſerued them in this world. The chiefeſt end of mans life we know, is to ſpend the ſame in his ſeruice: who for this purpoſe conſerues his Church vpon earth, as hath been ſaid, becauſe hee will haue his name alwaies praiſed. Now he that ſeemes to be caſt off, in regard he is vnworthy to be any longer accounted among the number of Gods ſeruants, cannot diſtinctly conſider with a ſtill and quiet mind, what ſhall become of him after death, but being ouerſhadowed with ſorrowes, takes from the dead, the faculty of praiſing God, as if all exerciſes of pietie ceaſed after this life, becauſe (as hee thinkes) Gods glorie is buried in the graue with thoſe that ſhould bee the witneſſes of it.

Note.

The principall end of mans life.

Verſ. 19. But the liuing, the liuing, he ſhall confeſſe thee, as I doe this day: the father to the children ſhall declare thy truth.

HE comprehends not all men generally within this ſentence, ſeeing many liue, who notwithſtanding as much as in them is, labour to extinguiſh Gods glory by their ingratitude: ſo far are they off from thinking they were borne to ſet forth or magnifie the ſame. But his meaning onely is, that men may be true and lawfull Preachers of the glory of God, as long as it pleaſeth him to retaine them aliue in the world, becauſe he by his liberalitie daily & hourly ſummons them to the performance of this dutie. This oppoſition ſhews that his former ſpeech, The graue cannot confeſſe thee, death cannot praiſe thee, &c. ought to be referred to this point, namely, that ſuch as are cut off from the world, where they imploy their time in praiſing God, are by death depriued of ſo excellent a benefit. Beſides, he proteſteth that himſelfe ſhall now bee one of the witneſſes of Gods glory; thereby ſhewing a ſigne of his thankfulneſſe: for he ſaith hee will neuer forget ſuch a mercie, but will magnifie the Lord, and preach to others what fauour hee hath taſted of. And not onely to thoſe of his owne time, but to the poſteritie alſo, that they may euerie one ſet forth theſe praiſes, and reuerence the author of ſo great a bleſſing.

Verſ.18.

Hence wee are to gather a very profitable inſtruction; to wit, that men haue children beſtowed vpon them, on condition to bring them vp in the information of the Lord, euerie one indeuoring withal his might to leaue behind him for his ſucceſſors, ſome good occaſions to ſet forth Gods praiſes. Fathers of families therefore ought carefully to record vnto their children, the mercies which God hath ſhewed them. By the word truth, wee are to vnderſtand the fidelitie which God keepes with his ſeruants, and with all thoſe that are witneſſes of his grace, whereby hee manifeſts vnto them the truth of his promiſes.

Vpon what condition God giues men children.

Verſ. 20. The Lord was ready to ſaue me: therefore we will ſing my ſong all the daies of our life in the houſe of the Lord.

HEe acknowledgeth that his deliuerance proceeded not from the induſtry of men, but from the onely fauour of God. Whereas ſome tranſlate; It is the Lord which can deliuer mee; they expreſſe not the thing ſufficiently; it alſo ſeemes they miſſe the very letter: for hee not onely magnifies the power of God, but alſo his worke, by which his power was cleerly manifeſted. In a word, he oppoſeth this his deliuerance to that death vnto which he was iudged of God: for as before he apprehended him as a ſeuere Iudge, ſo now he leaps for ioy in acknowledging him to be his redeemer. For this cauſe he prepares himſelfe againe to ſing a ſong of thankſgiuing; yea, he calles others to him to aid him therein. He mentions the Temple, becauſe there the faithfull met together.

Had he been but a priuat man, and one of the common ſort, yet he was bound to haue offered a ſolemne ſacrifice for the incouraging of others, as well as for the diſcharge of his owne dutie. He therefore being a king, was to be much more carefull in bringing others with him to giue God thanks, eſpecially ſeeing the ſafetie of the whole Church conſiſted vpon his deliuerance. He will therefore indeuor, he ſaith, to make it knowne to all, what fauour God ſhewed him; and that it ſhould be remembred not for a day or two, but all the daies of their liues. Truly it had been a moſt vnworthy thing euer to haue ſuffered ſo ſingular a benefit to haue vaniſhed away, or to die at any time: but in regard of our owne forgetfulneſſe and dulneſſe, wee haue need to haue ſpurres to pricke vs continually forwards to the performance of this dutie. Thus alſo hee ſhewes to what end God hath appointed holy aſſemblies, euen to the end that all with one heart and mouth, may praiſe one God in Ieſus Chriſt, and ſtirre vp one another to the exerciſes of pietie.

Why God ordained publike aſſemblies.

Verſ.21.

Vers. 21. Then said Isaiah; Take a lumpe of dry figges, and lay it vpon the boile, and he shall recouer.

Isaiah shewes now what remedie hee gaue Hezekias. Others thinke it was no remedie, because figs are contrarie and hurtfull to vlcers: and therefore they say that the King was aduertised, and by this signe more fullie instructed that this recouerie onlie proceeded from the free grace of God. For example, the bow in the cloudes whereby God meant to testifie that the world should neuer perish againe by the flood, seemed notwithstanding to signifie the cleane contrarie: for it appeeres only when great raines gather together, and are readie to drowne the whole world. They thinke then that the Prophet hath of set purpose applied a remedie nothing fitting for the healing of the disease, because it might appeere to all, that Hezekias was healed without the help of any salues. But seeing the Physitians of our times do vse plaisters of figs to ripen the Plague-sore, it may be the Lord added the salue to his promise, as he often doth in other cases: for this medicine lessens not ỹ promise, which without the word had bin vaine and vnprofitable. He also had receiued a supernaturall signe, which no doubt taught him, that it was God, and none but he who restored his life vnto him, which in his conceit was lost.

Gen.9.13.

Vers. 22. Also Hezekias had said, What is the signe that I shall goe vp into the house of the Lord?

Some expound this verse as if this had bin giuen Hezekias for a signe; and therefore they referre it to the former sentence: but it is more likely that the order of the thing is here changed, which often falles out among the Hebrues, so as that which should be said in the beginning, comes in towards the latter end. Isaiah mentions not in the beginning of the Chapter that Hezekias required this signe, yet it is recorded in the holy historie that he so did, 2. King. 20. 8. He now addes that therefore which was omitted at the first. That I shall goe vp. In these words his meaning is that the chiefe care of his whole life was, to bestow it to the glorie of God: for he desires not to liue that he might consume his daies in voluptuousnes, but that he might maintaine the honour and pure worship of God. Let vs be admonished then that our daies are not prolonged to the end we should giue our selues to iollitie and dissolutions, but to honour him that hath so much honoured vs; to further one another in his feare; to meete together in the holy assemblies, to magnifie his mercie and truth.

Why God prolongs our dayes on earth.
1
2
3

THE XXXIX. CHAPTER.

Vers. 1. At the same time Merodach Baladan, the sonne of Baladan King of Babel, sent letters, and a present to Hezekias: for he had heard that he had bin sick and was recouered.

THE expositors thinke that this Merodach was the first King of the Chaldeans, because his father Baladan held the superioritie amõg the Babilonians, without hauing the title of King. After this Merodach then had reigned 12. yeeres, he subdued the Assyrians, and made them tributaries vnder the Caldeans. For those are deceiued who thinke that the warres were begun by Nebuchadnezar: It may well be that he made an end of them, and whollie subdued the Assyrians, whose power was then like enough halfe spent, there remained nothing for him then but to confirme ỹ kingdome in his owne hands which was cõquered by ỹ power of his predecessor. Now howsoeuer ỹ Prophet in few words telles how the Ambassadors were sent; yet we must obserue that Merodach did this guilefullie to guggle Hezekias with his flatteries. He threatned the Assyrians alreadie whom he knew the Iewes hated for good cause because of their continuall warres: that he might get him a companion then, and a fellow helper in his intended warres, hee insinuates himselfe cunningly into the amitie of this good King: whose heart, as you see, was forthwith surprised with pride, in that hee was too forward in accepting the fradulent flatteries of this Tyrant, and suffered himselfe to be poisoned therewith.

And yet the pretence was nothing else forsooth, but that the Ambassadors came to congratulate with him, in regard of the late recouerie of his health: howbeit the holy historie seemes to alleadge another reason; to wit, that Merodach was moued to send by a miracle: 2. Chron. 32. 31. No doubt but this going backe of the Sunne was renowned far and neere: neither could it be, but many nations were much moued by the report of so vnwonted a thing. But it is hard to say, that so profane a man respected any other thing, then to catch Hezekias by this meanes in his nets. And because God had by so excellent a signe, signified how deare the safetie of Hezekias was vnto him, Merodach thought with himselfe (as the wicked and vnbeleeuers are wont to abuse such testimonies of Gods fauour, to the seruing of their own turnes) that his warres which he meant to vndertake, must needes succeed wel, and be blessed from heauen, if he might get such a one as Hezekias to take his part. Thence it was that to manifest his good will, he sent his Ambassadors to him with a present: for he meant to winne him, because cauſe ſuch an acquaintance ſhould be fit and profitable to aid him againſt the Aſſyrians, whom the Iewes (as he well knew) hated moſt deadly. Thus you ſee the policies of Kings and Princes, to wit, by cloſe conueiances to ſerue their owne turnes, neuer caring by what meanes they procure aid, ſo they may make themſelues ſtrong againſt their enemies.

The practiſes of idolatrous Kings and Princes.

Verſ. 2. And Hezekias was glad of them, and ſhewed them the houſe of his treaſures, the ſiluer, and the gold, and the ſpices, and the pretious ointment, and all the houſe of his armour, and all that was found in his treaſures: there was nothing in his houſe, nor in all his kinkdome, that Hezekias ſhewed them not.

THe Prophet plaies the hiſtoriographer. For firſt hee telles plainly what Hezekias did: next, he will ſhew why he did it; to wit, 1 2 becauſe ambition had blinded his eies: and thus he meant to make himſelfe great in the ſight of the Ambaſſadors. Thus he taxeth this inordinate ioy, from whence proceeded ſo great care at length to feaſt and welcome them. He that ſhall reade the hiſtorie barely, wil thinke there is no great fault to be found in Hezekiah for any thing he did. Was it not humanitie in him to receiue ſuch Ambaſſadors with gladneſſe and magnificence, and to ſhew them all ſignes of loue? Who can denie it? Nay, hee had ſhewed himſelfe more then barbarous, if hee had reiected thoſe who in ſuch kind manner came to viſit him; or, if he had ſet light by the friendſhip of ſo mightie a King. Notwithſtanding all this, 3 his heart was too farre tickled with vanitie and oſtentation. For he meant to ſhew his greatneſſe, to the end the Babylonian might know that this amitie ſhould ſerue him to good purpoſe; which he further inſinuated by ſhewing his riches, munitions, 2 and furniture for warre. Hee was alſo blameworthy, for deſiring to bee ſupported by ſtrange and vnlawfull meanes: for therein he bereaued God of his honour, who had freely deliuered him out of two great dangers: otherwiſe, the Prophet would neuer haue reproued him ſo ſharply for this fact.

Heere is a faire looking glaſſe therefore, in which euery one may ſee that there is nothing ſo dangerous, as to bee blinded with proſperitie: to which purpoſe it was well ſaid long agoe; It is a harder matter to beare proſperitie then aduerſitie. We wax vnruly and inſolent when things fall out as wee would haue them; neither can we be kept in awe by any threatnings or admonitions whatſoeuer. If this befell Hezekias, whom the Prophet before hath ſo much commended, whoſe onely treaſure was the feare of God: Chap. 33. 6. how ought we to watch ouer our owne hearts, leſt we fall into the like dangers?

Nothing ſo dangerous, as to bee blinded with proſperitie.

He ſuffers himſelfe to bee ouerſwaied with vaine oſtentation, and neuer remembers that being halfe dead before, the Lord drew him out of his graue by a miracle from heauen. In the 20. verſe of the former Chapter, hee vowed to ſing the praiſes of God all the dates of his life, in the aſſemblie of the Saints. Now when he ſees ſome ſuing for his friendſhip, and that a mightie Monarch ſends from far to ſalute him, he preſently forgets God, with al the benefits which he had receiued at his hands. Do we ſee this good King ſo ſoone ouerthrowne, and ouerſwaied with pride and ambition, let vs learne to hold our ſelues within the liſts of modeſtie, by which we may daily be preſerued in the feare of God.

If ſuch a mightie Cedar fell, what ſhall become of ſuch low ſhrubs as we be?

Modeſtie the meanes to hold vs in the feare of God.

Verſ. 3. Then came Iſaiah the Prophet vnto King Hezekias, and ſaid vnto him; What ſaid theſe men? and from whence came they to thee? And Hezekiah ſaid; They are come from a farre Country vnto me, from Babel.

HEe goes on with the ſame narration ſtill, but he addes doctrine vnto it. And howſoeuer he vtters not a word of Gods ſending of him, yet it is moſt certaine that he did this by the inſtinct and commandement of the holy Ghoſt; for which cauſe he adornes himſelfe with the title of Prophet: wherein he ſignifies that he came not as a priuat man, but as hee that was to execute the office which God had inioined him; to the end Hezekias the King might know, that he had not to doe with Iſaiah the Prophet now, as with a mortall man. In that he ſaith he came, we may gather that the King called him not, but let him reſt at home in his houſe, whileſt hee ſhewed and diſcouered all his riches: for Prophets are not wont to be called, when ſuch matters are in hand. Before, when calamities beſieged him, and that Rabſhekeh had proudly and diſdainfully blaſphemed the God of Iſrael, then Iſaiah the Prophet was ſought out and ſent for, to intreat him to lift vp his praier for the remnant that was left: Chap. 37. 4. and to giue him ſome word of conſolation and comfort. Thus the Prophets are ſought vnto when aduerſitie and troubles are neere, or vpon vs: but all things being quiet and well, the Prophets are forgotten; nay, they are reiected becauſe they trouble the feaſt (as they ſay) by their wholſome admonitions, and ſeeme to fill all the company with nothing but melancholie.

The King called not for Iſaiah now.

Prophets vſually ſent for in extremitie, but forgotten in proſperitie.

Iſaiah came notwithſtanding vncalled for; wherein we are behold his conſtancy: whoſe example may teach vs, not to tarrie till wee be ſent for by ſuch as ſtand in neede of our office, whileſt they pleaſe themſelues in moſt hurtfull vices, and plunge themſelues into perill by their lightneſſe, ignorance, or malice. It is our duties to gather the diſperſed ſheepe together; yea, we ſtand bound to doe it carefully, though no man ſhould require this dutie of vs.

Iſaiah his conſtancie to be noted.

Now howſoeuer Hezekias deſerued to bee ſharply rebuked, in that he ſuffered himſelfe to be ſo ſoone corrupted by the King of Babylon, neuer asking counſell of God; yet the great modeſtie that was in him is worthy of memorie.

The modeſty of Hezekias memorie. Why so? He repulseth not the Prophet, neither disdaines he his message, as if hee had reproued him without cause, but giues him a mild answer, and in conclusion receiues his hard censure peaceably. He had done better if he had inquired at the mouth of the Lord at the very first, as it is in Psalm. 119.24. Thy statutes are my counsellers: but hauing failed herein vnawares, it was a singular vertue in him obediently to receiue the reproofe of his fault which he had committed.

The first question.

What said these men?] The Prophet hits him not home at the first, but prickes him gently, that he might bring him by degrees to confesse his fault. For Hezekias flattered himselfe, and thought himselfe in as good ease as might be. It was needfull therefore he should be awakened out of this his sleepe by little and little. I grant this first blow was a very piercing one: as if he should haue said; I pray thee what hast thou to doe with these fellowes? Oughtest thou not much rather to haue fled from so contagious a pestilence? He askes also what the summe of their message was, to shame Hezekias, who was ignorant of the serpent which lay hidden vnder the sweet flowers: for he finds no fault with the gratulation of these Ambassadors, although poison was also mingled therewithall: but he aimes at the snares which the Caldeans had set to trap Hezekias his feete. Notwithstanding it seemes by his answer, that he was little moued by this light reprehension, because he pleased himselfe too much as yet, in that which he had done; for he vaunts that these men were come to him from a farre Country, from Babylon. No doubt but Isaiah knew this Countrie well, so as Hezekias needed not so eloquently to haue described the farre distance of the place: but thus he flattere himselfe, because ambition possessed him. It was requisite therefore that his sore should bee gaged to the bottome, and lanced with sharper instruments.

Vers. 4. Then said hee; What haue they seene in thine house? And Hezekiah answered; All that is in mine house haue they seene: there is nothing among my treasures that I haue not shewed them.

The second question.

AGaine he said, &c.] Hee continues on his couert admonition, to see if Hezekias will at last bee touched and displeased with his sinne. But he cannot yet win so much of him, albeit it is almost incredible that the King should be growne so senselesse, as not to feele such prickings. For he knew wel enough that the Prophet came not as curious folkes doe, to inquire of newes, or to passe the time in meriment with the King; but to conferre with him about some matter of importance. How euer it were, yet his calme answer is to be commended; for he falles not out with the Prophet, but modestly confesseth how all things went. But no signe of repentance appeares, neither confesseth he himselfe faulty: for hee considered not his sinne in this his drowsinesse.

Ambition a deceitfull witch.

Ambition is so cunning a witch, that shee not onely bewitcheth men with her sweete poison, but takes away all their senses: so as though they be admonished, yet they repent not at the first onset. When we therefore see this good King smitten with such a benummednesse, that hee feeles no reprehensions, neither can bee brought to the knowledge of himselfe, wee ought by his example carefully to beware of so dangerous a plague.

Vers. 5. And Isaiah said to Hezekiah; Heare the word of the Lord of hostes:

6. Behold, the daies come, that all that is in thine house, and which thy fathers haue laid vp in store vntill this day, shall be carried to Babel: nothing shall be left, saith the Lord.

Hezekias had not faulted lightly.

BY this iudgement heere pronounced by God, we may see that Hezekias his sinne was not small, howsoeuer common reason would iudge it otherwise. For in as much as God keepes alwaies a measure in his chastising of men; from the greatnesse of the correction we may gather, that this was no light offence, but an horrible crime. And hereby we are also admonished, that men can neuer discerne aright, neither of their words nor workes, but that God is the onely competent Iudge thereof. Hezekias shewes his treasures: were they gathered together to lie alwaies hidden vnder locke and key? Hee receiues the Ambassadors courteously; Should hee haue driuen them away? Hee heares their message: but since the enemie of the Assyrians seekes amitie with him, should he set light by such a commoditie? In a word, what fault is to bee found in all this, if you looke to the outward act? But God, from whom no secrets are hid, spies first of all ingratitude in Hezekias, in this his gladnesse: for he forgets the miserie which pressed him but a little before, and sets the Caldeans (as it were) in the place of God, to whose honour his body and goods were to be consecrated and dedicated. Secondly, he notes his pride; because hee indeuoured beyond measure to be renowned, in regard of his magnificence and riches. He was faultie also touching his disordered affection, in making such a league as was the destruction of the whole state. But the greatest fault of all was his pride, which after a sort strippes mens hearts of all feare of God: for which cause Augustine rightly breakes out into this exclamation; O what and how great is the poison of ambition, which cannot be cured but by a counterpoison! For he had respect vnto that place in the Corinths, where the Apostle saith; the angell of Satan was sent to buffet him, lest he should be exalted about measure: 2. Cor. 12.7.

God keepes a measure in his chastisements: Ier. 30.11.

God the only competent Iudge both of our words and workes.

1

2

3

1

2

3

Augustine.

The poison of pride not to be cured but by a counterpoison.

Hezekias was inuincible whilest all things stood

ſtood in a deſperat caſe: and now he is ouercome by theſe allurements, and is not able to conquer nor reſiſt his owne vaine ambition. Let vs conſider how dangerous a malladie this is, and let vs keepe ſo much the more diligent watch ouer our falſe and treacherous hearts. Now in regard the Prophet was to pronounce ſo heauie a ſentence, he ſaith firſt, that God enioined him to ſpeake: Heare the word of the Lord, ſaith he: in the next verſe he repeates it againe: not that he laies the matter whollie vpon God, becauſe he feared ill handling; but to the end he might touch the heart of the King to the quick. Wherein we may againe note his great boldnes and conſtancie. He dreads not the preſence of the King, he feares not to diſcouer his diſeaſe, nor to threaten Gods iudgemẽt againſt him. For although Kings eares were then ſomewhat nice and delicate, yet being aſſured that God had ſet him a worke, he executes his charge couragiouſlie, how vnpleaſant ſoeuer his meſſage was. The Prophets were indeed the Kings ſubiects, and therefore vnder ſubiection: neither attributed they any thing vnto themſelues, vnleſſe they were to goe on Gods errant. But then, what high imagination is there which ought not to be brought downe vnder his Maieſtie? Had he minded to haue retained the fauour of his Prince he would haue bin mute as flatterers are: but he had an eie to his calling, and indeuors to diſcharge the ſame faithfullie.

Iſaiah his boldnes and conſtancie.

Nothing ſhall be left.] The maner of this chaſtiſement wherewith the Lord threatens Hezekias is to be obſerued: for he takes away from his ſucceſſors thoſe things wherein he gloried ſo much, to the end they might not haue occaſion to doe the like. See how God puniſheth the ambition and pride of men: for their name, or kingdome, which they imagined ſhould laſt for euer, is raced out: they are deſpitefullie intreated, and their memorie is curſed: In a word, he ouerturnes their fond conceits, ſo as they find the cleane contrarie to that which they conceiued in their fooliſh braine.

Obiect. If it be obiected, that it is no reaſon a whole citie & kingdom ſhuld be deſtroyed or caried away captiue for one mãs fault; ſeeing ỹ holy Ghoſt in many places pronounceth, that the open and vniuerſall obſtinacie of the Iewes was the cauſe why God gaue both Citie and Countrie for a pray to the Caldeans: I anſwere, that no abſurditie can enſue, if God be ſaid to puniſh the ſinne of a particular perſon, and that of a whole nation together. For ſince his wrath laid the whole Countrie waſt, all were to acknowledge their offence; and euery one in particular was to conſider what he had deſerued: that ſo none might lay the fault vpon another, but euery man might rather condemne himſelfe.

Anſ. God can puniſh the ſinne of a perticular perſon, and that of a whole kingdome together.

Furthermore, ſeeing the Iewes were culpable alreadie before the iudgement ſeate of God, Hezekias was iuſtly permitted to fall, that the way might be opened for God his wrath to breake forth, and to haſten the execution of his vengeance. And the like we know fell out in Dauid. For it was not by chance that he was moued to number the people, but it came to paſſe by the fault of Iſrael, whom the Lord meant by that meanes iuſtly to chaſten. The wrath of the Lord, ſaith the text, was kindled againſt Iſrael, and he moued Dauid againſt them to number the people, 2. Sam. 24. 1. So alſo in this place Hezekias is threatned with a iudgement: but the ſinne whereby he prouoked the wrath of the Lord to burne, was a iuſt vengeance vpon the whole people for the ſinnes committed by them before.

Verſ. 7. And of thy ſonnes, that ſhall proceed out of thee and which thou ſhalt beget ſhall they take away, and they ſhall be Eunuches in the Palace of the king of Babel.

THis might ſeeme worſe then the former threatning to Hezekias, and therefore it is referred to the laſt place, to amplifie the iudgement. If any calamitie do befall a countrie, Kings, and theirs, thinke to be exempted from it, becauſe they are none of the common ſort. When the Prophet telles him then that his ſonnes ſhall be caried away captiues, we may well ſay, that this ſeemed a very hard ſentence to him indeed.

Moreouer we may from hence gather how much God deteſted this confidence which Hezekias repoſed in his riches and outward eſtate (whereof alſo he vanted in the preſence of theſe infidels) ſeeing he takes vengeance of this crime as of a ſinne irremiſſible by ſo horrible an example, becauſe the King had ſhewed his treaſures to theſe heathens and infidels.

Verſ. 8. Then ſaid Hezekiah to Iſaiah, The word of the Lord is good, which thou haſt ſpoken: and he ſaid, * Yet there ſhall be peace and * truth in my daies.

* Or, at leaſt, let there be.
* Or, ſtabilitie.

FRom this anſwere of Hezekias we gather, that he was not rebellious nor preſumptuous, ſeeing he quietlie heard the Prophets reprehenſion, though he was not much moued with it at the firſt: for hearing that the Lord was angrie, he condemnes himſelfe without any replies, and confeſſeth, that he is iuſtlie puniſhed. In whom we haue a paterne of true teachablenes and obedience: for when he heard the iudgements of God denounced againſt him, he ſtood not vpon termes with the Prophet, but ſhewed himſelfe modeſt and meeke. From the example then of this good King, let vs learne to hearken to the Lords voice quietlie, not only when he exhorts or admoniſheth; but alſo when he condemnes and terrifies vs, in giuing iuſt ſentence vpon vs.

Wee muſt hearken to the Lords voice not only when he admoniſheth vs, but whẽ he pronounceth ſentence of condemnation againſt vs.

In ſaying, that the word of the Lord is good: he firſt of all commends his iuſtice, and with patience accepts of that which for the tarnes of it might haue driuen him to ſwelling and impatiencie: for the very reprobates haue ſometimes confeſſed the fault, and yet their ſtubborne hearts haue neuer bin ſo tamed, but they haue grudged against the reuenging hand of their Iudge. To the end that Gods threatnings may haue a sweet relish therefore, it is necessarily required that wee conceiue some hope of pardon in the middest of Gods displeasure: otherwise, our hearts will bee alwaies so stuffed with bitternesse, that nothing but gall and wormewood will proceed out of the same. But he which in his heart is perswaded that though God corrects, yet he ceaseth not still to retaine the louing affection of a father; such a one will not onely acknowledge God to be iust, but will also meekely and patiently beare his temporarie seueritie. To be short, where the feeling of Gods loue takes place, so as this principle be once fixed in our hearts, that he is our father, it shall not much dismay nor trouble vs to be heaued vp, or cast downe, according as it pleaseth him: for faith will teach vs that there is nothing more profitable then his fatherly chastisement.

Faith will teach vs that nothing is more profitable for vs then Gods fatherly chastisement.

In this sort Dauid in all humilitie answers the Prophet Nathan, who sharply rebuked him: I haue sinned against the Lord: 2.Sam.12.13. (which imports as much as that speech of old Heli; It is the Lord, let him doe that which is good in his eies: 1.Sam.3.18.) For he is silent, not because it could aduantage him nothing at all to murmure; but because hee willingly submits himselfe to Gods iustice. It seemes that Sauls silence tends to the same end, when Samuel told him that the kingdome was rent from him: 1.Sam.15.24. But because the punishment onely terrified him, he was touched with no compunction of heart at all for his fault. It is no wonder then though he be full of garboilings inwardly still, albeit hee set a faire countenance of it outwardly; because he could not resist accordingly as he would: for malefactors that haue fetters on their heeles, and mannacles on their hands, are wont to intreat those Iudges, whom they could find in their hearts to tumble frō their seates, and to stampe them vnder their feete. But because Dauid and Hezekias are in such wise hūbled vnder the mightie hand of God, that they lost not the assurance of pardon, they chose rather willingly to beare the blowes wherewith they were smitten, then to pull their necks out of the yoke.

Simile.

It is also very remarkeable, that Hezekias not onely confesseth that this sentence of God is good, but that also, which Isaiah had spoken: for this word then, hath great weight in it, in that hee is contented with all reuerence to receiue the word, though spoken by a mortall man; for hee looked to the chiefe author of it.

The libertie which Isaiah tooke might haue seemed somewhat too harsh and combersome in the eies of a King: but taking him (as he was indeede) for the seruant of God, he suffers himselfe to bee censured of him. Which being so, their niceneſse is insupportable, who can beare no admonitions nor reprehensions at all, but in disdaine, obiect against the Pastors and Ministers of the word: Are you not men as well as wee? As if forsooth God were not to be obeied, vnlesse he should send an Angell to admonish them: or, vnlesse himselfe should speake vnto them from heauen. Hence also we may learne, what to thinke of such fantasticall spirits, who seeming to reuerence God, doe notwithstanding wilfully reiect the doctrine of the holy Prophets.

But if they were so readie to obey God, then would they giue as much audience to him in the person of his seruants, as to himselfe if hee should thunder from heauen. I confesse wee must distinguish the true Prophets from the false, and the voice of the Pastor from the stranger: but we must not reiect all, hand ouer head, vnlesse we meane therewithall to reiect God himselfe. Yea, they must be heard of vs, not onely when they exhort and reproue, but also when they condemne and threaten vs (in the name of God) to be punished for our sinnes.

Those that are indeed willing to obey God, will giue him as much reuerence whē he speakes by the mouth of one of his seruants, as if himselfe should speak vnto them out of a thūder from heauen.

The particle Ci, is taken heere for an exception: and therefore I haue translated; Yet there shal be peace. For Hezekias addes somewhat more therein to the former; to wit, hee thanks God in that hee hath mitigated the punishment which he had deserued. As if he should say; The Lord might haue raised vp enemies against mee forthwith, that might haue driuen mee out of my Kingdome: but now he spares me, & in deferring the iudgement, moderates the punishment which I should of right sustaine.

This sentence may also be expounded by way of a praier, yet let there be peace: so as Hezekias should request that the correction might be deferred to another time. Notwithstanding, it is more probable that he applies that to the cōforting of his sorrowfull heart, which the Prophet had said of the daies to come; that thereby hee might arme himselfe with patience, because a sudden iudgement would haue astonished him much more. This exception then agrees well for the tranquillitie of his minde; yet God will spare for the terme of my life. Notwithstanding, if any had rather expound it, For there shall bee peace; I hinder him not. Some take the word truth, for the seruice of God and true religion; as if in dying, hee should render thanks to God that the pure doctrine should remaine vncorrupted: but I had rather take it for stabilitie, or a quiet state of the Kingdome: vnlesse any had rather take it to signifie an assured prosperitie, and of long continuance.

Now Hezekias might seeme cruell, in that he vtterly neglected his posterity, as one that cared not much what became of things after his death. For these are horrible blasphemies which swinish Epicures and others of that rout haue in their mouthes at this day; When I am dead, let the earth bee on a flaming fire. Againe, When I die, let all die with me. But Hezekias had a far other meaning: for albeit hee desired the prosperitie of such as should suruiue him, as much as his owne; yet hee could not set light by the signe of Gods mercie, who deferred the execution of this iudgement till after his death. For he might conceiue hope from thence, that his succes-

Horrible blasphemies of swinish Epicures.

sors

ſors ſhould in the end bee partakers of this fauour and mercie. Some thinke he reioiced for this delay, becauſe wee ought not to care for to morrow, conſidering that the day hath enough with his owne griefe: Mat. 6. 24. But this ſutes not well in this place: for Hezekias contemnes not the poſteritie, but perceiuing that God did fauourably mittigate the chaſtiſement which hee had deſerued, hee thanks him for it, (as we haue ſaid) in regard it was his dutie to accept of the preſent mercie offered, howſoeuer the iudgement was deferred till after his death. Truly wee for our parts are to performe all ſeruices to the age in which we liue, and to haue ſpeciall regard vnto it: wee muſt not caſt off all care for the time to come; but it is our duties to imploy our vttermoſt indeuors for that which is preſent, and now moſt preſſeth vpon vs. Wee which liue in theſe times together, are more neerly conioined in affection by the Lord, that by our mutuall communication, wee might helpe one another as much as in vs lies.

We ought to performe our ſeruices to the vtmoſt to that age in which we liue.

It is alſo to be noted, that in reſpect of Hezekias his ſinne, hee had iuſt cauſe to feare, leſt the Lord might againe ſhorten and cut off the courſe of his life, which had been prolonged before, euen when hee lay at deaths doore. Hearing therefore the promiſe to be ratified and confirmed, hee giues thanks to God, and is the more patient, in regard of the calamitie to come; although it could not but bee irkeſome and greeuous to him to thinke of it.

THE XL. CHAPTER.

Verſ. 1. Comfort yee; Comfort yee my people, will your God ſay.

The occaſion of this propheſie.

NOw the Prophet enters vpon a new argumẽt; for he lets the people alone, which made no vſe neither of admonitions nor threatnings whatſoeuer, in regard they were become maliciouſly deſperate: and turnes him towards the poſteritie to come, to ſignifie to thoſe which ſhould bee humbled vnder the croſſe, that they ſhould not be left comfortleſſe in the end; no, not in their deepeſt diſtreſſes. It is very likely that this propheſie was written by him, when the time of the captiuitie drew neere, that after his death he might not leaue the Church behind him ouerwhelmed with greeuous calamities, without hope of reſtauration. Now albeit that to the ſame end hee hath before mingled threatnings and terrors with his propheſies, yet it ſeemes hee had a principall regard to thoſe that then liued: but all that which followes hereafter, toucheth the eſtate of the Church to come, which was reſtored long after the Prophets death. For he will now ſet downe a perpetuall doctrine, which is not to bee reſtrained to any particular time, ſeeing hee diſcourſeth both of the beginning and progreſſe of Chriſts Kingdome. Of ſo much the greater importance therefore ought this propheſie to bee vnto vs, by how much the more it belongs particularly vnto vs for our vſe. For albeit wee may euidently diſcerne in the former propheſies, that the doctrine therein contained, is proper vnto vs as well as to the Iewes; yet in regard he now leaues the Iewes that then liued, and ſpeakes to their ſucceſſors, and indeede to all the faithfull to the worlds end, it ſeemes indeede that the doctrines following are more peculiar vnto vs. The Lord meant therefore to awaken the hearts of the faithfull by this exhortation, leſt they ſhould faint vnder ſo many calamities. Firſt then he ſpeakes to the Iewes, which ſoone after were to be led away captiues into miſerable ſeruitude, where they ſhould be depriued both of the ſacrifices and Prophets, and left deſtitute of all conſolation, had not the Lord bin pleaſed to haue releeued them by the comfortable doctrines of theſe propheſies enſuing. In the ſecond place he directs his ſpeech to the whole Kingdome of Chriſt, which ſhould ſucceed them ſoone after, to the end they might then take heart vnto them, when in all likelihood they might ſeeme in the eies of the world to be vtterlie forlorne. But to the end his words might haue the more efficacie, and might indeede come neere the heart, he brings in God raiſing vp new Propheis: whom hee commands to ſweeten and aſſwage the dolours of his people, by an amiable conſolation. The ſumme is, that after theſe poore baniſhed exiles ſhall haue ſeemed to haue beene forſaken for a time, that Gods fauour and louing kindneſſe ſhall breake forth, as out of the darkneſſe; and the propheſies which were ceaſed, ſhould then be brought to light againe.

1

2

The time when this propheſie was written.

The propheſies that went before, reſpected thoſe that then preſently liued: theſe that follow, the eſtate of the Church to come.

The ſumme of this propheſie.

Why the propheſies following, ought to be more highly eſteemed of vs then the former.

Now to amplifie this their ioy, he vſeth the plurall number; Comfort yee: thereby ſhewing, that he will not ſend one or two, but many by troopes; which alſo came to paſſe indeed: wherein alſo we may more cleerly behold the infinite loue and mercy of God. Moreouer, it is diligently to be obſerued, that the verbe is put in the future tence; will your God ſay. Which ſome expoſitors tranſlate in the preſent tence, or in the preterperfect tence; but therein they both change and corrupt the ſenſe: for the Prophet cloſly notes out the time wherein the people ſhould be greeuouſly afflicted, as if God had not ſeene them at all. For howſoeuer the Lord at that time left them not deſtitute of hope touching their deliuerance, by ſending ſome Prophets vnto them; yet in regard he deferred them long, and that whileſt they were miſerably perſecuted, and in a maner halfe dead: this consolation had no great efficacie, till they saw some euident signes of their returne.

Comfort ye, comfort ye. The verb Comfort therefore is to be applied to the present time, which being twice repeated, not only confirmes the truth of the prophesie, but also sets forth the power and efficacie of it: as if he should say, in this message there shall be a full, perfect, and perpetuall occasion of gladnes.

But especiallie they were to retaine the futurtence, will your God say? for in these words there lies hid a close opposition betweene that dolefull silence whereof I haue spoken, and that comfortable doctrine which came in place of it.

This prophesie is like to the complaint of the Church, Psal.74. Wee see not our signes, our Prophets are not, and there is none left that can tell vs how long: in which we know she laments, as one left destitute of true consolation, because she could heare no promise of comfort in her distresses. The Prophets meaning in this place then is, The Lord will not suffer you to be left destitute of Prophets which shall comfort you in your extreame aduersitie: for then he will raise vp men to whom he wil giue that commission which you haue so long desired, and then will he shew he hath care of you.

Now I referre this verb will say, not only to the captiuitie of Babylon, but to the whole time of our deliuerance; which comprehends in it the kingdome of Christ vntill his last cõming. We must adde, that he will say to ỹ Prophets, whom he will ordeine for this purpose: for in vaine shal they vtter their voice, vnlesse the Lord speake not to them first, and put that into their mouthes which they shall publish vnto others. Thus then there is a mutuall relation betweene God and his Prophets. But as I haue said, these things are not to be wholie restrained to the captiuitie of Babylon; no, they haue a further extent, and comprehend vnder them the doctrine of the Gospell, in which this power to comfort is chiefliе conteined: for it is the proper office thereof to refresh the afflicted, & those that are brought low, to quicken the dead, and to reioyce such as are in heauines: in a word, to bring with it tidings of all ioy and gladnes; for which cause it is called the Gospell, that is to say, good newes: which began not then to be published when Christ first appeared to the world, but long before, to wit, from the time that God first manifested his fauour.

The proper office of the Gospell.

Gospell, that is, glad tidings.

Daniell. Daniell, he first raised vp the standard, to the end the faithfull might prepare themselues to returne home: after him, Haggai, Zachari, Malachi, Nehemiah, Ezra, and others after them, vntill Christes comming, alwaies exhorted the faithfull to be of good comfort, and to hope against hope. The last of them that wrote was Malachi, who knowing there should be no more Prophets after him, sends the people to the law of Moses, that they might learne what the will of God was both touching his threatnings and promises, Mal.4.4.

Haggai. Zachurie. Malachi. Nehemiah. Ezra.

Now from this place we gather that which is chiefliе to be sought in the Prophets, to wit, they set before vs the sweetnes of Gods fauor, that the faithfull might conceiue hope for the time to come: that they should not quaile vnder afflictions, but might perseuere in prayer. But the matter being alwaies incredible, he calles to minde the couenant; as if he meant to say, That it was vnpossible for God to forget that which he once promised to Abraham. Howsoeuer the Iewes then had fallen from the grace of God by their sinnes, yet he auoucheth notwithstanding that he is their God still, and that they were his peculiar people which depended vpon his election: and therefore in regard there were many reprobates among them, he only directs his speech to the faithfull, for he lets the wicked languish and consume away in their incredulitie. But the godly haue here an inestimable consolation, to wit, that albeit they be pressed with griefe and anguish for a time, yet because they put their trust in him who is the father of mercies and God of all consolation, they shall in the end feele that the promises of grace were conserued and kept for them as an hid treasure, to glad their hearts in due season. See heere an excellent commendation of the propheticall office, which serues to susteine the faithfull in aduersitie, lest they should faint or sinke vnder the burthen: contrariwise, this place shewes, that God is exceeding angrie whē he depriues vs of such faithfull teachers as may bring glad tidings to the Church whereby to refresh the wearie soule, and to strengthen the weake.

What is chiefly to be sought in the Prophets.

My people.

th

Vers. 2. [a] Speake comfortablie to Ierusalem and crie vnto her, that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquitie is pardoned: for she hath receiued of the Lords hand double for all her sinnes.

[a] Or, speake to the heart of Ierusalem.

HEre God giues his seruants the Prophets a Commission, and puts that in their mouthes which they were to vtter, when fit time serued, for to comfort the faithfull that were sorowfull. And yet he stands not so much to exhort or imbolden the Prophets to discharge this their dutie manfullie and faithfullie, as he is earnest in giuing of hope to the godly, wishing them to possesse their soules in patience, vntill the Prophets were sent vnto them with this ioyfull and comfortable message. To speake according to the heart, signifies nothing else but to speake that which is acceptable to vs: for our heart abhorres all vnpleasant tidings, but it effectuallie imbraceth, and runnes (as it were) to meete with that which is well pleasing vnto it. Now because the people were in a maner reiected and forsaken, what newes could be better welcome then reconciliation with GOD, whereby all their sinnes were pardoned?

Vnder the word Ierusalem by a Synecdoche, we are to vnderstand the Church, which is so euident, that it needs no proofe.

Ierusalem signifies the Church.

The word crie, signifies, that this promise of grace shall be cleare and euident; it shall sound so in their eares, that all shall vnderstand: for if the Prophets should mutter or whisper whiſper onely, the aſſurance of this conſolation might ſeeme doubtfull or weake: but all doubting is taken away, ſeeing it is to be deliuered freely and with a loud voice.

Her warfare is ended.

That her warfare is ended.] This is that acceptable tidings; to wit, that God hath put an end to the afflictions of his people. Some take the word Tſeronah, which we haue tranſlated Warfare, ſimply for the time: as if hee ſhould ſay, Her time is accompliſhed. Others thinke that the time of viſitation is here noted, but vnfitly; becauſe this word properly ſignifies among the Hebrewes, a ſet and appointed time to finiſh and end ſome buſineſſe or worke in. But this ſimilitude is doubtleſſe taken from ſouldiers that haue libertie to returne home from war; for he ſaith, the end and iſſue of their afflictions are at hand: as if hee ſhould ſay; God will not alwaies ſuffer the rod of the wicked to reſt vpon the lot of the godlie, but keep a meaſure in humbling of them. He therefore compares the time of their captiuitie in Babylon, to a long warfare, which being ended, the ſouldiers that want implements, are ſent home to their houſes, to liue there in peace and quiet.

Her iniquitie is pardoned.

He ſaith in like manner, that her iniquitie is pardoned; becauſe God will be ſo fauourable vnto them, that hee will no longer in rigor purſue them: this therefore is the expoſition of the former words. For as the Phyſitians in healing bodily diſeaſes, doe firſt remoue the cauſes from whence they ſpring, euen ſo the Lord deales with vs. The rods wherewith he beates vs proceedes from our ſinnes: he muſt of neceſſitie pardon them then, before his ſtrokes can ceaſe: and therefore the Prophet ſaith, that her warfare is accompliſhed, becauſe her iniquitie is no longer imputed. Some take the word Auonah, for miſerie, and ſay that it ſhall haue an end: which ſenſe alſo ſutes well, for ſo the Prophet affirmes one and the ſame thing two waies: for to ſay that her warfare is ended, and that her miſeries are finiſhed, are things that haue one meaning. But yet wee muſt hold this principle; that God ceaſeth to correct when he is reconciled: ſo as the remiſſion of ſinnes ought alwaies to goe before as the cauſe, although, as I thinke, wee may ſay that God was ſo pacified, that hauing pardoned the ſinnes of his people, hee is now readie to receiue them againe into his fauour.

Simile.

Our ſinnes muſt be forgiuen, ere our afflictions can ceaſe: See Chap. 38. 17.

Double.] This place is expounded two waies: for ſome affirme, that he people which had deſerued double puniſhment, were adorned with double grace: others, that God would chaſtiſe them no more, becauſe they had had enough already. Now howſoeuer the firſt expoſition containes a fruitfull and profitable doctrine, yet wee will let that paſſe now, becauſe it agrees not with the text: for it appeares the Prophet meant onely to ſay, that God ſatisfied himſelfe ſufficiently with the miſeries which his Church had ſuffered. I wiſh therefore that thoſe had bin more modeſt which blamed Saint Ierom and other authors for this ſecond expoſition, which is much more fitting; and not the other ſubtilie, that the Lord will render double grace for double affliction. The ſumme is, that the Lord will puniſh his people no more ſo long, nor ſo ſharply, becauſe his louing kindneſſe hath ouercome his diſpleaſure, and will not ſuffer him to exerciſe ſo rigorous a courſe any longer: thus the word double, ought to be taken for largely, or abundantly. For we muſt not imagin that the chaſtiſement was equall, or greater then their ſinnes; for their blaſphemie is to be abhorred who accuſe God of crueltie, as if he corrected men too ſeuerely. What puniſhment is ſufficient for the leaſt of our offences, committed againſt his infinite Maieſtie? This ought therefore to be referred to the mercies of God, that hee alwaies ſmiting in meaſure, as it is in Chapter 27. 8. will giue them no more blowes, neither yet continue them any longer. Why ſo? Becauſe the former ſtrokes haue ſufficed him, albeit the people deſerued to bee beaten againe and againe with much more ſeueritie. The Lord ſhewes himſelfe like a father, who hauing compaſſion on his children, neuer chides but vnwillingly, and therefore is willing to pardon them their faults.

Double, is taken for largely, or, abundantly.

God is as willing to pardon our faults, as we would haue them pardoned.

Saint Ierom.

Verſ. 3. A voice crieth in the wilderneſſe; Prepare the way of the Lord, make ſtraight in the deſert a path for our God.

HEe goes on with the argument begunne, and ſhewes more plainly, that hee will ſend meſſengers to the people (in appearance forlorne) which ſhall comfort & cheere them. And thus hee preuents an obiection which ſome might make; Thou telleſt vs indeed of comfort, but where are the Prophets that ſhould bring the ſame vnto vs? For we ſhall be in a deſert. Whence then, I pray thee, ſhall this conſolation come? Thus he telles them then that the deſert ſhall be no meanes to debarre them of this conſolation. The deſert heere is taken figuratiuely, for that deſolation which ſhould come vpon them: though I denie not but the Prophet alſo alludes to the way betweene Babylon and Iudeah; for the tedious paſſage thorow the deſert, might ſeeme to take away all hope of returning home againe. Notwithſtanding he promiſeth, that albeit all the paſſages were ſtopped, and that there were no way ſet open for them, yet that the Lord would eaſilie make the roughеſt waies ſmooth and plaine for himſelfe, and for his ſeruants. Some ioine the particle, In the deſert, with the member following, and expound it thus, Prepare the Lord a way in the deſert. But it ſeemes rather that the Prophet brings in a voice, which ſhould gather theſe baniſhed ones together, which were driuen out of the habitable lande. As if hee ſhould ſay; Indeed you ſee nothing but an hideous deſert before you; but yet you ſhall heare this comfortable voice, by the mouthes of my Prophets. Now theſe things muſt bee referred to that miſerable bondage wherewith they ſhould bee oppreſſed in Babylon.

But to whom is this voice directed? Is it to the faithfull? No such matter. To whom then? To Cyrus, to the Medes and Persians which held this people captiue, who because they were no voluntarie seruants of God, they were constreined to deliuer them whether they would or no. This is the cause why they are commanded to prepare and make readie the way, that the people might passe home into Iudea, as if he should say, Make passage for them in those wayes where none was before. And this sets forth the efficacie and force of this prophesie, for when God giues power to his seruants to commaund cruell tyrants giuen to robberie (and were then conquerors ouer the Babylonians) to prepare the way for his people: he thereby shewes, that nothing shall be able to foreslow the accomplishment of his promise, because he will serue his turne of the Medes and Persians, as of his hired seruants.

To whom this voice is directed. Cyrus. The Medes, and Persians.

A singular consolation.

What an excellent consolation is this, to heare that God vseth the seruice of Infidels, yea and when his Church hath need, to make all creatures put to their hands for the helping forward of our saluation?

Where he saith, the way shall be prepared, not to the Iewes, but to the Lord himselfe: in this also we haue a singuler testimonie of the loue he beares vs, in attributing that to himselfe which in deed belonged to his people. What need had he of any way to be made for him, or to haue a path prepared? None at all. But thus it pleaseth him to make knowne that we are so neerely ioined vnto him, that he counts it as done to his owne Maiestie which is done to vs. This maner of speech is found often in other places, as when it is said, that God went forth for the saluation of his people, euen for the saluation with his annointed, Abac.3.13. Also that he went through Egypt, and led them in the wildernes like a flock, Exo.11. 4. Psal.78.52.

Now this place is alledged by Matth.3.3. Mark.1.3. Luk.3.4. Iohn 1.23. and applied to Iohn Baptist, as if these things were foretold of him, and very rightlie: for he was the first and most excellent messenger and herault of our saluation and redemption, of which, the deliuerance from Babell was only a type and figure. And in very truth when the poore and afflicted Church recouered health in Iohn Baptist his time, the deformitie which it had, did rather resemble a desert, then the captiuitie of Babylon. But Gods will was that in the desart where the Baptist preached, the figure and image of this horrible scattering might be perceiued, which had almost consumed and wasted all the beawtie of the Church. So then that which the Prophet saith here vnder a similitude, was then fulfilled indeed: for Iohn Baptist held forth the banner of gladnes, when things were very desperate and confused.

Iohn Baptist, the first and most renoumed herauld of our redemption.

I grant this voice sounded before by the mouth of Daniell, Zacharie, and others; but the redemption being then neerer, Iohn Baptist spake with more efficacie: for he pointed out Christ with his finger.

Iohn 1.29.

But because the besotted Iewes were nothing touched (for the most part) with the true feeling of their scattering, therefore Iohn the Baptist sought out a solitarie and desert place, that by the beholding of him he might awaken the drousiest of them to the hope of the promised deliuerance. In that he said he was no Prophet, it was in regard of the end of his calling, and of the summe of his doctrine: for he was not sent to exercise any particular function for any set time, but to prepare many hearts to receiue his Lord and Master. He also referres that properlie to all men which is said here, touching the remouing of the impediments out of the way: namely, because the peruersitie of our nature, the ouerthwart turnings of our vnderstandings, and the rebellion of our hearts, doe shut out the Lords passage, and causeth vs that we can not so denie our selues as to yeeld him the obedience which we owe him.

Iohn 1.21.

Vers. 4. Euery valley shall be exalted, and euery mountaine and hill shal be made low: and the crooked shall be streight, and the rough places plaine.

The former sentence confirmed and expounded.

HE both confirmes and expounds the former sentence: for he shewes, that the Lord will suffer no impediments stand in his way to hinder him from redeeming and restoring of his Church, whē it seemes good vnto him. These words may well be translated in the imperative, so as the Lord should make the whole verse a charge giuen to the Prophets to prepare and make plaine the way, but the difference is not very materiall: let it suffice vs to haue his meaning, which is, that Gods hand shall preuaile, though many difficulties and lets do arise in the way to hinder this deliuerance. Thus we may see that many hindrances present themselues as often as God once begins to worke for the saluation and succour of the afflicted: wherein notwithstanding his glorie shines so much the more; neither is it any way hurtfull for vs. For his admirable power is manifested before our eies, seeing all the forces, enterprises, and imaginations of mans braine can neuer so hinder, but that his decree must of necessitie come to passe: for he will bring his seruants as easily ouer mountaines, and through rough waies, as if they passed through euen and smooth waies. It is certaine that by mountaines and hils, the Prophet vnder a figure meanes all sorts of obstacles: for Satan neuer ceaseth plotting how to hinder our saluatiō. For whē the matter cōcerns our spirituall deliuerance, no doubt but these words comprehend in them all inward and outward impediments, as carnall lusts, and crooked affections, ambition, vaine confidence, impatiencie, &c. all which do wonderfullie withstand our passage, but the Lord wil remoue them all: for whē he stretcheth forth his hand, nothing shall be able to turne or hold vs back.

God no sooner begins to worke for the saluation of the afflicted, but many impediments comes in the way.

Impediments hindring vs in our spirituall course.

A singuler consolation.

Vers. 5. And the glorie of the Lord shall be reuealed, and all flesh shall see it together:

together: for the mouth of the Lord hath ſpoken it.

HIs meaning is, that this worke of redemption ſhall be ſo glorious, that the Lord will make it knowne to all, that himſelfe is the author of it, and will cauſe his power and maieſtie to ſhine therein. It is true that they may bee perceiued in all places, and in all things; but he promiſeth eſpecially to reueale his glory in the protection and deliuerance of his Church; and not without cauſe: for the redemption thereof euen from the beginning vntil Chriſts cõming, was as an incredible renuing or ſecond creation of the world. This promiſe therefore came in due ſeaſon, when Gods power which he was wont to manifeſt, was now almoſt ſo extinct, that there ſcarſly ſhined any ſparkles thereof: as it is ſaid, Pſal. 74. We ſee not our ſignes, &c. I ſay, it was to good purpoſe that the Prophet promiſed the ſigns ſo vnwonted and memorable, by which they might euidently perceiue, that God had infinite meanes in his hands to helpe his Church, although hee ſeemed to defer it for a time.

Hee amplifies this miracle afterwards by another circumſtance; that is, it ſhall not onelie be glorious among the Iewes, but alſo in ſtrange Countries far remote from them: for by theſe words, all fleſh ſhall ſee, hee meanes that all nations vnder the Sun ſhould know, that the returne of the Iewes out of captiuitie, was a worke wrought from heauen, and that God ſpake not to them by his Prophets in vaine.

Wherein hee taxeth the incredulitie of men, who reſt not vpon Gods promiſes, but hold all that the Prophets ſpeake in his name for fables, till they ſee the performance thereof with their eies. By this place we are alſo taught, what is the true meanes to correct our vnbeleefe; euen to exerciſe our ſelues daily in the meditation of Gods promiſes, that ſo our faith may be confirmed by all the teſtimonies of his loue, which hee ſets before vs. For thus we muſt ioine practiſe to the promiſes. The bare view of Gods works doe profit vs little, and therefore he ſends his word to open our vnderſtandings: and in the ſecond place, he ſeales vp the truth thereof by the effect it ſelfe.

The right way to correct our vnbeleefe.

Verſ. 6. A voice ſaid, Crie. And he ſaid, What ſhall I crie? All fleſh is graſſe, and all the grace thereof is as the flower of the field.

HE ſpeakes heere of another voice, then that which he mentioned verſ. 3. For hitherunto he hath ſpoken of the voice of the Prophets: now comes in the voice of God, who commands the Prophet to crie. I denie not but the voice of the Prophets is alſo the voice of God, whoſe inſtruments they are, ſeeing they ſpeake not of themſelues: yet this diſtinction is neceſſarie, to the end wee may know when the Lord commands, and when it is that the Prophets and Miniſters doe execute his commandements. There is a fit compariſon betweene the two voices then, that we might learne to receiue the meſſage which the Prophets bring in the name of the Lord, with as much reuerence as if himſelfe ſpake vnto vs from heauen: for they ſpeake as from his mouth, and as his Ambaſſadors vtter nothing but that which his Spirit ſuggeſts vnto them.

The voice of the Prophets the voice of God, yet it is neceſſarie to diſtinguiſh them.

Moreouer, by this preface we are admoniſhed, that the Prophet meanes to ſpeake of ſome great matter: for howſoeuer he alwaies proteſts faithfully to deliuer that to others, which himſelfe receiued from the Lord; yet here to ſtir vp the more attention, hee tells vs that the words which hee pronounceth, were put into his mouth by the expreſſe voice of God.

Why the Prophet vſeth this preface.

Hereunto appertaines the verbe To cry: as if he ſhould ſay, Thou muſt publiſh this meſſage with a loud voice, that it may indeed go to the quicke. But the interrogation which is added, imports much: for the Prophets meaning therein is, that hee ranne not of his own head, nor bragged of things he vnderſtood not; but that they were taught him at leaſure, and diſtinctly; he being well aduiſed, and very attentiue.

The interrogation hath an emphaſis here.

From the matter it ſelfe we may gather, that here is nothing ſuperfluous, in regard that two principall points of the heauenly doctrine are here to be handled ſummarilie. Firſt, that howſoeuer men bee nothing in themſelfe but ſmoke and vanitie, and that all his excellencie vades and periſheth as the ſhadow, or like the flower; yet the faithfull haue good cauſe notwithſtanding to reioice, becauſe they ſeeke their ſaluation out of themſelues. Secondly, albeit they be ſtrangers vpõ earth, yet they are inriched with heauenly glorie, becauſe the Lord vnites himſelfe vnto them by his word; for our abaſement ought to inflame vs with a deſire to partake of Gods grace.

What is to be gathered from the matter it ſelfe.

1

2

The Prophet knew well enough what he was to teach, but he meant to rouze vp their ſpiries by this interrogation; thereby to ſhow, that himſelfe and all his fellow ſeruants were conſtrained by this neceſſitie to vtter this ſentence, and that they could not otherwiſe diſcharge their duties well, though they ſhuld intreat and admoniſh neuer ſo much: for the truth is, nothing ſhall bee gained by ſpeaking, if they hold any other tenure then this.

What ſhall I cry?

The word cry, may ſignifie a libertie and cuidence in the words: for the Prophets were not to whiſper betweene the teeth, but in the hearing of all to pronounce that which they had to ſay roundly, and to their vnderſtandings; yea freely and plainly to open the meaning of whatſoeuer meſſage they had receiued. Is any man called to the office of teaching then? Let him alwaies thinke and remember that he muſt vſe an inuincible freedome of ſpeech againſt all difficulties that are oppoſed to his miniſtery, as the Prophets and Apoſtles haue done, without ſhrinking their neckes out of the coller. Woe bee to meet, saith the Apostle, If I preach not, for necessitie is laid vpon mee: 1. Corinth. 9.16.

What ſuch are to doe as are called to the office of teaching.

All flesh is grasse. First it is to be noted, that he speakes not here of the fragilitie of mans life onely, for the words haue a larger sense; that is, to bring to nothing all the excellencie which men may seeme to haue in them. Dauid indeede compares this life to grasse, Psal. 103.15. because it is corruptible and transitorie: but the scope of the text shewes, that Isaiah speakes not of the outward man onely, but also comprehends the gifts of the minde, wherewith men are vsually puffed vp; as wisdome, valour, industrie, iudgement, dexteritie, in dispatching businesses, by meanes whereof they thinke themselues more excellent then all the rest of the creatures.

How farre this phrase, All flesh is grasse, extends it selfe.

This is better expressed by the word Chasdo, which is by and by added; which some translate Glory: others, Well doing: but I had rather expound it grace: by which word I vnderstand, whatsoeuer gift it is whereby men purchase praise and honour vnto them from others. Notwithstanding, the passiue signification may haue place: as if the Prophet should say; Whatsoeuer is excellent and worthy commendation among men, proceedes from the meere liberalitie of God. And in this sense, Dauid calles the Lord, the God of his sauour: Psal. 59.10. by whose grace hee had receiued so many benefits as he inioied. It is also very certaine that all that which is praise worthie in men, is heere called by this word grace: and is by the Prophet condemned euery whit of vanitie: for there is a close opposition betweene the common gifts of nature, and the grace of regeneration.

The meaning of this word, Grace.

Many expound this of the Assyrians, and refer it to them, as if Isaiah meant to discharge the hearts of the Iewes from all feare, by lessening, or indeed by taking cleane away the power, riches, wit, and subtile plots of their aduersaries. Thus they expound it then; If the force of your enemies feare you, remember they are but flesh, which by its own debilitie consumes it selfe away. But these mens errors shall be sufficetly cõuinced anon by the very scope of the text, where the Prophet applies his speech directly to the Iewes. Wee are diligently to obserue then, that whole man with all his faculties wherein he pleaseth himselfe, is heere compared to a flower.

Men are easilie brought to confesse they are mortall, but the difficultie is to make thẽ disclaime their owne carnall reason: 1. Cor. 2. 14.

All men are easilie perswaded of their mortalitie touching this life; and the prophane writers haue disputed that question at large: but there is much more difficultie to plucke vp that confidence which men conceiue through a false opinion of their owne wisdome: for they thinke they haue more sharpnesse of wit & industrie in them then others, and therefore also thinke they haue good occasiõ to glory in themselues aboue others. But our Prophet shewes, that the rarest gift in man, fades and perisheth forthwith. Notwithstanding, he seemes to adde a kinde of correction by way of mockage, in speaking of the flowers of the field: for there is more beautie in a flower, then in grasse, & is therefore a yeelding or granting: as if he should say; Though men haue some outward appearance of beautie, such as is in the flowers of the field, yet, all is but a flower: for the beautie and grace thereof wholly vanisheth away; so as their glorying and flattering of themselues in this vaine and deceitfull glittering shew, is to no purpose at all.

Vers. 7. The grasse withereth, the flower fadeth; because the spirit of the Lord bloweth vpon it: surely the people is grasse.

THis may well be vnderstood of the beautie of the fields, which the violence of one gale of wind spoiles; as it is said in the hundred and third Psalme: for we know that the wind is called the spirit of God in other places. But I rather thinke the similitude is applied to the present purpose, because otherwise the application would be obscure. The Prophet then expounds his owne meaning when hee said, that men with all their glory were nothing but grasse, because the spirit of God will consume them in the top of their pride vvith one blast. Therefore this speech must be thus resolued; How soeuer it be true that men bring indeed vvith excellent parts of nature, may florish; yet they shall know that all is but vanitie, vvhen the Spirit of God shall but blow vpon them. For in that they grow so beesotted in their own ouerweenings, it is because they neuer set themselues in Gods presence, but digge themselues hiding places, that they may flatter themselues without checke or controle. To the end then that they might no more receiue themselues with the sweete deceits of lying vanities, the Prophet summons them before Gods iudgement seat, and grants indeed that they florish in appearance, so long as they keep themselues a great way off from the presence of Gods Maiestie; but let the Lord beginne once to blow vpon them, their all their beautie and strength shall forthwith vanish into smoke. He seemes to attribute an office to the Spirit of God, which is not very fitting vnto it: for it is his propertie to renew the face of the earth: as on the other side, if he withdraw himselfe neuer so little, all things fall to nothing. Psal. 104. And Isaiah affirmes here the cleane contrarie. Some may thinke then, that one Prophet contradicts another. But there is no absurditie in it to say; that all things are renued by the vertue of the holy Ghost. And againe, that the same Spirit should consume those things which seemed very glorious before. For we haue no being but in God; and to beginne to be something in him, wee must first of all be conuinced of our vanitie, that we may the better acknowledge it. The Lord therefore bloweth vpon vs, to teach vs that in our selues wee are nothing.

Obiect.

Ans.

Now to the end all might know that the Prophet spake not of strangers, but of that people which gloried much in the name of God, he addes, that the people is grasse: for the Iewes thought themselues more worthie and excellent excellent then any other nation, and therefore that they of all others ought to be ſeparated from the common ſort of men. Hee ſpeakes to them then properlie and expreſſlie, to the end they might attribute nothing vnto themſelues aboue others: as if he ſhould ſay, You ſhall ſhew your ſelues very diſcreet and wiſe, if in conſidering your owne pouertie and baſenes, you ſhall reiect all vaine confidence. In a word, the Prophet hauing ſpoken of comfort in the firſt verſe, hee now ſhewes how men ought to be prepared to receiue it: but they are no way fit to receiue it, vnleſſe they be firſt brought to nothing. Our hardnes of heart then muſt be ſoftned, our high and prowd conceits muſt be brought low, our glorie turned into ſhame of face, and our hearts tamed and humbled, if with fruit we will receiue the conſolations which the Prophets ſhall bring vs by the commandement of the Lord.

In the firſt verſe the Prophet mentioned ſome conſolation: now he ſhewes them the meanes how to be prepared to receiue it.

Verſ. 8. The graſſe withereth, the floure fadeth, but the word of our God ſhall ſtand for euer.

THis repetition is added once againe to bring all the glorie of prowd fleſh vnto nothing: it alſo therewithall conteines an excellent conſolation; to wit, that the Lord hauing humbled his ſeruants, forthwith giues them matter of ioy and gladnes. This is the order of the text then, The graſſe withers, but the word of the Lord indures for euer. This only conſolation is ſufficient, namely, that the word of God is made the ground of our comfort: as if God himſelfe ſhould reach out his hand to lift vs vp, after he hath manifeſted to vs how emptie and deſtitute wee are of all good things, and how periſhable and tranſitorie our fleſh is. We then are fraile, and fading as the flower, but the word of the Lord is firme and eternall. To be ſhort, that life which is wanting in vs is offred vs elſewhere.

With matter of humiliation, the Prophet mingleth matter of conſolation.

Gods word, the ground of our comfort.

The whole ſumme of the Goſpell is heere comprehended in few words, for it conſiſts in the knowledge of our miſerie, pouertie, and vanitie, that being humbled in good earneſt, we might haue our recourſe vnto God, by whoſe only grace we ſhall be whollie reſtored. Let not ſuch then as are acquainted with their wofull condition by nature be therefore out of heart, for the word of the Lord is ſet before them, which is able to build them vp, and to giue them ſtrong conſolation.

The ſumme of the Goſpel.

Our baſe eſtate muſt not put vs vtterlie out of heart.

Moreouer, wee are here taught to ſeeke conſolation no where elſe but in eternitie, which is only to be found in God, and in none other: for there is no ſtabilitie in earth or earthlie things. What madnes is it then to place our happines in preſent things, which wee ſee conſume like ſmoke? He therefore much deceiues himſelfe which thinks he can meete with true felicitie till he be come vnto God, who is therfore called the eternall, in holy Scriptures, becauſe we might know that life flowes from him into vs: yea, he hath adopted vs for his children on this condition, that we may partake with him in his immortalitie.

No ſtabilitie in earth, or earthly things.

But all this ſhall profit vs very little, vnleſſe we be ſhewed the way how to attaine it: the word therefore comes betweene, from which we muſt not turne an haires breadth. For if we wander and ſtray from it, we ſhall be intangled in ſuch wonderfull laborynths, that we ſhall neuer know how to get out.

The way how to attaine true felicitie.

Now he ſaith, the word endures for euer, not only in it ſelfe, but in vs alſo: which we ought diligentlie to obſerue, becauſe without this addition we ſhould neuer be able to attaine any ſound conſolation. And S. Peter, a faithfull expoſitor of this place applies it vnto vs, in ſaying, that we are regenerated by this incorruptible ſeed: yea, by this word, which, ſaith he, is preached amõg you, 1. Pet. 1. 23. whence we gather, as I touched a little before, that life is prepared for the dead, which ſhall earneſtlie draw neere to this fountaine ſet open vnto them: for that power which is hidden in God, is manifeſted vnto vs by this word.

Verſ. 9. O Zion that bringeſt good tidings, get thee vp into the hie mountaine: O Ieruſalem, that bringeſt good tidings, lift vp thy voice with ſtrength: lift it vp, be not afraid: ſay vnto the Cities of Iudah, Behold your God.

HE goes on ſtill with the ſame argument. The Lord promiſed before that he would ſend Prophets which ſhould publiſh the promiſes to comfort this deſolate and ſorrowfull people: now he commands that this conſolation be ſpread further, becauſe he meanes that his grace ſhall be ſhed forth vpon the whole land of Iudeah. He gaue hope of theſe ioyfull tidings to Ieruſalem and Zion before: now his purpoſe is, that this voice ſhould ſound forth, and ring throughout all the reſt of the Cities, for which purpoſe he commands them to lift vp the voice, and to publiſh it in the high mountaine.

Now howſoeuer it be true that by the names of Zion and Ieruſalem, one and the ſame is to be vnderſtood, yet the repetition is diligentlie to be marked. For the meaning is, that this Citie was no way more excellent then the reſt, but in regard that God had choſen it aboue the reſt to be the ſeate of his Sanctuarie. In the next place he ſaith that they publiſh good tidings, becauſe the Prieſts and Leuites were there ordeined and inſtructed according to the rules conteined in the Law, that they might be fitted to be leaders of the people, and to publiſh the doctrine of ſaluation. In the meane while this title wherwith God adornes his Church is well to be obſerued, to the end ſhe may be knowne by ſome ſure and infallible marke. For that aſſemblie is not to be held for the Church where the heauenlie doctrine of glad tidings is not ſounded forth and preached: and in this ſenſe the Apoſtle ſaith, that ſhe is the pillar and ground of truth, 1. Tim. 3. 15. For albeit God might gouerne vs well enough without the miniſtrie of man, yet he hath impoſed this charge vpon his Church, into whoſe hands he hath committed the ineſtimable treaſure of his word, & for this cauſe ſhe is called led hereafter, The mother of all the faithfull, Chap. 66. 10. 11. 12. Hence it followes, that nothing is more absurd and vniust, then to see dumb Idols to boast of the name of the Church, as they doe in the Papacie. We are also aduertised, that the Church is not taught of God that she should keepe her knowledge to her selfe, but that she should proclaime that to others which she hath learned. Moreouer, she is inioined to publish this grace freely without any feare, that the Prophets might know they were not to speake timerously, as of a thing doubtfull, but as those that were well assured of that truth which they set forth, being fully perswaded that God which was the author of it could not lie; but his will was, that the witnesses of his grace should come out of Zion, to repleniſh the whole land of Iudeah with gladnes.

That aſſemblie is not to be reputed the Church, where the doctrine of ſaluation ſounds.

The true Church the mother of the faithfull. Dumbe idols in the papacie, boast in vaine of the title of the Church.

When he addes, Behold your God; In this sentence he comprehends the summe of our happines, which consists in enioying the only presence of our God, which brings with it the fulnes of all good things; but if we be depriued of it, no greater miserie can befall vs. For if we be estranged from God, all things must of necessitie turne to our ruine, though wee should inioy all the pleasures in the world. From this circumstance it is also to be noted, that nothing is more contrarie vnto faith, then to tie the doctrine which the Prophets publish, to the sight of our eies: for themselues must needes haue been mute, if they had not lifted their mindes farre aboue the world; neither durst they otherwise haue bin so bold and constant to draw on others with them, to hope for better things in the midst of despaire. Surely when the wicked haue their swindge, and that iniquitie hath gotten the vpper hand; when the poore Church trembles, and seemes of all other the most miserable, then is the time to lift vp our heads, and so much the more to fasten our eies vpon the promises, and to preach and publish his comfortable presence to such as will behold it by faith.

When it is the fittest time to proclaime comfort to the Church.

Vers. 10. Behold, the Lord God will come with power, and his arme shall rule for him: behold, his reward is with him, and his worke is before him.

HEe inricheth this short and latter sentence with many words, because it needed some exposition: and he vseth the word behold againe, for the greater certentie, that hee might so much the more incourage the faithfull. He shewes more fully then, of how great vse the presence of God is vnto vs: and first he saith, he will come with power, which shall not be idle, but such as we shall feele to be effectuall. Some translate the word Lo, Of himselfe, which also word for word may bee turned, He is mightie, or, reigning of himselfe. Now his meaning is, that God is strong enough, and needes no man to helpe him. The same is repeated vnder the words reward and worke: for it is vsuall among the Hebrewes to repeate one and the same thing two waies. By reward, we must not vnderstand a recompence due by merit; but the righteousnesse of God, by which he protests he will recompence those which call vpon him in truth, and with vpright hearts: for those that are but meanely read in the Prophets language, know that the word Secar imports so much.

The summe is, that God will not come to make shewes onely, but will manifest his power, and make vs to feele it indeed.

And thus it would not bee amisse, if the word Effect, were put in stead of worke. Many expound this more wittily, and descant like children vpon worke and reward, as if worke were the merit to which reward must bee giuen: but the Prophet had no such meaning. In both words he repeates the same thing, as I haue said, and sets forth the fruit of the Lords cumming, which the faithfull shall receiue to their exceeding benefit.

Vers. 11. Hee shall feede his flocke like a Shepheard: hee shall gather the lambs with his arme, and carrie them in his bosome; and shall guide them with young.

BY this verse he shewes what this worke of the Lord is: for in as much as he workes diuersly, and infinite waies, the hearer might haue doubted with himselfe what God meant to doe. And thus the generall doctrine could not of it selfe haue been sufficient to haue raised vp their hope. Now howsoeuer hee stands not to reckon vp all the parts of Gods office, yet in these few words he signifies, that his determination was to vphold and keepe his Church. And therefore he compares him to a shepheard: by which word hee sets forth Gods infinite loue towards vs, in that hee vouchsafeth to stoope so low as to bee our shepheard. The Prophet hath in other places, yea and in the former verse also, armed him with a terrible and inuincible power for the defence of his Church; which he will also repeat againe afterwards: but here he attributes to him a more gracious title, to the end the faithful might sweetly repose themselues vnder his protection.

Gods loue in this vers. Gods power in vers. 10. to be ioined together.

Moreouer, although by the word flocke, he meanes the elect people whom he had taken into his custodie, we are notwithstanding admonished, that hee will be no shepheard, but to such as with the modestie and weakenesse of sheepe and lambs, are content to follow him. The condition of a flocke therefore must bee considered: for he will not feede wild beasts, but lambs. Let vs therefore cast off all stubbornnesse, and let vs suffer our selues to bee meekened, if wee meane to be gathered into this fold, whereof God promiseth to bee the shepheard.

God will be no sheepheard to wolues, but to such as shew the tractable and meeke nature of lambs.

He will beare them.] These words expresse the singular goodnesse of God, who ouer and besides the vehement loue which he beares to his flocke, hath respect to the weake and feeble sheepe; for then he shewes the care he hath in dealing gently with them, his humanitie nitie in approching neere vnto them, and his patience in bearing them in his armes. Wherein we ſee, he omits no office that appertaines to a good ſheepheard, whoſe dutie is to haue his eie vpon all his ſheepe, that he may gouerne them according to their condition: and to comfort them; but eſpeciallie thoſe that are ſick and infirme. The ſumme is, That God will be gentle, louing, milde, & mercifull in gouerning his ſeruants; ſo as he will not require more of the weake then they are able to beare.

led in our hearts, would keepe vs frō being ſhake of any temptation.

Verſ. 12. Who hath meaſured the waters in his fiſt? and counted the heauen with a ſpanne, and comprehended the duſt of the earth in a meaſure? and weighed the mountaines in a weight, and the hils in a ballance?

Hauing ſet forth Gods fatherly loue towards his little flock, now he ſets forth his power the ſecond time.

HAuing finiſhed his ſpeech touching the fatherlie care that God hath for the defence of his people: now he comes to ſet forth his power; and magnifies it as farre forth as poſſiblie he can, which yet ſhal moue vs very little, vnleſſe we looke narrowlie into the Prophets meaning. An ignorant perſon at the firſt bluſh would ſay that the Prophet hath heaped vp a many of broken ſentences without grace or arte: but if we haue regard to his ſcope and end, by an elegant ſpeech he adornes the power of God ſeaſonably, becauſe his power is the true and beſt ſtay for our faith to leane vpon, that thereby we may be aſſured he will performe his promiſe. It is not for nought the Apoſtle ſaith that Abraham doubted not, knowing that he which had promiſed, vvas alſo able to do it, Rom.4.20. And in the ſame ſenſe he ſaith, 2.Tim.1.12. I know whom I haue believed; God is able to keepe that which I haue committed vnto him. To this belongs the ſaying of Chriſt, My father which gaue them me is greater then all, Ioh.10. 29. Seeing then that we haue continuallie to wreſtle againſt diſtruſt, and that Satan is readie to circumuent vs by many fetches, wee muſt attribute to the power of God the praiſe that it deſerueth, to the end his promiſes may be receiued of vs with that aſſurance which is requiſit.

Gods power, the true ſtay and prop of our faith.

Now becauſe the reſtauration of the people was a thing incredible to fleſh and blood, it was needfull that the minds of the faithfull ſhould be raiſed vp farre aboue the world, leſt they ſhould tie the grace of God to humane helps. Wee ſee the Prophet not only teacheth that God is the Creator of heauen and earth: but whatſoeuer he recites touching his infinite power, it is applied to the matter in hand; which we alſo are to doe at this day. When any aduerſitie preſſeth vs, our ſaluation ſeemes to be hidden, Gods power is ouerſhadowed, as if a cloude were come betweene vs and it: we ſtand amazed, euen as if we were vtterlie reiected and contemned of the Lord. Let vs not thinke then that this deſcription is ſome light matter: for if the perſwaſion of Gods power were wellſetled in our hearts, we ſhould neuer be ſo toſſed vp and downe; neither ſhould any calamitie be able to trouble vs.

The Prophet playes not the orator only in ſetting forth Gods power, but applies it to the preſent occaſion.

The firme perſwaſion of Gods power well ſet.

Abraham reſted vpon this power, as we haue ſaid, that he might with aſſurance imbrace that which otherwiſe was incredible: and therefore S. Paul affirmes that he hoped, aboue hope, being reſolued that God vvas able to performe that which he had ſpoken, ſo as he neither ſtaggered, neither was he weake in the faith, Rom.4.18.19. This teacheth vs to lift vp our eies aboue the hils, Pſal.121.1. and that wee iudge not of things according to the outward appearance; but that we may indeed aſſure our ſelues, that that which God hath ſaid ſhall ſurely come to paſſe, becauſe he hath all things in his owne power.

We muſt not iudge of things according to outward appearances.

All of vs are to reſt in this; but (as I told you) the Iewes had exceeding neede to be fullie reſolued of it, for they were oppreſſed vnder very mightie tyrants: all paſſages were ſhut vp againſt them: all hope of libertie was taken from them: in a word, they ſaw themſelues euery way compaſſed about, as in a great and hidious wildernes. This conſolation therefore had bin ſet before them in vaine, if by the Prophets admonition their minds had not bin raiſed vp to heauen, that ſo they might whollie reſt their hearts vpon the abſolute power of God, without looking to inferior things.

When he ſpeakes of meaſures which men vſe in ſmall things, it is to applie himſelfe to our weaknes: for the Lord liſps with vs thus ordinarily, taking ſimilitudes from things vſuall amongſt vs, when he is to ſpeake of his owne Maieſtie, that ſo thoſe of ſhallow and feeble capacities might the better comprehend his greatnes and excellencie. Wee are therefore to reiect all carnall imaginations of God, becauſe his greatnes ſurpaſſeth all creatures: for the heauen, the earth, the ſea, and all that in them is with their vnmeaſurablenes, are yet all of them nothing in compariſon of him.

God is ſaine to liſp as it were vnto vs, otherwiſe we were not able to comprehend his incomprehenſible greatnes.

Verſ. 13. Who hath inſtructed the Spirit of the Lord? or vvas his Counſellor, or taught him?

14. Of vvhome tooke he counſell, and who inſtructed him, and taught him in the way of iudgement? or taught him knowledge, and ſhewed vnto him the way of vnderſtanding?

The Prophet hauing deſcribed Gods power and goodnes, now he mentions his wiſdome.

THe Prophet now deſcends to ſpeake that of Gods wiſedome, which in the former verſes he taught concerning his power and goodnes. This golden chaine is to be noted: for as carnall reaſon doth peruerſlie reſtraine the power of God to outward helps; ſo doth it without reaſon ſubiect the incomprehenſible counſell of God to humane imaginations: and thus many things will preſent themſelues to hinder the courſe of Gods works, till he himſelfe be exalted farre aboue all creatures. If our reaſon may be iudge, then there will be no end of doubtings. For as oft as it conceiues not how the Lord works this or that, wee will call into queſtion the truth of his promiſes; becauſe whatſoeuer ſurmounts our reaſon, will forthwith ſeeme an impoſſible thing vnto vs. Thus then, as we are to oppoſe Gods power to our vveakneſſe, ſo are wee to preferre his incomparable vviſdome, before our preſumption and boldneſſe.

Where reaſon is iudge, there will be no end of doubtings.

or

Wee muſt oppoſe Gods power to our weakneſſe, and his wiſdome to our preſumptiō.

In asking whether any hath inſtructed or directed the Spirit of God, it is to ſhew that he needes no teacher to goe before him, or to counſell him in vnknowne things. The Spirit is heere taken for reaſon, iudgement, or vnderſtanding: for he borrowes the ſimilitude from the nature of men, the better to apply himſelfe to our capacities. For, as I thinke, he ſpeakes not heere of the eſſentiall ſpirit of God. Now the Prophet ſets forth one and the ſame thing diuers waies, to teach vs that man is more beaſtly then the very brute beaſts, when hee dares aſpire to heauen, to ſearch and vveigh the workes of God in the vnequall ballance of his reaſon: Iſaiah meant then more and more to beat downe the headineſſe and ouerweening of men. S. Paul alleadgeth this place to the ſame end, that he might ſtop our mouthes in asking curious queſtions touching the incomprehenſible counſels of God, who wil not haue them ſearched into, further then with ſuch ſobrietie as is meete for ſo high myſteries. Onely there is this difference betweene Paul & Iſaiah: the Apoſtle ſaith, that the myſterie of the Goſpell cannot bee comprehended by mans naturall vnderſtanding: and the Prophet in generall magnifies the prouidence of God. And yet wee muſt inquire and ſearch into both theſe points with humilitie, and captiuate our whole reaſon vnder a right obedience: for all our wit and vnderſtanding is nothing but darknes, till Chriſt hath inlightened vs by his Spirit.

One thing ſet forth diuers waies.

Rom. 11.34.

That which Iſaiah ſpeaks in generall, the Apoſtle applies to a particular.

Verſ. 15. Behold, the nations are as a drop of a bucket, and are counted as the duſt of the ballance: behold, hee taketh away the Iles as a little duſt.

IF wee meane to vnderſtand our Prophets meaning aright, and to reade with profit that which hee hath here written, wee muſt learne to finde out his drift, as I haue touched before. For he extols not Gods greatneſſe thus at random, but ſets it forth with all his skill, according as the circumſtance of the matter which hee now is in hand with requires: to let the Iſraelites know, that this buckler is ſufficient to couer them, and that they were not to feare the indeuors, rage, nor violence of the world, prouided that God ſhew them his fauour: and that thus they were to learne to yeeld themſelues vnder his ſauegard. For if they had not bin well grounded in this point, they ſhould haue met with infinit occaſions which would haue driuen them out of heart euery minute of an houre. The Prophet therefore goes on with the ſame argument ſtill, and telles the Iewes, that if the nations and peoples be compared vvith God, they are as nothing: for with his onely blaſt he will ſcatter all the inhabitants of the earth, as if they were but a little picke of duſt. For in regard we are too much inclined, and fooliſhly wittie in ſeeking pretences to ſtrēgthen our owne infidelitie, wee imagin that whatſoeuer Satan conſpires to hinder our ſaluatiō, ſhuts vp all paſſage againſt God. The Prophet minding to correct this vice ſhewes, that all creatures are nothing before him, and that all nations when they ſtand on an heape, are but as the ſmall droppes of a bucket in his preſence. Whence we learne, that it is a groſſe ſottiſhneſſe in vs ſo to prefer the creature, that wee abaſe the power of the Creatour, who ought to bee held as ſupreme ouer and aboue all things; as indeed hee is.

How to read this propheſy with fruit.

Verſ. 16. And Lebanon is not ſufficient for fire, nor the beaſts thereof for a burnt offering.

LEbanon: that is to ſay; if we ſhould offer a burnt offering vnto God, according as hee deſerues; neither Lebanon nor all the beaſts that feed in it, would ſuffice for the ſacrifice. He repeats & imprints in their minds this power of God ſtil after diuers maners, that the people who were to truſt in it, ſhould not reſpect creatures, nor any thing they were able to doe with all their forces. Notwithſtanding it ſeemes the Prophet ſpeakes expreſly of Gods worſhip, that he might bring the readers to haue it in the greater reuerence: as if hee ſhould ſay; Dareſt thou meaſure the power of God vvithin the narrow ſcantling of thy reaſon? Why thou canſt not ſerue him as thou oughteſt, though thou ſhouldſt lay all the vvood and beaſts of Lebanon at once vpon his altar. Some gather hence that none can procure Gods fauour by offering ſacrifices: which is very true; but we muſt haue an eye to the Prophets meaning, as I haue alreadie ſaid; who to hearten on the Iewes, to the greater confidence, ſhewes that all things are nothing, being compared with God.

Verſ. 17. All nations before him are as nothing; and they are counted to him leſſe then nothing.

THis is a repetition of that which he hath ſaid before; to wit, that God can deſtroy all nations as ſoone as it pleaſeth him: and that they are counted as nothing before him euen in their beſt eſtate. But it may ſeeme ſtrange that he ſaith, All nations are nothing. Were they not all created of God, that they might be eſteemed ſomething? I anſwere, this is ſpoken by compariſon. For ſuch is the peruerſitie of our vnderſtanding, that it darkens Gods glorie and Maieſtie, and ſets thoſe things aboue it which ſhould be ſet farre beneath. When we are to enter into this combat then, whether God or the creature ſhould haue the preeminence, let vs boldly pronounce, That that vvhich is compared vvith God, is nothing. The Prophet ſpeakes not ſimply of the nature

Obiect.

Anſ.

ture of man as it is created of God: but his purpoſe is to beate downe and to bring to nothing all their preſumption and pride, when they dare ſet themſelues aboue him. Wee know it is vnpoſſible to ſubſiſt, or be without God, for in him only we liue, moue, and haue our being, as it is ſaid, Act. 17. 28. notwithſtanding that which Dauid ſaith is alſo as true, to wit, that nothing is ſo vaine a thing as man: who if he be weighed in a ballance, wil be found lighter then vanitie it ſelf, Pſal. 62. And in this ſort our Prophet ſhewes that all nations are as nothing, yea, leſſe then nothing: that he might the better note out both their vanitie, and imbecillitie.

Verſ. 18. To whom then will ye liken God? Or what ſimilitude will ye ſet vp vnto him?

THe Iewes were in great danger of falling from God in regard of another temptation: for it is certaine that the Aſſyrians and Caldeans obteined not ſo many victories without ỹ aſſiſtance of other nations: thence the Iewes might conclude; What auailes it vs to haue a ſeruice of God apart from other nations, ſeeing our enemies in fighting haue victorie from heauen; and our God in the meane while ſuccors not vs at all? Neither is it to be doubted but the infidels alſo mocked theſe poore captiues, as it appeares by other places.

That this calamitie then might not cauſe the Iewes to forget the true religion, God riſeth vp and ſaith, that a greater wrong can not be done vnto him, then if the faithfull being wrung by afflictions, ſhould therefore conforme themſelues to the idolatries and ſuperſtitions of the Gentiles. Thus then he confirmes them in the truth of his promiſes, leſt they ſhould faint vnder the burthens which they were to ſuſteine.

But the Prophet ſpeakes not to the men of his time only, as we haue ſaid, but to all their 1 ſucceſſors who were to vndergoe ſharp aſ-
2 ſaults againſt the Idols of prophane nations, vnder whom they were held captiues. And in the ſecond place they had enough to doe to ſhunne the cuill examples and cuſtomes of thoſe nations: for it was exceeding difficult for them to continue conſtant being mingled among Idolaters, and dayly beholding their corrupt maners. To the end therefore that they might not be tainted with any vain conceit, to wit, that the affaires of the Idolaters proſpered well, in regard of the honour which they did to their Idols and falſe gods: the Prophet, I ſay, preuents ſuch an offence, and ſaith, that they were in no wiſe to compare the gods of the Gentiles with the God whom they and their fathers worſhipped: for thoſe gods were made with mens hands; the matter of them being but gold, ſiluer, wood, ſtone, or ſuch like: but their God was the Creator of heauen and earth. Great muſt the outrage be therefore againſt his Maieſtie, when the ſame ſhall be compared with things of nothing: yea, it is a diſhonor in the higheſt degree if he be not exalted farre aboue the Angels, or whatſoeuer is called God.

When S. Paul vſeth this teſtimonie againſt Idolaters, he peruerts not the true ſenſe of the Prophets words; but from thence hee rightlie gathers, that it is a wicked thing to repreſent God by any ſimilitude at all. And our Prophet not only diſſwades the Iewes here from diſtruſt, but alſo therewithall condemnes the ſuperſtitions of the Gentiles; ſhewing it to be a thing quite repugnant to the nature of God to be repreſented by any grauen Image. And thus we ſee the Apoſtles doctrine ſutes well with this place: for the Prophet hauing prooued that Gods power is infinite, ſeeing he is able to comprehend all things in his fiſt, verſ. 12. at laſt he concludes, To whom will ye liken me? Make what Image you will, it ſhall be nothing like me. This is a very profitable doctrine, and well worthie our obſeruation: for were there but this one text, it were enough to refute all the inuentions wherewith the Papiſts are miſled, who permit it as lawfull to repreſent God by outward ſhapes and figures. The Prophet holds it as a reſolued truth, that it is vnpoſſible to make an Image of corruptible matter, that ſhould any way be able to match with the glorie of God: he vtterlie reiects the Idols themſelues: ſo farre is he off then from ſpeaking of adoring them, that he counts it euen an execrable and horrible ſacrilege ſo much as to frame or carue them, and to ſet them vp before God. Act. 17. 29.

But the holy Scripture is full of ſuch ſentences. Moſes aduertiſeth the people who were inclined to this vice, You ſaw no ſimilitude nor ſhape (ſaith he) in the mountaine, only you heard a voice, take heed therefore leſt being corrupted, you ſhould make you any grauen Image, Deut. 4. 12. 15. Wil we haue a right knowledge of God then? Let vs not frame him after our fantaſies, but ſeeke him out in his word, where we ſhall find his Image repreſented vnto vs in moſt liuely colours. Let vs content our ſelues with this knowledge, and neuer enterpriſe any thing of our owne heads, for other meanes, as Idols, and Images, will neuer teach vs the truth, but vanitie & lies, as Ieremiah very well ſaith, Chap. 10. 8. The ſtock is but a doctrine of vanitie: And Abacuck, Chap. 2. 18. The grauen Image is a thing teaching lies. Now whereas the Lord ſometimes compares himſelfe to a Lyon, to a Beare, a man, or the like, this is nothing to prooue the lawfull vſe of Images as the Papiſts dreame: but ſuch ſimilitudes ſerue to ſet forth the goodnes, lenitie, anger, or ſeueritie of God, with other affections attributed vnto him; which can not be manifeſted vnto vs but vnder ſimilitudes of things familiarly knowne. To conclude, if it were lawfull to repreſent God by an Image, we ſhould then put no differéce between him and the dunghill gods of the Gentiles, and ſo the Prophets doctrine could not ſtand firme.

Gods image is moſt liuely repreſented vnto vs in his word.

Images and Idols, teachers of lies.

A dreame of the Papiſts refuted.

Verſ. 19. The workeman melteth an image, or the goldſmith beateth it out in gold, or the goldſmith maketh ſiluer plates.

20. Doth not the poore chuſe out a tree that will not rot for an oblation? Hee ſeeketh alſo vnto him a cunning workman, to prepare an image that ſhall not be moued.

BEcauſe publike conſent in things is of great force, and that it is by and by receiued for a law, if a thing once pleaſe the multitude, the Prophet heere fortifies the 1 faithfull againſt ſuch an error. Here is therefore an occupation or preuention, as they call it; to wit, the Iewes were to take heede how they ſtood amazed, in ſeeing idolaters ſo carefull in their ſtrife, who ſhould haue the gaudieſt gods; for if they did ſo, they were in 2 danger to bee ſeduced by them. But therewithall he riſeth vp in an holy indignation againſt the deſperate follie of men, who ſo boile in their ſuperſtitious imaginations, that euery one will haue an idoll fit to pleaſe his owne humor. He alſo ſhewes that no ſtate or 3 condition of men are free from this impietie, but that the poore are as well guiltie thereof as the rich: for the rich, they make them gods of gold and ſilver: the poore, of ſuch a tree as likes him beſt. And thus he ſhewes that all ſorts are carried away with an intollerable furie in deſiring and ſeeking out ſome excellent thing for the ſeruice of their gods, though the meanes to doe it withall faile them. Men will haue gods forſooth that they may looke vpon, and handle. Loe here the originall and fountain from whence idolatrie hath ſprung. For God is not neere vs in a puppet, but by his word, and by the power of his holy Spirit. And howſoeuer in his Sacraments, he repreſents vnto vs liuely images of his grace and ſpirituall benefits, yet his onely drift therein is, to lift vp our mindes by them to himſelfe. But our Prophet in the meane while derides the follie of theſe blinde idolaters, who care not what coſt or paines they beſtow or take, ſo they may furniſh out trim and goodly idols.

All are gone out of the way, all are corrupt: Pſal. 14. 3.

The beginning of idolatry.

Verſ. 21. Know yee nothing? Haue yee not heard it? Hath it not beene told you from the beginning? Haue yee not vnderſtood it by the foundations of the earth?

HAuing ſcorned the beaſtly ſottiſhneſſe of the Gentiles, hee now turnes againe to the Iewes: for being all of vs by nature inclined too much to ſuperſtitious vanities; ſo we alſo eaſilie fall, if any example be ſet before vs. The Iewes being captiues and mingled amongſt the Babylonians, were conſtrained to looke vpon horrible & damnable idolatries, which might ſoone draw them to a wicked imitation: Iſaiah therefore as a good Prophet of God, ſpeedilie preuents them, and warnes them that they bee no whit moued with ſuch ſpectacles. He askes if they haue not bin taught and inſtructed concerning the true God. Manie expoſitors thinke that this is but one repetition; to wit, it appeares by the creation of the world, that there is not ſo much as anie appearance of ſeeking God in wood, ſtone, gold, or ſiluer: but wee may gather from the ſcope of the text, that theſe are two diſtinct members. For if he continued ſtill to reproue the Gentiles, hee would then bring no other teſtimonies but heauen and earth againſt them: but ſpeaking to the Iewes, who were familiarly acquainted with the law of God; for their reproofe hee vſeth teſtimonies taken both from the order of nature, and from the word.

The Iewes had a double meanes of reproofe.

Firſt, he askes in generall, if they knew nothing. Secondly, he propounds the meanes by which they ought to diſcerne the true God from the falſe. The firſt is from hearing the word; and therefore he ſaith expreſly, Haue ye not heard? Hath it not been told you from the beginning? The laſt is from this faire theater of the world, where Gods glory ſhines round about and beneath vs. He would haue contented himſelfe with this ſecond demonſtration, if he had had to deale with the profane Gentiles; as Saint Paul alſo doth Act. 14. 17. For ſpeaking to them of Iconia, who had neuer heard word of the heauenly doctrine, he vſeth arguments taken from the order of nature. How? That God left not himſelfe vvithout vvitneſſe, by giuing raine and fruitfull ſeaſons. But our Prophet, who ſpeakes of that true religion which was among the Iewes, could not omit the mentioning of the law, which was to make them double inexcuſable, if they ſhould forſake or deſpiſe it, to prophane themſelues among infidels. For they were conuinced not onely by the ſight of their eies, but alſo by the hearing of their eares: which were continually beaten vpon by God, in the preaching of his law amongſt them. Seeing then that from their mothers breaſts they had (with their mothers milke) been nurced vp with the milke of the true knowledge of God, and were inſtructed by their fathers, by continuall ſucceſſion, the Prophet telles them that they ſhall ſhew themſelues too peruerſe and vnthankfull, if ſuch an helpe ſhall nothing profit them.

1

2

3

For that which he ſaith of the beginning, or long agoe, is to the ſame purpoſe; namely, that from their cradle they had been nurced vp in Gods true worſhip: and beſides, in ages ſucceeding they had ſuch continuall teaching, as would not ſuffer thē to erre; only, if they did but remember vvhat they had heard. As if he ſhould haue ſaid; You haue no new God, but the very ſame who manifeſted himſelfe from the beginning to Abraham, Moſes, and the reſt of the Patriarks.

And here we haue an excellent confirmation touching the antiquitie of that doctrine which hath continued ſo many ages among the faithfull: not that antiquitie is ſufficient of it ſelfe to giue faith & aſſurance (for ſo the Gentiles might reply that their ſuperſtitions were no leſſe ancient) but in reſpect that frō the beginning, the authoritie of the law hath been abundantly confirmed, and that God hath teſtified that himſelfe is the author of it: for this cauſe, I ſay, it gets great confirmation vnto it by long vſe, in that the ſucceſſors

Antiquitie of true doctrine.

Antiquitie not ſufficient in it ſelfe.

Antiquitie a good confirmation of the truth.

knew

knew that their anceſtors gaue them ſuch a forme of religion, which they could not reiect without a manifeſt brand of apoſtaſie. By ſuch an order and progreſſe then, all difficultie is taken away. Now we at this day haue the ſame faith with theſe good fathers, becauſe with vs they acknowledged one God, the Father of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: for the faithfull haue all one word and promiſe, tending all to one and the ſame end.

Our faith one and the ſame with that that theſe good fathers profeſſed.

Where he addes, from the foundations of the earth; it is ſpoken by a figure, where a part is taken for the whole: for a part of the world is here taken for the whole. God hath ſet this world before men as a looking-glaſſe, that by viewing of it, they might come to the knowledge of his Maieſtie, and that it might be an image of things inuiſible, as Saint Paul ſaith more fully, Rom. 1. 20. Their ignorance then is inexcuſable; for they neede not complaine touching the want of meanes, whereby they may come to the knowledge of God, ſeeing he is ready ſo many waies to manifeſt himſelfe vnto them. And to ſay the truth, men ſinne more of obſtinacie and pride, then of ignorance: for they willingly deſpiſe God, ſpeaking thus diſtinctly, that they might ſtay themſelues in creatures, and in vaine things. Can ſuch a contempt deſerue to be excuſed? No, for thoſe who worſhip their owne inuentions in ſtead of God, (of which all almoſt are guilty) are they not welworthy to be blinded? Truly ſuch, and ſo iuſt a puniſhment is worthily to be inflicted, where there is ſo great headſtrongneſſe. But if the doctrine of Gods word be ioined to this knowledge which we haue by the creatures, we ſhall be much leſſe excuſable. Thus then Iſaiah mentions both knowledges, to ſhew that the Iewes ſhall be worthy of double condemnation, if they ſtand not faſt in the faith, being thus informed and aſſured of the power and goodneſſe of God.

1

Men ſinne more of pride and obſtinacie, then of ignorane.

2

Thoſe that haue a double meanes of knowledge, are doubly inexcuſable if they ſinne againſt it.

Verſ. 22. Hee ſitteth vpon the circle of the earth, and the inhabitants thereof are as graſſoppers: hee ſtretcheth out the heauens as a curtaine, and ſpreadeth them out as a tent to dwell in.

Which he began in verſ. 10, 11, 12.

HEe continues on his former argument, but after another manner; and ſets out the magnificence and power of God. Wee haue told you heretofore why hee ſpeakes thus; to wit, becauſe we are too much inclined to diſtruſt: ſo as the leaſt occaſion in the world will make vs ſtumble and be offended. For which reſpect, the Prophet is conſtrained to repeat one thing often, that he might keepe in firme and weake hearts in the confidence of Gods promiſes. Before, he handled the doctrine of the creation of the world, but now he comes to the perpetuall gouernment of it: for God contented not himſelfe to manifeſt his power once onely in the creation of the world, but continues ſtill to ſhew it with as great efficacie in the vpholding and conſeruation of his worke. This is well to be obſerued of vs; for otherwiſe it were but a bare ſpeculation to know that God did once create the world, vnleſſe wee alſo knew that his hand were alwaies ſtretched out to maintaine and gouerne the ſame in the firſt eſtate. Which the Prophet expreſſeth in this word ſitteth: as if he ſhould ſay, The earth continues not ſtable and firme in her place, but as it is ſtaied & vpheld by the power of God: for ſitting, by a figure, ſignifies as much as rule or gouernment.

The reaſon why the Prophet vſeth ſo manie repetitions to one purpoſe. From the doctrine of the creation of the world, the Prophet deſcends to the perpetual gouernment of it.

In that he compares the inhabitants of the earth to graſſhoppers; it is to ſhew that God is not incloſed within theſe narrow roomes, ſeeing neither heauen, nor the heauen of heauens are able to containe him; that ſo we might learne (whē God is ſpoken of in the Scriptures) not to imagin any earthly or carnall thing of him touching his incomprehenſible glory. Moreouer, by this ſimilitude we are taught how blind & ſottiſh thoſe are, which attribute any thing to themſelues; for they ſhall get as much by their brags, as if ſome little vermin, ſuch as the graſſhoppers be, would riſe vp againſt the cloudes in fetching their friſks: but you know they are forced to fall downe by and by to the earth.

Graſſhoppers.

Simile.

He ſpreads out the heauen as a curtaine.] Dauid vſeth the ſame kind of ſpeech, Pſal. 104. 2. Iſaiah and Dauid ſpeake both touching the aſpect and ſpreading out of the heauens, in regard of our ſight: for it is not their meaning that God ſpreads them out for himſelfe to inhabit there, but rather that wee might haue roome enough to dwell vnderneath. For as the earth beares vs vp, ſo the heauens do couer vs: and thus wee haue a manſion or dwelling houſe made vs in this world cloſe and couered. But theſe ſimilitudes may ſeeme much to leſſen the dignitie of the matter whereof the Prophet intreateth, albeit his meaning is cleerly to ſet it forth in the liueliеſt colours hee can deuiſe: for what is a curtaine? What is a tent? What great matters are theſe? I anſwere; theſe ſimilitudes are exceeding fit to amplifie the matter: for it is as much as if he had ſaid; God ſpreads out the heauens with as much eaſe as a man drawes a curtaine. He alſo leaues it to euery mans conſideration, how much difference there is betweene the heauens and a curtaine, and what their greatneſſe is; which all may perceiue. Laſtly, there is an oppoſition betweene the houſes that men build with much toile and continuall coſt, (and yet it is much if they can raiſe a frame of an hundred foote high:) and this infinit height of the heauens, ſo ſpread by the onely word of God. Which ſhewes cleerly, how excellent and skilfull a workman he is.

God hath ordained the earth to beare vs, and the heauens to couer vs. Obiect.

Anſ.

Verſ. 23. He bringeth the Princes to nothing, and maketh the Iudges of the earth as vanitie.

Now hee comes to ſpeake of Gods prouidence in particular.

STill hee continues to extoll Gods prouidence, by which hee gouernes the whole world, but eſpecially mans. In the former verſe he begun to touch this doctrine; to wit, that God hath not created the world to leaue it at ſixe and ſeuen, as we ſay, but hold his ſoueraignte and dominion ouer it; meaning ſtill to retaine the keeping and ſuſteining of it in his owne hands. But becauſe it pleaſeth him to ſhew himſelfe more familiarly to men, the Prophet hath choſen this particular, that he might therein ſet forth and praiſe his prouidence. The ſumme is, that Gods dominion extends it ſelfe farre and wide, ſo as he gouernes all things in heauen and earth according to his good pleaſure: but therewithall he teacheth (which was a point worthie of note) that in his gouernment of mankind one may manifeſtlie perceiue notable marks of his power and prouidence. Now he contents not himſelfe to note it in generall termes, but picks out one particular inſtance which might the better awaken our drouzie minds. All things that befall the common multitude are ſoone forgotten, and is quickly out of minde as matters vnworthie the talking of: but whē Kingdomes and Monarchies wherein men are aduanced to great dignities come once to fall, then it ſeemes the very earth is ſhaken with it. The Prophet therefore ſtirres vp our attention very fitly by ſuch documēts. Surely a man would thinke that Princes and Magiſtrates are ſeparated from the common condition of men, and exempt from the ordinarie calamities which befall others, becauſe by their glorie they ſeeme to dazell the eies and minds of euery one that beholds them: but they themſelues for the moſt part' are vtterlie blind, and therefore our Prophet eſpeciallie aimes at them, ſaying, That the Lord brings them to nothing. Hath the Lord ſo great force againſt the mightie Princes of the earth? What ſhall become of the baſer ſort? Can he not, trow ye, deale well enough with them, and handle them as he liſt? Can he not giue, and take away ſtrength, and the greatnes of mens ſpirits when he will?

Verſ. 24. As though they were not planted, as though they were not ſowne, as though their ſtock tooke no roote in the earth: for he did euen blow vpon them and they withered, and the whirlewinde will take them away as ſtubble.

THough the particle Ak ſignifies Alſo, yet I haue tranſlated, As though, becauſe it agrees beſt to this preſent verſe, and ſo the plaine meaning will be, They ſhall confeſſe themſelues to be in as poore a condition, as if they had neuer bin planted nor ſowne. This is an amplification of the former doctrine: for in this verſe he ſhewes, that euen Princes ſhal be ſo whollie plucked vp and rooted out, that not one glimps of their glorie ſhall euer be diſcerned; euen as if it had neuer bin at all. Whileſt they are in honor, Pſal.49. a man would thinke them to be ſo faſt rooted that the blaſts of aduerſitie were neuer able to remoue them: but ſudden changes fall out in a moment which blot out their name and renoume, ſo as men ſhal ſay, Were there euer any ſuch? And this comes to paſſe not in mens perſons only, but alſo to floriſhing and ſtately kingdomes.

Seeing then ſuch great alterations are ſignes of Gods terrible power, let vs beware how wee chuſe our ſelues ſuch tickling leaning ſtocks, which haue only a vaine appearance of help in them, but let vs ſolely and only reſt vpon the power of the Almightie, what ſtrength, honor, or riches ſoeuer wee enioy. For the Lord playes not at tenis with the world, in banding of ſuch great ones, as one taking delight therein, as ſome prophane dogs blaſpheme: but the higher any man is aduanced, commonlie the bigger he ſwels in pride, and neuer leaues ſwelling till he burſt himſelfe in pieces, that ſo the iuſt iudgements of God may be alwaies manifeſt to all. By this we are alſo admoniſhed, that it is ill done to attribute the euents of things to fortune, or to ſecond cauſes: for God became not the Creator of the world, forthwith to leaue his worke, as a carpenter doth his ſhip, but his hand continuallie labours, ſo as not an haire of our heads can fall to the ground without his good pleaſure. When ſo many changes fall out therefore in the world, and that we ſee things which in our iudgements would ſtand for euer, to fall & conſume as the ſmoke; let vs turne our eies towards this ſoueraigne prouidence and power of God.

As ſoone as he blew vpon it.] In theſe words the Prophet ſhewes of what ſhort and momentanie continuance thoſe things be which are wont to dazle our eies, and make vs at a ſtand. For wee no ſooner thinke of a great King, but our hearts quake within vs, and we are moued at it: but he ſhewes, that Princes and kings are but as ſtubble before God, whoſe only blaſt will carrie them away like a whirlewinde, whither ſoeuer it pleaſeth him. What is our leſſon then? We muſt not ſtand gazing vpon the creature, be he what he will, that the ſame ſhould hinder vs from giuing that glorie and honour vnto God which to him appertaines. This the Iewes were diligentlie to note: for it is like enough they would haue thought this great Monarchie of the Caldeans, vnder whom they were held captiues, ſhould neuer haue bin diſſolued, nor that themſelues ſhould euer haue been deliuered, vnleſſe this doctrine had come between: to wit, That there is nothing ſo firme and ſtable in the world, which God can not ſcatter and bring to nothing with his only blaſt: that they might hold faſt the hope of their deliuerance therefore, the Prophet aduertiſeth them that as ſoone as God ſhall but thunder from heauen, he will breake and cruſh in pieces all the terrible forces and power of their enemies.

Verſ. 25. To whom now will you liken me, that I ſhould be like him, ſaith the holy one?

THis is a repetition of the former ſentēce, where it was ſaid, that God would not indure to be matcht with Idols, verſ.18.19.20. leſt the Iewes ſhould diminiſh any thing of his his power; notwithſtanding they were ſo long retained captiues in the hands of Infidels. For they were to beware how they attributed any power to Idols, becauſe the idolaters (who kept them in bondage) proſpered: for by ſuch diſputings, comparing the power of the true God with idols, they were in danger to haue mingled them together. This is the cauſe why in indignation he repeates the ſame thing againe; To whom will yee liken me? As if hee ſhould ſay; Dare you venture to take my glory from mee by your compariſons? For howſoeuer men frame diuers imaginations to themſelues; thinking to transforme God into what ſhape they liſt: yet remaines he one and the ſame ſtill, and his nature is changed neuer the more by their inuentions.

He brings in the clauſe holy one, to verie good purpoſe, putting it in ſtead of Gods name. For therein he priuilie taxeth the Iews of ſhamefull ingratitude, if they ſanctifie him not in their hearts: Chap. 8.13. ſeeing he hath ſeparated them from others. For there is no holineſſe to be found in the idols of the Gentiles, being but the workes of mens hands. God then is too much wronged and abaſed, when idols are oppoſed to him, and that men beginne to call it into queſtion, whether of them hath the greater power.

Verſ. 26. Lift vp your eies on high, and behold who hath created theſe things, and bringeth out their armies by number, and calleth them all by their names: by the greatnes of his power and mighty ſtrength [a] nothing faileth.

[a] Or, none ſhall faile.

IT ſeemes the Prophet ſtands too long vpon this point, ſeeing there is none will denie it. For he repeats one thing often, (which none doubts of) but muſt needs be conſtrained to confeſſe the admirable power and wiſdome of God in the comely order of nature. But wee muſt obſerue what hath been ſaid heretofore. Wee in our ſelues are ſo vntoward, and doe value Gods power at ſo low a rate, that we ſometimes afford him not the honour which we will giue to a mortall man: yea, the appearance of a ſillie worme of the earth, puts vs ſometimes into ſo great mammering and feare, that all the promiſes of the Almightie in the holy Bible, can ſcarſely comfort vs. For this cauſe the Prophet hath iuſt cauſe to repeate it ſo often, that God is defrauded of his honour, if his power rauiſh vs not ſo as to admire it. Thus he makes no idle repetitions you ſee, becauſe wee are ſo dull and ſlow of hearing, that we haue need to bee awakened and pricked at euery turning with the ſpur. Men daily behold the heauens and the ſtarres, but where is hee that thinks ſeriouſly of the author of theſe things? Wee ſee the ſhape of man ſo artificially formed by God, that he was put into this world to behold the heauens, that hee might acknowledge the Lord of them: for God hath bowed downe the faces of beaſts towards the earth, and hath made man to goe vpright; to ſtirre him vp to view the place of his abode. And this was well deſcribed by a prophane Poet, who ſaith:

Although euery creeping thing bends his face chiefly towards the earth, yet to man God hath giuen a face to looke vpwards, and hath created him to behold the excellencie of the heauens, and to lift vp his eyes to the ſtarres.

For the moſt part we afford not God the honour which we will giue to a mortall man.

Thus then the Prophet ſets forth mans malignitie, who will acknowledge nothing of God, though it be painted out before his eies, but had rather haue their ſnout grubling in the earth like Moles: for the maieſtie of God muſt needes touch vs neere, if wee looke wiſely vpon the heauens. In naming of the ſtarres, he expreſſeth more plainly, that the wonderfull order which ſhines in the heauens, doth as it were preach with a lowd voice, that there is but one God and Creator of the world; which all ſuch muſt be conſtreined to acknowledge, as, amidſt ſo great numbers and diuerſities of ſtarres, ſhall obſerue their diſtinct order and comely marchings. For the ſtarres were not thus ſet euery one in his place at haphazard; neither is it at random that they march ſo ſwiftly in ſuch proportion, fetching ſo great compaſſes, and yet walking as by a direct line; ſo as they turne not an haires breadth from that path which God hath limited out vnto them. Thus their wonderfull diſpoſition ſhewes, that God is the author and framer of them. Can a man then open his eies, but he ſhall be forced to behold the maieſtie of God, in the works which his hands haue wrought?

He bringeth out their armies by number.] Vnder the word armie, he comprehends two things. Firſt, a number in a maner infinit: ſecondly, the exceſſent diſpoſing of them. For a ſmall number of men will not make an armie, vnleſſe there be many bands. Moreouer, we call not a troope of men gathered diſorderly together, an armie; but that where there are Lieuetenants, Sergants of the band, Captaines, Colonels, and ohter leaders, who are to bring their ſouldiers in a right aray. Thus then the infinite numbers, order, and certaine courſes and marchings of the ſtarres, doe very well deſerue this name of an armie.

By the word number, hee ſignifies that God hath this armie alwaies at a becke. Souldiers you know loue to be wandring this way and that way, and the Captaine cannot eaſilie get them by and by together, though hee cauſe the trumpet to be ſounded; neither can hee forthwith put them in aray being aſſembled. But it is far otherwiſe with God, hee hath alwaies his ſouldiers at a becke, yea by number: that is to ſay, he knowes the tale of them, ſo as none abſents himſelfe.

He calles them all by their names.] This ſentence is in ſo many wordes contained in Pſal. 147. Some expound it as if God knowes the number of the ſtarres, which to vs is vnknowne: but Dauid and Iſaiah both meant another thing, to wit, that God makes the ſtars to ſerue his turne at his pleaſure, as if one should call his seruant by his name to set him about some businesse: and in the same sense it will be said hereafter, Chap.45.1. that the Lord called Cirus by name, because he vsed him as his seruant to set his people at libertie. In a word, by this hee notes a great readinesse and obedience, when he which is called by his name, answers to it by and by.

Those who expound the member before going; to wit, that God knowes the number of the stars, faile also in this, that they thinke by the word greatnesse, hee hath giuen them names signifying their power & office. Others expound it; that there is no starre which hath not his propertie and efficacie; because the Lord hath giuen it them for euer. Others ioine these words with the verbe shall call: as if the Prophet should say; The Lord is so mightie, that all the starres vnderstand what he commands them. But as I take it, this sense agrees best; to wit, that God is so powerfull and mighty, that hee no sooner commands anie thing, but all the armies of heauen are prest to obey him: wherein we haue a singular testimonie of his greatnesse, when so excellent creatures doe without difficultie subiect thémselues vnto him; and in receiuing his commandements, witnes that they acknowledge him for their Lord and Creator.

By the greatnesse.

The word none, is by the Hebrewes applied not onely to men and women, but to other creatures; yea to those that are without reason: as heretofore in Chap.34.16. speaking of the birds which should inhabit stately houses, he saith, that none of these shall faile: and the word Ieh, which is there, the Prophet puts heere. This place sets before vs the power of God, and teacheth vs that there is no creature in heauen nor in earth, but it depends vpon his will and good pleasure. What is more absurd or vnreasonable therefore, then to compare him with idols, which are vainer then vanitie it selfe?

Vers.27. Why sayest thou, O Iaakob, and speakest thou O Israel. My way is hid from the Lord, and my iudgement is passed ouer of my God.*

*Or, Why wilt thou say: or, shouldest thou say.

NOw Isaiah complaines of the Iewes, who being in a manner brought to the last cast, turned their eies away from Gods promises, which were the meanes of their comfort. Or if you will haue it so, he takes order for the time to come, lest they should quaile vnder so many and so tedious afflictions as should befall them. The words are in the future tence, which may be resolued into the subiunctiue; Wherefore shouldest thou say? From the former sentence he well inferres, that whatsoeuer should happen, the faithfull and elect people were to wait patiently vpon the Lord, till he in due season should relieue them. Now he reasons from the lesse to the greater; that seeing God alwaies holds his soueraigntie ouer all the parts of the world, it is vnpossible that he should euer for sake his Church. Notwithstanding, it is very likely that the people in that time made many complaints, and murmured against God, as if hee had been careless of their saluation; or as if he came not soone enough to succour them; or else that he shut his eies, as one that refused to behold them in their aduersities. This vice he now goes about to correct; for they thought the Lord had cast them off: and so in afflictions we are also ready to thinke; for we imagin that he hath reiected and giuen vs vp for a pray, because he lets things in the world goe at six and seuen.

The coherence of his verse with the former.

The Prophet takes his argument from the lesse to the greater.

Iaakob and Israel.] By these names the Prophet puts them in mind of the Lords couenant, confirmed vnto them by so many promises. As if he should say; Thinkest thou, thou are not that people whom God hath chosen to himselfe? Wherefore shouldest thou imagin that hee which cannot deceiue, should contemne thy arguments or reasons? For the word vvay, is taken for their estate or reasons; and hid, is taken for contemned or vnknowne: because if God withhold his help but a little, wee straight way thinke that his prouidence reacheth not vnto vs. Some expound it otherwise; to wit, that the people are heere reproued, because they thought to sinne without punishment: and so they will haue this sentence, like to that in Psal.14.1. The foole hath said in his heart there is no God. But questionlesse this was the Prophets meaning; Thinkest thou O Israel that God thinks not of thine affaires? For hee contests against the peoples infidelitie, and rebukes them sharply, that hee might afterward raise them vp to hope and comfort; shewing that it is vnpossible for the Lord not to regard and helpe those whom hee hath once taken into his tuition and sauegard.

The word iudgement, which is by and by added, confirmes this interpretation: for we cry out for iudgement in the time of affliction, when we be oppressed and wronged. And it is said, that God then takes our cause in hand, when in taking knowledge of it, hee defends and keepes vs: as on the contrarie, that he regards vs not, when he suffers vs to be giuen vp for a pray to our enemies. It is as much then as if he should say; O ye Iewes, what meane ye to complaine, as if God had forgotten or despised your conditions! Now by this reprehension, Isaiah prepares them to receiue consolation: for all impediments were to bee remoued, to the end the way to come thereunto might bee the more easie.

When God is said to take our cause in hand.

Vers.28. Knowest thou not? or hast thou not heard, that the euerlasting God, the Lord hath created the ends of the earth? Hee neither fainteth, nor is wearie: there is no searching of his vnderstanding.

HE repeates the same thing that he said before; to wit, that the people who had been instructed in the schoole of God, were no way excusable, in regard of their dulnesse. Hee rebukes them thus sharply then for not hauing hauing profited better in the Law, and other good meanes which God had giuen them, ouer and beſides the common vnderſtanding wherewith all of them might haue been indued. In the firſt place he puts the verbe To know, which is more generall; becauſe God had cauſed his glory to appeare vnto them, by many miracles and teſtimonies of his power; in the ſecond place hee comes to the hearing; as if hee ſhould ſay, If theſe things haue wrought nothing vpon thee, namely, that thou haſt been ſo long taught and inſtructed, both by the word and workes of God, that he vſeth not to ſit idle in heauen; it muſt needs be concluded, that thou art verie vnteachable.

He calles him the everlaſting God; thereby diſtinguiſhing him from al corruptible idols, the worke of mens hands. Now if this article were well imprinted in our hearts, diſtruſt would vaniſh away like ſmoke. For if God be eternall, then it is impoſſible for him either to be changeable, or weake; for eternitie hath this propertie vnto it, that it is no way ſubiect to change, but continues alwaies alike, which the Iewes comprehended not, though they had often heard it before. This is the cauſe why the Prophet is ſo round with them in rouzing them vp by this reprehenſion. For thus he ſhewes how double guiltie they ſhall be before God, if hauing bin taught by his word, and by ſo many of his benefits, they ſhal ſtill refuſe to yeeld him that honour and glorie which to him belongs.

Eternitie hath this proper vnto it, that it is no way ſubiect to change.

[He is not wearie, &c.] Heere the Prophet ſhewes two things; the firſt, that God is not wearie of well doing: the ſecond, that there is no ſearching of his vnderſtanding. In the firſt member he proues, that nothing can let God to continue his well doing towards them, becauſe he is not like thoſe ỳ waſte their goods by often giuing out: or to ſuch as are euer and anon wearie in doing good turnes: or to ſuch as repent their liberalitie: for his bountie can neuer be drawne drie. If he haue done good to the fathers, he will do no leſſe to the children. And whereas he often works quite contrarie to that which we thinke meete, the Prophet preuents the conceit, by telling vs that his Counſels are inſcrutable. Thus he admoniſheth vs not to murmure though he do not by and by applie himſelfe to our deſires: for there is nothing better to nouriſh hope in vs, then this ſobrietie: to wit, that we conſidering how wonderfullie God works for the defence of his choſen, might be brought willinglie to ſubmit our reaſon vnder his ſecret counſels.

Sobrietie a notable meanes to nouriſh hope.

Verſ. 29. But he giueth ſtrength vnto him that fainteth, and vnto him that hath no ſtrength he increaſeth power.

The application of the former doctrine.

THe Prophet now applies the former generall ſentences to the matter in hand: for his purpoſe is, as we haue ſaid, to hearten on the people, and to giue them better hope. But becauſe the Iewes were low brought, and void of ſtrength, therefore he ſhewes, that it is the proper office of God to ſuccor thoſe which are thus faint and wearie. By this circumſtance then he ſets forth Gods power, to the end they might conclude and be ſurely reſolued of their ſaluation, whileſt God ſhall be fauorable vnto them. I grant, that the Prophet had reſpect to the people who were detained priſoners in Babylon: but we ought notwithſtanding to make our profit of this doctrine, that although our ſtrength ſhould faile vs, ſo as we ſhould be brought to deaths dore, yet to remember that it is Gods propertie to ſtretch forth his hand to ſuch as faint and are ſpent, being left ſuccorleſſe. But it is requiſit we ſhould firſt of all feele our powertie and wearines, that that ſentence of S. Paul might be fulfilled in vs, The power of God is perfected in our weakenes, 2. Cor. 12. 9. For if our hearts be not thoroughlie touched, ſo as we be indeed conuinced of our imbecilitie, we can not find help of God in due time.

It is neceſſarie we ſhould feele our ſelues weake, before God giue vs of his power.

Verſ. 30. Euen the yong men ſhall faint, and be wearie, and the yong men ſhall ſtumble and fall.

BY this compariſon ỳ Prophet further enricheth ỳ which he ſaid before; to wit, ỳ the power which God giues to his elect is inuincible, and euer durable: for mans ſtrength eaſily vaniſheth; but Gods, neuer. It is moſt certaine, that all the naturall ſtrength we haue is from God; but for as much as men prowdly attribute that as proper to themſelues which he giues to all, therefore the Prophet diſtinguiſheth betweene the ſtrength which ſeemes to flow from nature, and that, by which God eſpeciallie ſuſteines his children. For in as much as the other is an vniuerſall benefit beſtowed vpon all the world, therefore men take no knowledge of that. Thus then hee calles that the ſtrength of men, which is a gift common to all: and that the ſtrength of God, by which he aſſiſts vs when all our ſtrength faileth. For he here ſpeakes of that grace of God which is called ſupernaturall; and ſiſth, that it is perpetuall, whereas men can haue nothing of themſelues but that which is tranſitorie & periſhable; that ſo by this marke he may ſeparate the Church of God from the reſt of the world, and ſpirituall ſtrength from that which is earthly proſperitie.

The Prophet diſtinguiſheth betweene that ſtrength which men ſeeme to haue by nature, and that by which God ſuſtaines his children.

Supernaturall graces.

Whereas in the firſt member he hath put the word Nearim, which is as much to ſay as young men; and in the ſecond he addes Bachurim, which ſignifies not that only, but men of choiſe: yet becauſe he repeates but one and the ſame thing, it agrees beſt if we referre it vnto the time of age; and yet hee meanes all ſuch as are ſtout, and in their beſt ſtrength. Now by this we may ſee how hee magnifies the excellent prerogatiue wherewith Gods childrē are endued aboue others, to the end they might ſatisfie their hearts with their owne condition, and might nothing enuie the children of this world, who reioyce in their owne ſtrength. In a word, he ſhewes how much men erre, in hauing an ouerweening of their own abilities. Why ſo?

Because it often ouerthrowes them, and makes them fall quickly.

It seemes he alludes to that which falles out dayly, to wit, that the stronger any man is, the bolder will he be to vndertake difficult masteries, and that is the cause that the strongest natures do soonest decay; for they thinke that nothing is too hard for them. They headily and rashly plunge themselues into all aduentures; but in conclusion, they faint and fall in the mid way, and receiue the hier of their headinesse. The like befalles them who haue receiued any grace of God, and wax proud of it, thinking too well of themselues: for whatsoeuer they haue receiued, comes all to nothing; nay, it turnes to their ruine and perdition: and such fellowes worthily beare the punishment of their pride.

Those that are strongest by nature, commonly soonest decay in strength.

What hast thou which thou hast not receiued?

Vers. 31. But they that wait vpon the Lord, shall renue their strength: they shall lift vp the wings as the Eagles: they shall runne and not bee wearie, and they shall walke and not faint.

THe Hebrewes say; To change their forces, for renuing or gathering newe strength; and to bee thereby restored. The Prophet shewes that strength shall neuer be wanting to the faithfull, which shall hope in the Lord: and so he confirmes that which he said, Chap. 30.7. Your strength is to sit still. For wee ought not to play the bedlems, or wild colts, but with patience to wait for our God. This hee notes out by this word vvait. Men that swell and fret, doe often breake, through their owne vnrulines: but the strength of the faithfull, which hath no such florishing shewes, (yea it is commonly so hidden that it cannot be seene) whilest they wait for Gods helpe, this strength receiues by the blessing of God new increases. Let vs therefore returne to that sentence of Paul; That Gods power is perfected in our weaknesse: 1. Cor. 12.9. which by consequence we ought throughly to feele, that we may indeede giue place to the power of God. The Iewes stood in great need of this doctrine during the time of their tedious seruitude: but it is no lesse necessarie for vs now in the dissipations and scatterings which we see in the Churches.

Strength shall neuer be wanting to them that relie vpon the Lord.

They shall lift vp their wings.] Some thinke the Prophet vtters the same thing which is contained in Psal. 103. Thy youth shall be renued like the Eagles. I grant that the Eagle among other birds liues long: for both Aristotle and Plinie doe witnesse that shee neuer dies of age, but of hunger; because shee cannot get the meate into her beke, by reason of the crookednesse of it, in which respect she liues by drinking a very long time. A certaine Iew called Zadius, (being all of them too audacious in deuising of fables) would make vs beleeue that the Eagle flies vp into the next region to the Sunne, vnto which she approcheth so neere, that her olde fethers burne off, and in stead of them others come forth: but this is wholly ridiculous and fabulous. The Prophets meaning is, that those who trust in the Lord, shall be strong as the Eagles euen to their old age. But because the Eagle flies higher then other birds, in which shee also shewes great agilitie of body; whence the prouerbe came, The Eagle in the cloudes: therefore by this place wee may vnderstand, not onely length of life, but also strength and nimblenes. So as the Prophet hauing first set forth the increasing of strength, which the faithfull receiue from God, addes in the second place, that they shall grow nimble and apt to sore aloft.

Eagles liue long, as witnesseth Aristotle and Plinie.

Zadius a Iew. The Iewes audacious in inuenting ridiculous fables.

The Eagle in the cloudes.

Thereunto appertaines that which is added; they shall runne and not be wearie: as if hee should say; The Lord will so assist his chosen, that they shall finish their course without any incumbrances. It is a figuratiue kinde of speech, by which hee signifies that the faithfull being fortified with Gods strength, shall be alwaies prompt, and able to execute their charges. But will some say, we are euer in affliction; how is it then that he saith, we shall not be wearie? I answere, that the faithfull are so afflicted and wearie, that yet at last they shal ouercome, and feele that they haue been sustained by the power of God: for it befals them according to the Apostles experiment, 2. Cor. 4.8.9. We are pressed, saith he, on euery side, but not in distresse; poore, yet not ouercome of pouertie; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast downe, but we perish not. Let vs learne then to looke vnto the Lord, who at last will conduct vs to the quiet hauen, after we haue passed many streights: for hee which sets vs in the way, and commands vs to goe on, hauing entred vs thereinto, he will not guide vs for a day or two onely, leauing vs to sinke or swimme in the midde race, but will lead and direct vs to the verie goale.

Obiect.

Anſ. The faithfull alwaies wearie, and yet they shall ouercome at length.

THE

THE XLI. CHAPTER.

Verſ. 1. Keepe ſilence before mee, O Ilands, and let the people renue their ſtrength: let them come neere, and let them ſpeake: let vs come together into iudgement.

ALbeit it may ſeeme that the Prophet entersinto a new argument, yet it is certaine that the doctrine of this Chapter hath affinitie with the former. For to ſhame the Iewes, he telles them that hee would make good his cauſe, though he ſhould plead it before the blind infidels. Thus then hee reproues the ignorance, nay the ſottiſhneſſe of this people, to whom God had ſo familiarlie reuealed himſelfe by his law. And yet we are not to wonder that they did thus tremble being wrapped in ſo many troubles, being in a manner vtterly vnfit to apprehend any ſound comfort: for woſull experience teacheth vs how much aduerſities doe amaze vs; becauſe in this peruerſe and corrupt nature, euery of vs is ſubiect to theſe two diſeaſes. In proſperitie there is no ho with vs, we ſhake off all the bands of ſobrietie and modeſtie: in affliction, either we ſtorme, or elſe ſtand amazed, being vnable with anie cheerfulneſſe of Spirit to receiue the leaſt word of conſolation that may bee. It is no maruell then if the Prophet inſiſts long vpon this argument, and purſues it with ſo much varietie of words.

All of vs ſubiect to two diſeaſes: in proſperity to ſhake off all bonds of ſobrietie, in aduerſitie either to ſtorme, or ſtād amazed.

Hee calles the Countries beyond the ſeas Iles; for in as much as the Iewes had no traffique with them, they termed them all Iles that were on the other ſide of the ſea. Thus then hee directs his ſpeech not onely to the neighbour Countries, but to them alſo that were far remote, and willes them to keepe ſilence before him. But what is this ſilence? Iſaiah deſcribes one kind of iudgement, which the Lord is content to receiue againſt all nations; onely this, that they would but giue him audience till hee had pleaded his cauſe, and that nothing ſhould bee done herein confuſedly or tumultuouſly; for that is a thing the moſt contrary to iudgement that can be. Hee deſires therefore that proclamation may bee made for ſilence among the Gentiles, which being granted, hee will lay forth his plea in plaine termes. The order of iudgement requires, that euery one may take his turne: for if they ſhould all ſpeake at once, there muſt needs follow wonderfull confuſion. Hence we are admoniſhed, that the cauſe why we neither eſteeme nor honour the power, goodneſſe, wiſdome, and other attributes of God, is, becauſe wee will not giue him audience when he ſpeakes. Men vſually fret and murmure againſt God: one ſwelles with pride in contemning his word; another is ſenſeleſſe, and cares not which end goes forward, who being drowned in worldly delights, takes no pleaſure at all to aſpire to the heauenly kingdome. Who ſees not at this day with what boldneſſe and rebellion many ſlander the waies of the moſt high? Whence is it that the Papiſts are ſo violent and obſtinate in their errors? Is it not becauſe they will not giue the Lord the hearing? Surely if wee could but indure to heare him quietly, truth would by and by beare away the victorie.

Let vs come together into iudgement.

The cauſe why we honour not Gods wiſdome, power, &c.

Truth would ſoone beare away the victorie, if men would giue God but a peaceable audiēce.

To be ſhort, the Lord ſhewes here that he will make his partie good, if men giue him but indifferent hearing. He would not haue men to bend their eares in a careleſſe manner; for that euen wicked and corrupt Iudges cannot indure, hauing a fore hand prepared a ſpeech; but hee requires that his reaſons may be ſcanned and weighed, for nothing but truth and equitie ſhall be found in them. Some may demand whether the Prophet here exhorts the nations to hearken? I anſwere, this concernes the Iewes eſpecially; for nations farre off might happily receiue this prophecie ouer late: but this ſpeech hath ſo much the more efficacie to mollifie the hardneſſe of the Iewes hearts, when it is ſaid, that the prophane nations would eaſilie acknowledge his power, if they would but vouchſafe him the hearing. Now there is greater weight and vehemencie in it, that he ſpeakes directly to the Iles, then if hee had ſpoken thereof in the third perſon.

Obiect. Anſ.

Let the people renue their ſtrength.] The Lord prouokes all nations to come to this challenge, and that by way of contempt: as they that haue the better end of the ſtaffe are wont to doe, who being aſſured of the right, doubt nothing at all of the iſſue. Let them come, ſaith the Lord, and conſpire together; they ſhall preuaile nothing, the victorie will be mine in the end: in a word, I defie them all (as we vſe to ſpeake) for they ſhall haue the worſt, albeit they diſcouer all the abilities they haue either of body or minde: onely I deſire audience. Thus he ſignifies that truth is ſo powerfull, that it eaſilie reſiſts falſhood, if men will not wittingly ſtop their eares. Let the whole world then conſpire to aboliſh her, yet ſhall ſhe continue ſtrong ſtill. And therefore if we turne our backes vpon God, it will not bee lawfull for vs to caſt the fault vpon others, but rather accuſe our ſelues of want of attention whileſt he ſpake vnto vs: for if we were prepared to heare him in good earneſt, lies could not preuaile againſt vs, neither ſhould wee bee ſeduced by Satans ſophiſtrie, nor by any temptation whatſoeuer.

Truth eaſilie reſiſts falſhood, if it may haue but equall hearing.

Whereas he takes vpon him the perſon of one accuſed, to appeare before the ſeat of iuſtice to pleade; it may be asked, who it is among the ſonnes sonnes of men, that is able to bee a competent Iudge in so high & difficult a plea? I answer, here is nothing said touching the choice of Iudges: the Lord onely meant to say, that hee will get the day, if his cause should bee heard before any competent Iudges. There is no reason why hee should submit himselfe either to men or Angels, to giue an account before them of his doings: but to take away all excuses, he testifies that the victorie is alreadie in his hands, if hee should be constrained to plead for himselfe. It followes then, that it is a thing most vnreasonable, to stand debating of the matter among our selues: why doe wee not rather forthwith submit vs wholly vnto him? We shew out selues exceeding vnthankfull and peruerse, if we will not afford him the hearing, and bethinke vs how equall the conditions are which he requires. Truly, though nothing could be more absurd then to see mortall man stand to iudge the eternall God: yet behold a thing more vile and hatefull, to wit, that we dare condemne him, before we haue heard his iust defences.

Queſt.

Ans.

Vers. 2. Who hath raised vp iustice from the East, and called him to his foote, and gaue the nations before him, and subdued Kings? Hee gaue them as dust to his sword, and as scattered stubble to his bow.

*Or, Who hath raised vp iustice from the East? Hath he not called him to come after him.

HEnce it appeares what is the Prophets drift; for his meaning is to assure the Iewes that they shall be out of danger of erring, if they will but keepe the way which he chalks out before them. This is the cause why he mentions Abraham: for he might haue instanced other works of God, but he rather chose an example fitting his purpose: for the Iewes being descended from the stock of Abraham, whom God had (not without many dangers) drawne out of Caldea, they for their parts were to hope that God would no lesse assist and help them, seeing his force was nothing abated, nor his loue cooled. It being a difficult thing for them therefore to hope for any returne, in regard they were held captiues in their enemies countrie far frō home, the Prophet sets the like example before them, to quicken vp their hope and confidence. They were scattered in Caldea, and in the regions adioining: they imagined that the way was hedged vp against them, in regard of the many stumbling blockes that lay betweene them and home: but Abraham their father passed from Vr of the Caldeans, into Iudeah. He that had brought a poore man with his father, his nephew, and wife, safe and sound through so many straits, could not he also conduct and leade his people? Since God then had deliuered Abraham out of all incumbrances, in drawing him out of his Countrie; this example which so neerely concerned them, ought to touch his children and of-spring to the quicke: so as the safe conduit which their father had from, or of the Caldeans into the land of promise, was to serue them as a pledge or mirror of their deliuerance to come.

When he calles Abraham Iustice, it is not to magnifie him, but to shew that God put vpon him that person which appertained to the whole Church: for his calling was not to be esteemed as that of a priuate person, but therein God shewed a testimonie of his eternall iustice, which is common to all the faithfull. As if he should say; In the person of this good Patriarke, the Church was once deliuered, that by meanes thereof, she might hold this for a principle; to wit, that her saluation and Gods iustice should neuer bee turned backe to the worlds end. For in this one man, we may behold the vocation of all the faithfull, the forme of a Church, and the beginning and end of our saluation. In a word, Abraham is as a mirror of Gods iustice, as long as it shall shine in this world. This word iustice therefore serues to amplifie the matter; for it was a wonderfull worke of God to raise vp iustice frō the east, where all things were corrupt and defiled with abominable superstitions. Hath God then shewed so rare an example of his power and goodnesse? why should we not wait for the same still?

1
2
1
2
3

As touching that which followes, to come after him: some expound it, as if Abraham had called vpon the name of the Lord whithersoeuer he came: for he no sooner set his foote in any region, but he set vp an Alter to offer sacrifice to God: Gen. 12.7. & 13.18. All this is true that they say; but yet I expound it otherwise, to wit, that God led his seruant Abraham in the way, who followed that his leading foote by foote: for hauing receiued a commandement to goe forth, hee knew not the Country whither he should goe; so as he walked, but knew not which way to turne him, and God held him still in suspense, till hee entred the land of Canaan. Now because Abraham immediately obeied the voice of God, and albeit his way was vncertaine, yet hee depended still vpon his mouth, contenting himselfe with his conduction: our Prophet fitly saith, that he came after him; because hee followed God, as readie and obedient seruants are wont to follow their master at the heeles, though they know not whither he goes.

And subdued.] His meaning is, that howsoeuer this good man might haue beene distracted & put out of heart through many temptations, yet God made him safely passe the pikes, which might any way hurt him. Moses recites not al the incumbrances which Abraham met withall in the way: but euery one may consider, that first of all his departing out of his native Country, could not be void of many discontentments. For it was vnpossible that forsaking his Country so rashly, but hee should be hated of his countrimen, who would condemne him for a mad man to leaue the place of his nativitie, his friends, and kinsfolks, to goe he knew not whither. Then, being come into the land of Canaan, he had to deale with barbarous and froward men, with whom he could no way make his peace, because hee inclined himselfe nothing at all to their superstitions.

1
2

That

That which Moſes recites teſtifies plainely, that Abraham had neuer any ſetled peace: and yet the wicked durſt enterpriſe nothing againſt him, but the Hittites offred him a place of burial freely without money, though he offred to pay for it: and they confeſſed that he was a Prince and man of God amongſt them, Gen.23.6.

The Prophet further amplifies the grace of God, in that he ſpared nos Kings; to ſhew, that he was the faithfull protector of his ſeruant Abraham. Now the hiſtorie of the foure Kings which he put to flight and diſcomfited is notorious. We may alſo extend it to Pharaoh and Abimelec, Gen.12.17. and 20.3. whereof the Prophet expreſſe ſpeaketh in the 105. Pſalme: for the Lord rebuked and chaſtiſed them, in that they durſt aduenture to touch his anointed. But hee ſpeakes properlie of the victorie which he got ouer the foure Kings which led his kinſman Lot captiue with all his familie: for it ſufficientlie appeares by the ſcope of the text, that he ſpeakes not of kings or nations that were peaceable, but of armed enemies, who by force were ſubdued.

He afterwards amplifies the eaſines of this victorie, and expreſſeth therein a great contempt, when he compares Kings to duſt and ſtubble: for Abraham ouercame them without hazarding his perſon. And therewithall we are taught to attribute this victorie to God, and not to the power of man: for men can not atchieue a victorie with ſo little adoe.

Verſ. 3. He purſued them, and paſſed ſafely by the way that he had not gone with his feet.

AGaine he magnifies the ſingular goodnes of God in amplifying this victorie by other circumſtances: and this is aduiſedlie to be conſidered of vs, that he ſhould obteine ſo great a conqueſt in a countrie vnknowne vnto him. It was a difficult and dangerous matter for him to purſue his enemies into regions vnfrequented: for Hiſtories record ſufficientlie what aduantage is gotten by knowledge of places both by ſea and land, which thoſe that frequent the warres haue euer and anon experience of. But this hindred not Abraham: whence it appeares yet better, that he was conducted and ſuccored by Gods hand, who leades thoſe that are his forward with boldnes.

Verſ. 4. Who hath wrought and done it? He that calleth the generations from the beginning. I the Lord am the firſt, and with the laſt, I am the ſame.

THough Iſaiah propounds nothing here but the example of Abraham: yet no doubt his meaning is to put the people in mind of all thoſe benefits which the fathers in former times had receiued. As if he ſhould ſay, Remember your beginning. From whence raiſed I vp Abraham your father? Through what waies led I him? And my benefits haue not ended there; for ſince that time, I haue neuer ceaſed to fill you with all manner of bleſſings. When he asks, Who is it? He ſpeakes not of one fact, but ads other mercies powred out vpon them many waies, which the people were now to call to minde.

Where he ſaith, that God called the generations from the beginning, it ought to be referred to the continuall ſucceſſions of the times: and the word Dor among the Hebrues ſignifies not only the time or age of mans life, but thoſe alſo which liue in the ſame age. And thus one age is diſtinguiſhed from another, as the fathers from the children; and the grandfathers from their little ones: for our ſucceſſors will call vs which now liue, the former, or next age: and that of our predeceſſors, the old time. Now becauſe one age would conſume the race of mankind if it were not ſupplied by the children which are borne; the Prophet ſhewes, that God multiplies men by continuall ſucceſſion, that ſo one may ſupplie anothers roome when it is emptie. Whence it followes that his prouidence gouernes all ages, leſt we ſhould thinke the world were ordered by fortune: for wee may euidentlie perceiue that his hand and power is in the ſucceſſion of one age after another. Gods prouidence gouernes all ages.

But becauſe diuers changes make vs thinke that the world goes vpon wheeles, as they ſay, therfore the Prophet contrariwiſe ſhews, that theſe ſo many alterations were foreſeene from the beginning. The ſumme of all is, That God rules in theſe varieties and changes which time brings forth, and with a ſteadie hand brings that to paſſe which himſelfe from the beginning hath ordeined. God rules in all the changes which time brings forth.

I the Lord.] He affirmes in more euident termes that God is the author of theſe benefits, namely, that Abraham ouercame his enemies, liued ſo long among the wicked without harme done vnto him: that he diſcomfited foure kings; and that the Lord reuenged the wrongs he receiued, when Pharaoh and Abimelec tooke his wife from him, Gen.12.9. and 14.15. and 20.18. To be ſhort, he teacheth, that it is to him we ought to referre all the benefits beſtowed vpon the ages following, after ſo diuers and ſundrie waies: for he extended not his liberalitie towards Abraham and his ſeed alone, but likewiſe to the whole world. 1 2 3 4

Where he names himſelfe the firſt, and ſaith he is with the laſt, this appertaines not only to the eternitie of his eſſence, but to his rule and dominion which he exerciſeth ouer the whole world. As if he ſhould ſay, Continuance of time makes me not wax old, for I neuer meane to giue vp my right. He is not idle in the heauens, but from his high throne beholds and orders the leaſt things. Moreouer, although the world forgeth vnto it ſelfe a world of dunghill gods, yet he will loſe nothing by it, becauſe he alwaies continues one and the ſame.

Verſ. 5. The yles ſaw it, and did feare, and the ends of the earth were abaſhed, drew neere, and came.

6. Euery

6. Euery man helped his neighbour, and ſaid to his brother; Be ſtreng.

HE ſhewes now that the world was too vnthankfull, who hauing ſeene the workes of God, did ſtill perſeuere in that blindneſſe wherewith it was poſſeſſed before. In the beginning of the Chapter, hee ſhewed that the victorie was his, if they would but lend their eares to heare his plea: now he addes, that the Gentiles knew his power well enough, and yet for all that, continued obſtinate and rebellious. In which reſpect, they were left without excuſe. Why ſo? Becauſe the Lord manifeſted himſelfe ſo apparantly, that they could not chuſe but ſee him, vnleſſe they would wittingly ſhut their eyes, leſt they ſhould behold him.

That he might therefore take from the nations furtheſt off, all pretext of ignorance, he ſaith, they were abaſhed at the ſight of his works; and yet they fell to their old bias againe, and forthwith wrapped themſelues in many ſuperſtitious vanities and errors. The ſumme is, that they not onely beheld, but were alſo conuinced, in that this knowledge abaſhed them. But ſome may obiect, that the benefits which God did to Abraham, could not bee made knowne to all, in ſuch wiſe that forraigne nations ſhould be fully acquainted with it. I anſwer, that howſoeuer he mentions none but Abraham here, yet vnder him hee meant to call to mind other examples of his goodneſſe, which their forefathers had taſted of ſince, that from both, they might conceiue hope of deliuerance. Abraham was not onely deliuered out of Caldea, but God drew alſo all his poſteritie out from the bondage of Egypt: Exod. 13. 16. and put them into poſſeſſion of the land of Canaan. He ſaith then that the Iles felt his power, when hee deliuered and preſerued his people, that they might know the true God: for his power plainly appeared in ſo many miracles.

Obiect.

Anſ.

Laſtly, he ſignifies, that the Iles ſhould bee aſtoniſhed at Gods inuincible power, when he ſhould afterwards deliuer his people. And whileſt the wicked ſhall heare tell of it, they will not ceaſe ſtill to bee perplexed, becauſe they therein feele that God is their enemie.

Drew neere.] By this, ſome vnderſtand, that the vnbeleeuers tooke a narrow view of Gods works. For we vſe to draw neere when we would be more certainly informed of any new thing: others referre it to the King of Sodome, who met Abraham: Gen. 14. 17. but theſe things, as I thinke, ſauor not, neither come they neere the marke. The words of the text will be eaſilie vnderſtood, if we ioine this latter member to the verſe following, thus; They drew neere and came: euery man helped his neighbour: and ſo the ſenſe will be; Although the Iles ſaw and knew my workes, ſo as they ſtood abaſhed, yet they aſſembled by heapes to make conſpiracies. But to what end? Euen to harten on one another to make new gods, and to confirme themſelues more and more in their blindneſſe.

Verſ. 6.

Hee amplifies the crime then, when hee ſaith, that euery one helped his neighbour. Now truly, hee that ſhall looke neere home, and ſhall diligently obſerue mens dealings, hee ſhall perceiue that the ſpring from whence all ſuperſtitions flow, is, that with one conſent they agree to quench the light which ſhines vpon them from heauen.

The fountaine from whence all ſuperſtitions flow.

Now albeit the Lord heere complaines of idolaters, yet he doth it to the end the Iewes might bee farre from corrupting themſelues with ſo foule a ſinne, but might rather keepe themſelues cloſe vnto God, and to a ſincere confidence in his promiſes. He ſets the ingratitude of the Gentiles then before them, that they might learne to ſhun their ſteps, and to continue rooted in the reuerence of Gods Maieſtie. We here ſee now as in a glaſſe, how great the peruerſitie of men is, who profit nothing at all by beholding the workes of God, but become the more dull and ſenſleſſe thereby; for they had rather winke with their eies, and to ſhut them at high noone, then to behold God, who repreſents himſelfe before them. Beſides this blindneſſe, there is a raging furie which prouokes them to riſe vp againſt God himſelfe, and to be ſo mad, as to offer him the combat, rather then not to maintaine their ſuperſtitions: ſo that this vice ſtands not ſo much in the worſhipping of idols, as in going a madding after them. The Prophet ſets forth this phrenſie when he ſaith, play the men; be valiant, or ſtrong: for he expreſſeth their miſchieuous conſpiracie, in that they prouoked, nay, ſet one another on fire to commit idolatry, and to reiect the feare of the true God, which they might conceiue in their mindes, by the ſundry teſtimonies of his power.

God complaines of the Gentiles to admoniſh the Iewes.

Idolaters not onely blind, but furious and frantike.

Verſ. 7. So the workeman comforted the founder; and hee that ſmote with the hammer, him that ſmote by courſe, ſaying; It is readie for the ſoddering; and hee faſtened it with nailes, that it ſhould not be remoued.

THis verſe is diuerſly expounded, for it is ſomewhat obſcure: neither doe the Iewes themſelues agree in the expoſition of the words. I know not the reaſon why the word Charaſh ſhould here be taken for a Carpenter or Ioiner; for it ſignifies any workeman working vpon ſtonie matter. Some tranſlate the word Mochalik, (which ſignifies him that ſmites) in the accuſatiue: but I had rather put it in the nominatiue. They alſo turne the word Paam, an anuell; others, a little hammer: but becauſe it ſignifies ſometimes to ſmite by courſe, I haue thought this expoſition moſt fitting to the text. For the Prophets meaning is, that the founders ſmiting one after another, incouraged each other; becauſe they then are earneſt in their buſines, and ſweat at the worke, ſo as one drawes on his fellow, and haſtens him thereunto, to the end that which they haue begunne, may ſoone be finiſhed. In a word, he ſets forth the obſtinacie & headſtrongnes of idolaters, who combine themſelues together in one to reſiſt God.

It appeares as well by this place, as by all hiſtories, that this vice hath not reigned in one age only; yea, would to God we had not too wofull experience of it among our ſelues. Wee ſee how men prouoke one another by mutuall perſwaſions to vphold Idolatrie and ſuperſtitions: the more the truth ſhines forth clearely, the more obſtinatly recoile they back, as if they had plotted with an high hand to make warre vpon God. For ſince pure religion was reſtored, Idols, Pilgrimages, Maſſes, vnlawfull vowes, haue multiplied, and haue bin ſet vp in deſpite of it: and more Maſſe-prieſts, then euer before. There was ſome meaſure kept vnder the firſt ignorance: but the Idolaters runne now like helliſh furies caried away with the fire thereof, and leaue no corner of their wits vnſearched, in deuiſing how to erect ſuperſtitions and Idols, which are now like to breake their necks. To be ſhort, they band and fortifie themſelues to withſtand the Lord of hoſts. If any would lay the fault vpon his companion, he ſhall gaine nothing by it: for the euill is ſpread ſo farre into euery one in particular, that they can no way be excuſed. All are giuen to lies, and wittinglie ſeeke to be deceiued: and then truſting in their multitude, they extoll themſelues and their ſide aboue God himſelfe: one whets on another to ſerue and worſhip Idols, which they loue with ſuch heate, that all the world is now almoſt ſet on fire with it.

Idolsters can prouoke one another to the vpholding of their ſuperſtitions, Pilgrimages, Maſſes, vnlawful vowes, prayers for the dead.

Verſ. 8. But thou, Iſrael, art my ſeruant, and thou Iacob whom I haue choſen; the ſeed of Abraham my friend.

NOw the Prophet ſhewes how vnreaſonable a thing it were that Iſrael ſhould mingle himſelfe with prophane Nations, though all of them ioined hand in hand, marching in aray vnder the banner of Idolatrie, and giuing themſelues to lewde practiſes. Why ſo? God had called them, and freely ſeparated them to be his peculiar people, and therefore it became not ſuch to throw themſelues headlong into ſo beaſtly a furie. This place is notable therefore, and teacheth vs to ſtick faſt to the calling of God, that we defile not our ſelues with the filth of the world: if corruptions breake forth, and that Idolaters let looſe the bridle to all villanie; yet muſt we be held ſhort by another bridle; to wit, we are the choſen of God, and therefore it is not lawfull for vs to flie out, as the wicked and vnbeleeuers do. Such were ſome of you, ſaith the Apoſtle, but you are waſhed, but you are ſanctified in the name of the Lord Ieſus, and by the ſpirit of our God, 1.Cor.6.11. For what is more abſurd then to wander in the darke, after the ſunne of righteouſnes hath ſhined vpon vs.

Let vs in any wiſe therefore bethinke vs of our vocation, that we may follow it effectuallie and diligentlie: and walking in it as children of the light, let vs abhorre all the darknes of our life paſt. This is the cauſe why he calles Iſrael his ſeruant: not that the Iſraelites had merited ought by their ſeruices, but becauſe it had pleaſed the Lord to chooſe them for his owne. And therefore to the ſame purpoſe he addes, Thou Iakob whom I haue choſen: wherein he ſets before them a ſpeciall commendation of his free bountie. As if he ſhould ſay, You are my ſeruants, not by merit, but of my free mercie, ſeeing I haue prepared you thereunto by mine election, and by putting you apart to be my peculiar people. To be ſhort, he admoniſheth them, that they obteined not this title of being the ſeruants of God by their owne induſtrie; for there was nothing to be found in them that ſhould make them more holy then others, but only becauſe the good pleaſure of their maſter was ſuch, who chooſeth this or that man according to the counſell of his owne will. Therewithall alſo he ſhewes what is the end of our election, to wit, that we ſhould be the ſeruants of God. For he hath choſen vs, as the Apoſtle ſaith, that we ſhould be holy and without blame before him in loue, Epheſ.1.4. The end alſo of our election is, that ſuch as were the bondſlaues of Satan before, ſhould now ſubmit and giue themſelues to God in abſolute obedience.

God chooſeth and refuſeth whom it pleaſeth him.

The end of our election is, to be Gods ſeruants.

In the third place he addes, the ſeed of Abraham, to teach vs, that election depends vpon the free promiſe of God: not that the promiſe goes before election (which is from euerlaſting) but becauſe ſ Lord makes known his fauor in reſpect of his promiſe: for to Abraham he ſaid, I am thy God, and the God of thy ſeed, Gen.17.7. This fauor then was continued to his ſucceſſors, and in reſpect of the promiſe, God had a ſpeciall care ouer the welfare of this people, as alſo S. Paul ſaith Rom.9.4. That to them were giuen the couenants, the promiſes, and the law. For which cauſe this ſeed was called an holy nation, a royall Prieſthood, &c. Exod.19.6. 1.Pet.2.9.

Election depends vpon the free promiſe.

But the Lord ſhewes the ſingular loue he bare to Abraham in calling him his friend. It is no ſmall fauor to be called Gods ſeruant: for if it be worthily eſteemed an high dignitie to be brought into the ſeruice of a King or Prince, how much more highly ought we to thinke our ſelues aduanced when we are accounted the houſhold ſeruants of the Almightie? And yet he contents not himſelfe herewith, but as if that were too little, he honours him yet further, and adornes him with the title of Friend. Now that which is here ſaid of Abraham belongs to all the faithfull, which Chriſt declares at large, Ioh.15.15. I call you not ſeruants, ſaith he, but friends: for the ſeruant knowes not what his Maſter doth, but I haue acquainted you with all my heauenly myſteries and ſecrets: by reaſon whereof, you may eaſily diſcerne how great the loue and affection is which I beare towards you. Seeing then that God hath done vs ſo great honour, ought we not to bethinke vs of our duties? Hath he ſhewed ſo vnutterable a fauour to vs, and ſhall it not ſtirre vs vp to ſerue and honour him with the greater care and reuerence? But let it (I pray you) be alwaies remembred, that Abraham is not called the friend of God, but in regard of adoption: as Moſes alſo ſaith of the Iewes, Deut.4.37. He loued thy fathers, and therefore he choſe their ſeed after them.

Abraham Gods friend.

Simile.

Note, that Abraham is not called Gods friend, but by the right of adoption.

Verſ. 9. *For I haue taken thee from the ends of the earth, and called thee before the chiefe thereof, and ſaid vnto thee; Thou art my ſeruant, I haue choſen thee, and not caſt thee away.

*Or, haue called thee before the excellencies.

ISaiah goes on with the ſame matter ſtill; for who is it that feeles not by common experience, what need he hath euer and anon to be quickened vp, by the often reperition of this and ſuch like conſolations, when aduerſities doe preſſe vs? It is no wonder then that the Prophet inſiſts ſo long vpon this argument. Now from the onely perſon of Abraham, he aſcends to all his poſteritie, and mentions the benefits which he had done for them. I take the relatiue Iſh, for the particle For; becauſe hee yeeldes a reaſon wherefore the people were to be of good comfort in their aduerſities; to wit, they had felt and taſted before how good and gracious God was vnto them: what cauſe had they then that they ſhould not truſt in him ſtill for the time to come?

The ends of the earth may bee taken two waies; either that the people had bin brought from a far Countrie, euen from the place of Abrahams natiuitie: or in reſpect that God, who hath the vtmoſt bounds of the earth at his becke, yet vouchſafed to reach forth his hand but to one onely people. He addes the farre exceeding, or, excellencies; for I haue ſo tranſlated the word Atſilim, which others expound in the maſculin, Princes, or, excellent: but there is no great difference betweene the one or the other: for the Prophet magnifies Gods grace, who paſſed by other mightie nations, and tooke vnto himſelfe a nation abiect and obſcure. Some refer this taking to Egypt, whence the people were brought. For it is not vnknowne how glorious this kingdome was, and what good opinion the Egyptians had of their learning, antiquitie, nobleneſſe of blood, and other prerogatiues. But I expound it otherwiſe, and refer it to the election of the people, who were taken from the middeſt of other nations, much more excellent then they: ſo as there is a compariſon here betweene the Iewes and other nations. Which Moſes alſo ſhewes when he ſaith; That they were not choſen becauſe they were more in number then any other people; for they were the feweſt, Deut.7.7. but becauſe the Lord loued them, and becauſe he would keepe the oth which he had ſworne vnto their fathers: Deut.7.8. Againe, Thou entreſt not into thine enemies land for thine vprightneſſe of heart, nor for thy righteouſneſſe; for thou art a ſtiffenecked people: Deut.9.5.6. Albeit then they were much leſſe in quantitie then all other nations, yet they were choſen, wherein they had a teſtimonie of Gods ſingular loue: had they any cauſe then to miſtruſt ſo bountifull and liberall a father for the time to come, hauing already receiued ſo many benefits from his hands?

Egypt well conceited of her learning, antiquitie, nobilitie, &c.

Hee further addes, that the people had a pledge of this grace in the law, ſtanding as it were vpon record: as if he ſhould ſay; It is not hid from thee, but it is writen faire in plaine tables: for hauing choſen thee, I afterwards gaue thee my law, that thou ſhouldeſt not wander hither and thither, but mighteſt keepe thy ſelfe loiall vnto mee, that ſo I might performe my promiſe concerning thy ſaluation.

As touching that which followes, and not caſt thee away: it ſeemes both ſuperfluous, and that it comes in out of place, were it not that it is an vſuall thing ſo to doe with the Hebrewes, which alſo hath great weight in it. For thereby hee expreſſeth the ſtedfaſtneſſe of their election: as if he ſhould ſay; I haue not left or forſaken thee, though thou haſt giuen me many occaſions: for the ingratitude of the Iewes was ſo great, that hee had iuſt cauſe to haue caſt them off, but that hee meant to ſhew himſelfe to bee that God who changeth not. Now that which is ſaid of them, belongs alſo to vs: for this ſentence of the Apoſtle is perpetuall, Rom.11.29. The gifts and calling of God are without repentance. Howſoeuer then hee caſts off the greater part of the world, in regard of their incredulitie, yet he alwaies reſerues to himſelfe ſome ſeede of adoption, that ſo the calling may remaine in ſome ſprigs: neither indeed can Gods election be altered by the peruerſitie of men. And therefore let vs remember that God hath choſen vs on this condition, that wee ſhould ſtill remaine in his houſe and familie, albeit by good right we deſerue to bee driuen out of it.

God hath choſen vs, but vpon condition that we continue in his familie.

Verſ. 10. *Feare thou not, for I am with thee: bee not afraid, for I am thy God: I will ſtrengthen thee, and helpe thee, and I will ſuſtaine thee with the right hand of my iuſtice.

*Or, yet, or, certainly I will, &c.

BEcauſe the former doctrine was to ſettle the peoples hearts touching their quiet reſting vpon Gods prouidence, the Prophet thence concludes, that they ought not to feare, hauing ſo many benefits ſet before their eies; in which they might euidently diſcerne the loue which God bare vnto them. The reaſon which he addes, for I am with the, is diligently to be obſerued. For this is the ſure foundation of our confidence; to wit, which being once fixed in our hearts, we ſhall ſtand faſt and inuincible againſt all manner of temptations: as on the contrarie, when wee thinke God is abſent, or doubt whether he wil aſſiſt vs or not, feare ſurprizeth vs, and carries vs floting vp and down through many waues of diſtruſt. But if wee reſt vnmoueable vpon this foundation, there is no calamities nor tempeſts whatſoeuer that can ouerwhelme vs.

And yet the Prophets meaning is not that the faithfull can be ſo confident, that feare ſhould no more aſſaile thē; but notwithſtanding they haue wauerings in their hearts, and be often ſolicited to diſtruſt vpon diuers occaſions; yet they reſiſt the ſame with ſuch conſtancie, that faith at the laſt gets the victorie. For it is incident to vs by nature to feare ſtand, and to be full of doubtings: but ſuch a vice is to bee corrected by this meditation; God is vnto me, to helpe, and takes care for my ſaluation.

Faith is neuer ſo firme, that it ſhould not be aſſailed with wauerings, yet at laſt it gets the victory.

Some reade it in the preterperfect tence; I haue helped thee: but I reade it in the future; I will helpe thee. I alſo expound the Hebrew particle Ak, Yet, it being often vſed in this ſenſe in other places. It may alſo be taken for Certainly: but I leaue the choice to the readers diſcretion. If wee take it in the preterperfect, this particle will be as much as Yea, or, Likewiſe.

Vnder the word iuſtice, the Scripture not onely comprehends equitie, but alſo the Lords fidelitie in preſeruing his Church. For he ſhewes his iuſtice, when hee defends his children againſt the conſpiracies and ſundry plots of their aduerſaries. He calles the right hand of his iuſtice then, that whereby he manifeſts his fidelitie and iuſtice. Whence we are to gather a ſingular conſolation, to wit, that we ought not to feare, ſeeing the Lord is determined to protect and defend his ſeruants, for it is not poſſible he ſhould either put off, or renounce his iuſtice.

Verſ. 11. Behold all that prouoke thee, ſhall bee aſhamed and confounded: they ſhall bee as nothing, and they that ſtriue with thee ſhall periſh.

THe Prophet promiſeth the Iewes aſſured helpe againſt their aduerſaries; for if hee had giuen them hope of their deliuerance, and had made no mention of their enemies, their minds might haue been foreſtalled with many ſuch perplexed thoughts as theſe: It is true indeed that God promiſeth much touching our deliuerance out of all perils, but yet we ſee our aduerſaries the ſtronger, who deale cruelly and vnciuilly with vs. Where is then that ſaluation ſo oft and ſo largely promiſed? See heere therefore a circumſtance added to the generall promiſe. As if he ſhould reply, I grant your enemies floriſh, and yet at the laſt they ſhall be aſhamed and confounded. Deliuerance is promiſed, but it is vpon condition that you abide the brunt of your enemies, and buckle hand to hand diuers waies with them. For we muſt not promiſe to our ſelues any worldly reſt or tranquillitie heere, becauſe wee muſt alwaies bee ready armed to fight.

Verſ. 12. Thou ſhalt ſeeke them, and ſhalt not finde them: to wit, the men of thy ſtrife; for they ſhall be as nothing, and the men that war againſt thee as a thing of nought.

*Or, that plead with thee.

THou ſhalt ſeeke.] That is to ſay; if thou ſeeke them. For we vſe not to ſeeke out enemies after they are put to flight. Therefore I thinke it ſhould be conſtrued thus; if thou ſeekeſt them, thou ſhalt not find them; becauſe they ſhall be cut off, and brought to nothing. Wee muſt note here y there are two ſorts of enemies: the firſt ſort aſſailes vs by open violence: the ſecond by words: that is to ſay, they rent vs with ſlanders, curſings, and reuilings. Not onely ſo, but they ſummon vs to their courts, as if their cauſe were iuſt and good: nay, they bring vs before the iudgement ſeates, and often accuſe vs of thoſe crimes whereof themſelues are the authors. But ſuch are the crafts of Satan, whoſe ſeruants ſeeing theſe are, what maruell is it if they tread in the ſteps of their lord and maſter? Firſt then the Prophet ſpeakes of pleaders; and next, of the armed enemies which dealt roughly with the Church. What wonder is it then, if we be exerciſed with falſe accuſations? Nay, wee muſt not thinke it ſtrange, if many companions ſell themſelues to Antichriſt as his vaſſals to reuile and ſlander vs, ſeeing the ſame hath befallen the Prophets and other ſeruants of God.

1 2

Satans policies.

Antichriſts hirelings.

Verſ. 13. For I the Lord thy God will hold thy right hand, ſaying vnto thee, Feare not, I will helpe thee.

THe Prophet ſhewed vs erewhile whereupon we ſhould build the confidence of our ſaluation, that we might continue ſafe againſt all aſſaults; to wit, when we were certainly perſwaded that God is our God. Now hee teacheth the ſame thing, but in other words; neither is the repetition ſuperfluous: for we know how eaſilie the remembrance of this doctrine vaniſheth away, albeit we haue it often repeated vnto vs. This promiſe therefore cannot be too much praiſed nor inſiſted vpon, ſeeing it doth ſo hardly take roote in our hearts. Let vs bee well aſſured then that wee ſhall find an vndoubted iſſue in all our perplexities, becauſe the Lord will aſſiſt vs: as oft therefore as we ſhall be preſſed vnder anie dangerous aſſault, let vs learne to fix our eies vpon him.

Now when hee calles himſelfe the Lord our God, it is not ſo much to ſet forth his power, as his goodneſſe, which he will make vs feele. For what benefit ſhould redound vnto vs from the knowledge of his power, if therewithall we were not well perſwaded of his loue? At the onely hearing of his power we are aſtoniſhed; but when his goodneſſe is preached with it, the very remembrance thereof ſufficeth to appeaſe vs.

He ſpeakes of taking by the hand, and of the voice againe; for it ſerues much to the comforting of our weake faith, to know what ſignes of loue God ſhewes vs, eſpecially when the doctrine of faith is ioined thereunto, which aſſures vs of his perpetuall fauour. This clauſe therefore, ſaying vnto thee, hath great weight in it; for we muſt needs remaine alwaies in ſuſpence, till we heare the voice of the Lord in his word. It is that alone which ſufficeth to aboliſh all our feare, and to ſet vs at reſt. Are we deſirous then to haue our harts quieted, and to ouercome the many troubles which daily befall vs? Let vs hearken directly to the good word of God, and euer hold faſt the comfort thereof in our hearts. For it is

Two ſorts of enemies.

God voice.

Note. impossible for them who either will not heare this word at all, or hearing it, doe it negligentlie, to attaine this peace: nay, let them be sure that an accusing conscience and a trembling heart shall alwaies pursue them.

Vers. 14. Feare not, thou worme Iakob, and yee * men of Israel: I will help thee, saith the Lord, and thy redeemer the holy one of Israel.

* Or, dead.

What course God takes in ministring comfort to his afflicted Church.

HE seemes to speake somewhat too meanely of this people in that he calles them a worme, and then dead men: but this comparison agrees well with the calamitie which the people were in: and he takes a better course this way to minister comfort vnto them, then if he had called them, The elect nation, a royall priesthoode: an holy tree springing forth of an holy roote, or if he had adorned them with the like titles. For to say the truth, it had bin absurd to haue imposed such glorious titles vpon them, being pressed as they were vnder so base and vile a slauerie. By the name of worme therefore, he laments the ignominie and shame into which they were brought; and puts them in good hope of a better estate. For thus he shewes, that the Lord cares for them, notwithstanding they be abiect and vile in the eies of men. As if he should say, Though now thou beest nothing, yet will I succor thee, and by restoring thee to thy first estate, will cause thee to come forth of this rottennes and abiect condition of thine.

Worme Iacob.

Some translate the word Meshim, Men, which agrees not with the text, but must necessarily be translated dead, for it is an exposition of the other epithete worme, according to the Hebrue phrase. I agree with S. Ierome who hath so translated it, neither doe I passe much that the word is otherwise written here then elsewhere, in regard of the changing of the pricks: for this might easily fall out by reason of the likenes which these pricks haue one with another. The thing should be weyed, for there is nothing more absurd, then to reade men, in stead of wormes, vnlesse they reade it dead, or mortall. But God meant no doubt that this voice should be heard among the people who were now at last cast, to the end it might pierce euen into their graues: for on the contrary he promiseth to be the redeemer of these which are dead.

S. Ierome.

The Prophet had respect to the succeeding ages, as to his owne times.

Now the Prophet had not such respect vnto his owne time, but that he meant his doctrine should extend it selfe to all ages of the world. As oft then as we shall see the Church oppressed vnder cruell tyrants, let vs call this sentence to minde, that albeit Gods children be trodden vnder foote by the proude, that they be despised, and that they haue not so much leisure as to take their breath, being persecuted and afflicted aboue measure: yet let vs know that euen such are in great account with God, so as they shall be able ere long to lift vp their heads. Let this be applied to euery one of vs in particular, that we may not be discoraged for the scoffes of the wicked, nor for the miseries and calamities which we indure, no nor for death it selfe. Do we resemble dead men, and is all hope of deliuerance taken away? yet wil our Redeemer come at last, and will raise vp his Church out of her very graue.

A Consolation.

When the Prophet addes the holy one of Israel, he brings back the people as he hath done before to the remembrance of that Couenant by which Israel was separated from other nations to be Gods peculiar people: thus he incourageth them, that their miserable condition should not too much deiect nor cast them downe, though they seemed as wormes of the earth, and as dead men.

Vers. 15. Behold, I will make thee a roller, and a new threshing instrument hauing teeth: thou shalt thresh the mountaines and bring them to pouder, and shalt make the hills as chaffe.

HE speakes still of the restauration of the Church, promising that she shall be so exalted aboue her enemies, that she shall bruise and grind them to pouder. And this he expresseth vnder a very fit similitude. For the Iewes to whom he speakes were almost crushed in pieces: but now on the contrarie he tels them that they being deliuered shall crush their enemies, and so render them like for like. Now it was very needfull that this consolation should be added, for had they not recouered new strength, it is like enough they had bin subiect to the tyranny of their enemies for euer: God meant to arme them then, that they might be able to repulse the outrages done vnto them: so as they were now become the executioners of Gods vengeance as our Prophet shewes.

But by these words it might seeme he meant to inflame the Iewes with a desire to reuenge, which is directlie contrarie to the nature of Gods spirit: to which vice we being too much inclined, the Lord often commands vs to represse these desires of reuenge; so farre off is he from allowing them in vs: nay, doth he not on the contrarie exhort vs to pray for our enemies? Math. 5. 44. Wee ought much lesse then to reioice in their miseries and calamities. I answere, that the Prophet shewes here what shall come to passe; but he neither commands, nor counsels them to desire the ruin of their enemies. If any replie, that we must not only expect, but also desire that which the Lord hath promised, seeing it turnes to his glorie, and our saluation: I confesse indeed, that this consolation greatlie affwageth our sorrowes, in that he promiseth to punish our enemies one day who haue cruelly vexed vs, in rendring them the same measure which they haue measured. Yet this hinders not the law of loue, which enioines vs rather to sorrow for the euils which they voluntarily pull downe vpon their owne heads, and to bewaile their condition, then to wish their ouerthrow. If we imbrace this promise with such faith as is meet, that is, in casting downe all the impaciencie of the flesh at her feet, then

Obiect.

Ans.

Obiect.

Ans.

Note.

then ſhall we firſt of all be diſpoſed to patience; and in the next place we will with a moderat zeale wait for the accompliſhment of Gods iudgements. We muſt therefore labour to quench all thoſe inordinate paſſions of the fleſh, and with an humble and meeke ſpirit to wait for the fit time when this iudgement ſhall be executed: not ſo much in regard of our owne particular profits, as to ſee Gods iuſtice exalted, according as it deſerues. Dauid hath written to this effect, Pſal. 58. The righteous ſhall reioyce when he ſeeth the vengeance, he ſhall waſh his feete in ỹ blood of the wicked: not that they take pleaſure in their miſeries, but as it is ſaid afterwards in that Pſalme, Men ſhall ſay, Verily there is fruit for the righteous, doubtleſſe there is a God that iudgeth the earth. For God manifeſts his iuſt iudgements to the world, when the wicked are puniſhed for their miſdoings. The Iewes (being cruell and blood-thirſtie) ſnatch vp theſe promiſes like ſauage and wilde beaſts, who rauenouſlie deuoure the pray that is offred, and keepe a howling if they doe but apprehend the very ſent of it. But the Lord would not haue his children to forget that mildnes which he aboue al things likes of: for we can make no claime to be the children of ſuch a father, vnleſſe we be led with the ſpirit of meekenes and gentlenes. To be ſhort, by the harrow with ſharp teeth, he meanes nothing elſe but the feareſull and terrible end of the wicked, whom the Lord will ouerthrow by the hands of the faithfull, yet not ſo inflame their hearts with a deſire of ſhedding blood, as to comfort and cheere vp their ſpirits.

We cannot approoue our ſelues to bee Gods children, vnleſſe we be led by the ſpirit of meekeneſſe.

Verſ. 16. Thou ſhalt fanne them, and the winde ſhall carrie them away, and the whirlewind ſhall ſcatter them: and thou ſhalt reioyce in the Lord, and ſhalt glorie in the holy one of Iſrael.

1 Three things to be noted, in that the Church is compared to a Fanne.

HIs meaning is to ſhew that which he vttered in the former verſe, but by another ſimilitude. For he compares the Church to a fanne, and the wicked to chaffe, which the winde ſcatters to and fro. As if he ſhould ſay, Though the wicked threſh and fanne you now, yet they ſhall be chaſtiſed more ſeuerely, for they ſhall be cruſhed in pieces by their deſtruction, and ſcattered as ſtraw. But yet note the difference; for the faithfull are fanned in this world for their great good, becauſe they ſuffer themſelues to be brought vnder the obedience of God: but the other obſtinately reſiſting and abiding no yoke, the Prophet teacheth, that they ſhall be ſcattered as chaffe, that is, carried away by the winde. Thus then, God had threſhed ỹ Iewes with great ſtrokes of the flaile; he had ſmitten them downe with laying them on; and ſcattered them with his fanne: that ſo becomming cleane and pure wheate, he might gather them into his Garner; but appointed out the prophane nations to be as ſtubble for the fire.

The faithfull are fanned in this world for their great good.

2 The Church ſometimes fannes the wicked, to make them fit for Gods glorie.

There is one thing more to be conſidered, to wit, that the victorious Church fannes ſome vnbeleeuers, to the end they might be purged, and finde place in Gods flore: and thus this propheſie was fulfilled, as oft as any of the Gentiles were woon to the faith by meanes of the godly, thereby bringing them vnder the dominion of Chriſt. Neither had the faithfull euer any earthly power to rule ouer their enemies: nay contrariwiſe, they are alwaies faine to poſſeſſe their ſoules in patience: but the Lord cauſeth them vnder ſuch heauie burthens to floriſh like the Palme trees, ſo as they eſcape ſafe from danger. And which more is, they haue euen amiddeſt theſe ſtreites troden the enemies of the truth vnder their feete with inuincible courage.

3

Moreouer, it is to be noted, that the Scripture is wont often to attribute that to the Church, which appertaines to none but God only. In regard then that God puniſheth the wicked for the fauor he beares to his Church, it is ſaid that he giues them to the faithfull to tread vnder their feete, becauſe the fruite of ſuch a benefit belongs vnto them.

Beſides, as oft as we reade theſe propheſies, we muſt lift vp our minds to Chriſts kingdome, that putting off all peruerſe affections, we may keepe ſuch a meaſure as is fitting, and neuer with this ſcattering before the time. For it ought to ſuffice vs that our head will at the laſt tread downe all our enemies vnder our feete, and make them his very footſtoole, that we may participate with him in his victorie. Where he addes, that the Iewes ſhould haue cauſe to reioyce in the Lord: though he meant hereby to aſſwage their ſorrowes, yet therewithall he alſo exhorts the faithfull to modeſtie, that they ſhould not breake forth into furie, if it fell out that the Lord ſhould thus ſubdue their enemies. For men are inclined to nothing more then to ſwell in pride, when things fall out as they would haue them: they forget then that they are men, and as for God whom they ought to acknowledge the author of all benefits, him they vtterlie neglect. Thus then, that the Prophet might bridle this inordinate ioy of the fleſh, which often caries vs beyond our bounds, he addes, in the Lord, becauſe, as all our glory and gladnes comes only from him, ſo it ſhould be aſcribed only to him. Laſtly, he exhorts vs to acknowledge Gods benefits, that the higher he hath aduanced vs, the more carefull ſhould we be to cut off all pride and preſumption, that we may giue our ſelues to reioycing in him, and to the ſetting forth of his praiſe and glory only.

Wherefore it is added, that the Church muſt reioyce in the Lord.

Let him that reioyceth, reioyce in the Lord.

Verſ. 17. When the poore and needie ſeeke water, and there is none (their toong faileth for thirſt, I the Lord will heare them: I the God of Iſrael will not forſake them.)

HE goes on with the argument begun frō the beginning of the former Chapter: for he ſets out the miſerable and poore eſtate into which the Iewes ſhould be brought being in Babylon, till God hauing compaſſion vpon them, ſhould at the laſt aſſiſt and help them. Thus he aduertiſeth them to prepare themselues for the induring of extreame pouertie, when he telles them of thirst: for wee know there is nothing more tedious to bee borne, then the vvant of vvater when one is thirstie. This therefore was a very apt kind of speech to expresse the greatnesse of their calamitie.

But the Prophet affirmes that God vvill aid them, euen at the very pinch: and thus we may see to whom this promise belongs, namely, to such as being in extremitie, parch away, and faint with thirst. Hence also we may note, that the Church flowes not alwaies in abundance of outward things, but is sometimes brought to penurie and want, that by such goades in her sides, she might be stirred vp to call vpon God; for wee are wont to wax idle when things fall out as we would haue them. It is good therefore to bee exercised with hunger and thirst, that wee may learne to seeke the Lord with our whole hearts. In a word, it is very needfull we should be pressed with pouertie, that so wee may the better taste the Lords bountie.

The Church flowes not alwaies with abundance.

Questionlesse the Prophet meant by this circumstance to set forth the greatnesse of Gods grace; as also admonisheth the people hereby, not to faint nor quaile in the time of need and want. Now we are to obserue what titles he giues them: for in calling them poore and needie, he speakes not to strangers, but of such as the Lord had chosen and adopted for his heritage. Wee ought not to wonder then if God now and then suffer vs to languish vnder hunger and thirst, seeing hee hath exercised our fore-fathers no lesse seuerely.

When he saith, the waters appeare not: let vs learne that the Lord for the triall of our faith and patience, takes away all means from vs, that we might rest vpon him alone. By the word I will heare, he signifies that God helpes not all, but such as call vpon him: are wee so careless then as to contemne this helpe? It is good reason we should be left destitute stil, without feeling any succor, in regard we are vnworthy of it.

God helpes not all, but such as call vpon him.

Vers. 18. *I will open riuers in the tops of the hils, and fountaines in the middest of the vallies: I will make the wilderness as a poole of water, and the waste land as springs of water.

*Or, plains.

19. I will set in the wilderness the Cedar, the shittath tree, and the myrre tree, and the pine tree; and I will set in the wilderness the firre tree, the elme and the box tree together.

THe Prophet amplifies the former doctrine by another circumstance; to wit, that the Lord needes no naturall, nor externall remedies to succour his Church withall, but hath secret and admirable meanes ready, by which he can supply the necessitie thereof aboue all that mans reason can conceiue or imagin. When wee see no helpe, despaire easilie creepes vpon vs; we dare hope no longer then we see worldly meanes present before our eies: if they faile vs, then all hope in God is gone. But our Prophet telles vs that this is the very houre in which we should gather greatest assurance; because the Lord hath then most libertie to manifest his power, when men are brought to extremities, and seeme vtterly confounded. It is his propertie then to assist those that are his, against the expectation and thought of man, that thus wee might not suffer our selues to bee transported hither and thither by any difficulties or idle discourses.

The time in which wee should gather greatest assurance.

Now the better to confirme this, hee promiseth to worke miracles contrarie to the order of nature: teaching vs thereby not to speake or iudge of these his doings according to humane sense, neither to tie his power nor promises to secondary causes: for the Lord is strong enough of himselfe, and needs no helpe from others; he is not so bound to the ordinary course of nature, but hee can change it as oft as it pleaseth him. Now we know the things he heere promiseth to doe, are contrary to nature: as to make riuers spring forth in the tops of mountaines; and fountaines in the middest of the plaine; and pooles in the desert. But why promiseth hee these things? Lest the Iewes might thinke the way to be stopped vp against them, in regard of their returning home; because that great and spacious wildernesse was betweene them and it, wherein passengers were wont to bee parched with the heat of the Sunne, and left destitute of all necessaries. Thus then the Lord promiseth plentie of vvaters, and all other prouision needfull for their iournie.

The Lord is strong enough of himselfe to helpe his chosen, without, or against meanes.

These things were accomplished when the Lord turned the captiuitie of Zion; but much more perfectly when he conuerted the whole world vnto him by the Gospell of our Lord Iesus Christ, from whom flowed waters in great abundance, which were shed abroad throughout the earth, to quench the thirst of poore forlorne sinners. Then there was such a change, as men could by no meanes conceiue the reason of it in their vnderstandings.

Ioh. 4. 14. & 7. 37, 38, 39.

Vers. 20. Therefore let them see and know, and let them consider and vnderstand together, that the hand of the Lord hath done this, and the holy one of Israel hath created it.

HOwsoeuer God shewes himselfe wonderfull in all his works, yet when the matter concernes the restoring of his Church, it is then that he manifests his admirable power principally, so as he makes euery one astonied at it. We haue seene heretofore, and it will be repeated againe hereafter, that by bringing the people home from captiuitie, the Lord left such a testimony of his power therein, as shall be memorable to the worlds end; and the Prophet in effect saith as much here. Now because we are either dull or careless in considering the workes of God, or heede them

God shewes his admirable power in nothing more then in the redemption of his Church.

The cauſe why the Prophet repeats one thing often.

them not as we ſhould; therefore they eaſily ſlip out of our mindes: and this is the cauſe why he repeates one thing ſo often. For wee ſtill ſtand muzing rather vpon things of nothing, then to take to heart the workes of God: and if it fall out that they draw vs to a nie admiration of them, yet it is but as a wonder that laſts for nine daies, becauſe our mindes preſently runne after other fancies, in which there is no fruit at all. The Prophet awakens vs then once againe, that he might chaſe away all ſluggiſhneſſe and ſottiſhneſſe of mind from vs, that ſo all our ſenſes might bee brought to comprehend the power of God.

Firſt of all then hee willes them to ſee or behold, which gets a certaine knowledge: then he addes conſideration, which better confirmes vnderſtanding, and more certainly. It is not certaine whether the Prophet ſpeakes to the Iewes; that is to ſay, to thoſe of the houſhold of God, or to ſtrangers: as I thinke, we may generally affirme, that when the Church ſhould be reſtored, the power of God ſhould then be perceiued of all narions neere and far off; ſo as all ſhould bee compelled to admire ſo rare and excellent a worke. It is alſo certaine that the Medes and Perſians hauing gotten dominion ouer the Iewes, were wonderfully abaſhed in hearing theſe teſtimonies of the Prophets, but chiefly when they ſaw the accompliſhment and effect thereof performed before their eies: for they might well know that men could neuer bring ſuch things to paſſe; and yet they were not conuerted to God themſelues for all that.

Verſ. 21. Stand to your cauſe, ſaith the Lord: bring forth your ſtrong reaſons, ſaith the King of Iaakob.

IT was very needfull that this ſhould bee added to the former doctrine: for whileſt we conuerſe with the wicked, they ſcorne our hope, and thinke vs fooles, and too ſimple and light of beliefe. You ſee with what ſcoffes our weake faith is aſſailed and ſhaken; Oh theſe fellowes build caſtels in the aire, and perſwade themſelues of the accompliſhment of things impoſſible and vnreaſonable. For as much as the Iewes then lay open to ſuch taunts in their baniſhment, it was neceſſarie they ſhould be fortified by ſuch admonitions. And that this ſentence might get the greater weight touching the aſſurance of it, hee ſets all prophane people at nought, commanding them to ſtand to their cauſe: as men are wont to doe in iudgments. But in calling him the King of Iaakob, he bids defiance to all the idols, and ſhewes that he will take his peoples quarrell in hand, to the end they may know at length that he is the protector and defender of his owne glory, in deliuering ſuch as are iniuſtly oppreſſed. And yet it was needfull that the faithfull ſhould be fortified with an exceeding meaſure of faith: for in what eaſe was the eſtate of the Kingdome, whileſt they were detained priſoners in a ſtrange land, and in a manner ouerwhelmed with calamities? That is the cauſe why the Prophet called them dead men, and worme Iaakob, verſe 14. But their hearts were ſuſteined by this promiſe, in which it was affirmed, Chap. 11. 1. that their root was hidden in the earth, when the people was compared to a tree hewen downe by the rootes: onely there ſhould come forth a rod out of the dry ſtocke of Iſhai, &c. Thus by the eies of faith, they beheld the kingdome that was hid: for it was impoſſible to ſee it by the outward ſenſes, no, nor to comprehend it by the light of naturall reaſon.

The cauſe why the Iewes were fortified againſt the ſcoffes of the Gentiles by theſe admonitions.

Verſ. 22. *Let them bring forth, and let them tell vs what ſhall come: let them ſhew the former things what they be, that wee may conſider them, and know the latter end of them: either declare vs things for to come.

*Or, put the in our hearts.

23. Shew the things that are to come hereafter, that we may know ye are gods: yea, doe good or euill, that wee may declare it, and behold it together.

NOw hee directs his ſpeech not onely to the idolaters, but permits them alſo to bring in their idols: as if he ſhould ſay; I know you thinke your idols very wiſe, yet they will bee able to ſpeake very little in the defence of ſo bad a cauſe. We ſee here that God takes vnto him the perſon of an aduocate, & ſpeaks in the name of all the people; for he will not be ſeparated from his Church, but is carefull, as you ſee, to furniſh and fortifie her againſt all the opprobries of the wicked, and againſt all their plots, whereby they indeuor to aſſaile our faith. We muſt be of good courage then, ſeeing God is pleaſed to bee the pleader of our cauſe, and ſtands betweene vs and the idolaters; and as one armed with his owne inuincible truth, bids defiance to the idols themſelues, being ready in perſon to refute their vanitie.

Beſides, he ſhewes that his elect are ſufficiently furniſhed with his word to get the victorie; ſo as they need not be afraid to vndertake the combate againſt all vnbeleeuers whatſoeuer. And truly he that hath profited in the heauenly doctrine as hee ought, ſhall eaſilie confound all the impoſtures of Satan, by a conſtant and victorious faith. I grant our faith begins at obedience, but the teachableneſſe by which wee ſubmit all our ſenſes to Gods worſhip, goes ſo before the vnderſtanding, that from thence our minds are illuminated with ſound knowledge.

How to diſcerne ſuperſtition from true religion.

By this marke wee may diſcerne ſuperſtition from that true religion, which is directed by a rule that is neither doubtfull nor deceiueable. The idolaters vaunt themſelues but too much in their errors, yet all their pride proceeds from folly, ſottiſhneſſe, and frenſie. For if they would conſider of the heauenly doctrine, with calme and quiet minds, all this ouerweening by which they darken the light of truth, would forthwith fall to the ground. But the faithfull haue another reſpect, whoſe faith albeit it be founded vpon humilitie, yet it is not caried away with a fooliſh or inconſiderate zeale, becauſe it hath the ſpirit of God for the conductor and leader thereof, that ſo ſhe may neuer turne aſide from the certaine light of Gods word. Therefore where the right rule of diſcerning things is abſent, there can be nothing but ſuperſtitions, as Iſaiah ſaith. Now becauſe things are not to be done raſhly, therefore the faithfull wils them to bring forth, and put them in their hearts: not that they meant to halt betweene two opinions, being before inſtructed of God, but becauſe the ſuperſtitious could alledge nothing for themſelues, but that which was worthy to be laughed at of all. See here againe then the difference between blockiſh obſtinacie, and true faith, which hath her foundation vpon Gods word, ſo as ſhee can neuer be moued.

Where the right rule of diſcerning things is abſent, there can be nothing but ſuperſtition.

The difference betweene ſottiſh obſtinacie and true faith.

But now let vs ſee with what argument our Prophet defends the Maieſtie of God; for he ſo attributes vnto himſelfe an infinite power and foreknowledge of all things, that none can take them vnto himſelfe without manifeſt blaſphemie. Whence we gather, that theſe things are ſo proper to the Diuinitie, that he indeed rightly deſerues to be called God, who knowes and can doe all things. Thus the Prophet reaſons then, If the Idols whom you adore be Gods, they muſt be able to know and doe all things: but they haue no power to doe any thing at all, neither in proſperitie nor aduerſitie: neither do they know that which is paſt, preſent, or to come: therefore they be no Gods.

Who it is that rightly deſerues to bee called God.

How Iſaiah frames his argument againſt Idols.

Queſt. But here ariſeth a difficult queſtion, for in prophane hiſtories there are many predictions which the Idolaters receiued from their gods: for which cauſe it might ſeeme that Apollo, Iupiter, and others, knew of things to come: and therefore they were Gods.

Anſ. Firſt I anſwere, that if we conſider what the oracles were which theſe Idols gaue forth, wee ſhall finde there was either obſcuritie, or, great ambiguitie in them all. As, that which was giuen to Pyrrhus, Thy men ouercome ſhall the Romans. And, to Creſſus, after he hath paſſed Halys, Creſus ſhal ouerthrow many kingdoms. How the euent will ſhew that touching the firſt we muſt vnderſtand it thus, The Romans ſhall ouercome thy men. And for the ſecond, After Creſus hath paſſed Halys, he ſhall ouerthrow many kingdomes: not other mens, but his owne. Thus Satan at that time vexed the minds of men by theſe intangled ambiguities, that he might alwaies leaue them hanging in ſuſpence, that gaue themſelues to be directed by ſuch impoſtures.

Oracles giuen forth of Idols, ambiguous. Pyrrhus. Creſus.

1 2

But beſides this, that is to be noted which Paul ſaith 2. Theſſ. 2. 9, That the efficacie of error is giuen vnto Satan, that he might blind the vnbelecuers who delight in his deluſions. When they aske counſell then of this father of lies, it is no maruell though they be deceiued vnder a colour of truth: but in the meane while, it is a iuſt puniſhment of God vpon them for their ingratitude.

We reade that a lying ſpirit was let looſe by meanes of the falſe Prophets, the better to blind Ahab, who pleaſed himſelfe in ſuch beguilings: 1. King. 22. 21. It was good reaſon alſo that the prophane nations who had forſaken the true God, ſhould bee intangled in the ſnares of error, and ſo drawne headlong into perdition. Thus then it is a fond diſpute whereabout Saint Auguſtine labors ſo much; to wit, how the diuels may bee partakers of this preſcience which the good Angels haue: for the cauſe hereof muſt not be ſought out in nature. So in times paſt, when God gaue the bridle to falſe Prophets, he by their fallacies auenged himſelfe vpon the peoples wickedneſſe: not that ſuch impoſters had any great gift of knowledge, but being fitted for this purpoſe, they did according to the licence giuen vnto them. S. Auſten.

As touching God himſelfe, albeit his foreknowledge be hid, and that it bee a bottomleſſe depth, yet is it manifeſt enough to thoſe whom he hath choſen: ſo as they may diſcern him from the troope of falſe gods. Not that hee foretold all things by his Prophets, for mens curioſitie in that behalfe is inſatiable: neither is it expedient they ſhould know all things; but he hath concealed nothing from them that is fit to bee knowne, for by many excellent prophecies hee hath foreſhewen that he hath a ſpeciall care of his Church: as Amos ſaith; Is there any ſecret thing which the Lord will not reueale to his ſeruants the Prophets? Amos 3. 7.

The Iewes haue wickedly and vnworthily abuſed this prerogatiue, in that they haue ſet their fond predictions to ſale among ſtrange nations. But the truth of God hath alwaies ſo ſhined in the prophecies, that all men to whom God hath giuen wiſdome, may cleerly perceiue that the God of Iſrael was and is the onely God. Verily it was no more poſſible for the idols to beguile the faithful which were inſtructed in the ſchoole of God, then at high noone to perſwade one of a perfect ſight, that blacke were white: ſo farre was it off for them then to get any credit by their foreknowledge; and yet leaſt of al by their power: neither of which it was any way lawfull to aſcribe vnto them, ſeeing it appeared by continuall prophecies, that one God onely ruled and gouerned all things, both aduerſe and proſperous. The Aſſyrian thāked his idols for his victories which he obtained: but God had long before inſtructed the Iews of that which ſhould happen; yea and had made it euident in all mens ſight, that hee armed this wretch to execute his own iudgements. Read Chap. 10. The God of Iſrael the only God.

Now to doe euill, is not taken heere to commit any outrage, which is a thing far from the nature of God, but it ſignifies to correct and ſend aduerſities, which indeed ought to bee attributed to Gods prouidence, and neither to fortune nor idols. And this is often met withall in the Scriptures: as in Amos 3. 6. Is there euill in the Citie, and the Lord hath not done it? Ieremiah alſo accuſeth the people, in that they knew not that God was the author both of euill and good: Lament. 3. 38. The Lord then puniſheth the ſinnes of the people by warres, plague, famin, pouertie, ſickneſſes, and Euill, taken for corrections.

and other the like euils, and will be knowne to be the efficient from whom all of them proceed. Now Iſaiah alleageth not all the examples and arguments, by which he was able to haue diſtinguiſhed the true God frō idols; for that would haue taken vp much time: but he now contents himſelfe to proue it briefly, and yet plainly: for he hath not yet ended his argument.

Verſ. 24. Behold, yee are of no value, and your making is of nought: man hath choſen an abomination by them.

NOw he ſcornes the idols, that he might confirme the faithfull in the confidence and obedience of God, ſeeing by this compariſon, that idolaters are miſerably blinded and beguiled. The word making, ought heere to be taken in the paſſiue ſignification: as if he ſhould ſay; It is a vaine imagination or inuention of nought. But it ſeemes he ſpeakes improperly, in calling the idols things of nothing: for are they not made of gold, ſiluer, braſſe, wood, ſtone, or ſuch like matter? The ſolution is eaſie, for Iſaiah conſidered not the matter, but the qualitie; that is to ſay, the opinion of diuinitie which men gaue vnto them. For the ſuperſtitious doe not ſimplie worſhip the wood, braſſe, or mettall, but the maieſtie of God, which they fondly and blaſphemouſly tie to the corruptible idol: ſo as in effect heere is nothing but a vaine imagination. To which purpoſe Paul ſaith, that an idol is nothing: 1. Cor. 8. 4. For what can that be, or what name ſhall be giuen to a worke of vanitie?

Obiect.

Anſ.

Idolaters tie a diuine maieſtie to their ſtocks and ſtones.

An abomination.] Others reade it, The abomination; in the nominatiue, and vnderſtand it that ſuch are abominable as erect and ſet vp idols: but I thinke it is otherwiſe to be vnderſtood. I take ŷ verbe choſen, indefinitiuely, as the Grammarians ſpeake, & it is often ſo taken in the Scriptures. For when the Prophet ſpeakes of the common people, and recounts ſome ordinarie and vſuall thing, they expreſſe not the noune ſubſtantiue. Thus I vnderſtand it then; Men cannot forge idols, but therewithall they alſo forge an abomination. And ſurely this is a worthy text, teaching vs both to abhor idols, and the boldnes of thoſe that ſet them vp: for this cannot be done without offering great violence to the Lord himſelfe. Many eſteeme it but a ſport, but the Prophet not onely thinkes otherwiſe, but he calles it ſuch an abomination, as God neither can nor will ſuffer vnpuniſhed.

This place teacheth vs to abhor the idol and the idol maker.

The word To chuſe, points out as with the finger, from what fountaine idolatry ſprings. For true religion ſhould neuer be polluted with ſo many corruptions, if men had not preſumed to make them idols of their owne deuiſing. Whence wee may note, that all deuiſed and inuented worſhips of God are heere oppoſed to true pietie.

The originall of idols.

Verſ. 25. I haue raiſed vp from the north, and hee ſhall come: from the eaſt Sunne ſhall hee call vpon my name, and ſhall come vpon Princes, as vpon clay, and as the potter treadeth mire vnder foote.

NOw hee turnes againe to the argument which hee touched before concerning Gods preſcience and power, and ſhewes that the name of diuinitie appertaines to him onely, in whom theſe things are to be found. Touching his raiſing from the north, ſome expound it of Cyrus; others, of Chriſt: but I think the Prophet notes our two things here; ſo as by north, we are to vnderſtand the Caldeans, and by the eaſt, the Medes and Perſians: as if hee ſhould ſay; There will come two changes worthy of memorie, for I will raiſe vp the Caldeans, and exalt their kingdome: afterward, the Perſians ſhall come, which ſhall bee their Lords and Maſters.

1
2
Caldeans.
Perſians.

Now although theſe things were to fall out long time after, yet the Lord ſhewes that they were already manifeſt in his ſight; yea, that hee ordained them in his ſecret counſell, to the end the euent thereof might be a certaine token of his diuinitie. Yet in the firſt member of the verſe, he denounceth iudgement, to feare the Iewes: in the ſecond, he ſets forth mercy, in teſtifying that the captiuitie and deliuerance of the people was his worke, that all might perceiue that the preſcience and power of God were things which did indeed belong vnto him.

The prophane nations diuide certaine offices amongſt their gods: Apollo, he foretels things to come: Iupiter, he puts them in execution: another, hee diſpatches a buſineſſe contrarie to that: but Gods office is not only to foretell and ſignifie things to come, but to diſpoſe of things alſo according to his good pleaſure. For in whatſoeuer thing it be that any diuinitie ſhines, it ought to bee aſcribed to God onely, and not to any other. This is the cauſe why hee appropriates to himſelfe both preſcience, and the execution of the ſame inſeparably.

Apollos.
Iupiter.
Gods office.
1
2
Preſcience and the execution thereof, ought to be appropriated to God inſeparably.

In that hee ſaith, he will raiſe vp from the north, hee propheceth (as I touched before) of the captiuitie to come: of which there was no feare at that time, becauſe the Iewes and Caldeans were in league together: in the next place hee propheceth of the reſtauration of the people, who had leaue of Cyrus to returne into to their Country. Now who would haue imagined that things being in ſo good plight, (as then they were) that ſuch a change had been poſſible, eſpecially in regard the euent was to fall out long time after, namely, about 200. yeeres after the prophecies of Iſaiah? And yet the Lord teſtifies that he is the author thereof; that ſo all might know that the Caldeans came not by chance, but were raiſed vp of God, who vſed them as his rods to correct the Iewes withall.

About ſome two hundred yeeres betweene the time of Iſaiahs prophecies, and the accompliſhmēt thereof.

The Medes and Perſians alſo ſubdued not the Caldeans by their owne power, further forth then as they were led and directed by the ſame hand of the Lord. In this place therfore hee ſets forth the greatneſſe of Gods power, power, and that so plainly, that hee proues Kings and Princes to be but dung and dirt in comparison of him.

And thus we may yet better perceiue, that the Prophet not onely respected those of his owne time, but those also which should come after him: for they which then liued, could hardly discerne what this meant; but their successors which saw it, and had experience of it, vnderstood it much better. The end was, that all might know how there was but one God, before whose eies all things are naked and manifest, and who gouernes all things according to his good pleasure. You may perceiue then what an excellent text this is, in that it shewes the perfection and certentie of Gods oracles. For the Iewes forged not these prophecies whilest they were prisoners in Babylon; but their fathers hauing heard and receiued thē long time before, their successors at last acknowledged Gods iust iudgement, whereof they had been forewarned before: and in the second place, they also imbraced the mercy offered, in that they saw God would in due time send thē deliuerance: who as he is the preseruer of his Church, so they felt him faithfull in his promises, by good triall and experience. From this place therefore we may safely conclude, that Isaiah spake not by his owne motion, but that God vsed his tongue as the organ of the holie Ghost, who put these wordes into his mouth.

The perfection and certentie of Gods oracles, 1 2

Isaiah spake as hee was moued by the holie Ghost.

In that he saith, he shall come, it signifies that whatsoeuer was foretold by Gods commandement, should without all peraduenture come to passe. For hee speakes of a thing to come, which sets out as in liuely tables the prescience of God. Secondly, in adding that he is the author of these things, that is to bee applied to his power. To call vpon the name of God, signifies nothing else in this place, but to perform somewhat at Gods commandement. It is true that Cyrus little thought he was imploied in the seruice of the God of Israel, neither meant he to obey him: but the euent shewed that the Lord marched before him by his secret power and prouidence, to bring him to Babylon by continuall and incredible victories.

The certaintie of prophecies.

Gods prescience and power.

In comparing him to a Potter which treads his clay, it is added because euery one thoght the strength and power of the Caldeans was so great, that none was able to vanquish thē: for they seemed inuincible then indeed. But euen at that time when the Babylonians trusted in their wealth, despised their enemies, and proudly aduanced themselues, the Prophet telles vs that they, and infinit others besides, should be troden vnder foote as the Potter doth his clay. In a word, his meaning is, that the prosperous estate of the Caldeans could no way hinder the change that was to come; neither should they be able to let the Medes and Persians from inioying their Monarchy. And truly the issue did well verifie and confirme the truth of this similitude, when Cyrus hauing vanquished so many nations, and got many godlie victories, did in a little space of time conquer all the East.

Vers. 26. Who hath declared from the beginning, that wee may know? or before time, that we may say, he is righteous? Surely there is none that sheweth, surely there is none that declareth, surely there is none that heareth your words.

THe Lord hauing made proofe of his Diuinitie, returnes againe to shew the difference betweene him and idols. For he asks whether the idolaters were able for the confirmation of their false worship to say the like for themselues: that is, to alleadge any example of such a prescience or power. Now because hee might without controuersie, rightly attribute these things to himselfe, In derision of them he answers for them; Surely we acknowledge, that hee which is able to doe such things, must needs be the true God.

Word for word it is, we will say he is iust: but the word Iust, hath many significations: for it is taken sometimes for True & Approued: in which sense it is said, Luke 7.35. That wisdome is iustified of her children: that is to say, approued. Wee haue seene testimonies enow then of Gods diuine maiestie, which hath put downe all the vanities of idols, in regard that all things in heauen and earth are gouerned and ruled at the disposition of one onely God; who in an instant is able to bring the mightiest Monarks to nought.

Now the Lord speakes heere in the plurall number, vve, to shew that he defends not his own cause alone, but his peoples also. I grant his owne eternitie is sufficient for him; but we being still infirme, it is behouefull for vs to know certainly that hee is the true God, that so our mindes may not wander after creatures, but may rest wholly and onely in him. Experimentall knowledge therefore is added with the word, the better to sustaine our weake faith, if it be yet ready to wauer. In the next member he saith, that the idols are all mute, and leaue those that follow and serue them in suspence. Whilst God on the contrary, makes the candle of his word to burne so cleerly, that it is able to giue light to his elect people, and to giue them both what to speake and thinke.

Experimētall knowledge must be ioined with the word.

Vers. 27. I am the first that saith to Zion; Behold, behold them: and I will giue Ierusalem one that shall bring good tidings.

NOw God expresseth that more cleerly, which he had told the Iewes touching the things to come, that hee might fortifie them in the faith: for it should little auaile them barely to know what was to insue, vnlesse the Prophets had also shewed them the end and vse thereof. The Lord testifieth then, that his predictions tend to the edification of his Church: and it was great reason this should be added to the former doctrine, that the the people might know theſe examples were propounded not only to ſet forth Gods power, but alſo that the faithfull for their parts might feele the fruit thereof. For thus wee ought to apply all the examples of the preſcience and power of God vnto our own vſe; that ſo we may be aſſured of the care he hath ouer vs, and that he turnes all things to our ſaluation.

How to apply the examples of Gods preſcience and power to our owne vſe.

Zion is commanded then to acknowledge the true and onely God. Firſt in reſpect that he had iuſtly inflicted this puniſhment vpon his people for their offences: ſecondly, being redeemed out of this captiuitie, they might eſpecially take knowledge of his mercy and goodneſſe. 1 2

Behold.] We haue to conſider of mount Zion here, as of a place not inhabited; and of Ieruſalem, as a Citie laid waſte: for which cauſe Ieremiah brings her in ſpeaking as widowes and deſolate women are wont to doe; Behold, O Lord, how I am troubled: Lament. 1.20. The Lord heere ſets her out as a widow left alone. Afterwards, Iſaiah will incite her to reioice, as ſhe who hauing been barren before, ſhould now bee made fruitfull by the Lord, and ſhould haue many children. In this ſenſe the Lord now ſhewes that hee will comfort Ieruſalem, euen at that time wherein ſhee ſhall ſeeme nothing elſe but a wofull ſpectacle of horrible ruines. Now the meſſage is, that a widow and one that was forſaken before, ſhould bring forth many children: or, that thoſe who were ſcattered and diſperſed by baniſhment a far off, ſhould come towards Ieruſalem in great troopes.

This waſte therefore muſt bee oppoſed to the reſtauration performed by Cyrus, where it is ſaid, Behold, they come. And by the word firſt, is vnderſtood, not onely the eternitie of God, but alſo the antiquitie of the propheeie. Afterwards, Iſaiah addes how God teacheth the faithfull touching things to come; to wit, by the labours and miniſtrie of his Prophets.

Saint Ierom.

Saint Ierom hath tranſlated the word Menaſſer, Euangeliſt; but it properly ſignifies a meſſenger. And yet there is no great difference in the ſenſe, for his purpoſe is to ſpeake of the Prophets which ſhould bring the ioyfull and deſireable tidings of this deliuerance; which God by Moſes had alſo promiſed long before; to wit, that he would raiſe vp faithfull Miniſters from time to time, which ſhould far excell all ſoothſaiers, magicians, and prognoſticators. For this cauſe alſo hee gaue the Church this goodly title, Chap. 40.9. ſaying, that ſhee brought good tidings, becauſe the word of God ſhould ſound forth in her.

The praiſe of preaching the word.

Now this ſerues much for the praiſe and commendation of preaching. For the Lord comes not downe from heauen to teach vs, but vſeth the miniſterie of his ſeruants, and ſhewes that he ſpeakes by their mouth; which is ſo admirable a benefit, as ſhould cauſe vs to imbrace it with both our hands. Hee promiſed vnder the law (as I was ſaying) that hee would raiſe vp a Prophet in the middeſt of his people: Deut. 18.15. Now he confirmes that promiſe, in ſaying, that meſſengers ſhall not be wanting to comfort them in their dolours and extreme diſtreſſes. Hence we may alſo conclude, that there is no forme of a Church where propheeies ceaſe: that is to ſay, when there is none to bring vs good tidings of comfort in our miſeries out of Gods word.

No forme of a Church where viſion failes.

Verſ. 28. But when I beheld, there was none; and when I inquired of them, there was no counſeller; and when I demanded of them, they anſwered not a word.

THe Lord hauing ſpoken of himſelfe, turns againe to the idols: for in theſe Chapters you ſhall meete with theſe antitheſes euerie where; by which he oppoſeth himſelfe againſt idols. As if he ſhould ſay; I doe theſe things whereof I haue ſpoken; but the idols can doe none of them, becauſe they are void of counſell, wiſdome, and vnderſtanding. They can neither anſwer them that aske things of them, nor mitigate their griefes. Now in this compariſon, he ſhewes that hee can eaſily proue himſelfe to be God. Firſt, by the doctrine of the Prophet: ſecondly, by his works: which are not to be found among idols. Therefore it followes that they are no Gods, and that we muſt reſt our ſelues wholly vpon him that is the true God. 1 2

Beſides, mens eies are ſo dazeled with careleſneſſe, becauſe they neither aske, marke, nor conſider any thing: they bewitch their owne hearts then by beholding idols, and wittingly deceiue themſelues; for doubtleſſe they ſhould quickly perceiue the vanitie that is in them, if they did warily obſerue all circumſtances. Whence it is euident, that Idolaters ſhall neuer bee able to excuſe themſelues by pretext of ignorance, becauſe they loued rather to bee blinded, and to erre in darkneſſe, then to ſee the light, and imbrace the truth.

Verſ. 29. Behold, they are all vanitie; their worke is of nothing: their images are wind and confuſion.

HAuing condemned the Idols, now hee ſaith as much of thoſe that honour them. As it is in Pſal. 115. They that make them are like vnto them; and ſo are all they that put their truſt in them. He ſhewes then that the whole rabble of the ſuperſtitious ſort are full of vanitie, and haue neither wit nor diſcretion. I grant it is hard to perſwade them to it; for pride which poſſeſſeth them, ſo puffes them vp, that they thinke themſelues the onlie wiſe men of the world; and thoſe that follow not their traine, the onely fooles and dizards that are, in compariſon of them. How proudly doe the Papiſts and their ſubtile Doctors deride and ſcorne vs? With what furie haue the Romans contemned the Iewes in times paſt? What then? Let not vs care for ſuch a pride, ſeeing God condemnes them all here of vanitie.

The Prophet proceedes from the confuting of Idols, to tax ſuch as honor them.

Papiſts deride the Proteſtants.

The Romans contemned the Iewes.

Their worke is of nothing.] He calles worke, both both the images which the superstitious forge to themselues, as also al the new found seruice, wherein there is neither end nor measure; when some one will bee the master and author of his owne religion. These works hee calles things of nothing.

In the next place he proues it more plainly, in calling them vvinde, and Chaos: that is to say, confusion: for so I expound the word Tohu, it being so taken in Gen. 1. 2. where Moses shewes that the earth was at the first without forme, and a confused lumpe. This place ought diligently to bee obserued against Idolaters; for they thinke images were ordained to preserue and vphold religion, and that mens mindes are stirred vp to deuotion by the sight of them; as if God were there present: they call them lay mens books, fit for such as are not capable of the doctrine of the Scriptures. But the holy Ghost heere pronounceth, that they are formeless and confused things, because they trouble and detaine mens mindes in superstition; yea, in such sort, that all their light of wisdome and knowledge, is choked and quenched by performing seruice to them. To conclude, hee teacheth that all images and the honor done vnto them; & not so only, but those that make and follow them, are nothing but meere vanitie, and that wee may boldly so iudge of them.

Images lay mens books.

The Image and Image maker meere vanitie.

THE XLII. CHAPTER.

Vers. 1. Behold, my seruant; I will stay vpon him: mine elect, in whom my soule delighteth; he shal bring forth iudgement to the Gentiles.

When the Prophets prophecie of any thing hard to be beleeued, they forthwith mentiō Christ.

IT seemes the Prophet breakes off his speech to speake of Iesus Christ: but wee must call to mind what we haue said elsewhere: to wit, that it is vsuall with the Prophets in promising any thing, hard to be beleeued, forthwith to make mention of Christ: because all the promises are confirmed in him, which otherwise would be doubtfull and vncertaine. All the promises are in Christ, yea, and Amen, saith Paul 2. Cor. 2. 20. For what acquaintance haue we with God, vnlesse this Mediator come betweene? we are so far separated from his Maiestie, that we can neither be partakers of saluation, nor of any other benefit without Christ. Now when the Lord promised any deliuerance to the Iewes, his purpose therein was to lift vp their mindes far aboue the thing it selfe, that so they might conceiue of better and greater things then their bodily libertie, and returne into Iudeah. For these things were onely as preparatiues to that great redemption which they at last obtained, and which we now obtaine by Christ Iesus. Yea, that grace of God that shined in the returne of the people, had been imperfect, vnlesse he had euen then bin knowne to be the perpetuall gouernor of his Church. We haue also told you before that the deliuerance out of Babylon, comprehended in it the absolute and full restauration thereof. It is no wonder then if the Prophets ioine this beginning of grace with Christs kingdome, for they vse so to doe almost in all their sermons. We must come to Christ then, without whom there is no (hearing) nor helpe in God: that is to say, we can lay no claime to the right of being in the number of Gods children, vnlesse we be graft-

What acquaintance haue we with God, vnlesse Christ come betweene?

These promises were but preparatiues to that great redemption accōplished by Christ.

No helpe in God without Christ.

ted into that body, of which hee is the head. The very scope of the text therefore shewes, that hee is spoken of in this place, as of the head and first borne. Why so? Because the things heere mentioned, cannot be attributed to any other then himselfe: but if this reason will not suffice, the Euangelists shall end the controuersie for vs. See Matth. 12. 18, 19, 20, 21.

He calles Christ Gods seruant, by way of excellencie: for although this name belongs to all the faithfull, because they are adopted for his children, on condition that they sacrifice and consecrate themselues and their whole liues to his seruice and obedience: yea albeit the faithfull teachers, and all those who haue any publike charge in the Church, be particularly called Gods seruants, yet there is a speciall cause why this title agrees more properly vnto Christ, then vnto any of them. For he is called seruant, in respect that God the Father hath not onely giuen him the charge of teaching, or to doe some other thing; but also in regard that hee hath called him to performe an excellent and peereleſse worke, which is common to none but him. Furthermore, although this name be attributed to the person of Christ, yet it ought to be referred to his humane nature: for his Godhead being eternall, and that in respect thereof he hath euer obtained equall glory with his Father, it was necessary he should take our nature vpon him, that he might submit himselfe to the obedience of a seruant. And therefore Saint Paul saith; that he being in the forme of God, thought it no robberie to be equall with him; and yet notwithstanding emptied himselfe, and tooke vpon him the forme of a seruant, &c. Phil. 2. 6. Christ then is a seruant, but voluntarily, lest wee should imagin his dignity might be somewhat impaired therby. Which the ancient Doctors signified vnder this word Dispensation: whereby it came to passe, as they say, that Christ subiected himselfe to all our infirmities. The affection by which he became subiect vnto God, was voluntarie: in the meane while it was to the end he might become our seruant also: notwithstanding

In what sense Christ is called Gods seruāt. 1

2

3

Christ Gods seruant in respect of his humanitie.

Christ being Gods seruāt, no way impaires his dignitie. Dispensatiō.

Christs subiection voluntarie.

ſtanding this his ſo abiect a condition, hinders him nothing at all from inioying his ſoueraigne maieſtie; for which cauſe the Apoſtle ſaith, God hath giuen him a name aboue euery name: Phil. 2. 9.

He vſeth the particle demonſtratiue, Behold, to bring the Iewes as it were to the ſight of the thing done: for that which they ſaw in Babylon, was able to haue put them cleane out of heart. He wils them therefore to turne their eies from beholding things preſent, and to fix them onely vpon Chriſt. Some expound the verbe Tamach, which ſignifies To ſtay, paſſiuely; others, actiuely. If we take it in the paſſiue, the ſenſe will bee, that God ſo ſtaies himſelfe vpon his Chriſt, that hee will giue him charge of all things, euen as maſters doe to their truſtie ſeruants. Now it is a ſigne of great truſt which the Father repoſeth in him, that hee giues him charge of all things, and commits into his hands his owne rule, authoritie, and power. Yet I reiect not the actiue ſignification; to wit, I will erect or ſet him vp; or, I will eſtabliſh him in his eſtate: for that which followes immediately after, I will put my ſpirit vpon him, is but a repetition of the ſame thing. He ſaith in the firſt place then, I will ſtay vpon him: then he ſhewes the maner of this ſtay, in ſaying, that he will gouerne him by his Spirit: and thus hee ſhewes that he will ſuſtaine and helpe Chriſt in all things, and will not ſuffer him to fall vnder any difficulties. Now it was needfull that Chriſt ſhould be indued with the holy Spirit from aboue, in regard hee was to take vpon him that diuine office of being mediator betweene God and men: for according to his humane nature, he was vnable to beare the waight of ſo great a burthen.

Why Chriſt was to bee indued with the holy Spirit.

Elect is here taken for excellent: as in other places young men which are in the flower of their youth, are called men of choice. Hee is called a ſeruant elect then, becauſe hee ſhall beare the meſſage of reconciliation, and all his actions ſhall bee diſpoſed of by the Lord. Yet, behold heere a teſtimonie of that loue which God hath ſhewed vs in his onely Son; for in him the head, wee may ſee our election ſhine, by which wee are adopted to the hope of a better life. Seeing then that there is an heauenly power dwelling in the humane nature of Chriſt; when we heare him ſpeake, let vs not ſo much looke vpon fleſh & blood, as lift vp our mindes higher, that ſo we may ſee his diuinitie ſhine in all his actions.

Chriſt a ſeruant elect.

Wee muſt looke vpon Chriſt in both his natures.

In vvhom my ſoule delights.] By this teſtimonie we may conceiue that Ieſus Chriſt is not onely well pleaſing vnto God his Father, but is alſo that his onely beloued Sonne: ſo as there is no obtaining of any grace, but by the meanes of his interceſſion. In this ſenſe it is alleadged by the Euangeliſts, Mat. 3. 17. Luke 9. 35. Saint Paul alſo teacheth, that wee were reconciled with God through this his vvelbeloued one, for whoſe ſake God loues vs: Epheſ. 1. 6. According to which, our Prophet ſhewes that Chriſt ſhall not be adorned with the vertue and power of the holy Ghoſt for his owne particular onely, but to ſhed it abroad alſo far and wide vpon others.

By the word iudgement, hee vnderſtands a well ordered gouernment, and not the ſentence which the Iudge pronounceth vpon the iudgement ſeat: for the verbe, To iudge, among the Hebrewes ſignifies to rule, gouerne, and direct things. He addes, that this iudgement ſhall extend thorowout all the earth, as well to the Gentiles as to the Iewes: which promiſe was then new and ſtrange: for God was onely knowne in Iurie, Pſal. 76. 1. ſo as forraine nations were excluded from any hope of grace. We therefore that are Gentiles, ſtād in exceeding need of theſe ſo cleare and euident teſtimonies, that we may grow daily in the aſſurance of our vocation and calling: for without theſe promiſes, what aſſurance is left vs? They nothing at all pertaine vnto vs. Chriſt was ſent then to bring the whole world vnder the rule and obedience of God his Father. Whence it appeares, that al things without him, are but a confuſed chaos. Before hee comes therefore, it is impoſſible to ſee any right order or gouernment among men. Let vs then learne in all things to ſubmit our neckes vnto his ſweet yoke, if we deſire to be iuſtly and rightly gouerned.

All things out of order without Chriſt.

Now we muſt iudge of this gouernment according to the nature of his kingdome that we liue in, which, as you know, is not of this world, but conſiſts in the inward man: for it conſiſts in a good conſcience and integritie of life, approued not of men only, but of God chiefly and principally. The ſumme then comes to this, that our whole life being peruerted ſince the time wee were altogether corrupted by the fall of Adam, Chriſt is now towards the end of the world come vvith an heauenly power of the ſpirit, to change our hearts, and to reforme vs into newneſſe of life.

Iohn 18. 36.

Wherein Chriſts kingdome principally conſiſts.

The end of Chriſts comming in the fleſh.

Verſ. 2. Hee ſhall not cry, nor lift vp, nor cauſe his voice to be heard in the ſtreetes.

THe Prophet ſhewes after what manner Chriſt ſhall come; to wit, without ſuch pompe and preparations as earthly Kings haue. For when they come in, trumpets are ſounded on euery ſide, & the Heralds make a great noiſe and crying; ſo as a man would thinke heauen and earth would goe together. But Iſaiah ſaith, that at Chriſts comming, none of this din ſhall be heard: not ſo much to manifeſt his modeſtie, as to teach vs that wee ſhould looke for no outward pompe in him. Secondly, that by the beholding of his meekneſſe, by which he ſeekes to draw vs to him, wee might run with all our might to meete him. Thirdly, that our faith might not languiſh, in reſpect of his baſe and abiect condition.

Chriſts kingdome not carnall.

1

2

3

He ſhall not lift vp his voice.] That is to ſay, he ſhall make no ſtirres, but ſhall bee quiet and ſtill. And ſurely hee was ſo far off from popularitie, that hee forbad the publiſhing of his owne miracles; to the end we might thereby know that his gouernment and authoritie differed much from that which Kings and

Mat. 9. 30. 31.

Princes ſeeke after, when they cauſe themſelues to be proclaimed that they may get the fauour of the multitude.

Verſ. 3. A bruiſed reede ſhall he not breake, and the ſmoking flax ſhall he not quench: he ſhall bring forth iudgement in truth.

HAuing affirmed in generall that Chriſt ſhall not reſemble the Princes of the earth, he comes now to ſet forth his meekenes, in regard he will ſuſteine the infirme and vveake. By the Similie of a bruiſed reede, he ſhewes, that he will not vtterlie breake and bruiſe ſuch as are halfe broken alreadie, but will rather vphold and ſuſtaine them, that he may augment that good which they haue in them. Then he ſets it forth by another Similie, of ſmoking flaxe: which is taken from the weekes of lampes: men will not quench them though they burne but dimly, and caſt a ſmoke, but will rather clenſe and keepe them in. Such tender affection the Prophet attributes to Chriſt, for thereby he ſupports our imbecilitie: And haue not all of vs good experience hereof? For looke whereſoeuer any ſparkle of grace ſhines, he conſerues and augments it. Alas! if he ſhould deale rigorouſlie with vs, we ſhould forthwith be brought to nought. Albeit then that we halt on the one ſide, and be much ſhiuered and broken, yet will not he by and by reiect vs as altogether vnprofitable, but will ſupport vs for a long time, till he haue made vs more conſtant, and more ſtrong.

Chriſtes tender affection deſcribed by theſe two ſimiles.

The Doue, a bird of a louing nature.

God gaue vs a ſigne of this compaſſion in Chriſt, when hee was conſecrated for this worke: for the Holy Ghoſt came downe vpon him in the ſhape of a Doue, which we know is a bird of a ſweete and quiet nature, Mat. 3. 16. Now ſurely the ſigne doth full and whole agree vnto Chriſt, for he made no noiſe: he ſhewed not himſelfe terrible like to the Kings of the earth: neither will he require more of his ſubiects then they are able to beare, but will rather relieue and ſuſteine them. Did he not manifeſt this at his appearing; and doth hee not cauſe vs dayly to feele it by his Goſpell?

The ſigne and the thing ſignified concurred fully in Chriſt.

The Miniſters of the Goſpell muſt learne meeknes from Chriſtes example.

According to whoſe example, let the Miniſters of ỹ Goſpel, which are his Lieutenants, learne to carrie themſelues meekely: let them alſo be readie to ſupport the weake, and with compaſſion to bring them home into the right way, leſt by ouer-much rigor and auſterenes, they quench the ſparks of godlines which ſhine in them: let them rather hearten, incourage, and ſtrengthen them with all their power. But leſt any man ſhould imagin that his ſo great lenitie ſhould cauſe him to nouriſh vices in vs, he addes, that he ſhall bring forth iudgement in truth. Albeit then that Chriſt vpholds and ſuſteines the weake, yet he is farre off from ſuch flatteries as may nouriſh any vices in vs. Sinne muſt be corrected therefore without flatterie, becauſe it is directlie contrarie to that mildnes whereof the Prophet here ſpeakes. We are to take heed that we fall not into extremities then, for the weake-hearted muſt not bee too ſeuerely handled, neither muſt the wicked be foſtered by our diſſimulations.

Chriſtes lenitie muſt not nouriſh our vices in vs.

But that we may the better know who they be towards whom this lenitie muſt be ſhewed according to the example of Chriſt: we muſt carefullie conſider of the Prophets words, for he ſpeakes of a bruiſed reede, and of ſmoking flaxe. Theſe ſimilitudes ſute nothing at all to the rebellious and ſtrong, nor to the rebellious and vntamed ones: for ſuch are vnworthie ſo great bountie: they rather deſerue to be bruſed and broken with hard ſtrokes of a beetle by the ſeueritie of the word. Iſaiah then you ſee ſo commends gentlenes, that yet therewithall he ſhewes to whom it belongs; and how, and when, it is to be vſed: for it appertaines not to the obſtinate and hard hearted, or to ſuch as vomit out their rage, but to thoſe that ſhew themſelues teachable, and do with willingnes put their necks vnder Chriſtes yoke. The word ſmoke alſo admoniſheth vs that he neither lightens nor ſuſtaines them that wilfullie ſit in darknes, but the ſparkles, how obſcure and ſmall ſoeuer they bee. Therefore where obſtinacie and impietie reignes, there is neede of extreame rigor, ſuch muſt at no hand be ſpared. Nay though vice be not growne altogether intollerable, yet it muſt not be nouriſhed by this ſoftnes, but rather corrected and amended, that it ſpread no further. For care muſt alwaies be had that the truth may remaine in her perfection, that ſinnes lye not couered, nor, that ſecret corruptions be not thereby increaſed, but that the weake may by little and little be formed to an vpright courſe of life. He ſpeakes of ſuch them as haue ſincere hearts, and loue the puritie of religion, though many things be yet wanting in them: for there is to be ſeene in them good affections, and good deſires at the leaſt. It appeares by many examples how ſeuere Chriſt ſhewed himſelfe to ſcorners, for he is conſtreined to vſe his iron rod to breake ſuch in pieces as will not indure to be guided by his ſhepheards crooke. He truly pronounceth indeede that his yoke is ſweet, and his burthen light to thoſe that follow him voluntarilie, Matth. 11. 30. but it is as true that he is armed with a ſcepter of iron to cruſh his enemies in pieces Pſal. 2. 9. and to fill all places with their dead bodies, Pſal. 110. 6.

To whom Chriſtes lenitie appertaines.

Note.

Note.

Some muſt haue the iron rod, others the ſhepheards crooke.

Verſ. 4. He ſhall not faile nor be diſcouraged till he haue ſet iudgement in the earth, and the Iles ſhall wait for his law.

THe Prophet alludes to the former verſe, and confirmes that which he ſaid before, to wit, that Chriſt ſhould be milde and calme towards the faithfull, and yet that he ſhould not be ſoft nor effeminate, becauſe he will manfullie execute the charge impoſed vpon him by his father. That is his meaning when he ſaith, He ſhall not faile: in which verb there is an alluſion to the former verſe, where he ſpake of the ſmoking flaxe. Here he ſhewes there-therefore how lenitie ought to be tempered; to wit, that it incline not to ouer much indulgencie: for it muſt be vſed, yet ſo, as it muſt not hinder the faithfull diſcharge of our duties. Many win loue by their ſoftneſſe, to the end they may entertaine friendſhip with the world: but in the meane while, they wickedly and looſly betray the truth. I remember I once ſaw in a renowned citie two Preachers: one of them reproued ſinne ſharply and with a ſhrill voice: the other ſtudied altogether how to inſinuate himſelfe into the good grace of his auditors by flatteries. Hee that was ſo plauſible, expounded the propheeie of Ieremiah, and was then in hand with a very ſweete place that was full of conſolation. Now hauing found a text (as hee thought) fit for his turne, he began ſharply to inueigh againſt theſe rigorous and ſeuere reprouers, who are wont to terrifie men by thundering out the iudgements of God againſt them. But on the next day, becauſe the Prophet changed his ſtile, and agreeable to his vehemencie, roughly rebuked the vngodly, this vile flatterer was (to his ſhame) conſtrained to recant (as it were) that which all had yet freſh in memory. And thus the fauour of the people, at which he ſo much aimed, ſoone vaniſhed away; for himſelfe had diſcouered his owne heart: by meanes whereof, he was lothed both of good and bad. We muſt diſtinguiſh then, as you ſee, betweene the teachable and obſtinate, that we proſtitute not this our ſoftneſſe to all purpoſes.

Two Preachers: the one a ſharpe reprouer of ſinne, the other a flatterer.

In the meane while Iſaiah ſaith, that Chriſt ſhall bee of ſuch an inuincible force, as will cauſe him to paſſe thorow all impediments: for by theſe words, till he haue ſet iudgement in the earth, hee meanes that Chriſts miniſtry ſhall bee ſo effectuall, that his doctrine ſhall fructifie. For he ſaith not onely, Till he hath preached the will of his father; but, Till hee hath eſtabliſhed iudgement: that is to ſay, gouernment: as we noted before. Hee teſtifies then that Chriſts preaching ſhall not bee fruitleſſe, but ſo powerfull, that men ſhall be reformed by it; which ought not to bee reſtrained to his perſon onely, but to the whole courſe of the Goſpell: for he performed not his office, as if he ſhould ceaſe at three yeeres end, but he continues it till his laſt cõming, by the miniſtrie of his ſeruants. And we are taught here by the way, that it is not poſſible for vs to diſcharge this dutie faithfully, without ſuffering many troubles, nor without ſuſtaining many hard and dangerous combats; yea, ſo far, as to be ouerwhelmed by them, and in a manner driuen to giue ouer our calling. But we muſt not ceaſe for all that: wee muſt conſtantly goe on, and cheerfully hold out vnto the end. The Prophet therefore ſaith here, that Chriſt ſhall be ſo valiant, that he ſhall neuer forſake his ſtanding, but ſhall fight it out to the laſt ſtroke. Now we ought to ſet this example before vs, that wee may perſeuere with an inuincible courage, to the very end of our courſe.

Conſtancie required in the Miniſters.

He takes law heere for doctrine; for the word is deriued from another which ſignifies to teach. Now the Prophets are wont thus to ſpeake of the Goſpell, and the doctrine thereof, thereby to note, that it was not to bee eſteemed new, but conſonant and agreeable to that which Moſes himſelfe had taught.

By the word Iles, the Hebrewes vnderſtand (as wee haue told you before) the regions which were beyond the ſeas. And heere the Prophet againe confirmes that which was ſaid in the former verſe, to wit, that Chriſt was appointed the gouernour not ouer the Iews only, but ouer the Gentiles alſo, though they were exempt from hauing any thing to doe with the Iewiſh policie. To be ſhort, this promiſe appertaines to all nations, that ſo all the world might feele the fruit of this reſtitution and reformation.

Where hee ſaith, the Iles ſhall waite; his meaning is, that the elect ſhall imbrace the Goſpell with a great and an ardent affection, when it ſhall be offered vnto them: for therein the Lord manifeſts the force of his election, when thoſe which before erred in darkneſſe, ſhould with all their hearts imbrace the doctrine of ſaluation, being preached vnto them. And albeit they ran in times paſt hither and thither as ſtraied & loſt ſheep, yet they ſhould diſcerne the voice of the ſhepheard, as ſoone as they heard him, and ſhould willingly follow him, as Chriſt himſelfe ſaith, Iohn 10.16. Thus we may ſee the ſaying of Auguſtine to bee moſt true, to wit, that there are many theep oftentimes out of the fold, when there are wolues remaining in it. Now this waiting is a worke of God, when men who thought themſelues wiſe, ſhall ſuddenly renounce their wiſdome, and ſhall haſten to learne the Goſpell of Chriſt, that they may wholly depend vpon the mouth of ſuch a teacher.

Auguſtine.

Many ſheep without the fold, and often many wolues are within it.

Verſ. 5. Thus ſaith the Lord God, (he that created the heauens and ſpread them abroad, he that ſtretched forth the buds thereof, he that gineth breath vnto the people vpon it, and ſpirit to them that walke therein:)

THis is a confirmation of that hee ſaid in the beginning of this Chapter, touching Chriſts Kingdome; to wit, that he will reeſtabliſh and reſtore all things. Now becauſe this might ſeeme incredible, he addes a glorious deſcription of Gods almightie power, by which our faith might be confirmed, but then chiefly, when the eſtate of things in the world ſhould be directly oppoſite vnto it. He brings therefore pregnant proofes in of Gods power, that all might bee moued to hearken after ſuch newes, and to be aſſured that hee which hath created all things of nothing, who hath ſpread out the heauens, and makes the earth fruitfull, inſpires life into the creatures, and ſuſtaines and keepes all things by his outſtretched arme, can eaſilie accompliſh the promiſes hee hath made touching Chriſts Kingdome. 1 2 3 4 5

By theſe manners of ſpeech we are admoniſhed to fix our eies euermore vpon the power of God, that ſo we may credit that which he hath ſpoké accordinglie: for Iſaiah ſpeakes not theſe things at randō, but thereby meant to diſpatch our minds of all ſcruples, becauſe nothing is impoſſible to God, who holds the whole world vnder his ſubiection: but in the Chapters following we ſhall meete with the like phraſes of ſpeech. Some tranſlate the word El, Mightie, others, God: but the matter is not great, becauſe the ſenſe comes all to one reckning: for he deſcribes his power and Maieſtie, and adornes him diuerſlie with ſuch titles, to teach vs, that he can eaſily raiſe vp and reſtore that which was falne to the earth.

Verſ. 6. I the Lord haue called thee in righteouſnes, and will hold thine hand, and will keepe thee, and will giue thee for a couenant of the people, and for a light of the Gentiles.

HE repeates the name of God againe, in which we muſt ſupplie that which was ſaid in the former verſe touching Gods power. All almoſt doe thinke that he ſpeakes here of the end of Chriſtes calling, becauſe he was ſent of the Father to eſtabliſh righteouſnes among men, of which before they were deſtitute, whileſt he is abſent from them, and being giuen to all ſorts of vice and vnrighteouſnes, were detained priſoners vnder Satans tyranny. But becauſe the word Iuſtice, or righteouſnes, extends it ſelfe further, I leaue this ſubtletie: neither is it ſaid that Chriſt ſhould be called to righteouſnes, but this phraſe of ſpeech muſt be reſolued into the aduerb Iuſtly, or Holily. I rather thinke that Chriſt is called in righteouſnes, becauſe his calling is lawfull, and therefore ſhall be firme and ſtable: for we know that things diſorderedly done can not long continue, vnleſſe any had rather expound it, that God in ordeining of Chriſt the reſtorer of the Church, ſeekes no other cauſe of it then in himſelfe, and in his owne righteouſnes: notwithſtanding it is certaine that this word notes out vnto vs ſtabilitie, and is as much to ſay as faithfullie.

1 2 Things that are not done according to a good and lawfull order can not long laſt.

By the holding of the hand, he meanes the Lords preſent help: as if he ſhould ſay, I will gouerne and vphold thee in the vocation vnto which I haue called thee. In a word, as thy calling is iuſt, ſo alſo will I ſuſteine and maintaine it, euen as if I led thee by the hand. And the verb will keepe, which is forthwith added, ſhewes ſufficientlie what the holding by the hand ſignifies, to wit, that Chriſt ſhall be ſo gouerned of his Father, that he will be his teacher and protector in ſuch wiſe that he will ſuccor and aſſiſt him in all things.

I will giue thee for a couenant.] Now he expreſſeth the cauſe why God promiſeth to be the protector of Chriſt. Moreouer, he diſtinguiſheth betweene the Iewes and the Gentiles; not that they differ ought in nature, or, as if the one were more excellent then the other (for all haue neede of Gods grace, and Chriſt brings ſaluation indifferentlie to both) but in regard the Lord had attributed the firſt degree to the Iewes, therefore it was good reaſon they ſhould be diſtinguiſhed from others. Before the partition wall then was broken downe they were the more excellent, not by way of merit, but by the free grace of God, becauſe the couenant thereof was firſt made with them.

All haue need of Gods grace.

The Iewes more excellent then the Gentiles, not by merit, but by Gods free grace.

But ſome may aske why Chriſt is named in the couenant, which was ratified long before: for there were two thouſand yeres and more paſt from the time that God adopted Abraham: the originall of this ſeparation then was long before the comming of Ieſus Chriſt. Obiect.

I anſwere, that the couenant made with Abraham and his poſteritie was founded on Chriſt: for thus runne the words of the couenant, In thy ſeed ſhal all the nations of the earth be bleſſed, Gen. 22. 18. The couenant was confirmed then only in Abrahams ſeed, that is to ſay in Chriſt: at whoſe comming it was confirmed, and eſtabliſhed by effect, though it was done before in regard of the promiſe. Therefore it is that Paul ſaith, All the promiſes of God are Yea, and Amen in Chriſt, 2. Cor. 1. 20. who in another place is called the miniſter of circumciſion, to fulfill the promiſes made to the fathers, Rom. 15. 8. And in another place he ſhewes yet more plainely that Chriſt is our peace, ſo as thoſe who were furtheſt off, are made neere by his blood, and that both are by this meanes reconciled to God, and made members one of another, Epheſ. 2. 17. By theſe places it appeares that Chriſt was promiſed not to the Iewes only, but to the whole world. Anſ.

And here we haue againe another teſtimonie touching the vocation of the Gentiles, ſeeing our Prophet expreſſie affirmes that he is giuen for a light to them. Now he mentions the light, becauſe the vnbeleeuers were plunged in moſt palpable and profound darknes, during the time that the Lord enlightened the Iewes only. What is our leſſon then? Surely we are worthy to beare the blame for euer if we remaine in darknes, and haue this light of life in the meane while ſhining before vs. For the Lord calles all vnto him, none excepted, and gines Chriſt vnto all, that he may be our light. It remaines then that we only open our eyes, then will he alone chaſe away all darknes, and will illuminate our minds by the word of truth.

Another teſtimonie, touching the vocation of the Gentiles.

Verſ. 7. That thou maiſt open the eyes of the blind, and bring out the priſoners from the priſon, and them that ſit in darknes out of the priſon houſe.

ISaiah recites heere more at large to what end Chriſt ſhall be ſent of the Father, that we may the better perceiue what fruit we ſhal reape by the ſame, and how neceſſarie his help is. Now he taxeth all men of blindnes, to the end wee ſhould acknowledge it, if wee meane to be illuminate by Ieſus Chriſt. To be ſhort, he ſhewes vnder theſe borrowed ſpeeches what our condition is, till Chriſt appeares for our redemption: to wit, that wee are all miſerable, poore, and deſtitute of all good things; inuironed, and ouerwhelmed with infinite miſeries, till Chriſt hath ſet vs free

Why Chriſt was ſent of his Father.

All are blind.

What our condition is without Chriſt.

free from them. But howſoeuer the words be here directed vnto Chriſt, yet the intent of the Prophet is thereby to inſtruct the faithfull, and to teach them that it is in Chriſt, and in none but him, vpon whom they muſt depend, and to aſſure them that the remedie of all their euils is ready at hand, if ſo bee they ſeeke vnto him for ſuccour. For the Prophet ſets not Chriſt to ſchoole heere, as if he ſtood in neede either of inſtruction, or of a commandement: but hee ſpeakes to him for our ſakes, that wee might know wherefore hee is ſent of the Father: as it is in the ſecõd Pſalme, I will preach the decree: aske of me, and I will giue thee the heathen for thy poſſeſſion. For Chriſts dignitie and authoritie is there magnified, to aſſure vs that the Father hath giuen him ſoueraigne dominion ouer all, that ſo we might haue good hope, and might boldly put our truſt and confidence in him.

The remedy of all our euils is in Chriſt, if we ſeeke vnto him for ſuccour.

That which is here ſpokẽ to Chriſt, is rather to inſtruct vs then him.

Verſ. 8. I am the Lord, this is my name; and my glory will I not giue to another, neither my praiſe to grauen Images.

HEnce wee may gather how great the diſeaſe of incredulitie is, ſeeing the Lord vſeth ſo many repetitions to heale it, as if he could hardly ſatisfie himſelfe therewith: for we are by nature ſo inclined to diſtruſt, that it is vnpoſſible we ſhould beleeue any thing the Lord ſpeakes, vnleſſe he firſt of all mollifies the hardneſſe of our hearts. Beſides that, we fall euer and anon into the ſame euill by our owne heedleſneſſe, if we be not withheld by many perſwaſions. This is the cauſe then why he returnes to confirme that whereof he ſpake before, to wit, that his promiſes might not want their credit and authoritie.

The greatnes of our incredulity noted.

All of vs too much inclined to diſtruſt.

The word Hu, is ſometimes a ſubſtantiue, and ſo it is a proper name of God: but I willingly expound it, This is my name: that is to ſay, this name, The Lord, is proper to me in ſuch wiſe, that they ſinne grieuouſly who attribute the ſame to any other. To be ſhort, by this manner of ſpeech he confirmes all whatſoeuer he hath ſpoken touching the office of Chriſt, and now addes (as you would ſay) a ſeale to the promiſe. As if he ſhould ſay; He that pronounceth theſe things, teſtifies that he is the onely God, and that this name belongs to him, and to none other.

I will not giue.] That is to ſay, I will not ſuffer my glory to be diminiſhed; which muſt needes be, if I ſhould be found either a lier, or inconſtant in my promiſes. Thus you ſee that hee will performe his promiſes, becauſe he will thereby prouide for the maintaining of his owne glory, leſt the ſame ſhould anie way be impeached. Truly this is a ſingular text; for it teacheth vs that Gods glory ſhines eſpecially in the accompliſhment and fulfilling of his promiſes: whence we alſo gather a wonderfull confirmation of our faith; to wit, that the Lord will neuer faile nor be wanting in his promiſe; neither can any thing hinder or ſtay the courſe of that which he hath once determined. But becauſe Satan labours by all meanes to obſcure and darken this glory of God, and to giue it either to falſe gods, or to men, therefore he proteſts that he cannot indure to be taken for a falſifier of his promiſes.

Gods glory ſhines principally in the performance of his promiſes.

The oppoſition which is between the onely God, and idols, is to be referred to the circumſtance of the time: for if God had not deliuered his people, the infidels might haue boaſted, as if the true religion had been built vpon a ſandie foundation. His meaning is therefore, that he will not ſuffer the wicked to make their triumphs ouer the Churches ruin. And wherefore is it, I pray you, that God hath hitherunto ſpared vs, and hath to this day dealt ſo fauourably with vs? Euen becauſe his Goſpell ſhould not bee expoſed to the horrible blaſphemies of the Papiſts. Hence let vs gather a generall doctrine then, to wit, that the Lord will haue his glory wholly reſerued vnto himſelfe; for he will maintaine and defend it euery way to the vtmoſt: ſhewing that hee is exceeeding iealous of it, when he cannot abide that the leaſt iot thereof ſhould bee taken from him to bee giuen to creatures.

The reaſon why God hath ſpared vs that profeſſe the true religion.

Verſ. 9. Behold, the former things are come to paſſe, and new things I doe declare: before they come forth, I tell you of them.

NOw he calles to mind the former propheeies, by the accompliſhment wereof, he ſhewes he ought to be beleeued for the time to come: for our former knowledge and experience of Gods goodneſſe, is of great vſe to confirme vs for heereafter. It is as much then as if he ſhould haue ſaid; I haue ſpoken often to your fathers, and you know that nothing hath failed of that which I haue promiſed, but all is come to paſſe: and yet when I tell you of things to come, you will not credit me. The experience you haue had touching things paſt, cannot moue you; neither can it prouoke you to forſake your infidelitie. This is the vſe then which we ſhould make in remembring Gods former benefits, that our ſaluation being for a time hid vnder hope, wee may ſticke to his word and promiſe, and may be the better confirmed in it all the daies of our life.

Our experience of Gods former mercies ought to confirme vs for the time to come.

1

2

Note.

By the pronoune Behold, hee euidently ſhews, that they knew by the effects that God neuer deceiued them that truſted in him, nor neuer ſpake any thing by his Prophets in vaine; for his truth was apparant to all, by infallible ſignes and tokens.

Before they come forth.] By this clauſe he ſeparates God from idols, becauſe it is he onely which knowes and foretels things to come: but idols know nothing at all. Now although the gods of the Gentiles often times gaue them anſwers when they ſought vnto them, yet we haue told you in the former Chapter, that ſuch anſwers were either falſe or ambiguous. For thoſe ỹ depended vpon ſuch toies, haue for the moſt part bin groſly deceiued, as they were wel worthy: and if any ſucceſſe at the firſt hath enſued, yet they were thereby plunged the more deeply into eternal perdition. And no doubt it fell out by Gods iust iudgement, that Satan by such delusiõs so bewitched thẽ. But the propheties had another drift, for the Church was by them either brought to repentance, to her great profit and saluation; or else was thereby fortified with good hope, to the end shee might not sinke vnder the weight of her afflictions. This remaines sure then, to wit, that the euent declares the truth of that which God hath foretold, for hee orders and gouernes all things by his prouidence.

Chap. 41. 22, 23.

The Gentiles iustly punished by the delusions of Satan in their idols.

Vers. 10. Sing vnto the Lord a new song, and his praise from the end of the earth: yee that goe downe to the sea, and all that is therein: the Iles and the inhabitants thereof.

What effect Gods benefits should haue in vs.

NOw he exhorts the people to thanksgiuing: for Gods benefits should euer haue this effect in vs, namely, that the remembrance of them should stirre vs vp to sing his praises. Besides, in that he sets their deliuerance before their eies by this exhortation,

This exhortation to the praising of God, a further confirmation of the former promises.

he further confirmes the promises whereof he hath spoken: for his drift is to be well obserued; to wit, that the faithfull ought not to be dismayed nor ouerwhelmed with sorrow, though they were in euill case, but to frame their minds to a ioyfull expectation of their redemption, and hence forwards to giue themselues to sing the praises of the Lord.

The matter of this song.

The matter of this song is, that Christ was reuealed and sent into the world of his Father, to susteine the miseries of his Church, and to restore her to her perfect estate; yea in a maner to renue the whole world. Now the more difficult the matter was to be beleeued, the more desirous the Prophet was to remoue all obstacles out of their way, that he might the better imprint these p opheties in their minds. And no maruell though he labors thus to awaken them, seeing they were brought into extreame neede, and were left as men destitute of any hope of recouerie. The only sight of present things was sufficient to shake their faith, yea and to thinke that all things which the Prophets had foretold were but vaine & ridiculous. He comes in now therefore with this exhortation, that in so desperate an estate they might be of good cheere, and might boldly rest vpon the certaintie of these promises.

The reason of this exhortation.

What the Prophet meanes by a new song.

By a new song, he meanes an excellent, an exquisit, an elegant, and no common song, but such a one as should rauish mens minds by mentioning the wonderfull goodnes of God, the like whereof was neuer seene before, in which sense this word is taken, Psal.

New, is here opposed to that which is common and ordinarie.

33. 3. 96. 1. for new is opposed heere to that which is common. And thus the infinit mercie of God, which should be manifested in Christ, is extolled in this place, by whose meanes it fell out that this mercie of God was celebrated with wonderfull praises. Hence we learne that the more God hath inriched any of vs with the abundance of his graces, the more should we giue our selues to sing his praises. I grant that all are bound to do it: for what is he vpon whom the necessitie of this dutie is not strictly to be imposed? But those that haue bin inriched with the greatest benefits ought also to publish them with the greater magnificence. Seeing that God then hath bin pleased in Christ to set open vnto vs the fountaine of all blessings, and hath vnfolded his hidden spirituall treasures to all, is it any maruell if he require vs to offer vnto him a new and excellent sacrifice of praise? But wee are to note, that this song can not be sung by any man that is vnregenerate, for it must come from the deepest ground of the heart. The holy Ghost must be the inditer and inspirer therefore of these praises, or else they can not be acceptable. Moreouer, he not only exhorts one or two to this dutie, but all nations of the earth, because Christ is appointed a Sauiour to all.

A Lesson.

In Christ God hath set open to vs the fountaine of all his blessings, &c.

None but the regenerate can sing this song.

Vers. 11. Let the wildernes and the cities thereof lift vp their voyce, the townes that Kedar doth inhabit: let the inhabitants of the rocks sing: let them shout from the top of the mountaines.

ALthough the Prophet comprehends all the parts of the world, yet he mentions none but such as were best knowne of the Iewes. For Iudea had the Sea lying of the West side, and the desert of Arabia lying on the East: and where he speakes of the pauilions of Kedar, of the wildernes, and rocks, he meanes Arabia; but it is by a figure called Synecdoche, so as vnder these words he also comprehends all the East: it is as much then as if he had said, From the sunne rising, to the going downe thereof, these praises shal sound forth, because the Lord shall now be worshipped in euery place, whereas before he was only knowne in Iewry. Things shall be changed therefore, for this song shall be heard to the vtmost ends of the world.

The figure Synecdoche.

He mentions the townes of Kedar, because they knew that the Arabian Scenites dwelt in tents. But in speaking of the wildernes, he names the Cities: I note then, that he meanes not only that great desert which was between Iudea and Arabia, but the countrie lying beyond, which partly was esteemed as bordering vpon it; as also the plaines lying beyond the Mounts are called Mountaines, for the common people are so intent vpon that which is next vnto them, that they think things farre remote, resemble it. But our Prophet in the meane while exalts and sets forth the grace of God, in that it should extend it selfe to sauage and wilde people, whose crueltie and barbaritie was sufficientlie knowne.

Vers. 12. Let them giue glorie to the Lord, and declare his praises in the Ilands.

HE now shewes what this shouting shall be, Heuen a celebrating of Gods praises, in regard gard his goodneſſe and bountie ſhall be felt in all places. Thus he commands then that this redemption bee ſung forth with one voice, ſeeing the fruit thereof ſhould be common to all nations. By this we are admoniſhed to ſhout with ardent affection at this day, when we ſing the praiſes of God, that we for our parts may be inflamed, and may alſo ſet others on fire to doe the like by our example. For ſuch as haue taſted and felt how gracious God is indeed, cannot mutter them forth betweene their teeth; neither will they be luke warme, nor ſing them alone by themſelues onely.

Verſ. 13. The Lord ſhall goe forth as a giant: he ſhall ſtirre vp his courage like a man of warre: hee ſhall ſhout and cry; and ſhall preuaile againſt his enemies.

THat which our Prophet addes now, ſerues to ouercome the temptations of the faithfull: for hee attributes ſtrength and force vnto God, to teach them that his ſuccour is ſufficient for their ſafetie. In aduerſitie we are perplexed, becauſe wee ſtand in doubt whether Gods power will be ſtrong enough for our defence; but then chiefly, when in hiding his eies from vs, he ſeemes as it were to reiect our praiers. For this cauſe the Prophet is carefull to ſet forth the power of God in ſuch excellent termes, that all might learne quietly and boldlie to reſt themſelues vpon him.

Wherefore the Prophet ſets forth Gods power with ſuch elegancie.

The going forth whereof he ſpeakes, is to be taken figuratiuely: for God ſeemed to be hid in the time wherein he ſuffered his people to be oppreſſed and afflicted, without any appearance of ſuccour: this clauſe then ſignifies as much as to goe forth to the reſcue; which alſo is confirmed by the words following. For in that he attributes courage vnto God, who like a man of warre ruſheth vpon his enemies; they are ſimilitudes taken from humane affections. Whence we learne what force there is in his helpe, and yet his power without theſe borrowed ſpeeches, would moue vs little or nothing. He applies himſelfe therefore in theſe things to our capacities, as we haue told you before in many other places, that we might know with what affection he bends himſelfe to protect vs; with how great diſcontent he indures the affliction and oppreſſion of the faithfull: and in the third place, how terrible his wrath is, as oft as hee once prepares himſelfe to the fight.

1
2
3

These prophecies muſt be referred to the circumſtance of the time.

But the circumſtance of the time is alwaies to be noted, vnto which the Prophet doubtleſſe had a ſpecial regard; & theſe prophecies muſt alſo be applied thereunto: for as long as the rage of the enemies increaſed, and as long as they triumphed ouer the afflicted people of God, the faithfull were to conſider of things farre aboue that which they ſaw with their eies, and to bee reſolued that God was ſtrong enough to ſubdue all their enemies, and to deliuer them out of their hands. Neither was it ſufficient that their perplexed thoughts ſhould onely be quieted by this promiſe, during the time of the captiuitie; but it was alſo needefull that it ſhould continue euen vntill the comming of Chriſt: for they were conſtrained from time to time to reſiſt many incumbrances, as it appeares by the hiſtories.

Verſ. 14. I haue a long time holden my peace: I haue been ſtill, and refrained my ſelfe: now will I cry like a trauailing Woman: I will deſtroy and deuoure at once.

THe Prophet labors to preuent the temptations which are wont to put vs to much trouble, whileſt God defers his helpe. We are then tempted with impatientie, and thinke all his promiſes vaine. For we iudge it a thing vnſeemly for God to be ſilent, and to ſleepe, as you would ſay, when the enemie awakes, and aduanceth himſelfe; in a word, that hee ſhould be cold, whileſt they be inflamed with rage to hurt; and to winke at their iniquities, whileſt they ouerflow in all manner of cruelties.

The Prophet minded therefore to ſuſtaine and cheere vp the hearts of the afflicted, which were ouer loden with ſorrowes, and to perſwade them that God had not forſaken them, albeit euery thing ſeemed to threaten their ouerthrow.

Hee doth of ſet purpoſe expreſſe theſe words, a long time, leſt ſo tedious a languiſhing ſhould cauſe them to faint: for in regard they had been vexed with warre vpon warre continually after the death of Iehoſhaphat, it was hard for them to paſſe ſeuentie yeeres more, being in captiuitie, out of their owne Countrie. But their calamities were not yet an end, and therefore it was needefull they ſhould bee wiſely admoniſhed, that howſoeuer God did not by and by ſuccour them, yet they ſhould loſe nothing by this delay, if ſo bee they waited with patience. Thus alſo hee rebukes the vnbeleeuers, who gaue themſelues to all diſorder by abuſing this patience of God; who proteſts that he wanted not power, though hee contained himſelfe in ſilence.

Like a woman trauailing.] By this ſimilitude he ſets forth Gods wonderfull tender affection and ardent loue: for he compares him to the mothers wonderfull ardent loue towards her onely ſon, albeit ſhe hath brought him forth with extreme ſorrowes. One would thinke theſe things ſhould agree nothing at all vnto God: but the vehement loue hee beares vs can no way be expreſſed, but vnder ſuch borrowed ſpeeches. Hee is conſtrained to vſe ſuch ſimilitudes then, as are familiarly knowne, to make vs conceiue that of which we are ignorant: for his loue farre exceedes ours; that is to ſay, it is perfect and entire. And albeit his loue ſurpaſſeth all humane affections, yet there is no exceſſe therein.

No exceſſe in Gods loue.

Note alſo, that he meant to ſhew, that this deliuerance of the people ſhould reſemble a birth, to teach the Iewes that their graue was as a trouble vnto them, that ſo they might conceiue hope of ſaluation, euen in the midſt of corruption. Albeit then that he was able to bring forth a new Church without paine or trauaile, yet to the end his grace might the better appeare in ſuch a birth, it is not without cauſe that he attributes the cry of a trauailing woman vnto him. But for as much as this ſimilitude might diminiſh ſomewhat of Gods power and maieſtie, the Prophet ioines the other affection withall: for touching his loue, hee reſembles a mother; but touching his force and power, he is like a lion.

God as touching his loue, reſembles a mother: but as touching his power, a lion.

Verſ. 15. I will make waſte mountaines and hilles, and dry vp all their hearbs: and I will make the floods Ilands, and I will dry vp the pooles.

THe Prophet meanes that all the munitions which animated the wicked to retaine theſe poore captiues, could not hinder the Lord from ſetting them at libertie. It was needfull this ſhould be added to the former. For when we ſee the wicked armed (in a manner) with inuincible power, wee then tremble, and haue much a doe to apprehend Gods power, ſo farre as to continue ſtedfaſt in our confidence. Iſaiah therefore inſiſts vpon this point, ſignifying that neither men nor munitions can reſiſt the Lord, when he is minded to deliuer his choſen. In a word, hee ſhewes that the change ſhall bee ſuch, that thoſe who were the ſtrongeſt before, ſhall be broken to peeces, and ſhall gaine nothing by reſiſting of him. This I take to be the natiue ſenſe of theſe words; ſo that it is needleſſe to ſtand deſcanting ſubtilly vpon them any longer, as ſome do, who expounding theſe things allegorically, thinke that mountaines and hilles ſignifie Cities; hearbs, the men which dwell in them. But why ſhould we follow ſuch ſophiſtries, ſeeing the Prophet onely ſhewes that God is powerfull enough to fulfill his promiſes, and to deliuer his Church? becauſe hee can eaſilie ſurmount all ſtumbling blockes that ſhall be laid before him. This ſentence therefore anſwers to other propheeies which we haue ſeene heretofore, where Iſaiah teacheth, that Gods power is not tied to ſecond cauſes, when he is determined to preuent the enemies of their purpoſe; but goes thorow with his worke after a wonderful faſhion, and breakes downe all impediments which ſeemed to ſhut vp his paſſage.

Gods power not tied to ſecõd cauſes.

Verſ. 16. And I will bring the blind by a way that they knew not, and leade them by paths that they haue not knowne: I will make darkneſſe light before them, and crooked things ſtraight. Theſe things will I doe vnto them, and not forſake them.

HAuing ſhewed that the force of the enemie could not hinder God from deliuering his people, he goes on with that conſolation which hee touched in the 13. and 14. verſes. Now he calles them blind, which know not what way to turne them, nor which way to runne, by reaſon things goe ſo croſſe and aukward with them. In a word, ſuch as ſee no iſſue, but bottomleſſe gulphes ready on all ſides to ſwallow them vp: for euen as the way ſeemes plaine and ſmooth whileſt things doe indifferently proſper; ſo in aduerſitie, (but eſpecially when all is darkened with ſorrow, when all hope is gone, and death it ſelfe preſſeth hard vpon vs) wee ſtand then like amazed creatures. The Prophet teacheth therefore, that when all things are deſperate, then, euen then is the time and houre in which wee ſhould moſt of all expect ſuccour and helpe from the Lord.

Who they be that the Prophet calles blind.

The time in which wee ought chiefly to expect help from God.

It is ſometimes alſo very requiſite that we bee brought into ſtraits, ſo as no euaſion be left vs, that we be ſometimes put to our ſhifts, and preſſed on euery ſide: yea, to be left ſtarke blind in regard of the ſight of any outward meanes. Why ſo? That we may learne to depend vpon the onely helpe of God, and to reſt our ſelues quietly in him. For as long as we can ſee any leaning ſtocke, or are able to catch hold of any ſtay, bee it neuer ſo little, vpon that we ſet our whole hearts: and thus it comes to paſſe that wee are carried hither and thither, and vtterly neglect the remembrance of Gods wonted fauour.

It is good for vs ſometimes to be brought into ſtraits.

Would we be aſſiſted and ſuccoured then in our aduerſities? Truly wee muſt content our ſelues to be blind then: that is to ſay, we muſt turne our eies from beholding things preſent, and keepe our reaſon ſhort, that we may onely reſt vpon Gods free promiſes. I grant this blindneſſe will not be very pleaſing to vs, and that therein the imbecillitie of our iudgements may be therein eaſilie diſcerned; yet ought wee not therefore to flee it much, if we wiſelie conſider the fruit that redounds to vs by it. For is it not better to be blind, and to bee led by Gods hand, then to ſee with both eies, and to plunge our ſelues into vnauoidable dangers? He confirmes this, in promiſing to turne darkneſſe into light. Be it then that we perceiue not ſo much as one ſparkle of light in our afflictions, yet muſt wee not deſpaire of Gods helpe; but vſe it rather as a meanes to truſt more confidently in Gods promiſes then euer we did before: for God will eaſilie change our darkneſſe into light, hee will ſoone make crooked things ſtreight, and leade vs in the way, that we may boldly walke therein without ſtumbling. But in the meane while, let vs know, that theſe things are onely promiſed to the faithfull that put themſelues into Gods cuſtodie, and are contented to be gouerned by him: in a word, to ſuch as being acquainted with their owne dimneſſe of ſight, doe willingly content themſelues to follow ſuch a leader, waiting in the darkneſſe of their affliction, for the light of his countenance; for to ſuch onely hee reacheth forth his hand. Let vs cleaue faſt therefore to his promiſes, and not imitate the wiſe men of this world, who will walke by their own light whether he will or not, or will wander in vnlawfull deliberations.

Verſ. 17.

Verſ. 17. They ſhall be turned back: they ſhall be greatly aſhamed that truſt in grauen Images, and ſay to the molten Images, Yee are our Gods.

BY this we euidentlie ſee to whom the former doctrine belonged: for now he diſtinguiſheth Gods ſeruants from Idolaters. As if he ſhould ſay, The Lord will leade his people, but in the meane while thoſe that truſt in grauen Images ſhall be aſhamed. As if he ſhould ſay, the choice is here ſet before you, either by grace to be ſaued, or miſerablie to periſh. For all ſuch as put their confidence in Idols ſhall ſurely periſh: but thoſe that reſt vpon Gods word and promiſe ſhall aſſuredly be ſaued. I grant they muſt ſuffer many and tedious afflictions, yet they ſhall not be aſhamed nor confounded: for God in the end will ſhew that this difference which he puts betweene them that truſt in him, and thoſe that truſt in Idols was not in vaine.

Two marks to diſcerne Idolaters by.

Moreouer, it is very certaine that by the two marks which he here expreſſeth, all Idolaters are meant, who fix their hope in any thing but in God. For albeit they bow not before their Idols, yet in attributing vnto them I know not what diuinitie, they take that glorie from the only true God which to him belongs: for the principall part of Gods ſeruice ſtands in faith and prayer, both which the Prophet expreſſeth in this place. But it may be demanded, whether they were ſo blockiſh as to ſay to a block, Thou art my God. For the moſt ſuperſtitious haue confeſſed that God was in heauen; neither haue they bin ſo groſſe as to attribute a diuine nature directly to wood or ſtone: it ſeemes therefore that Iſaiah makes them more ſottiſh then they are. I anſwere, that all Idolaters attribute that power to their Images which belongs to God; albeit they acknowledge him to be in heauen: for when they trot ſo faſt after their puppets and Idols, to whom they make and pay their vowes, doe we not euidentlie perceiue that they giue that to them which only appertaines to God? It is in vaine then that they labour to colour and cloake brutiſhnes, for they make gods of wood and ſtone, and in thus doing offer extreame violence to the Lord. The Prophet therefore hath not ouerſhot himſelfe, neither hath he framed a falſe accuſation againſt Idolaters, becauſe their owne words doe ſufficientlie teſtifie the ſame to their faces, when they call their Idols and Images, gods. Yea let it be granted that they be not heard to pronounce any ſuch words, yet their madnes may eaſily be diſcerned, in that they thinke God can neither heare, nor help them, vnleſſe they proſtrate themſelues before a ſenſeleſſe ſtock, and mumble vp a certaine ſtint of prayers before it. Now theſe things are thus vttered, to let all know, that none can be ſaued, but he which ſhall truſt in God only.

Queſt.

Anſ.

All Idolaters attribute that to Idols, which belongs to God.

Verſ. 18. Heare, yee deafe: and yee blinde regard, that yee may ſee.

HE takes blinde and deafe here in a contrarie ſenſe to that in the ſixteenth verſe, where by this ſimilitude he noted out thoſe who were ſo deſtitute of counſell, and ouerwhelmed with the weight of afflictions, that it deprined them of all ſight. For by blind in this place he meanes ſuch as did ſhut their eies againſt the cleare light, and would take no knowledge of Gods works. By deafe, thoſe that vvould not heare, but rather delighted to lie ſnorting in the filthines of their ignorance. He condemnes here therefore the blindnes of the Iewes, or rather of all men, as I take it. For although it be true that he reprocheth the Iewes to be blind euen in ſeeing, and deafe whileſt they heard: yet this alſo doth in part belong to the Gentiles, to whom he manifeſted himſelfe by the creatures, ingraued in their minds and conſciences the knowledge of himſelfe, and to whom alſo he had and ſhould make knowne his admirable works.

Blind.

Deafe.

A generall blindnes and deafnes gone ouer all men.

1
2
3

In that he calles for audience then, he giues them to vnderſtand, that the only cauſe which hinders them from comprehending Gods truth and power, is their owne deafnes, and blindnes, mixed with a malicious vnthankfulnes. For he is not wanting in giuing them ſufficient teſtimonies of his power, neither is he negligent in teaching them familiarly enough: but the fault is in themſelues, in that they applied not their hearts to inſtruction, nor to meditate in his word: no, nor yet to behold his wonderfull works, ſo as euery one wittingly ſhut their eies: and therfore the Prophet ſhewes that all the fault reſted in themſelues if they ſaw not Gods power.

Verſ. 19. Who is blind but my ſeruant? or deafe as my meſſenger that I ſent? who is blinde as the perfect, and blinde as the Lords ſeruant?

ALl expoſitors almoſt doe expound this verſe, as if Iſaiah mentioned the outrages which the wicked are wont to belch out againſt the Prophets. For they caſt the ſeruants of the Lord in the teeth with the things which they haue reproued and condemned, which ſuch companions as they can not indure. As if they ſhould ſay, Who are they, I pray thee, whom thou accuſeſt of blindnes, and who are they thou calleſt deafe? Take it hardly to thy ſelfe. We know none ſo blinde as thou art. They thinke then, that it is as much as if the Lord complained thus of the Iewes, I ſee very well that you eſteeme my Prophets for no better then blinde and deafe. But we ſhall by and by ſee that this interpretation ſutes nothing at all with the ſcope of the text: for the Prophet ſhewes afterwards why he calles them blind, to wit, becauſe they ſaw many things, but kept them not. Now this can not any way agree to the Prophets, let vs therfore follow the pure and natiue ſenſe.

The miſinterpretation of this place.

Iſaiah before condemned all men of blindnes, but the Iewes eſpeciallie, becauſe they inioyed thoſe meanes whereby they might haue a clearer ſight then any others: for they had not only that glimmering, which was cõmon to all nations, but had alſo the word ſounding

1
2

The right interpretation

ſounding in their eares, by which the Lord fully manifeſted himſelfe vnto them. Though the whole world beſides then was blind, yet theſe ſhould haue had eies to ſee and know the Lord, in regard they had the doctrine, as a burning lampe to giue light vnto them. Beſides, hee ſpeakes to theſe afterwards in the ſixtie. Chapter, Riſe vp Ieruſalem, and bee bright, for the darknes ſhall couer the whole earth, but the Lord ſhall giue thee light. Becauſe the Iewes then were blind in ſo cleere light, therefore he taxeth them by this particular reprehenſion. As if hee ſhould ſay; I ſtriue but in vaine againſt thoſe which are far off from mee, neither doe I much maruell at their blindneſſe; but this is ſtrange, that ſuch a thing ſhould befall my ſeruants, who haue the cleere light ſhining before their eies. I am as one aſtoniſhed to ſee them deafe, who haue the word continually ſounding in their eares. The things I teach them are ſo plaine and euident, that the very blind and deafe may in a manner vnderſtand them: but alas! I ſpeake to them in vaine; for I thinke there is not a more brutiſh and ſottiſh people to bee found. To be ſhort, whereas they ſhould haue had the quickeſt ſenſe of hearing and ſeeing, they were the worſt of all.

Whom I ſent.] Iſaiah deſcends by degrees
1 from all men in generall, to the Iewes in par-
2 ticular; then to the Prieſts, which were the 3 lights of the world as it were: for it was their
The Prieſts. office to interpret the Law, to walke before others in a good example of life, and to ſhew vnto them the high way to heauen. Their lippes, ye know, were to preſerue knowledge, and at their mouth men were to ſeeke it: Mal. 2.7. The Prophet therefore complaines, that thoſe who ſhould bee lights and guides to others, were themſelues as blinde as the reſt.

Some refer the word ſeruant, to Iſaiah: others, to Chriſt; and thinke that both were condemned of blindneſſe. But this comes nothing neere the Prophets drift: for his meaning is, by way of compariſon to amplifie the former complaint made, touching the blindneſſe of the Iewes. Their fault was much greater then that of other nations: but the Prieſts were yet in the greateſt fault of all, who were their leaders and guides. Let vs know then, that by how much the more wee come neere vnto God, and the higher hee ſhall haue aduanced vs in dignitie aboue others, the leſſe ſhall our excuſe be.

To the ſame purpoſe he calles them perfect; which indeede ſhould haue been ſo: for hee puts them in minde by this reproch, of that perfection from whence they were fallen by ſo vnworthy a reuolt, and thereby had ſhamefully prophaned that holy and glorious name of their God. For ſeeing he gaue them a perfect rule of righteouſneſſe to direct them both in life and doctrine, it ſhould haue been their parts not to haue ſwarued an haires bredth from it.

Verſ. 20. Seeing many things, but thou keepeſt them not: opening the eares, but he heareth not.

NOw himſelfe expounds what this blinding is, which he mentioned before; and he ſhewes it to be twofold. Thus we may perceiue well enough, that he ſpeaks only of the Iewes, who wilfully and malicioufly had choked the heauenly light. The fault will bee double then when they ſhall appeare before Gods iudgement ſeat, if wee ſhut our eies before the cleere light, and ſtop our eares whileſt he vouchſafes to teach vs by his word. I grant the prophane nations are iuſtly left without excuſe: but the Iewes, and others, to whom the Lord ſo many waies manifeſted himſelfe, ſhall bee worthy of a double condemnation, in that they would neither ſee nor heare God. Let vs feare this iudgement then, who haue ſo many worthy lights and examples ſhining before our eies; for there is a blinding eſpied at this day in many, and as great aa hardening as was among the Iewes; but the one ſhall bee no more excuſed then the other.

What vſe we are to make of the former doctrin.

Verſ. 12. The Lord is willing for his righteouſneſſe ſake, that he may magnifie the Law, and exalt it.

THat he might amplifie the offence of the Iewes, hee now ſhewes that it was not Gods fault that they were depriued of good daies. Hee ſaid before, that the miſeries and calamities which they indured, were the puniſhments of their wilfull & obſtinate blindneſſe. Now, to fill vp the meaſure of their iniquitie, he addes that by their obſtinacie they had reiected all reliefe. This place is diuerſly expounded. Some reade; The Lord would haue it ſo: others, He is gracious. But I haue tranſlated, The Lord is willing: that is to ſay, is inclined to deliuer his people, to magnifie his law, and to exalt his iuſtice. And thus God yeeldes the reaſon why he is ready to ſuccour the vnworthy; to wit, becauſe he is willing that his glory may be aduanced in their ſaluation, that his iuſtice by this meanes may alſo appeare, and that his law might floriſh in her perfect ſtrength. Now in that the Iewes were in ſuch a diſtreſſed eſtate, it was becauſe they wittingly loued darkneſſe rather then light, and to heape ſorrowes vpon their owne heads, rather then to obey God: for had not this come betweene, it was his onely deſire to haue inriched them, and to haue aduanced them.

This verſe diuerſly expounded. See more in the ſequell.

Some expound it thus; The Lord is as willing to magnifie his law, and to ſhew his iuſtice in chaſtiſing the Iewes, as hee was to threaten them by it: and thus they refer the word righteouſneſſe, to the puniſhments and plagues wherewith this people were viſited of God. Others tranſlate, For my righteouſneſſe ſake: and ſo refer it to Chriſt; but they deceiue themſelues in the word Tſidko, for doubtleſſe the Prophet ſpeakes of righteouſneſſe, minding to ſhew that the Lord was willing to exalt the truth of his promiſes, and the the ſignes of his righteouſneſſe in the conſeruation of the Iewes: if they had not ſhewed themſelues vnworthy of ſo great a benefit by their owne vnthankfulneſſe. Others thinke that the Lord is heere excuſed, in regard it ſeemed hee ſuffered his truth to faile, when his choſen people were expoſed to ſo manie calamities; and that the Prophet meant to preuent this ſlander, by telling them that they were not thus ſcattered & made a pray, becauſe the Lord tooke any delight therein, but becauſe he reſpected his iuſtice aboue all things. But for my part, I expound it ſimply in this ſenſe, that the Lord to exalt his Law, was readie to doe his people good, that his glory and iuſtice might ſhine therein: but that the people depriued themſelues of ſuch a bleſſing, and thus made their caſe deſperate by their owne obſtinacie.

The ſenſe according to Maſter Caluins iudgement.

From hence alſo wee may gather, for what cauſe the Lord adornes his Church with ſo many of his fauours; euen that hee might magnifie his Law, and bring men to the ſeruice of his Maieſtie, that ſo his truth might ſhine more and more.

The cauſe why the Lord adornes his Church with ſo many fauors.

When the Prophet ſaith that the Lord is willing; it is euident that he findes no cauſe out of himſelfe: but yet he expreſſeth it further, in adding for his righteouſneſſe ſake: for he excludes all that men bring of their owne; neither can hee be moued to doe good, but becauſe he is iuſt. Adde alſo, that no dignitie or worthineſſe is to be found in any man: but there was a ſpeciall reaſon of this, in reſpect of the Iewes, whom hee had vouchſafed to adopt among the reſt.

Verſ. 22. But this people is robbed and ſpoiled, and ſhall be all ſnared in dungeons, and they ſhall be hid in priſon houſes, they ſhall be for a pray, and none ſhall deliuer: a ſpoile, and none ſhall ſay, Reſtore.

NOw Iſaiah ſhewes, that the people are miſerable, and appointed to deſtruction by their owne folly, becauſe they reiected God, who otherwiſe was readie to haue ſuecoured them, but they, like deſperate perſons reiected all remedies, and ſought their owne ouerthrow. He ſo excuſeth the Lord then that he vehemently reproues the people, who vnkindly did caſt off the Lord, and turned his grace into wantonnes. And yet, as I haue ſaid alreadie, this is not ſaid ſo much to iuſtifie God, as bitterlie to complaine of this nation, who had ſworne to procure their owne ruine, ſeeing they wilfully threw themſelues into ſundrie calamities. If we ſee the Church ſcattered and deformed at this day, let vs blame our ſinnes, for we thereby would not ſuffer the Lord any longer to continue his louing kindnes towards vs.

The cauſe of the Churches deformitie.

Some tranſlate the coniunction copulatiue Vau, Wherefore, which I haue rather tranſlated But, for it is oppoſed to the willingnes wherewith the Lord was inclined to defend his people, if themſelues had not hindred the ſame. I haue turned the verb To bind into the futuretence: for the Prophet ſpeakes of the people which ſhould be led captiue. As touching the word Baſurim, I thinke they are here two dictions, ſignifying in the caues; for if they ſhould be taken for yong men, it will not agree with the ſcope of the text.

They ſhall be ſpoiled.] Thoſe who interpret this of all men generallie, of whom Chriſt only is the Sauiour, come nothing neere the Prophets meaning: for he ſimplie affirmes that the people ſhall periſh, without hope of deliuerance, becauſe they reiected Gods grace. Hence let vs gather what ſhall vndoubtedlie befall vs, if we forthwith receiue not Gods mercie whileſt it is offered: truly we ſhall deſerue to be deſtituted of all ſuccour, and to periſh miſerablie, being made a ſpoile and a pray.

What it is to reiect grace being offred.

Verſ. 23. Who among you ſhall hearken to this, and take heed, and heare, for afterwards.

Iſaiah goes on with the ſame argument, for he ſaith, that the Iewes are and ſhall be ſo beſotted, that they ſhall ſee nothing, though they be admoniſhed. In the next place he ſpeakes directly to them, and taxeth their dulnes, that could neither conceiue nor know any thing touching Gods iudgements, which yet were ſo manifeſt, whereas in all likelihood they ought to haue been beſt inſtructed and taught of all others.

For afterwards.] That is to ſay, who being at the laſt tamed by afflictions, ſhall come againe to bethinke themſelues, though very late. We ſee then how this admiration who among you aggrauates their crime and obſtinacie, when he ſaith, they ſhould be euer vnteachable. In the meane while let vs learne what vſe to make of Gods threatnings and chaſtiſements: for the Lord neither reproues nor corrects vs for our ſinnes as if he delighted in taking vengeance, or required any recompence, but that wee ſhould ſtand vpon our gard for the time to come.

To heare for afterwards.

The vſe we ought to make of Gods reprehenſions and corrections.

Verſ. 24. Who gaue Iaakob for a ſpoile, and Iſraell to the robbers? did not the Lord, becauſe wee haue ſinned againſt him? for they would not walke in his ways, neither be obedient to his law.

SEe wherefore Iſaiah complaines, that the Iewes tooke nothing to heart; for when they ſuffred, they thought it came to paſſe by chance, and that they wanted the power to make reſiſtance, which their fathers had before them, through the want whereof they were ouercome by their enemies. In a word, they looked ſo much to outward cauſes, that they neglected to thinke vpon the Prophets threatnings; neither regarded they Gods iudgements. He is faine therefore to ſummon them before Gods heauenly throne, to proue vnto them, that he was the author of their miſeries: for it was vnpoſſible to perſwade them that their corrections proceeded from God, who puniſhed them for their offences. And may

1
2

may not we say the like of the people of this age? Euery one is content in generall termes to confesse that God is the author of all things: but come to particulars, men are ashamed to acknowledge that this & that crosse proceedes from his hand. Why so? Because their mindes are distracted with many thoughts, and being forestalled with this opinion of fortune, they turne their mindes rather to this or that, then to the Lord. Isaiah shewes then that the sinnes of the people are the cause of such a ruin, and that the Lord is iust in bringing the same vpon them: according also as Moses had testified; How should a thousand haue fled at the sight of one, if their strong God had not sold them, and if the Lord had not shut them vp? Deut.32.30.

We wonder why God afflicts vs, but we neuer wonder at our sinnes which are the cause of them.

Wee wonder to see things fall out euerie day contrary to our expectation; and in the meane while, neuer consider the fault to bee in our selues. We must therefore be brought vnto the consideration heereof by force of armes, as it were: it is needfull therefore that this doctrine should bee oft pressed vpon vs.

God takes no pleasure in our afflictions.

Now to the end they might not charge God with crueltie, the Prophet addes, that it came iustly to passe: for he snatched not vp the rod rashly, but that necessitie constraines him thereunto; neither takes he pleasure in our afflictions.

Wee are to obserue two distinct things here then. First, that no aduersitie happens but by Gods prouidence, lest wee should imagin that things fall out by chance, or by some outward cause. Secondly, that no euill comes vpon vs vniustly, because we haue first prouoked God to chastise vs for our sinnes committed against him. It is in vaine for men to accuse God then of any hard measure; for wee must acknowledge his iust iudgements in the chastisement which are worthily befallen vs.

1

2

When he saith, they would not walke in his waies, hee further amplifies the fault of the Iewes, but he changeth the person; for in the former member hee put himselfe in amongst the rest, because hee was one of the same bodie, and therefore confessed his faults. Not that hee resembled the common people in anie leaud behauiour; or that he approued of their wickednesses, but it was vnpossible in so great an heape of vices, that he should be vtterly vntainted with some infection and contagion thereof, with the rest of the parts of the body. Therefore in as much as there was great difference betweene him and others, he changeth the person, and ads that they would not, thereby shewing, that so foule a rebellion displeased him: so as hee could neither winke at it, nor consent vnto it. For he speaks not here of pettie offences, but of a contempt and renouncing of God; in regard that they brake out into pride, after they had shaken off his yoke. This is the cause why Isaiah in the second place puts himselfe out of the number.

The reason why the Prophet first matcheth himselfe with the multitude, and yet afterward exempts himselfe.

Now if these things fell out iustly vpon the Iewes, let vs know that the like hangs ouer our heads, and will bee inflicted vpon the whole world, if being admonished, we repent not: for we see how gratiously the Lord calles vs to him, how many waies hee manifests his good will towards vs, and with what loue he protests hee is ready to be appeased, though he be iustly offended. But if after so many fauourable summons, and daily experiences of his patience, we still refuse to giue eare, it is most certaine that wee shall feele by wofull experience, that the miserie which befell these, is common to all rebels.

If Gods patience be abused, we shall be sure to smart for it.

Vers. 25. *Therefore hee hath powred vpon him his fierce wrath, and the strength of the battell: and set it on fire round about, and hee knew not; and it burned him vp, * yet hee considered not.*

*Or, but he put it not vpon his heart.

BEcause Gods chastisements which had begun to seize vpon them, and were afterward to be finished in their captiuitie, were very grieuous, therefore the Prophet sets forth the vehemencie of them by these similitudes. For he saith, that the Lord will powre out his wrath: as if some thunder-clap should fall vpon their heads with great violence; or as if the waters should ouerflow, and make great breaches thorowout a whole Country; as the waters gushed forth hastily in the deluge, after the windowes of heauen were broken, and that the bottels thereof were set open: Gen.6.11. In the next place he vseth an other figure, saying, that God will gather together his forces to fight vnto his people, and to assaile them to the vtmost. If any vnderstand this of the enemies which the Lord raised vp against the Iewes, I gainsay him not: for it is certaine that they came forth by Gods iust iudgement. For what was Nebuchadnezzer but Gods rod? Yet I rather thinke it should bee taken by way of similitude; to wit, that God entred by violence as an enemie armed, and powred out his fierce wrath vpon them.

God hath diuers means to correct.

Now he hath diuers means to fight against vs; for hee corrects his people sometimes by plague, sometimes by the sword, sometimes by famin: and therefore I thinke that in this similitude hee comprehends all sorts of afflictions wherewith the Lord smites his people. And if wee thinke them now and then too sharpe, let vs consider the vglinesse of our sinnes, and we shall perceiue that they be not excessiue, neither that he is too seuere and rigorous in punishing vs.

We must set the vglie shape of our sins against the bitter taste of our afflictions.

And he knew it not.] He cries out againe against this grosse sottishnes wherewith ỹ Iews were so possessed, that they could no way feele their misery; neither could they so much as lift vp their eies to heauen, to acknowledge Gods hand which smote them.

But he put it not vpon his heart.] This phrase of speech signifies to consider of a thing seriously and diligently; for if we thought vpon it, and had it well grauen in our hearts that God is the Iudge, and that hee iustlie chastiseth vs, wee should forthwith repent. The world at this day is pressed vnder manie calamities; there is almost no corner

The vse of this doctrine belongs to vs.

Gods iudgements abound in euery place, but no man layes ſhē to heart.

ner thereof exempt from his wrath: yet who knowes it, or puts it vpon his heart? Doe not all band themſelues furiouſlie againſt him with an vntamed rebellion: it is no maruell then if he lay on loade, and powre out his wrath on euery ſide vpon the mad world, which deſperately oppoſeth it ſelfe againſt him.

THE XLIII. CHAPTER.

Verſ. 1. But now thus ſaith the Lord that created thee ô Iaakob: and he that formed thee ô Iſrael, Feare not: for I haue redeemed thee: I haue called thee by name, thou art mine.

WEE can not well tell whether this verſe depends vpon the former, or is ſeparated from it. For the Prophets (whoſe writings are left vnto vs) diſtinguiſhed not their Sermons into certain Chapters, ſo as we ſhould be able to define of euery dayes Sermon. Yet me thinks this doctrine is ioined to the former, ſo as hauing ſhewed himſelfe very angry againſt the Iewes euen to threaten their deſtruction, he meant now to ſweeten this ſharpnes. For the Lord hath euermore reſpect to the faithfull: neither is impietie at any time ſo ouerſpread, but hee reſerues a ſmall remnant which hee keepes from falling into ſuch extremities, becauſe he cares for their ſafetie, and therefore the letter Vau ſhould be reſolued into a particle aduerſatiue thus, Yet, will the Lord leaue ſome conſolation to the faithfull which ſhall ſucceed. This place therefore is to be well obſerued, for albeit the whole world ſhould conſpire to roote vs out, and that Gods wrath ſhould burne on euery ſide about vs, and that we were brought to deaths dore, yea if there doe but two or three of the faithfull remaine, we ought not to deſpaire, ſeeing the Lord ſpeakes thus vnto them, Feare not.

How this verſe depēds vpon the former.

The word now, which the Prophet here vſeth hath great weight, for it ſignifies that the calamitie is preſent, or very neere at hand. In a word, that it is the time wherin all things ſhall ſeeme deſperate and forlorne; yet euen then, God will neither ceaſe to comfort his elect, nor ſweetly to aſſwage their ſorrowes, that ſo in the greateſt of their extremities they may haue a firme and an inuincible faith. Hereunto appertaine theſe Titles of Creator, and Former, without which theſe propheſies would haue bin vtterlie vneffectuall. Now we may gather from other places, that the Lord ſpeakes not here of that generall creation which is common to vs with other men, when we are borne dead in treſpaſſes and ſinnes, but of our regenetation into the hope of eternall life, in which reſpect we are alſo called new creatures: and in this ſenſe S. Paul ſaith, that we are Gods vvorkmanſhip, Epheſ. 2. 10. as we haue ſufficientlie ſhewed heretofore. In this ſenſe he alſo calles himſelfe the former: as if he ſhould ſay, I haue not formed my Church, in which my glory clearely ſhines, to bring ſo excellent a worke to nought. Whence we may obſerue, that the Church hath nothing in her ſelfe whereof ſhe can boaſt, but of Gods grace, to which all theſe gifts wherewith ſhe is adorned, ought to be attributed.

This creation muſt be applied to regeneration.

The Church hath nothing in her ſelfe to boaſt of.

That which is added, for I haue redeemed thee, may be as well referred to the time to come, as to that which was paſt: for the firſt deliuerance out of Egypt gaue them hope of that which was to come: but albeit he ſpeakes of the future deliuerance from Babylons captiuitie, yet the verb which is put in the time paſt ſuites well, in reſpect the Lord hath in his ſecret counſell alreadie redeemed vs, before the effect thereof extends it ſelfe vnto vs. Minding therefore to teſtifie what he had decreed in himſelfe, to wit, to deliuer his Church which ſeemed as good as forlorne, he fitly vſeth the time paſt, ſaying, I haue redeemed thee. 1 2

To call by name, ſignifies to receiue one into a neere band of familiaritie, as when God adopts vs for his children. What is the reaſon of this ſpeech? Surely the reprobates are ſo reiected of him that it ſeemes he forgets their names, in which reſpect the Scripture ſaith, that he knowes them not, Math. 7. 23. Now by this oppoſition we ſee more clearely what it is to be called of God: to wit, when he leaues others to honour vs with a ſpeciall fauour, in putting vs into his familie, whereas we were ſtrangers from him before: ſecondly, when he receiues vs into his charge and protection to order and guide vs and all our actions.

What it is to be the called of God. 1 2

To the ſame purpoſe he addes, Thou art mine. To giue the faithfull to vnderſtand, that he will euer haue a Church among his elect, becauſe he will not be depriued of his right of poſſeſſion. To be ſhort, he ſhewes that it is his peculiar and pretious inheritance, which he will at no hand indure to be diſpoſſeſſed of. 3

The Church Gods proper inheritance.

Verſ. 2. When thou paſſeſt through the waters I will be with thee, and through the floods, that they do not ouerflow thee. When thou walkeſt through the very fire thou ſhalt not be burnt, neither ſhall the flame kindle vpon thee.

THis is a preuention, whereby the Prophet ſhewes that the faithfull ought not to faint vnder their afflictions, ſeeing God is at hand to ſuccor them. Thus he ſpeakes more plainely then he did in the former verſe: for in teaching that the Church shall not bee free from miseries and calamities, but must wrestle with them without ceasing, he thereby incourageth her to patience and magnanimitie. As if hee should say; The Lord hath not redeemed thee that thou shouldest inioy thy pleasures, and shouldest giue thy selfe to ease and idlenesse, but to the end thou shouldest prepare thy selfe to indure all sorts of euils.

What is meant by fire and water.

By fire and water, he meanes the infinit varietie of troubles, to which we are subiect in this present life: for we haue not to incounter with one calamitie onely, but with many, and those of diuers natures: so as wee must make account to goe thorow fire and water. As the Apostle Iames also, Chap. 1.2. exhorts the faithfull to count it exceeding ioy, when they fall into diuers tentations. For certainlie our faith hath need of many trials, in regard that oft times, he which for once hath gone away conqueror, may faint and be ouercome the second time. God exerciseth vs therefore with many afflictions, but in the end wee shall escape: the waues shall beat vpon vs, but they shall not swallow vs vp; the fire shall burne vs, but it shall not consume vs. Wee shall haue a sense and feeling, I grant, of the misery as wel as others, but God will sustaine vs by his grace, and fortifie vs with the spirit of patience, that our hearts faile vs not, till putting forth his hand vnto vs, he hath drawne vs vp vnto himselfe.

See Pſ. 66.11.

Our faith hath need of many trials.

See Exod. 3.2. & 2.Cor.4.8, 9,10.

Though we be brought into many straits, yet the Lord will giue vs a timely issue.

Verſ. 3. For I am the Lord thy God, the holy one of Israel thy Sauiour: I gaue Egypt for thy ransome, Ethiopia and Seba for thee.

*Or, in thy stead.

A confirmation of the former consolation.

HE confirmes the former sentence by the experiences of the time past. For if the Lord had in former time succoured his people, it was good reason they should stay assuredly vpon his fauour (for the time to come.) Wee must euer keepe that in minde which is contained in the first verse; Feare not, for I haue redeemed thee: for these things should bee ioined together, because they tend all to one end. For if the Lord be our God, then by consequence he is with vs: vers.2. and wee shall proue by experience that he is our Sauiour. But if wee will find him such a one to vs, it is necessarily required, that wee proue our selues to be a part of Israel; not in name onely, but to shew some infallible markes thereof in the whole course of our life. Thus you see the foundation of our confidence is in this, that the Lord is our God. Whence it followes, that those who acknowledge him not for their father, neither will rest vpon his good pleasure, must needes haue trembling consciences for euer. The wicked reioice and lift vp their crests against God, but their securitie and ioy is nothing else but a giddines, & frensie of spirit; by reason whereof, they hasten their owne perdition the sooner. But the faithfull are heere assured, that he who hath chosen them, will alwaies continue their God and Sauiour: for which cause he hath separated them frō the rest of ỹ world, to be his heritage.

1
2
3

To feele God our Sauiour, we must be a part of Israel, not in name onely, but by some infallible testimonies.

In this sense he calles himselfe the holy one of Israel, because amongst all mankind, which is naturally estranged from him, he chose his people Israel to be his peculiar flocke. Now howsoeuer the outward separation be to little purpose, vnlesse the elect also bee sanctified by the power of the holy Ghost; yet although Israel was polluted as well as other nations, God notwithstanding pronounceth that his couenant shall neuer be broken with them, in regard he will remaine alwaies like himselfe. Moreouer, it is euident enough that the word holy, is taken for him that sanctifies. Will wee be assured then of Gods loue? Let vs euer set before vs the pledge of our adoption, which will bee vnto vs as a sure rocke whereon to settle our hearts: this grace therefore let vs beg of God with all the powers of our soule.

The meanes to keepe our selues in the assurance of Gods fauour.

I gaue Egypt for thy ransome.] I meane not to expound these repetitions which the Prophet so often vseth, which also are frequent in his language: for hee puts, To giue the ransome; and, to giue in thy stead, in one and the same sense. Wee haue told you already that the Prophet confirmes the faithfull, by setting these former presidents of Gods grace before them. As if he should say; You haue proued long since, that the Lord hath had care of your saluation; for how was it possible for Sennacherib to bring his forces against the Ethiopians, and other nations, but that God had a purpose to spare you, and to turne the violence of your enemies against your neighbours? Seeing then that hitherunto hee hath imploied himselfe so much in your seruice (as it were) you haue no reason to doubt of his fauour for the time to come. If therefore at any time it so fall out, that our necessities shall cause vs to call Gods prouidēce or his promises into question, let vs remember what mercies he hath bestowed vpon vs in times past: for hee may iustly condemne vs of exceeding vnthankfulnesse, if hauing receiued so many fauours from him, wee yet stand in doubt of his good will towards vs for hereafter.

How to stay our selues as oft as occasiō is giuen vs to call Gods prouident care ouer vs into questiō. Obiect.

But some may aske why hee calles Egypt and Ethiopia the Churches ransome, seeing prophane nations are vnworthy of such an honor, as to be the redeemers of Gods children? I answer, the Prophet borrowed this phrase of speech from mens vsuall maners of speaking: as if hee should say; The Egyptians, Ethiopians, and Sabeans were put in thy stead: I constrained them to sustaine the harmes which hung ouer thine head, euen as if there had been an interchange made betweene you: for to saue thee, I destroied them, and in thy stead, put them into the hands of thine enemies. Wee must resort to the historie for the better vnderstanding hereof: for when Sennacherib came with violence against Iudah, God arested him by the way, and sent him to fight with others; so as hee was constrained to turne backe his forces. And thus the Egyptians and the Ethiopians were destroied, whilest Gods people were spared: 2.King.19.9.

Anſ.

See Prou.11. 8. & 21.18.

Hence we may easilie gather, that the same prouidence

Gods prouidence the ſame in reſcuing his Church at this day, as in former ages.

prouidence and infinite goodneſſe of God, is as far extended vnto vs at this day, as it was towards the Iewes, vnleſſe wee be more then blockiſh. Is it not he, thinke you, that makes tyrants (who would eate vs vp at a morſell, and with one conſent are all of them readie in their furie to ſwallow vs vp quicke) to deuoure one another, and to turne their rage which was kindled againſt vs, vpon others? Doe wee not ſee by experience, that to preſerue vs, hee puts others in our roomes, and ſo they become our ranſome? When wee therefore are thus fauoured of God, that the wicked lets vs alone in quiet, whileſt they are aſſaulting one another, (for it is not of anie good will they beare vs that wee are freed from their furie,) let vs then lift vp our eies vnto heauen, and with all thankfulneſſe acknowledge that God puts others in our places by a miracle, to the end he might ſpare vs: for we are as ſheepe appointed to be ſlaine; naked ſwords are gliſtering on euery ſide ouer vs; and if hee either plucked them not out of their hands, or turned the points and edges of them towards others, wee ſhould feele the ſmart which they doe.

Whence it is that the Church liues in peace.

A generall doctrine. God eſteems the faithfull more then all the world beſides.

Hence we may draw a generall doctrine; to wit, that God hath ſuch a reſpect to the faithfull, that hee eſteemes them aboue all the world beſides. Be it then that the world doe caſt vs off, yet let vs reioice in this, that the Lord doth highly eſteeme of vs: firſt, in that he prefers vs aboue all his creatures: ſecondlie, in deliuering vs ſo wonderfully out of dangers: yea, and in that hee preſerues vs in the midſt of a thouſand deaths. If all things were in quiet amongſt vs, and that we ſaw no troubles at all, this fauour of God could not be ſo well diſcerned of vs. But when it ſeemes we are compaſſed in ſo on euery ſide, that all hope of eſcaping is taken from vs, and that then on a ſudden the enemie is forced to recoile backe, and is turned from vs another way, we ſhall haue good experience of that which the Prophet heere ſaith, and ſhall acknowledge Gods ineſtimable fauour towards vs.

See 1. Sam. 23. 26, 27.

Verſ. 4. *Becauſe thou waſt pretious in my ſight, and thou waſt honourable, and I loued thee, therefore will I giue man *for thee, and people for thy ſake.

*Or, in thy ſtead.

*Or, in the place of thy ſoule.

This verſe containes the reaſon of the former.

SOme expound; Thou waſt honourable, becauſe I aduanced thee vnto honour: but me thinks God yeelds a reaſon heere, why he deliuered Egypt and Ethiopia into the enemies hands, in the ſtead of his people: to wit, becauſe they were his beloued, and that he held them deere and pretious in his ſight. And thus this particle ſhould be expounded in this ſort; Becauſe I loued thee, I gaue man for thee. Now in theſe words he ſhuts out all merit, to the end the Iewes might challenge nothing vpon deſert. Euen ſo, the very cauſe of our ſaluation, and of all the bleſſings wherewith wee are adorned, is onely from Gods free loue. Thence alſo flowes all our dignitie and honourableneſſe: for if hee ſhould eſteem vs according to our vertues, he might ſoone ſhake vs off. Let vs therefore renounce all opinion of merit which is not to be found in vs, that ſo we may wholly attribute all to Gods free grace, who ſhewes vs no meane or common fauour, when he vouchſafeth to intitle vs precious. In which reſpect he alſo calles vs his firſt borne; Exod. 4. 22. and friends, Iohn 15. 15.

All merit ſhut out.

The cauſe of ſaluation, and of all benefits beſides, comes vnto vs of Gods meere liberalitie.

In that he ſaith, he gaue man for them, it is nothing elſe but an explication of the former ſentence, taking man for men: as if hee ſhould ſay; There is not a man whom the Lord will not deſtroy for thy ſafetie: for hee makes more reckoning of the ſoule of one faithfull man, then of all the world beſides. And yet hee heerewithall admoniſheth the Church that ſhe is heere redeemed at their coſt, who by nature and birth differ nothing at all from her.

Man taken for men.

Verſ. 5. Feare not, for I am with thee: I will bring thy ſeede from the Eaſt, and gather thee from the Weſt.

WE muſt not thinke there is any ſuperfluitie in that the Prophet ſo often repeates this exhortation. All of vs know, and haue ſufficient experience how inclinable our nature is to diſtruſt. Now it is hard for vs to thinke or imagin into what wonderfull ſtraits and diſtreſſes the Church of the Iewes was then brought. As ſoone as we begin once but to call Gods promiſes into queſtion, our mindes are diſtracted with many paſſions, we ſtand amazed at the greatneſſe and diuerſitie of the dangers, wee are daily aſſaulted with vexations of ſpirit; at laſt we grow ſottiſh, and cannot bee brought to taſte how gracious our God is. Our mindes therefore being thus poſſeſſed with deſpaire, haue we not neede that this voice ſhould againe & againe ring in our eares, I am with thee, feare not? that ſo this feare may either be wholly rooted vp out of our hearts, or at leaſt ſo corrected by little and little, that we may not be ouercome of it: for I can tell you, if it take neuer ſo little rooting there, it is not ſo eaſilie diſplanted. Hence we obſerue, that we ought to place our hope in nothing but in Gods being preſent with vs: for if he be abſent, we muſt needes tremble for feare or wax dull and dead hearted, or ſtagger to and fro like a drunken man. And yet the Lord would not haue vs be ſo void of feare, as that we ſhould thereby grow careleſſe or idle; but when we heare that he is neere, and that he will aſſiſt vs, faith muſt then ouercome all difficulties in the middeſt of eminent dangers.

Wherein our hope ought to be placed.

I will bring thy ſeed from the Eaſt.] This place is drawne (as we know) out of Deut. 30. 3, 4. For the Prophets are the expoſitors of Moſes, and doe gather their doctrine out of his writings, as we haue ſhewed you from the beginning. Thus the Prophet applies this place of Moſes then to the circumſtance of the time preſent, vnto which in this Sermon he hath a ſpeciall reſpect. Moſes had thus foretold, The Lord thy God ſhall cauſe thy captiues to re-

See his preface.

turne, and will haue compaſſion vpon thee, and will gather thee together againe out of all nations among whom he hath ſcattered thee: yea, though thou wert ſcattered to the vtmoſt parts vnder heauen, yet from thence thy God will gather thee, and from thence will he take thee. Iſaiah applies that now to a particular, which Moſes then ſpake in generall, vttering the ſame thing, only changing ſome of the words. The ſumme is, that howſoeuer it be as difficult to gather together in one a people not only diſioined, but alſo ſcattered among many nations to the vtmoſt coaſts vnder heauen, as to gather aſhes together againe, being ſprinckled here and there, yet God by his admirable power will cauſe theſe members thus rent in ſunder, and diuided ſo farre one from another, to be gathered againe together into one body.

Verſ. 6. I will ſay to the North, giue: and to the South, keepe not back: bring my ſonnes from farre, and my daughters from the end of the world.

See verſe 5. VNder the foure quarters here mentioned, he comprehends the whole world, for ſo it is vſuallie taken in all languages. But Iſaiah ſpeakes ſomewhat in an higher ſtile then Moſes doth, becauſe he meant as it were to ſet the people againe to the poſſeſſion of their land: and this is very fitting for ſuch deſcriptions which place things before our eies as if they were preſentlie acted: he might haue determined this matter in a word, but this varying of the ſentence hath much more weight in it; for he brings in the Lord as it were vſing his prerogatiue royall ouer all creatures, commanding all parts of the world to ſet his people againe at libertie.

Not all Iſrael but the true Iſrael ſhall be gathered. Bring my ſonnes.] By this he ſignifies that all Iſrael ſhall not be gathered, but that part only which is the true Iſrael: for all thoſe that deſcended from Abrahams loines according to the fleſh, were not Iſraelites indeed, but there were many baſtards. Theſe things therfore appertaine to the true ſeed: for the whole body of this great people eſcaped not, but a little handfull only, as we haue ſeene heretofore in the tenth Chapter. The number of thoſe that were led captiue was exceeding great: the flock or remnant that returned was very ſmall: there was that ſeed with which the Lord would not breake his couenant made with their fathers, nor ſuffer them to periſh.

But this ſeemed an hard matter for the Iewes to beleeue, who were deſpiſed of all, and were not only hated, but reiected as the curſedeſt nation vnder heauen, ſo as they were thought vnworthie to be reckoned among the cõmon ranke of men. It was needfull for them then to cleaue faſt to theſe promiſes: they knew well enough indeed that Cyrus. Cyrus ſhould come, but yet they could not imagin what maner of man he ſhould be, ſeeing he was yet vnborne. Had they not need then, thinke you, to be armed with a conſtant and firme faith to wait vpon the Lord with inuincible hope and patience, when many held theſe propheſies for no better then fables? Let vs from hence learne to looke only vnto God, that ſo we may be reſolued of his help, and of the performance of his promiſes in due ſeaſon.

Verſ. 7. * Euery one ſhall be called by my name: for I created him for my glorie, * formed him and made him.

* All called by my name.

* Or, yea, I haue.

I Reſolue this ſentence thus, becauſe the Prophet vſeth the ſingular number in ſtead of the plurall, and therefore the expoſitors haue erred here. For thus they tranſlate, All thoſe that are called by my name, I haue formed for my glorie. But I rather vnderſtand it thus: All called; that is to ſay, All ſhall be called by my name: as in another place he ſaith, My name ſhall be called vpon them. Why ſo? Becauſe I haue created, made, and formed them for my glorie.

You ſhall finde the expoſition of theſe words in Chap. 29. 23. & 43. 21.

Hee continues the argument which hee handled before touching the gathering of the people into one body, though it were diſperſed into diuers and farre Countries. As if he ſhould ſay, If this worke ſeeme incredible, you muſt not iudge of it by the order of nature, but according to the abſolute power of God.

By my name then, ſignifies vnder my conduct, for we haue told you in another place, that he ſhewes himſelfe fauorable vnto vs, when in reſpect of the right of adoption, he reputes vs for his people. Now becauſe the Iewes were to be led vnder his gouernment and power, and not by the ſtrength or riches of men, he affirmes that his name ſhall be exalted in this deliuerance.

Gods glorie ſhines in the Churches ſaluation. For my glorie.] The Prophet addes a reaſon, which conteines in it a ſtrong confirmation, to wit, God will haue his glory to ſhine in the ſaluation of his people: wherein he proteſts, that it is his proper office to protect his Saincts, and to be as carefull for their good, as for the glorie of his owne name, which he will neuer ſuffer to be blaſphemed. In a word, that his honour (of which he is the perpetuall defender) and the ſaluation of his people, are things ſo neerely conioined, that nothing can ſeparate them.

And the further to amplifie the ſame, he repeates one and the ſame thing in diuers formes of ſpeech, that he might the better perſwade them to be the finiſher of that good worke which he had begun in them. To this appertaines the particle Ak, which ſignifies Yea, or Alſo, and in ſome places, Now: ſo as many expound, Euen as I haue created and formed this people, ſo doe I deſire to ſet them in their firſt eſtate, and reſtore them to their former libertie. It may alſo be tranſlated Yea, which I thinke agrees beſt, and I haue alſo followed it in the text, to ſhew, that whatſoeuer the people receiued, proceeded from the meere grace of God, who had a ſpeciall care ouer their ſaluation, ſo as he could not indure his ſo faire and excellent a worke to remaine vnperfected. This place then ſets before vs a ſingular teſtimonie of Gods exceeding creeding fauor, in that he hath not only created vs men, but hath alſo reformed vs according to his owne image.

Verſ. 8. I will bring forth the blind people, and they ſhall haue eies: and the deafe and they ſhall haue eares.

THe breuitie and ſhortneſſe of the words breeds ſome obſcuritie in the ſenſe. For ſome tranſlate thus; I will bring forth the blind, and him that hath eies: that is to ſay; as well him that ſees, as thoſe that ſee not: The deafe, and thoſe that heare. Others, by this word Blind, vnderſtand ſuch as haue eies; but yet ſo dazeled, that they cannot behold the ſecrets of Gods heauenly wiſdome. But when I conſider the words well, I had rather expound them diſtinctly thus, I will ſo bring forth the blind, that I will giue them ſights; and will deliuer the deafe in ſuch wiſe, that they ſhall recouer their hearing. Word for word it is; To bring forth the blind, and there ſhall be eies; the deafe, and they ſhall haue eares. For the drift of the text requires that this benefit ſhould be noted diſtinctly: ſo as the people muſt firſt be deliuered, and then eares and eies ſhall bee giuen them.

The Lord effected this, when he brought his people forth of Babylon: but the Prophet doubtleſſe looked further off, euen to the kingdome of Chriſt: for then the faithfull were not onely gathered out of Caldea, but from the foure quarters of the world alſo; as wee may plainly and excellently ſee in the firſt ſermon made by Saint Peter, where manie of diuers nations were gathered together to profeſſe the ſame faith. Many alſo afterwards, which ſeemed altogether ſtrangers, came and ioined themſelues to the ſame bodie, and ſhewed that they were the true children of Abraham.

Where we ſhall find the full accompliſhment of this propheeie.

Therefore if we will finde the full accompliſhment of this propheeie, we muſt come to Ieſus Chriſt, by whom onely wee are deliuered from the bondage of Satan, and maintained in a free eſtate. It is he that giues vs eies and eares, who before were both deafe and blind by nature. But we muſt call to minde that which I haue often ſaid heeretofore; to wit, that this reſtauration wrought by Chriſt, is ioined with the returne of the people: for that which God then began in drawing his people out of their captiuitie, he continues while Chriſts ſecond comming, and then in the end will finiſh it: and thus there is but one and the ſame deliuerance ſtill. Whence it followes, that the benefits mentioned in this verſe, ought not to bee reſtrained to ſo narrow bounds, as to the captiuitie onelie.

Three extēts of this and the like propheeies.

Verſ. 9. Let all the nations bee gathered together, and let the people bee aſſembled: who among them can declare this, and ſhew vs ſomething? Let them bring forth their witneſſes, that they may be iuſtified; but let them heare, and ſay it is truth.

THe Prophet takes to him heere the perſon of God, and derides the Idols; as hee hath done before. For it ſtood him in hand (eſpecially then in reſpect of the time) to ſeparate the true God from Idols. It is no great matter to attribute the glory of the diuinitie vnto God in generall termes, but it is exceeding difficult to giue it to him onely, and to ſuffer all falſe gods to be brought to nothing, which then were in great requeſt. For in the deſtruction of the Iewes, the Idolaters feaſted their gods of gold and ſiluer, no leſſe then if they had ouercome the God of Iſrael. The Prophet therefore inſtructs the people afore hand, what they ſhould anſwer touching the ſcoffes and taunts of their enemies, in reſpect of whom, they were but a little handfull; and chargeth them notwithſtanding to continue conſtant in their holy profeſſion againſt all the power of their aduerſaries, and not to feare though great troopes of them ſhould bee aſſembled to defend their errors. We haue told you before that preſcience and power belongs to God onely, in regard that he ſees and gouernes all things according to his will: by which two arguments, he conuinced all falſe gods of falſhood: Chap. 40. and 41. Now he repeates the ſame thing, not ſo much to draw the Idolaters from their error, amongſt whom theſe propheeies were not read, but to confirme and eſtabliſh the Iewes in faith, who were aſſured that they knew the true God. I grant this doctrine now is common both to Iewes and Gentiles. The Iewes haue indeede deprined themſelues of it by their owne vnthankfulneſſe: ſo as that benefit which was then proper to them, is now tranſlated vnto others. But Iſaiah ſpake then eſpecially to the Iewes, to force them to an vnfained deteſtation of Idols, and of the ſuperſtitions of the Gentiles, which had then their full ſwinge. Now hauing ſummoned the Idolaters to maintaine their Idols cauſe, he takes it for granted, that it will be but in vaine for them to giue ſuch honour to their puppets, becauſe they are able to foreſee nothing to come.

The reaſon why the Prophet inſtructs the people againe in the doctrine of Gods preſcience.

He addes, that no witneſſes will be found, which can auouch that the falſe gods haue euer indeed propheeied of any thing truly: in which regard their cauſe is left deſtitute of a lawfull defence. It is not to bee denied but in all times there haue gone many flying reports touching the miracles which Idols haue done: and we heare of many wonders now a daies: for Idolaters are no leſſe obſtinate in auouching their fables and lies, then they are bold and impudent to inuent them: but if we come to examin them, we ſhall find no truth therein, but meere fancies and ſottiſh deuices. For this cauſe the Propher giues them the prize, if they bring in ſuch witneſſes as are worthy of credit: and thus it is to God onely then, to whom this honour appertaines to haue witneſſes on his ſide.

Lying miracles.

See verſ. 12.

To conclude, as if the matter were cleere enough of it ſelfe, he ſtands vp more boldly, and commands the vanquiſhed to hold their peace. Yet in that he bids them heare, it is to ſhew that the only let that keepes men from the knowledge of ỹ truth is, that their minds being foreſtalled with error, they ſcorne to giue eare vnto God. For this contempt hinders them from comming to repentance, but rather ſtand proudly to defend the inuention of their owne braine. But the Lord was readie to haue taught them if they had had but a patient eare. For where could they haue foũd a better Maſter? But their pride and rebellion blinds them ſo, as they can not ſee the truth, and ſhuts vp their eare from hearkning to the voice of God. Are they not iuſtly left without excuſe then, ſeeing they obſtinately reiect him, and will not lend their eare to his doctrine, who offers himſelfe in ſuch milde ſort to inſtruct them? For if they were in any meaſure teachable, Iſaiah well affirmes that they ſhould be conſtrained to ſubſcribe to their owne condemnation: for in truth, all ſuch as ſhew themſelues teachable ſhall eaſily vnderſtand that the truth of God is grounded vpon infallible arguments, and not vpõ vncertain opinions which haue their foundation in the ayre.

The only let that keepes men from the knowledge of the truth.

Thoſe that are willing to learne, ſhall ſoone perceiue that the truth is grounded vpon infallible arguments.

Verſ. 10. You are my witneſſes, ſaith the Lord, and my ſeruant, whom I haue choſen: therefore ye ſhall know and beleeue me, and ye ſhall vnderſtand that I am: before me there was no God, neither ſhall there be after me.

THe Lord hauing prouoked the Gentils to diſputation, and hauing ſhewed that all that which they eſteemed touching the excellencie of their Idols, was meere vanitie and lies: now he leaues their aſſemblie, and brings forth his witneſſes, that men may know, that his caſe is not like that of the falſe gods. He rightly boaſts then that the true witneſſes take his part: for the Iewes had bin taught by reuelations from heauen ſo farre forth as ſufficed to giue them vndoubted aſſurance of their ſaluation. And yet he priuily taxeth their ingratitude, if ſo be they did not publikely and vnfeinedly proteſt that they had learned all things requiſit for the defence of Gods glorie: and thus indeed he alſo ſummons them to vow neuer to forget nor conceale ỹ truth of theſe propheſies, by meanes whereof they might be able to ſhew the certentie of the true religion: for it had bin treacherie in them to haue defrauded ſo good a cauſe of any defence which they were able to bring vnto it.

The truth of the propheſies muſt neuer be forgotten.

Gods cauſe muſt not be left deſtitute of our defence.

By the name ſeruant, ſome vnderſtand Iſaiah: but I had rather vnderſtand it of all the Prophets, becauſe there is here a change of the number. This name then is giuen particularly to the Prophets whom the Lord choſe to maintaine his truth: and yet I doubt not but in vſing the ſingular number he had a ſpeciall and chiefe reſpect vnto Chriſt, who is the end and accompliſhment of all the propheſies: and it is alſo very ſure that he is the ſpeciall witnes that ſhall conuince the whole world. But yet we muſt haue regard to the Prophets intention, which is, to call the Iewes indeed to be the Lords witneſſes? and to accuſe them of ingratitude if they did not franckly profeſſe what they had heard and ſeene. For hauing had ſo many good leſſons taught them from time to time, they could not without groſſe diſloyaltie either doubt or call into queſtion the power and goodnes of God. Thus then he ſhewes that the Church is picked out to beare witnes to the truth of God: in which ſenſe S. Paul calles her the pillar and ground of truth, 1. Tim. 3. 15. It is her office then to publiſh and maintaine it, ſo as it may be receiued of the poſteritie frõ age to age. Not that the Lord ſtands in need of ſuch an aid, but becauſe it is his good pleaſure neither to approue nor eſtabliſh the ſame among men by any other meanes.

Chriſt, the end and accompliſhment of all the propheſies.

The Church muſt beare witnes to Gods truth.

Iſaiah therefore vnder this one word comprehends all the ſeruants of God, who ſtand bound to defend their Maſters quarrell, but chiefly the Miniſters, who ought to be as the Standard-bearers, and by their example to ſhew the way vnto others. It is therefore ſpeciallie ſpoken to them here, though in generall he is to be held no faithfull ſeruant of God, who ſo ſmothers the knowledge of the truth within him that he dares not auouch it before men.

Therefore you ſhall know.] That the Lord might not ſeeme to procure to himſelfe witneſſes of things vnknowne, he addes, you ſhall know, you ſhall beleeue, you ſhall vnderſtand: thus ſhewing by the order of the words, that faith precedes, or goes before confeſſion. If this confeſſion then haue no deeper foundation then in the tip of the tongue, and is not laid in the heart, it ſhall be held but vaine and friuolous, for the Lord neither allowes nor approues of it. And yet there is ſome difficultie in the order of the words, To know, To beleeue, and To vnderſtand: for faith is not alwaies ioined with knowledge: for a man will not ſay that ſuch beleeue becauſe they know; faith is often abſent, where knowledge is preſent. Beſides, it is doubtfull in what ſenſe vnderſtanding, which is here added after beliefe, is to be taken, as if it ſhould differ from knowledge. But our Prophet in this place ſhewes that there is a certaine preparation vnto faith, by which God firſt giues authoritie vnto his word as oft as he ſees a neceſſarie vſe of that meanes. I grant, that faith begins at humilitie, which captiues all our reaſon vnder Gods lore: but becauſe we imbrace not the doctrine that is offred with ſuch an aſſurance as we ought, therefore God confirmes it vnto vs by ſundrie teſtimonies, and by our owne experience, the better to ſettle vs firmely in this faith. In this ſenſe the Euangeliſt S. Iohn ſhewes, that himſelfe and S. Peter beleeued the Scriptures after they had ſeene the ſignes of Chriſtes reſurrection in the Sepulchre, Iohn 20. 8. In another place alſo he ſaith, That the diſciples beleeued in Chriſt, when that was accompliſhed which he had ſpoken with his mouth, Iohn 2. 22.

Faith goes before confeſſion.

Many haue knowledge that are deſtitute of faith.

The ſumme then is, that the Iewes ſhall feele

A true faith diſtinguiſhed from inconſtant infidelitie.

feele by the effects that they worſhipped the true God, after their faith ſhall be confirmed by viſible ſignes. In the meane while, he diſcernes true faith from that wauering infidelitie, which carries vnconſtant men hither and thither: for God giues knowledge & iudgement alwaies to his elect, whereby they ſhall be able to diſtinguiſh truth from lies. After this, followes faith and ſtedfaſt confidence, which cauſeth them without doubting to receiue whatſoeuer the Lord hath reuealed vnto them: and then faith kindles a greater light in the vnderſtanding, and as we profit by degrees, ſo knowledge growes in vs, and ſhines more clearly. But this is not effected in vs by our owne reaſon, but by the power of the holy Ghoſt; for it is his office to inlighten vs.

The power of the holy Ghoſt, and not mans reaſon muſt effect all theſe things in vs.

That I am.] His meaning is, that it is needfull to know what a one God it, if we would rightly beleeue: and that it is he only, and none other that we worſhip, leſt our mindes ſhould wander & erre in receiuing whatſoeuer men ſhould approue, or thruſt vpon vs. That is not properly termed faith, which forgeth ought according to mẽs fancies, or that lightly credits whatſoeuer is ſet before her: neither is that faith which by and by cleaueth to whatſoeuer is ſet before her, or wauereth in vncertaintie: but true faith is grounded in ſuch aſſurance, that in giuing her ſelfe to the ſeruice of the onely true God, ſhee boldly contemnes all falſe gods, and deliuers mens vnderſtandings from all feare of error.

True faith forgeth not fancies, neither wauereth, but is grounded vpon the infallible truth.

The implicit faith of the Papiſts, is to beleeue as their mother the holie Church beleeues.

By this we may know what to iudge of the implicit faith of the Papiſts: for they account them beleeuers, who are ſenſleſſe and ignorant of that they beleeue, and are not able to vtter one word touching the knowledge of God, (for alas they know not what he is) in regard they openly proteſt that they beleeue as their mother the holy Church beleeues. But the Lord contents not himſelfe with ſuch abſurdities, but ioines faith with vnderſtanding, to teach vs that the one cannot be ſeparated from the other.

Moreouer, it is no faith, vnleſſe we beleeue in one God the Father of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, who ſpake by the Prophets and Apoſtles. Haue we not this God? Then is our faith but a fancie. Which that he may the better confirme touching that he ſaid before, I am the onely God; he addes in the ſecond place, that there is no other before him. The words Lo-noter, may indeede in another ſenſe be taken for a creature, or worke of God; for they ſignifie, There is none. But becauſe it ſeemes that this is conſtrained, I willingly agree to the vſuall expoſition, that There is no God formed before. In which there is a kinde of ironie: as if the Prophet ſhould haue ſaid; There is none other God but he, vnleſſe hee be forged by vnwiſe men. I trow then you will not compare them with the eternall God.

He addes, that there ſhall bee none after; becauſe himſelfe holds alwaies the intire and perfect ſoueraigntie, and is not changed by age or corruption. The ſumme is, that wee cannot ſay we haue faith indeed, till we come to reſt the ſame wholy in him: for thoſe which acknowledge a kind of diuinitie, and yet are ignorant what it is, are alway purſued with a trembling conſcience, and are wrapped in wonderfull ſnares. Let vs therefore ſtay our ſelues vpon that God which cannot indure any companion with him; or that the leaſt portion of his maieſtie ſhould be impaired; becauſe He onely is.

Verſ. 11. I, euen I am the Lord, and beſides me there is no Sauiour.

THe Lord triumphs heere as hauing gotten the victorie. In the former verſes he hath ſufficiently inſtructed vs touching the meanes whereby to come to his knowledge; and hath ſhewed that there is no other God but him. Now to confirme this doctrine hee breakes out into this exclamation; It is I, euen I, that am the Lord, and there is none beſides mee. And thus wee may ſee how dangerous a thing it is to forge a god according to our fantaſie: for wee haue no ſooner effected it, but behold, an Idoll in ſtead of God. Let not vs therefore accept of any thing but that which proceeds from him, leſt we runne out in this behalfe. Hath he manifeſted himſelfe vnto vs? It is good reaſon wee ſhould dailie profit, grow, and bee more and more confirmed in his knowledge. And this is the vſe wee ſhould make of this repetition, I, I am the Lord.

Yet I would not haue you thinke he ſpeaks heere of his eternall eſſence onely; but let vs know that his power and goodneſſe, which he fully manifeſts by cauſing vs to feele the ſame, are here cõprehended. And that is the reaſon why ỹ epithete of the only Sauiour is added; which is a mark whereby to ſeparate him from all his creatures. For the world deceiues it ſelfe in attributing vnto God a naked and bare title, and in the meane while tranſpores his dignitie ouer to the creatures. In the Papacie I grant there is mention made of God, but they ſtrip him of his honour; when one part thereof is giuen to Peter and Paul, and another to William and George: that is to ſay, when his offices are diuided into ſo many parts, that they leaue nothing to him but the bare title of God. They brag that they worſhip but one God: I wot well; but when wee come to ſpeake of his offices, they forge as many gods as there are creatures, and to them they diſtribute his authoritie and power. But the Lord will haue theſe things to remaine wholly and ſoly vnto him; neither can they be attributed to any other without committing horrible ſacriledge: for it is he onely that beſtowes all good things vpon men, and he onely defends and preſerues them.

Saint Peter, Paul, William, George.

The Papiſts leaue nothing to God but his bare title.

The latter member of the verſe then, expreſſeth that knowledge which proceedes from experience, that ſo we might ſeeke ſaluation in none but in him, who is the author of it. Whence we gather, that the principall part of Gods ſeruice conſiſts in faith; which is, when he is acknowledged to be the fountaine of life, when he is adorned with the title of Sauiour; as alſo when theſe things which he affirmes to be proper to him onely, and to dwell in him, be not transported ouer vnto others.

Vers. 12. I haue declared, and I haue saued; and I haue shewed when there was no strange god among you: therefore you are my witnesses, saith the Lord, that I am God.

THis verse is as it were a rehearsall of the former; for the Lord telles them againe that hee hath foretold things to come, and hath brought them to passe accordingly, thus; To declare, is, or may be referred to his foreknowledge: and, To saue; to his power and goodnesse. In a word, his meaning is, that he is the onely God who knowes and accomplisheth all things. Now howsoeuer this was spoken to the Iewes, yet wee are to know that it also appertaines vnto vs: for all the prophecies which remaine on record, ought to be so many lessons to teach vs the wisdome and power of God, that so wee may wholly rest vpon him. Now, that wee should abolish all superstitions, and suffer him to sit as our onely Doctor in his heauenly chaire; he tels vs againe, that hee hath shewed his power, and manifested the signes of his fauour, without any mans helpe: whence it followes, that those are too ingratefull and peruerse, which will not content themselues with him alone.

When there was no strange God among you (saith he) to worship, euen then did I openly discouer my power in the sight of the whole world. How dare you then attribute that to Idols, which belongs to me onely? And yet the Prophet doth not so much in this place commend the antiquitie of the peoples religion, as he labours to reiect all false succors. As if he should say; Seeing you haue knowne none but the true God, whose miracles haue been so wonderfull and apparant, you ought to be resolued, that there is no helpe but in him. Therewithall also the Prophet shewes, that our infidelitie hinders God from shewing his power in the midst of vs: let vs therefore abandon all errors, and all false opinions of God, if we will haue experience of his power; for if we turne aside after idolatries and superstitions, are wee not well worthy to feele the want of his power and goodnes?

In conclusion, he calles them witnesses, as accusing them of froward and cursed ingratitude, if they dissemble that goodnesse of his, which was so publikely manifested: for the more God shall haue declared his power by many visible testimonies, the more are wee bound to publish and make knowne the same vnto others.

Vers. 13. Yea, before the day was, I am; and there is none that can deliuer out of mine hand: and I will doe it, and who shall let?

HE speakes now of Gods eternitie; but we must still keepe in minde the Prophets drift. For he which had a beginning, is not of himselfe, neither can hee hold vnder his dominion, nor gouerne the things which hee created not. When the Lord therefore calles himselfe the eternall, it is to shew that the world was made by his hand, and that this goodly order of nature fell not out by chãce, but tooke the originall from his admirable wisdome and power: Gen. 1. 1.

He which had a beginning, is not of himselfe.

And therefore he addes in the next place, that none can deliuer out of his hand: which yet shewes vs more plainly, that by his eternitie wee may proue his soueraigne and infinite power. For were he not eternall, hee could neither retaine all things in his hands, neither could hee defend his people, nor serue his turne of the creatures according to his owne will. But because he is without beginning, it necessarilie followes, that all things be subiect to his disposition. Hereunto appertaines that which is added, that nothing can let him from doing that which hee hath once determined. All which, serued to teach the Iewes, that they should not stand amazed nor be discouraged, in regard of the force, furie, and multitude of their enemies.

Gods soueraignitie proued by his eternitie.
1
2
3

Vers. 14. Thus saith the Lord your redeemer, the holy one of Israel; For your sake I haue sent to Babel, and brought it downe: they are all fugitiues; and the Caldeans cry in the ships.

THe Prophet saith that Cyrus shall be as an hired souldier, which shall bestow his trauell in the Lords seruice, for the redemption of his people. I grant hee names not Cyrus, but hee speakes of the host which marched vnder his conduct, to subdue the Babylonians. We know this was brought about by Cyrus and Darius: but all of them were Gods executioners, who had foretold these things long before. He directs not his speech onely to those that saw the accomplishment of all these things, but also to all those whom the Lord meant to sustaine with this hope of deliuerance, which they could neuer haue dreamed of by any humane reason. For hee speakes to the captiues, who being oppressed vnder the cruell seruitude of the Caldeans, were left destitute of all meanes of comfort: in which respect these promises might seeme most fabulous, because in mans iudgement there was no hope that euer they should get out of this prison.

Cyrus.

Darius.

But we must giue this honor to Gods word, euen to beleeue that which otherwise is incredible, to the end wee may hope aboue hope: for such is the power of faith, that she stands not gazing vpon things externall, but fixeth her eies in the heauens, and pierceth thorough euen to the very throne of God.

Wee must giue this honour to Gods word, as to beleeue things incredible.

The vertue of faith.

Now there is great force in that which is added, for thy sake. For seeing pride, and an insatiable couetous desire to rule, pricked Cyrus forward to this action; and that there were many occasions for which this war was raised, a man would not haue thought that the whole world should thus haue bin shaken ken in the ouerthrow of this Monarchie, and that the poore Iewes the miserablest of all people vnder heauen, should by this meanes haue had a way made to returne home into their owne countrie. But God protests, that he will giue the Persians victorie, so as they shall easily conquer all the East, because he saues his Church.

For this cause he shewes in the first place, that it is he which is their redeemer, and the holy one, the better to perswade them that he held those whom he had chosen to be his peculiar people deare and pretious vnto him.

Obiect. Notwithstanding, this seemes contrarie to that which we haue seene before in the 33. Chapter, Woe to thee that robbest, when thou wast not robbed: the Lord meant by this that he would auenge himselfe vpon the cruelties of the Babylonians, and render them that measure which they had met out vnto others: now hee shewes that the Persians tooke armes by his commandement, that by meanes thereof he might worke his peoples

Ans. deliuerance. But these things may be easily reconciled, to wit, that the Lord had respect to his people euen then whilest he scourged the Chaldeans: for as his prouidence extends it selfe ouer the whole world in generall, so hath he a speciall care of his Church: and as he dearly loues his Saincts, so he turnes all things to their saluation. It is not without cause then that he saith he sent them to performe this worke by his free grace, because he meant thereby to procure the saluation of his Church. In the same sense he addes, that at his commandement hee brought them

Medes and Persians. downe: for albeit the Medes and Persians had another end, yet their iorney was gouerned by an heauenly instinct. And thus God meant to shew what loue he bare to his chosen people aforehand, lest they should haue fainted in their extreme anguishes and afflictions. This promise therefore was of great vse, in respect the poore captiues might from hence greatly comfort themselues that they were beloued of God, although all the world besides contemned, hated, and reiected them as the offscouring of all things, seeing they saw that God in the end was minded to succor them, and for their sakes to destroy the Monarchie of the Babylonians.

Where he saith, they shall flee, it is to shew that God shall so prosper the affaires of Cyrus, that the Chaldeans shall be astonished at his arriuall, and shal throw downe their armes to take them to their heeles: for it often falles out, euen to some mightie Prince, well appointed with all furniture to enterprise war, in which notwithstanding the issue shall be wofull. It was not enough then that Cyrus was sent with a great armie, vnlesse therewithall his enterprises had succeeded well.

And that he might further set forth their hastie flight, he addes, there shall be a crie, or tumult in the Ships, for they could not flee by land. True it is they had a riuer fit for the Euphrates. Tigris. purpose, to wit Euphrates, which met with the riuer Tigris, by reason whereof they had meanes to escape: but they were disappointed of their purpose in this behalfe, in regard the riuer was drawne drie.

Vers. 15. I am the Lord, your holy one, the Creator of Israel, your King.

THis verse conteines in it only a description of him that speakes: first, shewing how great his power & maiestie is: secondly, with what affection he entertaines his elect, and all to the end the promises before mentioned might haue the greater waight. I call this verse therefore a scale to the former sentence, as if the people should haue said, We heare much spoken of God, and of his promises; but I pray you what is this God? The Prophet answers, Euen he that is your holy one, the creator of Israel, and your king.

He is called holy one, because he called and separated a people to consecrate them vnto himselfe. By this title then he puts them in minde of their adoption, wherein he ioined himselfe vnto them by a speciall band, to assure them for the time to come that he would be their Father and Sauiour. In which sense wee at this day ought to acknowledge that God is our holy one, in that he hath put vs apart to be members of his Church, whereof he hath assured vs, by our vocation and calling.

The title Creator is not to be referred to the generall creation of all things: for so he is also the Creator of the wicked: but to reformation, in which respect we are called his workmanship, Ephes. 2. 10.

In that he addes your king, it might seeme somewhat strange: for what appearance was there of a kingdome among the Iewes now? Were they not loaden with reproches and contumelies, because they were left destitute of all succor? Yet faith was to breake thorow all these obstacles: in this title therefore the Prophet gaue them hope that the kingdome should againe be restored, howsoeuer to the eies of flesh and blood it lay now in the dust, yea vtterly extinct; notwithstanding all this, they were to hold God for their Soueraigne and King still.

This verse a scale to the former sentence.

1
2
3
Holy one.
God our Holie one now.
Creator.
1
2
King.

Vers. 16. Thus saith the Lord which maketh a way in the sea, and a path in the mightie waters.

HE once againe comes to confirme that which otherwise seemed incredible: and that this confirmation might haue the greater authoritie, he takes vnto him the person of God. Now he puts them in mind of former benefits, to teach them, that as they had found him an Almightie Sauiour before, so they should assure themselues that he would be no lesse powerfull and gracious vnto them for the time to come: neither lesse able nor willing to worke their deliuerance. As if hee should say, The Lord who speakes will certainly shew the greatnes of his power by the effects: of which as your forefathers haue had experience, so his meaning is to giue you no lesse triall of it then they had. Are we not too vnthankfull then if by former benefits receiued, we be not drawne to hope in him for hereafter? but God alwaies the same.

1
2
Vnthankfulnes.

especiallie

especially when hee hath showne so certaine and so excellent testimonies of his continuall care ouer vs.

Israel deliuered out of Egypt, to the end they should neuer forget it.

Hee brought Israel out of Egypt, vpon condition they should neuer forget such a deliuerance: Exod.13.9. The Prophet now sets the same God before their eies, shewing that nothing could withstand him, which by his power hee ouercame not, when he tooke his peoples saluatiõ in hand. For then he made a way for them in the sea, Exod.14.21. and guided them thorow the tempestuous & mightie waters; to wit, thorow the riuer Iordan, which he dried vp, though it was very boisterous: Ios.3.16. Now hee expresly names these two admirable miracles, because they might imagin that all passage was shut vp against them, in regard of their returne into Iudea: and that all these promises therefore were but fables.

Vers.17. When hee bringeth out the chariot and horse, the armie and the power lie together, and shall not rise: they are extinct and quenched as towe.

NOw he shewes that neither munition, nor strength can resist God, or hinder him from deliuering his people when hee thinks good, no more then the sea was able to let him from sauing them: but hee diuided the same, and drowned their enemies with their chariots and horses therein. See here then an amplification of the former verse: as if he should say; Be it that the whole world haue conspired your destruction, and would hinder mee from working your deliuerance; shall it not be in vaine? For when I list, I will not onely find out a passage for you in the midst of bottomlesse gulphes, but I will also scatter and ouerthrow all force and power of your enemies: yea, I will so dash them in sunder, that they shall neuer be able to arise. It may be he that hath lost one victorie, will gather his forces afresh together the second time, and win that he lost before: but the Lord in this place promiseth a perpetuall victorie; shewing that their enemies shall bee so discomfited, that they shall be vtterly extinct. Which sudden destruction he further expresseth by the similitude of towe: when fire is put to towe, it may well make a blaze for a while, but forthwith it is consumed and gone.

*Or, Forget ye the, &c.

Vers.18. Remember ye not the former things? neither regard yee the things of old?*

This verse must bee vnderstood by way of comparison.

THe Prophet hitherunto hath shewed at large how mightie the Lord is to saue his people: now hee saith that all the miracles which were wrought in the first redemption, were nothing in comparison of those that should be effected hereafter: that is to say; the glory of this second deliuerance should be so rare & excellent, that it should darken the first: not as if the Iewes were to forget so great a benefit; for the memorie thereof worthily deserued to be celebrated from age to age, euen to the worlds end: and as the Lord had commanded, was to stand vpon perpetuall record. For in the preface of the Law, Exod.20.2. thus he speakes; I am the Lord thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. He also commanded the fathers to be often recording of it to their children, and to continue the remembrance of it to their successors. This therefore must be taken by way of comparison: as in Ieremiah; Behold the daies come, saith the Lord, that they shall say no more, The Lord which brought the children out of Egypt: but the Lord liues, which hath brought the posteritie of Iacob out of the land of the North, and out of all the coasts of the earth, whereinto he hath scattered them: Ier.23.7. The summe is, that the last deliuerance shall be far more glorious then the first, if the one be compared with the other. Whence it followes, that this prophecie is not to be referred to a few yeeres; because the Prophet extols not here the beginnings of their deliuerance onely; but extends the fruit of this returne euen vnto Christ, at whose comming both the kingdome and priesthood were reallie established.

Vers.19. Behold, I doe a new thing; now shall it come forth: shall you not know it? I will euen make a way in the desert, and floods in the wildernesse.

BY this wee may yet better perceiue what the Prophets drift was in the former verse. For heere he saith, there shall be a new worke: that is, no common or ordinary, but such a one as by the excellencie and greatnesse of it, shall darken the fame of all the rest, no lesse then the Sunne when it shineth in his might, darkens all the starres in the firmament. In that hee saith, it shall now come forth; the meaning is, it shall not be long deferred. I grant these things were not by and by accomplished; but when wee haue respect vnto him that speakes, foure hundred, nay a thousand yeeres in his sight, are but as yesterday. Thus hee comforts them, because hee would not that their seuentie yeeres captiuitie should discourage them.

A new work is heere opposed to that which is cõmon and ordinarie: See Chap.42. 10.

When he addes, shall you not know it? This interrogation hath more force and vehemencie in it then a simple affirmation. And this manner of speech is much vsed both among the Hebrewes, and also among Greeks and Latines.

The interrogation hath more force in it then a bare affirmation.

Further, he promiseth to make a way in the desert, wherein he hath respect to that desert which was betweene Babylon and Iudea: for here he speakes of the peoples returne home. And for that cause also hee mentions the floods: for they might well haue perished for thirst, in trauelling thorow a place so barren and waste. Therefore the Lord promiseth to prouide them of water for their iourney: as if he should say; Feare not for want of necessaries, for I wil furnish you sufficiently; so as you shall returne vnder my conduct and leading.

The desert betweene Babylon and Iudea.

But it ſeemes the Prophet paſſeth his bounds, when he magnifies this deliuerance in ſuch exceſſiue ſpeeches. For we reade not that the riuers were heere turned into blood, nor that a groſſe and palpable darkneſſe troubled the aire, or that the firſt borne were ſlaine, or that any vermin were ſent to deuoure the fruits of the earth; neither any of the like wonders which came to paſſe in Egypt: none of theſe happened, as wee know in Babylon. What meanes hee then by this new deliuerance? This hath cauſed almoſt all the writers that are Chriſtians, to expound this place ſimply of Chriſts comming: wherein no doubt they haue been deceiued no leſſe then the Iewes, who onely reſtraine this to the deliuerance out of Babell. And therefore as I haue ſaid in another place, wee muſt heere comprehend the whole time that paſſed betweene the deliuerance out of Babylon, vntill the comming of Chriſt. The redemption out of Egypt may bee compared to the firſt birth of the Church; becauſe the people were then gathered into a body, and the Church was eſtabliſhed, which before was without forme: yet this redemption ended not at the peoples comming forth of Egypt, but continued till they were poſſeſſed of the land of Canaan, which was giuen them after the Kings were driuen thence. The like may bee ſaid of this birth by which the Iewes were brought out of Babylon, and reſtored home into their owne Country: for this reſtauration muſt not bee reſtrained to their going out of Babylon onely, but it ſtretcheth it ſelfe vnto the comming of Chriſt; during which ſpace of time, there came great and wonderfull things to paſſe indeed.

The Churches redemption out of Egypt, may be compared to her firſt birth.

1 Was it not an admirable thing that a ſort of poore captiues, contemned of all as miſerable abiects and ſlaues; yea held and eſteemed as deteſtable as the diſeaſe of the peſtilence, ſhould notwithſtanding bee reſtored and ſent home into their Country by infidell Kings? Beſides, that they ſhould be furniſhed 2 with all things fit for their iourney, and order taken for their affaires: as alſo for the building of the Citie, and reſtoring of the 3 Temple? But yet behold wonders much greater then theſe, which came to paſſe afterwards; when there were but a few of the people which would returne backe againe, and the moſt were ſo diſcouraged, that they preferred ſo miſerable a ſeruitude before ſo bleſſed and happy a freedome. When a ſmall handfull (I ſay) of them then returned into Iudeah, in reſpect of that great multitude which was led into captiuitie, yet fell there out greater lets and hinderances. For were there not conſpiracies, new hatreds & grudgings raiſed vp againſt this people, who were in too much contempt and diſgrace already? Did not the worke ceaſe, and was not all meanes procured to hinder the finiſhing of 1 it? In which reſpect they might well haue 2 thought that the Lord had brought them out in vaine, ſeeing they were now expoſed to greater dangers then euer they were before. After the Temple was built, things ſucceeded no whit better; for they were inuiro- 3 ned on all ſides with mightie aduerſaries, who hated them moſt deadly, and vexed them without ceaſing. Afterwards they were viſited with ſundry afflictions and perſecutions; ſo as it might ſeeme they were as good as ouerwhelmed and rooted out by them. Yet notwithſtanding God ceaſed not ſtill miraculouſly to preſerue them euen in the midſt of fire and ſword. If we conſider their poore and miſerable eſtate, and the ſore trials they were put to by tyrants, wee may well admire how any one of them eſcaped. 4

See Exod. 14. 11. 12.

What impediments happened to the Iewes in their returne.

That we may the better vnderſtand then how wonderfull this deliuerance was, and in what ſort it ſurpaſſed the firſt, wee muſt haue an eye to the hiſtories of things begun and continued vntill Chriſts comming; who then added infinite graces and benefits to the former: for doubtleſſe the ſecond deliuerance was greater then the firſt.

To vnderſtand this laſt deliuerance of the Church aright, we muſt looke to the hiſtories of things begun and continued till Chriſts comming. The Prophets ſtill kept their eye vpon Chriſt.

Neither is this any conſtrained expoſition, but it agrees with the maners of ſpeech vſed among the Prophets: for they haue alwaies reſpect vnto the Meſſiah, and inceſſantly did they fix their eies vpon him. The Prophet Haggai therefore will giue vs much light for the vnderſtanding of this place. For he ſhews, that when the Temple was built, the olde men which had ſeene the excellencie of the firſt, wept, ſaying, that this latter was nothing in cõpariſon of the former: and hardly could they be perſwaded but that God had vtterly forſaken them, and that his promiſes were of none effect. But Haggai to comfort them, and to ſhew that the glory of the ſecond Temple ſhall far ſurpaſſe the firſt, albeit the outward forme of it were leſſe beautifull, brings them forthwith to the Redeemer, ſaying on this manner: Thus ſaith the Lord of hoſtes; Yet a little while, and I will ſhake the heauens and the earth, and the ſea, and the dry land, and all nations: the deſire of all nations ſhall come; and I will fill this houſe with glory, ſaith the Lord of hoſtes. The gold and ſiluer is mine, ſaith the Lord of hoſtes: the glorie of this houſe ſhall bee greater then the firſt: Haggai 2.7. As Haggai then continues the reſtauration of the Temple till Chriſts comming, to which he refers the true glory of it: ſo this deliuerance out of Babylon held on the courſe thereof till Chriſt; for theſe things are conioined together, or rather haue affinitie one with another; ſo as it is no maruell though he ſay, it did euery way ſurpaſſe that deliuerance out of Egypt.

Verſ. 20. The wild beaſts ſhall honour me, the Dragons and the Oſtriches; becauſe I gaue water in the deſert, and floods in the wilderneſſe to giue drinke to my people, euen to mine elect.

HE adornes the former ſentence; for all things ſtanding in this confuſed maner, it was needfull to ſet out Gods power in the higheſt termes that might be, that at leaſt the word might ſupplie that which ſeemed to be wanting in effect. His meaning is then, that Gods hand ſhall be ſo ſenſible felt and perceiued he affirmes to be proper to him onely, and to dwell in him, be not transported ouer vnto others.

Verſ. 12. I haue declared, and I haue ſaued; and I haue ſhewed when there was no ſtrange god among you: therefore you are my witneſſes, ſaith the Lord, that I am God.

THis verſe is as it were a rehearſall of the former; for the Lord telles them againe that hee hath foretold things to come, and hath brought them to paſſe accordingly, thus; To declare, is, or may be referred to his 1 foreknowledge: and, To ſaue; to his 2 power and goodneſſe. In a word, his meaning is, that he is the onely God who knowes and accompliſheth all things. Now howſoeuer this was ſpoken to the Iewes, yet wee are to know that it alſo appertaines vnto vs: for all the prophecies which remaine on record, ought to be ſo many leſſons to teach vs the wiſdome and power of God, that ſo wee may wholly reſt vpon him. Now, that wee ſhould abolith all ſuperſtitions, and ſuffer him to ſit as our onely Doctor in his heauenly chaire; he tels vs againe, that hee hath ſhewed his power, and manifeſted the ſignes of his fauour, without any mans helpe: whence it followes, that thoſe are too ingratefull and peruerſe, which will not content themſelues with him alone.

When there was no ſtrange God among you (ſaith he) to worſhip, euen then did I openly diſcouer my power in the ſight of the whole world. How dare you then attribute that to Idols, which belongs to me onely? And yet the Prophet doth not ſo much in this place commend the antiquitie of the peoples religion, as he labours to reiect all falſe ſuccors. As if he ſhould ſay; Seeing you haue knowne none but the true God, whoſe miracles haue been ſo wonderfull and apparant, you ought to be reſolued, that there is no helpe but in him. Therewithall alſo the Prophet ſhewes, that our infidelitie hinders God from ſhewing his power in the midſt of vs: let vs therefore abandon all errors, and all falſe opinions of God, if we will haue experience of his power; for if we turne aſide after idolatries and ſuperſtitions, are wee not well worthy to feele the want of his power and goodnes?

In concluſion, he calles them witneſſes, as accuſing them of froward and curſed ingratitude, if they diſſemble that goodneſſe of his, which was ſo publikely manifeſted: for the more God ſhall haue declared his power by many viſible teſtimonies, the more are wee bound to publiſh and make knowne the ſame vnto others.

Verſ. 13. Yea, before the day was, I am; and there is none that can deliuer out of mine hand: and I will doe it, and who ſhall let?

HE ſpeakes now of Gods eternitie; but we muſt ſtill keepe in minde the Prophets drift. For he which had a beginning, is not of himſelfe, neither can hee hold vnder his dominion, nor gouerne the things which hee created not. When the Lord therefore calles himſelfe the eternall, it is to ſhew that the world was made by his hand, and that this goodly order of nature fell not out by chãce, but tooke the originall from his admirable wiſdome and power: Gen. 1. 1. He which had a beginning, is not of himſelfe.

And therefore he addes in the next place, that none can deliuer out of his hand: which yet ſhewes vs more plainly, that by his eternitie wee may proue his ſoueraigne and infinite power. For were he not eternall, hee could neither retaine all things in his hands, neither could hee defend his people, nor ſerue his turne of the creatures according to his owne will. But becauſe he is without beginning, it neceſſarilie followes, that all things be ſubiect to his diſpoſition. Heereunto appertaines that which is added, that nothing can let him from doing that which hee hath once determined. All which, ſerued to teach the Iewes, that they ſhould not ſtand amazed nor be diſcouraged, in regard of the force, furie, and multitude of their enemies. Gods ſoueraignie proued by his eternitie. 1 2 3

Verſ. 14. Thus ſaith the Lord your redeemer, the holy one of Iſrael; For your ſake I haue ſent to Babel, and brought it downe: they are all fugitiues; and the Caldeans cry in the ſhips.

THe Prophet ſaith that Cyrus ſhall be as an hired ſouldier, which ſhall beſtow his trauell in the Lords ſeruice, for the redemption of his people. I grant hee names not Cyrus, but hee ſpeakes of the hoſt which marched vnder his conduct, to ſubdue the Babylonians. We know this was brought about by Cyrus and Darius: but all of them were Gods executioners, who had foretold theſe things long before. He directs not his ſpeech onely to thoſe that ſaw the accompliſhment of all theſe things, but alſo to all thoſe whom the Lord meant to ſuſtaine with this hope of deliuerance, which they could neuer haue dreamed of by any humane reaſon. For hee ſpeakes to the captiues, who being oppreſſed vnder the cruell ſeruitude of the Caldeans, were left deſtitute of all meanes of comfort: in which reſpect theſe promiſes might ſeeme moſt fabulous, becauſe in mans iudgement there was no hope that euer they ſhould get out of this priſon. Cyrus. Darius.

But we muſt giue this honor to Gods word, euen to beleeue that which otherwiſe is incredible, to the end wee may hope aboue hope: for ſuch is the power of faith, that ſhe ſtands not gazing vpon things externall, but fixeth her eies in the heauens, and pierceth thorough euen to the very throne of God. Wee muſt giue this honour to Gods word, as to beleeue things incredible. The vertue of faith.

Now there is great force in that which is added, for thy ſake. For ſeeing pride, and an inſatiable couetous deſire to rule, pricked Cyrus forward to this action; and that there were many occaſions for which this war was raiſed, a man would not haue thought that the whole world ſhould thus haue bin ſhaken in the ouerthrow of this Monarchie, and that the poore Iewes the miſerableſt of all people vnder heauen, ſhould by this meanes haue had a way made to returne home into their owne countrie. But God proteſts, that he will giue the Perſians victorie, ſo as they ſhall eaſily conquer all the Eaſt, becauſe he fauors his Church.

ken

For this cauſe he ſhewes in the firſt place, that it is he which is their redeemer, and the holy one, the better to perſwade them that he held thoſe whom he had choſen to be his peculiar people deare and pretious vnto him.

Obiect. Notwithſtanding, this ſeemes contrarie to that which we haue ſeene before in the 33. Chapter, Woe to thee that robbeſt, when thou waſt not robbed: the Lord meant by this that he would auenge himſelfe vpon the crueltie of the Babylonians, and render them that meaſure which they had met out vnto others: now hee ſhewes that the Perſians tooke armes by his commandement, that by meanes thereof he might worke his peoples

Anſ. deliuerance. But theſe things may be eaſily reconciled, to wit, that the Lord had reſpect to his people euen then whileſt he ſcourged the Chaldeans: for as his prouidence extends it ſelfe ouer the whole world in generall, ſo hath he a ſpeciall care of his Church: and as he dearly loues his Saincts, ſo he turnes all things to their ſaluation. It is not without cauſe then that he ſaith he ſends them to performe this worke by his free grace, becauſe he meant thereby to procure the ſaluation of his Church. In the ſame ſenſe he addes, that at his commandement hee brought them

Medes and Perſians. downe: for albeit the Medes and Perſians had another end, yet their iorney was gouerned by an heauenly inſtinct. And thus God meant to ſhew what loue he bare to his choſen people aforehand, leſt they ſhould haue fainted in their extreme anguiſhes and afflictions. This promiſe therefore was of great vſe, in reſpect the poore captiues might from hence greatly comfort themſelues that they were beloued of God, although all the world beſides contemned, hated, and reiected them as the offcouring of all things, ſeeing they ſaw that God in the end was minded to ſuccor them, and for their ſakes to deſtroy the Monarchie of the Babylonians.

Where he ſaith, they ſhall flee, it is to ſhew that God ſhall ſo proſper the affaires of Cyrus, that the Chaldeans ſhall be aſtoniſhed at his arriuall, and ſhal throw downe their armes to take them to their heeles: for it often falles out, euen to ſome mightie Prince, well appointed with all furniture to enterpriſe war, in which notwithſtanding the iſſue ſhall be wofull. It was not enough then that Cyrus was ſent with a great armie, vnleſſe therewithall his enterpriſes had ſucceeded well.

And that he might further ſet forth their haſtie flight, he addes, there ſhall be a crie, or tumult in the Ships, for they could not flee by land. True it is they had a riuer fit for the Euphrates. Tigris. purpoſe, to wit Euphrates, which met with the riuer Tigris, by reaſon whereof they had meanes to eſcape: but they were diſappointed of their purpoſe in this behalfe, in regard the riuer was drawne drie.

Verſ. 15. I am the Lord, your holy one, the Creator of Iſrael, your King.

THis verſe conteines in it only a deſcription of him that ſpeakes: firſt, ſhewing how great his power & maieſtie is: ſecondly, with what affection he entertaines his elect, and all to the end the promiſes before mentioned might haue the greater waight. I call this verſe therefore a ſeale to the former ſentence, as if the people ſhould haue ſaid, We heare much ſpoken of God, and of his promiſes; but I pray you what is this God? The Prophet anſwers, Euen he that is your holy one, the creator of Iſrael, and your king.

This verſe a ſeale to the former ſentence. 1 2 3

He is called holy one, becauſe he culled and ſeparated a people to conſecrate them vnto himſelfe. By this title then he puts them in minde of their adoption, wherein he ioined himſelfe vnto them by a ſpeciall band, to aſſure them for the time to come that he would be their Father and Sauiour. In which ſenſe wee at this day ought to acknowledge that God is our holy one, in that he hath put vs apart to be members of his Church, whereof he hath aſſured vs, by our vocation and calling.

Holy one. God but Holie one now.

The title Creator is not to be referred to the generall creation of all things: for ſo he is alſo the Creator of the wicked: but to reformation, in which reſpect we are called his workmanſhip, Epheſ. 2. 10.

Creator. 1 2

In that he addes your king, it might ſeeme ſomewhat ſtrange: for what appearance was there of a kingdome among the Iewes now? Were they not loaden with reproches and contumelies, becauſe they were left deſtitute of all ſuccor? Yet faith was to breake thorow all theſe obſtacles: in this title therefore the Prophet gaue them hope that the kingdome ſhould againe be reſtored, howſoeuer to the eies of fleſh and blood it lay now in the duſt, yea vtterly extinct; notwithſtanding all this, they were to hold God for their Soueraigne and King ſtill.

King.

Verſ. 16. Thus ſaith the Lord which maketh a way in the ſea, and a path in the mightie waters.

HE once againe comes to confirme that which otherwiſe ſeemed incredible: and that this confirmation might haue the greater authoritie, he takes vnto him the perſon of God. Now he puts them in mind of former benefits, to teach them, that as they had found him an Almightie Sauiour before, ſo they ſhould aſſure themſelues that he would be no leſſe powerfull and gracious vnto them for the time to come: neither leſſe able nor willing to worke their deliuerance. As if hee ſhould ſay, The Lord who ſpeakes will certainly ſhew the greatnes of his power by the effects: of which as your forefathers haue had experience, ſo his meaning is to giue you no leſſe vſe of it then they had. Are we not too vnthankfull then if by former benefits receiued, we be not drawne to hope in him for hereafter? but

God alwaies the ſame. 1 2

Vnthankfulnes.

especiallie

especially when hee hath showne so certaine and so excellent testimonies of his continuall care ouer vs.

Israel deliuered out of Egypt, to the end they should neuer forget it.

Hee brought Israel out of Egypt, vpon condition they should neuer forget such a deliuerance: Exod.13.9. The Prophet now sets the same God before their eies, shewing that nothing could withstand him, which by his power hee ouercame not, when he tooke his peoples saluatiō in hand. For then he made a way for them in the sea, Exod.14.21. and guided them thorow the tempestuous & mightie waters; to wit, thorow the riuer Iordan, which he dried vp, though it was very boisterous: Ios.3.16. Now hee expresly names these two admirable miracles, because they might imagin that all passage was shut vp against them, in regard of their returne into Iudea: and that all these promises therefore were but fables.

Vers.17. When hee bringeth out the chariot and horse, the armie and the power lie together, and shall not rise: they are extinct and quenched as towe.

NOw he shewes that neither munition, nor strength can resist God, or hinder him from deliuering his people when hee thinks good, no more then the sea was able to let him from sauing them: but hee diuided the same, and drowned their enemies with their chariots and horses therein. See here then an amplification of the former verse: as if he should say; Be it that the whole world haue conspired your destruction, and would hinder mee from working your deliuerance; shall it not be in vaine? For when I list, I will not onely find out a passage for you in the midst of bottomlesse gulphes, but I will also scatter and ouerthrow all force and power of your enemies: yea, I will so dash them in sunder, that they shall neuer be able to arise. It may be he that hath lost one victorie, will gather his forces afresh together the second time, and win that he lost before: but the Lord in this place promiseth a perpetuall victorie; shewing that their enemies shall bee so discomfited, that they shall be vtterly extinct. Which sudden destruction he further expresseth by the similitude of towe: when fire is put to towe, it may well make a blaze for a while, but forthwith it is consumed and gone.

*Or, Forget ye the, &c.

Vers.18. Remember ye not the former things? neither regard yee the things of old?*

This verse must bee vnderstood by way of comparison.

THe Prophet hitherunto hath shewed at large how mightie the Lord is to saue his people: now hee saith that all the miracles which were wrought in the first redemption, were nothing in comparison of those that should be effected heereafter: that is to say; the glory of this second deliuerance should be so rare & excellent, that it should darken the first: not as if the Iewes were to forget so great a benefit; for the memorie thereof worthily deserued to be celebrated from age to age, euen to the worlds end: and as the Lord had commanded, was to stand vpon perpetuall record. For in the preface of the Law, Exod.20.2. thus he speakes; I am the Lord thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. He also commanded the fathers to be often recording of it to their children, and to continue the remembrance of it to their successors. This therefore must be taken by way of comparison: as in Ieremiah; Behold the daies come, saith the Lord, that they shall say no more, The Lord which brought the children out of Egypt: but the Lord liues, which hath brought the posteritie of Iacob out of the land of the North, and out of all the coasts of the earth, whereinto he hath scattered them: Ier.23.7. The summe is, that the last deliuerance shall be far more glorious then the first, if the one be compared with the other. Whence it followes, that this prophecie is not to be referred to a few yeeres; because the Prophet extols not here the beginnings of their deliuerance onely; but extends the fruit of this returne euen vnto Christ, at whose comming both the kingdome and priesthood were reallie established.

Vers.19. Behold, I doe a new thing; now shall it come forth: shall you not know it? I will euen make a way in the desert, and floods in the wildernesse.

BY this wee may yet better perceiue what the Prophets drift was in the former verse. For heere he saith, there shall be a new worke: that is, no common or ordinary, but such a one as by the excellencie and greatnesse of it, shall darken the fame of all the rest, no lesse then the Sunne when it shineth in his might, darkens all the starres in the firmament. In that hee saith, it shall now come forth; the meaning is, it shall not be long deferred. I grant these things were not by and by accomplished; but when wee haue respect vnto him that speakes, foure hundred, nay a thousand yeeres in his sight, are but as yesterday. Thus hee comforts them, because hee would not that their seuentie yeeres captiuitie should discourage them.

A new work is heere opposed to that which is cōmon and ordinarie: See Chap.42. 10.

When he addes, shall you not know it? This interrogation hath more force and vehemencie in it then a simple affirmation. And this manner of speech is much vsed both among the Hebrewes, and also among Greeks and Latines.

The interrogation hath more force in it then a bare affirmation.

Further, he promiseth to make a way in the desert, wherein he hath respect to that desert which was betweene Babylon and Iudea: for here he speakes of the peoples returne home. And for that cause also hee mentions the floods: for they might well haue perished for thirst, in trauelling thorow a place so barren and waste. Therefore the Lord promiseth to prouide them of water for their iourney: as if he should say; Feare not for want of necessaries, for I wil furnish you sufficiently; so as you shall returne vnder my conduct and leading.

The desert betweene Babylon and Iudea.

But it ſeemes the Prophet paſſeth his bounds, when he magnifies this deliuerance in ſuch exceſſiue ſpeeches. For we reade not that the riuers were heere turned into blood, nor that a groſſe and palpable darkneſſe troubled the aire, or that the firſt borne were ſlaine, or that any vermin were ſent to deuoure the fruits of the earth; neither any of the like wonders which came to paſſe in Egypt: none of theſe happened, as wee know in Babylon. What meanes hee then by this new deliuerance? This hath cauſed almoſt all the writers that are Chriſtians, to expound this place ſimply of Chriſts comming: wherein no doubt they haue been deceiued no leſſe then the Iewes, who onely reſtraine this to the deliuerance out of Babell. And therefore as I haue ſaid in another place, wee muſt heere comprehend the whole time that paſſed betweene the deliuerance out of Babylon, vntill the comming of Chriſt. The redemption out of Egypt may bee compared to the firſt birth of the Church; becauſe the people were then gathered into a body, and the Church was eſtabliſhed, which before was without forme: yet this redemption ended not at the peoples comming forth of Egypt, but continued till they were poſſeſſed of the land of Canaan, which was giuen them after the Kings were driuen thence. The like may bee ſaid of this birth by which the Iewes were brought out of Babylon, and reſtored home into their owne Country: for this reſtauration muſt not bee reſtrained to their going out of Babylon onely, but it ſtretcheth it ſelfe vnto the comming of Chriſt; during which ſpace of time, there came great and wonderfull things to paſſe indeed.

The Churches redemption out of Egypt, may be compared to her firſt birth.

1 Was it not an admirable thing that a ſort of poore captiues, contemned of all as miſerable abiects and ſlaues; yea held and eſteemed as deteſtable as the diſeaſe of the peſtilence, ſhould notwithſtanding bee reſtored and ſent home into their Country by infidell Kings? Beſides, that they ſhould be furniſhed

2 with all things fit for their iourney, and order taken for their affaires: as alſo for the building of the Citie, and reſtoring of the Temple? But yet behold wonders much greater then theſe, which came to paſſe afterwards; when there were but a few of the people which would returne backe againe,

3 and the moſt were ſo diſcouraged, that they preferred ſo miſerable a ſeruitude before ſo bleſſed and happy a freedome. When a ſmall handfull (I ſay) of them then returned into Iudeah, in reſpect of that great multitude which was led into captiuitie, yet fell there out greater lets and hinderances. For were there not conſpiracies, new hatreds & grudgings raiſed vp againſt this people, who were in too much contempt and diſgrace already? Did not the worke ceaſe, and was not all meanes procured to hinder the finiſhing of it? In which reſpect they might well haue thought that the Lord had brought them out in vaine, ſeeing they were now expoſed to greater dangers then euer they were before. After the Temple was built, things ſucceeded no whit better; for they were inuironed on all ſides with mightie aduerſaries, who hated them moſt deadly, and vexed them without ceaſing. Afterwards they were viſited with ſundry afflictions and perſecutions; ſo as it might ſeeme they were as good as ouerwhelmed and rooted out by them. Yet notwithſtanding God ceaſed not ſtill miraculouſly to preſerue them euen in the midſt of fire and ſword. If we conſider their poore and miſerable eſtate, and the ſore trials they were put to by tyrants, wee may well admire how any one of them eſcaped.

See Exod. 14. 11. 12.

What impediments happened to the Iewes in their returne.

1

2

3

4

That we may the better vnderſtand then how wonderfull this deliuerance was, and in what ſort it ſurpaſſed the firſt, wee muſt haue an eye to the hiſtories of things begun and continued vntill Chriſts comming; who then added infinite graces and benefits to the former: for doubtleſſe the ſecond deliuerance was greater then the firſt.

To vnderſtand this laſt deliuerance of the Church aright, we muſt looke to the hiſtories of things begun and continued till Chriſts comming. The Prophets ſtill kept their eye vpon Chriſt.

Neither is this any conſtrained expoſition, but it agrees with the maners of ſpeech vſed among the Prophets: for they haue alwaies reſpect vnto the Meſſiah, and inceſſantly did they fix their eies vpon him. The Prophet Haggai therefore will giue vs much light for the vnderſtanding of this place. For he ſhews, that when the Temple was built, the olde men which had ſeene the excellencie of the firſt, wept, ſaying, that this latter was nothing in cõpariſon of the former: and hardly could they be perſwaded but that God had vtterly forſaken them, and that his promiſes were of none effect. But Haggai to comfort them, and to ſhew that the glory of the ſecond Temple ſhall far ſurpaſſe the firſt, albeit the outward forme of it were leſſe beautifull, brings them forthwith to the Redeemer, ſaying on this manner: Thus ſaith the Lord of hoſtes; Yet a little while, and I will ſhake the heauens and the earth, and the ſea, and the dry land, and all nations: the deſire of all nations ſhall come; and I will fill this houſe with glory, ſaith the Lord of hoſtes. The gold and ſiluer is mine, ſaith the Lord of hoſtes: the glorie of this houſe ſhall bee greater then the firſt: Haggai 2.7. As Haggai then continues the reſtauration of the Temple till Chriſts comming, to which he refers the true glory of it: ſo this deliuerance out of Babylon held on the courſe thereof till Chriſt; for theſe things are conioined together, or rather haue affinitie one with another; ſo as it is no maruell though he ſay, it did euery way ſurpaſſe that deliuerance out of Egypt.

Verſ. 20. The wild beaſts ſhall honour me, the Dragons and the Oſtriches; becauſe I gaue water in the deſert, and floods in the wilderneſſe to giue drinke to my people, euen to mine elect.

HE adornes the former ſentence; for all things ſtanding in this confuſed maner, it was needfull to ſet out Gods power in the higheſt termes that might be, that at leaſt the word might ſupplie that which ſeemed to be wanting in effect. His meaning is then, that Gods hand ſhall be ſo ſenſiblie felt and perceiued ceiued in this worke, that not only men but vvild beasts also should be touched with a sense of it, so as they should yeeld a kind of honour and thanks vnto God. This prophesie therefore answers to Psal 114.3.4. where it is said, That the sea saw it and fled, Iordan went back; the mountaines skipped like sheepe; and the little hilles as lambs: the earth trembled at the presence of the God of Iaakob.

Isaiah attributes heere the same feelings to the brute beasts, in regard that by a secret instinct they should be constreined to giue place, that the people might passe with more securitie. And yet the reason hereof hath a larger extent, to wit, that they shall stand amazed at the beholding of so many miracles. To be short, God shewes, that he will not leaue his people destitute of necessarie foode that they should be inforced to returne back through want: for by this excessiue kind of speech, he expresseth the incomprehensible loue of God towards the Iewes, that by the power of their hope they might mount aboue all present obstacles.

The vse. Now when we heare of these things, let vs not measure his power (in our distresses) according to the order of nature: but by faith let vs fix our eies aboue all things visible and comprehensible.

Moreouer, lest these poore banished orphanes should lose all hope of Gods euerlasting fauor in seeing themselues thus reiected and despised of all: Isaiah brings them to the remembrance of their adoption, as if he should say, Thinke not but ỹ you remain the people of God still, notwithstanding this your horrible scattering: for he who hath once elected you neuer changeth his counsell. As oft then as we stand in neede of incouragement to hope well, let vs remember the calling of God: for albeit we feele our owne vnworthines, yet it ought to suffice that the Lord hath vouchsafed vs this honor, to make vs his people.

My people, mine elect.

We must in temptation oppose our vocation against our vnworthines.

Vers. 21. This people haue I formed for my selfe: they shall shew forth my praise.

THe Prophets meaning is, that the Lord must needs performe that which he spake before, because it concernes his owne glorie to deliuer the people which he hath chosen to himselfe. This appertained therefore very much to the consolation of the Iewes, as if he should say, Do ye thinke I will suffer my glory to fall to the ground? It is ioined with your saluation, and therefore it stands me in hand to looke to it, Be you sure therefore that all shall goe vvell vvith you: for I can not suffer you to perish, but my glorie must therewithall be abolished also. But your saluation is sure; for I haue determined that you shall magnifie my greatnes for euer.

Gods glorie and our saluation ioined together.

Where he saith he hath Created this people, it is to let vs vnderstand that our regeneration is a worke supernaturall: for we are to hold this principle which we haue often told you of heretofore, that he speakes not here of that generall worke of his creation touching mankinde; but of regeneration or adoption, by which God separates his Church from the rest of the world, and from all the remainders of it. Let no man be so bold then as to attribute this worke either to himselfe, or to the merits of men; but let vs from this place learne to ascribe so excellent a benefit wholly and only to the free grace of God.

Isaiah speak not here of our common creation, but of our spirituall regeneration. See Chap. 29.23.

They shall set forth my praise.] Although the Prophets meaning be (as I haue said) to shew that the people should be deliuered in regard it neerely concerned Gods glorie: yet from this place we also learne, that the end of our election is the setting forth of Gods glorie in all things. I grant that the reprobates are instruments of this glorie; but it shines in a farre diuers sort in vs: for we are chosen, as S. Paul saith, that we should be holy and without blame before him in loue: and he hath also predestinated vs, to adopt vs in himselfe by Iesus Christ, according to the good pleasure of his will to the praise of the glorie of his grace, wherewith he hath freely accepted vs through his beloued, Ephes. 1.4.5.6. Hereunto appertaine the words of Peter, where he saith, We are a chosen generation, and that we should shew forth the vertues of him who hath called vs out of darknes, into his maruelous light, 1. Pet. 2.9. And Zacharie sings, That we are deliuered out of the hands of our enemies to serue our God in holines and righteousnes before him all the daies of our life, Luk. 1.75. Here ye see the end then both of our election and calling: which is, that we being consecrated and set apart for Gods vse as it were, wee might praise and honor him as long as wee haue any being in this world.

The end of our election & vocation.

Exod. 14.4. and 17.18.

Election.

Vocation.

Vers. 22. *And thou hast not called vpon me, ô Iacob: but thou hast * wearied me ô Israel.*

* rather.

WIth this priuie rebuke he confirmes that which was said in ỹ former verse: to wit, that the merits of the people had no way moued him to deale so graciously with them. This deliuerance therefore was to be ascribed to his free goodnes. For proofe hereof, he saith, Thou hast not called vpon me: vnder which word he cõprehends the whole seruice of God, whereof prayer was a principall part. And thus he takes a part for the whole, according to the vsuall maner of the Hebrues. Now the Lord manifests it sufficientlie in other places, that Inuocation is a speciall part of his worship: for hauing said in the fiftieth Psalme that he reiects sacrifices and ceremonies, he presentlie addes, Call vpõ me. For this cause the Scripture mentions this exercise of prayer, when it notes out the marks of Gods worship. For Moses minding to shew that the same was againe restored, saith, that then men began to call vpon the name of the Lord, Gen. 4.26.

God saues none for his merits sake.

The proofe.

This phrase, Called vpon me, expounded.

Prayer, a speciall part of Gods worship.

I take the particle Ci in the second part of this verse for a coniunction aduersatiue thus, But thou hast rather wearied me. Others translate, For thou hast trauailed: as if he should say, Thou hast done that which I commanded thee thee vnwillingly: which comes all to one. For as the Lord requires obedience, ſo would he haue his ſeruants to performe the ſame cheerfully and readily. Hee loues a cheerfull giuer, as the Apoſtle ſaith. 2. Cor. 9. 7. but thoſe that ſerue him by halues, or by conſtraint, cannot properly be called his ſeruants; neither doth he accept of them, nor of ſuch ſeruices. To ſhew then that the Iewes had not worſhipped as they ought to haue done, hee ſaith, they did it vnwillinglie.

God requires a willing obedience. Psal. 110. 3.

If any had rather haue it an expoſition of the former member, and ſo tranſlate it thus; Thou haſt not called vpon me, O Iſrael, becauſe thou haſt yeelded me but a forced and conſtrained ſeruice; I gainſay him not, becauſe the difference is not great as touching the ſenſe. Yet if it be taken as I haue tranſlated it, I thinke it is neerer to the Prophets meaning: and the oppoſition containes alſo in it a rendring of the cauſe. Will we haue our ſeruices acceptable vnto God then? let vs yeeld him a frank and willing obedience.

The vſe.

Verſ. 23. Thou haſt not brought me the ſheepe of thy burnt offerings, neither haſt thou honoured mee with thy ſacrifices: I haue not cauſed thee to ſerue with an offering, nor wearied thee with meenſe.

Obiect.

SOme may demãd why the Prophet ſhould thus reproch the Iewes, ſeeing it is apparent that they were very diligent in offering ſacrifices, according to the ordinances of the Law. Some refer this to the captiuitie, during which time they could offer no ſacrifices, though they had bin willing ſo to haue done. Why ſo? Becauſe it was vnlawfull to offer them any where but in Ieruſalem: for which reſpect, their ſacrifices could not be acceptable vnto God. But I rather take it as a generall reproch: for whileſt the people had opportunitie to ſacrifice, yet they could alleadge no merit nor worthineſſe, as if God had been any way beholding vnto them for the ſame: for there was neither faith nor obedience to bee ſeene in their ſacrifices. But faith, as we know, and obedience, are things which God chiefly lookes vnto, without which, nothing we doe, is, or can be pleaſing in his ſight. They wanted therefore integritie of heart; their hands were full of blood; they were wholly defiled with robberies and deceit; iuſtice and equitie was baniſhed far from them. Albeit then that they brought their beaſts euery day vnto the Temple, and offered them there, yet hee rightly affirmes that they offered none of theſe things (to him) becauſe God accepts of no ſacrifices which are ſeparated from the truth, and ſo offered them to another, and not to him: for all he required was, that by theſe outward meanes, his people ſhould exerciſe their faith and obedience. But theſe being wanting: what worth was there in the ſacrifices? Hence wee gather that the Prophet ſpeakes here of no new thing, but continues that which hee began to teach in the former verſe; to wit, that hee reiects all hollow and ſeruile ſeruices.

Anſ.

God lookes rather to our faith and obedience, then to our ſacrifices.

1
2
3
4

Verſ. 24. *Thou boughteſt me no ſweet ſauour with thy money, neither haſt thou made me drunke with the fat of thy ſacrifices: but thou haſt made mee to ſerue with thy ſinnes, and wearied me with thine iniquities.

*Or, cinch.

BY the word Caneh, he meanes that wherewith they made the precious ointment which was ſeldome vſed; as is recorded in Exod. 30. 25. For therewith were the high Prieſts, the Tabernacle, the Arke of the couenant, with the inſtruments thereunto appertaining, annointed. Hee ſaith then; Albeit thou ſhouldeſt lay forth thy money to buy me of that odoriferous ointment, thou ſhalt but ſpend it in vaine, if thou lookeſt that I ſhould accept of it. For all their labour was loſt, becauſe they aimed not at the right marke. God eſteemed none of all theſe ceremonies, as long as they were ſeparated from faith, and the vprightneſſe of the heart, and a pure conſcience.

High Prieſts. The Tabernacle. The Arke. The Inſtruments.

Where he ſaith, thou haſt not made me drunke; it anſwers to a phraſe of ſpeech in the Law, where the Lord teſtifies that he felt a ſweete taſte in the ſauour of the ſacrifices: not that he tooke delight in the killing of beaſts, but becauſe by ſuch helpes he meant to keep his people in true obedience. Here on the contrary he ſaith, that the people ſacrificed not rightly, becauſe they defiled all by their impuritie. As if he ſhould ſay; You haue affamiſhed me (as much as in you is) in that you bring me nothing in ſinceritie, but that which through your ſinnes is corrupt and vnſauours. Preſently after the Prophet ſets out the foulneſſe of this fact, in that the people were not onely careleſſe in doing their ſeruices to God: but which is worſt of all, indeuored to ſubiect the Lord their God to their will, or rather to their diſordered appetites and luſts.

Thoſe who refer this place to Chriſt, offer violence to the Prophets meaning: and therfore the expoſition which I haue vſed, ſeemes to me the moſt native: for the Lord complaines that they haue inforced him to beare an heauie burden, in regard of their ſinnes, whereas they ſhould haue ſubmitted themſelues to him in all reuerence, and with all good conſciences: for when we aduance our ſelues againſt God, we doe by our inſolencie and rebellion, make him as it were a ſeruant to our luſts.

God eſteems neither of our labour nor large expences in his ſeruice, if the integritie of the heart bee wanting: See Mich. 6. 6, 7, 8.

Now hee expreſſeth this better when hee ſaith, that hee hath been wearied: that is to ſay; I haue ſwallowed many diſcontentments, in regard of the diſſolute behauiour of my people: for we wound and pierce him to the heart, when we reiect his voice, and will not indure that he ſhould raigne ouer vs. But it ſeemes he alludes to that hee ſaid erewhile touching the peoples vnrighteouſneſſe in ſeruing of God: which being ſet as oppoſite vnto the same, it shewes that these rebels did much grieue him.

Vers. 25. I, euen I am he that putteth away thine iniquities for mine owne sake, and will not remember thy sinnes.

The conclusion.

BY this exclamation the Lord puts an end to the former sentence, as if he should say, that he for his part can reioyce, that he puts away the iniquitie of his people, and holds them in freedome, that they can pleade no merit whereby to obteine this at his hands, seeing they deserue rather to be seuerely chastised, nay to be vtterly confounded.

No man is saued for his merits.

Now he repeates one and the same thing twice, that he might touch men to the quick for their vnthankfulnes: for we are wont either to take vnto our selues, or in some sort to obscure the honour which belongs to God only. Those take the Prophets words in too naked a sense, which thinke that God attributes vnto him here the authoritie and preheminence in pardoning of sinnes, for he rather opposeth his mercie to all other causes, as if he should say, There is nothing moues me to shew mercie, but only my free fauour, and that Redemption therefore is wrongfullie attributed to Merits or satisfactions, seeing I am the only author of it. The summe is, that the people were to continue their hope of returne, because God was willing for his owne names sake freely to remit their sinnes, and to worke their deliuerance.

1
2

The doctrine of remission of sinnes handled in this place.

In this place then there is handled the doctrine of the remission of sinnes. It now remaines to see vpon what occasion: for there is no doubt but the Prophet promiseth deliuerance in regard of Gods free grace. And for this cause he rather spake of forgiuenes of sinnes, then of Redemption: for they being sore pressed & corrected for their sinnes, the cause was to be remoued ere the effect could cease. A disease can not be cured till the matter which feeds it be first remoued: so, as long as Gods wrath stands vnappeased, so long must our chastisements continue. Therefore it is necessarie that this wrath be pacified, and we reconciled vnto God, before we can be freed from our afflictions.

Why God speakes rather of remission of sinnes, then of redemption. Simile.

This maner of speech therefore is to be well obserued against a childish distinction of the Sophisters: who confesse indeed that God pardons the fault, but they wrangle and say, that we must satisfie for the punishment. And hence haue proceeded Satisfactions, Indulgences, Purgatorie, and infinite other inuentions. But our Prophet speakes not only here of the faults, but makes expresse mention also of the punishments, which is likewise done away, in regard their sinnes and iniquities were freely pardoned. Which is yet more clearely prooued, in that he addes this particle, For mine owne names sake. For it is certaine that this exception is opposed against all merits. As how? That God respects neither our persons, nor ought that is in vs, vvhen he is to do away our offences, but is moued thereunto by his owne free mercie. For if he should consider any thing in vs, he should then seeme to be bound to vs, and so the pardon should not be free. For this cause Ezechiel expresseth the opposition, I do not this for your sakes ô house of Israel, but for mine owne sake: Whence it followes, that God is the author of forgiuenes, and is also inclined freely to forgiue, because he finds no cause at all in man (vnlesse it be his miserie) why he should do it.

This exception opposed to merit.

And therefore I vvill not remember thy sinnes.] The Prophet added this for the consolation of the faithfull, who by the feeling of their owne vnworthines, might easily haue slipped into despaire. For this cause he puts them in good hope, and confirmes them in this confidence: to wit, That they should obteine remission of their sinnes, and so be deliuered out of captiuitie, notwithstanding their vnworthines. Hence we haue to gather a very profitable doctrine, to wit, That no man can assure himselfe of obteining pardon, vnlesse he rest vpon the free grace of God. For such as looke to their works must of necessitie wauer, and in the end despaire. For if they were not besotted with grosse hypocrisie, they would alwaies set their guiltines before their eies, which would constreine them whether they would or no to doubt of Gods fauor.

None can be assured of obtaining pardon, vnlesse he rest vpon Gods free goodnes.

Where it is said, that the Ministers also do remit sinnes, that is not repugnant to this place, for they are witnesses of this free remission. They vse this common distinction, That God forgiues sinnes by his power, and The Ministers by their office: but because this distinction doth not sufficientlie explane the Prophets meaning, it is best to hold that which I haue set downe, to wit, that God not only pardons sinnes by his power, but also that all benefits which we are to expect, flow vnto vs only from his free grace. And thus the Lord hath so adorned the Gospel and the Ministers with this authoritie, that he reserues it notwithstanding intirely in his own absolute power.

A distinctiō.

How God is said to pardon by the Ministers.

Vers. 26. Put me in remembrance: let vs be iudged together: count that thou mayst be iustified.

Mans pride not easily subdued.

BEcause it is an hard matter to correct mens pride, the Lord goes on still with this argument; and insists the longer vpon it, that he might the better bring the Iewes to humilitie, as also that he might cause them to renounce the confidence of their works. He giues them libertie freely to say and alledge vvhat they can in their owne behalfe, to make their partie good against him: vnlesse if vpon better aduice, they should rather thinke it best for them to lay their hand vpon their mouth.

God giues vs leaue to make our defences, if we thinke his accusatiō ouerstrict.

By way of yeelding so much vnto them therefore he bids them put him in minde: If thou hast any thing to alledge for thy selfe, saith he, I pray thee remember me of it. Speake thou in thy turne, and I will giue thee audience. And by this maner of speech he gaules men more to the quick, then if he should haue spoken to them in plaine termes. For thus he shewes, that they are more then senselesse, if they dare attribute any thing vnto themselues. Why so? Because, if libertie were giuen them them to tell their faire tale, they would be conuinced of their vanitie and emptines, without being able to say ought for themselues.

Ironia, a figure in speaking, when one meanes contrarie to the signification of his words, to mock him whom he reasoneth withall.

Thus thou mayst be iuſtified.] That is to say, that thou maiest get the day, and goe away conqueror: I therefore giue thee free leaue to say what thou canst. Now this is spoken after such a kind of taunting and deriding maner, as did more cut their combs, thé if the Lord should haue stood to haue iudged thé in his own person, according to his absolute authoritie. In the meane while we must not forget the Prophets drift, who was constrained to plucke this maske of merit from the Iewes, that in all humilitie and meeknes, they might receiue the grace of God.

Ironia.

The Prophets drift.

Verſ. 27. Thy first father hath sinned, and thy teachers haue trangreſſed against me.

THe expositors for the most part vnderstand this place of the first Father Adam: others rather refer it to Abraham. As if the Prophet should say; You haue not onely sinned, but your father Abraham also: notwithstanding all the holinesse wherewith he was indued. By teachers, they vnderstand Moses and Aron, which sinned: albeit they were adorned with singular graces. And if the case stood so with your father and teachers, how much more are you sinners, who are their inferiours? And thus according to their sense, it should bee an argument taken from the greater to the lesse.

The Prophets argument according to some interpreters. Adam. Abraham. Moses. Aron.

An argument from the greater to the lesse.

But I vnderstand it otherwise; for vnder this word father, he comprehends not onely one or two of their predecessors, but many; and that by a change of the number. A thing vsuall among the Hebrewes. And this manner of reprehension is often found both in the Prophets, as also in the booke of Psalmes: for they knowing themselues to be the holy nation, they swelled in pride against the Lord; as if this honour had been due vnto them, either in regard of the excellencie or merits of their fathers: and thus the right of inheritance made them swell. The Prophets therefore were carefull from time to time, to discouer the iniquities of their fathers: for which cause Saint Stephen, who succeeded them, is bold to pronounce, that they had alwaies resisted the holy Ghost: Acts 7.51. As if he should say; You haue not begun this day to be thus wicked; your fathers were as bad long agoe. Of an euill Crowe, there is issued forth a naughtie egge. But you, saith our Prophet, are growne worse then your fathers, and far surpasse the wickednesse of your predecessors: so as if the Lord had onely respected you as you are in your selues, hee might iustly haue consumed you long since.

Stephen.

A Prouerbe.

In the next place he addes their teachers; to shew that the fault rested not onely in the people: for euen those which ought to haue been their guides and leaders, to wit, the Priests and Prophets, were first in the transgression, and plunged them into error which followed them. And thus (to bee short) hee shewes that there was no estate nor condition free from vices nor corruptions. As if the Lord should haue said; Let them goe now and brag of their merits, & let them alleadge any way but the least shew of reason why I should be bound to succour them, and they shall find there is nothing but my free mercy.

If any shall obiect, that it is iniustice to reproch the children with the offences of their forefathers, because it is written, The soule that sinneth shall die: and, The sonne shall not beare the iniquitie of his father: Ezech. 18.20. The answer is easie, for the Lord punisheth the sinnes of the fathers vpon their children which succeeded them: and yet they are not punished for the faults of another, seeing themselues stand guiltie of the same crimes. And when it so falles out that the Lord smites the whole body of a people, hee couples the fathers with the children, that he may wrap them all in the same condemnation.

Obiect.

Answ. God punisheth the children of wicked parents, because they walke in their steps.

Verſ. 28. Therefore I haue prophaned the rulers of the Sanctuarie, and haue made Iaakob a curse, and Israel a reproch.

THe letter Vau, must bee resolued into a coniunction of concluding: and the verb To pollute, should bee translated in the future tence, though it may also bee left in the preterperfect. Yet I had rather turne it; shall pollute: and to apply it to the time of the captiuitie, in regard he speakes properly to those which should liue in Babylon. If any had rather extend it to the diuers calamities wherewith the Lord afflicted his people, and so ioine it to the captiuitie of Babylon, it will not be greatly amisse. And it may be the sense will runne better, if we should say, that hee speakes here of those things which often fell out before; to the end he might warne them for the time to come, not to stand too much vpon their pantables, lest with shame and great dishonour, they againe receiued the iust reward of their ingratitude. He sets forth the cause of their ruine then, in regard that both fathers and children were to drinke of one cup, who ceased not to sin, but would frō day to day kindle Gods wrath against them without ceasing; not giuing ouer their bad courses till God seuerely scourged them.

This verse contains the cause of the Iewes ruin.

Now it is said that God prophanes the rulers of his Church, when hee despiseth and reiects them as things of nought: and so it is taken in Psal. 89. and in many other places. For euen as when we are set apart, and sanctified by him, we dwell vnder the wings of his safegard and protection, as long as wee retaine and keep that sanctitie pure and vndefiled: so as soone as we cast the same off, he prophanes vs, because wee cease to be holy; and so wee make our selues also vnworthy of his defence. And thus hee laies them open for a pray to the enemies, which before he called his annointed, and could not indure that any should touch them. But is it not strange that the Priests, which represented the person of

The sense of this word, To profane. Psal. 89.

God prophanes vs, because we cease to be holy.

Christ, should be said to be polluted? The reason is, because they erred out of the right way themselues, who should haue been lights to others.

The Hebrew word Cherem, which I haue translated execration, is as much to say, as cutting off: but it also signifies execration; and therefore I haue iudged it to sute best with this place, because reproch followes. The Prophet borrowes all these words from Moses, whom he followes so neere, that we may well discerne the stile of the one, in the writings of the other. The Prophets therefore forged nothing of their owne heads: for thus saith Moses; Thou shalt be an astonishment, a prouerbe, and a scorne to all nations, whether the Lord thy God shall leade thee: Deut. 28.20.37. Thus then hee threatens to afflict this people in such wise, that they should be a reproch vnto all; for whosoeuer hee were that gaue himselfe to cursing, this people should bee a fit subiect for such a one to exercise his execrations vpon, so as hee might make them the foote of his cursing song. Euery one should haue such a fling at them, that their name should flie abroad as a common prouerbe from one to another, in euery ones mouth that were disposed to scorne. As for example, the name of a Iew at this day (howsoeuer it bee honourable in it selfe) yet how odious and hatefull is it? The Lord then pronounceth by Isaiah these horrible threatnings, to teach them that they could not bee too seuerely punished for their hainous offences; and that when God should beginne to visit them, they should haue no cause to complaine of ouer hard measure, neither should they thinke that the Prophet was too sharpe in his reprehensions.

Iaiah followes Moses stile.

The name of a Iew iustly execrable at this day, howsoeuer it be honourable in it selfe.

THE XLIIII. CHAPTER.

Vers. 1. Yet now heare O Iakob my seruant, and Israel whom I haue chosen.

The coherēce of this verse, with the latter part of the former Chapter.

ISaiah hauing a little before taxed the wickednes of the Iewes; and also hauing pronounced that they were all worthie to perish eternallie, in regard that as well small as great, had defiled themselues in all things. He now somewhat sweetens the sharpnesse of the chastisements, and beginnes to comfort them. I expound the particle Vau here, Yet: as in many other places. Euen as if he had said; Albeit you are inuironed with many miseries, yet heare now what I will doe for your sakes. For this verse ought to be knit to the argument afore going, because the Lord shewes hee will neuer suffer the people vtterly to perish, though he be content they should feele much smart for a time.

God will neuer suffer vs to perish, though he lets vs feele a little smart for a time.

Hence let vs gather, that Gods wrath is neuer so far inflamed against his Church, but he alwaies leaues some place for his mercie, which we haue often noted before. As often therefore as the Prophets threaten; they euer adde some word of consolation, seruing to mitigate the former seuerity.

Doctrine.

But lest we should imagin mē deserued this by their good seruices, he addes, whom I haue chosen: for God calles vs not to be his seruants for any dignitie or merit he sees in vs, but because he hath made vs meete (to be partakers with the Saints in light) by his free election. In this place then the two words, seruant and chosen, haue the same signification: yet so, that election goes before. And therefore Dauid saith, that hee was Gods seruant before he was borne; because he was receiued into his household from his mothers wombe: Psal. 116.16.

Merits still excluded.

Coloss. 1.12.

Election goes before vocation.

Vers. 2. *Thus saith the Lord that made thee, and formed thee from the wombe; he will helpe thee: Feare not O Iakob my seruant, and thou righteous whom I haue chosen.

*Or, my beloued whom, &c.

ALbeit he dealt roundly with the Iewes in the latter end of the former Chapter, to strippe them of all false confidence, and to humble them that hee might driue them to seeke pardon: yet now hee sweetly allaies that tartnes, with a speech full of exceeding comfort, to assure them that they should lose nothing by renouncing themselues. Therefore we must heere supply some oppositions thus; True it is, O Iakob, that in thy selfe thou art nothing: but thy God that formed thee will not despise the vworke of his owne hands. There is no worthinesse at all in thee that can procure thy redemption from ruin and destruction; but mine adoption, for the which I haue vouchsafed as a mercifull father to receiue thee, shall be more then sufficient to saue thee.

Chap. 43.25.

Some oppositions supplied.

But we must note what I haue oft told you before; to wit, that the Prophet speakes not heere of the first creation, as wee be borne naturally the sonnes of Adam, but of regeneration, which is onely proper and peculiar vnto the elect, by which it comes to passe that they haue place in the Church of God. And to the end men should attribute nothing to themselues, as if they had moued God hereunto, hee addes, which formed thee from the wombe: by which words, he sets before them that couenant which was at the first made with their fathers, in the right whereof, God had set them apart also to be his people, euen before they were borne: which some refer vnto the person of Iakob, because by taking his brother by the heele, he gaue an excellent testimo-

See Chap. 43. 21.

nie

nie of his election: but this is conſtreined. I rather therefore referre it further; to wit, That the Lord ſhewed himſelfe liberall and bountifull vnto his people frō the beginning: and thus he takes away from them all boaſting of merits, becauſe he formed them at the firſt of his free grace, and hath ſtill from time to time freely added new benefits to the former.

He will help thee.] Others ſupplie the relatiue Ci, as if he had ſaid, Thy helper: notwithſtanding, it ſeemes beſt to reade it apart, and the ſenſe had bin clearer if we had read it in the firſt perſon, I will help thee: but the difference is not great. The ſumme of the whole comes to this; that he which is the Creator of the people, will be readie to ſuccor them when the appointed time is come. In which regard it is free for euery one to reſt in the expoſition he thinks beſt: yet I had rather follow the plaine and the leſſe conſtrained ſenſe, without ſupplying any thing.

If God haue regenerated vs he will ſurely help vs.

The word Ieſhurun is diuerſlie expounded, for ſome would deriue it of Iaſchar, which ſignifies, To be vpright, or, To pleaſe: others deriue it otherwiſe: but I agree rather with thoſe who tranſlate Beloued, deriuing it from the verb aboue mentioned. Moſes alſo hath giuen this title to the Iſraelites in his ſong, Deut.32.15: for howſoeuer ſome tranſlate the Hebrue word there vpright, as in this place, yet the old tranſlation agrees beſt, which reades it, My beloued is waxed fat. Now our Prophet adornes his people with this name, to the end that by the remembrance of benefits paſt, they might conceiue good hope for the time to come.

A generall and perpetuall rule.

For the faithfull are to hold this as a generall and perpetuall rule, that by mercies formerlie receiued they ought to expect no leſſe fauors for hereafter, otherwiſe we ſhould ſauour too much of ingratitude; and ſhould ſhew our ſelues not to reſt at all in the promiſes: which if they were ſoundly and deeply imprinted in our hearts, would worke a ſetled peace and tranquillitie of ſpirit: not to make vs idle, but to chaſe away al inordinate feares and diſtruſt.

A ſoueraigne remedie to appeaſe our feares.

For which cauſe he once againe repeates, Feare not ô Iaakob: whereunto alſo belongs that conſolation of Chriſt, Luk.12.32. Feare not little flock, for my Father takes pleaſure in you, and will giue you the Kingdome. And queſtionleſſe among ſo many dangers which threaten vs with death on euery ſide, there is no remedie more ſoueraigne to appeaſe our feares then this ſentence, namely, that God vouchſafeth ſo farre forth to fauour vs, that we ſhall be euerlaſtinglie ſaued by him. By the word Beloued then he giues them the better to vnderſtand, that their ſaluation depends vpon the grace and good will of God, who reſerues and attributes whollie to himſelfe all that which is found praiſe-worthie in his people.

Verſ. 3. For I will powre water vpon the thirſtie, and floods vpon the dry grōd: I will powre my ſpirit vpon thy ſeed, and my bleſſing on thy buds.

In the former verſe he promiſed them help: here he deſcribes the meanes.

HE continues on the ſame argument, and therewithall ſhewes wherein this promiſed help ſhall ſtand. We muſt ſtill keepe in mind therefore that theſe propheſies are to be referred to thoſe wofull and dolefull times whereof mention hath bin made before: to wit, when all things were confuſed, the people forſaken, and all the promiſes of God ſeeming as if they had been of none effect: the Prophet therefore meets with theſe doubts, and compares the people to a drie and thirſtie ground which hath no moyſture left in it: which ſimilitude Dauid vſeth Pſal.143.6. to ſet forth his miſerie. Now howſoeuer they were ouerwhelmed with ſorrowes and had loſt all vigor, yet leſt their hearts ſhould faint within them in theſe extremities, they were to ſet theſe and the like ſweete ſentences before them.

The vſe for vs.

And wee alſo are to haue our recourſe to ſuch promiſes as oft as dangers beſet vs on euery ſide, ſo as we can ſee nothing but preſent death ready to ſwallow vs vp quick: and by this meanes ſhall we remaine more then conquerors. But it is required that we be ſuch as haue a ſenſe and feeling of our thirſt and pouertie, that ſo our fainting and parched ſoules may cheerefullie receiue refreſhing from theſe floods.

By the word ſpirit, he tels vs what is ſignified by waters and floods. The ſpirit is alſo called water in Ezech.36.25. but in a diuers ſenſe. For when Ezechiel attributes the name of waters to the holy Spirit, he calles them pure waters: hauing reſpect to the purgations vnder the Lawe. Iſaiah will afterwards likewiſe call the holy Spirit water, but in another reſpect: to wit, in that it giues ſtrēgth and vigor to fainting ſoules, by his ſecret and inward power. But here the Prophets words haue a further extent: for he not only ſpeakes of the ſpirit of regeneration, but there is an alluſion to that generall vertue which it ſheds into all the creatures, whereof the Pſalmiſt ſpeakes, Pſal.104.30. When thou ſendeſt forth thy ſpirit, they are created: and thou renueſt the face of the earth. Now as Dauid there in the firſt place ſhewes that all the parts of the world are renued by that ſecret power which God breathes into them: ſo afterwards he attributes vnto the Lord a ſufficient abilitie, forthwith (as ſoone as it pleaſeth him) to renue the whole frame of heauen and earth, that it ſhould not fall to ruine. In the ſame ſenſe doth our Prophet call water, the ſudden reflouration of the Church: as if he ſhould ſay, the reſtoring therof is in the hand of God, as well as it reſts in him by dewes or ſhowers to fructifie barren & parched grounds. Thus the Spirit is compared vnto water, becauſe without it all things would fade and wither with drouth: he it is alſo that reuiues the world by a ſecret ſprinkling of it with his power, and redreſſeth the barrennes that proceeds of heate and drouth, whereby the earth recouers a new face as it were: which is yet further amplified by the word blessing, added in the end of the verse.

This word Spirit here not only ſignifies the ſpirit of regeneration, but that generall vertue which it ſheds into all the creatures.

Vers. 4. And they shall grow as among the grasse, and as the willowes by the riuers of waters.

This verse is an amplification of the former.

THere is nothing contained in this verse, but that which I haue alleadged out of the hundreth and fourth Psalme; to wit, that when God sends forth his Spirit, then the whole face of the earth is renued, and the things which were before parched vp with heate, shall beginne to wax greene and florishing; euen as the hearbs sprout, after they haue been watered by the dewes from heauen. He amplifies his speech by these similitudes, and shewes more plainly, that it shall be no lesse difficult for God to repeople his Church a new, which was barren and deformed, in regard of the wofull estate in which shee was, then to giue the earth power to bud, and bring forth grasse and hearbs. Moreouer, albeit hee speakes not properly heere of regeneration: yet may wee refer this sentence vnto it, because hee handles the doctrine of the Churches restauration, whereof regeneration is a principall part: for God thereby repaireshis image in his elect & chosen people. We might insist longer vpon this matter, and lay it out more fully, but we must first labour to attaine the Prophets meaning, and shew the plaine and native sense of his words.

Regeneratiō a principall part of the Churches restauration.

Vers. 5. One shall say, I am the Lords: another shall bee called by the name of Iakob: and another shall subscribe with his hand vnto the Lord, and name himselfe by the name of Israel.

Hitherto the Prophet hath spoken vnder borrowed speeches, now he sets forth the thing plainly.

HItherunto the Prophet hath spoken by similitudes, but now he deliuers his mind plainly and without any figures, shewing what these buds and hearbs bee, whereof hee hath spoken; to wit, that the Lord will gather his people out of all nations, and will bring them into his Church, which were far off before: also that he would restore and augment the same, which in a manner seemed to bee brought to nothing: for all should runne vnto it out of all quarters of the world, and should craue that they might bee inrolled among the faithfull: according to that which is said in Psal. 87. Behold, Philistia, Tyre, and Ethiopia; there was he borne. Which place of the Psalme, howsoeuer it hath seemed to be obscured by the ignorance of the expositors, yet it serues to giue light to this propheeie. For we know the number of those which returned from the captiuity were very few: the faithfull therefore had cause to bee astonished, and to blush for shame: much more cause had they to be hindered from comprehending the glorious and wonderfull worke of their redemption, which was so highly extolled by the Prophets. The author of this Psalme therefore labours to preuent this astonishment, and giues them to vnderstand that the Babylonians and Egyptians shall also become members of the Church: that the Ethiopians, Tyrians, and all such as were strangers, should come and be incorporated into the number of Gods chosen. As if he should say, Ierusalem is now desolate indeed, yet will God not onely gather together his banished, but will also call from euery part of the world, and make them one body, which now are sundered, in such sort, that they shall reioice that God hath made them Citizens with the Saints, and shall no lesse appertaine to the body of the elect, then if they had issued forth of the same.

Now for as much as wee are wont to take their names, who are to be inrolled in bookes, the Prophet hauing respect vnto this custome, vseth these phrases of speech: One shall subscribe with his hand vnto the Lord, and shall name himselfe by the name of Israel: another shall protest I am the Lords, and shall call himselfe by the name of Iacob. By which words the Prophet signifies that this shall bee a new and extraordinarie worke, when hee which before was a meere stranger frō God, should now reioice that hee was adopted of him. Shall be called signifies heere as much as wee vsually say, To bee called by anothers name: as in the fourth Chapter, where it is spoken of the women which desired husbands, onely to take away their rebuke and shame, We will eat our owne bread, and will weare our owne garments: onely let vs bee called by thy name.

Now howsoeuer Isaiah seemes to make distinction heere betweene such as in expresse termes professe themselues to be Gods people; and those which desired to bee called by the name of Iaakob, yet the two members are to be referred both to the one and to the other: for to be Gods child, and to bee of Israel, are things conioined with an inseparable band. Why so? Because God will be Father to none, but such as haue the Church for their mother. And yet we also note, that there are no true Citizens of the Church, but such as subiect themselues vnder the Lords dominion.

God wils that all his children should acknowledge the Church for their mother.

If the Prophet had omitted this word Lord, and had onely mentioned Iakob and Israel, yet we must haue risen from thence to the fountaine of Iakob, of whom all things in heauen and in earth are named. But to take away all ambiguitie, he repeates this order twice; to wit, that those onely are to bee accounted the children of Iakob, which submit themselues to God.

The Prophets drift.

By this we may easily see the Prophets drift: for he shews that the church no sooner feeles the want of Gods blessing, vers. 3. but by little and little she falles to ruin, and withers away: on the cōtrary, when the Spirit is shed abroad vpon her, she by & by recouers new strength and force; not onely in regard of obtaining her first beautie and glory, but contrary to all hope, shee attaines wonderfull increases. We are also to note that the Prophet speakes not heere of the order of nature, as if the new children of the Church were borne so; for no man gets such a dignitie by his owne industry: but when those which were strangers gers before, ſhall be regenerated; then the Prophet ſaith, they ſhal come and giue in their names, to teſtifie, that they are indeed the children of God. We ſee here therefore a deſcription of a change which farre ſurmounts nature, and all reaſon of fleſh and blood: to wit, when out of the curſed race of Adam, there iſſues a ſpiritual Iſrael.

A change farre ſurmounting all humane reaſon.

Some thinke that Iſaiah notes heere how ſmall the number of the faithfull ſhall be, when it is ſaid, one ſhall ſay: and another ſhall be called; and the third ſhall ſubſcribe: but this coniecture wants ground, and the very ſcope of the text eaſily confutes their error. As I thinke therefore, wee haue rather to gather, that the Church ſhall come in by troopes out of diuers nations far remote one from the other: in regard that God will bring home ſtrangers vnder his dominion, and ſo touch their hearts, that they ſhall glory not in words onely, but in truth, that they are of the number of his people. Hence alſo wee may obſerue, that true faith cannot be in the heart, but it will forthwith breake out into a voluntarie and franke confeſſion, which may be gathered from theſe foure diſtinct members: one ſhall ſay, I am the Lords: another ſhall be called by the name of Iakob: the third ſhall ſubſcribe with his hand: and the fourth ſhall call himſelfe by the name of Iſrael. For the very truth is, that Gods ſeruants ought not to be mute or ſilent, but both by words and deeds to teſtifie what is in their hearts, ſeeing they profeſſe to obey him, and reioyce in his name the whole courſe of their life.

True faith in the heart will manifeſt it ſelfe by a voluntarie confeſſion. Pſal. 116.10. 2. Cor. 4.13. Rom. 10.10. Act. 4.20.

Verſ. 6. Thus ſaith the Lord the King of Iſrael, and his redeemer the Lord of hoſts; I am the firſt, and I am the laſt, and without me there is no God.

THe Prophet enters not in to any new diſcourſe, but onely confirmes the former doctrine, which it was needfull for him to do: for mens mindes are wonderfully inclined to diſtruſt, and they are quickly out of heart in the time of aduerſitie; neither can they be raiſed vp by one or two exhortations. He ſpends no waſt labor then in confirming this doctrine with ſo many words, becauſe we neuer attribute ſo much to Gods power as we ſhould. We are often diſtracted with penſiue cares, and are ouermuch glued to the things of this life. The Prophet therefore hauing fixed this vnutterable name of Iehouah in the forefront, he alſo calles him King, and Redeemer, becauſe it is not enough to apprehend his power, vnleſſe we be alſo aſſured of his fatherly loue which he beares vs. That the promiſes of God then might haue their authoritie with vs, he not only mentions his glorie, but his goodnes alſo, to aſſure vs that it appertaines vnto vs. But it might ſeeme rediculous that he calles himſelfe King ſeeing the people were in a maner brought to nothing, yet were the faithfull notwithſtanding to cleaue faſt to this promiſe, ſo as by faith they were euen in this ſeruitude to apprehend a kingdome to come, though for the preſent they ſaw not ſo much as any glimps of it. And the very truth is, the former doctrine would neuer haue entred into the minds of men oppreſſed vnder ſo extreme a bondage (yea almoſt ouerwhelmed with deſpaire) had not this preface prepared a way and paſſage for it. But when God familiarly inuites vs vnto him, ſhewing that he indeed is ours, faith being allured by ſo ſweet a ſummons breakes forth though it were euen out of hell it ſelfe.

A confirmation of the former doctrine. The reaſon of it.

By theſe two titles of King and Redeemer, the Lord ſets forth his power and loue.

The faithfull by the eies of faith behold glorie in their loweſt abaſement.

In ſaying I am the firſt, he meanes not to magnifie the eternitie of God, but to ſet forth his vnchangeablenes, that ſo the Iewes might beleeue him to be ſuch a one for the time to come, as they had found him in times paſt. But what neceſſitie was there of this, may ſome ſay, ſeeing he ſpeakes to the faithfull, who were rightly informed of this truth alreadie? I anſwer, that albeit men beleeue in God, yet doe they not know him for ſuch a one as he is, and oftentimes they attribute leſſe to him then to a creature. Therefore the Prophet would haue vs to lift vp pure hearts vnto heauen, that being emptied of all falſe imaginations concerning him, we might intirely fixe our faith vpon one God only. I adde further, that it was needfull this people ſo extreamely vexed ſhould be confirmed againſt ſuch violent temptations, that they might neither loſe their hope, nor patience.

The vſe of this clauſe, I am the Lord.

Obiect.

Anſ.

Verſ. 7. And who is like me that ſhall call, and ſhall declare it, and ſet it in order before me ſince I appointed the ancient people? and what is at hand, and what things are to come? let them ſhew vnto them.

NOw the Lord compares himſelfe with Idols, as we haue ſeene before, Chap. 40. 18.19. His purpoſe is to deliuer the Iewes from being diſcouraged or offended when the victorious Babylonians ſhould proudly triumph ouer them: for, the reproches wherewith the wicked loded them, were exceeding intollerable and fearefull, as, Where is your God? Why doth he not help you now? Such blaſphemies were ſufficient to haue ſhaken the hearts of the faithfull in ſunder, and ſo farre to diſmay them, as to driue them into vtter deſpaire. The Prophet therefore inſiſts very carefully vpon this point, that he might euer be confirming of them againſt ſuch aſſaults.

Another confirmation of the former doctrine.

Wicked blaſphemies.

This lamentable deſolation into which the people were then falne, was as a thick cloud which ſhadowed from them the ſight of Gods louing countenance: and the wicked on the other ſide reioiced, as if their gods had now obteined the preheminence. But the Prophet intending to ſcatter the darknes of ſuch miſts and clouds of errors, ſhewes, that Gods glorie ſhines as it were in certaine and infallible marks of his diuinitie, which diſcernes him from Idols. Why ſo? Becauſe the Lord foretold all things that ſhould come to paſſe, to the end his people might acknowledge him a iuſt Iudge in his chaſtiſements inflicted vpon them, and yet might alſo aboue hope be aſſured, that he would be fauorable and merciſull vnto them.

To call, is taken heere two waies: either it is to be referred to Gods foreknowledge, or to the execution thereof: for as all things are gouerned by his prouidence, ſo doth hee alſo know what is to come, and giues plaine proofes of his preſcience. But we neede not ſtand long in diſcuſſing the ſignification of this word, ſeeing it plainly appeares, that the Prophet attributes vnto God both preſcience, and the adminiſtratiõ of al things. Yet I rather iudge, that he refers it to the act: as if he ſhould ſay; Shall there be found any among the gods of the Gentiles, that can call: that is, can publiſh, ordaine, and raiſe vp deliuerers? May you not eaſilie diſcerne by this, that there is none other God but me? And thus hee derides the Idols, to whom men attributed ſuch power cauſleſly.

By the verbe to ſhew, which is preſently added, he ſets forth the ſpeciall goodneſſe of God, who vouchſafed to reueale his ſecrets to the elect and choſen people, by the miniſterie of the Prophets. By the antient people, ſome vnderſtand the Gentiles, ſaying, that the ſinguler number is put for the plurall; becauſe the Lord no ſooner furniſhed the nations with people, but he ſeparated them one from another, and eſtabliſhed an order which ſhould indure for euer. Others extend it vnto the creatures, ſo as the ſtarres ſhould bee one people; and the hearbs, beaſts, and ſuch like, ſhould be another. But when I conſider all circumſtances, I am conſtrained to follow another expoſition; to wit, that the Lord ſpeakes of his people, and calles them ancient, becauſe he preferred them before all others: and yet it is certaine that there were ſome long before them. The Egyptians, Arcadians, and others, brag of their antiquitie. As touching Abraham, he came out of Meſopotamia, whileſt the Caldeans floriſhed: and liued ſolitarily in his houſe, as if the memorie of his name ſhould haue been buried in obliuion, when the neighbour Countries were repleniſhed with people, and with all ſorts of benefits. Neither muſt we iudge of the antiquitie of Iſrael by the length of yeeres, or in reſpect of any thing externall, but by Gods election: for which cauſe indeed, the foundations of Ieruſalem are called euerlaſting. It is as much then as if he had ſaid; Before there were any men to forge or frame Idols, I determined in my ſecret counſell to haue a Church, which ſhould indure for euer. This people therefore is the moſt ancient and excellent of all others, though others be before them both in yeeres and in dignitie. For as all things were created for man, ſo all men were made to ſerue the Church: yea, there is not any nation whatſoeuer, be it neuer ſo high or mightie, which is not much inferiour. For the Church is the body of Chriſt, which far ſurpaſſeth both, in age and excellencie. We will not ſtand to recount fables, as the Iewes doe, who affirme Ieruſalem to be built from the beginning: for the Prophet reſpects not beginnings of time here. And yet wee muſt hold this principle, that the elect people are more honourable and ancient, then the ſtrange nations; becauſe they approch neerer vnto God, who is the fountaine of eternitie.

Egyptians, Arcadians, Abraham. Gen. 11. 31.

We muſt fetch our antiquitie from Gods election.

All men made to ſerue the Church. The Church Chriſts bodie, therefore ſhee is the moſt ancient and excellent of all. Fables. A principle.

Let them ſhew.] This permiſſion giuen, ſhewes that men ſhall but loſe their time in looking for any anſwer from Idols, touching the foretelling of things to come: and if they ſhould, yet their anſwers would proue nothing but impoſtures and words, hauing alwaies a double ſignification, wherewith they were ſure to bee ſeduced that went to aske counſell of them, as wee haue ſaid heeretofore.

Idols vſed equiuocation.

Verſ. 8. Feare yee not, neither be afraid: haue I not told thee of old, and haue declared it? You are euen my witneſſes, whether there be a God beſide me, or a *God that I know not.

*Or, ſtrong.

ISaiah ſhewes now wherefore hee ſpake of the power of God; to wit, that hee might confirme the peoples faith: for this is the concluſion which he gathers out of the former arguments: Seeing the Lord is ſo powerfull, and gouernes all things after the counſell of his own will, therefore the people whom he hath taken into his protection, haue no cauſe to feare. In the next place hee repeates that which was ſaid before; to wit, that God had not onely ſuccoured the Iewes in hugger mugger, in ſhewing himſelfe at vnawares, when none waited for his helpe; but had alſo vpheld their faith by many prophecies, and gaue them ſufficient teſtimonies of his fatherly fauour: ſo as his diuinitie was manifeſted to the vtmoſt. For what ſhould it profit vs to know that God both foreſees and is able to doe all things, if he did not therewithall manifeſt the ſame vnto vs concerning our ſaluation? Albeit then it is his pleaſure that many things ſhould be vnknowne to vs, yet hee communicates ſo much of his counſels, as is expedient and fit for vs to vnderſtand.

A concluſion out of the former arguments.

The knowledge of Gods preſcience and power ſhold little auaile vs, if he manifeſted not the ſame for our good.

The word Meaz, ſignifies a long time: or, (if any had rather take it otherwiſe) it notes out an opportunitie or fitneſſe of time: for the Lord reueales his ſecrets vnto his elect, when he ſees the time to be conuenient. But the firſt interpretation ſeemes to me the leaſt conſtrained.

Wherefore you are my vvitneſſes.] His meaning is, as I haue touched before, that the people could not pretend ignorance, if they contented not themſelues with one God, ſeeing he hath ſo fully manifeſted himſelfe vnto them, that they might be the beſt vvitneſſes of his diuine power. What is the end of our knowledge then concerning Gods glorie? Euen openly to vvitneſſe the truth of God before men, as hath been ſaid before: vnleſſe we had rather be counted ſmotherers of that light which hee hath manifeſted vnto vs by his holy Spirit. Moreouer, we can be no lawfull vvitneſſes of Gods truth, if he confirme vs not by his truth: for what validitie is there in his teſtimony, who doubts of the truth which he is to profeſſe? Wee muſt therefore be both taught by Gods word, if we will haue ſuch ſuch a faith and hope as accompliſheth ſalvation.

He attributes heere vnto God the title of ſtrength, as in many other places; becauſe it is not enough to know the eternall eſſence of God, vnleſſe wee therewithall aſcribe vnto him power & ſtrength. Otherwiſe, we ſhould leaue him onely a bare and naked title, as the vnbeleeuers doe; who indeed confeſſe there is a God with their mouthes, and afterwards attribute his power to this and that creature.

Verſ. 9. *All they that make an Image are vanitie, and their * delectable things ſhall not profite them: and they are their owne witneſſes that they ſee not nor know: therefore they ſhall be confounded.*

* Or, deſirable.

THe Lord now on the contrarie ſhewes how miſerable the Idolaters are which erre and vaniſh away in their inuentions, being not faſt grounded vpon his eternall truth, to wit, they are ſenſeleſſe and void of ſound iudgement. And as he hath heretofore iuſtly condemned the ingratitude of the people, if by the teſtimonies of Gods preſcience and prouidence they were not incouraged to hope well: ſo now on the contrarie, he armes and fortifies them againſt the ſuperſtitions of the Gentiles. But in regard the vnbeleeuers were many in number, and flowed in forces and riches, he denounceth that all is vanitie; and to be ſhort, that all their goodly ſhewes would proue deceiptfull helps in the end. By their deſirable things, he not only comprehends their Idols, but alſo all their ſeruice, veſtments, pomp, and ceremonies, which fooles are wont to honour them withall. And he ſets out theſe things by a very fit word: for ſeeing the chiefe end of mans life conſiſts in aduancing the true knowledge and worſhip of God (wherein ſtands the maine difference betweene vs and brute beaſts) ſo muſt it be preferred before all things be they neuer ſo excellent: to this (I ſay) we ought to referre all the thoughts and deſires of our hearts. It is not without cauſe then that the Scripture vſeth this word, when it ſpeakes of Gods worſhip and ſeruice: but it is vſed here touching a corrupt and furious zeale wherewithall Idolaters are caried away after their Idols, and their ſeruices: for this cauſe he ſaith that all their deſirable things about which they ſpend ſo much time, are both vaine and vnprofitable. Oftentimes alſo this deſire is compared to the filthie luſt wherewith men are ſo bewitched, or wholly blinded, that they can not ſee their villanie, nor yet obey common reaſon, whereof we haue largely ſpoken in the firſt Chapter.

The faithfull armed againſt the ſuperſtitions of the Gentiles.

Deſirable.

The chiefe end of mans life.

In that he addes, themſelues are vvitneſſes: ſome expound it that the Idols beare witnes againſt themſelues, and plainely teach what vanitie there is in thé, ſo as they which perceiue it not are wonderfullie blinded. But I like not of this expoſition: I had rather follow thoſe therefore which referre this to the Idolaters, who can ſine ſufficiēti teſtimonio themſelues of their vanitie, and know that indeed their Idols neither heare nor ſee.

There is an oppoſition in this place betweene Gods witneſſes verſe 8. and the Idols witneſſes in this verſe, for the firſt yeeld a glorious witnes to the truth of God by the ſight of his works, and the vnderſtanding of his propheſies and promiſes: the others are conſtrained to ſtand mute and dumb, vnleſſe they will lie falſlie, and beare witnes to vaine things, hauing no truth at all in them. I denie not but Idolaters brag of their ſeruices, and extoll them aboue the skies: but this blind conſcience of theirs doth more then ſufficientlie witnes how great vanitie and wauering of mind there is in that which they doe: for they alwaies tremble and are in continuall vnquietnes, though they carie it out with great ſtirres by their rebellions. Themſelues then are vvitneſſes againſt their Idols: as if one hauing an ignorāt teacher, ſhould plead againſt his inſufficiencie. So the Idolaters ſhall teſtifie that their gods neither know, nor are able to doe ought; becauſe they are driuen to confeſſe that the matter whereof they conſiſt is nothing but wood and ſtone, or ſuch like ſtuffe wrought with hands: and that things thus framed and faſhioned can neither ſee nor feele ought at all. The faithfull therefore only are the lawfull and true witneſſes, in affirming that their God both ſeeth, gouernes, and effects all things done in heauen and in earth. The reſt muſt needs be confounded, albeit they ſtoutlie maintain their errors ſtow with fire and fagot, for their owne conſciences beare them witnes that their minds are enthralled with a vaine opinion, and corrupt imaginations.

Idolaters need no better confutation of their Idollworſhip then their owne blind conſciences.

Simile.

Verſ. 10. Who hath made a God, or molten an Image, that is profitable for nothing?

HE now derides mens madnes who preſume to be the forgers of gods: for is it not an horrible and execrable thing that a mortall creature ſhould dare to make himſelfe a Creator? truly there is no reaſonable man that would not greatly deteſt ſuch a furie, and yet the moſt part are caried away with ſuch a ſenſeles rage euen to make gods; and no admonition whatſoeuer can reclaime them. But they will anſwere me, that they haue no ſuch thought, and that we do them great wrong to accuſe them of ſuch follie. And the Papiſts at this day tell vs that we belie them, and offer them iniurie in vſing this and the like teſtimonies of ỹ Prophets againſt them: but they indeuor in vaine to iuſtifie themſelues by ſuch cauils. For Iſaiah very truly affirmes that they are ſo bewitched, that they thinke they can make a god: in regard they attribute a diuinitie to blocks and ſtocks; as ſoone as they be once framed and poliſhed, then they forthwith run a gadding after thé, they vow vnto them, they pray and bow their knees before them: in a word, they attribute that Idolaters ſcorned.

Papiſts forgers of gods.

Papiſts attribute a diuinitie to the Images which the caruer hath made.

that to them which belongs only vnto God.

Which is profitable for nothing.] This is to be well obserued, for by these words it is euident that all figures, by which men would represent God, are condemned for vaine and vnprofitable. Whence it followes, that God is not only blasphemed, and oft times his glorie giuen to dead stocks, but that those which make and receiue them, do also lose their labor to their owne confusion of face. The Papists alledge that these be lay mens bookes. But this is a weake and childish shift: for the Prophet testifies, that they are profitable for nothing. I wish them therefore either to confesse that their Images are vaine and vnprofitable, or if they dare be so bold, to blot this testimonie of our Prophet out of his booke. In a place before, hee hath expressed somewhat more: for Chap. 41. 23. he saith they teach nothing but lies. But wee haue spoken sufficiently of this matter in the 40. and 41. Chapters.

Images made to represent God, good for nothing.

Images lay mens books.

Note.

Vers. 11. Behold, all that are of the fellowshippe thereof shall bee confounded; for the workemen themselues are men: let them all be gathered together, and stand vp, yet they shall feare, and be confounded together.

HEe not onely rebukes the workemen and forgers of Idols, but all Idolaters, who are so blind and senslesse, as to inclose the power of God within a truncke of wood, as soone as it hath but receiued a new forme. His meaning is then, that the arts men should not onely be punished for their presumption, but those also which shall be companions with them in their superstitions. These shall not escape: for it is good reason that both being guiltie of the same crime, they should both receiue like iudgement. Now they cannot by anie meanes excuse themselues, in regard they see that their Idols are vaine and dumbe, forged and framed with mans hand: how can they be gods then?

A reproofe both of Idoll makers, and Idoll worshippers.

See Psal. 97. 7

Let them all be gathered.] As if he should say; Let Idolaters and their Idols combine themselues together; yet shall they feare and bee confounded, when they shall stand vp before Gods tribunall seat.

But it is not without cause that the Prophet threatens them with feare and confusion: for Idolaters are wont proudly to aduance themselues, and to despise others. They glory much in their multitude, as the Papists doe now adaies; who in reproch and disdaine, esteeme vs but a small handfull. They insolently insult ouer vs, and band themselues with wonderfull pride both against God and his word. Isaiah therefore appeales heere to the consciences of such men: for howsoeuer obstinacie and extreme rebellion of heart hath possessed them, yet are they constrained to tremble and quake when they are alone, crying out, What shall wee doe? especiallie when they looke towards the end of all their actions: for they haue no stabilitie whereupon they may boldly rest. When their rage prickes them forward, then they are audacious enough; but when they come againe to themselues, and at leasure bethinke them what they haue done, they melt away for verie feare. Their furie, pride, and multitude then, ought not to terrifie nor astonish vs. Why so? Because all this wil in a moment be brought to nought. Let vs not be much moued therefore at the combinations, brauadoes, and diuelish plottings of the Papists, seeing we know that all these things shall turne to their ouerthrow; for the more they ouerflow in insolency, and aduance themselues against God, the more heauie and shamefull shall their extreme fall be.

A multitude.

Idolaters forced to quake, will they nil they, because they haue no firme resting place.

Papists bold for a brunt.

Vers. 12. The smith taketh an instrument, and worketh in the coales, and fashioneth it with his hammers, and worketh it with the strength of his armes: yea, hee is an hungred, and his strength faileth: hee drinketh no water, and is faint.

13. The Carpenter stretcheth out a line, he fashioneth it with a red threed: he planteth it, and he pourtraieth it with the compasse, and maketh it after the figure of a man, and according to the beautie of a man, that it may remaine in an house.

IT is not in vaine that the Prophet makes this large description; for his meaning is to rouze vp the drowsie consciences of the superstitious, out of their senslesse blockishnes; if by any meanes he might either terrifie, or at least hinder the Iewes from being made drunke with this poisoned cup: for they were compassed about on all sides with an infinite number of idolaters. He disciphers out euerie thing point by point, that he might giue them cleerly to discerne of their spirituall frensie and madnesse. I grant he might haue condemned this their wickednesse euen in few words; but this large description makes it very apparant, when hee thus reckons vp the Smith, the Carpenter, the tooles, labour, and diligence of these workemen; to bring vs (as you would say) euen to the acting of the thing it selfe. For men who naturally haue these errors ingrauen in their vnderstandings, are more moued this way, then by a plaine sermon. Neither can they be wakened from their sluggishnesse, but by continuall loud cries. All things therefore must of necessitie be minced out vnto them by small morsels; yea they had neede haue it chewed for them, and put into their mouthes like young children, that so at the last they may comprehend that doctrine, which otherwise seemes new and strange vnto them.

The furie of Idolaters amplified.

Yea, is hungrie.] Hee expresseth the zeale wherewith Idolaters are carried away in forging their gods: for they are so fierie and vehement, that they can keepe no measure at all. Their lusts pricke them forward as mad men, men, to runne vpon their owne deſtruction: they will not afford themſelues time to eate nor drinke. This furie therefore may well be compared to the raging luſts of whoremongers, as we haue ſaid before. In a word, they ſpare not their ſtrength, but imploy all the faculties & powers both of ſoule & body in this buſineſſe; which is better vnderſtood by The ſtrength of the wine. As if he had ſaid, They depriue themſelues of diet and reſt, they apply to the vtmoſt the ſtrength of their armes: yea, they will ſcarſly allow themſelues the common comforts of nature. In a word, they ſpare neither paines nor coſt to finiſh their gods, which they ſo much deſire: verſ. 9.

Now, whereas hee ſaith, that though theſe faint, yet they giue not ouer, but indure hunger and thirſt, rather then to hinder their work, it is to be vnderſtood of the workmen: yet it may alſo as well extend it ſelfe to all the indeuors of an inconſiderate zeale. For we ſee how the ſuperſtitious will torment their bodies in their feruent deuotions (as they call them.) But the more they melt and pine away themſelues to fall into perdition, the more vile and abominable is our ſloth, when wee defraud God of that ſeruice which to him appertaines. But in the end hee ſhewes with what folly this diligence is filled, ſeeing the whole fruit of their labour is to behold their Idols, idlely to reſt without feare in whatſoeuer place they were faſtened: as if ſome lazie bodie ſhould wallow in the aſhes, or lie all day ſoaking in his bed.

Verſ. 14. He will hew him downe cedars, and take the pine tree and the oke, and taketh courage among the trees of the forreſt: hee planteth a firre tree, and the raine doth nouriſh it.

In this verſe the Prophet deſcribes not onely their violent furie, but their wilfull obſtinacie.

THe Prophet ſets forth not onely the zeale and witleſſe rage of Idolaters, but alſo their obſtinacie and rebellion. For in that he ſaith, they cut downe cedars, and did plant a firre-tree; it is to ſhew that they perſeuered long in their follie, and were not ouertaken with any ſuddē paſſion, which droue them to forge theſe gods. They are not content onely to chuſe trees of ſufficient growth, but they alſo plant them young, water, and husband them, and waite a long while, till they be come to a ſufficient ſtature to make an Idoll of. When wee reade theſe things, and ſee ſuch an horrible rage, let vs know that God takes vs by the necke (as it were) to pull vs thence, and to continue vs in true pietie. Wee muſt take theſe foxes (I meane theſe luſts) betimes, and kill them whileſt they be cubs, leſt if we nouriſh them ouer long in our breaſts, they grow wild and impregnable. Wee are euermore to watch ouer our owne hearts, that a wicked luſt no ſooner creepes in to carry vs away to the loue of Idols, but wee forthwith roote it out, for feare of falling into theſe deepe gulphes; becauſe euen the beſt of vs all beares about with vs ſome ſeedes of this brutiſhnes, which by no meanes can be weeded out: nay, they wil bud & ſprout vp in vs without ceaſing, vnleſſe we be purged of them by the power of the holy Ghoſt.

In that Idolaters are ſo vehement in their Idoll ſeruice, it ought to make vs bluſh, that are ſo cold in Gods ſeruice.

Moreouer, ſeeing Idolaters are thus violently carried downe the ſtreame in ſeruing their Idols, haue not wee cauſe to bluſh for ſhame, that are ſo cold in the ſeruice of our God? Let vs (I ſay) bluſh and be aſhamed of our ſloth and lukewarmneſſe; nay, key coldneſſe, whileſt thoſe that worſhip Idols, are fire hote as it were with zeale: and let vs alſo bethinke vs of the count wee are to make. With what vehemencie are the Turkes carried away, when the matter concernes the maintenance of their Mahomet and his blaſphemies? Are they not ready to ſhed their owne blood, and to giue their liues for the defence thereof? The Papiſts are not behind them herein: for they are no leſſe inflamed with furie to vphold their ſuperſtitions. And we in the meane while can content our ſelues to ſit ſtill; much adoe there is to quicken vp our zeale: nay, doe we not often euen quench thoſe good ſparkles which God hath kindled in vs by his holy Spirit? Heare what Ieremiah ſaith; Hath any Nation changed their gods? But my people hath forſaken me the fountaine of liuing waters, to dig vnto themſelues broken pits that can hold no water: Ier. 2. 11. This compariſon therefore ought to be well obſerued, leſt wee be found leſſe conſtant in maintaining the trueth, then Idolaters are obſtinate in defending lies.

Turkes.

Mahomet.

Papiſts.

Note.

Verſ. 15. A man burneth thereof; for he will take thereof, and warme himſelfe: alſo hee kindleth it, and baketh bread, yet hee maketh a god, and worſhippeth it; he maketh it an Idoll, and boweth vnto it.

16. Hee burneth the halfe thereof in the fire, and vpon the halfe thereof hee eateth fleſh: hee roſteth the roſt, and is ſatisfied: alſo hee warmeth himſelfe and ſaith, Aha, I am warme, I haue been at the fire.

17. And of the reſidue thereof he maketh a god: hee boweth vnto it, and worſhippeth, praieth vnto it, and ſaith; Deliuer me, for thou art my god.

Experience, which is the Miſtris of fooles, cannot make theſe fooles wiſe in heart.

HEe worthily taxeth their ſottiſhnes, that manifeſt experience it ſelfe cannot lead them to conclude it for a thing vnpoſſible, that a trunke of wood ſhould become a god. He alſo taxeth their vnthankfulneſſe, in defrauding God of his honour, ſeeing his power may eaſily be diſcerned euen in the growth of themſelues. For when a man puts wood to diuers vſes, the bountie of God forthwith preſents it ſelfe before his eies, be it in warming himſelfe by it, or in baking bread in the ouen, in roſting, or heating his meate with it. In a word, as oft as we warme vs, and inioy theſe benefits by our fires, ſhall wee not be conuinced of inexcuſable ingratitude, if we therein therein consider not of Gods goodnesse, who hath so prouided, as to destitute vs of nothing, that is needfull for vs?

Hereunto appertaines these words, Aha, I am warme: for this speech expresseth the ioy of such as being freed from incommodities and wants, begin to blesse their owne good estate. But can there be a more vnworthie or vnreasonable thing committed, then for men in such comfortable maner to haue the vse of Gods blessings, that their hearts are therewith filled with gladnes, and yet neuer to be thankfull to the author from whom they proceed; nay, to abuse his great riches to violate his honor? No doubt in the meate that is in their kitchins, and in other commodities, they see that the wood is their seruant and made for their vse, why then should they bow before a trunck of wood, that shall resemble the shape of a man? Is not God robbed of his right by such a course? And when they pray to their Images, rob they not the Lord of that sacrifice which he principallie requires? The very prophane writers haue sometimes derided the follie of these Idolaters, which durst after their owne inuention frame a god of a corruptible substance, whereof they made no reckoning before. Thence came this flout of the Poet Horace, who brings in an Idoll speaking thus:

Horace.

I was once the stock of a figge-tree, serning to no purpose, whilest the Carpenter not knowing whether it were best to make me a seate to sit vpon, chose rather to make me such a god as you now here see mee.

But such folke notwithstanding could not see the fountaine from whence this impietie sprang, because they gaue not themselues to consider of that goodnes and power of the only true God which shines in all his creatures.

Now when the Prophets dealt thus bitterlie against Idolaters in laying forth their furie and sottishnes, no doubt but they complained as if he had offred them great iniurie: neither wanted they their tricks, but to the vtmost coloured ouer their errors with goodly pretences: to wit, they confessed that the gods were in heauen, as may be seene euen in their owne writings: neither would they in expresse termes affirme the stone or wood was a God indeed. And this shift also the Papists haue fownd out at this day against vs, because they would not be condemned of so grosse a blindnes. But we haue told you, that the Prophet stands not so much here to debate about the simple essence of God, who also were no better then an Idoll, if nothing but that were giuen vnto him: but the question here is touching his proprieties, to wit, his prescience, power, prouidence, iustice, saluation, and such like, which our Prophet would haue ascribed vnto him fullie and whollie. And when Idolaters erect Images and runne vnto them for aid and succor, supposing that God heares them; also, when they speake to their puppets which they set before them, tie they not their saluation to the things themselues? But this brutishnes proceeds frō the ignorance of the nature of God, in that they imagin him to be carnall like themselues, who is a pure and spirituall substance: and thus they manifest the base opinion they haue conceiued of God, whose glorie they reiect and prophane, in likening him to corruptible and earthly things: for what is more dissonant from his Maiestie then Images? and yet those that worship them, indeuor to include God in heauen, and to make him stoup to their lusts. The Prophet is iustly displeased then with such corruptions, and therefore gaules the furious desires of these superstitious ones, seeing a man can not thinke of nor vtter a thing more detestable.

A shift of the Papists.

1 2 3

Nothing iarres more with Gods Maiestie then Images.

Vers. 18. They haue not knowne, nor vnderstand: for God hath shut their eyes that they can not see, and their hearts that they can not vnderstand.

* Or, he.

HIs conclusion is, that it were impossible for men indued with common reason to be thus reasonlesse, if God had not shut vp both their eies and hearts. For had they but a dram of wit in their heads, they must of necessitie be drawne to consider how absurd a thing it is to worship a fragment of that wood which themselues had burned, and with their owne eies saw it consumed to ashes before them. But in as much as they neither know nor vnderstand any thing, nor will bee brought to beleeue their owne senses, a man may well conclude, that they are become beasts: for this ignorance wherewith Isaiah reprocheth them, is as much as if hee had said; They are beasts in the forme of men. And howsoeuer many among them were otherwise sharpe witted enough, yet in this behalfe they were more then sufficiently conuinced of their brutish sensleshesse.

The conclusion.

They are become brutish that will not beleeue their owne senses.

The reason added in the latter member of the verse, is not to lessen their fault, but to shew how odious and hatefull their sinne is: for men would neuer become so senseless, vnlesse God in his iust iudgement had giuen them vp into a reprobate sense. Some supplie God heere: others, the false Prophets: affirming that the people were blinded, because they were seduced by their impostures; otherwise they had neuer bin plunged into such grosse errors: for false doctrines blind the eies. There are others who take it in another sense, and they refer it to Satan. But because the first exposition is most vsed in the Scriptures, I rather allow of that; to wit, that God blinded them iustly. Vnlesse any had rather referre it to the Idolaters themselues, who wittingly are wont to put out the eies of their owne reason: and in this sense there must bee a change of the number; to wit, they: a thing much frequented among the Hebrewes: But I haue set downe that which seemed fittest. You may also adde, that it is verie vsuall in the Hebrew tongue, to conceale the name of God, when it mentions him.

1 2

False doctrines blinde the eies.

Now it appeares by many places of Scripture, in what sense God is said to blind the eies, and to harden the hearts; to wit, when he takes away the light of his holy Spirit, and How God is said to blinde and harden.

and giues men vp to their owne luſts: ſo as they can no more be reclaimed by any perſwaſion. He alſo armes Satan with the efficacie of error, by cauſing him to lay ſuch ſnares in the way of thoſe that receiue not the truth in loue, as they can neuer wind themſelues out, but muſt ſtill be ſubiect to his illuſions and bewitchings. What remaines then but groſſe darkneſſe and blockiſh ignorance, through which this tyrant, the father of lies and of darkneſſe, gets free egreſſe and regreſſe. For there is not left vs ſo much as one ſparkle of light to ſcatter theſe miſts of error: but wee ſhall be driuen on with the Spirit of giddineſſe, wherewith the Lord ſmites the reprobates, ſo as we ſhall be ſtrangely haled to and fro at Satans pleaſure.

The blame of blinding not to be laid vpon God.

And yet we muſt not lay the blame of this blinding vpon God, for hee alwaies findes iuſt cauſe ſo to doe, though many times it be hid and concealed from vs. Neither is it fit we ſhould curiouſly prie into this ſecret, nor to enter into his hidden counſell, vnleſſe we meane withall to beare away the puniſhment of our owne preſumption. I grant the cauſes for the moſt part are moſt apparant, as mens vnthankfulneſſe and rebellion againſt God: as Saint Paul deſcribes it at large in the Epiſtle to the Romans, Chap. 1. 28. for their blinding is the iuſt fruit of their deſerts. Howſoeuer men excuſe themſelues then through ignorance, yet this will be no ſufficient plea: for they had neuer heen wrapped in ſuch errors, if the Lord had not done it for their wickedneſſe ſake.

Now from the iuſt iudgements of the one, we may draw ſound and infallible arguments from the iniquities of the other: for God is iuſt, and therefore neuer puniſheth any man vniuſtly; he blindes no man till himſelfe hath deſerued it, and hath wittingly ſhut his owne eies: let the fault therefore reſt wholly in men, who of ſet purpoſe ſeeke their owne blinding and hardening. The Prophets meaning then doubtleſſe is, that men who ought to ſuffer themſelues to bee gouerned by diuine inſtincts, being naturally indued with ſome light of reaſon, were worthily reiected of the father of lights, to be the bondſlaues of Satan.

The fault muſt reſt on man.

Verſ. 19. * And none conſidereth in his heart, neither is there knowledge nor vnderſtanding, to ſay, I haue burnt halfe of it euen in the fire, and haue baked bread alſo vpon the coales thereof: I haue roſted fleſh and eaten it; and ſhall I make the reſidue thereof an abomination? ſhall I bow to the ſtocke of a tree?

*Or, he returnes not to his heart.

A confirmation.

THis is a confirmation of the former ſentence, whereby the Prophet labours to preuent all excuſes, becauſe vnbeleeuers delight to maintaine and vphold their owne ignorance. And whereas it commonly falles out that men haue ripe wits in deuiſing and foreſeeing things for their owne aduantage in the world, but are as blind as Moles or Backes, in things belonging to Gods worſhip and ſeruice; the chiefe cauſe is, that they are too eager in purſuing worldly profits and pleaſures, ſt are too ſlacke in ſeeking firſt the kingdome of God. In this ſentence therefore the Prophet reproues this contempt of pietie and religion, in that hauing fetched ſuch long circuits, yet theſe vnbeleeuers conſider not in themſelues whether they are in the right way or no, or whether they labour not in vaine in ſpending ſo much coſt and labour in the purſuit of their errors and ſuperſtitions.

He alſo proues that their ſottiſhneſſe is inexcuſable, in that they giue themſelues to ſuch new found ſeruices. For if they did but weigh all circumſtances a little in an equall ballance, they might eaſilie perceiue their owne groſſe folly: but ſeeing they be blind, it is a ſigne they meane to deceiue themſelues, and to pleaſe themſelues in their blindneſſe. And therefore there is no pretext of excuſe at all left them, which can ſtand them in any ſtead: ignorance they can pretend none, becauſe they will not apply their wits to ſearch out the truth. Returning into the heart, is taken heere for conſulting apart by a mans ſelfe: for there is ſcarce a child ſo rude, that may not bee a ſufficient Iudge to condemne ſo palpable a madneſſe. The ſuperſtitious therefore fauour themſelues too much; for they ſinne not altogether of ignorance: neither is this vice ſo much to be attributed to mans naturall corruption, as to his obſtinate and heady opinion.

Verſ. 20. He feedeth of aſhes: a ſeduced heart hath deceiued him, that hee cannot deliuer his ſoule, and ſay; Is there not a lie in my right hand?

Another confirmatiõ.

THis verſe againe confirmes the former ſentence. To feede of aſhes, ſignifies as much as to be repleat with aſhes: as, to feede vpon winde, Hoſ. 12. 1. ſignifies to bee filled with winde; for the ſame may be ſaid of the one, that is ſaid of the other. As on the contrary, Thou ſhalt feede the truth; Pſal. 37. 3. for thou ſhalt be ſaciate with truth: that is to ſay, filled. Others againe expound, Thou ſhalt adminiſter ſpirituall foode: others, Thou ſhalt feede faithfully. But I had rather follow the firſt interpretation. Heere his meaning is to ſay, that men are ſwollen indeed, but in the meane while they are windie and emptie: for they are onely ſtuffed with vanity, which hath no ſtedfaſtneſſe in it. And therefore they rather burſt with pride, then by being any way ſatisfied with good nouriſhment.

Afterwards he comprehends both the former points againe; to wit, that they ſee nothing, becauſe they are intangled with deceitfull baits; and yet that they wittingly and willinglie caſt themſelues into theſe ſnares of vanitie. The Prophet inſiſts long vpon this matter, to ſhew that nothing puſheth forward theſe Idolaters, and the ſuperſtitious ſort to commit theſe outrages, but their own free will. What reason haue they then to lay the blame vpon others, seeing the cause of these euils proceedes altogether from themselues? which euils they will needes retaine and carefully nourish within them. They aduance themselues in wonderfull pride against God, they are replcat with a false opinion of their owne superstitions: in a word, all vnbeleeuers are readie to burst with pride. Let vs in the meane while feed vpon the solid meate of sincerittie and truth, and let vs beware we suffer not our selues to be misled by any such delusions.

Notwithstanding he taxeth them (iustly) you see, for pleasing themselues in so foule a vice: for who is it that wil pardon such a carelesnesse, as is ioined with the losse of mens soules? We see how busilie men bestir them, when the naturall life is in ieopardie: stands it not vs much more in hand then, to awaken men out of the slumber of their soules, which are in danger of eternall damnation; especially if wee may doe it by putting forth our hand in pulling them out?

Men busie themselues tooth and naile for the matters of this naturall life.

Moreouer, it is said that he deliuers his soule, which by repentance escapes out of Satans nets. And in that sense we are said to saue one another, when we bring men that haue erred into the right way by our holy admonitions. Whence comes it then that Idolaters runne headlong into perdition? Because they take the bridle in their teeth, and wilfully rush into the same, euen as the horse rusheth into the battell.

The cause that plungeth Idolaters into perdition.

Lastly, in the end of the verse hee shortly shewes, the meane whereby men may recouer themselues out of this danger; to wit, in considering their owne workes, without flattering of themselues: for he that pleaseth himselfe in his error, and inquires not whether he doth well or no, such a one shall neuer be able to deliuer his owne soule. As for example, our Papists will not examine vpon what reason their diuine seruice is grounded, but content themselues to couer such a beastlinesse vnder the cloake of simplicitie; as if God meant to haue a Church of rude asses, or as if hee had not commanded vs to distinguish betweene that seruice hee accepts, and that which he reiects: or as if hee had not commanded vs diligently to search what his good and acceptable will is, lest we should indifferently allow darknesse for light, and sower for sweete. For these things must bee examined by the touchstone of his written word: which if we shall doe, it shall be easie for vs to escape out of the dangers; if not, then let vs lay the cause of our ruine vpon our selues. Why so? Because our meaning is to perish wilfully, in regard wee will not suffer our selues to be brought into the right way, or will not beare the words of exhortation.

Note.

To the law and to the testimonie. Chap. 8.

Vers. 21. Remember these (O Iakob and Israel) for thou art my seruant: I haue formed thee: thou art my seruant; O Israel forget me not.

Application.

NOw hee applies that to the peoples vse, which he hath so long insisted vpon before, touching the lies and superstitions of the Gentiles; wherein the ignorant deceiued themselues, especially in the matters belonging to Gods worship and seruice. Now hee writ not this so much for them of his owne time, as for their sakes principally which were to succeede, and should afterward remaine captiues in Babylon. In which regard, they by their long abode among the Idols, were in danger to be corrupted, & declined from the true seruice of God, if they had not been restrained by such bridles. The Prophet therfore admonisheth them, that howsoeuer they should be detained seuenty yeeres in captiuitie, yet they should call these exhortations vnto mind, thereby to sustaine their hearts in their greatest temptations.

Thou art my seruant.] Hee addes this as the reason why they should remember these promises; euen to keepe themselues from this common contagion. For it had been a thing insupportable for the elect people, whom God had incloſed within the limits of his law, thereby to separate them from others, if they confusedly and indifferently should haue mingled themselues among the pollutions of the Gentiles. As if he should say; Wonder not you that the Caldeans are so rife in their errors, neither follow their example: because I haue formed thee to serue mee: that is to say, I haue reformed and regenerated thee, that thou mightest be heire of eternall life. Of this creation we haue amply spoken heretofore; to wit, that it appertaines to the renewing of the inward man. Now the Scripture is often wont to vse this argumẽt, to wit, You are called to holinesse, and not to vncleanesse: 1. Thes. 4. 7. Also Phil. 2. 15. Walke as children of the light, in the midst of a peruerse and froward nation. With many the like places.

Hence wee gather that wee are worthy of many stripes, if by our careleſnesse and negligence, wee suffer that light of Gods grace wherewith he hath inlightened vs, to go out; because our fault will be much greater then theirs who haue not tasted of the like fauour. I grant the prophane are worthily punished; neither shall the excuse of ignorance be able to serue their turnes: but those that haue receiued grace, and haue abused it, shall bee worthy to be the more seuerely chastised.

Forget me not.] His meaning is, that it is vnpossible for those which were once entred into the good way, to turne aside; vnlesse it bee by forgetting of God. For as long as the remembrance of his Maiestie remaines imprinted in the tables of our hearts, neither errors nor impostures shall euer bee able to take place. Is any reuolted from God then to turne to superstition and impietie? Let him impute it to his owne malice.

Errors will neuer take place in vs, if the remembrance of Gods name bee thorowlie imprinted in vs.

What is the cause of apostasie then? The forgetfulnesse of God: for that by little and little drawes vs out of the right way, till at the length we be wholly reuolted. But by the remedie heere prescribed, he assures them that they shall be out of danger to reuolt, namely, if they exercise themselues in continuall meditation: for if our minds grow once careleſse heerein, they gather rust (as it were) which which infects and corrupts all knowledge of God, till it be cleane eaten out.

Verſ. 22. I haue put away thy tranſgreſſions like a cloud, and thy ſinnes as a miſt: turne vnto me, for I haue redeemed thee.

A conſolatorie promiſe.

THe Lord promiſeth deliuerance to his people: for the truth is, that our mindes cannot be raiſed vp to remember him as wee ought, vnleſſe we firſt feele him gracious and fauourable vnto vs. That hee might preſerue his people which he had formed for himſelfe from reuolting then, he addes now a promiſe of conſolation; to perſwade with them, that this their baniſhment ſhould not indure for euer: for God (as hee is a moſt patient and louing Father) ſo mitigates their corrections, that hee alwaies forgiues the faults of his children.

When God forgiues the ſinne, he alſo remits the puniſhment.

As touching the putting away of their iniquities, it properly belonged to the captiues, which for their iniquities ſake ſuffered that puniſhment. Hence it followed therefore that God being appeaſed, their deliuerance was at hand: for it is an argument taken from the cauſe to the effect. If the fault be remitted, ſo is the puniſhment. For the Iewes were no ſooner reconciled with God, but the puniſhment which they ſuffered for their tranſgreſſions ceaſed.

An argument taken from the cauſe to the effect.

Now in theſe words there is hid a cloſe exhortation to repentance, not onely to moue them to ſigh vnder the burthen of their afflictions, but to acknowledge them as iuſt recompences of their iniquities, whereby they had prouoked God vnto wrath. As oft then as he handles vs roughly, wee muſt not craue ſo much to be diſburthened of this our ſorrow and miſerie, as rather to beginne at the forgiueneſſe of our ſinnes, that God would not impute them vnto vs. And heere wee haue cauſe giuen vs againe to meet with that fond diſtinction of the Papiſts, who confeſſe that the fault indeed is forgiuen, but not the puniſhment.

1 2

We ſhould not deſire ſo much the remouall of our puniſhments, as the blotting out of our ſins. The fond diſtinction of the Sophiſters met withall againe, touching the remitting of the fault, and retaining of the puniſhment.

By the ſimilitude of the cloud, hee meanes that the Lord would no longer continue to purſue them in his wrath, nor to correct them in his diſpleaſure; becauſe their ſinnes being put out of his ſight, the puniſhment was therewithall alſo aboliſhed. For you ſee that in a faire day, the clouds which before darkened the light of the Sunne from vs, are vaniſhed and gone. Let vs therefore reiect theſe diueliſh inuentions of men, whereby they labour to ouerthrow this comfortable doctrine of the free remiſſion of ſinnes, ſeeing it flatly croſſeth the doctrine of the holy Prophets.

Simile.

This clauſe which is added, returne to mee, may be taken two waies: either that the Lord thereby exhorts them to repentance: or that therein he giues them hope of deliuerance: but both expoſitions may ſute well. We haue told you that it is vſuall in the Scriptures to exhort to repentance, as oft as it mentions our deliuerance: for the Lord purpoſeth by this meanes to draw vs to himſelfe, that hee might thereby fit vs for the receiuing of his benefits. But becauſe the people were in a manner paſt hope of their deliuerance, in reſpect of their owne infidelitie, wee may take theſe words as a confirmation, that from thence the people might vndoubtedly conclude in themſelues, that they ſhould returne. As if the Lord ſhould haue ſaid; I know you thinke me to be far from you in this your diſtreſſe, yet be of good cheere, for I am mindfull of you ſtill. Now this latter expoſition pleaſeth me beſt, becauſe as I thinke it ſutes beſt with the text. For the Prophet aboue all things ſtudies how to confirme theſe poore captiues in the promiſes: yea, and if it were poſſible, to ingraue them in their hearts. Well, he commands the Iewes to turne vnto the Lord, howſoeuer their long exile hindered them from hoping that he would be their redeemer. As if he ſhould haue ſaid; Though I ſeeme to be far from you, and to neglect you, yet be not diſcouraged, for I am reſolued to redeeme you.

1 2

Verſ. 23. Reioice yee heauens, for the Lord hath done it: ſhout yee lower parts of the earth: braſt forth into praiſes, yee mountaines; O forreſt and euery tree therein, for the Lord hath redeemed Iakob, and will be glorified in Iſrael.

An exhortation to thankſgiuing.

HEe now exhorts the Iewes to giuing of thanks, not onely as a teſtimonie of their dutie, but alſo to aſſure them the more fully of their deliuerance. And thus he brings the people as it were to the thing done, no leſſe then if they had ſeene their deliuerance before their eies. For ſuch maner of ſpeeches doe affect vs much more then if the promiſes were deliuered in naked and bare termes. Seeing then the people might ſtand in ſome doubt of their returne, becauſe they languiſhed long in their miſeries, and were almoſt conſumed in them: the Prophet awakens them, and not onely frames them a ſong fit for the paying of their vowes, but alſo ſhews that this worke of God ſhall bee ſo glorious, that the very heauens and the earth, with all the inſenſible creatures ſhall admire the greatneſſe and nouelty of it.

Ye mountaines ſound forth praiſes.] We may well interpret, yee high heauens, and thou earth below, ſing praiſes: but becauſe he makes mention of the mountaines, he cals thoſe the lower parts of the earth which are euen, as the plaines and vallies, to the end that all Countries on which ſide ſoeuer, might be incited to celebrate and magnifie the name of the Lord.

He addes afterwards, that this work which all the creatures are called to behold and admire, is the redemption of his Church: (for that is comprehended vnder Iakob and Iſrael) and ſignifies that Gods glory ſhall wonderfullie ſhine therein. Beſides, we are to conſider that which I haue ſaid elſewhere; to wit, that their returne is not ſimply ſet out heere, but the end thereof also is comprehended vnder it: for they were redeemed out of their captiuitie, vpon condition that God in the end might gather vnder one head (to wit, Christ) a Church composed of all nations vnder heauen.

Vers. 24. Thus saith the Lord thy redeemer, and he that formed thee from the wombe; I am the Lord that made all things, that spread out the heauens alone, and stretched out the earth by my selfe.

A description of Gods power.

NOw the Prophet will forthwith according to his custome, fall into a description of Gods power; because the promises would little moue vs, vnlesse the doctrine of Gods power were also added, to remoue all doubts and scruples out of our hearts. For it often falles out that by our obstinacie and distrust, wee diminish both the goodnesse and power of God, in attributing lesse vnto the same then we ought: for which respect the Prophet heartens on the faithfull by the excellent titles afterwards mentioned, to the end they might hope aboue hope. And yet he begins with the commendation of the goodnes and fatherly affection which God beares his Church to the very end: for the setting forth of Gods force and power would moue vs but little, if himselfe should not therewithal draw neere to confirme vs in the assurance of his goodnesse. Wee must not begin at his Maiestie then, nor mount so high, for feare of being ouerwhelmed: but this loue of his, by which he graciously drawes vs vnto him, must be imbraced of vs also.

The title of redeemer in this place, is referred to the time past, in regard that the Iewes, who were once redeemed out of Egypt (as out of a bottomlesse gulph, and that by a miracle almost incredible) ought from the remembrance thereof to be confirmed, in hope of the euerlasting continuance of it from age to age. Hee calles himselfe their former, in the same sense which we haue often expounded it before; to wit, because in regenerating those by his Spirit whom he adopts, he makes them new creatures. And thus by the way he puts them in mind of the benefits they had already receiued; that from thence they might conclude, that God would be sure in his promises concerning their deliuerance for the time to come.

Regeneratiõ.

From the vvombe.] Hee addes this also, to teach them to acknowledge that all the benefits they had receiued from God, were vndeserued: for he had preuented them by his mercy, euen before they were able to open their mouthes to aske any benefits of him. And by this consideration Dauid cheereth vp his spirits in his extreme distresses: It is thou O Lord, saith he, that hast drawne me out of my mothers wombe: thou gauest me hope whilest I sucked my mothers breasts. I was cast vpon thee euen from the vvombe: thou art my God from my mothers belly: Psal. 22.9,10. But our Prophet speakes not heere of that generall fauour which is common to all men as soone as they are come into the world; but he magnifies that couenant whereby God had adopted the posterity of Abraham, euen to a thousand generations: for doubtlesse he which hath begun so good a worke, would finish the same vnto the end.

In the next place followes the titles concerning his power; to wit, that it is he which of his owne good pleasure did spread out both the heauens and the earth. By the word spreading out, his meaning is, that the absolute gouernment of the whole world is in his hands, and that all creatures are subiect vnto him: for Gods vvord and power ought so to be ioined together, that they must neuer bee separated.

Vers. 25. Idestroy the tokens of the soothsaiers, and make them that coniecture fooles, and turne the wise men backward, and make their knowledge foolishnesse.

THe Prophet expresly addes this, because Babylon not onely surpassed all other nations in riches, men, and munitions: but also in a wonderfull measure of vvisdome, and that in such wise, as they seemed to pierce euen the very skies. For what inconuenience could befall them which foresaw things to come a farre off, and could preuent imminent dangers, as they imagined? Astrologers, which then were in great request among them, foretold of great matters, and thence came that bastard Astrologie which we forsooth call Iudiciall, wherewith many good and toward wits at this day are corrupted. They vsurp the name also of Mathematicians, that they may get them the more credit among the common people. But the Egyptians gloried as the only authors of this science, because they held themselues to be of greatest antiquitie, and were the instructers of others. But this contention we leaue to them. Sure it is, that the Chaldeans were practitioners of it from the beginning, and so highly esteemed of it, that both Greekes and Latins haue giuen the name of Chaldeans to the Astrologians. For as much then as they trusted very much in this science, the Lord auoucheth that he vvill scatter all things belonging thereunto.

Bastard Astrologie, which is called Iudiciall.

Mathematicians.

Now by the word tokens, or signes, he vnderstands the situation, concurrence, and diuers aspects of the starres, from whence the Astrologers draw their coniectures. In the next place he saith he will make them fooles. Some take the word Baddim, for lies: as if he should say, The diuinations of Astrologers are but impostures, and meere illusions: but I had rather take it for soothsayers, it being often elsewhere taken in this signification.

But it may be demanded whether he vtterly condemnes the Astrologie of the Chaldeans, or only the abuse and corruption of it. Quest.

I answere, he heere only condemnes the signes whereby the Chaldeans coniectured, as if they Ans.

Whether Aſtrologie be vtterlie condemned or no.

they could iudge of things to come: for the Lord pronounceth that all ſuch things are meerely vaine. It is not without cauſe then that he forbids his people to aske counſell of Aſtrologers, Southſayers, Prognoſticators, & ſuch like Magicians, and that no man ſhould haue to deale with men of ſuch profeſſions vnder paine of death, Deut.18.10.11. But if any could haue gathered certaine coniectures from the ſituation and aſpect of the ſtarres, no doubt the Lord would neuer haue condemned ſuch ſciences. Seeing then without exception he forbids them, it clearly ſhewes they conteine nothing but meere illuſions, and therefore that all his people ſhould eſteeme thē as abominations. But thoſe that pleade for this vanitie, alledge, that the Lord hath giuen the planets and ſtarres for ſignes, Gen.1.14. Be it that I grant them this principle, yet we muſt conſider vvhereof they be ſignes. For we condemne not that Aſtrologie which contemplates the courſe of the ſtarres, wherein Gods wonderfull Maieſtie is to be ſeene: but we reiect as vaine ſuch curious heads as will thence conclude how long kingdomes and common-wealths ſhal ſtand; vvhat accidents ſhall befall this Citie, or nation: that man, or ſuch a vvoman, for herein they paſſe their bounds, and abuſe theſe ſignes, which were neuer ordeined to foretell things to come. I confeſſe indeed that ſometimes we are admoniſhed by theſe celeſtiall ſignes to behold Gods wrath, which we haue iuſtlie enflamed, and alſo the plagues which hang ouer our heads, but not to make vs ſo foole-hardie as thence to conclude of euery particular accident, much leſſe to ſearch out things hidden and vnreuealed, which it is not lawfull for vs once to enquire after. But aboue all things we are to finde out the cauſe and ſpring of this myſterie of iniquitie which is in it: for a man no ſooner receiues this error, to wit, that mans life is gouerned by the ſtarres, but Gods prouidence is by and by ouerthrowne, and he turned out of his iudgement ſeate: or thus, that they may take from him the authoritie of puniſhing the wicked any more, or, in his mercie to giue life to thoſe that were loſt. For ſuch as thinke that the ſtarres gouerne and rule mens liues by their irreuocable mouings, doe forthwith harden their owne hearts with this imagination of fatall deſtinie, and ſo they leaue nothing at all vnto God: thus then his iudgements are concealed, pietie nipt in the head, and prayer vtterly aboliſhed.

Obiect.

Anſ.

The courſe of the ſtarres.

What is to be condemned in Aſtrology.

Planets neuer ordained to tell things to come.

Wherein the myſterie of this iniquitie conſiſts.

Fatall deſtinie.

1
2
3

He calles them vviſe, and attributes knowledge vnto them by way of granting them ſo much, for ſuch kind of men are wont to glorie much in the titles of vviſe men, and in making ſhew what knowledge they haue in the ſtarres, as if God had called them to be of his priuie Counſell. Thus then in a word he concludes, that none of theſe vaine maskes of vviſdome, nor knowledge, ſhall be able to hinder the Lord from ouerturning of their eſtate, becauſe he will bring all their iuggling tricks to nothing.

Wiſe men.

* Or, raiſeth vp.

Verſ. 26. He confirmeth the word of his ſeruant, and performeth the counſell of his meſſengers, ſaying to Ieruſalem, thou ſhalt be inhabited: and to the cities of Iudah, ye ſhall be built vp, and I will repaire the decayed places thereof.*

NOw the Prophet applies that which he ſaid before to his purpoſe: for albeit he hath ſpoken generallie, yet he reſpected a certaine end, that ſo he might fit his ſpeech to the purpoſe in hand, leſt the Iewes ſhould be troubled with this fained vviſdome of the Chaldeans, and ſo be brought to doubt whether God would at any time deliuer them or no. He oppoſeth their vaine predictions then to Gods promiſes, that no man ſhould thinke this Monarchie was vtterlie exempt frō danger. Now the promiſe was this, Babylon ſhall fall, Chap.21.9. But my people ſhall be ſet at libertie.

Gods promiſes, oppoſed to vaine predictions.

The Chaldeans derided theſe promiſes, as if they ſhould thus haue ſaid, Muſt wee needs fall? A ſort of wiſe men no doubt: as if we could not foreſee that by the ſtarres if any ſuch thing ſhould happen. The Lord therefore ſaith, that he will raiſe vp, that is to ſay, will accompliſh that which he hath promiſed, and will bring ſuch things to paſſe, as the wiſe men neither yet had, nor were able to coniecture. For the ſcorners eſteemed no better of theſe propheſies then of an vnprofitable ſound which ſhould forthwith vaniſh. Againſt ſuch an opinion hee oppoſeth the word to raiſe, therby ſhewing that God would cauſe his word to be beleeued.

The name ſeruant, may be vnderſtood of all the Prophets, vnleſſe we had rather ſay, that Iſaiah is chieflie heere ſpecified, as the moſt apparent witnes and meſſenger of this deliuerance. But there is no neede why we ſhould reſtraine this to one in particular, ſeeing it is a thing common to them all, being all called by one and the ſame name of Ambaſſadors or meſſengers of God: for he had ſent many vnto them, that by a mutuall conſent they might the better vphold the faith of the people.

Vnder the word counſell, he comprehends Gods decrees, but not all: for it is vnlawfull to ſound the depth of thoſe ſecrets which he hath not reuealed to his ſeruants: but when he diſcouers that which he hath purpoſed to doe, wee ought to receiue the ſame with as great reuerence as if God himſelfe had opened his moſt ſecret counſels from heauen. Let men beware then how they giue ſcope to their appetites, to enquire further of things then God hath reuealed by the mouth of his Prophets. To be ſhort, his meaning is to commend the authoritie of his word which is vttered by the miniſtrie of men, and that no leſſe then if they reuealed to vs the eternall counſels of God.

See Deut.29.29.

What authoritie God giues to his Miniſters.

Which ſaith to Ieruſalem.] After the Prophet hath ſpoken generallie, he fits his ſpeech in as particular a ſort as he can to the preſent purpoſe touching Gods promiſes, for otherwiſe the people could haue reaped little fruit by them. He names Ieruſalem therefore expreſſlie, to giue them to vnderſtand that it should be restored. In this therefore we are especially to obserue Gods power, in that he is able as oft as need is, miraculously to defend, yea and raise vp his Church euen from the gates of death. Doe we beleeue that he is true and almightie? Then may we be assured that there shall alwaies bee a Church: and when sorrowfull times approch towards vs, let vs hope that hee will speedily redresse all disorders; for that which is heere said to Ierusalem, appertaines to the whole Church. If we be inforced at this day then to see her lie in the dust, and her towers cast to the ground, so as nothing but pitifull desolations euerie where appeare; let vs build vpon this promise, that God in his time will build and repaire the decaied places thereof, and bring her to her perfect hue.

The Church shall alwaies continue.

Vers. 27. He saith to the deepe, Be dry, and I will dry vp thy floods.

SOme thinke the Prophet describes Babylon here vnder a figure; neither doe I denie but it may be heere comprehended: yet I cannot allow that it should be onely restrained to her. For I had rather take it for some vnexpected mutation; because hee shewes there will be a necessitie of such a rare chãge, as if the people were to be drawne out of the bottome of the sea: but he resolues them, that God will be omnisufficient to ouercome all lets and impediments. As I thinke therefore, Isaiah rather alludes to that first deliuerance, at what time God brought the people out of Egypt through the midst of the sea: as if he should say; I haue done this for your fathers, hope for the like at my hands now, and thinke not that the waies through which you are to passe homeward, shall be stopped vp against you.

Experience should breed hope in vs.

Vers. 28. He saith to Cyrus, Thou art my shepheard: and hee shall performe all my desire: saying also to Ierusalem; Thou shalt bee built; and to the Temple, Thy foundations shall surelie bee laid.

THis is an excellent place. In which wee may consider, not onely the admirable prouidẽce of God, but also a worthy testimonie of the truth and authoritie of his promises: for Cyrus was named here a long time before he was borne. How may that be proued? There was betweene the death of Manasses, who put Isaiah to death, and the birth of Cyrus, more then an hundred yeeres. But say he had now been borne, who could haue foretold that hee should haue come to Babylon, frõ the furthest mountaines in Persia? These things are worthy our obseruation then; for they shew that Isaiah spake not by the will of man: for who would euer haue thought that one called Cyrus, should come with maruellous swiftnesse from the remotest and most barbarous parts of the world, to deliuer Gods people? Whereas scoffers obiect, that the Iewes might forge this after all was come to passe: it is so sottish and absurd a cauill, that it needes no refutation. For during the captiuitie, the Iewes turned ouer these bookes, to confirme their hope touching their deliuerance: who doubtlesse had been put cleane out of heart, if the Lord had not comforted them by these & such liuely promises, which were as goodly monuments left to strẽgthen the minds of the faithfull in faith and hope. Neither doe I doubt but Cyrus himselfe was much amazed, when he vnderstood that God had appointed him to be the shepheard and leader of his people Israel: yea, it is verie likely also that it greatly inflamed his heart with such a loue towards the Iewes, that it framed him with readinesse of mind to furnish the Iewes with victuals and other necessaries for their iourney. Thus the Lord points him out with his finger, by whose hand he determined to redeeme his people; that so they might not gaze here and there for help in their perplexities.

The certaintie of the prophecies.

Cyrus.

2. Pet. 1.21.

Obiect.

Ans.

And saith to Ierusalem.] This is the conclusion which confirmes the former things; and all to assure them that Ierusalem should vndoubtedly be built againe. As also, that hereby they might conceiue in what deare and precious account God had them, when they should see the Monarchy of the East giuen vp to the Persians. And therewithall he shewes for what cause Ierusalem shall bee restored: euen that Gods pure worship and seruice might be there againe erected. For hee promiseth not this restauration to the end men should seeke their owne ease or preferment, but that the Lord may be called vpon of his seruants, in peace, in puritie, and in sincerite of heart: which it stands vs in hand to obserue diligently, because many prefer their temporary pleasures and profits, before the honour and worshippe of God. In regard whereof, Haggai takes vp a bitter complaint against those of his time; Is it time for your selues to dwell in your ſeiled houſes, & this houſe to lie waſte? Againe, You ſuffer this houſe to lie waſte, and yet runne euery man vnto his owne houſe: Haggai 1.4.9. and yet it was the Lords pleasure they should chiefly haue regarded his house. To this appertaines that which the Prophet addes, And to the Temple; Thy foundations shall be laid. Indeed we at this day haue no Temple of wood and stone which we are commanded to build, but the liuing Temples of the holy Ghost: 1.Cor.6. to wit, our selues, because he hath chosen vs for his habitation. These are the Temples which wee must build vp by the wholsome doctrine of Gods word, that we may be framed to an holy and an vpright conuersation, and to render him the seruice due vnto him. For this is the very cause why God will haue a Church in the world; namely, lest the memory of his blessed name should bee cleane abolished from among vs.

What Temples God would haue built him now.

Why God will haue a Church still in the world.

CHAP.

THE XLV. CHAPTER.

Verſ. 1. Thus ſaith the Lord vnto Cyrus his anoynted, whoſe right hand I haue holden to ſubdue nations before him: therefore will I weaken the loines of Kings, and open the doores before him, and the gates ſhall not be ſhut.

*Or, vngird.

When God is determined to redeeme his Church, no impediments can hinder the effecting of it.

Iſaiah continues forth the matter which he beganne to hande in the latter end of the former Chapter. For hee ſhewes that God hath not promiſed deliuerãce to his people in vaine; becauſe hee had before ordained and decreed the meanes how to bring it to paſſe, according to his owne purpoſe. When there is queſtion made touching our deliuerance out of anie danger, we forthwith inquire by what means it may be effected; and alſo the reaſon of it. Now albeit God had rather hold vs in ſuſpence, and ſo to conceale from vs the meanes he hath already in his hand: notwithſtanding in this place he applies himſelfe to the weakneſſe of their mindes, and is contented to name the partie vnder whoſe conduct he purpoſeth to bring them home into their Country. For in regard their faith was to be ſharplie aſſailed by diuers temptations of other kindes; hee was willing heere to preuent this particular doubt, that ſo other troubles which befell them, might not vtterly cruſh them. To giue the more efficacie then vnto his word, he turnes him to Cyrus, ſaying; I haue choſen thee to be my King, I will take thee by the hand, and will ſubdue nations before thee; ſo as they ſhall make paſſage for thee, and ſhall willingly yeeld themſelues vaſſals vnto thee. For this turning of his ſpeech to Cyrus, was much more effectuall, then if the Lord had ſpoken onely to his people.

Obiect.

But ſome may thinke it ſtrange that hee calles him his anointed, ſeeing this title onely appertained to the Kings of Iudah and Iſrael, in regard that they repreſented Chriſts perſon. For to ſpeake properly there is but one anointed of the Lord: according to which Habacuk ſaith; Thou wenteſt forth with thine anoynted, for the ſaluation of thy people: Hab. 3.13. For the kingdome was ſet vp in the perſon of Dauid, which was the image of Chriſt; who for this cauſe among the Prophets, is called Dauid, & the ſon of Dauid, in many places: Ezech.37.24. Hoſe.3.5. I grant that the anointing which diſtinguiſhed this prieſtlie kingdome from other prophane gouernements was the ſpeciall: ſeeing then that this title appertaines onely to the Kings of Iudea, it might ſeeme ſtrange that it ſhould heere be attributed to an idolatrous Pagan. For though Cyrus was inſtructed by Daniel, yet we reade not that he changed his religion: hee reuerenced indeede the God of Iſrael, and held him the ſoueraigne God aboue all creatures; but he was neuer drawne by this means to ſerue him in any ſinceritie, neither was he euer brought to forſake his idolatries and ſuperſtitions. God honours him thus far then, as to call him his anoynted; not with a perpetuall ſtile, but during the time he held the office of a deliuerer, and in reſpect he ſuſtained the perſon of God, both to reuenge the cauſe of the Church, and to redeeme the ſame out of the Aſſyrians hands: which office indeed, properly appertained to Ieſus Chriſt. This ordinary title then giuen vnto Kings, muſt be reſtrained to this circumſtance, to wit, as he was the redeemer of Gods choſen in ſetting them at libertie. Whence wee may ſee how greatly God eſteemes the ſaluation of his Church, when in regard of one particular benefite, Cyrus an idolater is called his anoynted.

Why Cyrus is called Gods anoynted.

Anſ.

I haue holden thy right hand.] By this phraſe of ſpeech he ſignifies that Cyrus ſhall proſper in all his enterpriſes; becauſe hee ſhall fight vnder God as his Generall. Iſaiah affirmes then that Cyrus ſhall haue good ſucceſſe for the Churches ſake, that he may be fit to deliuer her. And in this he againe magnifies Gods prouidence, who in the midſt of ſuch troubles, aſſured the Iewes that he would ſo diſpoſe of things from heauen, that all ſhould worke together for the ſaluation of his elect. Now in reſpect that Cyrus could not well goe into Babylon, becauſe al Aſia bent their force to diſappoint him of his purpoſe; the Prophet in theſe words ſhewes, that God will ouerthrow all contrary power, that ſhall ſet it ſelfe againſt him. And becauſe mans chiefe ſtrength conſiſts in his loines, or reines, the Hebrewes take the weakning of the loines, for the diſſoluing or weakening of the ſtrength. We may alſo expound it a little otherwiſe, to wit, that the Lord will ſpoile or vngird them; according to the common phraſe of the Scripture: for Kings at their coronation, are girt wit a girdle, it being a part of their royall furniture: Iob 12.18. In which ſenſe God ſaith in the fift verſe following, that he would gird Cyrus. I therefore reſt my ſelfe rather in this latter expoſition, that ſo the oppoſition may ſute the better. Hence it appeares thẽ that Kings haue no more power then the Lord giues them, neither can they vſe it in the defence either of themſelues, or their people, but by his commiſſion. For if he be pleaſed to diſpoile them of their principalities, they cannot defend the ſame againſt him, neither by force, nor by any meanes elſe whatſoeuer.

Kings haue no more power then God giues them.

And I will open the doores before him.] By this phraſe, the Prophet meanes, that forreſters cannot reſiſt God, which (in generall termes)

all will confeſſe: but yet they ceaſe not for all that to truſt in their towers of defence. For when Cities are enuironed with thick walles, and that the gates are faſt ſhut, euery one thinks himſelfe in ſafetie: contrarywiſe the Prophet ſhewes, that all fortifications are vnprofitable, and that the ſtopping vp of paſſages are but in vaine when the Lord will open the way to their enemies. Now howſoeuer it is not to be doubted but the gates were ſhut and ſurely barred: yet becauſe Cyrus marched with an incredible ſwiftnes through all places where he came, as if all Cities had giuen him way, the Prophet rightly affirmes, that all impediments ſhall be remoued.

The ſtrongeſt Fortifications too weake, when the ſtrong God minds to redeeme his choſen.

Verſ. 2. I will goe before thee and make the crooked ſtraight: I will breake the braſen doores, and burſt the yron barres.

3. And I will giue thee the treaſures of darknes, and the things hid in ſecret places, that thou mayſt know that I am the Lord which call thee by name, and name thee, though thou haſt not knowne mee.

These two verſes depēds on the former.

THeſe two verſes depend vpon the former: but in a word they ſhew, that Cyrus ſhall eaſily ouercome, and that in ſhort time, becauſe the Lord ſhall prepare the way for him; for this cauſe he promiſeth that the crooked way ſhall be made ſtraight, in reſpect that God will take away all obſtacles. Now becauſe money is the ſinew of warre, and that Cyrus was to paſſe ouer the poore & barren mountaines of Perſia, Iſaiah tels him, that the treaſures which before were hid, ſhould fall into his hands, that being enriched with ỹ ſpoile, he might furniſh himſelfe with all neceſſaries, for by treaſures of darknes, he meanes treaſures hidden and buried deeply in the earth. Now it appeares plainly by the hiſtories how theſe things came to paſſe: for after Creſus king of Lydia was taken, who was the richeſt king in the world, Cyrus recouered great treaſures. A man would neuer haue ſuppoſed then that he could haue made ſuch a generall Conqueſt, had not the cauſe of ſo good ſucceſſe been heere expreſſed: to wit, that the Lord called him forth, and guided him in his iourney, that in him he might manifeſt a notable ſigne of his power: for ſo much, that thou mayſt know, imports.

Money the ſinew of warre.

Creſſus king of Lydia.

I grant that Cyrus knew (as we haue ſaid) that God was ỹ God of Iſrael, and did greatly reuerence him: yet he became no true Conuert for all that, neither did he imbrace the true worſhip according to the ordinances of Gods law. This therefore was a particular knowledge, to wit, ſo farre forth as he aſſiſted the Church, for whoſe deliuerance he was ordeined. It was needful then that he ſhould be in ſome meaſure touched with this knowledge, in regard of this worke of God which he had to performe. He ſpeakes not of that knowledge then by which we are enlightened, or of the ſpirit of regeneration, but of a particular knowledge, ſuch as the prophane and vnbeleeuers haue.

Cyrus no true conuert.

Cyrus was not indued with a ſauing knowledge.

Which call thee by thy name.] Some barely expound this phraſe of ſpeech, that Cyrus was thus called of God before he was borne. But we haue ſaid heretofore, Chap. 43. 1. that by theſe words ỹ Prophet meant another thing, namely, that God calles thoſe by name whom he chuſeth and ordeineth to execute ſome ſpeciall worke, in which reſpect he ſeparates them from the common multitude, for this ſignifies a neerer and a more familiar calling. And in this ſenſe it is ſaid, that the good ſhepheard calles his ſheepe by name, Iohn 10. 3. becauſe he knowes them diſtinctlie. But aboue all, this agrees to the faithfull, whom God accounts his flock, and of his familie, which grace he neuer vouchſafed to Cyrus. But in as much as he appointed him to be a ſpeciall Leader in ſuch a ſpeciall ſeruice, he ſtamped him as it were with rare and ſingular notes of his power. And thus much touching the cauſe why this title of Calling is giuen vnto him.

Theſe words, The God of Iſrael, muſt be well obſerued, becauſe the ſuperſtitious are wont to attribute their victories to their Idols. And in that ſenſe Abacuk ſaith, That euery one ſacrificed to his god, Aba. 1. 16. They runne riot then in their talke, and forge ſuch a diuinitie as it pleaſeth them to conceiue of, in ſtead of acknowledging the only and true God. Now all that which is heere ſaid of Cyrus, may be applied vnto vs in a farre better ſenſe, to wit, that we frame not to our ſelues ſuch a knowledge of God as fits our owne appetites, but that we ſeparate him ſo from Idols, that he may only be rereceiued and acknowledged of vs in one Ieſus Chriſt, out of whom we can worſhip nought but an Idoll, nay the very Diuell himſelfe. In this reſpect then let our knowledge ſurpaſſe that which Cyrus had, to wit, let vs reiect all ſuperſtitions and idolatries, that wee may ſerue him in holines and righteouſnes (all the dayes of our life.)

Out of Chriſt we can worſhip nothing but an Idoll, nay, the Deuill himſelfe.

Verſ. 4. For Iaakob my ſeruants ſake and Iſrael mine elect, I will euen call thee by thy name, though thou knowest not mee.

HE ſhewes the reaſon why Cyrus ſhall proſper thus happily in all his enterpriſes, euen for the conſeruation of Gods people. As if the Lord ſhould haue ſaid, Thou ſhalt obteine a glorious victorie, but it ſhall be more in reſpect of mine elect, then of thee: for, for their ſakes it is that I haue ſubdued kings and nations vnder thine obedience. By theſe propheſies then the Prophet meant to comfort the Iewes, leſt they ſhould deſpaire in the middes of ſo many calamities: and yet no doubt he alſo meant to teach Cyrus that hee was beholding to the Iewes for all his conqueſts, that by meanes hereof he might be enclined to vſe them with the better reſpect.

In the ſecond part of the verſe there is a repetition which amplifies the reaſon very much:

much: and on the other ſide the Prophet ſhewes by what right the Iſraelites came to be Gods ſeruants, euen becauſe it pleaſed him freely to elect them. For it is not in the power of man to make himſelfe the ſeruant of God, or to obteine ſuch an honour by his owne free will. This word elect therefore is added as an expoſition of the former member, and yet the end of our election is therewithall ſet downe. For God finding vs the very bond-ſlaues of Satan by nature, calles vs by his free grace, that we being ſet at libertie, ſhould become his ſeruants: notwithſtanding he ſhews, that no man is worthie in himſelfe of this fauour, but he which is elect. For who dares brag that he hath merited ſo great a benefit? Or what can we doe, or offer vnto God? We are not ſufficient of our ſelues, but the Lord makes vs ſufficient, as S. Paul ſaith, 2.Cor.3.5. His free election therefore is free, and is the very foundation of our ſaluation: and the ſeruice is but the end, which we of dutie owe vnto him.

It is not in the power of man to make himſelfe Gods ſeruant.

The end of election.

Gods free election the foundation of our ſaluation.

Now, howſoeuer this be reſtrained to the hiſtorie of Cyrus, yet thence we may gather a generall doctrine. For when God cauſeth ſuch diuerſities of changes in the world, he therby procures the ſaluation of his Church, and wonderfullie conſerues it, euen in the middeſt of theſe tempeſts. We (for the moſt part) are as blind as beetles in viewing the works of God: but yet wee muſt hold it for a ſure principle, that he neuer forgets his Church, no not then when a man would thinke heauen and earth would goe togeather: nay then by ſecret meanes he brings forth her light as the noone day, that all in concluſion may indeed confeſſe that himſelfe is the protector and defender of the ſame.

A ſure principle: God neuer forgets his Church.

Lib.11. Chap.8. Ioſephus. Alexander the Great. Iaddus the hie Prieſt.

Ioſephus recites a memorable hiſtorie of Alexander the Great, who hauing beſieged Tyre, ſent Ambaſſadors to Ieruſalem to aske the tribute which the Iewes payed to Darius. Jaddus the high Prieſt who had ſworne to pay this tribute, would in no wiſe obey Alexander, but refuſed to pay it him: this tyrant ſcorning ſuch a refuſall, and in a maner being readie to burſt with pride, determined the deſtruction of Ieruſalem; and indeed hauing ouercome Darius, he fits himſelfe for the execution of his deliberation. The hie Prieſt Iaddus comes forth clothed with the Prieſtly robes, and with other Prieſts met Alexander. Alexander no ſooner beheld them, but he alights from his horſe, and fell downe at the hie Prieſts feet in ſigne of reuerence. As all ſtood amazed at this, as at a thing extraordinarie, and cleane contrarie to his purpoſe, thinking he had bin beſides himſelfe; Alexander anſwered Parmenion, (who only amongſt the reſt asked him what he meant) that he worſhipped not this man, but God, whoſe office Iaddus ſuſteined. As alſo, that whileſt he remained at Dion a Citie of Macedonia, he had ſeene in a dreame a man ſo apparelled, which preſented himſelfe vnto him in the perſon of God, willing him to take Aſia: alſo, promiſing to be the conductor of his armie, that he might not doubt of the victorie, and for this cauſe he ſaid he could not content himſelfe with ſufficient admirations in beholding this hie Prieſt. Thus Ieruſalem was deliuered, the mouth of the Lyon ſtopped, who thought of nothing but gorging himſelfe with the pray; nay, ſhe gat greater libertie of him then ſhe inioyed before, beſides great gifts and large priuiledges.

Parmenion.

Dion, a Citie in Macedonia.

Why this hiſtorie is alledged.

Now I haue alledged this hiſtorie to ſhew that the Church of God is preſerued in the middes of all dangers by ſtrange and vnexpected meanes, for the times were then very troubleſome, and no one corner in the world almoſt remained in quiet. But aboue all, Iudeah ſeemed to be appointed vnto robberies and ſpoilings; and yet behold the Church deliuered as it were by a miracle, whileſt other countries were waſted, and the forme of them vtterlie changed.

That which is added in the end of the verſe, though thou haſt not knowne me, ſerues for the greater amplification, not only to teach Cyrus that theſe his endowments were no parts of his merits, but that he ſhould not deſpiſe the God of Iſrael, albeit he knew him not. The Lord often aduertiſeth vs that he preuents mens induſtries, that he might vtterlie caſt downe all high conceits of fleſh and blood. But he had another end in preuenting of Cyrus, for if he had thought that God had giuen theſe victories vnto him for his owne ſake, then would he like enough haue ſcorned the Iewes, yea and would haue vſed them but as his vaſſals and ſlaues. The Prophet ſhewes therefore that Cyrus his deſerts were no cauſe of this, but that he deliuered the people out of their enemies hands, becauſe God fauored them: for this poore blind Infidell would haue bin readie to haue tranſported that ouer vnto his Idols, which was due to the liuing God; becauſe being beſotted in his ſuperſtitions, he would neuer haue giuen obedience to that God willinglie who was a ſtranger and vnknowne vnto him, vnleſſe he had firſt of all bin inſtructed by this propheſie.

Verſ.5. I am the Lord and there is none other: there is no God beſides me: I girded thee though thou haſt not knowen me.*

* Or, apparelled.

A confirmation of the former ſentence.

HE confirmes the former ſentence: for it is no ſuperfluous repetition. Truly it was neceſſarie that Cyrus ſhould be often vrged with this point, that there was but one God, vnder whoſe power all potentates and nations are tributaries, that being rid by this meanes from all impoſtures, he might be whollie turned to the God of Iſrael. Moreouer, the Prophet more expreſſie ſhewes, that no diuinitie is to be ſought out of him: as if he ſhould ſay, Looke that thou attributeſt not this victorie to thine Idols, neither conceiue thou any confuſed god in thine owne braine, as fooliſh men are wont to doe: but be thou aduertiſed that it is the God of Iſrael only that is the author of this conqueſt. It is like enough that Cyrus made no great vſe of this ſermon, neither that he forſooke his Idols to cleaue

No diuinitie to be ſought out of God.

cleaue to this true God; yet no doubt he had many flashings in his mind, which made him after a sort to acknowledge a Godhead, and that this God had the whole world at his becke. But howsoeuer Cyrus neglected this doctrine, yet the members of the Church ought to imbrace it, that they may boldly reiect all false gods.

I haue apparelled, or girded thee. This apparelling answers to the nakednesse whereof he spake before, saying; The loines of Kings shall be vngirt: for he is said to apparell such as he furnisheth with strength to the battell:
1 Ps.18.32. to make them conquerors. Whence we may gather, first that men haue no more courage then that which God inspireth them
2 withall by the power of his Spirit. Secondly, that neither armor nor armies serues to any
3 purpose, if God be not for vs. Thirdly, that it is he onely who gouernes all hurly burlies, and giues the victory to whom it pleaseth him, lest any should thinke that things fall out by chance.

Hee repeates againe, though thou hast not knowne me, to confirme this point the better; to wit, that Cyrus obtained nothing of God,
1 but for Iacobs sake: vers.4. first, that he might thankfully acknowledge so great a benefit:
2 and as a testimonie of his thankfulnesse, hee might indeuor to shew kindnes to the people of God.

Vers. 6. That they may know from the rising of the Sunne, and from the West, that there is none besides me. I am the Lord, and there is none other.

God would haue the memory of his mercies retained in his Church.

THe Prophets meaning is, that this worke should bee so excellent, that all nations should extol and magnifie Gods name therein; yet was it not forthwith accomplished. For albeit the fame of this victory was spread far and neere, yet few perceiued that the God of Israel was the author of it. But after it was manifested to those that dwelt neere, it was diuulged also to others, till at last the newes thereof came to the whole world. Neither doth hee foretell what should by and by fall out; but that which was afterwards to be accomplished, notwithstanding these things were a long time concealed. The Lord then would not suffer the remembrance of such a deliuerance to vanish, but would haue the same to be called to mind by continuall admonitions, to the end the nations furthest remote, might celebrate the memorie of this deliuerance from generation to generation, euen to the worlds end.

Wee ought likewise to obserue that which I haue touched before, to wit, that the Prophet ioines the first prophecies with the last, because the returne of the people was as a beginning and forerunner of the generall deliuerance to come. And thus he speakes of the true and perfect restauration of the Church. Adde also, that although men by their malice and vnthankfulnesse should burie these glorious works in obliuion; yet it followes not thereupon, that the same should not cleerely shine in the view of the whole world; for they cease not to retaine their glorie still, though the blind (worldlings) haue no eies to behold them.

See the first section after the seuenth verse, for the further exposition of this first verse.

Vers. 7. I forme the light, and create darknesse: I make peace, and create euill: I the Lord doe all these things.

AS if he should say; Those who were wont to attribute all things to fortune, or to Idols, shall now know the true God: so as they shall attribute all power and glory, yea and the administration of all things to him only. He speakes not of a perfect knowledge; albeit the same be required to attaine vnto the vnderstanding of former things. Now seeing the Prophet affirmes, that the very Pagans shall vnderstand, that this whole action is ordered and gouerned by the prouidence of God; it ought to make those that beare the name of Christians to blush, when they rob him of his power, to giue it to diuers sorts of gouernours, forged in the shop of their owne braines; as they doe in the Papacie. For what an acknowledging of God call you that, to giue him onely bare and naked titles? For as he is the true and onely God, so must wee ascribe vnto him his absolute and full authoritie, which hee hath in ordering & disposing of all things at his pleasure, both in heauen and in earth.

As I thinke, this whole section belongs to the first verse.

By these words of light and darknes, vnder a figure he vnderstands as well peace and war, as prosperite and aduersitie. Afterwards, according to the phrase of the Hebrewes, he extends the word peace, to all good successes; which plainly appeares by the opposition: for he not onely opposeth peace to war, but to all other mishaps. Some giddy heads wrest this word euill, as if God were the author of it: but it is euident enough to him that hath eies to see, how shamefully they abuse our Prophets testimony. For that which is plainly opposed, expounds the signification of the word: adde if you will, that the members ought to be referred one to another: for he opposeth peace to euill; that is to say, to warr, calamities, and other aduersities. If he had opposed righteousnesse to euill, they might haue had some pretext: but this opposition of things so directly contrary, is easilie vnderstood. And yet the common distinction is not to be reiected; to wit, that God is the author of the euill of punishment, but not of the fault. But the Sophisters doe expound it amisse: for although they confesse that famine, plague, warre, vnfruitfull seasons, and such like scourges doe come of God, yet they denie him to be the author thereof when they befall vs, by reason of men. Which is a false doctrine, and vtterly crosseth the Prophets words: for the Lord often raiseth vp the wicked to correct vs by their hand; as it appeares by many testimonies of the Scripture. I grant the Lord inspires not euill into them, but he vseth it as a meanes to chastise vs, and therein perfotmes the office of a iust Iudge. Did he not so serue himselfe of Pharaohs hardnesse

Light and darknesse taken for prosperitie and aduersitie. Obiect. Ans.

God is not the author of euill, as some would haue him. A common distinction. God the author of the euill of punishment, not of the fault. A false doctrine of the Sophisters. 1. King. 22. 14 23.

of

Exod.2.23. & 4.11. of heart, and others, to afflict his people? Let vs therefore hold faſt this doctrine, to wit, that God onely is the author of all things: that is to ſay, he ſends aduerſitie and proſperitie, howſoeuer hee vſeth mens induſtries therein; that ſo nothing may bee attributed to fortune, or to anie other cauſe whatſoeuer.

God the author of all things, and how.

Verſ. 8. Ye heauens ſend downe dew from aboue, and let the clowdes droppe downe righteouſneſſe: let the earth open, and let ſaluation and iuſtice grow forth; let it bring them forth together: I the Lord haue created him.

The doctrine of this verſe was very effectuall to confirme the faithfull in the expectation of their deliuerance to come.

SOme thinke this ſhould be a forme of praier, which the faithfull were to vſe in waiting for that deliuerance whereof the Prophet ſpeakes. And thus they ioine this verſe to the former; The Lord will not deliuer you by and by, it ſhall be your duties therefore to ſolicit him by your praiers. But I expound it otherwiſe, to wit, that the Prophet ſpeakes ſtill in the name of the Lord, who in regard of his abſolute power, hath heauen and earth at his becke; and heere commands them in his name to apply themſelues to further the reſtauration of the Church. This verſe therefore hath great force in it to confirme the faithfull in the hope of their redemption to come: for which way ſoeuer the Iewes turned their eies, they ſaw nothing but matter of deſpaire. If they looked towards heauen, behold God an angry Iudge: if they looked towards the earth, they ſaw nothing but tokens of his wrath to preſent themſelues about them on euery ſide, ſo as they could hope for nothing that was good. Iſaiah therefore confirmes their faith, and commands heauen and earth, which promiſed nothing but threats and terrors, to bring forth iuſtice and ſaluation: which kind of ſpeech hath greater weight in it, then if God himſelfe had promiſed that this ſhould haue come to paſſe. For the elements, who are ready preſt at Gods commandement, are in this ſenſe ſaid to receiue and vnderſtand the charge inioined them of God. Thus then the ſentence runnes all with a breath, which would be but abrupt, if this verſe were to be vnderſtood of praier.

Now this phraſe of ſpeech is vſuall in the holy Scripture: as in the Pſalmes; The mountaines ſhall bring peace to the people by Iuſtice: Pſal.72.3. Truth ſhall bud out of the earth, and righteouſneſſe hath looked downe from heauen: Pſal.85.11. Alſo, mercy and truth are met together, righteouſneſſe and peace haue kiſſed each other. In thſe places Dauid deſcribes the kingdome of Chriſt, and the felicitie thereof, ſhewing that righteouſneſſe and peace, mercy and truth, ſhall raigne therein together. And the very ſame thing the Prophet toucheth in this place.

Now he alludes to thoſe meanes that ſerue for our ordinarie food; for our naturall life is ſuſtained and maintained by bread, and the fruits of the earth, in regard we ſtand in need of ſuch helpes. But the earth will not be fit to bring forth theſe fruits, vnleſſe the heauens doe refreſh the ſame by often raining downe vpon it out of the cloudes, that afterwards it may become fertile, and bring forth fit nouriſhment both for man and beaſt.

By the word iuſtice he meanes nothing elſe but the faithfulneſſe of the Lord, whereby he defends and conſerues his Church, in as much as he cauſeth iuſtice to diſtill from the heauens; that is to ſay, a right order of gouernment, the fruit whereof is ſaluation. For he ſpeakes heere of the deliuerance of the people out of Babylon; in which deliuerance the Lord ſhewed himſelfe to be the protector of his Church. Now hauing attained the naturall meaning of the words, we muſt thence deſcend to Chriſts kingdome, whereunto theſe words ought indeed to be referred: for God hath not limitted theſe promiſes within the compaſſe of a few yeeres; but continued on his benefits euen to the very comming of Chriſt, in whom all theſe things were abſolutely fulfilled: no doubt then but the eternall iuſtice and ſaluation brought by Chriſt, is heere ſet before vs: but wee muſt firſt reſtraine this expoſition, to the returne of the people out of captiuitie.

Iuſtice.

Saluation a fruit of Iuſtice.

The Kingdome of Chriſt.

Verſ. 9. *Woe bee to him that ſtriueth with his maker, * the potſhard with the potſhardes of the earth: ſhall the clay ſay to him that faſhioneth it, What makeſt thou? or thy worke, it hath none hands?*

*Or, Let the pot contend againſt the pots.

10. Woe vnto him that ſaith to his father; What haſt thou begotten? or to his mother; What haſt thou brought forth?

THis place is diuerſly expounded: for ſome vnderſtand it of Balthazar, who (as we ſee in Daniel) lifted vp himſelfe proudly againſt God, in prophaning the holie veſſels of the Temple: but this is too conſtrained an expoſition. The ſecond may ſeeme more probable; to wit, that the Lord giues and grants more to his choſen, then a father will doe to his children, or a workman to his worke: for thoſe who expound the words thus, thinke that the Prophet ſpeakes heere by way of compariſon in this ſenſe: If a ſonne ſhould riſe vp againſt his father, and contend with him, ſhould he get any audience? No: for a father will keepe and retaine his owne authoritie, and in this behalfe would iuſtly reiect his ſonne. The like would alſo fall out, if the clay ſhould riſe vp againſt the Potter. Yet God permits vs to contend with him, and offers himſelfe freely to ſatisfie any of our demands: and thus they ioine the tenth and eleuenth verſe together, thinking that the patience of God appeares, in that he deales thus fauourably with vs, and humbles himſelfe more then morrall men are commonly wont to doe towards their children. I grant that this

The firſt expoſition of this place.

The ſecond expoſition.

expoſition

exposition hath more colour then the former, but both of them are farre wide from the Prophets intention.

The third and most naturall exposition.

The simple and plaine meaning of the Prophet therefore as I thinke is this, that Isaiah here represseth mens complaints, who murmure and pleade against God in the time of aduersitie. This admonition therefore came in due place, to teach the Iewes willinglie to receiue the consolation offred, that they might be fitted to beare the crosse patientlie and with a setled mind: for as oft as God holds vs in suspence, the flesh solicits vs to grudge on this maner: Wherefore doth he not rather that which we would haue him to do? What meanes he to vex vs thus in deferring his help so long? Now, that the Lord might beate back such a presumption, he saith, Shall the pot contend with the potter? Shall a sonne pleade with his father? And shall not I then much more deale with you as it pleaseth me? What remaines then but to beare his stripes patientlie? For it is our duties to let him freely execute his office, and by no meanes to withstand his soueraigne power and authoritie. As touching the word Wo, I take it for a particle of expressing him that rebukes and corrects.

Murmurings arising from flesh and blood.

Let the pot striue vvith the pots. That is to say, let euery one striue with his equall, as we vse to say in our common prouerb, Let the pot cleane the pots of the earth. For in sending men to their like, he taxeth their boldnes and presumption, for not considering that in contending vvith God, they sought nothing else but how to plunge themselues into their owne ruin. As if he should say, Doe yee know with whom yee haue to doe? Let them know that God will euer be stronger then man, and they shall be constrained in the end to giue place. But if they so farre forget their owne brittlenes, that like Giants they dare scale the heauens, then shall they proue by experience (it may be when it is too late) that they medled with their match, and that they haue contended with their Maker, who can easily dash his vessels in pieces one against another, yea and beate them to pouder, as the potter doth the vessels which he hath formed.

Prouerb.

Some expound the word Kerasim workemen, or potters, and vnderstand it thus, Shall the pot rise vp against the potter? But they take one letter for another, to wit, shin for sin, which they might easily doe. I had rather therefore follow the common reading, and content my selfe with this sense, Shall the clay say to him that formed it? The Potter as we know hath power to make what vessell he will: the Father hath authoritie to command his children; and shall God haue lesse power and authoritie? The Prophet therefore reproues those which contend with God in aduersitie, in that they can not beare their afflictions patientlie. Such must learne to giue eare to the admonition of S. Peter; Submit your selues vnder God, saith he; and humble your soules vnder his hand: Bow your necks to his yoke, 1. Pet. 5. 6. Striue not with him that is stronger then thy selfe, if he exercise thee with diuers calamities, for power belongs vnto him to gouerne vs according to his good pleasure. If we stand to dispute with him, he wil vse such inuincible arguments against vs, that being conuinced, we shal be inforced to giue place. But if it so fall out that he doth not by and by represse our pride, it is not because he is destitute of reason, but because in equitie we should leaue vnto him the right to dispose of vs after his will: an honor, which he iustlie reserues to himselfe, that his creatures presume not in the pride of their hearts to aske a reason of his doings. Is there any thing more dishonorable then to reiect his iudgements, when we list not to approue of them?

No disputing with God.

S. Paul vseth the same similitude, but it is in a matter of an higher nature, for he disputes about the point of Gods eternall predestination, and manifests mens blind conceits, who reason with God why he hath chosen some, and reiected others. Then he shewes, that men at the least should giue God as much priuiledge as to a Potter or workeman, and cries out, O man, who art thou that pleadest with God! Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, vvhy hast thou made me thus? Hath not the Potter power ouer the clay? &c. Rom. 9. 20. 21. Who shall dare to oppose himselfe against God? The Apostle then accords with our Prophet, though S. Paul vseth the similitude in a different matter and of greater consequence: and yet both affirme that God hath an absolute power ouer men, to the end they should suffer themselues to be ordered and gouerned by him, patientlie bearing all his corrections: the only difference is, that Isaiah speakes of things which concerne this present life; and Paul, of those that concerne life euerlasting.

Iob. 9. 4.

S. Paul and Isaiah accords together though with some difference.

Or thy vvorke is hath no hands.] The Prophet obserues mens vsuall formes of speaking, as when we say, Set to the last hand, when a piece of worke is vpon finishing, and that mens hands wax feeble whilest the work is rough and vnpolished. So, as oft as men murmure against God for not applying himselfe to their desires, they therein accuse him either of sloth, or of ignorance.

Mettre la dernier main.

Vers. 11. Thus saith the Lord, the holy one of Israel, and his maker, Aske me of things to come cõcerning my sonnes, and concerning the works of mine hands: command you me.

I Haue told you alreadie that I like not of their iudgements who knit this verse so with the former, as if God giuing ouer his right, should giue the Iewes free leaue to enquire more of him then a child of his father. The other exposition differs not much from this, to wit, that the Israelites are miserable in that they vnderstood not Gods will; yea, in that they refused to know it, and would not seeke for comfort, but reiected it when it was offred: in a word, that their owne follie was the cause why their afflictions ouercharged them, and that they could finde no consolation lation vnder them; becauſe they would not enquire at the mouth of the Lord. If we receiue this expoſition, we muſt preſuppoſe that he ſpeakes of another kinde of inquiſition. For though it be a thing vnlawfull to enter into Gods ſecrets, yet of his goodneſſe hee vouchſafes to diſcouer to his Children ſo much thereof as is expedient for them to know. And, it is alſo good reaſon that as oft as he opens his ſacred mouth, we ſhould carefully lend our eare to all that which he manifeſts vnto vs. Now we may alſo ſee the ſelfe ſame fault at this day in our ſelues; wherewith Iſaiah reprocheth the auncient people the Iewes.

But it is more likely this ſentence depends vpon the former, ſo as it is an application of the ſimilitude, in this ſenſe; It is not lawfull for the ſonne to conteſt with his father, nor the clay to ſtriue with the Potter; how much leſſe ſupportable is that libertie, which mortall men take vnto themſelues, when they will preſcribe rules vnto God, how hee is to order his children? for otherwiſe the ſentence ſhould be both doubtfull and diſmembred. But theſe two members ſute very well together; the pot ſuffers his Potter to doe what him liſteth; and he which is begotten of a mortall man, dares not contend with his father: ſhall not I then, who am the Creator and ſoueraigne Father of all, haue as much power ouer my creatures & children? If any like the firſt expoſition better, then Iſaiah blames mens folly, in that they neglect to aske of God, or to learne from his mouth, the things that may comfort them: for they might eaſilie haue perceiued by the propheties, what care God had of them, and thereby might haue come to the knowledge of the end of their miſeries.

The beſt remedie wee can vſe for our ſuccour in aduerſities.

And queſtionleſſe the onely remedie in aduerſitie is, to goe and aske counſell at the mouth of the Lord, and not to fix our eies vpon the outward eſtate of things preſent; but in our ſpirits to comprehend the ſaluation to come, which the Lord hath promiſed vs. For he is faithfull (as the Apoſtle ſaith) and will not ſuffer vs to be tempted aboue that we be able to beare, but will giue an happy iſſue with the temptation, and will augment his graces in vs: 1. Cor. 10. 13.

As touching that which is by and by added, command you me: it is not to be taken by way of an impetious authority; for what haue we to command God, or vrge him contrary to his will? No, wee are to be commanded and vrged by him: for none can profit in Gods word, vnleſſe hee bring a modeſt and meeke ſpirit. In theſe words the Lord offers himſelfe ready to teach vs, to the end we might bee bold to aske of him concerning ſuch things as are expedient for vs to know. As if he ſhould ſay; Aske of mee, I am ready to inſtruct you in things needfull for your comfort. And yet becauſe this manner of ſpeech ſhould be ſomewhat improper, me thinks that the complaint whereof I ſpake before, is the fitteſt, to wit, that God is ſtripped as it were of his fatherly authoritie, if he be denied liberty to hold his Church vnder a profitable diſcipline.

And thus this word Command, is to be taken in euill part, when men hauing ſhaken off all modeſtie, ſhall make no bones to ſummon God before them, and to queſtion with him of whatſoeuer comes in their braine, as if he were their ſeruant. Which yet appeares better by the word aske: as if he ſhould ſay; You ſhall doe well to teach mee how to forme and frame my worke. In a word, the Prophets meaning is, to exhort men to modeſtie and patience: for they no ſooner begin to fall a diſputing with God, but it is all one as if they went about to pull him out of his high and heauenly throne. Now in this, he ſpeakes not onely to the Iewes; but as was alſo needfull to repreſſe the blaſphemies which then walked apace through the mouthes of prophane Idolaters. It is as much to ſay thē, as if God in theſe words meaning to maintaine his owne right, ſhould refute the murmurings and repinings of all the world: and that in this manner, Whither will your pride and preſumption ſtretch at laſt, ſeeing you will not ſuffer me to be maſter in mine owne worke-houſe, and to gouerne my familie as I thinke good?

Verſ. 12. I haue made the earth, and created man vpon it: I, whoſe hands haue ſpread out the heauens, I haue euen commanded all their armie.

IT ſeemes as if the Prophet meant ſimply to defend and maintaine the power of the true God againſt the falſe, as hee hath done before: ſo as this ſentence ſhould containe in it a ſecret oppoſition between the true God, and the Idols whom the ſuperſtitious adore. Fooles are wont to inquire at their Idols, as if the world were by them ruled and gouerned. But God on the contrary calles vs to himſelfe, telling vs that it is hee onely who hath created heauen and earth, and hath placed man vpon it, and that he hath ſpread out the heauens, &c. Gen. 1. 1. 7. and 2. 15. But, as I thinke, it is better to apply this whole ſpeech to the circumſtance of this place. For can any thing be more prepoſterous, then to leaue men vnimpeached, whileſt they preſume to call Gods authority into queſtion, whoſe maieſtie ſurpaſſeth the very heauens? He couertlie taxeth then the rage of men, which dare inſolently aduance themſelues euen aboue the heauens themſelues: but therewithall he aduertiſeth them, that if God ſhould bee brought to make his iuſt defence, that hee would find ſufficient reaſons to maintaine his owne cauſe. For if he gouerne the whole world in generall, then muſt he needs haue a ſpeciall care of his choſen: neither reſpects he ſtrangers ſo farre, as to forget his owne houſhold ſeruants, now ſcattered here and there, and wandring to and fro. Thus I expound this verſe then, Muſt I, whoſe infinite and incomprehenſible wiſdome and power, ſhines in the creation & gouernmēt of heauen & earth, not only be tied to mens lawes, but be abaſed beneath their condition? But if any miſdoubt of mine equitie heerein, if I gouerne and order all things by my power; ſhall I not much more be carefull of thoſe, whom I haue adopted for my children? ſhall I not watch for their ſaluation? And thus it is an argument taken from the leſſe to the greater: in which ſenſe it agrees very well with the Scripture.

This verſe containes an argument taken from the leſſe to the greater.

We know wee are adopted of God, vpon condition that being receiued into his protection, he ſhould keepe vs by his power, ſo as none can hurt vs without his leaue. If a poore ſparrow cannot fall to the ground without his will (as Ieſus Chriſt ſaith) Mat. 10. 29. will he vnaduiſedly expoſe vs to the rage and crueltie of our enemies? vs (I ſay) whom he priſeth aboue many ſparrowes? Seeing God then nouriſheth and vpholds all creatures by his prouidence, hee cannot forſake his Church, which hee prefers aboue the whole world. To this prouidence of God ought we to runne then, as oft as things are in a deſperate eſtate; that ſo wee may not ſinke vnder the temptations, by which Satan ſeekes to aſſaile vs on euery ſide.

Verſ. 13. I haue raiſed him vp in righteouſneſſe, and I will direct all his waies: hee ſhall build my Citie, and hee ſhall let goe my captiues, not for price nor reward, ſaith the Lord of hoſtes.

A proſecutiō of that argument the Prophet began to hādle in the beginning of this Chapter.

THe Prophet proſecutes that argument now, which he fell in hand withall in the beginning of the Chapter: for intending to aſſwage their afflictions, which were verie ſharpe and redious, he giues the Iewes hope of deliuerance, and beckening vnto them with his hand (as it were) wiſheth them to wait for an aſſured redemption. As if hee ſhould ſay; Albeit it ſeemes you be now forlorne, yet the Lord will deliuer you from death. From the very matter it ſelfe then, it is eaſie to collect for what cauſe Iſaiah intermingled the former reprehenſion: for had he not broken off his ſpeech, to fall into this digreſſion, the Iewes might haue been driuen into deſpaire through impaciencie.

In righteouſneſſe, ſignifies iuſtly and truly, and is taken relatiuely; becauſe he renders a reaſon why God was determined to raiſe vp Cyrus, to wit, in regard that himſelfe is that faithfull gardian of his Church, who neuer failes thoſe that ſerue him. Some expound; in righteouſneſſe: that is to ſay, that hee may puniſh the Chaldeans: others, that the iuſt may raigne more iuſtly. But the Prophet reſpected none of theſe things.

Gods iuſtice eſpecially ſhines in the ſaluation of his Church.

Iuſtice is often in the holy Scriptures taken for faithfulneſſe; for Gods righteouſneſſe ſhines eſpecially in defending of his Saints: in which hee ſhewes a ſingular token of his ſoueraigne and vnſpotted vprightneſſe: Pſal. 5. 9. and 7. 18. and 22. 32. For though there be not ſo much as one of Gods workes, in which there is not ingrauen a marke of his righteouſneſſe; yet the moſt ample and excellent teſtimonie thereof, appeares in the ſaluation of the Church. His meaning is then, that he raiſed vp Cyrus to manifeſt his righteouſneſſe, in that hee was ordained the Captaine to conduct the people home out of captiuitie.

By theſe wordes, my Citie, hee meanes Ieruſalem, which he calles his, becauſe hee would haue his name there to be praiſed, and to be particularly conſecrated vnto his honour: as himſelfe declares Exod. 20. 24. where he ſaith, In all places where I ſhall put the remembrāce of my name, there wil I come vnto thee and bleſſe thee. Now there was none other Citie appointed for Sacrifices, vowes, and prayer but this: which is the reaſō why it is called the Citie of God; The dwelling of the moſt high; becauſe God is in the midſt of it. And in an other place; This is my reſt for euer. But Cyrus built not this Citie with his owne hand: but only, by his decree forbad, that any ſhould hinder the reedifying of it. Beſides, he gaue to the people all things needefull for their returne. Pſal. 46. 4. & 5. & 132. 14. Reade Ezra 6. from verſe 3. to 15.

Not for price: that is to ſay, for nothing. It is no ordinarie matter for a Conqueror to let looſe his priſoners: For hee either puts them to their Ranſome, or impoſeth vpon them ſome very hard conditions. But Cyrus did none of theſe things: Whence it followed, that ſuch a deliuerance happened not by the will of man, but by the ſpeciall decree of God. The word Captiuitie, is heere taken for Captiues: becauſe it is a noune Collectiue.

Verſ. 14. Thus ſaith the Lord; The labour of Egypt, and the merchandiſe of Ethiopia, and of the Sebeans, men of ſtature ſhall come vnto thee, and they ſhall bee thine: they ſhall follow thee, and ſhall goe in chaines: they ſhall fall downe before thee, and make ſupplication vnto thee, ſaying; Surely God is in thee, and there is none other God beſides.* *Or, onely.

A note of true conuerſion, when we worſhip that God which is acknowledged in the Church.

HEe ſpeakes againe of the reſtauration, which was afterwards effected by the permiſſion of Cyrus: but wee muſt remember what I haue ſaid often before; to wit, that theſe promiſes doe ſtretch themſelues further off: for they comprehend vnder them, all the time which ranne out betweene the returne, vntill Chriſts appearing. And if the readers doe ponder this well, and ſhall ſeriouſly weigh the Prophets forme of ſpeaking, heere will be found nothing ſuperfluous nor exceſſiue. Now Iſaiah alludes to that coſt and charges which Cyrus was at, in furniſhing the Iewes with neceſſaries to rebuild and adorne the Temple withall. For then was fulfilled that which hee ſaith touching the labour of Egypt, and the merchandiſe of Ethiopia, which ſhould come vnto the Iewes: for theſe two Countries were tributaries and ſubiect to the kings of Perſia. Of theſe tributes, the Temple of Ieruſalem was reſtored: which reſtauration was but a beginning of that which was accompliſhed by Chriſt. Neither was this ſeruice of ſtrāge nations to Gods people ought elſe, but a forerunner of that obedience which diuers Countries were afterward to yeeld to the Church of God, after Chriſt was manifeſted ſled to the world. Moreouer, vnder the name of Egypt, and Ethiopia, and the Sabeans which now floriſhed, he alſo compriſeth all other nations: as if he ſhould ſay, You are now oppreſſed vnder the tyranny of ſtrangers, but the time ſhall come that they ſhall ſerue you. This promiſe was not fulfilled the firſt day it was made, but then only when Chriſt came into the world to ſubdue hautie and ſtubborne hearts vnder his obedience, which were incorrigible before, for afterwards they meekly gaue their necks to beare his ſweet yoke, and yet the Lord deliuered his people out of Babylon, that he might preſerue a Church vnto himſelfe till Chriſtes comming, vnder whoſe dominion all nations were to be ſubdued. It is no maruell then if the Prophet ſpeaking of the returne of the Iewes, bends his ſpeech towards the marke of the Lords decree, ſo making but one deliuerance (as it were) of both.

The Text.

They ſhall goe in chains and ſhall fall downe before thee.

Where he ſaith, that the Iſraelites ſhall get the conqueſt ouer all nations, it depends vpon that mutuall coniunction which is betweene the head and the members: for in regard the only Sonne of God hath ſo vnited the faithful vnto himſelfe that they and he make but one, therefore often that which belongs to him is attributed vnto the Church which is his body and his fulnes, Epheſ.1.23. In this ſenſe it is ſaid that the Church gouerns: not to darken the glorie of her head by an ambitious ſuperioritie: or to attribute vnto her ſelfe a proper empire, as if ſhe had ſomething ſeparate from her head: but in regard the preaching of the Goſpell which is committed vnto her, is the ſpirituall ſcepter by which Chriſt manifeſts his power. And in this ſort, none can humble himſelfe, nor fall downe before Chriſt, but he ſubmits himſelfe alſo to the Church, becauſe the obedience of faith, and the doctrine of the Church are things vnited, and yet ſo, that Chriſt notwithſtanding which is her head may reigne alone; and may exerciſe his power without the help of a ſecond.

The Church gouerns not to darken the glorie of her head by an hautie ſuperioritie.

Surely God is in thee.] The Prophet ſhewes what they ſhall ſay which by way of honor ſhall make ſupplication to the Church, to wit, they ſhall confeſſe that God is in her of a truth. Some tranſlate the word Ak, Only, which I reiect not, but confeſſe that it fitlie expreſſeth the Prophets meaning: yet it will not agree amiſſe to expound it affirmatiuely, Surely God is in thee. Now hee ſhewes, how ſtrange Nations ſhall be ſubiected to the Iewes, to wit, in acknowledging that there is no other God but him, whom the Iewes worſhip.

See 1. Cor. 14. 25.

Obiect.

If it be obiected that this appertaines not at all to the Iewes, who are now cut off from the Church: I anſwere, The Goſpell notwithſtanding came from them into all the world: and thus we acknowledge Ieruſalem to be the fountaine from whence this pure doctrine of life iſſued. In old time the Iewes only knew the true God, and none had the true worſhip but they: others being giuen to impoſtures worſhipped their owne inuentions: in which reſpect Chriſt ſpeaking to the woman of Samaria, ſaid, We know what we worſhip, Iohn 4. 22. It is rightly ſaid here then, that God is in thee, becauſe other nations knew not God. But becauſe there is heere a cloſe oppoſition, I willinglie receiue the particle Only, ſo as it ſerues as a teſtimonie of the ſound conuerſion of the Gentiles, who contenting themſelues with one only God, ſhall vtterlie forſake their Idols.

Anſ.

Iohn 4.22.

The ſumme of this verſe. 1

2

3

The ſumme is, that thoſe who ſwelled with pride before, and deſpiſed the Church with a ſcornefull eie, ſhould now ſubiect themſelues vnto her after they were taught what Gods true ſanctuarie was, yet ſo (as hath bin ſaid) that God ſhall not therefore giue ouer his principalitie though he thus aduanceth his Church. And here we may behold a ſigne of true conuerſion, to wit, when we worſhip not a god of our owne forging, but ſuch a one as is acknowledged in the Church. This excellent title alſo which is giuen to the Church is not to be omitted, God is in thee, for God is in the middes of it, becauſe he hath choſen his dwelling there, as in Pſal.46. If wee bee Gods people and do ſubmit our ſelues to that doctrine of ſaluation which he ſets before vs, then may we reſolue vpon it that he will aſſiſt vs, becauſe he neuer failes thoſe that ſeeke him. This therefore is a perpetuall promiſe, and ought not to be reſtrained only to thoſe times.

Verſ. 15. Verily thou, ô God, hideſt thy ſelfe: O God, the ſauiour of Iſrael.

God will for a time hide himſelfe, before he manifeſts his glorie for his Churches deliuerance, thereby to make triall of her faith and patience.

NOw Iſaiah breakes forth into an exclamatiõ, ſhewing, that they muſt wait long for the inioying of Gods promiſes, for the people were in danger of declining, ſeeing the wicked had the world at will, and that all things went croſſe with them. I know well that many expound this place otherwiſe, for the Hebrues for the moſt part interpret it thus, That the Lord will hide himſelfe from the Gentiles, but will manifeſt himſelfe to his people. The Chriſtian Doctors bring another expoſition, but as far from the purpoſe. I grant that which they ſay ſauors of wit, whe they affirme that Chriſt is an hidden God, becauſe his diuinitie was hidden vnder the infirmitie of his fleſh. But this hath no affinitie with the Prophets intention, who ſaith, God is hid, becauſe he ſeemed as it were to eſtrange himſelfe for a time, whileſt he ſuffred his Church to languiſh vnder diuers oppreſſions and calamities, they were therefore to build vp one another by hope, which as Paul ſaith, is not of things ſeene, but of things hidden, Rom.8.24. And in this ſenſe Iſaiah ſaith that God was hid, becauſe they ſaw not the promiſes by & by performed: thus he meant to draw their minds from the conſideration of things preſent, and to rauiſh them aboue the heauens.

Wee haue neede of patience.

So alſo muſt we doe, if we meane to apprehend and imbrace his help. Wee haue neede of patience then you ſee, that when the promiſes are deferred, wee may alſo be able to hold our deſires in ſuſpence. He ſaid erewhile that the heathen ſhould feele Gods preſence, notwithſtanding they were then blind and ſottiſh: but becauſe the time of the manifeſtation hereof was not yet come, it is not without cauſe that this exclamation is intermingled, to wit, that before God will manifeſt his glorie, he will hide his power for the triall of his ſeruants.

Beſides, from the epethite which is by and by added, where God is called the ſauiour, the Prophet ſpeakes not of the eſſence, but of the want of his ſuccor: for he ſhewes, that God hid himſelfe frō minding the deliuerance of his Church, in regard he withdrew his hand for a time, as if he had purpoſed whollie to forſake the ſame. Our God will haue our ſaluation lie hidden then as it were in darknes, to the end that if we wil haue any part therein, we may make our accounts to goe out of this world, becauſe this benefit will not by and by appeare vnto vs: we muſt therefore wait for this ſaluation with an inuincible conſtancie, for it is expedient, and for our great good, that God by this meanes ſhould examin and proue our faith, that ſo when afflictions do diuerſlie preſſe vs, we yet ceaſe not to reſt our ſelues vpon him, and vpon his promiſes.

We muſt be content to ſuffer our ſaluation to lie hid for a time, See Col. 3. 3. 4.

Yet we muſt wait for it with an inuincible conſtancie.

Verſ. 16. All they ſhall be aſhamed and alſo confounded: they ſhall goe to confuſion together that are the makers of Images.

17. But Iſrael ſhall be ſaued in the Lord with an euerlaſting ſaluation: yee ſhall not be aſhamed nor confounded world without end.

As God in the former verſes tooke order for the ſaluation of his Church, ſo here he decrees the deſtruction of his enemies.

THe Prophet heere compares the Iewes with the Gentiles, to preuent a difficult and dangerous temptation wherewith they might be ſhaken, by ſeeing the Gentiles to haue all things according to their wiſh. For they might well thinke in ſuch ſtreights that either God fauored the Gentiles, or, that he neglected his Church, or, that all things were hudled vp together at aduenture. The Prophet therefore aduertiſeth them, that howſoeuer the prophane nations floriſhed for a time, and ſeemed to be aduanced aboue the clouds, yet their perdition was decreed as well as the ſaluation of Iſrael. In a word, he admoniſheth them not to iudge of Gods power by the eſtate of things preſent, leſt they ſhould fix their thoughts vpon things of no continuance, but that they ſhould rather lift them vp to the eternal ſaluation, and in the meane while being ſtriken with Gods hand, patiently to beare their condition, without grudging at the proſperitie of the wicked, who were ſhortly to haue a ſhamefull fall, Pſal. 37. This ſentence then is knit to the former: for whoſoeuer ſhall be well inſtructed that God hides himſelfe whileſt he is a ſauiour, will not much be moued at the proſperitie of the wicked, nor at the miſerie of the faithfull that are deſpiſed, and exerciſed with ſundrie afflictions, becauſe the end of the one is ſhame, and the end of the other glorie.

Thus you ſee how the Lord prooues our faith and patience, and yet, that nothing of our eternall ſaluation which is prepared for vs ſhall fall to the ground: and that ſuch who ſeemed the only happie men, ſhall in the end periſh. All the good they now enioy ſhall turne to their extreame ruine, becauſe they abuſed the gifts of God, and like theeues, vſurp vpō that which is none of theirs, though they ſeeme to be the iuſt poſſeſſors of all things. As oft then as theſe thoughts ſhall trouble vs, to wit, that the wicked proſper, that God fauors them, and that the promiſes vpon which we reſt are vaine, let vs haue our recourſe to this ſentence of our Prophet, as to a ſafe citie of refuge, and let vs thus fortifie our ſelues; God will not diſappoint vs of our hope: in the end we ſhall be deliuered, though wee bee now expoſed to the reproches, iniuries, outrages, and cruelties of our enemies. 1 2 3

Verſ. 18. For thus ſaith the Lord (that created heauen, God himſelfe that formed the earth, and made it: he that prepared it, he created it not in vaine: he formed it to be inhabited) I am the Lord, and there is none other.

THis verſe ſerues to confirme that which was ſaid before, for the Prophet would haue the Iewes fullie reſolued, that the Lord at laſt would worke their deliuerance, albeit they were a long while oppreſſed vnder a miſerable ſeruitude; and therefore ſome by the earth, vnderſtand the land of Iudeah: but I rather take it to be an argument také from the leſſe to the greater, as we ſaid before in the 12. verſe; to wit, That ſeeing Gods prouidence reacheth generallie ouer all his creatures, by ſo much the more doth it extend it ſelfe to thoſe whom he hath adopted for his children, in regard he hath a ſpeciall care ouer them. Thus ſtands the Prophets argument then, Seeing God hath created the earth that men ſhould inhabit it, much more hath he made it a place of abode for his Church; which he eſteemeth more then of all creatures beſides: If he hath ſeated the earth vpon her foundations, in giuing it a certaine forme, and in ordeining it to a certaine vſe and end, that men might be nouriſhed and ſuſteined with the fruites it bringeth forth; no doubt but he hath giuē it to his childrē in the firſt place, and that in a ſoueraigne degree of honor aboue others. I grant wee ſee not this come alwaies thus to paſſe, and therefore our minds muſt be framed to be vpheld by hope, that ſo wee may ſtand firme and inuincible againſt all ſorts of temptations. In a word, the Church of God ſhall ſtand as long as the foundations of the earth remaine, for it ſhall be eſtabliſhed before God, as the Sunne and Moone in the firmament, Pſal. 89. 36. 37.

An argument taken againe from the leſſe to the greater, as in verſe 12.

The prophets Argument.

Gods children haue or ought to haue the firſt place in the earth.

Our minds muſt be vpheld by hope, by which we may manfully reſiſt temptations.

In Chap. 54. 9. he will vſe an argument of greater force, to wit, If the couenant which was made with Noah touching the conſtant eſtate of the world, be firme, much more ſhall his promiſe made to his Church be ſure and permapermanent: for the world is corruptible and periſhable, but the Church, which is Chriſts kingdome, ſhall remaine for euer. The promiſes therefore which are made concerning her, muſt needes be more firme and ſtable then any thing beſides. Now becauſe the earths principall ornament ſtands in her being inhabited, the Prophet addes, that it was not created to be vvaſte, but for men to converſe in.

Gen. 9. 9.

The Church remaines for euer.

If any ſhall obiect on the contrary, that the earth was without forme, and void euen after it was created, as it appeares in Geneſ.1.2. where Moſes vſeth the ſame word Tohu, that the Prophet heere doth, which ſignifies, without forme, and emptie; the ſolution is eaſie: for the Prophet ſpeakes not of the beginning of the creatiõ, but of Gods purpoſe: by which hee ordained the earth for mens vſe and abode. The Prophet then contradicts not Moſes at all, ſeeing he hath reſpect to the vſe and end.

Obiect.

Anſ.

As touching that which followes, to be inhabited: it extends it ſelfe to all mankind in generall; to wit, the earth is ordained for all men to dwell vpon. For whence comes it to paſſe that the Lord nouriſheth vs, prouides all neceſſaries for vs; yea and ſuſtaines the very wicked? Is it not that his decree might continue ſtedfaſt, becauſe hee hath appointed men to haue their dwelling in it? Otherwiſe, it were impoſſible that hee ſhould indure ſo many vices & wickednesſes to raigne, and not vtterly to deſtroy man from off the ſame: but hee reſpects his owne holy ordinance, and not our deſerts. Heere is the reaſon then why ſtates and kingdomes continue ſo long in the middeſt of Barbarians and Infidels; The Lord vvill haue the earth inhabited. And howſoeuer for the ſinnes of men, the Lord oftentimes brings ſome Countries into deſolation, and ſowes it as it were with ſalt, in regard they become barren, and are not able to ſuſtaine their inhabitants: yet, he euer ſo mitigates his ſtroke, that the earth is inhabited by ſome, becauſe God will haue his decree to ſtand inuiolable.

The reaſon why God continues ſinfull man vpon the earth.

But we muſt remember what I ſaid before, to wit, whileſt there is a world to bee inhabited of men, that God will haue a remnant reſerued, which ſhall call vpon his name. From hence then may all the faithfull gather great conſolation: for albeit the world contemnes them, and that they be few in number; and on the contrary, that the wicked ſurpaſſe them in multitude, riches, power, and authoritie; yet how little account ſoeuer bee made of them, and that they be eſteemed no better then abiects, and the off-ſcouring of al things, yet are they precious in the eies of the Lord, becauſe he acknowledgeth them for his children; and therefore will neuer ſuffer them to periſh.

God will alwaies haue a remnant to call vpon his name.

In that he repeates it againe, I am the Lord; it is not onely to iuſtifie his eternall eſſence; but to put a difference betweene his Maieſtie and Idols, that he might ſtill retaine the Iewes within the bounds of his pure worſhippe and ſeruice. The ſuperſtitious ſort will confeſſe indeed that there is one God, but they forge that one God in their owne braine: we muſt therefore know and acknowledge that God, which manifeſted himſelfe to the Patriarks and Prophets. Neither ſpeakes he heere of Gods eternall eſſence onely, as many thinke, but likewiſe of all the offices which peculiarlie belong vnto him, to the end none may dare to transfer that which is onely proper vnto him, and not vnto creatures.

Verſ. 19. I haue not ſpoken in ſecret, neither in a place of darkneſſe in the earth: I ſaid not in vaine vnto the ſeede of Iakob, Seeke you mee. I the Lord doe ſpeake in righteouſneſſe, and declare righteous things.

NOw he brings the people to the doctrine of the Law, becauſe God cannot be comprehended by the ſenſe of fleſh and blood. Howſoeuer then he be hid from carnall reaſon, yet he fully manifeſts himſelfe, and giues a remedy in his word, which ſupplies our want, to the end we ſhould ſeeke no further then it: were it not ſo, we ſhould be left as men without any hope at all, and ſhould vtterly quaile. He therefore proteſts, that hee called vs not vnto him in vaine, albeit his helpe be deferred; becauſe that which hee hath promiſed, is moſt ſure.

As hee hath ſhewed vs cleerly then whither we ought to flee, and vpon what to reſt, ſo will he let it be ſeene by the effects, that the hope of ſuch as haue ſtaied vpon his word, ſhall not be fruitleſſe. Hence wee may ſee how abominable their ſpeeches are, who affirme that a man can gather no particular aſſurance of his ſaluation from the word of God: they alſo make it no better then a noſe of wax, that they might diſcourage Gods people from medling with it. For theſe maſtiues barke thus, in regard they ſee it diſcouers their errors, and that the whole foundation of their rotten building, is ouerthrowne by the doctrine contained in that little volume.

An horrible blaſphemie to affirme that a man can gather no particular aſſurance to himſelfe of his owne ſaluation out of the Scriptures.

But with Dauid we anſwere; Thy vvord, O Lord, is a lanterne to my feete, and a light vnto my path: Pſal.119.105. With Iſaiah and the reſt of the holy Prophets we anſwer; that the Lord hath deliuered nothing that is obſcure, doubtfull, or deceiuing: and with Saint Peter we confeſſe, that the vvord of the Prophets is moſt ſtable and ſure; to vvhich, as he ſaith, vve do vvell in giuing heede, as to a light that ſhines in a darke place, vntill the day dawne, and the day ſtarre ariſe in our hearts: 2.Pet.1.19. And if this were ſaid of the Law, and of the Prophets, vvhat ſhall vve ſay of the Goſpell, by which this light is openly reuealed vnto vs? Shall we not affirme with Saint Paul; If the Goſpell be yet hid, it is hid in them that are loſt, whom (Satan) the God of this world hath blinded? 2.Cor.4.3. Let the blind world then accuſe it ſelfe, when it cannot indure the brightneſſe of this word: and as for vs, let vs ſtand faſt and abide by this heauenly light, which the faithleſſe labour to dimme and darken with their mists and fogs of errors.

Moreouer, it seemes the Prophet alludes to the Oracles which were giuen out of caues and the three footed stoole of their Idols; for they were things vncertaine, and full of illusions. But Gods answers are free from such things: for he speakes not in darknesse, but in the highest places of the Citie; neither vtters he ought that can deceiue, or be turned two maner of waies.

Prou. 9.3.

Obiect. Ans.

But will some say, experience teacheth that the Scripture is both hard and obscure. It is very true; but this is to be attributed to the dulnesse & slownesse of our vnderstandings, and not to the Scriptures. For the blind, or such as are weake sighted, cannot accuse the Sunne, in that they are not able to behold it. The fault is in themselues. And yet this remaines sure, that as many as are teachable; and yeeld obedience vnto Gods ordinances, shall not lose their labour, because the Lord will shew himselfe a faithfull teacher towards the humble and meeke.

Simile.

Psal. 25.9.

The Scriptures easie to them that will vnderstand: Prou. 8 9.

Howsoeuer then all attaine not to a perfection of knowledge, yet the study of such as seeke vnto God vnfainedly, shall neuer returne without fruit. In this clause also the Prophet shewes, that the end and vse of the Law, serues to bring men to God: for it is the onely true happinesse of man, to be knit againe to his Sauiour: and the sacred bond of this coniunction, consists in faith and in true pietie.

The stedfastnesse and certaintie of Gods word.

Now in the second member hee not onely protests that he spake distinctly, and without ambiguitie; but also sets forth the stedfastnes and certaintie of his word: as if he should say; I make not these large promises to circumuent or beguile poore captiues withall, as if I meant to feed you onely with faire words; but I will also surely performe whatsoeuer I haue promised. And thus he conuinceth their ingratitude, who being called, answered not: for Gods meaning is to make vs partakers of all the good things which hee offers vs, whereof otherwise wee are vtterlie destitute.

Where it followes, that God speakes in righteousnesse, it serues as an exposition: as if hee should say; My word by which I seeke to draw the Saints vnto mee, was neuer yet tainted with any vntruth, but containes things that are altogether righteous: Psal. 19.9. The words of the Lord, saith Dauid, are pure words, as the siluer tried in a furnace of earth, fined seuenfold: Psal. 12.6. In Gods word then wee haue a cleere righteousnesse shining out vnto vs; which hauing scattered all our darknesse, will forthwith inlighten our mindes and vnderstandings.

Gods word neuer yet found deceitfull to any that rested vpon the truth of it.

Verse 20. *Assemble your selues and come: draw neere together, yee abiects of the Gentiles: * they haue no knowledge that set vp the wood of their Idoll, and pray to a god that cannot saue them.*

*Or, those which carry the wood of their Idol, and which pray vnto a God that cannot saue them, haue no knowledge.

HE bids defiance to all Idolaters, and summons them to appeare, that they might haue the matter taken vp, vpon some reasonable conditions; as we haue seene before in other places. But the issue will goe wrong on their sides, because all their reasons will bee easilie ouerthrowne. As if he should say; They now please themselues in their superstitions, but when their cause comes once to the trial, all pretexts shall by & by vanish like smoke; so as it will be no masterie to put them all to silence. Let them assemble then if they will by troopes, let them consult, conspire, and doe their vtmost by threats, fraudes, and terrors, yet must the truth needes preuaile at length against them.

All Idolaters summoned to appeare.

The Iewes had great neede of this confirmation, in regard they saw idolatries and superstitions to haue the full swinge on euerie side, and the true seruice of God vtterly to be extinct.

To this fortresse also must wee flee at this day, when wee consider our feeblenesse and weakenesse. The Turkes possesse a great part of the world. The Papists aduance themselues with their crests set vp on high in euerie place: and we in the meane while, which are but an handfull, are esteemed no better then the wormes of the earth: but yet in the end, truth which is great, will preuaile, and as a conquerresse, will pull downe all that state and pompe which now dazles our eyes.

The truth will at length preuaile.

Some translate the word Pe'lit, Reiected: others, Fugitiue, or, escaped; and thinke it is directed to the Iewes which were returned home. But this sense is too far fetched: it rather seemes that the Prophet vnderstands thereby, the reiected of the Gentiles; because the verbe Palat, signifies to reiect. And yet the Prophet speakes not heere of the common nor worst sort, but directs his speech to those that were the learnedst, richest, and of greatest renowne among the Gentiles. For he calles them reiected, in respect that they are nothing in the sight of the Lord. And yet if any had rather expound the word; a farre off; I hinder him not: for it is as if hee had said; Assemble you selues from all parts of the earth.

In adding, those which carry the wood: hee shewes with what furie Idolaters are carried away, who worshippe the Idols which themselues carry vpon their shoulders in processions: or, we may (if you will) take this word, To beare, To lift, or, set vp in some high place: for it is the policie of Satan, to erect and set vp Images vpon pillars and in high rood lofts, to strike men with an admiration of them, and to draw them by the onely view to proferre them some signe of reuerence and honour. And yet we may take it simply for the whole seruice which is performed to the Idols, that he might plainly shew how there was nothing but vanitie and folly in all that they did. For the superstitious sort cannot be ignorant, that their Idols haue more need of mens helpe, then men haue of theirs, that can neither goe, nor stand an end, vnlesse men lend them their hands. And to this appertaines that which is added, that they pray vnto a God which cannot saue them. For what follie follie is it to pray and make vowes to a ſenſleſſe ſtocke or ſtone, that neither heares nor ſees? And yet the vnbeleeuers ride poſt (as it were) to dumbe and dead Idols for helpe.

Idols haue more needs of mens help then they haue of theirs.

Verſ. 21. Tell yee and bring them, and let them take counſell together, who hath declared this frō the beginning? or, hath told it of old? Haue not I, the Lord? and there is none other God beſides mee, a iuſt God, a Sauiour: there is none beſides me.

A compariſō betweene Gods predictions, and thoſe of the Idols.

AGaine hee proteſts againſt all ſuch as might trouble the Iewes or weaken their faith by their ſcornings. For the Prophet aimes alwaies at this marke; to wit, that hee may fortifie the peoples faith againſt the aſſaults of the Gentiles; becauſe the poore Iews, who were ſo extreamly handled, were in danger of ſtaggering in the midſt of ſo many great and violent temptations, had they not had ſome pregnant arguments ſet before them to hold them in their faith and obedience towards the true God. Thus then hee permits the prophane to bring in whatſoeuer they can for the maintenance of their cauſe.

Where he ſaith, let them conſult together: it is added in token of the greater boldneſſe and confidence: for the Prophets meaning is, that they ſhall gaine nothing (as wee haue ſaid before) albeit they conſpire neuer ſo much together. It may be alſo hee meant to ſhew how there was nought elſe but vanitie and deceit, in all that which the Idolaters dreame of, touching the excuſing of their errors. Make what pretences you will then, ſaith he, to colour your inuentions, yet ſhall Gods word be ſtrong enough to ſuſtaine the faith of his ſeruants. Hee calles them therefore to a right examination of things, that they may compare all the brags of the Infidels, touching the predictions of their Idols, with the Law and the propheeies.

I willingly receiue that which is affirmed by all; to wit, that the Prophet ſpeakes of the deliuerance of the people. But in regard the ouerthrow of the Babylonian Monarchy was ioined therewithall, therefore I thinke one of theſe things is compared with the other. And becauſe one ſentence is repeated twice, theſe two words, Miktedem, and Meaz, are as much in effect as if he had ſaid; From the beginning, and from the times paſt: for this prophecie was publiſhed long time before the things (propheeied) were accompliſhed: whereby the faithfull might euidently perceiue, that it was God which ſpake.

To preſcience he addes his power, as we haue often ſaid: and yet withall he ſhewes to what end God is powerfull; euen to ſaue his people.

Verſ. 22. Looke vnto mee, and yee ſhall bee ſaued: all the ends of the earth ſhall be ſaued; for I am God, and there is none other.

Now the Prophet turnes his ſpeech from the Iewes to the Gentiles.

HItherunto hee hath ſpoken onely to the Iewes, as if ſaluation appertained to none but them. Now he extends his ſpeech further off: for he cals a great audience to him, euen the whole world, to partake of the hope of ſaluation: and therewithall condemnes all nations of vnthankfulnes, if in giuing themſelues ſtill to be ſeduced with errors, they obſtinately ſhunned the cleere light which was offered. For can a man commit a greater ſinne, then directly to reiect his owne ſaluation?

God commands all then to looke vnto him: to which Commendement he addes a Promiſe: for this hath greater weight in it, and confirmes the matter much more, then if he had ſet it downe ſimply by way of a command. We haue in this text therefore an excellent teſtimony touching the vocation of the Gentiles: wherein wee ſee how the Lord indifferently calles all ſorts of men vnto him, the partition wall being broken downe, which ſeparated betweene the Iewes and the Gentiles. Eph. 2. 14.

Moreouer, wee are heere taught the true meanes how to obtaine ſaluation; euen to looke vnto God, and to turne vnto him with our whole heart. But we muſt looke vnto him with the eie of faith, that we may imbrace the ſaluation promiſed to all, in Ieſus Chriſt. For God ſo loued the world, that he gaue his onely begotten Sonne, that whoſoeuer beleeues in him, might not periſh, but haue euerlaſting life: Iohn 3. 16.

Now when hee exhorts all the ends of the earth, he ſhewes that all men haue hitherunto erred out of the right way, & haue had no reſpect vnto the true God: for where infidelitie raignes, there God cannot be diſcerned from Idols. In a word, he ſhewes that the condemnation of the whole world, ariſeth from doting vpon their owne inuentions, whereby they forſake the liuing God: for from the knowledge of him, flowes eternall and aſſured ſaluation. The Lord then reacheth out his hand to ſaue all nations, and ſhewes them what way they ſhould take to obtaine it. And thus it appeares it fel not out by chance, that the Goſpell was generally preached vnto all nations vnder heauen: but that it proceeded from Gods decree, who had ordained it ſo to come to paſſe long before. Yet hee accuſeth the Gentiles of blindneſſe, as I haue ſaid ere while, in that they turned their eies after vanities, and ranne which way ſoeuer their giddie ſpirits led them. For howſoeuer by nature they could not find out the true God, hauing from their infancie been trained vp in ſuperſtitions, and were bewitched with them; yet God had iuſt cauſe notwithſtanding to blame them for the prophane contempt of his grace. Hypocriſie, you know, is alwaies wrapped in ignorance, ſo as men had rather bee deceiued through vaine deceits, then to be led the ſtraight way vnto God.

All haue erred.

The way to ſaluation deſcribed.

Hypocriſie alwaies mixed with ignorance.

Verſ. 23. I haue ſworne by my ſelfe:

the word is gone out of my mouth in righteousnesse, and shall not returne, that euerie knee shall bow vnto mee, and euerie tongue shall sweare by me.

*Or, that is, euery knee, &c.

A confirmation of the former sentence.

HE addes a more manifest confirmation to the former sentence: for because this calling was extraordinary and vnheard of, hee therefore addes an oath, as men are wont to doe in things that are strange and hard to be credited. The Iewes might haue made replies, in regard they were then reputed the onely elect people. But in that he confirmes it with an oath, all contention is taken away. I grant the Prophet aimes againe at the same marke that he did in vers. 6. to wit, that Gods glory shall so shine in the restauration of the Church, that all the world, from the rising of the Sunne, to the West, shal admire the same: or, to tell it you in a word, that the signes of Gods power shal so shine in this deliuerance, that all nations shall bee confounded with feare and astonishment. In the meane while hence wee may gather that which I touched before; namely, the Gentiles are heere equalled with the Iewes, so as God shall be the common father of all, and his name called vpon in all places.

The cause of Gods oath.

Now God sweares by himselfe, because there is none more sufficient to be a witnesse of his truth: for he is the truth it selfe. Men sweare by greater then themselues, as the Apostle saith, Heb. 6. 16. but God hauing no superior, sweares heere by himselfe.

We must note the cause of this oath. It is euen to sustaine the infirmities of the Saints, lest they should float vp and downe in vncertainties. What a wonderfull goodnes of God is this, who to remedy our diffidence, disdains not to vse his owne name, as if hee laid it to pawne? On the other side, how grosse and vile is our incredulity, if this oath doe not satisfie and content vs?

Gods name not to bee mingled with creatures in our othes.

Now seeing God reserues to himselfe the confirmation of all truth, we must take good heed when wee are constrained to call him for a witnesse in othes, that wee mingle not his name with Saints, or any other creatures whatsoeuer: but vsing it with such reuerence as is meete, let vs reserue his honour full and whole vnto himselfe.

The vvord is gone forth.] The meaning is, that whatsoeuer the Prophet hath published at Gods commandement, is firme and sure. As if hee should say; This commandement passed not from me vnawares. In this sense the word righteousnesse, is often taken for a true speech, and such as shall alwaies bee found so: and therefore he saith, that his word cannot be called backe.

Men inconstant.

God vnchangeable.

To this appertaines the other member; shall not returne: that is to say, it shall still grow to perfection, vntil it appeares by the effects, that it came from a God most iust, true, and almightie: for man a will call backe his word when he meetes with any difficultie that may hinder him from keeping the same. But because nothing can let God from executing his determinations, the Prophet rightly concludes, that the course of this word cannot be stopped, nor broken off by any inconuenience at all. The particle, That is, must serue heere for an exposition; to wit, Behold vvhat this vvord is.

Euery knee shall bow vnto mee.] By this hee meanes that all nations shall bow before God; because the deliuerance of the Church shall terrifie the whole world. Yet withall it followes from hence, that his true worshippe shall also be receiued among all nations. For we cannot truely bow the knee before God, till he hath manifested himselfe vnto vs. Men may indeede present a kind of seruice to the one God, whom yet they know not: there is nothing but vanitie and illusions in all this. He speakes heere then of that true religious seruice, which proceedes from such a knowledge of God, as is rooted in the depth of the heart: for where no faith is, there can bee no sincere worshippe. True faith, as wee know, staies not her selfe vpon any vncertaine or vnknowne thing.

What it is to bow the knee to God.

The thing signified set forth by the signe.

He sets forth the thing signified therefore, by the signe; as the Scriptures are often wont to doe. Whence we gather, that God requireth the outward seruice of the body: for the Prophet separates not the externall profession of religion, from the internall affection of the heart. It is in vaine then for such inconstant spirits to brag, that they can honour and worshippe God in their hearts, though they bow their knees before Idols. It is in vaine for them (I say) to make so friuolous an excuse, seeing the inward beliefe of the heart cannot bee diuided from the outward confession of the mouth. For with the heart, man beleeues vnto righteousnesse, and with the mouth he confesseth vnto saluation: Rom. 10. 10. For this cause the Lord approoues of their integritie and vprightnesse in his seruice, that had not so much as bowed a knee to Baal: 1. King. 19. 18.

A friuolous excuse of temporisers.

Saint Paul applies this text to the last iudgement, where he saith, that all shall bee constrained to appeare before the iudgement seat of Christ. Although it is applied heere to the peoples deliuerance out of Babylon, to the spreading abroad of the Gospell, and to the establishing of the kingdome of Christ. But the Apostle holds it for granted, (which we also are not to bee ignorant of) that that which appertaines to Christs kingdome, ought not to be restrained to some parts of it onely, but to stretch it selfe throughout the whole course thereof, euen till the full and perfect accomplishment of the whole appeare. What is it then to bow the knee vnto Christ? It is vvhen his doctrine is obeied, and the preaching of the Gospell receiued.

What is meant by bowing of the knees to Christ.

But many still resist it, and boldly contemne it: Satan plots sundry mischiefes, and with open mouth rageth against it continually; so as the accomplishment of this prophecie seemes yet to be very farr off. The knee shall then truly be bowed to Christ, when he shall triumph, and hath put downe and destroied all his enemies, and when he shall appeare in maiestie and in glory to all, which Satan and his suppostes doe now seeke to abolish. And therefore

therefore S. Paul teacheth, that when Chriſt ſhall aſcend vp into his Throne to iudge the world, then ſhall that be accompliſhed which began to take effect from the beginning of the Goſpell, which we alſo ſee to draw neere from day to day.

The verb to sweare is put for ſeruice, reuerence, or ſubiection, by the figure called Synecdoche, whē a part is taken for the whole. An oth alſo is part of the honor which is due vnto God, for by it we confeſſe and acknowledge that he is the author, father, and lawfull protector of all truth, and that all things are naked and bare before his eies, Heb. 4. 13. When this honor therefore is giuen to Idols, Gods Maieſtie is thereby violated with an execrable ſacrilege: thus then, thoſe which ſerue him purely, ſweare only by his name, and by nothing elſe. But we haue ſpoken of this matter in another place.

An oth, part of Gods honor.

See Chap. 19. 18.

Verſ. 24. Surely he ſhall ſay, In the Lord haue I righteouſnes and ſtrength: he ſhall come vnto him, and all that prouoke him ſhall be aſhamed.

HE ſhewes what true faith is, and what worſhip God approues of, to wit, when we haue not only a bare knowledge of him, or thinke in our hearts that there is one God, but when we alſo feele what a one he is to vs. Whoſoeuer he be then that contents himſelfe with a naked apprehenſion of God; is farre off from that faith which ſo knits vs vnto him, that we feele him dwelling in vs, according as S. Paul would haue vs not only to know Chriſt, but that he alſo ſhould dwell in our hearts by faith, Epheſ. 3. 17. For he that contemplates of an idle god in the heauens ſitting at his eaſe, will neuer bow his knee before him with a ſincere heart; neither will he euer make a franck and willing confeſſion vnto him.

We muſt proceed from faith to teching.

1
2

Now becauſe righteouſnes and ſtrength are the two maine points of our ſaluation, the faithfull acknowledge God to be the author of both in them, and thus they whollie attribute the glorie of their happines vnto him: and in confeſſing that it proceeds from his free grace, it is to teſtifie to all that by nature they are depriued of ſuch gifts. They therefore confeſſe that they can finde neither ſtrength nor righteouſnes in themſelues, but do ſeeke the ſame only in God, that he may not be defrauded of his proper right.

God the author both of righteouſnes and ſtrength.

He ſhall come vnto him.] The expoſitors agree not touching the interpretatiō of theſe words: for mine owne part, I vnderſtand this place only of the faithfull, who ſubmit themſelues vnto God, that ſo wee might ſee the reaſon of the oppoſition which is betweene them, and thoſe rebels which ceaſe not obſtinately to reſiſt God. Thus I expound it then, Thoſe who confeſſe their righteouſnes and ſtrength to be from God, ſhall come to him. For his meaning is, that we haue acceſſe vnto God by faith, ſo as all thoſe which confeſſe their ſaluation conſiſts in him, ſhall approue vnto him, and finde him profite vnto them.

Truely, a man can neuer voluntarily draw neere vnto God, till he be reconciled with him: for the more we feele the terror of his Maieſtie, the further off wee flee from him. The Prophet in this place then magnifies this ioyfull fruit of Gods fauor, by meanes whereof, thoſe that were ſtrangers farre off before, ſhall now come and be made neere vnto him. To this agrees that in the 65. Pſal. Becauſe thou art a God that heareſt prayer, therefore ſhall all fleſh come vnto thee.

None comes willinglie to God, til they feele their reconciliatiō with him.

Col. 1. 22. Eph. 2. 13.

Now Iſaiah hauing ſhewed that God will gather in ſtrangers from their diſperſions, and entertaine them in his owne houſe, he denounceth an horrible iudgement againſt contemners and deſpiſers, who giue themſelues the raines, as if there were no God at all; and ſcorning all pietie: wallow themſelues in worldlie delights. For as faith only brings forth obedience, ſo the Prophet ſhews that it is infidelitie only which prouokes God to wrath and diſpleaſure. When he brands the vnbeleeuers with this marke, that they are rebels to God; yea, that they prouoke him to the combat: therewithall hee pronounceth that they ſhall be couered with ſhame, howſoeuer they make their triumphs in the ſight of the world.

Faith, the mother of obedience.

Infidelitie, the mother of rebellion.

Verſ. 25. The whole ſeed of Iſrael ſhall bee iuſtified, and glorie in the Lord.

HEe now preuents an obiection which might be made againſt this doctrine, to wit, it ſeemes ſtrange that the Lord ſhould call thoſe nations vnto him which were farre off before: as if they ſhould ſay, Hath God then choſen the poſteritie of Abraham in vaine? Shall his promiſes ſo often repeated Gen. 15. 5. and 17. 7. vaniſh into the aire? To this he anſwers, that the Lord will not ceaſe to be true in his promiſes ſtill, ſo that howſoeuer God hath made choiſe of the Gentiles, yet notwithſtanding the couenant contracted and made with their fathers ſhal ſtand ſtill inuiolable, becauſe the elect Iewes ſhall hold their ſouereigne prerogatiue. For hee ſpeakes not heere of their reiection as in many other places, but the Prophet only deliuers this point, that Gods grace which ſhall now be extended to all nations, ſhal ſtill flow from this fountaine, I am thy God, and the God of thy ſeed after thee, Gen. 17. 7. whereas the moſt part of the Iewes then were reiected; this ouerthrew not Gods couenant, becauſe the remnant that were adopted alwaies remained the true and lawfull ſeed: and albeit they were few in number, yet were they the firſt borne in the Church.

The preuention of an obiection.

Moreouer, all thoſe among the Gentiles which were grafted into this body, began now to be the children of Abraham, as in Chap. 44. 5. one ſhall ſay, I belong to Iaakob, another ſhall ſubſcribe with his hand, and ſay, I am begotten of Iſrael. From this title it is that we at this day are reputed by good right the Iſrael of God, though Iaakob begat vs not. The Prophet addes this then, that they ſhould not thinke the couenant of God was abolished:

Gal. 6. 16.

shed: as also, that they were not so to glorie in their race and stock, that they should therfore vtterly despise the Gentiles.

The whole seed of Israel.] He stretcheth this seed further off, lest they should imagin it to be wholly restrained to the posteritie of Abraham. For the Lord gathers his people indifferentlie both out of Iewes and Gentiles. In this place then he speakes in generall of all mankinde.

Neither righteousnes nor glorie out of God.

We haue further to obserue, that the Prophet saith, we are iustified, and shall glorie in the Lord, for we must neither seeke righteousnes, nor glorie out of him. Now glorie is added, because it depends vpon righteousnes, and followes it. For which cause S. Paul saith, Where is thy reioycing? It is excluded. By what law? of works? nay, but by the law of faith, Rom.3.27. Also, if Abraham were iustified by works, he had wherein to glorie, but not with God, Rom.4.2. It followes then, that those shall iustlie glorie, who seeke their iustification in God only, acknowledging that in themselues there is no matter at all of reioycing.

Those iustly glorie that seeke their iustice in God only.

THE XLVI. CHAPTER.

* Or, quite ouerthrown.

* Or, Mares.

* Or, brown downe.

Vers. 1. Bel is bowed downe: Nebo is fallen: their Idols were vpon the beasts, and vpon the *Cattell: they which did beare you were laden with a wearie burden.

The coherence of the sentences rather to be considered now and then in this prophesie, then the diuision of the Chapters.

Isaiah continues forth his former argument; for wee must not stande ouer-strictlie vpon the diuiding of the Chapters, in regard they were not alwaies aptly obserued: but wee are rather to consider of the sentences which cohere very well, as I haue said; notwithstanding, if any had rather haue it the beginning of a new Sermon, in regard that he forthwith speaks of the ruine of Babylon, I do not much contradict him. Bel and Nebo, were Idols which the Chaldeans worshipped, and it is very likely they were their chiefe patrons, for Idolaters alwaies make choice of some principall gods, vnder whose protection they thinke to be safe. Wee may also coniecture that this Nebo was an inferior god, added to the great god Bel, as Mercurie was to Iupiter. And vnder the names of these two the Prophet also comprehends all other Idols, foretelling by the spirit of prophesie that all the abominable Idolatries and superstitions of the Gentiles should be abolished, when God (hauing subdued & Idolaters vnder his feet) shall in triumph leade them captiues, for then it should be manifest to all that he was the iust auenger of his Church. The Chaldeans proudly boasted of the protection they had vnder their false gods; but the Prophet refutes this vaine confidence, saying, that the God of Israel will not content himselfe only to roote out the prophane people, but will also ouerthrow all their gods to their vtter shame and disgrace.

Idolaters wil alwaies make choice of some principall patrons.

And therefore he saith, that they shall be borne vpon mares, in regard they should be throwne into some cart, or other to be transported and tumbled vpon heapes together as it pleased the carters to dispose of them: that is it which he signifies by the word put downe, because the souldiers should lay all the gods on heapes which were so highly aduanced before. And no doubt but this was accomplished when the Medes and Persians tooke Babylon: for the Monarchie being translated to them, these Idols also were taken away as part of the spoile. Now howsoeuer Isaiah prophesied these things in respect of the Babylonians, yet doubtles he speciallie aimed at the comming of Christ in the flesh, at whose appearance all Idolatries and superstitions should be abolished. For when his kingdome is once established, all Idols forthwith fall to the ground, for it is not possible that false religion and superstitions can stand with his true knowledge: he expels all darknes by his brightnes, so as he leaues no roome neither for the false gods, nor anie of their seruices: for what communion hath light with darknes, or Christ with Belial? as S. Paul saith, 2.Cor.6.15.

Where Christes kingdom is established, there all Idols fall to the ground. See 1.Sam.5.4.

But withall we must obserue that the Prophet respected the time in which the Iewes were held prisoners: for they saw the Chaldeans perfume their Idols, and attributed vnto them a soueraigne power, as if the issue of all things had bin at the beck of these puppets, and in the meane while they scorned the God of the Iewes, as if he had bin insufficiét to defend his people, (or if he were) yet that he did not much regard them. He shewes then that there shal be such a change, that the gods of the Chaldeans which were highly exalted should fall, and that the true God who seemed to be throwne to the earth shall be exalted, and shall reuenge the outrages done vnto his seruants.

Vers. 2. They are bowed downe, and fallen together, for they could not rid them of the burden, and their soule is gone into captiuitie.

THe Prophet derides the vanitie of these goodly gods, who had neither strength nor motion, neither were they able to stand vpon their feet, nor to defend themselues, seeing the poore beasts were faine to carrie them. Heere is a close opposition then betweene their Idols, and the true God, who stands in no need of any help at all. But the Prophet to their further disgrace addes, that the

A close opposition betweene the true God, and Idols.

See verſe 1. the mares (whereof hee ſpeakes in this verſe) were bowed downe with the burden, of which they would gladly haue rid themſelues. And thus theſe falſe gods, after they ſuffered their worſhippers to bee depriued of them, were now become troubleſome to the poore bruit beaſts.

Their ſoules.] It is an Hebrew phraſe; by which the Prophet mockes theſe Gods who had neither ſenſe, nor any vnderſtanding at all. He ſpeakes it then by way of contempt againſt the vaine and dumbe Idols; to wit, that they and their ſoule were led into captiuitie.

Obiect. But let vs ſee if this may not as well be retorted vpon the true God, whoſe Arke was taken by the Philiſtims, 1.Sam.4.11. which was the ſigne of his preſence: for thus it ſeemed, that the Lord himſelfe was in a maner led priſoner.

Anſ. The anſwer to this obiection is eaſie. For howſoeuer the Lord meant that the Arke ſhould be a teſtimonie of his preſence, yet he forbad the Iewes to reſt in it, but commanded them to lift vp their eies to heauen, and there to ſeeke and adore him: for as hee is a ſpirit, ſo meant he alwaies to be ſerued ſpiri-
Iohn 4.23. tually. The Arke then was not worſhipped in Gods ſtead, but was a ſigne by which the people were led as by the hand, to ſet their affec-
Col.3.1. tiõs on things aboue, euen vpõ the Lord himſelfe: contrariwiſe, the Gentiles doted onelie vpon their puppets, and attributed vnto them a diuine power. Wee may alſo affirme, that the Philiſtims were at laſt well ſcourged for their preſumption; ſo as they felt how they had to deale with the true God: 1.Sam. 5.7.

Obiect. But this anſwer may ſeeme inſufficient, becauſe the Lord ſuffered his Arke to be in contempt for a time, as it plainly appeares by

Anſ. the courſe of the hiſtory: 1.Sam. 5.6. Thus then the true ſolution is; that howſoeuer the Lord communicates himſelfe vvith vs by ſignes and ſacraments, yet he vvill be ſought of vs in heauen. Moreouer, himſelfe had foretold by memorable prophecies, that the Philiſtims in their conqueſt led him not priſoner, but that he willingly expoſed his Arke as a pray to his
1.Sam.3.11. enemies, to auenge him of the wickednesſes of the people. Alſo when the Temple was deſtroied and burnt, and the veſſels carried into Babylon, the Iewes could not be ignorant but the ſame God which they had worſhipped in Ieruſalem, was the authour of this chaſtiſement, in regard hee had ſo often foretold that by his Prophets, which then came to paſſe.

Verſ. 3. Heare yee mee, O houſe of Iakob, and all that remaine of the houſe of Iſrael, which are borne of mee from the wombe, and brought vp of mee from the birth.

A concluſion vpon the premiſes. THe Prophet heere elegantly ſhewes what great difference there is betweene the true God and Idols: for hee ſaid before, that the gods of the Babylonians ſhould be carried vpon carts, and drawne by beaſts, becauſe they were dead ſtockes: heere hee attributes a far higher proprietie vnto the God of Iſrael; to wit, that he carried his people, as the mother carries the child in the vvombe; vvhich being borne, ſhee alwaies carries in her boſome. Now hee calles the Iewes to giue eare, that they might make anſwer from their owne experience; for they ought to be the more affected, in regard they had felt by the effects, that God had continually ſupported both them and their burdens. He vſeth a very fit oppoſition then, and from the former words thus concludes; Acknowledge and confeſſe indeed that I am the true God, and in nothing like vnto Idols, which are vaine things, and dead burthens: adde alſo, that in regard of my continuall benefits, which I haue neuer ceaſed to powre vpon you from your birth, you cannot be ignorant, but muſt needes know the greatneſſe of my power. For the Lord is not onely powerfull for himſelfe, but extends it to all his creatures, that we might truly feele the efficacie thereof.

Wee may iuſtifie God to be the true God by our owne experience.

1

2

Which are borne of me from the vvombe.] This ſimilitude, by which God compares himſelfe to a mother that beares her child in her vvombe, is very fitting for his purpoſe. Now he ſpeaks of the time paſt, in which hee began to giue vnto his people teſtimonies of his grace: vnleſſe any had rather expound theſe wordes more ſtrictly; to wit, that God hath in mercie aduanced them, and borne them in his armes as a child borne of his mother: Pſal.22.9,10. But becauſe God began not onely to bee a nurcing father to this people from their naturall birth, but alſo begat them ſpiritually; it is not amiſſe to extend his ſpeech euen to that, to wit, that they iſſued as it were out of Gods wombe, into newneſſe of life, and to the hope of the eternall inheritance.

If any obiect that God is euery where called a Father: Ier.31.9. Mal.1.6. and that this title properly belongs vnto him: I anſwere, that Gods loue is ſo incomprehenſible vnto his Church, that all the ſimilitudes in the world are inſufficient to expreſſe the ſame. For it is a thing that hath many branches, yea infinite and vnmeaſurable; ſo as if all the benefits that witneſſe true friendſhip, were gathered into one, yet this affection, for the greatneſſe of it, far exceedes all that can bee thought or ſpoken of: there is no ſimili-
No ſimilitude or borrowed ſpeech ſufficient to expreſſe Gods infinit loue to his children. tude therefore that can expreſſe his ineſtimable loue.

Obiect.

Anſ.

If we onely vnderſtand it, that from the time God begat them, hee hath borne and tenderly nouriſhed them in his boſome: this will well ſute with that which is written in the ſong of Moſes, He nouriſhed and carried them, as the Eagle doth her little ones vpõ her wings: Deut.32.11. To be ſhort, the Prophets meaning is, that vnleſſe the Iewes forget their originall, they muſt of neceſſitie conclude, that they were not begotten in vaine, but that God, who hath performed vnto them the office of a louing father and mother, will neuer leaue them, but alwaies will aſſiſt them. And beſides, that by continuall ſucceſſion of time, they ſo felt his power, that they were at no

no hand to doe any homage to Idols.

When hee mentions the remainder, it is to
*Chap.*10.21. shew, as wee noted before, that the greater part by their rebellion, made a defectiō from the Church: and thus the hope of the redemption, appertained but to a small handfull. For this cause he craues audience, because the vnbeleeuers were become no lesse deafe at his voice, then the prophane nations. Now howsoeuer the estate of the people at that time was far from perfection, and that the remnant of this dispersed people was exceeding small, yet the Lord commands them to consider how miraculously they were preserued and kept vnto that instant; that so they should not doubt but hee would continue a louing father and mother vnto them in like manner for the time to come. And in that he
The true and onely way to redresse our miseries. requires them to hearken to his speech, hee shewes that the true and onely remedie of all our miseries consists in depending vpō Gods mouth, and in hearkening to the promises of his grace: for then we shall haue strength enough to beare all our afflictions. As on the contrary, there is a wide gate set open to rush vs into despaire: yea, and to expect nothing but ruine and destruction, when we stop our eares, and will not heare his voice.

Vers. 4. Therefore vnto old age I am the same, euen I will beare you vntill the hoare haires: I haue made you, I will also beare you, and I will carry you, and I will deliuer you.

God not onely begins, but perfects the worke of his grace in vs. I Expound this particle Vau, Wherefore: which wee are diligently to obserue. For thus he concludes; I haue begotten you and brought you forth; yea I haue borne you in mine armes, whileſt you were yet in your swadling clouts: and therefore I will be the protector of your life euen vnto the end. And thus Dauid reasons; Thou, O Lord, diddest draw me out of the wombe, thou gauest me hope euen at my mothers breasts. I was cast vpon thee euen from the wombe: thou art my God from my mothers belly: Psal. 22. 9, 10. God promiseth the Iewes then, that hee will alwaies be a father vnto them. The Lord, saith Dauid, will finish the good worke he hath begun in me: thy mercies, O Lord, indure for euer; therefore thou wilt not forsake the worke of thine owne hands: Psal. 138 8.

This word, I, (six times repeated) is of great weight in my iudgement, although the interpreters expound it simply as a pronoune demonstratiue. But it signifies heere not onely Gods eternall essence, and that he will euer be like himselfe; but it is also spoken in regard of vs, shewing that wee shall alwaies find him one and the same.

Where hee saith vnto old age: this might seeme a strange speech, seeing we grow to be perfect men, after God hath once drawne vs out of our childhood. But let euery one examine his owne strength as he ought, and we shall easilie perceiue, that none of vs haue so profited, but we shall still feele that God had need to vphold vs daily by his power: for otherwise the most perfect would fall downe flat at euery turne. Which Dauid also expresseth in Psal. 71. Cast me not off O Lord in the time of mine old age, forsake me not when my strength faileth.

I haue made you, I will also beare you. He renues the same argument againe: as if hee should say; God will not look to your deserts, but to his owne work: and therefore will continue forth his grace towards you. Hence we may thus conclude; Seeing thou hast not only created vs to be men, but also to be thy children, thou wilt doubtlesse continue to beare that affection to vs, which fathers and mothers doe towards their children, and wilt alwaies haue care ouer vs.

Vers. 5. To whom will yee make mee like, or make me equall, or compare mee, that I should be like him?

We must not thinke the better of Idolaters because they seeme to prosper in their sinne. THe Prophet brings in the Lord here complaining of the Iewes, for distrusting his power and goodnesse; as also for comparing him with Idols: nay, for abasing him beneath thē. For in seeing the Chaldeans to haue the world at will, they iudged themselues hopelesse, and that the memorie of the couenant was so abolished, as if there had been no God left in heauen to haue taken care of them. The Lord takes vp a complaint therefore against them, in that hee perceiued they attributed some power to the Idols, and in so doing, obscured his regall authoritie. He handled the same argument in the 42. & 43. Chapters, and in those that follow: and therefore we haue the lesse need now to insist any longer vpon euery word. That they should not measure Gods power then, by the view of things present, hee commands them to raise vp their mindes higher. The like aduertisement were fit to be made to vs at this day, if in beholding the prosperitie of the Papists, we should therefore imagin that they had the true religion on their side: for otherwise, what were it but to compare the liuing God with Idols? This circumstance is diligently to be noted, because many expositors baulking, and neglecting it, doe lessen the weight of this sentence: for they thinke the Prophet cries out onely against the superstitious, who attribute some diuinitie to wood and stone, because Gods glory is defamed, when hee is compared to dead Images. I nothing doubt therefore but he taxeth their peruerse iudgement, and crooked conceits, wherewith the people were transported and carried away in aduersitie, to thinke that God respected the Babylonians aboue them. For, if God had fauoured the Babylonians, it would thereupon haue followed, that hee had also approued of their idolatry: and thus his glory should haue been giuen from him, vnto senslesse creatures. To conclude, hence we may gather a
A generall doctrine. generall doctrine (as S. Paul fitly applies it, Act. 17.25.) that God is robbed of his honor, when we liken him to dumbe and vaine Idols.

Vers. 6. They draw gold out of the bag, bag, weigh ſiluer in the ballance, and hire a Goldſmith to make a god of, and they bow downe and worſhip it.

7. They beare it vpon the ſhoulders; they carry him and ſet him in his place: ſo doth he ſtand, and cannot remoue from his place. Though one cry vnto him, yet he cannot anſwere, nor deliuer him out of his tribulation.

THe Prophet told vs the ſame thing before, which he now repeates againe, that hee might ingraue this doctrine the more deepelie in our mindes: for ſuperſtition hath taken ſuch rooting in our hearts, that it cannot bee plucked vp, vnleſſe God wholly alter and change our nature. All that we haue heard againſt the folly of Idolaters, will by and by ſlip out of our memories, becauſe we alwaies retaine in vs ſome ſeedes of ſuperſtition, there being nothing to which we are more inclined, then to file ourſelues in this dunghill. Hee ſaith then that to forge Idols, one prouides ſtuffe, another implies his art and skill to faſhion is: & thus there muſt be two fathers of whom theſe Idols are begotten: firſt, the rich churle, who diſburſeth the gold, or ſiluer: ſecondly, the Goldſmith, who giues a forme vnto them. And now behold a new forged god.

Two fathers of whom Idols are begotten.

Wherein he plainly taxeth the ſenſleſneſſe of thoſe that ſeeke a godhead in their purſes, and in the hands of the artificer. For who would imagin that from ſo ſudden a change, men would proſtrate themſelues before a piece of mettall, hauing put ſome ſhape vnto it, according to their owne fantaſies? For it is ſuch a god, as ſtands them in ſo much the ſtuffe, and ſo much the faſhioning.

A goodly God, that ſtands men in, ſo much the ſtuffe, & ſo much the forming.

The particle Aph, put before the verbe To worſhip, ſets out this their madneſſe: for there might be ſome excuſe which deſerued to bee pardoned, if being ſuddenly ouertaken with this error, they ſhould fall downe and worſhip ſome falſe god: but theſe perſiſted obſtinately in their frenſie.

This bowing and worſhipping being added after the former circumſtances, doth much aggrauate the obſtinacie, and ſhewes that they were vtterly bewitched. This blockiſhneſſe then, as I haue ſaid, is too groſſe, when men will worſhippe a god forged with their owne hands.

The ſame amplification is added in the verſe following; They beare it vpon the ſhoulders, &c. For being depriued of all common ſenſe, they runne and cry for helpe to ſuch gods: and muſt they not needs be ſtarke bedlems then?

Verſ. 8. Remember this, and be aſhamed: bring it againe to mind, O ye tranſgreſſors.

*Or, returne into your heart.

THis verſe is expounded two waies; to wit, that God ſpeaks both to the Iews & Gentiles. For ſuch as are but meanly inſtructed in the Law, are eaſilie deceiued, in y they quench the knowledge w God hath kindled in their vnderſtandings. Againe, there is no man but hath ſome ſeedes of religion ſowen in his heart by the very light of nature: but he either choketh it by his infidelitie, or corrupts and marres the ſame by his own inuentiõs. In this ſenſe then we may refer it to all mankind in generall. But I had rather retaine the other ſenſe, and the very ſcope of the text requires it. For by and by after, he addes ſuch things as appertaines to none but to y Iewes, whom he heere calles tranſgreſſors. For they were throwne down with a very little blaſt of temptation, and were reuolted from the true God: as if their ſeuentie yeeres captiuitie muſt needes haue blotted all the benefits of ſo many hundred yeeres out of their hearts. In regard then that they had troden vnder foote all right affection of pietie, he ſharply taxeth their ingratitude, in that they were ſo eaſilie ſlid into ſuperſtitions.

The Iewes reproued for hauing reuolted for light an affection.

1
2
3

When hee commands them to returne into their heart, it is to ſhew that they were not well in their wits before. Others tranſlate, Bring backe; which is nothing at all to the purpoſe, becauſe euen now he commanded them to remember, and will repeat it by and by in the verſe following. He brings them now then to their owne hearts, in regard the forgetfulnes of Gods former benefits proceeded from a kind of follie.

Be aſhamed.] Others tranſlate, Be ſtrong, or of good courage: and thus they drawing it from the word Iſh, which ſignifies to behaue a mans ſelfe valiantly. Others, from Aſhiſh which is as much to ſay, as foundatiõ. As if he ſhould ſay; Bee of good courage; thinke not that I will deſtitute you of conuenient ſuccour. But I rather agree with Saint Ierom, who drawes it from the word Eſh, which ſignifies fire: for it better ſutes after their ſhame is diſcouered, that they ſhould bluſh as red as fire, then to bee valiant or of good courage. And yet I giue euery one leaue to chuſe which of the readings he likes beſt. He would they ſhould bluſh for ſhame then, in regard of their careleſneſſe, vnthankfulneſſe, and wickednes, that afterwards they might turne vnto God.

S. Ierom.

Verſ. 9. Remember the former things of old: for I am God, and there is nothing like me,

THis is the expoſition of the former ſentence, for hee ſhewes more fully that which he was ſpeaking of before; to wit, that God hath ſhewed ſufficient teſtimonies of his power and maieſtie; not onely for two or three yeeres paſt, but of old. For he had continued his benefits, & had made them to feele the tokens of his fauour in a conſtant courſe continually. Thence hee gathers that the ſignes of his Deitie were ſufficient to hold them from turning out of the right way. We haue alſo to obſerue that hee contents not himſelfe to be called God, but to be acknowledged the onely God, as wee haue ſaid before.

An expoſitiõ of the former ſentence.

God the onely God.

He will therefore be ſeparated from all gods that men forge, that we may wholly reſt our ſelues in him: for he no ſooner receiues any to be a companion with him, but his throne will be made either to totter, or to fall quite downe: for there muſt be one only God, or none at all.

Verſ. 10. Which declare the laſt things from the beginning, and from of old the things that were not done; ſaying, My counſell ſhall ſtand, and I will do what ſoeuer I will.

An amplification.

NOw he ſhewes more at large after what maner he would haue ỹ Iewes to thinke of the time paſt, to wit, becauſe they were dayly inſtructed by continuall propheſies ſo farre forth as was expedient. But hauing made this preface, he comes in the next place to mention the hope of their deliuerance. Neither are we to wonder that he repeates one thing ſo oft, becauſe it was a matter whereof they could hardly be perſwaded, for the people were not only ſlow to beleeue, but with their infidelitie they ioined rebellion. He admoniſheth them then that they had bin often taught for a long time together, how ſafe a thing it is to truſt in God, who doth not ſo much commend his foreknowledge vnto them, as to ſhew what he had ordeined to fall out by the miniſtrie of his Prophets. Neither had there bin any truth nor ſtedfaſtnes at all in the propheſies, vnleſſe the ſame God which had foreordeined this or that to come to paſſe, had not alſo the euents thereof in his owne power. And withall he aduertiſeth them that in all propheſies he ſpake nothing but the truth: for he publiſhed his decrees, to the end they ſhould not doubt to reſt boldly therein as ſoone as the Prophets had ſpoken. But becauſe I haue handled theſe things largely before, therefore I touch them the more briefly for the preſent.

* Or, the thought.

Verſ. 11. *I call * a bird from the Eaſt, and the man of my counſell from farre; as I haue ſpoken, ſo will I bring it to paſſe: I haue purpoſed it, and I will do it.*

An application of the generall doctrine to a particular vſe.

THe Prophet hauing ſpoken of the preſcience and power of God, now applies his generall ſpeech to a particular vſe, for he meanes to comfort the Iewes: to wit, that they were not in ſuch perpetuall ſlauerie vnder ỹ Babylonians, as that no hope were left them touching their deliuerance. He now comes to a ſpecialtie then, and promiſeth that Cyrus ſhall come with haſte, howſoeuer it ſeeme impoſſible in the eies of fleſh and blood. Where I haue tranſlated the word Aait, thought, almoſt all the Interpreters tranſlate Bird, which is the true ſignification of the word: but becauſe we may gather out of the ſecond of Daniel, verſe 14. that it is ſometimes taken for counſell, or thought, I had rather follow this interpretation, which is alſo approued by certaine Hebrues: yet it may be, the Prophet therein alludes to a bird; as if he ſhould ſay, It ſhall be a ſwift thought or counſel; neither do I denie but he notes the ſwiftnes of Cyrus his voyage.

Cyrus.

Where he calles Cyrus, the man of his counſell, it is a repetition much vſed amongſt the Hebrues, whereby alſo it appeares, that the word Aait is put in ỹ firſt member for thought, or decree. Now he calles him a man of his counſell, becauſe he ſhal be the executioner of this iudgement. Notwithſtanding if any had rather retaine the word Bird, I will not gaineſay him, in regard of the neere affinitie that is betweene the ſimilitudes: for Cyrus his comming was ſo ſudden and vnexpected, as that he ſeemed to come flying as a Bird. He beſieged and tooke Babylon whileſt the Chaldeans thought all paſſages were ſhut againſt him. Alſo, if this interpretation be better liked, we may ſay that Iſaiah alludes to thoſe diuinations which they made from the flying of Birds, whereunto the Chaldeans were exceedingly giuen: for as they practiſed iudiciall Aſtronomie, ſo obſerued they the flying & chirping of Birds, thinking that herein conſiſted a certaine knowledge of things to come, but the Lord tels them he will ſend a bird which they could not foreſee. Notwithſtanding, the firſt expoſition contents me beſt, to wit, that he hath reſpect to the ſwift paſſage of Cyrus, ſignifying, that the waies can not be ſo ſhut vp, nor the fortreſſes ſo ſtrong, that they ſhould hinder him frō approching ſuddenly vnto Babylon.

Iudiciall Aſtronomie.

Where he addes from the Eaſt, it ſerues not only to make the promiſe certaine, but alſo to aſſure the Iewes that no diſtance of way ſhould be able to let or foreſlow this worke of God, and therefore by way of expoſition he addes in the ſecond member, from farre. Hence let vs learne to what end we ought to referre all that which we reade of Gods preſcience or power in the holy ſcriptures, for theſe things are not ſaid to hold vs in ſuſpēſe, but to the end we might the better applie them to our vſe.

He alſo cloſely oppoſeth Gods counſell to our thoughts. Why ſo? Becauſe he will ſo deliuer his Church, that men ſhall not be able to conceiue the reaſon thereof in their minds. Howſoeuer then that which God promiſeth ſeemes incredible, yet he ſhewes that he will eaſily open himſelfe a way, to the end wee ſhould not meaſure his incomprehenſible counſels within the [narrow ſcantling] of our reaſon.

I haue thought it. Others tranſlate, I haue formed it: but I thinke the verb Iaſar agrees beſt, being taken here for to thinke. He therefore confirmes that which he ſaid before, to wit, that this was thus ordeined of him before, and therefore ſhould remaine ſtedfaſt and inuiolable. And whereas he addes, As I haue ſpoken, ſo will I bring it to paſſe, it is as much as if he had ſaid, that he foretold nothing in vaine, and that this propheſie which was publiſhed at his commandement, ought to be accounted of, as if it were alreadie accompliſhed. He hath put this firſt member then then to gaine credit to his words: and then hee addes in the ſecond, his thoughts, with his word preached: which wee are dilligently to obſerue, becauſe we are toſſed with diuers diſtractions, doubting whether God hath ſpoken in good earneſt or no; becauſe wee imagin him to be ſuch a one as our ſelues; that is to ſay, [in plaine Engliſh] an hypocrit, or a diſſembler. But he proteſts that nothing proceedes from him, but that which hath iſſued from his mature deliberations: ſo as the preaching of the word, is no other thing but an aſſured teſtimonie of his ſecret counſels, which he hath purpoſed to manifeſt vnto vs. As oft then as the Lord vtters his voyce, wee ought to build vpon the aſſured accompliſhment of it.

Gods promiſe and the performance goe together.

Verſ. 12. Heare yee mee, yee ſtubborne hearted that are farre from iuſtice.

HE ſharply rebukes the Iewes againe, who would neither giue credence vnto God, nor receiue any conſolations at all in their aduerſities. This was a galling reprehenſion, which no doubt went very neere the quicke: but they well deſerued it, in regard neither threatning, nor promiſe of God, were it neuer ſo ſweete and amiable, was auaileable to tame them. Theſe two epithetes which he heere vſeth, are to be noted: whereby hee giues vs to vnderſtand, that the afflicted and miſerable, ſhut vp the paſſage of Gods helpe from them by their owne rebellion. For by their murmurings and grudgings, they ſhake off the feare of God, and in thus doing, ruſh themſelues headlong into ſuch deſperate courſes, that they make open war vpon him. Now he ſpeakes to the Iewes, who were readie to burſt with malice and pride: notwithſtanding afflictions oppreſſed them to the vtmoſt. And thus hauing ſhaken off the feare of God, they fell into ope raging, which [I would to God] many among vs were not guiltie of, who wax worſe by their calamities. Thus then they would accept of no remedie nor medicine at al to cure their euils. If any would haue the word iuſtice to bee taken heere for Gods ſuccor, as in the verſe following; I leaue it free for them ſo to doe: for it is no ſtrange thing to ſee the obſtinate, who repell God, and reiect his grace, to bee vnable to reſt vpon his ſweete promiſes, or not to ſuffer that any ſhould doe them good, albeit helpe bee offered them.

The rebellious nature of the Iewes deſcribed.

Verſ. 13. I will bring neere my iuſtice: it ſhall not be farre off, and my ſaluation ſhall not tarry: for I will giue ſaluation in Zion, and my glorie vnto Iſrael.

IF any had rather retaine that which I was ſaying; to wit, that ſuch as are farre from iuſtice, and vncapeable of Gods grace, are here called to repentance, the ſenſe will bee all one: but if wee ſay that the Iewes were farre from iuſtice, in regard they were giuen vp to a diſſolute behauiour as men paſt grace, then there is an apt oppoſition betweene the iuſtice of God, and the iuſtice of men. Although the Iewes then were farre from iuſtice, and had caſt off all ſtudie of pietie; yet God affirmes, that his iuſtice is neere. As if he ſhould ſay; I muſt confeſſe incredulitie is a maine let and hinderance, yet ſhall it not hinder me in the end from manifeſting the force of my truth. What though ſome did not beleeue, ſaith Paul? ſhall their vnbeliefe make the truth of God without effect? God forbid. Rom. 3. 3. Yea, let God bee true, and euerie man a lier. And to ſay the truth, if he did not ouercome mens ſtubbornneſſe by his goodneſſe, wee ſhould incontinently periſh. For which of vs receiues the bounty of God, or his grace when hee offers the ſame, as wee ought? Doth hee withdraw his mercy or his truth from vs? It is for no other cauſe, but for that we be farre from iuſtice. Contrariwiſe, though we reſiſt him, yet he drawes neere vnto vs, that he may manifeſt his iuſtice, albeit we be vtterly vnworthy of it. Yet he doth this in ſuch wiſe, as the wicked receiue no fruit at all by it. For the Prophet comprehends not thoſe curſed apoſtataes, as if this ſaluation promiſed belonged vnto them; but onely affirmes, that God hath meanes ready to make his iuſtice appeare.

An oppoſitiō betweene the iniuſtice of man, and the iuſtice of God.

Why God withdrawes his fauour from vs for a time.

But heere it is needfull for vs to conſider in what ſtate this people ſtood, to whom this ſpeech was directed. They were all in a manner tainted with the ſinne of infidelitie, and thoſe that reſted vpon the promiſes were but very few: euen the elect ſometimes ſhewed themſelues but too obſtinate; ſo as they ſeemed to be no leſſe infected with this contagion then the reſt. He taxeth them all in generall then, as well to conuince the reprobates, as to gall the elect, and to bring them into the right way. But he chiefly ſets himſelfe againſt the rebels, as I haue ſaid, who obſtinately and ſtubbornly reiected all hope of grace.

All are gone out of the way.

And my ſaluation.] Heereby it appeares what he meant by the word Iuſtice; to wit, the help and ſuccour of God promiſed in fit and due ſeaſon to his people. He takes iuſtice and ſaluation then, for one and the ſame thing, becauſe it is an excellent teſtimony of Gods iuſtice, when he conſerues and protects his diſtreſſed ones. It is not added ſuperfluouſly, that it ſhall not be far off, and ſhall not tarrie: for heerein he expreſſeth Gods exceeding great mercie, in that he will finiſh the courſe of his iuſtice, albeit the people ſhould reſiſt the ſame.

Note Gods great clemency.

And vvill put.] The letter Vau, is heere put for a particle of rendring the cauſe, thus; For I vvill put. Now this is a confirmation of the former ſentence: as if hee ſhould ſay; Seeing the Lord hath once determined to ſaue Ieruſalem, ſhee cannot be diſappointed of ſuch a benefit. He ioines his glory with the ſaluation of the faithfull: as alſo Saint Paul takes the word glory, for mercy: Eph.1.6. and 3.16. For then Gods glory shines fully, when he drawes his children out of the bands of death, and sets them at libertie, because hee will haue the saluation of his Church and his inflicte, to be conioyned with an indissoluble knot.

Gods glory and our saluatiō lincked together.

THE XLVII. CHAPTER.

Vers. 1. Come downe and sit in the dust, O Virgin, daughter Babel, sit on the ground: there is no throne, O daughter of the Chaldeans; for thou shalt no more be called Tender and delicate.

Gods decree put in execution.

NOw Isaiah sets that downe at large, which hee mentioned before touching Gods counsell, and the execution thereof. For hee speakes heere in plaine termes of Babylons fall, because there was little or no hope that the people should euer returne, as long as the Babylonicall Monarchie florished. He therefore conioined these two things together; to wit, the ouerthrow of this Monarchy, and the peoples deliuerance which should insue. For the statelinesse of this Citie was vnto the poore Iewes as a deepe graue, in which they were buried: but when the Lord opened it, then the peoples first life was as it were restored to them afresh. In that hee commands her to come downe: it hath greater weight in it then if he had directly threatned she should come downe: for thus he speakes with authoritie, as if he were alreadie set in a throne of iudgement: for he spake nothing but what he had warrant from God to deliuer; and therefore hee boldly pronounceth what should happen. And this commission wee see the Lord gaue to Ieremiah; Behold, I haue set thee this day ouer kingdomes and nations, that thou shouldest plucke vp and destroy, and pull downe and plant: Ier.1.10. For there is no power at all that is not vnder the checke of Gods word.

Babylons fall.

1

2

No power so high, but it is subiect to the authoritie of Gods word.

Lastly, his meaning is to bring the Iewes as it were, to view the thing done, for they could not without much difficultie conceiue how this change should happē, vnlesse God should destroy their enemies with thunder & lightning from heauen. Touching this word daughter of Babylon; it is a figure much vsed among the Hebrewes, when they speake of Cities and nations. He calles her virgin, not in regard of her chastitie or shamefastnesse, but because shee was tenderly and delicately entertained, as virgins be, and was not as yet forced nor rauished by the enemie, as it was said of Zidon in Chap.23.12. The like may be said at this day of Venice, and of other Cities flowing and abounding in riches and pleasures: in which regard, they seeme most happy in the eies of the world. But they haue no lesse cause to feare the change of their estate, then the Babylonians, howsoeuer they seeme now to be far off from danger. For thou shalt be no more: that is to say, those that esteemed thee happy, shall reioice no more with thee for thy prosperitie.

Venice.

Vers. 2. Take the millstones, and grind meale: loose thy lockes, make bare the feete, vncouer the leg, and passe thorow the floods.

ALl this description tends to this end, namely, that Chaldea shal taste of a wonderfull change. For this Citie which before was in great honour, shall bee brought into extreme dishonour, and euery way put to such drudgerie, that all shall perceiue euident and apparant signes of Gods wrath therein. Behold then the marks of a most seruile bondage, Take the millstones, and grind meale. For they were wont in ancient time, to put slaues of the basest and abiectest condition to the mill. Their condition then must needs bee miserable, when they were held no better then horses: for in warre, those that got the conquest, handled some of their prisoners with much better respect. But heere the Prophet propounds nothing before the Chaldeans, but a wofull condition in all points, to the end the faithfull might assure themselues that they should goe forth freely; when the Chaldeans, who held them captiues, should themselues be captiuated. Now howsoeuer we reade not that the great states of the land were thus dishonourably vsed, yet it sufficed for the accomplishment of the prophecie; that Cyrus suffering them to inioy some base offices, made them vncapeable of any rule or authority, by constraining them to cease from all honest exercises, and liberall sciences.

Notes of extreame slauerie.

The righteous escapeth out of trouble, and the wicked shall come in his stead: Prou. 11.8.

And because they ouerflowed in voluptuousnesse, by the lockes hee alludes to the trimmings of virgins. We know they are but too curious in tricking and setting out their haire. Isaiah therefore on the contrarie describes here a dressing far discrepant from the former; to wit, that from the head downe to the feete, they should be couered with ignominie, with filth and mire, in stead of that braue and costly attire they were wont to weare. Maidens and virgins will scarsly bee seene to passe through the streetes, much lesse through high waies: but the Chaldeans must passe thorow the floods, and that with the thigh or leg vncouered.

Virgins but too curious in setting forth their haire.

Vers.3.

Verſ. 3. Thy filthines ſhall be diſcouered, and thy ſhame ſhall be ſeene: I will take vengeance, and I will not meet thee as a man.

The concluſion.

THis is the concluſion of the former ſentence, as if he ſhould ſay, As long as Babylon floriſhed ſhe kept her reputation, and was greatly eſteemed: for oftentimes vnder riches and authoritie there lie many vlcers, as vnder vailes, which being taken away, the filth is diſcouered to the great ſhame of the parties, as Demoſthenes ſpeaking of Philip king of Macedon ſaith,

A ſaying of Demoſthenes, ſpeaking of the eſtate of Philip king of Macedonia.

Whileſt mens bodies are in good plight, the weaknes vvhich is hidden in ſome of the members is not eſpied, but if the body fall into any dangerous ſickenes, then all is out of order, heere is a breach felt, there is a ſinew periſhed, or ſomewhat elſe out of tune.

A Simile.

The ſame we ſee to happen in kingdomes, Common-wealths, and Cities ill gouerned; for the filth and corruption which before was couered vnder the glorie of their eſtates, being now a little troubled, are diſcouered; when their pomp and riches are taken from them, then their cruelties, treaſons, robberies, periuries, vniuſt taxes, and other impieties, by which they purchaſed to themſelues honour in time of proſperitie, begin to turne to their diſhonour in the time of aduerſitie.

I vvill take vengeance, and vvill not meet thee as a man.] It is as much as if he ſhould ſay, Thinke not thou haſt to do in this caſe with a mortall man, whoſe violence thou mayſt reſiſt: for in other places where mention is made of mans hand, it ſignifies a kinde of moderation. But here the Prophet ſhewes that the Chaldeans ſhall find no reliefe at all, becauſe God will vtterlie roote them out. Others tranſlate, I vvill not meet a man, that is to ſay, I will accept of no man that ſhall intreate for them: Let who will come forth and intercede for them, yet I will not remit their fault, neither leſſen nor aſſwage the puniſhment one whit. This ſenſe agrees well, but it is a little conſtreined, in regard of the diſpoſition of the words: for thus, the verb Paga, which ſignifies to goe before, muſt be taken in the paſſiue ſignification, which cannot be. Moreouer, the Prophet ſaith not ſimplie that God will not be intreated, but that he wil not be appeaſed. Thus the firſt expoſition ſutes beſt, if we conſider rightlie of the order of the words: yet euery one may follow whether of the ſenſes he will, for take which you liſt, the ſumme will be, that the Lord will race them out without pitie or mercie; only this I ſay, the firſt expoſition likes me well, becauſe it agrees beſt with the text.

Verſ. 4. Our redeemer, the Lord of hoſts is his name, the holy one of Iſrael.

The end of Gods iudgements is to manifeſt himſelfe the redeemer of his Church.

THe Prophet ſhewes to what end God would take vengeance vpon the Chaldeans, euen in regard of the peoples ſaluation, as he ſaid in Chap. 45. 4. But this ſentence hath much greater force in it, in regard it comes in abruptly, and as one wakening himſelfe out of a dreame when he ſaw Babylon ruinated, which before made it her trade to ſubdue and treade other nations vnder her feet. And he ſhewes that this ſhall come to paſſe for none other cauſe, but to the end the Lord may manifeſt himſelfe to be the redeemer and auenger of his people.

The holy one of Iſrael.] As if he ſhould ſay, This people was not eleſt, nor ſeparated frō other nations in vaine: his meaning is then to ſet forth a teſtimonie of his power in this particular, and that is the reaſon why he ioines this title holy vnto it.

Verſ. 5. Sit ſtill and get thee into darknes, ô daughter of the Chaldeans, for thou ſhalt no more be called, The Lady of kingdomes.

By how much the more the peoples deliuerance ſeemed incredible, by ſo much the more is the Prophet forced to ſet it forth by ſundrie deſcriptions.

HE continues on the ſame argument ſtill, and ſhewes, that the end of the Chaldean Monarchy drawes neere. But becauſe this ſeemed ſomewhat incredible, hee repeates the ſame thing in many words, which he might haue diſpatched in one ſentence. He vſeth theſe deſcriptions then to ſet the thing done (as it were) before them. Where he bids them ſit ſtill and be quiet, it is in ſigne of ſhame and contempt. And yet this ſilence may be oppoſed to her firſt eſtate, wherein ſhe reigned as a Lady: for then ſhe not only lifted vp her voice with authoritie like a Miſtris, but ſhe cauſed her words to giue ſuch a ſound, that the noiſe thereof terrified all the Eaſt. Now the Prophet commands her to ſit ſtill and leaue her cackquet, in regard her condition is ſo changed, that where ſhe was wont to ſpeake ſo loude before, ſhe ſhall not dare now to mutter one word diſtinctlie from betweene her teeth.

Now in that he bids her enter into darknes, I willinglie receiue the firſt expoſition: for thoſe who are fallen from a proſperous eſtate into aduerſitie, ſit downe and put their mouthes in the duſt with ſhame, and dare ſcarcely ſo much as gaſp. For thou ſhalt no more be called. We know that this Monarchy had a large extent, and was Lady ouer many great kingdomes, for ſhe was the head of all dominions, it was needfull then that theſe poore captiues ſhould be fortified with theſe promiſes, and aduertiſed of Babylons ruine, that they might be put in hope of their deliuerance.

Verſ. 6. I was vvroth vvith my people, I haue polluted mine inheritance, and giuen them into thine hand: thou didſt ſhew them no mercy, but thou didſt lay the very heauie yoke vpon the ancient.

A preuention.

THis is a preuention, whereby he admoniſheth the Iewes (as he often hath done heretofore) that their captiuitie was a ſcurge inflicted vpon them by God: for if the ſtroke had come from the hand of another, then the remedie had not bin in him. That they might be perſwaded then that he which had ſmitten them was able to heale them, he wills them to impute it to the deſert of their owne ſinnes that they were ſo hardly dealt withall; yet he exhorts them to hope well, in regard God was minded to keepe a meaſure in chaſtiſing of them; and withall toucheth the cauſe why the Chaldeans ſhould be ouerthrowne, namely, that God, who is the iuſt reuenger of wrongs and iniuries, hath much more iuſt cauſe to reuenge the outrages done to his people. Beſides, in the firſt member he calles the Iewes to repentance, in regard they had drawne all theſe euils vpon their heads by their owne offences. Next, he accuſeth the Chaldeans, for taking vp this occaſion to exerciſe their crueltie, as if one ſhould flea a child whom the father had only commanded to be whipt with a rod. Whence it followes that the Chaldeans inſulted without cauſe, as if by their owne power they had ſubdued and led the Iewes captiue, for they ſhould be iuſtly puniſhed, in that they cruelly miſuſed the priſoners whom they had vanquiſhed.

1

2

Now whereas he ſaith that he was wroth, and therefore polluted his heritage, let vs not thinke that hauing changed his mind he was ſo farre offended as vtterly to neglect the care of his people, ſo as to thinke no more vpon his couenant: no, the contrarie plainly appeares as well by the euent, as in that he vouchſafeth to call them his people, notwithſtanding the greater part became Apoſtataes from him, and were iuſtly reiected of him as prophane. But in ſpeaking thus, he had reſpect to his couenant, for he had an eie to the foundation and originall whence they iſſued: ſo as thoſe who came of Abraham according to ỹ fleſh, are reckoned for the people of God, albeit there were very few which were his children by the right of adoption, for all in a maner falſly challenged to themſelues the title of Abrahams offspring. Thus the word wrath in ſcripture is not to be attributed to any paſſion in God, who euer deſires the ſaluation of his people, but vnto vs, who prouoke him by our wickednesſes. For he hath iuſt cauſe to be angrie, albeit he ceaſeth not ſtill to loue vs. He ſo prophanes his Church then, that is to ſay, proſtitutes it, and giues it vp as a pray into the enemies hands, that neither do his elect thereby periſh, nor yet is his eternall couenant violated. Nay, in the midſt of his wrath he remembers mercie, Haba.3. 2. and mitigates his blowes wherewith he ſmites his people, and in the end will ſeuerely puniſh thoſe that vexed them.

Wrath, not any paſſion in God.

God may iuſtly be angrie with vs, and yet loue vs.

If the Lord polute his Church then for a time: if tyrants cruellie oppreſſe her, let vs not be out of heart, but let vs flee to this promiſe, to wit, that he who auenged himſelfe vpon the inſolencie of the Chaldeans, will not let the rage of our enemies goe vnrecompenced. Moreouer we are diligentlie to obſerue, that men ought not to abuſe their victories, to handle their priſoners hardly, as often it falles out, for when they caſt off all humanitie, they become like wild beaſts, and ſpare neither old nor yong, men nor women, when they haue gotten the maſterie: in a word, they vtterlie forget their condition. Now howſoeuer they abuſe their power, yet wee may reſolue vpon it, that God will meet with them in the end, for ſuch ſhall haue iudgement mercileſſe, as will ſhew no mercie, Iam.2.13.

A conſolation of great vſe.

Shew no cruelties vpon the vanquiſhed.

But it may be demanded how the Chaldeans could exceed the bounds which God had preſcribed them; was not God able to haue ſuppreſſed their rage? And if he were not, where is the truth of that ſentence, An haire of your heads ſhall not fall to the ground without the will of your heauenly father? Luke 12.7. The anſwere to this is eaſie, for howſoeuer it was not in the power of ỹ Chaldeans to paſſe their bounds indeed, yet may we perceiue a more then brutiſh crueltie in them, in that they indeuored vtterly to roote out theſe poore helpleſſe wretches who yeelded themſelues to their mercie. The Lord complaines by his Prophet Zacharie of the ſame vnrulines of prophane nations, who violentlie ruſhed vpon his people to deſtroy them, though his wrath was not much moued againſt them. I am greatly angrie, ſaith he, againſt the careleſſe heathen, for I was angrie but a little, and they helped forwards the affliction, Zach.1.15. Here then he amplifies their fault, in that they ſpared not the ancient, whoſe age naturallie procures ſome reuerence. Whence we may gather how inſupportable their wrath was againſt thoſe which reſiſted them.

Obiect.

Anſ.

Verſ. 7. And thou ſaydſt, I ſhall be a Lady for euer, ſo that thou didſt not ſet thy minde to theſe things, neither didſt thou remember the latter end.

HEre he taxeth the pride of the Babylonians, who promiſed vnto themſelues a perpetuall domination, and neuer thought of any falling from their greatnes by any inconuenience that might happen. See how the childrē of this world are bewitched with their proſperitie, contemning all others in reſpect of themſelues. But Iſaiah ſcornes ſuch pride, and ſhewes, that there is nothing more abominable in the ſight of God. To ſay, is taken heere to conclude in a mans ſelfe of a thing: which will better appeare anon. For the proud are not wont to vtter ſuch words in publique before euery one, but theſe high conceits are boiling euermore within them, although they make no ſhew thereof outwardly. Now this is a follie inſupportable, that men will ſo farre forget their owne fragilitie as thus to exempt themſelues from the common ranke of others, for in ſo doing they thinke not of what mould themſelues bee made of, to wit, duſt and aſhes. I grant the faithfull may be ſecure, in regard they are prepared with patience to expect and looke for the worſt that may befall them, becauſe they are couered vnder the wings of Gods protection, and yet they are not free from the conſideration of thoſe euils to which they are ſubiect, in regard that there is no eſtate permapermanent in this world. The prophane then lift vp their creſts againſt God, as oft as by their fond imaginations, they promiſe to themſelues ſome reſt in the midſt of the continuall tempeſts wherewith this world is toſſed.

The faithfull ſecure, and yet not free from feares.

Now to ſet forth the Babylonians furie, he addes that the length of time made them neuer the more moderate. It was no great wonder if vpon hot bloud they plaid the bedlems: but to exerciſe their crueltie from day to day, hauing got the conqueſt, and to inſult ouer poore captiues without ceaſing, was a thing vtterly inſupportable, and more then barbarous. But all this flowed from pride (as Pſal.55.19. I haue ſaid:) for they thought of no changes: they imagined their mountaine ſtood ſo ſtrong, as there was no remouing or altering of their firme eſtate. Heere is the ſecond reaſon then wherefore the Lord brought Babylons Monarchy to the ground.

Neither didſt thou remember the latter end thereof.] Some thinke there is a change of the perſon heere, but without any good ground. For mine owne part, I take it he ſpeakes of the end of Ieruſalem: and this is the moſt receiued opinion. For the Lord often ſpeakes of his Church, without mentioning her name, by way of excellencie: as wee alſo doe, when wee would expreſſe the vehement affection wee beare to ſome that wee loue dearely. But the wicked are ignorant of the end of the Zach.2.8. Church; neither doe they know wherefore the Lord corrects her: they make themſelues merry with her mournings, becauſe they would gladly behold her vtter ſubuerſion; neuer thinking that God cares for her.

Obiect. If any obiect that the Babylonians could
Anſ. not know it: yet that could not excuſe thē. For they could not be ignorant what God it was whom the Iſraelites worſhipped. Whileſt they thus aduanced themſelues then aboue the poore Iewes, and handled them ſo cruellie, they therein perſecuted God himſelfe: euen as if of ſet purpoſe, they had determined to trample both him, and the couenant which hee had made with his people, vnder their feete.

Verſ. 8. Therefore now heare thou that art giuen to pleaſures, and dwelleſt careleſſe: ſhee ſaith in her heart; I am, and none elſe: I ſhall not ſit as a widow, neither ſhall I know the loſſe of children.

Babels intollerable pride. HEere the Prophet threatens the Babylonians their ruin againe: wherein hee ſeth very fit words to confirme the peoples hearts in good hope, leſt being amazed at the proſperitie of the Chaldeans, they might happily faint, and be brought out of heart. And yet he ſpeakes not to Babylon, as if he meant to forewarne her; but it is rather ſaid for the conſolation of the faithfull. Hee addes that ſhe was drunken in pleaſures: for howſoeuer proſperitie in it ſelfe is not to be condemned, in regard it is the good gift of God; yet wee are Proſperitie in it ſelfe not to bee condemned. not ignorant how the children of this world are wont to abuſe it, by falling into riot and exceſſe. Moreouer, hee now toucheth in a word, what it was which ſhe ſaid in her ſelfe in the former verſe; to wit, a ſecret perſwaſion, whereby ſhee concluded that things ſhould come thus and thus to paſſe. For ſo the proud are wont to doe, howſoeuer for modeſties ſake they diſſemble and couer it, becauſe they would not that euery one ſhould be priuie thereto.

I am, and there is none but I.] What an inſupportable inſolencie call you this? ſhe prefers her ſelfe aboue all the world. Firſt, ſhe thinkes ſhe ſtands by her owne power: ſecondly, ſhe makes her ſelfe beleeue, that the reſt of the world are not worthy to be compared with her: thirdly, ſhe promiſeth her ſelfe a reſt vnchangeable. For the firſt, none can ſay truly I am, but God only, to whom it belongs properly to ſay, I am that I am: Exod.3.14. For by this title he diſtinguiſheth himſelfe from all creatures. Thus then Babylon tooke from God the honour due vnto him, when ſhee imagined that ſhee ſtood by her owne power: and in aduancing her ſelfe thus, ſhee bid battell vnto Iehouah. Moreouer, ſhe wronged the whole world, in abaſing them thus vnder her feete. But theſe haughtie mindes firſt indeuour to begin with God, that ſo they may make him their enemie: and then they ſet themſelues againſt men, that ſo they may leaue none exempt either in heauen nor earth, againſt whom they make not warre by their ouerweening. The third member, which containes the height of her pride, conſiſts, in that ſhe reſolues vpon a ſtate that cannot be moued; neuer thinking what little hold worldlings haue of things preſent: for often times, the higher men are aduanced, the lower is their fall.

1
2
3
None can ſay truely, I am, but God onely.

Verſ. 9. But theſe two things ſhall come to thee ſuddenly on a day, the loſſe of children, and widowhood: they ſhall come vpon thee in their perfection, for the multitude of thy diuinations, and for the great abundance of thine inchanters.

WHereas Babel thought her ſelfe exempt frō feare of al dangers, the Prophet here denounceth an extreme calamitie to befall her. She promiſed her ſelfe that ſhe ſhould neuer feele loſſe neither of husband nor children: on the contrary he ſhewes, that both theſe euils ſhall ouertake her: ſo as ſhe ſhall be made a wofull ſpectacle for all to behold with contempt, in regard of her deſolateneſſe. He addes that it ſhall come vpon her in perfection: that is to ſay, there ſhall not one iot or tittle thereof faile: for ſhe ſhall know the miſerie of widowhood, with a witneſſe; as they ſay. And thus there is a cloſe oppoſition betweene the moderate corrections, in which ſome mitigation may bee expected, and that horrible vengeance of God, which brings forth no other iſſue but a finall deſolation: for the more the wicked exalt themſelues in their pride, the lower will the Lord abase them in his indignation and wrath.

Babels fall.

The higher the proud exalt themselues, the lower the Lord will abase them.

Because of the multitude, &c.] Others translate; Of thy soothsaiers. But mee thinks the word should rather note out the vice, then the persons. Some take the letter Beth, for a particle of rendring the cause, and expound it, Because: in which sense it is often found in the Scriptures: albeit wee may expound, that the Chaldeans shall finde no helpe nor succour in their deceiueable diuinations, in which they gloried so much: and so it may be translated, Notwithstanding.

As if hee should say; Notwithstanding the multitude of thy diuiners and coniecturers, these things must needes befall Babylon. For he derides the confidence which they put in these fond prognosticators, through whom they thought to foresee things to come. But in regard he will insist longer vpon this point in the 12. and 13. verses, therefore I willingly consent, that hee heere recites one of the causes of their destruction; to wit, that they despised all dangers, vpon the confidence they conceiued in these impostures and illusions.

Vers. 10. For thou hast trusted in thy wickednesse: thou hast said; None seeth mee. Thy wisdome and thy knowledge, they haue caused thee to rebell; and thou hast said in thine heart, I am, and none else.

HE explanes that which he said in the former verse, though we may extend it further; to wit, that he taxeth the Chaldeans for their fraud, oppression, outrages, and wicked practises, whereby they so highly magnified thémselues. For all these great kingdoms lightly become great dens of theeues, as an archtheefe which once raigned among them said: because they can neuer inlarge their territories, but by plucking from others by force and violence; therefore they driue the lawfull possessors out of their houses, that they may be Lords and Kings within themselues. Now he calles that wickednesse, which hee adornes afterwards with these goodly titles of wisdome and knowledge. For thus tyrants are wont to compasse their deuices: they forget all equitie and right, that they may make the poore to fall in their nets. But the Lord detects and discouers their trecheries, so as euery one may see they dance but in a net. After Iob hath said, that God catcheth the wise in their wisdome: to shew what this wisdome is, he calles it craftinesse: Iob 5.13.

As touching that which by and by followes; namely, that Babylon said none saw her wickednesses: this sets forth with what freedome she committed the same. For seeing reuerence or shame holds men in some awe, he that feares not God as a witnesse of his behauiour, and thinkes men notes nothing hee doth; such a one will not sticke to practise anie villanie. I grant that the most wicked are sometimes stung with the worme of an euill conscience: but they close vp their eies, and plunge themselues into a benummednes and deadnesse of conscience, as Moles within the ground. In a word, their consciences are seared vp with an hot yron. But aboue all we see how they scorne God with a desperate presumption, as if by their fetches they were able to dazle his eies. For when they purpose to beguile the simple, it sufficeth that they may doe it closely: as if belike, they could deceiue his eies [who in all places beholds both the euill and the good: Prou. 15.3.] But they flatter themselues in their cunning in vaine; for the Lord will easilie plucke off their vizards. Let all men detest such wisdome then, by which men deceiue their owne soules, and pull ineuitable ruine vpon their owne heads.

I am, and none else.] He againe repeates those blasphemies mentioned in the 9. verse: that all might know how much God abhors them; and how neere such are to endlesse perdition, that exalt themselues higher then is fit.

Vers. 11. Therefore shall euill come vpon thee, and thou shalt not know the morning thereof: destruction shall fall vpon thee, which thou shalt not bee able to put away: destruction shall come vpon thee suddenlie, ere thou bee aware.

HE continues stil to scorne the vaine confidence of the Babylonians, who thought all things safe, by reason of the foresight they had touching the situation of the starres. He therefore denounceth against them, that which the Scriptures affirme to hang ouer the heads of all contemners of God. When they shall say, Peace and safetie, then shall sudden destruction come vpon them: 1. Thes. 5.3. So as they shall not know in the morning, what shall befall them ere night. Now it appeares sufficiently out of Dan. 5.30. how certainly these things came to passe.

Babels sudden downefall.

Vers. 12. Stand now among thine Inchanters, and in the multitude of thy Soothsayers (with whom thou hast wearied thy selfe from thy youth) if so bee thou maiest haue profit, or if so be thou maiest haue strength.

THe Propher speakes to the Chaldeans, as wee are wont to speake to common ruffians or harlots, who will receiue no admonitions. Hold on your course still; you shall see in the end how the world will goe with you. So he saith; Thou shalt tell me one day what good thou hast gotten by thy soothsaiers and coniectu rers. By the word Stand, hee alludes to the gesture of diuiners, who stand still in a place, til some bird flie that way. Also, the Astrologers stand obseruing the course of the heauens, and will not misse the least point. If any had rather expound it Diuines, then Diuinations; I dog

Babels confusion remediesse.

doe not much contradict him, becauſe the word Kabarim is ambiguous.

If thou mayſt be ſtrengthened:] As if he ſhould ſay, Thy diuiners can not turne away that deſtruction which is ready to fall vpon thine head, for he inſults ouer their peruerſe confidence: foretelling, that after they ſhal haue vſed all ỹ ſhifts they can, yet they ſhall proue fruitleſſe and bootleſſe.

Verſ. 13. *Thou art wearied in the multitude of thy counſels: let now the * Aſtrologers, the ſtarre-gazers, and Prognoſticators * ſtand vp, and ſaue thee from theſe things that ſhall come vpon thee.*

* Or, binders of the heaue.

* Or, come forth.

NOw hee deſcribes that more plainely which he ſaid a little before ſomewhat obſcurely, to wit, that all the counſels which Babel tooke in times paſt ſhall turne to her deſtruction, in regard ſhe nouriſhed within her a vaine hope wrought in her heart, from the perſwaſion of her wiſdome and power, as if nothing had bin able to haue done her hurt. He ſpeakes not of counſell in the ſingular number, but of counſels, and, of multitudes of them, to ſhew, that they boaſted and bragged in vaine, though they were neuer ſo wittie and cunning to deceiue; for the fuller their counſels were of fine conueiances, and the more they vvere in number, the more ſhould they be vexed that were the deuiſers of thé.

A plainer deſcription of that which before was deliuered obſcurely.

This is a generall ſentence therefore againſt all ſuch, as truſting in the excellencie of their wit, build Caſtles in the aire, reſting vpon their owne prouidence, and inuent by all meanes how they may circumuent and catch the ſimple in their ginnes, for God will ſcatter all their plots, and ouerthrow their counſels, as he threatned before in Chap. 30. 1. Wo to them (ſaith he) that take counſell, but not of me; that couer with a couering, but not by my ſpirit. What is the reaſon then that men proſper not in their counſels? Surely becauſe they ſeeke not at all vnto God, from whoſe mouth we ought to looke for all wiſedome and counſels in aſking it at his hands. The more ſuch kind of perſons conſult then, the more trouble they put themſelues vnto, and the leſſe fruit they gaine thereby, as Salomon well ſaith, They riſe vp early, and goe to bed late, and eate the bread of carefulnes, trauailing for nothing, Pſal. 127. 2. for he ſpeakes there of the vnbeleeuers, who haue not learned to caſt their care vpon the Lord, but truſting in their owne induſtrie, enterpriſe many things raſhly and vnaduiſedly. The Lord derides ſuch confidence, and cauſing it to become fruſtrate, in the end they feele by experience how little good they get by their plots and indeuors, and thus they are corrected for their boldnes, whileſt Gods childrē inioy his bleſſings with quiet ſleepe, as it is further added in that Pſalm: not that they are vtterlie exempt from all troubles, but becauſe firſt of all they vex not themſelues: ſecondly, they commend the iſſues of all their affaires with quiet minds to the bleſſing of God.

Iam. 1. 5.

Come forth] Heere we ſee what theſe counſellers are of whom the Prophet ſpeakes, to wit, thoſe diuiners who gat themſelues much credit among the people vnder the vain title of wiſe men, as if forſooth they had knowne all things by beholding the ſtarres: but wee haue ſpoken before Chap. 44 25. of the vanitie that is in this Iudiciall Aſtronomie. If any obiect, that it was not in theſe diuiners to turne away imminent dangers: I anſwere, The Babylonians would ſo haue taken it, if they hauing foreſeene this deſtruction had forewarned them of it; but ſeeing they foreſaw it not, therefore it followed that their profeſſion was vtterlie vaine. Many replie, that the Prophet ſpeakes heere againſt the ignorance of the Arte, and not againſt the Arte it ſelfe: but ſuch are deceiued, for he ſpeakes here of the Chaldeans, who were the fathers of this Arte.

Iudiciall Aſtronomie. Obiect. Anſ. Obiect. Anſ.

Now he addes very pleaſantly, that they bind the heauens: in regard they ſtick not to auerre that their dreames are as certaine as if they had the world tied in a ſtring, or as if they had the ſtarres claſped in their armes. Yet if any had rather tranſlate enchanters, the ſenſe will not be amiſſe, for the Hebrue word ſignifies both the one and the other. Now howſoeuer it be not euill in it ſelfe to conſider of the ſituation of the ſtarres, yet the Prophet notwithſtanding ſaith, that ſuch as will foretell things to come, do paſſe the bounds of this ſcience. It alſo ſeemes, that to make theſe ſpeculators the more odious (in regard they did diſcredit all diuine predictions) he cloſely oppoſeth them to the true Prophets, for when wee fixe a fatall neceſſitie to the ſtarres, Gods iudgements muſt needs be put out of mind.

To conſider of the ſituation of the ſtarres, allowed to foretell things to come, there, by condemned.

Verſ. 14. Behold, they ſhall be as ſtubble, the fire ſhall burne them, they ſhall not deliuer their owne liues from the power of the flame: there ſhall be no coales to warme at, nor light to ſit by.

HE heere inueyes more ſharply againſt theſe Aſtrologians, who aggrauated Babels pride by their vaine brags: for ſuch deceiuers are wont to bereaue men of all feare of God, by attributing all things to the diſpoſition of the ſtarres, ſo as they leaue nothing to Gods prouidence. See from whence the contempt of God and of all his threatnings ſprings, namely, from not attributing the puniſhments which he ſends to his hand, but to deſtinie, and to a meeting of ſecond cauſes, which wizards fondlie imagin in their owne braine. This is the reaſon why he takes vp the Chaldeans in ſuch a rigorous ſort, reſembling them vnto ſtubble ſet on fire, which is conſumed in an inſtant; for hee compares them not to wood with which one may make a fire of ſome continuance to warme himſelfe by, but to ſtubble, or hemp-ſtalks, to ſhew, that there is nothing of ſo ſhort continuance as ſuch kind of men.

A terrible denunciatiō againſt theſe Aſtrologians.

Whence the contempt of God and all his threatnings ſprings

Verſ. 15. Thus ſhall they ſerue thee with

*Or, and with those with whom thou hast traded.

with whom thou haſt wearied thee, *euen thy merchants from thy youth: euery one ſhall wander to his owne quarter; none ſhall ſaue thee.

He now directs his denunciation against the Babylonians.

HAuing denounced deſtruction againſt theſe Star-gazers, he returnes to the Babylonians; and telles them that they are not to expect help from them, whence they thought to haue it: for they ſhould but loſe their time in reſting vpon ſuch counſels, after which they had ſo long and ſo painfully trauelled. Now in ſpeaking of ſuch as traded with her, he meanes thoſe whom wee commonly call Pettifoggers: which is a ſimilitude taken from Merchants who haue infinit ſhifts to beguile: for there is no kinde of ſubtile fetches, but they haue them at their fingers ends. Princes in regard of their greatnes traffique not; but they will vſe ſuch fellowes to ſerue their owne turnes, and to traffique for them. Now howſoeuer this may bee vnderſtood of all thoſe that were in league with the Chaldeans, and had ſuccoured them, yet the Prophet aimes ſpecially at her Diuiners.

Where he addes, from thy youth: it is to aggrauate Babels iniquitie, who of old was poiſoned with this fond opinion: ſo as it was become another nature vnto her.

Euery one ſhall vvander to his quarter.] Some thinke the Prophet ſpeakes of the Aſtrologers flight, in regard euery one ſhould bee conſtrained to ſhift for his owne life: and I will willingly agree to this expoſition. But yet I alſo thinke that he alludes to the regions of heauen, which the Aſtrologers part and meaſure out, to draw their prognoſtications from thence. He derides their vaine brags then: as if he ſhould ſay; They retire to their regions, but they ſhall vvander in their imaginations, and ſhall find no place of refuge. If any had rather vnderſtand it of their reuolt, from whom Babel looked for preſent helpe in time of need, I gainſay him not.

THE XLVIII. CHAPTER.

Verſ. 1. Heare yee this, O houſe of Iakob, which are called by the name of Iſrael, and are come out of the waters of Iudah: which ſweare by the name of the Lord, and make mention of the God of Iſrael; but not in truth nor in righteouſneſſe.

Now the Prophet directs his ſpeech to the Iewes.

NOW hee directs his ſpeech to the Iewes, whom hee chiefly reſpected in the whole chapter before going.

The drift of Iſaiah in this Chapter.

For he was not ſent to the Babylonians; but ſo ſpeakes to thé, that ſtill his meaning is, the Iewes ſhould make their profit of it; for whoſe good he was principally appointed, & ordained to that high and excellent calling. He hath foretold the ruine of Babel then, to the end the Iewes might in patience and ſilence wait for their deliuerance: and yet, that the greatneſſe and power of their enemies in the meane while, might not daunt nor diſcourage them. But reſting ſecurely vpō theſe promiſes, they might ſtand with inuincible force againſt al temptations. Now in as much as the Iewes were ſomewhat obſtinate, and would not eaſilie be brought to credit theſe promiſes: as alſo that Iſaiah by the ſpirit of prophecie, wel foreſaw how ſtiffe necked and rebellious they would proue, euen in their captiuitie; he therefore reproues them thus ſharply. Ezech. in Chap. 33 31. ſhewes at large how great their incredulitie was, when they murmured againſt God and fel off the hooks, making no more account of theſe promiſes, then of ſo many fables. It is not without cauſe then that Iſaiah is ſo vehement: ſhewing that they much diſhonoured the Lord, in that they would not reſt vpon his truth.

He ſpeakes to Iſrael; but ſo, as to Iſrael, degenerate: Iſrael in name, and not Iſrael in deed. Hee giues them not this title then, by way of honour; but rather to conuince them of their falſe confidence, in that they wrongfully vſurped this honourable title, and nothing at all anſwered the truth thereof in their practiſe. For why did God digniſie his ſeruant Iakob with this name, but becauſe he ſhewed himſelfe valorous and inuincible in aduerſitie? Which appeares by that vvreſtling he had with God, who pitcheth the field as it were to make warre vpon vs, when hee exerciſeth vs with diuers tribulations: Gen. 32.28. How could this title agree then to his ſucceſſors, when they fainted and forſooke their confidence in the day of aduerſitie? He afterwards reprocheth them, in that they nothing at all reſembled the holy fathers, from whom they were deſcended. Pſal. 24.10.

By vvaters, vnder a figure, hee meanes the fountaine and ſpring from whence the Iewes iſſued: for I allow not of the Rabbines ridiculous gloſſe; who by the word waters, vnderſtand that ſperm whereof children are ingendred, becauſe it is moiſt and wateriſh: but it is a ſimilitude very fitly drawne from waters which flow from a ſpring. Now hauing taxed them for baſtard and degenerate children, he addes that they falſly couer the ſame title vnder the cloke of pietie and religion; from the truth whereof, they were alſo reuolted.

An oath, a part of Gods worſhip.

Now becauſe an oath is a part of Gods worſhip, he heere puts it for the whole, vnder the figure ſynecdoche. For as the Idolaters offer God great wrong in ſwearing by their Idols; ſo the true worſhippers doe highly honour him him in ſwearing by his name, for thereby they proteſt to haue but one God, whoſe name they thus glorie in. But in this place the Prophet inueyes bitterly againſt the hypocrites, who had nothing in their mouthes but the name of God, and tolled it continuallie vpon the tip of their tongues, but in the meane while their hearts were farre off from him, as it is in Chap.29.13. for this cauſe he ſaith, But not in righteouſnes, which word he takes heere for vprightnes and ſoundnes of heart, without which nothing we doe is acceptable before God. Or, truth and righteouſnes may be taken for words of one ſignification, as if he ſhould ſay, There is nothing but hypocriſie and vaine ſhewes in all your doings; you profeſſe your ſelues to be the ſeruants of the God of truth, and behold, you let all the world ſee that you are ſtuffed with diſloyaltie and lies.

Hypocrites taxed.

Verſ. 2. For they are called of the holie Citie, and ſtay themſelues vpon the God of Iſrael, whoſe name is the Lord of hoſts.

HE holds himſelfe to the point ſtill, and in other words refutes their vaine ſhewes, for falſly they gloried to be citizens of the holy Cuite, and yet they ſtuck not to pollute and defile it with their leaud practiſes.

An amplification of the Iewes hypocriſie.

Ieruſalem was worthily reputed holy, in regard God had ſanctified it for the place of his abode, but it was prophaned with ſo many abuſes, that there was no holines at all in a maner left in it. In the 15. and 24. Pſalme wee ſee who are worthie to be eſteemed the true citizens of Ieruſalem, but ſeeing the Iewes bluſhed not to play faſt and looſe with God, they thought it enough to couer themſelues vnder this vaile, of the Temple of the Lord, the Temple of the Lord.

Ier.7.

Where he ſaith, they ſtaied vpon the God of Iſrael: hee ſpeakes not of a true confidence, but of a malepart boldneſſe. For as the faithfull ſtay and reſt vpon the Lord with their whole hearts, ſo hypocrites doe falſly maske themſelues with his name, and are beſotted with a vaine and fond perſwaſion: they contemne all things, yea, they feare not impudentlie to diſgorge this brag; Tuſh, God will ſurely helpe vs, he will neuer forſake his people, as if God were a foſterer of ſuch a prophane crew. To be ſhort, they caſt his lawes behind their backs, and tread them vnder their feet, and yet proteſt with high termes that God is the ſtay of their ſaluation. But to the end they ſhould not thinke to eſcape vnpuniſhed for ſuch dallyings, the Prophet affirmes, that Gods maieſtie and glorie ſhall no whit be impeached, though hypocrites indeuor to transfigure him at their pleaſures. For in calling him the Lord of hoſts, he addes it as a threatning, to the end they might know that the God of Iſrael, vnder which title they vainely couered themſelues, was alſo the Lord of hoſts to puniſh ſuch hypocrites, and that could not indure to be thus mocked and triſled withall.

Verſ. 3. I haue declared the former things of old, and they went out of my mouth, and I ſhewed them: I did them ſuddenly, and they came to paſſe.

HE accuſeth the Iewes of ingratitude, in regard they diſtruſted GOD who had ſhewed them infinite teſtimonies of his goodnes to confirme them in a true and ſound faith, and thus he beteaues them of all excuſe, in telling them that he hath declared former things. Now it ſeemes he ſpeakes not only of their redemption from their captiuitie, but of other benefits which the Lord had done for his people; as if he ſhould ſay, I began of old to tell you what ſhould enſue, neither haue I promiſed any thing which is not accompliſhed: but notwithſtanding ſo many experiences, you beleeue nothing that I ſay, no not the moſt certaine and the infallible truth.

Before he taxed their hypocriſie: they now their ingratitude.

Wee may alſo ſuppoſe, that the Prophet ſpake not only to thoſe which then liued, but likewiſe to ſuch as were afterwards to ſurtiue them in the captiuitie, that when the calamitie ſhould befall them, they might call to minde what was foretold them, for God meant to haue this propheſie renoumed, that during their exile, they might know how theſe things fell not out by chance, and therfore were to gather conſolation thence. Iſaiah reprehends them ſharply then, in regard that albeit they knew the truth of theſe propheſies by the euent, yet they would not acknowledge Gods hand in the, neither would they reſt vpō his promiſes. Had he not good cauſe then, thinke you, to rebuke them thus ſharply, and to condemne their obſtinacie? Yes doubtleſſe. For they reſiſted that hand which offred them reliefe, and reiected his mercie: they limited the holy one of Iſrael, in that they would not beleeue that it ſhould euer be permitted them to returne home into Iudeah. Nay, when the way was ſet wide open before them, very few had any heart to returne into their countrie. Others ſuppoſed that Cyrus did but dallie with them, only permitting them to goe, that hauing gadged and ſounded the depth of their affections, he might take occaſion therby to oppreſſe them and deale the more ſeuerely with them, not conſidering that thoſe things which the Lord had foretold muſt of neceſſitie come to paſſe, though men and Angels ſhould withſtand the ſame.

I ſo vnderſtand theſe predictions then wherof the Prophet ſpeakes, that vnder them I alſo comprehend the ancient propheſies, in which the Lord had ſaid to Abraham, that his poſteritie ſhould be led captiue, and ſhould after be reſtored to their firſt libertie, Gen. 15.13. And ſo we muſt come to other propheſies of this nature by degrees, which ſucceſſiuely followed one another, for euen this propheſie was many times confirmed now in one age, and then in another. His meaning is then, that the Lord yet neuer foretold any thing, but the iſſue and euent anſwered vnto the beginning.

God yet neuer foretold any thing, but the euent was anſwerable to the beginning.

Verſ. 4.

Verſ. 4. Becauſe I knew that thou art obſtinate, and thy necke is an yron ſinew, and thy brow braſſe.

The Iewes obſtinacie & impudencie diſcouered.

THe Lord heere proteſts by his Prophet, that he ſpake of things to come, becauſe of the peoples obſtinacie. As if the Prophet ſhould ſay; I haue done more for you then ſtood with my calling. Not that he only bent his ſpeech this way, for wee know that the principall drift of his ſermons appertaines to the godly, who quietly obey, and willingly giue eare. But Iſaiah, that had to deale with a froward people, rightly affirmes, that God would haue vſed a moſt ſoueraigne remedie, in ratifying his law by many prophecies, and that ſucceſſiuely one after another. For as hee had foretold nothing but the truth to their fathers, ſo he ſhewes that he continues ſtill ſo to doe, that heereby hee might batter downe the obſtinacie and rebellion of this people.

Hee ſaith their necke was as an yron ſinew, becauſe it could not be bowed. I grant that ſinewes are ſtiffe, yet they are bowable. But heere he ſaith, nothing will bow them, becauſe they are as vntamed heifers. Afterwards hee addes, a brow of braſſe, to ſet forth their impudencie. Two things holds vs in awe: firſt, teachableneſſe, if we willingly ſubmit our ſelues to the wholſome admonitions and inſtructions, which ſhall bee tendered to vs. Secondly, if being ouertaken with anie ſinne, wee be ſo touched with true remorſe and bluſhing, that wee condemne the euill committed: where theſe two graces, humilitie and ſhamefaſtneſſe are wanting, it is a ſigne of a deſperate obſtinacie. By two arguments the Prophet ſhewes that this people was giuen vp to all iniquitie, in that hee affirmes they were become vnteachable and ſhameleſſe. Notwithſtanding when the Lord cannot otherwiſe remedie ſuch a miſchiefe, yet he ſo farre ſupports our rebellion, as to admoniſh vs of things to come. And thus, transforming himſelfe as it were, he is readie to trie all the waies hee can, that hee might allure vs vnto him, and ſet vs againe in the right way.

Two things keepes vs in awe.

1

2

Verſ. 5. Therefore I haue declared it vnto thee of old; before it came to paſſe I haue ſhewed it thee, leſt thou ſhouldeſt ſay, Mine Idoll hath done them, and my earued Image and my molten Image hath commanded them.

AGaine he propounds the ſame thing vnto them, that the people being deliuered out of Babylon, might acknowledge that God himſelfe had done it, leſt they ſhould attribute this redemption either to their Idols, or to fortune. If it bee asked wherefore the Lord makes mention of Idols, ſeeing the Iewes profeſſed to worſhip but one God: I anſwer, they were already ſo corrupted by ouer much familiaritie with the Gentiles, and had ſo defiled themſelues with ſuperſtitions, that God was in a manner vtterly forgotten. Ezechiel complaines of this in his eight Chapter, verſ. 3. For there being carried in a viſion into Ieruſalem, hee ſaw the Sanctuarie of the Lord polluted with diuers idolatries and abominations. It is no maruell then if our Prophet put them in mind of God, the onely author of all benefits, to the end they might acknowledge their redemption to be his worke.

Queſt.

Anſ.

Leſt thou ſhouldeſt ſay.] He meanes that the Iewes ſhould be inexcuſable, if they did not confeſſe this benefit of being ſet free from bondage, to proceede from Gods hand. For that which was foretolde ſo long before came it came to paſſe, could not fall out, neither fortune nor chance. Hee ioines Gods preſcience then with his power, ſhewing that he hath not only foretold theſe things, but hath alſo performed them. Heere then we may behold as in a glaſſe, the frowardneſſe of our owne hearts, which are alwaies plotting how to bereaue the Lord of his deſerued praiſe, euen as oft as he ſends vs any helpe, or beſtowes any benefit vpon vs, whereby he ſtretcheth out his hand to becken vs to himſelfe. But the world reſiſts God in this behalfe, euen with an high hand, euermore attributing that to creatures, which proceeds from God: as in the Papacie, where wee ſee they aſcribe the benefits of God, vnto the Saints departed; as if he ſate idle in heauen, or were fallen into a dead ſleepe. It is needfull therefore that the light of Gods word ſhould alwaies ſhine before vs, for the rectifying of our iudgements: for wee ſhall alwaies miſſe the marke in conſidering of Gods workes, vnleſſe he giue light vnto our ſteps, by the lanterne of his bleſſed truth.

A looking-glaſſe wherein we may take a view of the frowardneſſe of our nature.

The ſame thing often befalles many at this day, which Iſaiah bewailes touching his nation; to wit, that notwithſtanding all admonitions, yet they ceaſe not to forge Idols, which they adorne with Gods ſpoiles as it were. The Apoſtles, Peter and Iohn, in their life time, Act. 3. 12. cried with a loud voice, that they did no miracles by their own power or godlineſſe: and yet we ſee how the Papiſts, whether they will or no; yea as it were to vex them, will burthen them now they are dead with infinit miracles. Well, howſoeuer God at this day foretelles vs not of things to come, yet ſhall the Law and the Goſpell be of no leſſe force to condemne our vnthankfulneſſe, then if wee had ſeene the wonders (whereof God ſhewed himſelfe the author) contained in the prophecies.

Peter and Iohn made to worke miracles by the Papiſts now they are dead, who proteſted they did no thing by their owne power being aliue.

Verſ. 6. *Thou haſt heard; * behold all this. And will not yee declare it? I haue ſhewed thee new things euen now, and hid things which thou kneweſt not.

*Or, ſee all.

*Or, from.

BY this wee may better diſcerne that the Prophet ſpeaks of the captiuitie to come, and of the redemption that was to inſue. Wherein he as well prouided for the good of the people of his owne time, as for theirs that were to ſucceede: that ſo, albeit thoſe which which then liued, made no right vſe thereof, yet at leaſt thoſe that ſuruiued them, being heereby admoniſhed, might amend. For it often fals out that the word moues not ſuch as are preſent: nay, they hauing heard it, goe their waies and contemne it: but their ſucceſſors on the contrary, receiue it with more reuerence.

God ſpake plainly, but we are dull of hearing.

Where he bids them behold: ſome thinke the Prophet ſo propounds the euent of the thing, as if he ſhould ſay, God neuer ſaid any thing, but the truth thereof hath manifeſted it ſelfe. But I expound this word behold, or See, thus; Seeing the Lord hath ſpoken: it is thy duetie to thinke well of that he hath vttered, and to giue diligent attention thereto. Whence we may gather, that our dulneſſe is the cauſe why we ſuffer that which proceeds out of Gods mouth, to fall to the ground; and that many doe therefore couer themſelues with the vaile of ignorance in vaine. For the Lord ſpeakes diſtinctly enough, vttering to euery mans capacitie, as much as is needfull for them to know; if the auditors were but as attentiue as they ought, and did aduiſedly conſider what is ſaid.

But the Lord requires ſomewhat more of his people beſides hearing and vnderſtanding of his word; to wit, that they ſhould publiſh the wonders whereof they haue had experience. And thus vndoubtedly hee inſtructs his ſeruants vpon this condition, that being taught themſelues, they ſhould labour in the next place, to bring others to confeſſion of the ſame faith with them.

From now, is as much as if he had ſaid; Note this day in which the Lord foretelles thee by my mouth, that which thou knoweſt not: for it cannot be apprehended nor foreeſene by any humane coniecture.

Verſ. 7. They were created now, and not of old. And euer before this thou heardſt them not, leſt thou ſhouldſt ſay; Behold, I knew them.

Neither the peoples captiuitie nor deliuerance happened by chance.

THe Prophet ſhewes that hee diſputes not about things knowne, or vnderſtood, by long vſe: firſt, to correct the pride which is naturally grafted in all men, (for they vſurpe vpon that which belongs to God onely:) and ſecondly, that none ſhould attribute the leaſt iot thereof vnto fortune, or to any ſecond cauſes whatſoeuer. Men vſe many ſhifts to depriue God of his glory, applying al their wits, to ſee how they may part among the creatures, that which is his proper right, that they may leaue vnto him no more but his naked and bare titles. Leſt the people ſhould imagin then, that they were either ouercome by the power of the Chaldeans, or ſet at libertie by chance, therefore the Prophet ſo oft repeates, that all is Gods worke.

Where hee affirmes, that they heard not: ſome expound, that the people reiected Gods admonitions, and would not obey the wholſome counſels which were giuen them. But I thinke he meant another thing, to wit, that that which could not be knowne by humane reaſon, of which alſo the Iewes were ignorant, was ſo manifeſted vnto them, that they could not well defraud the holy Ghoſt of his iuſt praiſe. And this is euident enough by the ſcope of the text.

Verſ. 8. Yet thou heardſt them not, neither diddeſt thou know them; neither yet was thine eare opened of old: for I knew that thou wouldeſt grieuouſly tranſgreſſe; therfore haue I called thee a tranſgreſſor from the wombe.

a Or, a rebell.

A confirmation of that wherewith they were taxed, verſ. 4.

THe Prophets meaning is, that the Lord hath not inſiſted ſo long vpon this matter without cauſe, but hath been thus inſtant in exhorting the people, to the end they might acknowledge that they were chaſtiſed, and in the end deliuered from all their miſeries, by the immediate hand of God. For they (being of an obſtinate nature) might complaine, that it was needleſſe to trouble their heads with ſo many repetitions of one and the ſame thing. The Prophet anſwers, that it is no wonder, ſeeing he hath to deale with a ſort of tranſgreſſors: and thus in other words, he confirmes that which he ſaid in the fourth verſe, touching the yron ſinew. The ſumme is, that God knowing the peruerſitie of this people, omitted no good meanes to win them to his obedience: by how much the more then they haue been conuinced by ſufficient and infallible teſtimonies, ſo much the leſſe ſhall they be excuſable before him. Now hauing pulled off their vizard of holineſſe, to wit, their glorying in the name of Iſrael, (as in the firſt verſe) hee impoſeth vpon them a more proper name, and flatly calles them rebels.

By the wombe, I vnderſtand not their firſt eſtate, by and by after they were ſeparated to be the Lords people; but from their deliuerance out of Egypt, which was as a birth of the Church: Exod. 12. 21. But howſoeuer this people had had infinit experiences of Gods great goodneſſe towards them, yet they neuer ceaſed to behaue themſelues diſloyally againſt ſo good a benefactor; nor to wax more and more vntamed: ſo that hee had iuſt cauſe to tax them with the titles of rebels and traitors.

Verſ. 9. For my names ſake will I deferre my wrath, and for my praiſe will I refraine it from thee, that I cut thee not off.

The ſcope of the former reprehenſiõ manifeſted in this verſe. 1

HAuing reproched the people touching the malice which flowed from the fathers to the children, and ſo to their nephewes: now hee ſhewes that they are ſtill vpheld by Gods mercy, whereas they were otherwiſe worthy to periſh an hundred times. The vſe of this admonition was double: for it was needfull that the faithfull ſhould be thus ſuſtained, leſt they ſhould haue fainted in their captiuitie. Beſides, when they had leaue to re- 2 turne, it was fit they ſhould be humbled to acknowledge that their deliuerance proceeded wholly from the meere grace and good will of God. And thus we ſee that the former reprehenſion tended to teach them, that it was the Lords hand that drew them out of Babylon as out of a graue, not for their deſerts, for they were well worthie to haue bin vtterlie deſtroyed.

Vſe to vs.

In that God ſpares vs then at this day, and mittigates his corrections; in that he remits our offences, and hath any reſpect at all vnto vs, theſe things wholly proceed from his free grace. Why ſo? Becauſe we ſhould learne to attribute none of theſe benefits to the merits or ſatisfactions of men. Here then the diſtinction of ỹ Sophiſters falles to the ground (as wee haue ſhewed in other places) touching the remitting of the puniſhment, which they affirme not to be free, becauſe we muſt make ſatisfaction for the ſame vnto God. But our Prophet teacheth, that God freely remits it, and that only for his owne names ſake. For he ſpeakes here of the puniſhment which he might iuſtly inflict vpon the Iewes. He had very good cauſe then to haue cõſumed them, if he had not reſpected the maintenance of his owne glorie.

Diſtinction of the Sophiſters.

Verſ. 10. Behold, I haue fined thee but not as ſiluer: I haue choſen thee in the furnace of affliction.

God ſo corrects his Church, that in the meane while he thereby procures her ſaluation.

THe Lord ſhewes, that he vſed ſuch meaſure in correcting his Church, that therewithall he prouided for their ſaluation. In the former verſe he ſaid that he ſpared, or would ſpare them, becauſe he reſpected his glorie: now he ſhewes that he hath chaſtiſed them in deed, yet ſo, that he did it for their good; for he corrected them, to fine them, but we are not wont to trie and fine that which we mind to caſt away: ſeeing then he had none other end, it followes that he did it to procure their benefit and ſaluation thereby. Beſides, he mentions this triall by way of preuention, leſt any ſhould obiect, that Gods loue little appeared in ſo ſharp afflictiõs. The Prophet, I ſay, doth in fit ſeaſon preuent ſuch a conceit, & tels them, that God hath skill enough to correct his Church in mercie, and yet not vtterly to forſake her.

Simile.

Correction would rather cõſume then refine vs, if God ſhould not moderate and ſanctifie them to vs.

Moreouer, he addes that he hath not fined vs as ſiluer, for then we ſhould haue bin vtterly conſumed. There is ſome puritie to be found in ſiluer, but in vs there is nothing but droſſe: and were it not that the Lord made vs ſiluer, we ſhould be burnt to aſhes, yea to nothing, euen as tow or flax. Corrections would draw from vs no puritie at all. The Lord in trying of vs then hath reſpect to our abilitie, leſt he ſhould paſſe meaſure, as Pſal. 103. 13. 14. then he makes our chaſtiſements profitable vnto vs by the worke of his owne ſpirit, which would otherwiſe proue mortall and deadly vnto vs.

To choſe, is taken here to diſcerne: for we ordinarily make choice of that which we deſire to keepe, as wee haue ſaid Chap. 7. 15. where it is ſaid, that Chriſt ſhould eate butter and hony, till he had knowledge to chuſe the good, and refuſe the euill. He ſhewes then by this word what difference there is betweene the ſtripes wherewith the faithfull are ſmitten, and thoſe which the wicked are to ſuſtaine, wherewith in deed they ſhall be ouerwhelmed. But howſoeuer the Lord tries and ſmites vs, yet are we acceptable in his ſight, and he reſerues ſtill a fatherly affection towards vs, euen in the middeſt of our afflictions, and in the end he brings vs forth bright as ſiluer, and ſo makes our ſuffrings to become a ſacrifice of a ſweet ſmelling ſauor in his noſtrils. To conclude, his meaning is, that God ceaſeth not euen then to be good to his Church, whileſt he ſeemes to conſume her to nothing.

A Conſolation. Pſal. 34. 20. Hab. 3. 2. Exod. 3. 2.

Verſ. 11. For mine owne ſake, for mine owne ſake will I do it: for how ſhould my name be polluted? ſurely I will not giue my glorie vnto another.

A repetition of that he ſaid verſ. 9. with an interrogation added.

HE repeates that which he ſaid before, but he addes an interrogation, which the Hebrues are wont to vſe when they ſpeake of abſurdities, as heere, Can it be that my name ſhould be prophaned? The ſecond member, I will not giue my glorie &c. ſerues for an expoſition of this interrogation. Iſaiah then amplifies that which he ſpake before in few words, and flies an higher pitch in his ſtile; for it is not only a bare amplification of the former ſentence, but rather a beautifying and adorning of it for ỹ greater confirmation thereof. Now by theſe words he meanes that men as much as in them is, doe profane Gods name, and giue away his glorie vnto creatures; only the Lord in his admirable prouidence ſtops the courſe of this miſchiefe, and keepes his glorie vnblemiſhed. Although we by our fault then doe expoſe this glorie of God to contempt, yet will he preſerue it as long as he ſhall continue our protector. Hence we gather a very ſweet conſolation, to wit, that the Lord ioines his owne glorie with our ſaluation, as we haue often ſhewed you before.

I will not giue.] That is to ſay, I will not indure that any ſhould rob me of my glorie: but this had fallen out if the people had bin vtterly conſumed, then would they haue ſcorned the God of Iſrael; for the wicked were wont in the afflictions of the Saints to diſgorge theſe blaſphemies, Where is now their God? Pſal. 79. 10. Pſal. 42. 3. Moſes alſo alledgeth, that the Lord withheld his hand from deſtroying the people for the ſame cauſe: I feare, ſaith the Lord, the furie of their aduerſaries, leſt they ſhould vvax proude, and leſt they ſhould ſay, our hie hand, and not the Lord hath done all this, Deut. 32. 27. And queſtionleſſe, as oft as the Lord terrifies the faithfull, by manifeſting vnto them the ſignes of his heauie diſpleaſure, the only remedie then left vs is this, that he will yet remember his owne couenant of grace made with vs in Chriſt, leſt he ſhould proſtitute his holy name to the outrages and blaſphemies of the wicked. Neither did the Prophet only ſtirre them vp hereby to giue thanks thanks to God, and to confeſſe that their proſperitie proceeded from his free mercie; but he did likewiſe put a forme of praier into their mouthes, and a ſhield of defence vpon the armes of the faithfull, wherewith they might repulſe all the fierie darts of the diuell.

Verſ. 12. *Heare mee, O Iakob, and Iſrael my called. I am, I am the firſt, and I am the laſt.

*Or, yet.

Chap 41.4. & 44.6. God changeth not, and therefore we are not conſumed as it is in Mal.3.6.

WE haue told you heeretofore why the Lord ſpeakes of his eternitie; namely, to teach vs that he is alwaies like himſelfe, and that wee ſhould not meaſure his power by the narrow ſcantling of our owne ell. He heere calles for audience, becauſe the onelie thing that deceiues vs, and makes vs wander after ſo many falſe opinions is, that wee haue no eares to heare. Where he ſaith Iſrael is his called: he oppoſeth it ſecretly againſt that reprobation, whereof hee ſpake in the beginning of the Chapter. For hee there ſhewed that the Iewes wrongfully vſurped this title, and falſly gloried therein; becauſe they ſhewed not themſelues to bee true Iſraelites in deed. But heere he declares that Iſrael is his owne called: as if a father in rebuking his ſonne, ſhould in anger call him baſtard; and yet being appeaſed, ſhould afterward terme him his ſonne. Thus the Lord ſhewes that the Iewes were growne ſo degenerate, that hee had iuſt cauſe to reiect them: and yet albeit their vnworthineſſe of that great honour he ſhewed them, he ſtill reſpects his owne calling of them, which they could not aboliſh nor make vnfruitfull by their malice or vnthankfulneſſe.

Simile

1

2

The particle yet in this place, ſignifies a continuance: for the Prophet meanes nothing elſe but that God is alwaies like himſelfe: that is to ſay, he repents not, nor changeth not his mind, as men are wont to doe: and therefore he ſaith, that he is the firſt and the laſt. Now we haue alſo in theſe words to note, that Iſaiah ſpeakes not heere of God his eternall eſſence, but applies this doctrine to our vſe: ſignifying that he will be ſuch a one to vs, as he hath euer been in times paſt: as alſo that wee ſhould remember to ſeparate him from Idols; leſt our mindes being diſtracted by new inuentions, ſhould erre from his true feare.

Verſ. 13. Surely mine hand hath laid the foundations of the earth, and my right hand hath ſpanned the heauens: when I ſhall call them, they ſtand vp together.

As God is vnchangeable, ſo is he almightie.

THe Prophet ſhewes heere more plainly, what his meaning was in the former verſ. For hauing ſaid that God is alwaies one, and neither changeth his affection nor will towards vs, hee now magnifies and extolles his power, in regard of his viſible workes which wee daily behold. And thus the Lord comming forth of his Sanctuarie, doth after a ſort manifeſt himſelfe familiarly vnto vs in them.

Whether wee turne the wordes, my right hand hath meaſured, or, hath ſuſtained; the ſenſe will be alwaies alike: neither is it needfull that we ſhould ſtand much about the interpretation of the word Tepaḥ. For the word To meaſure, notes out the admirable wiſdome of God, in that hee hath ſo aptly proportioned all the parts of this faire curtaine of the heauens, that it ſhould neither bee higher nor lower from the earth then it is: but that they conſtantly keep the order preſcribed them of God: ſo as in this round and ample vaſtneſſe, wee can behold nothing deformed or miſplaced. If any had rather retaine the word To vphold, it is alſo a commendation of Gods ſingular wiſdome and power, who beares vp this infinit weight, and great maſſe of the heauens in their continuall motion, and yet keepes it from tottering or reeling from one ſide to another.

Note.

But the laſt member where hee ſaith, that all things ſtand vp together when he calls them; hath ſome more difficultie in it. For it is either to be referred to the firſt creation of the world, or to the perpetuall gouernement thereof. If we refer it to the firſt creation, the preſent tence of the verb To appeare, ſhould be taken for the future tence, thus; As ſoone as the Lord commanded them to appeare, they forthwith obeied, according to that in the 33. Pſalme, verſ. 9. He ſpake the vvord, and it was done. But if wee accept of this expoſition, the word together, which is added, ſeemes not to ſute well with the hiſtorie of the creation mentioned by Moſes. For the heauens and the earth were not created and adorned in an inſtant: Gen.1.2. Things were firſt intermingled and confuſed: then the Lord ſeparated them and placed them in order. But the ſolution is eaſie; for the Prophets meaning is nothing but this, that the Lord created all things by his onely will, and ſo formed heauen and earth, that they forthwith obeied his commandement.

1

2

Obiect.

Anſ.

And yet for mine owne part, I willingly extend this ſentence to the perpetuall gouernment of the world. As if he ſhould ſay; Heauen and earth obeied Gods voice, and yeelded to his abſolute power: ſo as theſe creatures ſo farre remote one from another, willingly conſented and agreed together, with an incredible harmonie; neither more nor leſſe then if they were turned about with one wheele. And howſoeuer the ſpace bee wondrous great betweene earth and heauen aboue, yet the Lords voice was diſtinctly heard in euery part of them. There was no need of meſſengers then to teach or publiſh his will, but himſelfe in an inſtant executes the ſame at his pleaſure. Shall a man finde any Prince that can haue all his ſeruants by and by about him at his call? No, Gods power then is infinit, it is diſperſed far and neere, and extends it ſelfe to all parts of the world, as the Scriptures doe manifeſt, and faith by experience makes vs feele.

Simile.

Simile.

Pſa. 47.1,2.

Verſ. 14. *All you aſſemble your ſelues and heare: which among thē hath declared theſe things? The Lord hath loued him, he will doe his will in Babell, and his arme ſhall be againſt the Chaldeans.

*Or, his worke.

God permits the Iewes to bring in their allegations.

NO doubt but the Lord directs his ſpeech to the Iewes, though hee vtters nothing heere which ought not to be knowne of all. But becauſe the heathen & prophane people had no eares, therefore hee ſummons not them to heare. Wee know that the Iewes had this priuiledge aboue other nations, that God manifeſted himſelfe to them: as it is ſaid in the Pſalme; God is knowne in Iudah, his name is great in Iſrael: Pſal.76.1. and 147. 19, 20. And thus their ſenſleſneſſe was the leſſe excuſable, in that they reiected their owne happineſſe. For whence ſprang this lightneſſe and inclination to apoſtaſie, but from the little or no regard they had of this ineſtimable treaſure of the heauenly doctrine? They well deſerued then to bee thus ſharpely chidden, and that he ſhould thus cloſely tax them for their malicious and manifeſt conſpiracies to darken the grace of God.

Now it ſeemes the Lord permits the Iewes to bring in their allegations which they had, as thoſe who truſting to the goodnes of their cauſe, dare thus defie their aduerſe partie: Bring in thy reaſons, and if thou haſt anie metall in thee, ſhew it. The Lord then prouokes them firſt, and bids them tell if they can, whether the gods of the Gentiles haue foretold any ſuch things or no. And this may alſo be applied to the Soothſaiers and Prognoſticators, who attributed to themſelues the knowledge of things to come, which they could not foreſee at all. And in the ſame ſenſe he repeates that which followes in the verſe inſuing: I, euen I haue ſpoken it. The ſumme comes to this then, that the Iewes wauer, yea and fall; becauſe they haue not well informed themſelues how ſingular a grace of God it is, to learne from his ſacred mouth, whatſoeuer is needfull to ſaluation. In the latter part of the verſe, hee recites one particular; namely, God had foretold the end of their captiuity in Babylon. True it is that he names not Cyrus as the diſpenſer of this benefite: but in ſpeaking of ſome certaine perſonage well knowne, he ſaith, God hath choſen him to ſurpriſe Babel by force.

Cyrus.

The word To loue, is not taken heere ſimply, but for ſome ſpeciall reſpect: and therefore he reſtraines it to the happy iſſue of his voyage. And ſo we may ſay that Saul was beloued of God for ſome priuate end; namelie, that hee might raigne for a time, and might haue the gift of prophecie: 1.Sam.10.10. But there is an higher matter to bee conſidered of touching the faithfull, whom God loues with an euerlaſting loue: for hee will neuer ſuffer them to be ſeparated from him. The Prophet then meant to ſay, that Cyrus ſhall vanquiſh Babylon, becauſe he ſhall vndertake that buſineſſe vnder Gods authoritie & leading; not of his owne motion, but after ſuch a manner, as God thruſts forward the blind and ignorant, whither him liſteth: or as hee vſeth ſometimes to ſerue his turne of men againſt their wils. For Cyrus is not praiſed for his voluntary obedience, but it is rather indeed an extolling of Gods ſingular prouidence, by which hee diſpoſeth of all ſorts of men to performe his will, and to execute his decrees.

Example.

Iohn 13.1. *Ier.*31.3.

By arme, (vnder a figure familiar amongſt the Prophets) we may vnderſtand his worke. And thus the ſpeech will runne better; Hee ſhall execute his will againſt Babylon, and his worke againſt the Chaldeans. And wee know that the Prophets are wont to ioine Gods counſell and worke together. Now he priuilie taxeth the Iewes for their ingratitude, in that they would not beleeue Gods promiſes, though hee pointed out the thing before them with his finger, and ſpake far otherwiſe then did the Chaplaines of the falſe gods. To conclude, hee meant to informe the Iewes, that the ſurprizing of Babel by the hand of Cyrus, ſhall bee a worke of the Lord, vnder whoſe direction all things ſhall bee ſo carried, that the Church in the end ſhall be deliuered.

Verſ. 15. I, euen I haue ſpoken it, and I haue called him: I haue brought him, and his way ſhall proſper.

HEe brings the Iewes againe to the prophecies, and attributes this honour vnto God, that hauing in fit time reuealed the thing, hee takes away all doubtings. Afterwards hee addes, that whatſoeuer was foretold, ſhall be confirmed. And thus there is a double force in the doubling of theſe words, I, euen I. As if he ſhould ſay; It is none but the God of Iſrael that hath ſpoken theſe things which are hidden, and to come: ſecondly, he being true, and one that neuer deceiues, he will vndoubtedly accompliſh whatſoeuer he hath promiſed. Iſaiah then propounds two ends here vnto himſelfe: Firſt, that the poore captiues ſhould wait for their deliuerance: ſecondly, being deliuered, that they ſhould acknowledge God to be the author of ſo excellent a benefit, and not to aſcribe it either to the arme of fleſh, or to haphazard. Now he ſhewes that Cyrus his good ſucceſſe in his enterpriſes, ſhall proceede from Gods calling of him. Not that he was worthy of ſo great a fauour, neither that he obtained it by his own induſtry and power; but in regard that the Lord vſed him as his ſeruant to deliuer his people. For where he called him his beloued in the former verſe, and heere ſaith that he hath called and brought him; I told you erewhile that it is not to bee referred to that loue of God, whereby he adopts vs for his children, by calling vs to himſelfe. Cyrus was neither loued nor called in this kind: for howſoeuer he were indued with excellent vertues, yet was he tainted with very odious crimes, as ambition, deſire of ſwaying Kingdomes, couetouſneſſe, crueltie, and many other vices: for his wofull and vnhappy end manifeſted ſufficientlie what

How Cyrus is ſaid to be loued and called of God: See Chap.45.3.

Cyrus had a miſerable end.

what he was. The Prophets meaning is then, that God will be fauorable to Cyrus in proſpering him outwardly: not to adopt, nor to ſhew him that fauor which he only communicates to his choſen. The cauſe muſt be conſidered then for which he giues him theſe titles, to wit, that he will vſe his miniſtrie for the deliuerãce of his Church, as we haue ſaid before.

Verſ. 16. Come neere vnto me: heare you this: I haue not ſpoken it in ſecret from the beginning: from the time that the thing was, I was there, and now the Lord God and his Spirit hath ſent me.*

* Or, done.

God rebukes the people for their ingratitude.

HE directs his ſpeech againe to the Iewes, and in commanding them to draw neere, he meetes them halfe way (as it were) gently to receiue them, and yet he couertlie taxeth their reuolt, ſhewing, that they were vnfit to entertaine wholeſome doctrine, vnleſſe they departed from their errors. Surely it was a deteſtable fault in them to be ſo farre ſeparated from God, with whom they ought to haue bin ſo neerely conioined: but their ſeparation cõſiſted not ſo much in diſtance of place, as in the want of conſent in affections: our approching then conſiſts in a readines to heare, hauing ſubdued our owne carnall reaſon. But this is a worke of his owne grace; for who will be readie to direct his heart vnto God, if himſelfe draw him not?

John 6.

I haue not ſpoken in ſecret.] The expoſitors expound this place diuerſlie. Some applie it to Ieſus Chriſt, whereas Iſaiah had no ſuch meaning: and it ſtands vs in hand to auoid all wreſted and conſtreined interpretations. Others referre it to the Prophet himſelfe: but this ſuites as badly as the former, for this ſpeech can agree to no man. I thinke then that Iſaiah brings in God ſpeaking, and blaming of the people touching their ingratitude, in that from the beginning, that is to ſay, ſince the day he began firſt to manifeſt himſelfe to their fathers, he hath not ſpoken in ſecret, nor obſcurely. Whence it followes, that the ignorance which is in them muſt needs be imputed to their owne malice, in regard they did wittinglie ſhut their eies againſt the cleare light.

Wreſted expoſitions are to be auoided.

When he ſaith from the time, &c. It ſignifies, that he performed that by his power which he had ſpoken with his mouth. Hee rightlie affirmes then that he gaue ſignes of his preſence, when in performing all things, he not only ratified the propheſies by the effects, but alſo to teach, ỹ thoſe things which men imagin to fall out by chance, were gouerned and directed by Gods ſpeciall prouidence. In a word, he puts them in minde of Gods ancient promiſes, and of the accompliſhment of them, to ſhew, that God will be alwaies like himſelfe. Thoſe which ſay that Iſaiah ſhall be preſent in ſpirit when the Lord ſhall bring againe his Zion, offer violence to the Prophets words, and are euery way farre wide from his intention.

And now the Lord and his ſpirit, &c.] Heere Iſaiah ſpeakes of himſelfe indeed, and applies this ſentence to the former doctrine, proteſting therein that God who ſpake from the beginning, ſpeakes alſo by him, ſo as they were to giue no leſſe credit to that which he now pronounced by the mouth of his ſeruant, then if himſelfe were there preſent in his owne perſon. Hence we may gather a profitable doctrine, to wit, that we are carefullie to thinke vpon all the miracles which the Lord hath done, to confirme our hearts in his truth. For it is no ſmall confirmation of our faith that the Lord hath had a remnant from the beginning, to whom he hath manifeſted himſelfe, inſtructing them, and making them aſſured promiſes, which he hath fulfilled, ſo as there neuer failed nor fell to the ground the leaſt iot of that which he hath ſpoken. For what hath he pronounced with his mouth that he hath not fulfilled with his hand in due and conuenient ſeaſon? As oft then as wee be ſurprized with doubtings, wee muſt haue our recourſe to theſe and the like examples, and thence conclude thus with our ſelues, God hath of old bin wont to keepe touch with his ſeruants: it is not ſince yeſterday that he hath begun to ſpeake: neither did he euer hold his people in ſuſpence by ambiguous or doubtful ſpeeches, but hath alwaies ſpoken perſpicuouſlie and plainely. Thus the Prophet ſhewes he vtters nothing from his owne braine, but was ſent of God, who hath ſhewed himſelfe iuſt in all his ſayings.

How wee ought to make our benefit of former miracles.

He mentions the Spirit, not to note out a thing diuers from God, ſeeing he is of one eſſence with him. For in one eſſence of God we acknowledge three perſons: but he names the Spirit, becauſe he is the only teacher and conductor of all the Prophets. S. Paul ſaith, That none can ſay Ieſus is the Lord, but by the holy Ghoſt: and by and by after he ſaith, that the gifts of God are diuers, and yet it is one and the ſame ſpirit, which works all things in all, 1. Cor. 12. 3. 4. In this place alſo we haue a manifeſt proofe of the diuinitie of the Holy Ghoſt, becauſe he ſends the Prophets, which appertaines to none but God, euen as Ambaſſadors are ſent by the only authoritie of the Prince. Seeing the holy Ghoſt ſends the Prophets then, and directs and giues them power and efficacie, he muſt needs be God. Beſides, hence we gather, that we are to abandon all ſuch as haue not this direction of Gods ſpirit, notwithſtanding they crake, they be ſent of God: I meane this troupe of popiſh wolues, who glorie in the titles of Paſtors, and Teachers, and impudentlie brag of their ſending, ſeeing they are whollie deſtitute not only of the holy ſpirit, but of his doctrine. For in vaine doe they boaſt that they are inſtituted and ſent of God, when they are vtterlie vnfurniſhed of thoſe gifts and graces of the holy ghoſt which are fit for the execution of ſuch a charge. Moreouer, it is too great a ſaucines in them to pretend the illumination of the ſpirit of Chriſt, ſeeing themſelues are whollie void of faith, and knows not a B frõ a battledore in the doctrine of ſaluation. There are horned Biſhops which ſit in the chaire, and God wot the moſt part of them as ignorant as beaſts: nay, there is not tenne of them a-

The holy Ghoſt of one eſſence with the Father.

Three diſtinct perſons in one eſſence.

A manifeſt proofe of the diuinitie of the holy Ghoſt.

Popiſh wolues will needs deck themſelues with the titles of paſtors and teachers.

Few of the horned Biſhops in the Papacie that know the firſt rudimẽts of religion.

among three hundred who haue so much as tasted the first rudiments of pietie, Is any thing more absurd, then to say that such an assemblie is gouerned by the holy Ghost?

Vers. 17. Thus saith the Lord thy redeemer the holy one of Israel, I am the Lord thy God * which teach thee to profit, and leade thee by the way which thou shouldst goe.

* Or, teaching thee profitable things, leading thee, &c.

This and the foure verses following, depend one vpō another.

I Ioine this verse with the foure verses ensuing, because they tend all to one end, in which God promiseth deliuerance to his people, yet in such wise, that he first shewes how they were brought into bondage by their owne fault, and that to the end they should not murmure in obiecting that it had bin better for them to remaine in the countrie, if the Lord meant to help them then to be brought back after they were led away. For a Physition deserues not praise so much for curing a disease, as for hindring and preuenting it. The Prophet preuents them, and saith, that this hapned through the peoples fault, for they might haue escaped this iudgement if they had but diligentlie attēded vnto Gods commandements, but they would not, therefore such an obstinacie well deserued such a punishment: for it was not the Lords fault that the affaires of the people succeeded ill, but they had reiected his fauor which was tendred vnto them, and yet he saith, the Lord will ouercome this rebellion by his great goodnes, because he is not minded his people should perish, though for a time he afflicts them.

Teaching thee profitable things.] By this he meanes, that Gods doctrine is such, that it is able to preserue his people in good state if they would constantlie follow the rules therein prescribed. Now the Lord takes paines to teach vs, not to procure his owne good, but ours. For what good are we able to do him? By his holy doctrine then he prouides for euery one of our saluations, that being rightly instructed by it, wee might reape the fruit thereof, which is, an happie and blessed life. But when by our vnthankfulnes we reiect the benefit freely offred, what remaines but that we should worthily perish? Isaiah then had iust cause to reproch the Iewes, that if they had not wittingly depriued themselues of the fruit of this doctrine, they should haue bin ignorant of nothing that tended to their profit and saluation.

Now if it bee affirmed touching the Law, that by it God taught his people profitable things: how much more may it be said of the Gospell, by which whatsoeuer is profitable and necessary, is fully reuealed vnto vs? And here also we see how execrable ỹ blasphemies of the Papists are, who auer, that the reading of the Scripture is dangerous and hurtfull, that they may dissuade the laitie (as they call them) from medling therewith. What? Dare they indeed giue the lie to God, who by the mouth of his holy Prophet pronounceth that they are profitable? See 2. Tim. 3. 16.

Papists giue God the lie.

Whether is it better we should beleeue God or them? Let them disgorge their blasphemies then as long as they will with an whorish forehead, yet ought not we to refraine the studie of them: for wee shall perceiue that Isaiah hath spoken the truth, if wee reade the holy Scriptures with feare and reuerence.

Guiding thy way.] These wordes shew yet more cleerly, the profitablenesse before mentioned. For the Prophets meaning is, that the way of saluation is set open to vs, if we hearc God speaking; because he is readie to leade vs through the whole course of our life, if we will submit our selues to his lore. And thus Moses protests that hee set before the people life and death: Deut 30. 19. Also, This is the way, walke in it. For the rule of a godly life is contained in the Law, the which cannot deceiue. I command thee this day, saith Moses, that thou loue the Lord thy God, that thou walke in his waies, and that thou keepe his commandements, ordinances, & iudgements, that thou maiest liue, that the Lord may blesse thee in the land whither thou goest to possesse it: Deut. 30. 16. The summe is, that such as are teachable, shall neuer bee destitute of light, vnderstanding, nor counsell.

Vers. 18. Oh that thou haddest hearkened to my commandements! Then had thy * prosperitie been as the flood, and thy righteousnesse as the waues of the sea.

* Or, peace.

IN regard the people might haue complained of their being led captiue, the Prophet to preuent such grudgings, shewes the cause why it came to passe; namely, because they reiected the doctrine of saluation, without reaping any benefit by it. No doubt but he had respect to Moses his song, where there are almost the same words repeated. Oh that they were wise, then they would consider their latter end! Deut. 31. 29. The particle Lu heere, signifies a wish, Oh that, or, Would to God. But the Lord not onely complaines that the Iewes lightly esteemed the good and profitable things offerd them: but he also bewailes their miserie, as a father doth that of his children. For he takes no pleasure in afflicting vs, neither would he shew himselfe seuere, but that wee constraine him thereto by our frowardnesse. God then is heere moued vvith compassion in beholding their ruin, who had rather wittingly perish, then to be saued: for he was readie to haue dealt all sorts of blessings liberally amongst them, if they by their owne rebellion, had not repelled and put him backe.

A preuentiō.

God takes no pleasure in our afflictions.

Now it were preposterous to enter into Gods secret counsell, and to inquire wherefore himselfe made not the externall word effectuall vpon them, by the worke of his holie Spirit. For the question is not heere of his power; but mans rebellion is heere onely reproued, that they may be left without excuse. Truely as oft as God calles vs to himselfe by his word, there is a full and absolute felicitie

Who art thou that disputest with God?

felicitie offered vs, which wee obſtinatelie reſiſt.

Wee haue told you before that the word peace, ſignifies all happy euents. It is then as if he had ſaid; Thou haddeſt had abundance of all good things, and ſhouldeſt neuer neede to haue feared any change, in regard the bleſſing of God vpon his ſeruants is a fountaine that can neuer bee drawne drie. As touching the word inſtice, ioined vnto peace, wee may take it for that which wee commonly call thy right. But I had rather vnderſtand it of a Commonwealth well gouerned, where all things are ruled orderly and well: as if hee ſhould ſay; All things had proſpered and had gone well with thee, and thou hadſt had a floriſhing State.

Tondroit.

Hee worthily ioines ſuch an eſtate with peace: for if good gouernement bee ouerthrowne, all goes out of frame; for it is not poſſible to inioy a right peace, where inſtice is wanting: that is to ſay, vnleſſe matters of ſtate be managed with equitie and vprightneſſe. If we loue peace then, let vs forthwith be inſtant with the Lord to obtaine this happie eſtate, which is bleſſed of him. Some deſcant heere vpon ſpirituall iuſtice, and vpon remiſſion of ſinnes: but they miſſe the marke, and ſtray quite from our Prophets meaning, who ſpeakes plainly and ſimply.

Not poſſible to inioy a comfortable peace where iuſtice is wanting.

Verſ. 19. Thy ſeede alſo had been as the ſand, and the fruit of thy bodie like the grauell thereof: his name ſhould not haue been cut off nor * deſtroied before me.*

*Or, the children.

*Or, aboliſhed.

THis alſo appertaines to an happy eſtate, namely, when poſteritie is increaſed: for by their helpe, the aged are comforted and refreſhed in their labours, and the aduerſaries repulſed. The Pſalmiſt, you know, compares ſuch children to arrowes ſhot from the hand of a mighty man, and pronounceth him bleſſed that hath his quiuer full of them: Pſal. 127.5. that is to ſay; who hath many ſuch children. In mentioning of ſand, it ſeemes he had reſpect to the promiſe made to Abraham; I will multiply thy ſeede as the ſtarres of the heauen, and as the ſand by the ſea ſhore: Gen. 22.17. Afterwards he repeates the ſame thing in diuers words, according to the cuſtome of the Hebrewes, calling children and grauell, that which he had called ſeede and ſand. In a word, hee ſhewes that the people hindered God, from cauſing them to feele and taſte the fruit of his promiſe.

Afterwards, comming to the interruption of this grace, hee plainly reprocheth them; namely, that themſelues had ſought their owne ruine and deſtruction; whereas God had multiplied them wonderfully by his power. For by the word name, hee vnderſtands the lawful eſtate of the people, which had alwaies floriſhed, if the courſe of Gods bleſſing had not been ſtopped.

And whereas he ſaith the people were aboliſhed, this muſt bee vnderſtood in reſpect of the land of Canaan, out of which Gods people being vomited, Leuit. 18.25.28. they ſeemed to bee baniſhed the houſe of their father. For the Temple whereof the Iewes were depriued, was a ſacrament vnto them of Gods preſence, and the land it ſelfe was a pledge vnto them of their heauenly inheritance. Being exiled thence then, they were in a maner excommunicated, and caſt out of Gods preſence, and had had no teſtimonies of his ſuccour left them, had not theſe promiſes relieued their miſeries. Now it is for vs to conſider well of this their miſerie: for being baniſhed farre from their Country, they had neither Temple, ſacrifices, nor aſſemblies. Now thoſe amongſt whom at this day there is no forme of a Church, vſe of Sacraments, nor preaching of the word, they ought to thinke that God hath in a manner caſt them out of his preſence. Let them learne then to call and cry inſtantlie with ardent praiers, that God would plant his Church in their coaſts.

Canaan a pledge to the Iews of their eternall inheritance.

Verſ. 20. Goe yee out of Babel; flee yee from the Chaldeans with the voice of ioy: tell and declare this; ſhew it forth to the ends of the earth: ſay yee; The Lord hath redeemed his ſeruant Iakob.

THis is the ſecond part of this complaint, by which the Lord proteſts that hee will deliuer his people, how vnworthy or ingratefull ſoeuer they be. For hauing told the Iewes that hee hath performed the office of a good teacher towards them, and that they would not lend their eares; ſo as by their owne default they were ſent into captiuitie: now in ſetting before them his inuincible patience, he addes, that he will not ceaſe to aſſiſt them, till hee hath drawne them out of their bondage. Hee commands them then to goe out of Babylon where they were captiues. Whence we gather, that how iuſt cauſe ſoeuer God hath to complaine of vs, yet by his ineſtimable goodneſſe, he is ready to ſuſtaine our miſeries, and to aid thoſe that are vnworthy; yea ſuch as haue frowardly reſiſted his grace.

Iſaiah ſpeaks of a thing to come, as if it were already come to paſſe.

That which is added touching the voice of ioy, ſerues to confirme this deliuerance: for hee meant to adde this confirmation to that promiſe, which was vtterly incredible. That he might remooue all doubtings then, hee highly commends this benefit.

Declare.] He expreſſeth the greatnes of that confidence which hee meant to erect in the hearts of the Iewes: for we are wont to publiſh that plainly and openly, whereof we haue good experience and aſſurance: but if wee doubt, we dare ſcarſe open our mouthes, but remaine mute and dumbe. Now Iſaiah ſpeaks of a thing to come with that reſolution, as if it were alreadie come to paſſe, that the people might in their hearts conceiue the more ſure and certaine confidence: and therefore hee vſeth this commandement, which hath much more efficacie in it, and moued their mindes more then if hee had told it them in bare termes.

The vſe the Iewes were to make of this commandement.

Verſ. 21. And they weare not thir-

turne, it was fit they ſhould be humbled to acknowledge that their deliuerance proceeded whollie from the meere grace and good will of God. And thus we ſee that the former reprehenſion tended to teach them, that it was the Lords hand that drew them out of Babylon as out of a graue, not for their deſerts, for they were well worthie to haue bin vtterlie deſtroyed.

Vſe to vs.

In that God ſpares vs then at this day, and mittigates his corrections; in that he remits our offences, and hath any reſpect at all vnto vs, theſe things whollie proceed from his free grace. Why ſo? Becauſe we ſhould learne to attribute none of theſe benefits to the merits or ſatisfactions of men. Here then the diſtinction of ỹ Sophiſters falles to the ground (as wee haue ſhewed in other places) touching the remitting of the puniſhment, which they affirme not to be free, becauſe we muſt make ſatisfaction for the ſame vnto God. But our Prophet teacheth, that God freely remits it, and that only for his owne names ſake. For he ſpeakes here of the puniſhment which he might iuſtly inflict vpon the Iewes. He had very good cauſe then to haue cõſumed them, if he had not reſpected the maintenance of his owne glorie.

Diſtinction of the Sophiſters.

Verſ. 10. Behold, I haue fined thee but not as ſiluer: I haue choſen thee in the furnace of affliction.

God ſo corrects his Church, that in the meane while he thereby procures her ſaluation.

THe Lord ſhewes, that he vſed ſuch meaſure in correcting his Church, that therewithall he prouided for their ſaluation. In the former verſe he ſaid that he ſpared, or would ſpare them, becauſe he reſpected his glorie: now he ſhewes that he hath chaſtiſed them in deed, yet ſo, that he did it for their good; for he corrected them, to fine them, but we are not wont to trie and fine that which we mind to caſt away: ſeeing then he had none other end, it followes that he did it to procure their benefit and ſaluation thereby. Beſides, he mentions this triall by way of preuention, leſt any ſhould obiect, that Gods loue little appeared in ſo ſharp afflictiõs. The Prophet, I ſay, doth in fit ſeaſon preuent ſuch a conceit, & tels them, that God hath skill enough to correct his Church in mercie, and yet not vtterly to forſake her.

Simile.

Correction would rather cõſume then refine vs, if God ſhould not moderate and ſanctifie them to vs.

Moreouer, he addes that he hath not fined vs as ſiluer, for then we ſhould haue bin vtterly conſumed. There is ſome puritie to be found in ſiluer, but in vs there is nothing but droſſe: and were it not that the Lord made vs ſiluer, we ſhould be burnt to aſhes, yea to nothing, euen as tow or flax. Corrections would draw from vs no puritie at all. The Lord in trying of vs then hath reſpect to our abilitie, leſt he ſhould paſſe meaſure, as Pſal. 103. 13. 14. then he makes our chaſtiſements profitable vnto vs by the worke of his owne ſpirit, which would otherwiſe proue mortall and deadly vnto vs.

To chuſe, is taken here to diſcerne: for we ordinarily make choice of that which we deſire to keepe, as wee haue ſaid Chap. 7. 15. where it is ſaid, that Chriſt ſhould eate butter and hony, till he had knowledge to chuſe the good, and refuſe the euill. He ſhewes then by this word what difference there is betweene the ſtripes wherewith the faithfull are ſmitten, and thoſe which the wicked are to ſuſtaine, wherewith in deed they ſhall be ouerwhelmed. But howſoeuer the Lord tries and ſmites vs, yet are we acceptable in his ſight, and he reſerues ſtill a fatherly affection towards vs, euen in the middeſt of our afflictions, and in the end he brings vs forth bright as ſiluer, and ſo makes our ſuffrings to become a ſacrifice of a ſweet ſmelling ſauor in his noſtrils. To conclude, his meaning is, that God ceaſeth not euen then to be good to his Church, whileſt he ſeemes to conſume her to nothing.

A Conſolation. Pſal. 34. 20. Hab. 3. 2. Exod. 3. 2.

Verſ. 11. For mine owne ſake, for mine owne ſake will I do it: for how ſhould my name be polluted? ſurely I will not giue my glorie vnto another.

A repetition of that he ſaid verſ. 9. with an interrogation added.

HE repeates that which he ſaid before, but he addes an interrogation, which the Hebrues are wont to vſe when they ſpeake of abſurdities, as heere, Can it be that my name ſhould be prophaned? The ſecond member, I will not giue my glorie &c. ſerues for an expoſition of this interrogation. Iſaiah then amplifies that which he ſpake before in few words, and flies an higher pitch in his ſtile; for it is not only a bare amplification of the former ſentence, but rather a beautifying and adorning of it for ỹ greater confirmation thereof. Now by theſe words he meanes that men as much as in them is, doe profane Gods name, and giue away his glorie vnto creatures; only the Lord in his admirable prouidence ſtops the courſe of this miſchiefe, and keepes his glorie vnblemiſhed. Although we by our fault then doe expoſe this glorie of God to contempt, yet will he preſerue it as long as he ſhall continue our protector. Hence we gather a very ſweet conſolation, to wit, that the Lord ioines his owne glorie with our ſaluation, as we haue often ſhewed you before.

I will not giue.] That is to ſay, I will not indure that any ſhould rob me of my glorie: but this had fallen out if the people had bin vtterly conſumed, then would they haue ſcorned the God of Iſrael; for the wicked were wont in the afflictions of the Saints to diſgorge theſe blaſphemies, Where is now their God? Pſal. 79. 10. Pſal. 42. 3. Moſes alſo alledgeth, that the Lord withheld his hand from deſtroying the people for the ſame cauſe: I feare, ſaith the Lord, the furie of their aduerſaries, leſt they ſhould vaux proude, and leſt they ſhould ſay, our hie hand, and not the Lord hath done all this, Deut. 32. 27. And queſtionleſſe, as oft as the Lord terrifies the faithfull, by manifeſting vnto them the ſignes of his heauie diſpleaſure, the only remedie then left vs is this, that he will yet remember his owne couenant of grace made with vs in Chriſt, leſt he ſhould proſtitute his holy name to the outrages and blaſphemies of the wicked. Neither did the Prophet only ſtirre them vp hereby to giue thanks thanks to God, and to confeſſe that their proſperitie proceeded from his free mercie; but he did likewiſe put a forme of praier into their mouthes, and a ſhield of defence vpon the armes of the faithfull, wherewith they might repulſe all the fierie darts of the diuell.

Verſ. 12. Heare mee, O Iakob, and Iſrael my called. I am, I am the firſt, and *I am the laſt.

*Or, yet.

Chap 41. 4. & 44. 6. God changeth not, and therefore we are not conſumed as it is in Mal. 3. 6.

WE haue told you heeretofore why the Lord ſpeakes of his eternitie; namely, to teach vs that he is alwaies like himſelfe, and that wee ſhould not meaſure his power by the narrow ſcantling of our owne ell. He heere calles for audience, becauſe the onelie thing that deceiues vs, and makes vs wander after ſo many falſe opinions is, that wee haue no eares to heare. Where he ſaith Iſrael is his called: he oppoſeth it ſecretly againſt that reprobation, whereof hee ſpake in the beginning of the Chapter. For hee there ſhewed that the Iewes wrongfully vſurped this title, and falſly gloried therein; becauſe they ſhewed not themſelues to bee true Iſraelites in deed. But heere he declares that Iſrael is his owne called: as if a father in rebuking his ſonne, ſhould in anger call him baſtard; and yet being appeaſed, ſhould afterward terme him his ſonne. Thus the Lord ſhewes that the Iewes were growne ſo degenerate, that hee had iuſt cauſe to reiect them: and yet albeit their vnworthineſſe of that great honour he ſhewed them, he ſtill reſpects his owne calling of them, which they could not aboliſh nor make vnfruitfull by their malice or vnthankfulneſſe.

Simile

1

2

The particle yet in this place, ſignifies a continuance: for the Prophet meanes nothing elſe but that God is alwaies like himſelfe: that is to ſay, he repents not, nor changeth not his mind, as men are wont to doe: and therefore he ſaith, that he is the firſt and the laſt. Now we haue alſo in theſe words to note, that Iſaiah ſpeakes not heere of God his eternall eſſence, but applies this doctrine to our vſe: ſignifying that he will be ſuch a one to vs, as he hath euer been in times paſt: as alſo that wee ſhould remember to ſeparate him from Idols; leſt our mindes being diſtracted by new inuentions, ſhould erre from his true feare.

Verſ. 13. Surely mine hand hath laid the foundations of the earth, and my right hand hath ſpanned the heauens: when I ſhall call them, they ſtand vp together.

As God is vnchangeable, ſo is he almightie.

THe Prophet ſhewes heere more plainly, what his meaning was in the former verſ. For hauing ſaid that God is alwaies one, and neither changeth his affection nor will towards vs, hee now magnifies and extolles his power, in regard of his viſible workes which wee daily behold. And thus the Lord comming forth of his Sanctuarie, doth after a ſort manifeſt himſelfe familiarly vnto vs in them.

Whether wee turne the wordes, my right hand hath meaſured, or, hath ſuſtained; the ſenſe will be alwaies alike: neither is it needfull that we ſhould ſtand much about the interpretation of the word Tpaq. For the word To meaſure, notes out the admirable wiſdome of God, in that hee hath ſo aptly proportioned all the parts of this faire curtaine of the heauens, that it ſhould neither bee higher nor lower from the earth then it is: but that they conſtantly keep the order preſcribed them of God: ſo as in this round and ample vaſtneſſe, wee can behold nothing deformed or miſplaced. If any had rather retaine the word To vphold, it is alſo a commendation of Gods ſingular wiſdome and power, who beares vp this infinit weight, and great maſſe of the heauens in their continuall motion, and yet keepes it from tottering or reeling from one ſide to another.

Note.

But the laſt member where hee ſaith, that all things ſtand vp together when he cals them; hath ſome more difficultie in it. For it is either to be referred to the firſt creation of the world, or to the perpetuall gouernement thereof. If we refer it to the firſt creation, the preſent tence of the verb To appeare, ſhould be taken for the future tence, thus; As ſoone as the Lord commanded them to appeare, they forthwith obeied, according to that in the 33. Pſalme, verſ. 9. He ſpake the word, and it was done. But if wee accept of this expoſition, the word together, which is added, ſeemes not to ſute well with the hiſtorie of the creation mentioned by Moſes. For the heauens and the earth were not created and adorned in an inſtant: Gen. 1. 2. Things were firſt intermingled and confuſed: then the Lord ſeparated them and placed them in order. But the ſolution is eaſie; for the Prophets meaning is nothing but this, that the Lord created all things by his onely will, and ſo formed heauen and earth, that they forthwith obeied his commandement.

1

2

Obiect.

Anſ.

And yet for mine owne part, I willingly extend this ſentence to the perpetuall gouernment of the world. As if he ſhould ſay; Heauen and earth obeied Gods voice, and yeelded to his abſolute power: ſo as theſe creatures ſo farre remote one from another, willingly conſented and agreed together, with an incredible harmonie; neither more nor leſſe then if they were turned about with one wheele. And howſoeuer the ſpace bee wondrous great betweene earth and heauen aboue, yet the Lords voice was diſtinctly heard in euery part of them. There was no need of meſſengers then to teach or publiſh his will, but himſelfe in an inſtant executes the ſame at his pleaſure. Shall a man finde any Prince that can haue all his ſeruants by and by about him as his call? No, Gods power then is infinit, it is diſperſed far and neere, and extends it ſelfe to all parts of the world, as the Scriptures doe manifeſt, and faith by experience makes vs feele.

Simile.

Simile.

Pſa. 147. 1, 2.

Verſ. 14. *All you aſſemble your ſelues and heare: which among thē hath declared theſe things? The Lord hath loued him, he will doe his will in Babell, and his arme ſhall be againſt the Chaldeans.

*Or, his worke.

God permits the Iewes to bring in their allegations.

NO doubt but the Lord directs his ſpeech to the Iewes, though hee vtters nothing heere which ought not to be knowne of all. But becauſe the heathen & prophane people had no eares, therefore hee ſummons not them to heare. Wee know that the Iewes had this priuiledge aboue other nations, that God manifeſted himſelfe to them: as it is ſaid in the Pſalme; God is knowne in Iudah, his name is great in Iſrael: Pſal.76.1. and 147. 19, 20. And thus their ſenſleſneſſe was the leſſe excuſable, in that they reiected their owne happineſſe. For whence ſprang this lightneſſe and inclination to apoſtaſie, but from the little or no regard they had of this ineſtimable treaſure of the heauenly doctrine? They well deſerued then to bee thus ſharpely chidden, and that he ſhould thus cloſely tax them for their malicious and manifeſt conſpiracies to darken the grace of God.

Now it ſeemes the Lord permits the Iewes to bring in their allegations which they had, as thoſe who truſting to the goodnes of their cauſe, dare thus defie their aduerſe partie: Bring in thy reaſons, and if thou haſt anie metall in thee, ſhew it. The Lord then prouokes them firſt, and bids them tell if they can, whether the gods of the Gentiles haue foretold any ſuch things or no. And this may alſo be applied to the Soothſaiers and Prognoſticators, who attributed to themſelues the knowledge of things to come, which they could not foreſee at all. And in the ſame ſenſe he repeates that which followes in the verſe inſuing: I, euen I haue ſpoken it. The ſumme comes to this then, that the Iewes wauer, yea and fall; becauſe they haue not well informed themſelues how ſingular a grace of God it is, to learne from his ſacred mouth, whatſoeuer is needfull to ſaluation. In the latter part of the verſe, hee recites one particular; namely, God had foretold the end of their captiuity in Babylon. True it is that he names not Cyrus as the diſpenſer of this benefite: but in ſpeaking of ſome certaine perſonage well knowne, he ſaith, God hath choſen him to ſurpriſe Babel by force.

Cyrus.

The word To loue, is not taken heere ſimply, but for ſome ſpeciall reſpect: and therefore he reſtraines it to the happy iſſue of his voyage. And ſo we may ſay that Saul was beloued of God for ſome priuate end; namelie, that hee might raigne for a time, and might haue the gift of prophecie: 1.Sam.10.10. But there is an higher matter to bee conſidered of touching the faithfull, whom God loues with an euerlaſting loue: for hee will neuer ſuffer them to be ſeparated from him. The Prophet then meant to ſay, that Cyrus ſhall vanquiſh Babylon, becauſe he ſhall vndertake that buſineſſe vnder Gods authoritie & leading; not of his owne motion, but after ſuch a manner, as God thruſts forward the blind and ignorant, whither him liſteth: or as hee vſeth ſometimes to ſerue his turne of men againſt their wils. For Cyrus is not praiſed for his voluntary obedience, but it is rather indeed an extolling of Gods ſingular prouidence, by which hee diſpoſeth of all ſorts of men to performe his will, and to execute his decrees.

Example.

John 13.1. *Ier.*31.3.

By arme, (vnder a figure familiar amongſt the Prophets) we may vnderſtand his worke. And thus the ſpeech will runne better; Hee ſhall execute his will againſt Babylon, and his worke againſt the Chaldeans. And wee know that the Prophets are wont to ioine Gods counſell and worke together. Now he priuilie taxeth the Iewes for their ingratitude, in that they would not beleeue Gods promiſes, though hee pointed out the thing before them with his finger, and ſpake far otherwiſe then did the Chaplaines of the falſe gods. To conclude, hee meant to informe the Iewes, that the ſurprizing of Babel by the hand of Cyrus, ſhall bee a worke of the Lord, vnder whoſe direction all things ſhall bee ſo carried, that the Church in the end ſhall be deliuered.

Verſ. 15. I, euen I haue ſpoken it, and I haue called him: I haue brought him, and his way ſhall proſper.

HEe brings the Iewes againe to the prophecies, and attributes this honour vnto God, that hauing in fit time reuealed the thing, hee takes away all doubtings. Afterwards hee addes, that whatſoeuer was foretold, ſhall be confirmed. And thus there is a double force in the doubling of theſe words, I, euen I. As if he ſhould ſay; It is none but the God of Iſrael that hath ſpoken theſe things which are hidden, and to come: ſecondly, he being true, and one that neuer deceiues, he will vndoubtedly accompliſh whatſoeuer he hath promiſed. Iſaiah then propounds two ends here vnto himſelfe: Firſt, that the poore captiues ſhould wait for their deliuerance: ſecondly, being deliuered, that they ſhould acknowledge God to be the author of ſo excellent a benefit, and not to aſcribe it either to the arme of fleſh, or to haphazard. Now he ſhewes that Cyrus his good ſucceſſe in his enterpriſes, ſhall proceede from Gods calling of him. Not that he was worthy of ſo great a fauour, neither that he obtained it by his own induſtry and power; but in regard that the Lord vſed him as his ſeruant to deliuer his people. For where he called him his beloued in the former verſe, and heere ſaith that he hath called and brought him, I told you erewhile that it is not to bee referred to that loue of God, whereby he adopts vs for his children, by calling vs to himſelfe. Cyrus was neither loued nor called in this kind: for howſoeuer he were indued with excellent vertues, yet was he tainted with very odious crimes, as ambition, deſire of ſwaying Kingdomes, couetouſneſſe, crueltie, and many other vices: for his wofull and vnhappy end manifeſted ſufficientlie what

How Cyrus is ſaid to be loued and called of God: See Chap.45.3.

Cyrus had a miſerable end.

what he was. The Prophets meaning is then, that God will be fauorable to Cyrus in proſpering him outwardly: not to adopt, nor to ſhew him that fauor which he only communicates to his choſen. The cauſe muſt be conſidered then for which he giues him theſe titles, to wit, that he will vſe his miniſtrie for the deliuerãce of his Church, as we haue ſaid before.

Verſ. 16. Come neere vnto me: heare you this: I haue not ſpoken it in ſecret from the beginning: from the time that the thing was, * I was there, and now the Lord God and his Spirit hath ſent me.

* Or, done.

God rebukes the people for their ingratitude.

HE directs his ſpeech againe to the Iewes, and in commanding them to draw neere, he meetes them halfe way (as it were) gently to receiue them, and yet he couertlie taxeth their reuolt, ſhewing, that they were vnfit to entertaine wholeſome doctrine, vnleſſe they departed from their errors. Surely it was a deteſtable fault in them to be ſo farre ſeparated from God, with whom they ought to haue bin ſo neerely conioined: but their ſeparation cõſiſted not ſo much in diſtance of place, as in the want of conſent in affections: our approching then conſiſts in a readines to heare, hauing ſubdued our owne carnall reaſon. But this is a worke of his owne grace; for who will be readie to direct his heart vnto God, if himſelfe draw him not?

John 6.

I haue not ſpoken in ſecret.] The expoſitors expound this place diuerſlie. Some applie it to Ieſus Chriſt, whereas Iſaiah had no ſuch meaning: and it ſtands vs in hand to auoid all wreſted and conſtrained interpretations. Others referre it to the Prophet himſelfe: but this ſuites as badly as the former, for this ſpeech can agree to no man. I thinke then that Iſaiah brings in God ſpeaking, and blaming of the people touching their ingratitude, in that from the beginning, that is to ſay, ſince the day he began firſt to manifeſt himſelfe to their fathers, he hath not ſpoken in ſecret, nor obſcurely. Whence it followes, that the ignorance which is in them muſt needs be imputed to their owne malice, in regard they did wittinglie ſhut their eies againſt the cleare light.

Wreſted expoſitions are to be auoided.

1 2 When he ſaith from the time, &c. It ſignifies, that he performed that by his power which he had ſpoken with his mouth. Hee rightlie affirmes then that he gaue ſignes of his preſence, when in performing all things, he not only ratified the propheſies by the effects, but alſo to teach, ỹ thoſe things which men imagin to fall out by chance, were gouerned and directed by Gods ſpeciall prouidence. In a word, he puts them in minde of Gods ancient promiſes, and of the accompliſhment of them, to ſhew, that God will be alwaies like himſelfe. Thoſe which ſay that Iſaiah ſhall be preſent in ſpirit when the Lord ſhall bring againe his Zion, offer violence to the Prophets words, and are euery way farre wide from his intention.

And now the Lord and his ſpirit, &c.] Heere Iſaiah ſpeakes of himſelfe indeed, and applies this ſentence to the former doctrine, proteſting therein that God who ſpake from the beginning, ſpeakes alſo by him, ſo as they were to giue no leſſe credit to that which he now pronounced by the mouth of his ſeruant, then if himſelfe were there preſent in his owne perſon. Hence we may gather a profitable doctrine, to wit, that we are carefullie to thinke vpon all the miracles which the Lord hath done, to confirme our hearts in his truth. For it is no ſmall confirmation of our faith that the Lord hath had a remnant from the beginning, to whom he hath manifeſted himſelfe, inſtructing them, and making them aſſured promiſes, which he hath fulfilled, ſo as there neuer failed nor fell to the ground the leaſt iot of that which he hath ſpoken. For what hath he pronounced with his mouth that he hath not fulfilled with his hand in due and conuenient ſeaſon? As oft then as wee be ſurprized with doubtings, wee muſt haue our recourſe to theſe and the like examples, and thence conclude thus with our ſelues, God hath of old bin wont to keepe touch with his ſeruants: it is not ſince yeſterday that he hath begun to ſpeak: neither did he euer hold his people in ſuſpence by ambiguous or doubtful ſpeeches, but hath alwaies ſpoken perſpicuouſlie and plainely. Thus the Prophet ſhewes he vtters nothing from his owne braine, but was ſent of God, who hath ſhewed himſelfe iuſt in all his ſayings.

How wee ought to make our benefit of former miracles.

He mentions the Spirit, not to note out a thing diuers from God, ſeeing he is of one eſſence with him. For in one eſſence of God we acknowledge three perſons: but he names the Spirit, becauſe he is the only teacher and conductor of all the Prophets. S. Paul ſaith, That none can ſay Ieſus is the Lord, but by the holy Ghoſt: and by and by after he ſaith, that the gifts of God are diuers, and yet it is one and the ſame ſpirit, which works all things in all, 1. Cor. 12. 3. 4. In this place alſo we haue a manifeſt proofe of the diuinitie of the Holy Ghoſt, becauſe he ſends the Prophets, which appertaines to none but God, euen as Ambaſſadors are ſent by the only authoritie of the Prince. Seeing the holy Ghoſt ſends the Prophets then, and directs and giues them power and efficacie, he muſt needs be God. Beſides, hence we gather, that we are to abandon all ſuch as haue not this direction of Gods ſpirit, notwithſtanding they crake, they be ſent of God: I meane this troupe of popiſh wolues, who glorie in the titles of Paſtors, and Teachers, and impudentlie brag of their ſending, ſeeing they are whollie deſtitute not only of the holy ſpirit, but of his doctrine. For in vaine doe they boaſt that they are inſtituted and ſent of God, when they are vtterlie vnfurniſhed of thoſe gifts and graces of the holy ghoſt which are fit for the execution of ſuch a charge. Moreouer, it is too great a ſaucines in them to pretend the illumination of the ſpirit of Chriſt, ſeeing themſelues are whollie void of faith, and knows not a B frõ a battledore in the doctrine of ſaluation. There are horned Biſhops which ſit in the chaire, and God wot the moſt part of them as ignorant as beaſts: nay, there is not tenne of them among

The holy Ghoſt of one eſſence with the Father.

Three diſtinct perſons in one eſſence.

A manifeſt proofe of the diuinitie of the holy Ghoſt.

Popiſh wolues will not ſo deck themſelues with the titles of paſtors and teachers.

Few of the horned Biſhops in the Papacie that know the firſt rudimẽts of religion.

among three hundred who haue ſo much as taſted the firſt rudiments of pietie, Is any thing more abſurd, then to ſay that ſuch an aſſemblie is gouerned by the holy Ghoſt?

Verſ. 17. Thus ſaith the Lord thy redeemer the holy one of Iſrael, I am the Lord thy God * which teach thee to profit, and leade thee by the way which thou ſhouldſt goe.

* Or, teaching thee profitable things, leading thee, &c.

This and the foure verſes following, depend one vpõ another.

I Ioine this verſe with the foure verſes enſuing, becauſe they tend all to one end, in which God promiſeth deliuerance to his people, yet in ſuch wiſe, that he firſt ſhewes how they were brought into bondage by their owne fault, and that to the end they ſhould not murmure in obiecting that it had bin better for them to remaine in the countrie, if the Lord meant to help them then to be brought back after they were led away. For a Phyſition deſerues not praiſe ſo much for curing a diſeaſe, as for hindring and preuenting it. The Prophet preuents them, and ſaith, that this hapned through the peoples fault, for they might haue eſcaped this iudgement if they had but diligentlie attẽded vnto Gods commandements, but they would not, therefore ſuch an obſtinacie well deſerued ſuch a puniſhment: for it was not the Lords fault that the affaires of the people ſucceeded ill, but they had reiected his fauor which was tendred vnto them, and yet he ſaith, the Lord will ouercome this rebellion by his great goodnes, becauſe he is not minded his people ſhould periſh, though for a time he afflicts them.

Teaching thee profitable things.] By this he meanes, that Gods doctrine is ſuch, that it is able to preſerue his people in good ſtate if they would conſtantlie follow the rules therein preſcribed. Now the Lord takes paines to teach vs, not to procure his owne good, but ours. For what good are we able to do him? By his holy doctrine then he prouides for euery one of our ſaluations, that being rightly inſtructed by it, wee might reape the fruit thereof, which is, an happie and bleſſed life. But when by our vnthankfulnes we reiect the benefit freely offred, what remaines but that we ſhould worthily periſh? Iſaiah then had iuſt cauſe to reproch the Iewes, that if they had not wittingly depriued themſelues of the fruit of this doctrine, they ſhould haue bin ignorant of nothing that tended to their profit and ſaluation.

Now if it bee affirmed touching the Law, that by it God taught his people profitable things: how much more may it be ſaid of the Goſpell, by which whatſoeuer is profitable and neceſſary, is fully reuealed vnto vs? And here alſo we ſee how execrable ỹ blaſphemies of the Papiſts are, who auer, that the reading of the Scripture is dangerous and hurtfull, that they may diſſwade the laitie (as they call them) from medling therewith. What? Dare they indeed giue the lie to God, who by the mouth of his holy Prophet pronounceth that they are profitable? See 2. Tim. 3. 16.

Papiſts giue God the lie.

Whether is it better we ſhould beleeue God or them? Let them diſgorge their blaſphemies then as long as they will with an whoriſh forehead, yet ought not we to refraine the ſtudie of them: for wee ſhall perceiue that Iſaiah hath ſpoken the truth, if wee reade the holy Scriptures with feare and reuerence.

Guiding thy way.] Theſe wordes ſhew yet more cleerly, the profitableneſſe before mentioned. For the Prophets meaning is, that the way of ſaluation is ſet open to vs, if we heare God ſpeaking; becauſe he is readie to leade vs through the whole courſe of our life, if we will ſubmit our ſelues to his lore. And thus Moſes proteſts that hee ſet before the people life and death: Deut 30. 19. Alſo, This is the way, walke in it. For the rule of a godly life is contained in the Law, the which cannot deceiue. I command thee this day, ſaith Moſes, that thou loue the Lord thy God, that thou walke in his waies, and that thou keepe his commandements, ordinances, & iudgements, that thou maieſt liue, that the Lord may bleſſe thee in the land whither thou goeſt to poſſeſſe it: Deut. 30. 16. The ſumme is, that ſuch as are teachable, ſhall neuer bee deſtitute of light, vnderſtanding, nor counſell.

Verſ. 18. Oh that thou haddeſt hearkened to my commandements! Then had thy * proſperitie been as the flood, and thy righteouſneſſe as the waues of the ſea.

* Or, peace.

IN regard the people might haue complained of their being led captiue, the Prophet to preuent ſuch grudgings, ſhewes the cauſe why it came to paſſe; namely, becauſe they reiected the doctrine of ſaluation, without reaping any benefit by it. No doubt but he had reſpect to Moſes his ſong, where there are almoſt the ſame words repeated. Oh that they were wiſe, then they would conſider their latter end! Deut. 31. 29. The particle Lu heere, ſignifies a wiſh, Oh that, or, Would to God. But the Lord not onely complaines that the Iewes lightly eſteemed the good and profitable things offerd them: but he alſo bewailes their miſerie, as a father doth that of his children. For he takes no pleaſure in afflicting vs, neither would he ſhew himſelfe ſeuere, but that wee conſtraine him thereto by our frowardneſſe. God then is heere moued vvith compaſſion in beholding their ruin, who had rather wittingly periſh, then to be ſaued: for he was readie to haue dealt all ſorts of bleſſings liberally amongſt them, if they by their owne rebellion, had not repelled and put him backe.

A preuentiõ.

God takes no pleaſure in our afflictions.

Now it were prepoſterous to enter into Gods ſecret counſell, and to inquire wherefore himſelfe made not the externall word effectuall vpon them, by the worke of his holie Spirit. For the queſtion is not heere of his power; but mans rebellion is heere onely reproued, that they may be left without excuſe. Truely as oft as God calles vs to himſelfe by his word, there is a full and abſolute felicitie

Who art thou that diſputeſt with God?

felicitie offered vs, which wee obſtinatelie reſiſt.

Wee haue told you before that the word peace, ſignifies all happy euents. It is then as if he had ſaid; Thou haddeſt had abundance of all good things, and ſhouldeſt neuer neede to haue feared any change, in regard the bleſſing of God vpon his ſeruants is a fountaine that can neuer bee drawne drie. As touching the word inſtice, ioined vnto peace, wee may take it for that which wee commonly call thy right. But I had rather vnderſtand it of a Commonwealth well gouerned, where all things are ruled orderly and well: as if hee ſhould ſay; All things had proſpered and had gone well with thee, and thou hadſt had a floriſhing State.

Ton droit.

Hee worthily ioines ſuch an eſtate with peace: for if good gouernement bee ouerthrowne, all goes out of frame; for it is not poſſible to inioy a right peace, where inſtice is wanting: that is to ſay, vnleſſe matters of ſtate be managed with equitie and vprightneſſe. If we loue peace then, let vs forthwith be inſtant with the Lord to obtaine this happie eſtate, which is bleſſed of him. Some deſcant heere vpon ſpirituall iuſtice, and vpon remiſſion of ſinnes: but they miſſe the marke, and ſtray quite from our Prophets meaning, who ſpeakes plainly and ſimply.

Not poſſible to inioy a comfortable peace where iuſtice is wanting.

Verſ. 19. Thy ſeede alſo had been as the ſand, and the fruit of thy bodie like the grauell thereof: his name ſhould not haue been cut off nor deſtroied beforeme.

*Or, the children.

*Or, aboliſhed.

THis alſo appertaines to an happy eſtate, namely, when poſteritie is increaſed: for by their helpe, the aged are comforted and refreſhed in their labours, and the aduerſaries repulſed. The Pſalmiſt, you know, compares ſuch children to arrowes ſhot from the hand of a mighty man, and pronounceth him bleſſed that hath his quiuer full of them: Pſal. 127.5. that is to ſay; who hath many ſuch children. In mentioning of ſand, it ſeemes he had reſpect to the promiſe made to Abraham; I will multiply thy ſeede as the ſtarres of the heauen, and as the ſand by the ſea ſhore: Gen. 22.17. Afterwards he repeates the ſame thing in diuers words, according to the cuſtome of the Hebrewes, calling children and grauell, that which he had called ſeede and ſand. In a word, hee ſhewes that the people hindered God, from cauſing them to feele and taſte the fruit of his promiſe.

Afterwards, comming to the interruption of this grace, hee plainly reprocheth them; namely, that themſelues had ſought their owne ruine and deſtruction; whereas God had multiplied them wonderfully by his power. For by the word name, hee vnderſtands the lawful eſtate of the people, which had alwaies floriſhed, if the courſe of Gods bleſſing had not been ſtopped.

And whereas he ſaith the people were aboliſhed, this muſt bee vnderſtood in reſpect of the land of Canaan, out of which Gods people being vomited, Leuit. 18.25.28. they ſeemed to bee baniſhed the houſe of their father. For the Temple whereof the Iewes were depriued, was a ſacrament vnto them of Gods preſence, and the land it ſelfe was a pledge vnto them of their heauenly inheritance. Being exiled thence then, they were in a maner excommunicated, and caſt out of Gods preſence, and had had no teſtimonies of his ſuccour left them, had not theſe promiſes relieued their miſeries. Now it is for vs to conſider well of this their miſerie: for being baniſhed farre from their Country, they had neither Temple, ſacrifices, nor aſſemblies. Now thoſe amongſt whom at this day there is no forme of a Church, vſe of Sacraments, nor preaching of the word, they ought to thinke that God hath in a manner caſt them out of his preſence. Let them learne then to call and cry inſtantlie with ardent praiers, that God would plant his Church in their coaſts.

Canaan a pledge to the Iews of their eternall inheritance.

Verſ. 20. Goe yee out of Babel; flee yee from the Chaldeans with the voice of ioy: tell and declare this; ſhew it forth to the ends of the earth: ſay yee; The Lord hath redeemed his ſeruant Iakob.

THis is the ſecond part of this complaint, by which the Lord proteſts that hee will deliuer his people, how vnworthy or ingratefull ſoeuer they be. For hauing told the Iewes that hee hath performed the office of a good teacher towards them, and that they would not lend their eares; ſo as by their owne default they were ſent into captiuitie: now in ſetting before them his inuincible patience, he addes, that he will not ceaſe to aſſiſt them, till hee hath drawne them out of their bondage. Hee commands them then to goe out of Babylon where they were captiues. Whence we gather, that how iuſt cauſe ſoeuer God hath to complaine of vs, yet by his ineſtimable goodneſſe, he is ready to ſuſtaine our miſeries, and to aid thoſe that are vnworthy; yea ſuch as haue frowardly reſiſted his grace.

Iſaiah ſpeaks of a thing to come, as if it were already come to paſſe.

That which is added touching the voice of ioy, ſerues to confirme this deliuerance: for hee meant to adde this confirmation to that promiſe, which was vtterly incredible. That he might remooue all doubtings then, hee highly commends this benefit.

Declare.] He expreſſeth the greatnes of that confidence which hee meant to erect in the hearts of the Iewes: for we are wont to publiſh that plainly and openly, whereof we haue good experience and aſſurance: but if wee doubt, we dare ſcarſe open our mouthes, but remaine mute and dumbe. Now Iſaiah ſpeaks of a thing to come with that reſolution, as if it were alreadie come to paſſe, that the people might in their hearts conceiue the more ſure and certaine confidence: and therefore hee vſeth this commandement, which hath much more efficacie in it, and moued their mindes more then if hee had told it them in bare termes.

The vſe the Iewes were to make of this commandement.

Verſ. 21. And they weare not thir-

ſtie: he led them through the wildernesse: he cauſed the waters to flow out of the rock for them: for he clane the rock, and the waters guſhed out.

Iſaiah puts thē in minde of their firſt paſſage out of Egypt, to correct their infidelitie.

IN regard the Iewes ſaw no way open to returne home, and that there lay betweene many great and vaſt wildernesses, the Prophet alledgeth Gods power, from whence he propounds ſome examples, that ſo the Iewes might be diſpoſſeſt of all feare & doubtings. He would haue them then to conſider, whether God was not ſufficientlie able to deliuer their fathers out of Egypts bondage, and to bring them through horrible deſerts: in which notwithſtanding he furniſhed them with viands, water, and all other neceſſaries, Exod. 16. and 17. If he were able to do the one, why ſhould they miſdoubt his abilitie concerning the other? The Iewes here according to their maner coine fond fables, and inuent ridiculous miracles which were neuer done nor heard of. And this they doe, not ſo much of ignorance, as of impudencie, whereby they giue themſelues libertie to publiſh any thing that may carrie a faire ſhew, though it be vtterlie ſenſeleſſe. But our Prophets meaning was to put them in mind of that firſt paſſage out of Egypt, and of the miracles which the Lord then did. For whē the Prophets meane to extoll Gods works, it is their cuſtome (as we haue often ſhewed) to mention this firſt deliuerance. And thus Dauid ſetting forth the victories he obteined, ſaith, that the mountaines trembled and ſhooke, the ayre cleft in twaine, and the Lord appeared from heauen, which he neuer ſaw notwithſtanding, Pſa. 18. but he therein followes the deſcription of the deliuerance out of Egypt, to ſhew, that God was the author of it, and that he alſo fortified and guided him to ouercome his enemies, and that his power was no leſſe manifeſt in this victorie, then in thoſe wonderfull ſignes and miracles.

Fables inuēted by the Iewes.

And thus the Prophet now would haue the people conſider of theſe wonders of old, to correct their incredulitie, & not to be tempted with diffidence: for it was the cuſtome of Gods faithfull ſeruants to caſt their eies alwaies vpon this deliuerance, that by the remembrance of ſo great a benefit, they might confirme euery mans heart in faith and hope. We haue alſo told you before that they were from age to age to feele the fruit of this redemption, that the Lord by a continuall progreſſe might ſtill be acknowledged the protector of that people whom he had ſo redeemed at the firſt. Our Prophets meaning is then, that the Lord will eaſily ouercome all impediments, and will ſet open the paſſages that are ſhut, will furniſh them with vvater in abundance that they faint not for thirſt, for he will worke for them as in old time he did for their fathers, when extraordinarilie he cauſed vvaters to iſſue out of the rock, they making their account to periſh for thirſt. Exod. 17.6. and therefore there was no cauſe why they ſhould call the aſſurāce of their returne into queſtion, if they would but only meditate of that power of God wherof themſelues by experience had taſted.

Verſ. 22. There is no peace, ſaith the Lord, to the wicked.

A preuention in regard of hypocrites.

SOme incloſe theſe words, ſaith the Lord, in a parenthesis; but we may keepe this order in the text, to wit, That the Lord denies the peace to the vvicked, vvhereof they are vnworthie. Now this is expreſly added, leſt the hypocrites according to their wont, ſhould conceiue any vaine hope in theſe promiſes, for he ſaith, they belong nothing at all to ſuch, that he might whollie exclude them from all hope of ſaluation. But it ſeemes Iſaiah reſpected ſome other thing, for in regard the greateſt part of the people ouerflowed in impietie, and reiected this benefit, many infirme and weake ones might ſtagger, and be offended at their multitudes: for at this day there are many weake conſciences troubled, when they ſee the doctrine of ſaluation contemned by the greater part of the world. Seeing then there were many in great danger of ſtumbling, he turnes their minds from this temptation, that the multitude of the wicked and vnbeleeuers (who reiected Gods grace, and this happie eſtate mentioned verſe 18. 19.) might not trouble them, but rather without gazing vpon ſuch kinde of perſons, might comfortablie imbrace and poſſeſſe this benefit themſelues.

THE XLIX. CHAPTER.

Verſ. 1. Heare ye me, ô Iles, and hearken ye people from farre, The Lord hath called me from the womb, and made mention of my name from my mothers belly.

From the treatiſe of their redemption, he comes to ſpeake of Chriſt.

HAuing diſcourſed of the redemption to come, hee now deſcends to ſpeake of Chriſt, vnder whoſe leading, the people were deliuered from the captiuitie of Babylō, as in old time they were out of Egypt. Now it was needful the former propheſie ſhould be confirmed with this preſent doctrine: for they would hardly haue bin drawne to expect this redemption from the Lord, had he not ſet Chriſt Ieſus before their eies, in whom all Gods promiſes are Yea, and Amen, 2. Cor. 1. 20. who only alſo is able to cheere vp and refreſh the fainting ſpirits: for wee are no leſſe to looke for temporall ſaluation from him, then that which is eternall. Adde, that the Prophets are wont in ſpeaking of the reſtauration of ℣ Church euer to mention Chriſt, not only becauſe he is the miniſter thereof, but alſo becauſe our adoption is grounded vpon him. The Iewes who haue any ſparke of

All the promiſes are Yea and Amen in Chriſt.

1 2

found

ſound iudgement do confeſſe, that this place is to be vnderſtood of Chriſt only. But all haue not kept the order which we haue noted. For the Prophet ſpeakes not of Chriſt at the firſt brunt, but vſeth this preface, for without it the people could looke for no redemption, in regard their reconciliation with God depéded thereupon. Now that it might haue the greater efficacie, he brings in Chriſt himſelfe ſpeaking, not only to the Iewes, but to the nations beyond the ſeas, and to the ſtrangers farre remote from the common wealth of Iſrael, who are ſpecified heere vnder this word iles, as we haue ſhewed in another place.

The Lord hath called me from the vvomb.] Some aske what this vocation is? for ſeeing we were elected in Chriſt before the foundations of the world, Epheſ.1.4. it followes that he is before vs, becauſe he is the beginning and foundation of our election. It ſeemes the Prophet therefore hath ſpoken leſſe then the thing imports, in affirming that Chriſt was called from the womb, ſeeing he was before all time. But the anſwer to this is eaſie, for the queſtion is not heere touching Gods eternall election, whereby we are adopted for his children, but only of the eſtabliſhing and conſecration of Chriſt ordeined to this office, that wee ſhould not thinke he intruded himſelfe thereinto at randon. For no man takes this honor to himſelfe, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron, Heb.5.4.5. So Chriſt tooke not vpon himſelfe the office of the high Prieſt, but he which aduanced him to it, ſaid, Thou art my ſonne, this day haue I begotten thee, Pſal.2.7.

Chriſt thruſt not himſelfe into his office without a calling.

Moreouer, the Prophet defines not of the beginning of time, as if God had then begun to call him from the womb, but it is as if he ſhould haue ſaid, Before I came out of my mothers womb, God ordeined me to this office, as S. Paul ſaith, That God had choſen him from his mothers womb, Gal.1.15. though notwithſtanding he had elected him alſo frō before the foundations of the world. It is alſo ſaid of Ieremiah, Before I formed thee, I knew thee, Iere.1.5. In a word, the ſumme is, that Chriſt tooke our fleſh by the ordinance of his Father, that he might fulfill the worke of our Redemption vnto which he was deſtinated. Hereunto appertaines the laſt member of the verſe, for the mentioning of his name, ſignifies as much as a familiar knowledge of him. He ſeparates him then from out of the common ranke of men, becauſe he is choſen to a rare and ſingular piece of ſeruice.

Verſ. 2. And hee hath made my mouth like a ſharpe ſword: vnder the ſhadow of his hand hath hee hid mee, and made me a choſen ſhaft, and hid me in his quiuer.

Twō ſimilitudes expreſſing the efficacie of his doctrine.

HE vſeth two ſimilitudes; to wit, the ſword and quiuer, to expreſſe the efficacie of his doctrine: and then he ſhewes to what end he was called and dignified with ſo noble a title; namely, that he might teach: for that is it he ſignifies by the word mouth. Chriſt then was not ſent of the Father to conquer by force of armes, as earthly Princes doe; but his conqueſt is obtained by the ſword of the Spirit; that is to ſay, by preaching the whole counſell of God, in which hee will be ſought and knowne: for he is not to be found elſewhere. Now hee ſhewes what the force of his mouth is; that is to ſay, of the doctrine which proceedes out of his mouth, when he compares it to a ſharpe ſword. For the word of God is liuely in operation, and more piercing then all two edged ſwords: for it diuides betweene the ſoule and the ſpirit, and the ioints and the marrow; and is a diſcerner of all the intents of the heart: Heb.4.12. He compares it alſo to an arrow, becauſe it not onely hits neere, but alſo a farre off, and comes euen to them who ſeeme far remote.

Chriſt conquers not by force of armes, but by the ſword of the ſpirit.

Pſal.45.5.

But after Iſaiah hath ſpoken of the efficacie of his doctrine, hee addes, that God will maintaine both Chriſt and it by his power: ſo as nothing ſhall be able to hinder the courſe thereof. For as ſoone as Chriſt opens his mouth; that is to ſay, as ſoone as the Goſpell begins to be ſincerely preached, the aduerſaries band themſelues on all ſides, and infinit enemies conſpire how to ſuppreſſe it. So as this efficacie whereof he ſpeakes, and which hee attributes to his doctrine, would not ſtand, vnleſſe Gods protection and ſhadow came betweene, to abandon the aduerſaries.

God will maintaine both Chriſt and his doctrine. The Goſpell no ſooner preached, but it is oppoſed by enemies.

But he ſpeakes not heere onely of Chriſt, but of the whole body of his Church. I grant we muſt beginne at the head, but frō thence we muſt deſcend to the members, and apply it to all the Miniſters of the word; which is heere ſpoken of Chriſt, in regard this efficacie of the word is giuen them, that their voice ſhould not beate the aire in vaine, but that it ſhould enter to the pricking of the heart: Acts 2.37. The Lord alſo cauſeth the trump of his word to ſound, not in one place onely, but to the vtmoſt ends of the earth. Laſtly, in regard, the Lord faithfully keepes them vnder the ſhadow of his hand, though they be ſubiect to many reproches, and that Satan on euery ſide aſſailes them; yet they breake not off their courſe, which experience might well haue taught vs. For there is not one of vs, but we had long ſince been vtterly rooted out by the ſecret and open practiſes of our enemies, had not the Lord been our defence. And truly I cannot but wonder, that any one Miniſter of the Goſpell ſhould ſtand ſafe, in the midſt of ſo many & ſo great dangers. But the cauſe is, the Lord keepes them vnder the ſhadow of his hand, and hides them as ſhafts in his quiuer, that they ſhould hot be hurt nor deſtroied of their enemies.

A miracle that a faithfull Miniſter ſhould ſtand.

Verſ. 3. And he ſaid vnto me; Thou art my ſeruant Iſrael; for I will be glorious in thee.

This verſe depends vpō the former.

THis verſe muſt be ioined with the former. For heereby it appeares, that he ſpeakes not of one man, but of the whole people: which the expoſitors haue not conſidered: for this place neither ought to be reſtrained to Christs person, nor yet referred to Israel onely. But we must heere obserue the course of the Scriptures. When the body of the Church is mentioned, then Christ is placed in the middle, as it were, who vnder him comprehends the children of God. Wee heare what Saint Paul saith; The promises were made to Abraham, and to his seede. He saith not to his seedes, as speaking of many: and to thy seed, which is Christ: Gal. 3. 16. For he comprehends not the multitude of children which came of Abraham according to the flesh, seeing all were not partakers of this blessing. Ishmael was reiected: Gal. 4. 30. Esau was hated: Mal. 1. 3. and many others were cut off.

to

Ishmael reiected. Esau reprobated.

When the people were deliuered from vnder the captiuitie of Babylon, the number of those which returned were very smal; for the greatest part reiected this excellent benefit of God. Where was this seede then? Euen in Christ who is the head, and vnder him containes the rest of the members: for in him, by an inseparable band, is the whole seed assembled and knit together in one. And in the same sense that Isaiah hath noted out Christ vnder the name of Israel, so also hath he comprehended the whole body, as the members vnder the head. Which is no new thing. For when Paul speakes of that vnion which is betweene Christ and the Church, hauing set it forth vnder the similitude of a mans body, he addes, euen so is Christ: 1. Cor. 12. 12. And in this place the name of Christ is attributed vnto Israel: that is to say, to the whole companie of the faithfull, which are vnited to Christ as the members to the head. Afterwards, the Lord giues this title to the Church, which is the spouse of Christ, as the wife is dignified with the name and title of her husband.

The vnion which is betweene Christ and his Church.

Now he calles Israel his seruant: that is to say, his handmaid the Church; for shee is the pillar and ground of truth, because hee hath committed his word vnto her, as a pledge to keepe; that by her ministerie it may be published thorowout the world: 1. Tim. 3. 15. In the latter part of the verse, hee shewes what the end of this ministry is, and why those that preach the Gospell are called thereunto of God; to wit, that they make his glory by all meanes to shine cleere in respect of themselues, and to aduance it also among others. Which Christ teacheth in the Gospell saying; Father, glorifie thy Sonne, that thy Sonne also may glorifie thee: Iohn 17. 1. But doth not God shew vs a singular fauour, when he appoints vs, base and vile wretches, to be procurers of glory vnto him? Oh! let this quicken vs vp to obey him carefully, and to imploy our selues faithfully in his seruice. And yet the Prophet meant to expresse somewhat more, namely, that howsoeuer Satan and his imps lay all the plots they can, yet Gods power shall ouerthrow them all: so as Christ shall triumph notwithstanding gloriously, and God his maiestie shall shine most bright in his Gospell still.

Vers. 4. And I said; I haue laboured in vaine, I haue spent my strength in vaine and for nothing: but my iudgement is with the Lord, and my worke with my God.

THe Prophet addes a grieuous complaint heere, in the name of the Church; yet so, as he begins at the head, as we haue said before. Christ then with his members complaines, that he hath in a manner vtterly lost his labour: for after hee hath greatly praised and commended the efficacie of that word which issueth out of his mouth, vers. 2. now he shewes that it hath done little or no good notwithstanding: so as this glory which God requires to shine in the ministrie of his word, appeares very little. For Christ saith, he hath laboured in vaine, because men wil not repent, nor turne to God by the preaching of the heauenly doctrine. It was to great purpose that the Prophet added this. First, to teach vs that this fruit whereof he spake, shall not alwaies appeare in the eies of men; for otherwise we should be readie to call the truth of Gods word into question; and would also be brought to doubt, whether this doctrine, which is reiected of so many with such impudencie, were the word of God or no. Secondlie, that we might bend all our forces with inuincible constancie to performe our duties, and to commend the successe of all our labours vnto the blessing of God, who will not suffer it to be fruitlesse in the end. And thus the Prophet meant to meete with a dangerous temptation, that by the rebellions of men, we should not faint in the middle of our course. And truly Christ so begins heere with a complaint, that he yet comforts himselfe by and by, knowing that nothing shall be able to direct him from the performance of his charge. And the text would be somewhat plainer, if wee reade it thus: Although my trauaile be in vaine, and that I haue spent my selfe without fruit; yet it sufficeth that my worke is approued of my God. Vnto which appertaines that which is added; but my iudgement is before the Lord.

A bitter complaint.

Why this complaint is added.

Albeit then the fruit of our labours appeare not before vs, yet must it content vs that they are done before that God whom we serue, and to whom our seruice is agreeable. For Christ exhorts and incourageth the faithfull Ministers to fight valiantly, vntil they haue ouercome this temptation: so as, setting light by the malice of men, they cheerfully goe on still in their calling, without suffering discontentments or carelesnesse to hinder their course. If the Lord haue a purpose then to try our faith and patience, so farre as that it shall seeme we labour in vaine, yet must wee satisfie our selues with the testimonie of a good conscience. But if this consolation take no place in vs, then is it certaine that we are not carried forwards with a pure affection: neither doe wee serue God in this function, but the world and our owne ambition. Wherefore it is needfull for vs to haue our recourse to this sentence in such temptations.

An incouragement for Ministers.

In the meane while wee may note that the whole world, is accused heere of ingratitude, both

The whole world taxed of ingratitude.

both by Chriſt and his Church: who ſo complaine before God, that notwithſtanding they expoſtulate with the world, in regard the doctrine of the Goſpell, which is ſo effectuall in it ſelfe, worketh no better effects in the inhabitants therof. But this fault wholly reſteth in mens vnthankfulneſſe and obſtinacie, who reiect the grace which God offers them, and chuſe wittingly to periſh, rather then to be ſaued. They therefore which charge the Goſpell of vnfruitfulneſſe, and wickedly belie and ſlander the bleſſed truth, ſcoffing at our labours as being idle and vnprofitable, and babble that it is the cauſe of commotions, and ſets men together by the eares; let them now come forth and accuſe the Sonne of God: let them conſider well with whom they haue to doe, and what profit their impudencie will bring them in the end. For men are in all the fault, in that themſelues make fruſtrate and void, the preaching thereof, as much as in them lieth. But the faithfull Miniſters who are vexed in their ſoules to ſee men periſh ſo miſerablie by their owne fault, who alſo waſt and kill themſelues with ſorrow when they haue triall of ſuch an obſtinacie, ought notwithſtanding to arme themſelues with this conſolation, and not to be ſo diſquieted as to caſt down the bucklers, though at ſometimes it ſeemes beſt for them ſo to do. Let them rather meditate that Chriſt is partaker with them in this their burthen: for he ſpeakes not only of himſelfe, as we haue ſaid before, but of all his faithfull ſeruants, who heere in all their names, as a carefull protector, enters their accuſation for them. Let them therefore reſt themſelues vpon his defence, and leaue the maintenance of their cauſe vnto him. Let them make their appeale (as Paul doth) to the day of the Lord. 1. Cor. 4. 4. and neuer ſtand to breake their braines about the lies, ſlanders, and outrages of their enemies; for as their iudgement is before the Lord, though the vnthankfull world diſgrace them an hundreth times, ſo will God be the faithfull approuer and rewarder of their ſeruice. Contrariwiſe, let the wicked, prophane contemners of the word, and all hypocrites tremble; for when Chriſt ſhall accuſe them, all their defences will not be worth a ruſh, neither ſhall any be able to abſolue them from his iuſt ſentence of condemnation. We muſt looke to it then that the fruit which ſhould come of the Goſpell, periſh not by our fault, for God manifeſts his glorie, that we may be made the diſciples of Ieſus Chriſt, and bring forth much fruit, Iohn 15. 8.

A caueat for ſcorners.

The Miniſters appeale.

Tremble and ſinne not ye prophane contemners of the word.

Verſ. 5. And now ſaith the Lord that formed me from the womb to be his ſeruant, that I may bring Iaakob againe to him (though Iſrael be not gathered) yet ſhall I be glorious in the eies of the Lord, and my God ſhall be my ſtrength.

A cõfirmatiõ ioined with a more ample conſolation.

HE confirmes the former ſentence, and ſets before vs a more full conſolation by a repetition of the duties of his calling, and the teſtimonie of his owne conſcience. And this ought to be a ſtrong tower for vs to run vnto; for nothing diſquiets nor troubles our minds more, then when we be vncertaine vnder whoſe leading it is that we enterpriſe this or that. Iſaiah therefore brings vs to the certentie of our vocation. Firſt then the faithful Miniſters ſay with Chriſt their Prince and Captaine, that God hath formed them, in regard he alwaies endues them whom he ſends and calles to the office of teaching, with neceſſarie gifts, for they draw all the graces wherewith they are furniſhed from the only fountaine of grace the holy Ghoſt. Thus then in the firſt place God hath ſet his ſeale vpon Chriſt: next vnto him, vpon all his Miniſters, whom according to their meaſure he fits and prepares, that they may haue wherewithall to execute their charge. Therewithall he ſets downe the end of their calling: for the Apoſtles and teachers of the Church are ordeined and ſent to gather the ſcattered flock of Chriſt together, that all his ſheep may be folded vnder him into one bodie. For there is a wofull ſcattering in the world, but in Ieſus Chriſt all are gathered in, as S. Paul ſaith Epheſ. 1. 10. other band of vnitie there is none.

As touching the word created, or formed, many triſle in deſcanting about the humane nature of Chriſt, which indeed was created: for it is more cleare then the Sunne at noone day that this creation is to be referred to his office.

Though Iſrael be not called.] The Iewes reade this by an interrogation, Shall I not bring Iacob againe, and ſhall not Iſrael be gathered? But this reading is conſtreined, neither do they conſider of the Prophets meaning, but as much as in them is, corrupt the text, that they might couer the ſhame of their nation. Others expound, He ſhall not be loſt: or, He ſhall not periſh. For the verb Aſaf ſignifies, to truſſe vp; for, they gather together that which is to be kept, or to be conſumed: and ſo when we ſpeake of one that is dead, we commonly ſay, he is truſſed vp.

This ſenſe agrees not ill, I am ſent, that Iſrael periſh not, but I had rather follow another expoſition. Although all Iſrael be not gathered, yet ſhall I be glorified: for in this place we may ſee that two contraries are oppoſed one to another. If the Miniſters of the word be ordeined to ſaue men, it is a great honor to them when many are brought to ſaluation; if not, it makes them abaſhed and aſhamed: for S. Paul calles thoſe whom he gained to Chriſt, his ioy, and his crowne, Phil. 4. 1. 1. Theſſ. 2. 19. Contrariwiſe if men periſh, we beare ſhame and diſgrace by it, in regard it ſeemes God curſeth our labors, in that he vouchſafeth vs not that honor, as to be the aduancers of his kingdome by our Miniſtrie. Notwithſtanding our Prophet affirmes, that ſuch as haue ſerued Chriſt in this office, ſhall be glorified: for he comprehends the members vnder the head (as we haue oftẽ ſaid before.)

Will not Iſrael be gathered then? yet ſhall Chriſtes Miniſtrie loſe no iot of glorie thereby. For if men be not gathered, the burthen will lie whollie vpon their owne necks. In which which ſenſe Saint Paul affirmes, that although the preaching of the Goſpell be a ſauour of death vnto death in the reprobates, yet euen that is a ſweete ſauour vnto God, who by the meanes of preaching, will make the wicked the more without excuſe. God is glorified double, if the effect anſwer his deſire. But, if the Miniſters of the word, hauing omitted no part of their duties, ſhall (to their griefe and ſmart I confeſſe) ſee no fruits to come of their labours; yet let them not repent that they haue beerein pleaſed God, whoſe approbation is heere oppoſed to all the peruerſe iudgements of the world. As if the Prophet ſhould ſay; Be it that men abhorre you, and charge you with many faults; yet muſt you ſwallow this, and much more too with patience: for God hath another end, and will crowne your patience with glorie and honour, which the wicked ſo proudly and ſcornefullie deſpiſe.

He addes in the ſame ſenſe, that it ought to ſuffice them that God is their ſtrength, to the end that neither the multitude nor power of their enemies doe aſtoniſh them, ſeeing in their God conſiſts their ſtrength.

Verſ. 6. And hee ſaid; It is a ſmall thing that thou ſhouldeſt be my ſeruant, to raiſe vp the tribes of Iakob, and to reſtore the deſolations of Iſrael: I will alſo giue thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou maieſt bee my ſaluation to the end of the world.

HEe goes on further and ſhewes, that the labours of Chriſt and of all his ſeruants, ſhall be glorious indeede; not onely before God, but alſo before men. For howſoeuer they be eſteemed vaine and vnfruitfull in the beginning, yet in the end the Lord will cauſe them to bring forth fruit contrary to all the opinions of men. It was enough that in the firſt place God approued their labours: but in that he now addes, that the ſame ſhall not proue vnprofitable, no not in regard of men: this ought to bee as a ſpurre to put life into them, and much to comfort their comfortleſſe ſpirits. Whence it followes, that wee ought to hope that the iſſue of that which is committed into Gods hands, ſhall be good, becauſe the bleſſing which hee promiſeth to our labours, ſhall in the end appeare; ſo farre forth, as he ſees it expedient, and for his own glory.

Beſides, he addes that this labour ſhall not onely fructifie among the people of Iſrael, but among the Gentiles alſo: which (bleſſed be our God) is now come to paſſe. Nay, more then that; for ſeeing the Iewes with an obſtinate hardneſſe, became ſo graceleſſe as to reiect Chriſt; the Gentiles are now grafted into their ſtocke. And thus Chriſt is appointed of God to be a light vnto the Gentiles, and his ſaluation manifeſted to the vtmoſt parts of the world.

This conſolation then was very neceſſarie, as well for the Prophets, as the Apoſtles: Acts 13.47. For they had but too wofull and dailie experience more and more, of the frowardneſſe of the Iewes. In which regard, they might haue called the certainty of theſe promiſes into queſtion, ſeeing ſo little fruit of them appeared. But vnderſtanding that Chriſt was alſo ſent to the Gentiles, they were not ſo vnwilling to goe thorow thicke and thin, as otherwiſe they would haue been. I grant it was a thing incredible; nay, prodigious: but thus the Lord is wont to worke far aboue the reach of mans reaſon. Saint Paul calles it a ſecret hidden, Eph. 3.9. from the foundations of the world, and is yet vnknowne to the very Angels: 1. Pet. 1.12. further forth then it is manifeſted vnto them by the Church: Eph. 3.10. Thus then, although the Iewes were once the onelie wiſe people vnder heauen, Deuteronomie, 4.6. yet they are heere matched with the Gentiles: neither is there anie more diſtinction now betweene them before God: Rom. 10.12.

The Rabbines reade this verſe by an interrogation; Is it a ſmall thing? As if he ſhould ſay; that it is enough, and that nothing greater nor further is to be required. But they doe maliciouſly peruert the natiue ſenſe of the Prophets words; and make themſelues belieue, forſooth, that they ſhall one day become Lords ouer the Gentiles, and raigne ouer all nations. But the true meaning is, that this ſhall be an excellent and glorious worke in it ſelfe, when God ſhall reſtore and reeſtabliſh the Tribes of Iſrael. And yet this worke ſhall be much more glorious, in reſpect that he will ioine the Gentiles to the Iewes, that they may with one mouth and heart, profeſſe the name of one Chriſt. He ſpeakes not in this place of the reiection of the ancient people then; but of the increaſing of the Church, when Iewes and Gentiles ſhall be made one body. I grant that after the Iewes fell away from the couenant of grace, the Gentiles ſupplied their emtie place: ſo as their reuolt was the cauſe that thoſe which were ſtrangers before, were now made children by adoption. But heere (as in many other places) Iſaiah foretelles that the Church ſhall haue a large extent, when the Gentiles ſhall be receiued in, and made one body with the Iewes.

Now albeit the word lights, may be vnderſtood ioy and felicitie, yet I doubt not but the Prophet reſpects the doctrine of the Goſpell, which giues light to our vnderſtandings, and pulles vs out of darkneſſe. Hee alſo ſaith, that this light which Chriſt ſhall bring, ſhall be ſaluation: for as Chriſt is called the way, the truth, and the life, becauſe we obtaine life by the knowledge of the truth: ſo in this place he is called the light and ſaluation of the Gentiles, becauſe hee inlightens our mindes by the doctrine of the light of the Goſpell, that he may bring vs to ſaluation. Let vs obſerue theſe two things then: firſt, that our eies are opened by Chriſts doctrine: ſecondlie, that wee which were dead, ſhall be raiſed vp to life; or rather, that life is reſtored vnto vs.

Verſ. 7.

Verſ. 7. *Thus ſaith the Lord the redeemer of Iſrael, and his holy one, to him that is deſpiſed in ſoule, to a nation that is abhorred, to a ſeruant of rulers; Kings ſhall ſee and ariſe, and Princes ſhall worſhip, becauſe of the Lord that is faithfull: and the holy one of Iſrael which hath choſen thee.

*Or, in himſelfe.

ISaiah goes on with the ſame argument, that the people might conceiue a better hope in their minde, touching their eſtate & condition, when they ſhould ſee themſelues afflicted vnder ſo many tedious calamities. And the rather to confirme his ſaying, hee calles God, who promiſed to performe theſe things, the redeemer of Iſrael. But may ſome obiect; How can theſe things ſtand together; that God ſhould bee called the redeemer of his people, whom he ſuffered to be ouerwhelmed with miſeries? For where was this redemption and ſanctification become, ſeeing the people had iuſt cauſe to complaine of their pouertie and calamities? I anſwere, that the memorie of that which had fallen out long before, is heere propounded and ſet before them, to miniſter vnto them matter of hope and truſt. For the Iewes being preſſed with deſpaire, the Prophet preuents it by aduertiſing them, that that God which in times paſt had deliuered their fathers, is now no leſſe almightie then he was then. Albeit then for a time, hee withdraw the light of his countenance from them, to exerciſe and trie their faith, yet hee commands them not to caſt away their confidence, becauſe their certaine and full redemption is in his hands: and yet they were heerein to looke farre aboue the reach of humane reaſon. This therefore is a very exeellent place: out of which we may gather how carefully we ought to beleeue God when he ſpeakes, albeit he doe no forthwith accompliſh that which hee hath promiſed, but ſuffers vs to languiſh vnder afflictions a long time.

Obiect.

Anſ.

We muſt not ceaſe to beleeue, though God for a time deferre his promiſe.

Some tranſlate the word Vile, Contemned: others, Contemptible; which I approoue of. But this augments the miſerie of the people, when the Prophet calles them deſpiſed * in ſoule: for many are deſpiſed of others, who notwithſtanding are worthy of honour, in regard of the graces wherewith they be indued: or being puffed vp with pride, ceaſe not with an higher contempt, to treade vnder their feete the contempt of others. But Iſaiah affirmes, that the Iewes are not more deſpiſed and contemptible in the eies of others, then they are in their owne. Thus then hee notes out an exceeding ignominie and low eſtate; therewithall comprehending the affliction of the Spirit: to teach them that God ſhall come in fit time to ſuccour them, when they ſhall be throughly humbled.

*Or, In himſelfe.

I ſee no reaſon why ſome haue changed the number in the word nation, ſeeing the Prophet vſeth the ſingular number Goi; it being certaine that he addreſſeth his ſpeech to the poſteritie of Abraham. Afterwards he cals them ſeruants of rulers: as if he ſhould ſay, that mightie tyrants oppreſſed them: for by the word Moſchelim, he meanes thoſe that haue ſo much force and power, that it is an hard matter to eſcape their hands.

When he ſaith that Kings ſhall ſee, he ſpeaks in high and glorious termes of the deliuerie of his people; but in the meane while, hee is contented they ſhould bee tried in the furnace, to proue their faith and patience: for where were the triall of faith, if God ſhould forthwith giue that which he hath promiſed, (as we ſaid before.)

In the word Princes, there is a repetition much vſed among the Hebrewes. But we will ſpeake it thus ſhortly; Kings and Princes ſhall ſee, they ſhall ariſe, and bow downe.

By the verbe To bow downe, he expounds what he meant by ariſing: for wee riſe vp to giue honour. The ſumme is, that the greateſt Princes of the world ſhall bee awakened to confeſſe that the reſtauration of the Church is an excellent worke of God, and worthy of reſpect and reuerence.

Becauſe the holy one of Iſrael who hath choſen thee, is faithfull. See the cauſe of this great aſtoniſhment, touching the honour which Princes ſhall performe to God; to wit, becauſe they ſhall acknowledge his faithfulneſſe and conſtancie in his promiſes. For the Lord would not be acknowledged faithfull from a bare and naked imagination, but from experience it ſelfe; to wit, in the preſeruation and protection of his people, whom hee hath adopted. Hence therefore let vs learne not to iudge of Gods promiſes by our preſent eſtate, but by his truth and faithfulneſſe: ſo as when we perceiue nothing but death and the graue to compaſſe vs round, yet wee may remember this ſentence, by which the Lord calles vs to him, euen the vile and contemptible.

God would not be held to be faithful by a bare imagination, but from good experience.

1 Cor. 7. 6.

Hence alſo wee are to conſider how glorious and admirable a worke the deliuerance of the Church is, in that it conſtraines Kings, be they neuer ſo proud (thinking nothing be it neuer ſo excellent worthy to behold them) to behold, to admire, yea and to honour, and reuerence the Lord, whether they will or no. This new and extraordinary worke then, is heere greatly recommended vnto vs in this behalfe. For not to mention ancient hiſtories, by what meanes hath God deliuered vs, out of that wofull tyrannie of Antichriſt? Truly wee were as thoſe that dreame, as the Pſalmiſt ſaith, Pſal. 126. 1. eſpecially if wee doe but ſeriouſly conſider of the thing it ſelfe: for the Lord hath wrought a miracle in bringing vs to doe homage vnto Chriſt.

In the end of the verſe, the Prophet repeates that which he touched before; to wit, that this people were ſet a part to bee the Lords. But in election we muſt ſeeke the beginning of ſanctification: for the people were the holy inheritance, becauſe God had vouchſafed of his meere grace to chuſe them. Iſaiah, then means that ſecret will of God, from whence ſanctification flowes; that Iſrael might not thinke they were choſen for their own deſerts.

As if he had said, The Lord which hath elected thee shewes, that thou art so indeed by the effects. As wee ought then to acknowledge Gods faithfulnes and truth in our saluation, so must we attribute this saluation only to our free election. And yet it behoues euery one that will partake in so great a benefit, to be a portion of the true Israel, that is to say, of the Church, out of which there is neither truth nor saluation to be found.

Neither truth nor saluation out of the Church.

Verſ. 8. Thus saith the Lord, in an acceptable time haue I heard thee, and in a day of saluation haue I succored thee, and will preserue thee, and giue thee for a couenant of the people, that thou mayst raise vp the earth, and obteine the inheritance of the desolate heritage.

FRom this verse we may yet more clearely gather that which we haue handled in the beginning of this Chapter, to wit, that the Prophet so speakes of the whole body of the Church, that he begins at the head thereof. And this, as I haue said, ought to be well obserued, for the expositors haue bauked it, and yet without it we shall not be able to make these verses to cohere. S. Paul plainly shewes this, in applying this very sentence to the whole Church, 2. Cor. 6. 2. But yet that which followes, I will giue thee for a couenant of the people, suites to none but Christ only. How shal we make these things agree then? To wit, if we shall consider that Christ is not so much his owne as ours. For he was not borne; neither died he, nor rose againe for himselfe. He was sent for the saluation of his people. He seeks nothing at our hands: for he stands in neede of nothing. Thus then, God makes his promises to ỹ whole Church: and Christ, who is as it were the suretie or pledge betweene both, receiues these promises, and procures nothing to himselfe by them, but altogether for the Churches behoofe, for whose saluation he was sent. He speakes not then of Christ, as singling him out by himselfe, but as of one that is ioined and made one with his Church for euer. It is an inestimable fauor then which the father shewes vs when he heares his sonne for our sakes: yea, that he directs his speech to his sonne whilest he is speaking of our saluation. For by this we may perceiue how neere the coniunction is betweene Christ and vs. He represents our person. He hath nothing which is not ours: and is heard of his Father in respect of vs.

Christ not so much his owne as ours.

Our vnion with Christ again noted.

By the acceptable time, the Prophet meant to keepe the faithfull within their bounds, that they should not be too eager in their desires, but might patientlie wait the Lords leisure euen till his prefixed time were come, in which sense S. Paul calles the comming of Christ the fulnes of time, Gal. 4. 4. He would haue them then to depend vpon the will of God, and in the meane while to beare his wrath with a quiet and meeke spirit. Moreouer, albeit the Prophet meant to exhort the faithfull to patience, and to learne to subdue their wills to the will of God, yet he therewithall teacheth, that our saluation flowes from the free fauor of God. For his free accepting of vs is the foundation of our saluation. And saluation is the effect of this grace. We are saued because we please God; not for our owne merits, but of his meere goodnes. And yet withall he shewes that our saluation is certaine, in that we haue so sure a pledge of Gods grace: for in assuring vs of his fauor, he remoues all doubtings.

This place serues to set forth the commendation of Gods word, without which, there is no enquiring after saluation: as also S. Paul saith, 2. Cor. 6. 3. where he shewes that Gods fauor is plainely manifested vnto vs in the preaching of the Gospell, so as that which is written heere touching the day of saluation, is thereby accomplished. Thirdly, the Prophet admonisheth vs, that when the Gospell is sent to any place, there God discouers a sure pledge of his fauor, and good will. For is it not euident that he pities vs, when he so graciously allures vs to himselfe? He might let vs erre in darknes without this light, but it comes vnto vs only from his free grace, that so he might remoue all doubtings and stumbling blocks out of our way. Let vs lay it vp in our hearts then, to wit, that this mercie whollie depends vpon God his free will.

No saluation without the word.

Where God sends his Gospell, there he discouers a sure pledge of his fauor.

If it be asked, why the Lord hath illuminated vs rather in this time then in any other: We must answere, Because it was Gods good pleasure so to haue it. For S. Paul in the place before alledged, brings vs to this point. Behold now the acceptable time, behold now the day of saluation; which place will help vs much to vnderstand the Prophets meaning, that so wee may learne to ioine Gods free accepting of vs, and our saluation together. A pledge of which fauor we haue in the preaching of the Gospell.

Quest.

Ans.

We are also to note that these prophesies were not to be restrained to a certaine time, seeing they appertaine to the Church to the worlds end. For when wee begin at the redemption out of Babylon, we must come forward til the redemption purchased by Christ, of which the first deliuerance was but as it were a preparatiue. And seeing there are still certain reliques of this seruitude remaining, it must continue to the worlds end, at which time all things shall be restored, and set againe into their perfect estate.

These prophesies appertaine to the vse of the Church to the worlds end.

Three redemptions.

I will giue thee for a couenant.] Hence it appeeres, that whatsoeuer was said of Christ before, was not promised in regard of his owne particuler profit, but for our sakes. For he was ordeined to be the pledge of the couenant, because the Iewes by their sinnes made a diuorce between God and them, who had contracted a perpetuall couenant with them. The renuing of this couenant then, which was broken or disanulled, is attributed vnto Christ. In which regard, that which Paul saith, Ephes. 2. 14. and 17. is to be noted: Christ is our peace which hath made of both one, and hath preached peace as well to those that are far off, as to those that are neere. But our Prophet had a speciall eie to that horrible dissi-pation, which none but Chriſt alone was able to remedie. It remaines now then, that we apply this grace to our vſe: wee (I ſay) who were ſtrangers and enemies, far from the couenant of grace in reſpect of the Iewes, before the Goſpell was publiſhed; without which, we had neuer taſted of our reconciliation with him. Chriſt then was giuen for a couenant to the people, becauſe there was no other way to come vnto God, but through him. The Iewes were then the onely people; but the partition wall being broken downe, all, both Iewes and Gentiles haue bin gathered into one body.

pation

Why Chriſt was giuen for a couenant to the people.

That thou ſhouldeſt raiſe vp the earth, which was deſolate. For the returne of the people was as a new creation: as wee haue ſhewed elſewhere. Vnto which alſo appertaines the words of the Prophet, that we might know there is nothing but a wofull waſte and ſcattering in the world: for Chriſt is ſent to raiſe vp that which was deſtroied and fallen to the earth. If all things ſtood in a perfect eſtate, then he ſhould be ſent to vs in vaine. Wee ought therefore diligently to conſider of our eſtate: for in our ſelues we are ſtrangers from God, and excluded from all hope of ſaluation; but Chriſt hath raiſed vs vp together with him, and hath reconciled vs to his heauenly Father. Beſides, Iſaiah addes the benefits which we obtaine by Chriſt, after wee be reconciled.

Verſ. 9. That thou maieſt ſay to the priſoners; Goe forth: and to them that are in darkneſſe; Shew your ſelues, they ſhall ſeeke in the waies, and their paſtures ſhall bee in all the toppes of the hilles.

Neither light, liberty, nor ſuccour out of Chriſt.

BEhold heere a deſcription of the change, that happens at Chriſts comming. Notwithſtanding it is very ſure that the Prophet meant in this place, to giue ſome conſolation to the Iewes, things being then in ſuch a deſperate ſtate, to the end their reſtauration might not ſeeme incredible; no, not albeit they lay in darkneſſe of death. Yet in generall termes, he ſhewes wherein the office of Chriſt conſiſts; to wit, in reſtoring the deſolate heritage: verſ. 8. For before his comming, we lie maimed hand and foote vnder a miſerable ſlauerie, and are plunged into the darkneſſe of hell. By theſe two ſimilitudes then he ſhewes, that wee are wrapped in all ſorts of miſeries, as long as Chriſt is abſent from vs. For by darkneſſe, he excludes vs from all the benefits which appertaine to Chriſts kingdome as faith, righteouſneſſe, holineſſe, truth, and the like graces: wee are in darkneſſe then, till Chriſt ſay; Shew your ſelues: we are bound, till he cry, Goe forth. Now there is great weight in the clauſe; That thou maieſt ſay: for hee ſhewes that the preaching of the Goſpell, is the meanes by which we are deliuered. If we then deſire the libertie and the light of Gods kingdome, let vs hearken vnto the voice of Chriſt, for elſe we ſhall be oppreſſed vnder the perpetuall tyrannie of Satan.

Where is now the libertie of our free will? For whoſoeuer attributes to himſelfe light, reaſon, or vnderſtanding, can neuer haue part in this deliuerance by Chriſt. Why ſo? Becauſe libertie is promiſed to none but to ſuch as acknowledge themſelues captiues; nor light and ſaluation to any, but to ſuch as confeſſe themſelues to ſit in darkneſſe.

Free will.

No libertie but to ſuch as feele their captiuity: nor light, but to ſuch as confeſſe they ſit in darkneſſe.

Moreouer, in that he promiſeth Gods children that their paſtures ſhall bee in all waies, and in all high places: by theſe ſimilitudes hee ſhewes, that thoſe who are vnder the protection of Chriſt, ſhall fare well: for he is a vigilant and carefull ſhepheard, and furniſheth his flocke with all things neceſſarie: ſo as nothing can bee wanting vnto them, that appertaines to their ſoueraigne good. This aduertiſement was of great vſe for the Iewes, in that time in which they were to paſſe thorow hot & ſcorched paths, and to come at length into a land waſted and deſolate. The Prophet therefore ſaith; that albeit humane helpes ſhould faile, yet God of himſelfe is rich enough to ſupply all their wants. This is the reaſon why the Spirit of God delights ſo much in comparing the faithfull to ſheep; that feeling their owne weakneſſe, they might willingly and wholly ſubmit themſelues to bee gouerned vnder the protection of this good ſhepheard: Iohn 10.11.

But withall it is very likely that the faithfull are admoniſhed not to affect great delicates, for they ſhall neuer taſte of ſuch abundance, but they ſhall feele many wants mingled therewith. Beſides, it is not fit they ſhould bee pampered or full fed, in regard they are ſubiect to many dangers: for wee know that the waies are fraught with theeues and enemies, and the tops of the mountaines are for the moſt part barren and dry. The Church of Chriſt is ſo defended then, that ſhe is neuer far from aſſaults and outrages of enemies, and ſo repleniſhed, that yet ſhe dwelles in waſte and terrible deſerts. But howſoeuer her enemies inuiron her on euery ſide, yet the Lord protects her from their violences. If we be in hunger or want, he is ready to furniſh vs with all neceſſaries in abundance, and to nouriſh and ſuſtaine vs: yea, in theſe neceſſities, we better perceiue the care he hath of vs, then if wee were in a place of the greateſt ſafetie.

The faithfull muſt learne to want, as well as to abound.

Note.

See verſe 10.

Verſ. 10. They ſhall not be hungrie, neither ſhall they be thirſtie, neither ſhall the heate ſmite them, nor the Sunne: for hee that hath compaſſion on them, ſhall leade them, euen to the ſprings of waters ſhall he driue them.

THe Prophet confirmes that which was ſaid in the former verſe; to wit, that God hath prouiſion ready to ſuſtaine the Iewes in the way; ſo as no neceſſaries ſhall be wanting vnto them. And no doubt hee puts them in mind of that time in which their fathers were readie to periſh in the deſert for want of foode; in which neceſſitie, God gaue them

A confirmation of the former verſe.

Manna from heauen the ſpace of forty yeers: Exod. 16.35. Alſo in ſpeaking of the ſhadow againſt the heat, it is certaine that he hath reſpect to the pillar of a clowd, wherewith the Lord couered them by day, to the end they ſhould not bee parched vp with the heate of the Sunne: Exod. 14.21. For the Prophets are wont, as we haue ſaid, to mention the peoples departure out of Egypt, as oft as they were to confirme their harts in the aſſurance of Gods goodneſſe, either towards all in generall, or towards any one in particular. In that hee mentions the ſprings of waters, he alſo alludes to thoſe waters which iſſued out of the rocke, when the people were almoſt dead for thirſt. For theſe things fell not out in the deliuerance of Babylon, but in putting them in remembrance of former benefits, the Prophet ſets before them the power of God, which hath alwaies bin ſufficient to procure the ſaluation of the Church.

Verſ. 11. And I will make all my mountaines as a way, and my paths ſhall be exalted.

God the Churches companion in her pilgrimage, prouiding her of all neceſſaries.

HEheere expreſſie and fitly mentions the peoples returne: for to what purpoſe ſhould hee promiſe ſuch felicitie vnto the Church, vnleſſe they had been reſtored to their firſt libertie? Hee ſignifies then that all obſtacles and impediments ſhall be remoued, which might any way hinder their paſſage: and that the mountaines, the toppes whereof might ſeeme impoſſible to be climbed, ſhall be made paſſeable and eaſie to bee attained. In a word, that hee will make all rough and hillie places ſmooth, that they may with eaſe returne into Iudeah. When the Church then was to bee reſtored to her perfect eſtate, no lets whatſoeuer, were they neuer ſo great, were able ſo to ouermatch the Lord, but that in the end hee would eaſily ouercome them all.

And in that he calles them his mountaines; it is to ſhew, that he hath not onely power to command them to giue his people way; but he further expreſſeth, that it ſhall be himſelfe who will bring the Iewes home; no leſſe then if he went in perſon before them. He carried them vp (ſaith Moſes, Deut. 32.13.) to the high places of the earth, when they paſſed thorow the wilderneſſe. Alſo he ſaith, that the Lord went before the Iſraelites, when they departed out of Egypt: Exod. 13.21. Heere we ſee then what ſingular loue the Lord beares to his Church, in that hee vouchſafeth to be a companion vnto her in her iourney, and takes vpon him the whole care touching her neceſſarie prouiſion therein: ſo that in ſuccouring her, he ſeemes to prouide for himſelfe.

Verſ. 12. Behold, theſe ſhall come from farre: and loe theſe from the North, and from the Weſt, and theſe from the land of Sinim.

WHereas ſome think the Prophet notes out heere the foure quarters of the world, it hath no great likelihood. And yet I reiect not this opinion altogether, becauſe it is probable, & agrees with many other texts of Scripture. Firſt hee ſaith, theſe ſhall come from farre: then hee addes ſome particulars, for an expoſition of the generall ſentence. In ſtead of Sinim, ſome reade Siniim: and the Hebrewes themſelues reade it diuerſly. Saint Ierom thinkes it is meant of the ſouth part from Mount Sinai, lying towards the South. And this is the moſt receiued opinion. Others thinke it to be the name of a citie or region, called Sienes, ſituated towards the turning of the Sunne, when it is at the higheſt. But theſe opinions make nothing for the explanation of our Prophets meaning, which is cleere and manifeſt in it ſelfe. For doubtleſſe hee ſpeakes of ſuch as were farre remote, and ſcattered in diuers quarters, whether they were to be gathered in frō the North parts, or beyond the ſeas. Iſaiah then ſo promiſeth the returne from Babylon, that therewithall hee alſo extends this prophecie to Chriſts time: as wee may eaſilie gather from that which we haue ſaid, Chap. 36.6. For we muſt ſtill hold this principle, that the ſecond birth of the Church vnder the Kingdome of Chriſt, is heere deſcribed: for he not onely promiſeth that the Iewes ſhall returne to Ieruſalem to reedifie the Temple; but that thoſe alſo, who before were ſtrangers from the Church, ſhould be gathered from out of all quarters of the world.

Iſaiah ſo prophecieth the Iewes returne, that therewithall he alſo comprehends the kingdome of Chriſt.

S. Ierom.

A principle.

Verſ. 13. Reioice, O heauens, and be ioyfull, O earth: breſt forth into praiſe, O mountaines; for God hath comforted his people, and will haue mercy vpon his afflicted.

*Or, poore.

A thankſgiuing, in which is included a confirmation of the former promiſes.

THough hee exhorts and ſtirres vp all the faithfull to thankſgiuing: yet hee hath a ſpeciall drift to confirme that promiſe, which otherwiſe in it ſelfe ſeemed doubtfull. For our conſciences wauer, and are perplexed in affliction: ſo as it is an eaſie matter to ſettle them firmely vpon the truth of Gods promiſes. In a word, either men ſtagger, tremble, fall, or vtterly deſpaire. For if the leaſt feare, diſtreſſe, or affliction doe but ariſe, much adoe there is to faſten any conſolation vpon vs. For this cauſe we haue neede to haue our faith confirmed by all ſorts of arguments. See the reaſon then why Iſaiah ſpeakes ſo glotiouſlie of the benefite of this deliuerance; namely, to the end that the faithfull, who ſaw nothing round about them but ruine and death, might notwithſtanding bee of good comfort, and in hope to wait for an happie change. Hee ſets the deliuerance therefore before their eies, as if it were alreadie accompliſhed; that ſo they might haue all matter of ioy and reioicing: though at that time there appeared nothing but cauſe of ſorrowe and mourning.

As oft as the Lord therefore promiſeth anie mercie, let vs euer bee mindfull to ioine praiſe and thankſgiuing thereunto, though we ſee not the accompliſhment thereof: that ſo ſo wee may the better vvaken our drowzie ſpirits: next, let vs lift vp our eies alſo to Gods power, by which he ouerrules all creatures both in heauen and in earth: for he no ſooner beckens with his finger, but they all ſtand vp together, as it is in Chap.48.13. to fulfill his commandement. If the ſignes of his admirable power then do euery where appeere, ſhall wee thinke he will not make the ſame much more glorious and admirable in the ſaluation of his Church? Vnder this figure then Iſaiah teacheth, that neither the heauens, nor the earth can yeeld a more acceptable ſeruice vnto God, then when they ioine and combine themſelues together to aide the Church.

Praiſes muſt be ioined to the promiſes.

Moreouer, that the faithfull ſhould not ſinke vnder the weight of the calamitie, before he promiſeth that God will comfort them, he exhorts them quietly to ſuſteine their ſorrowes. For by the word poore, he ſignifies that the Church in this world is ſubiect to many afflictions. Therefore that we may be fit to partake of Gods mercie, let vs learne vnder the croſſe, and vnder many miſeries, teares, and grones, to wait till we attaine vnto the poſſeſſion of it.

Verſ. 14. But Zion ſaid, The Lord hath forſaken me, and my Lord hath forgotten me.

A correction of the Iewes infidelitie.

THe Lord minding further to amplifie his grace, complaines that the hearts of the Iewes were ſo cloſed vp, that they had almoſt diſcouraged him, had not his infinite bountie ſurmounted all their peruerſe imaginations. Yet therewithall he indeuors to correct this vice, that they might ioyfullie imbrace, and (as it were) ſee the promiſed deliuerance before hand which was offred them: as alſo that ſeeing his forwardnes to ſuccor them, they on the contrarie might prepare themſelues to hope well. But this doctrine doth now alſo appertaine to vs, for when God deferres his help, all of vs for the moſt part are too much perplexed, wee thinke by and by God hath forſaken and reiected vs. And thus diſpaire eaſily preuailes, vnleſſe we be wiſe to preuent the ſame betimes: which we ought to do, leſt we be bereaued of Gods grace. Truly our infidelitie manifeſts it ſelfe to the vtmoſt in ſuch doubts, in that we neither quietly reſt vpon Gods promiſes, nor patientlie beare his corrections, which leade vs to repentance: nor yet the triall of our faith, by which he diſpoſeth vs to mortification: neither any other afflictions, which he vſeth for our humiliation. For God iuſtlie complaines of the Iewes, who by their diſtruſt reiected his ſaluation offred, and could not indure to ſtaie of his help. Now he reſtraines not this only vice to a few, but comprehends alſo the whole Church, to ſhew that he will be liberall and beneficiall towards the Iewes farre aboue the meaſure of their faith: yea, he will oppoſe himſelfe againſt their incredulitie, that he with his ſaluation may paſſe through all the lets and impediments which ſtand in his way. Let euery one of vs beware then how we flatter or ſooth vp our ſelues in this vice, for the Lord pleades againſt his Zion, that is to ſay the whole Church, becauſe ſhe vſeth ſuch ſpeeches as ſauour and proceed from a (bitter) roote of diſtruſt.

Verſ. 15. Can a woman forget her child, and not haue cõpaſſion of the ſonne of her womb? though they ſhould forget, yet will not I forget thee.

An exhortation, full of ſweet conſolation.

TO correct this diſtruſt, to the complaint he addes an exhortation ful of ſweet conſolation. For by a very fit ſimilitude he ſhews what great care ỹ Lord hath ouer his Church in comparing him to a mother, whoſe entire affection and care is ſo great towards her child, that the fathers loue in compariſon thereof is as nothing. He propounds it not then, you ſee, in the example of a father, which notwithſtanding is often vſed: Deut.32.6. 2.Cor. 6.18. but that he might the better expreſſe his ſingular loue, he rather compares him to a mother: and he names not children only, but the fruit of the vvomb, to which vſuallie the woman beares much greater affection. For the loue that a mother beares towards the little one which ſhe nouriſheth and ſuckleth at her breſt, is almoſt vnutterable. Alſo what care doth ſhe vſe, euen to ſpend many nights together without ſleepe, by reaſon of the frowardnes of the childe! And to ſpeake all in a word, ſhe ſpares not to waſt and conſume her ſelfe dayly, ſo as her loue makes her cleane forget herſelfe. And this care wee ſee is not only in the reaſonable creatures, but in the vnreaſonable alſo: yea, euen in wilde beaſts, who yet are gentle and louing in this behalfe, howſoeuer otherwiſe they be of cruell and fierce natures.

Now in regard women ſometimes proue more vnnaturall then wilde beaſts, yea, and ouercome them in crueltie, by neglecting the fruit of their bodies, the Lord addes, that if this ſhould fall out, that yet he will neuer forget his people. For the firme and vnmoueable affection he beares vs, farre ſurmounts the vehement loue and amitie of all fathers and mothers in the world. Let vs then call to minde what Chriſt ſaith, Math.7.11. If you which are euill can giue good things to your children, how much more will your heauenly father? Is it poſſible that he ſhould emptie himſelfe of this fatherly affection? No verily. Men which are of peruerſe natures, and loue themſelues, yet will not neglect their children, and will the Lord (the fountaine of mercie, who needs nothing, but giues to all men liberallie, and hath not the leſſe) neglect his Church? Wherefore howſoeuer it falles out ſometimes that mothers reiect and forſake their children (which yet is prodigious) yet notwithſtanding, God, who loues his children with a ſtable, conſtant, and perpetuall loue, will neuer reiect them. To conclude then, our Prophet heere ſets out the ineſtimable care of God, who watcheth night and day for our ſaluation, to aſſure vs, that he will neuer leaue nor forſake vs, though we be toſ-

Chap.27.2.3 Hebr.13.5.

sed to and fro with many and great calamities.

Vers. 16. Behold, I haue grauen thee vpon the palmes of mine hands: thy walles are euer in my sight.

Gods loue to his Church set forth by another similitude.

BY another similitude he sets forth this inestimable care that God hath ouer vs. We vse to say, in our common prouerb, That one hath that vpon his fingers ends, which is seriouslie imprinted in his memorie. And when Moses commands a dayly meditation in Gods law, he saith, Thou shalt bind them vpon thine hands, Deuter. 6.8. that so they might alwaies haue Gods commandements before their eies. Heere our Prophet vseth the same similitude, as if he should say, I can no sooner looke vpō my hands, but I behold thee there: I beare thee so ingrauen vpon my heart, that nothing is able to blot out the remembrance of thee: In a word, I can not forget thee, but I should also forget my selfe. True it is that GOD hath neither hands, nor any bodily shape: but thus it pleaseth the holy Ghost to stoupe downe to our slender and weake capacities, that he might the better set forth the infinite loue which he beares vs. And because the Church is in many places called the Temple, or Citie of God (whence also comes that similitude of building so much frequented in the scriptures, Psal. 102.16. Ier. 24. 6. Math. 16.18.) therefore the Prophet brings in the similitude of walles: by which hee notes out the quiet and peaceable estate of the Church: as if he should say, I will alwaies see that Ierusalem shall florish, and be in good plight. Whence also we obserue, that heere is set forth vnto vs a right order of gouernment and discipline, whereof the Lord will be the perpetuall protector and defender, as himselfe heere protests. Let vs also remember that this propheſie tooke place in that wofull desolation when the walles of Ierusalem (which were the liuely image of the Church) were throwne downe, the Temple raced, good gouernment abolished, and in a word, when all things were out of ioint, and almost brought to vtter confusion: for he promiseth that all the Churches priuiledges shall forthwith be restored to their first perfection.

A right order of discipline described.

Ierusalems walls a liuely image of the Church.

Vers. 17. Thy builders make haste: thy destroyers, and they that haue made thee waste, are departed from thee.

An amplification of the former vers.

HE amplifies that which he touched in briefe in the former verse: for his speech might haue bin esteemed ridiculous & vaine, concerning this continuall care that God hath ouer the Church, and her walles, which he now suffered to be raced to the very foundations. For this cause, I say, he addes an exposition, to wit, that it is ruinated indeed, but ere long it shall be reedified anew.

The right way to re-paire the Churches ruines.

From this word builders, wee may gather wherin the right way of repayring the church consists; namely, if the Lord bee pleased to send forth master Carpenters and Masons to frame it anew. Secondly, in driuing out the destroiers, which build not, but breake downe. For albeit God can build vp his church without the helpe of men, yet is he pleased to vse their labours: and howsoeuer he finisheth the whole building himselfe alone, by the secret worke of his holy Spirit, yet hee blesseth the indeuors of his seruants, that the same should not become altogether vnfruitfull. To him we must pray, and from him alone wee must expect workemen; for hee is able to fit them with gifts and graces, and to appoint out to euery one his taske, as Saint Paul saith, 2. Cor. 3.5. Thus wee are then, not onely to pray that God would send forth labourers into his harueſt, but also that he would furnish them with power and efficacie, that they may not bestow their paines in vaine. Is the doctrine of the Gospell then preached with some fruit? It comes to passe by the singular goodnesse of God. Mat. 9.38.

But this were not enough, vnlesse he therwithall should driue farre off the destroiers: for Satan inuades and assaults the Church by infinit waies: neither wants hee his suppostes and catchpoles, who imploy all their forces either to slake, hinder, or ouerthrow the Lords building: and therefore we ought continually to pray, that God would still defeate all their enterprises. But if that good be not done, which we desire, let vs accuse our selues and our owne ingratitude; for the Lord is readie to bestow his benefits vpon vs in great abundance.

Vers. 18. Lift vp thine eies round about, and behold; all these gather themselues together, and come to thee: As I liue, saith the Lord, thou shalt surely put them all vpon thee as a garment, and gird thy selfe with them like a bride.

The Church is exhorted to behold her glory in the middest of her greatest ruines.

HE awakens the Church by setting her deliuerance before her eies, to the end she might view this so glorious a worke, & might behold the troopes of men which should flow in vnto her on euery side. Now as this gathering together, serued to sustaine the mindes of the faithfull in captiuitie: so was it their duties, who saw it accomplished indeede, to render thanks vnto God. Whence it appeares, that this prophecie was of good vse in both the times; as well whilest their deliuerance was yet hidden vnder hope, as when it was ratified by the effects. And albeit also he speakes to the Church in generall, yet this speech belongs to euery one in particular: that so, all generally, and euery one particularly, might imbrace these promises.

When hee commands them to lift vp their eies, it is to shew, that the cause which mouet vs to faint, is, in that we doe not so diligentlie obserue the work of the Lord as we ought; but suffer our eies to bee couered as it were with a vaile, by reason whereof, wee cannot see three paces before vs. Thence also it comes, comes, that we can hardly conceiue any hope, but are euer and anon plunged into deſpaire, when the leaſt troubles ariſe.

Vſe to vs.

Now if this bee ſaid of the whole Church, let euery man examine his owne heart, and ſee how ſubiect he is to this vice; and let him euer ſtirre vp, yea awaken his ſpirits, to behold the workes of the Lord, and to reſt himſelfe vpon his promiſes with his whole heart.

In that he ſaith, the children of the church ſhall be gathered, the meaning is, to bee one bodie with Chriſt, and as one fold vnder one ſhepheard, we muſt be gathered into one lap of the Church. For Chriſt holds none other to be in the number of his ſheepe, but ſuch as are ioined into one body by the vnitie of one faith: Iohn 10. 16. Whoſoeuer shee would bee accounted among Gods children, let him be a childe of the Church: for as many as are ſeparate from her, ſhall alwaies bee held as ſtrangers before God.

Chriſt holds none for his ſheepe, but ſuch as are made one with him by faith.

As a garment, or, ornament.] The Prophet ſhewes wherein the chiefe ornament of the Church conſiſts; to wit, in hauing many children gathered into her lap by faith, and gouerned by the Spirit of God. Behold the true beautie; behold the glorie of the Church; which otherwiſe is deformed, and ill fauoured, yea torne and rent in pieces, if ſhe be deſtituted of theſe ornaments. Heereby we ſee that the Papiſts haue great skill in diſcerning of the right ornaments of the Church: for they pleaſe themſelues in nothing but crucifixes, paintings, images, ſtately buildings, gold, precious ſtones, and glorious veſtments: that is to ſay, in bables and puppets, fit for little children. But the true dignitie and glorie of the Church is all inward: Pſal. 45. 13. becauſe it conſiſts in the gifts and graces of the holy Ghoſt; in a word, it conſiſts in faith, and in good workes. Whence it followes, that ſhe is then clothed with royall robes, when people being knit together by faith, doe aſſemble into her lap, and worſhip God in ſpirit and in truth.

Wherein the chiefeſt ornament of the Church conſiſts.

With what ornaments the Church of Rome deckes her ſelfe.

Faith and good workes the beauty of the Church.

Now that this promiſe might haue the greater weight, the Lord addes an oath, that he might draw vs to credit the ſame; to the end that when the Church (as we thinke) is at the very pits brinke, we ſhould then wait and expect her reſtauration. Which doctrine, if euer there were neede of it, it is now much more. For whither ſoeuer we turne our eies, what ſee wee elſe but horrible deſolations? What are we to doe then? Let vs deliuer our ſoules from deſpaire, by ſtaying our ſelues vpon this oath, As I liue? And let not our ſmall number diſmay vs, though for that cauſe the world deſpiſeth and diſgraceth vs. No, the Lord, we doubt not, hath his elect ſcattered heere and there, whom at the length he will aſſuredly gather into his Church. Let vs plucke vp our ſpirits then, and lift vp our eies by a true faith, that wee may not onely extend our hopes to one age, but to many.

The vſe to vs.

Verſ. 19. For thy deſolations and waſte places, and thy land deſtroied, ſhall ſurely be now narrow for the that ſhal dwel in it: and they that deuoure thee ſhall be farre away.

HE confirmes that which went before, but in other words; to wit, that the change by him promiſed, is in Gods hand, who will cauſe his Church, which hath a long time lien deſolate and waſte, to be ſuddenly inhabited againe; and that in ſuch wiſe, as the land ſhall not be large enough to containe ſo manie inhabitants. He vſeth a ſimilitude of a Citie broken downe, whoſe walles and buildings are reedified: vnto which alſo the people flow in ſuch troopes, that the bounds thereof muſt be inlarged, becauſe the firſt circuits are too narrow for them all. And thus he not onely ſpeakes of the peoples returne from Babylon, but alſo of that reſtauration wrought by Chriſt, when the Church was not onely ſpread thorowout Iudea, but alſo thorowout all the quarters of the world.

A confirmation of the former ſentence.

Moreouer, he addes that ſuccours ſhall be in a readineſſe to defend the Church againſt her enemies, which would moleſt her with outrages and iniuries. Theſe ſhall not be able to hurt her. Why ſo? God will driue them farre away: not that the Church had euer any perfect reſt in this world, or could be exempt from all violence of enemies: but howſoeuer it be, God, who ſtill ſupports the infirmities of his ſeruants, hath alwaies reſiſted the wicked, repreſſed, or vtterly defeated their plots, that ſo the kingdome of Satan might neuer waxe great by the ruines of the Church.

The Church attaines not a full reſt in this world.

Verſ. 20. The children of thy barrennes ſhall ſay againe in thine eares; The place is ſtrait for mee, giue places to me that I may dwell.

I*Saiah* goes on with the ſame argument, and vnder another figure, promiſeth the Churches reſtauration. Now he compares her to a widow (or rather to a wife) that is barren: to ſet forth the miſerable and deſolate condition of this people, who were oppreſſed vnder ſo many euils, that the memory of that nation was in a maner extinct: for they were mingled among the Chaldeans, who held them priſoners; ſo as they were almoſt incorporated into one body with them. Wee are not to maruell then if he cõpares the church to a barren wife, for that conceiued no more children in her wombe. In former time the Iewes floriſhed; but now their kingdome was torne in ſunder, their power vtterly ouerthrowne, and their name in a manner buried in oblivion, when they were led into captiuitie.

The ſame argument ſtill proſecuted.

Hee promiſeth then that the Church ſhall come forth of theſe ſinkes, and that ſhe who now ſits ſolitarie, ſhall returne to her firſt eſtate. Which is ſignified by the word againe: for thereby he aſſures them, that God was able to render them that againe, which in former time he had beſtowed vpõ them, though now for a season he had depriued them thereof.

Whereas many take children of barrennes for orphelins, me thinks it sutes not with the text, because widowhood and barrennes is referred rather to the person of the Church. And therefore by way of amplification he calles them so, who beyond all hope were giuen to her that was a widow and barren.

Giue place:] That is to say, for my sake giue way. Not that it is seemely for the faithfull to driue their brethren out of ỹ place wherein they dwell: but the Prophet borrowed a phrase of speech which is commonly vsed, to signifie, that no incõmoditie whatsoeuer shall hinder many from desiring to be receiued, and that place may be giuen them. This came to passe when the Lord gathered an infinite number of soules from all parts of the world. For in a moment, and aboue mans reason the Church which was emptie before, was repleniſhed: her bounds were enlarged, and extended farre and neere.

Vers. 21. Then shalt thou say in thine heart, Who hath begotten me these, seeing I am barren and desolate, a captiue, and a wanderer to and fro? And who hath nourished them? Behold, I was left alone: Whence are these?

The Church brought in, admiring her extraordinarie exaltation,

BY these words he shewes, that the restauration of the Church whereof he now speakes, shall be admirable: and therefore he brings her in wondring, yea astonished, that she is exalted by so extraordinarie and vnexpected a maner. And to say the truth, this is no superfluous description. For the children of God, and of the Church, are not made new creatures by the will of flesh and blood, but by the secret vertue of the holy Ghost; neither are they borne into this world as we see men dayly haue a new of-spring to repleniſh common-wealths, for naturallie we haue no part in the kingdome of God. If any mah then will but consider of this new and vnaccustomed change, and then by what meanes the Church was multiplied and nourished a lõg time in her poore estate, he shall be constreined to admire and wonder thereat.

Now he shewes that this shall be no fained admiratiõ, in which arte flatterers haue great skill, but it shall proceed from a true affection of the heart. Why so? Because there shall be iust occasion to wonder, in regard the Lord hath so long, and in so many dangers not only preserued his Church, but hath made it multiplie into a new generation vnhoped for. For who would haue imagined that when the Iewes were in the most contemptible condition that might be, couered ouer as it were with miseries and reproches, that any one of the Gentiles would haue desired fellowship with such? Moreouer, there was no likelihood that mens minds could fetle so sudden an alteration as to ioine themselues to such a religion as themselues both hated, and despised before: nay more then that, the wall of separation then stood, which shut out all strangers and vncircumcised ones from entring into the Church of God.

But he addes the reason of so great an astoniſhment, to wit, that she was barren before, and therefore was vtterlie destituted of children. For the word of God which is the spirituall seed wherewith the children of the Church were begotten, ceased: the sacrifices also were broken off: in a word, whatsoeuer serued to maintaine a state in perfection, was abeliſhed.

Besides, the Church is called barren, not because God euer forsakes her, but in regard his gracious presence doth not alwaies appeare. We saw a wofull spectacle of this barrennes when the Lord to puniſh mens ingratitude tooke from vs his blessed truth, and suffred vs to walke and erre in darknes, then we might well say that shee was a widow and barren indeed, when she was left quite destitute of children. Hence also we may perceiue how fooliſh the Papists are, in that they will alwaies haue Christ so to dispose of his Church, that she must neuer know the state of widowhood nor barrennes. For howsoeuer the Lord at no time vtterlie reiects his Church, yet he often withdrawes from her the signes of his presence, because of the worlds vnthankfulnes.

A wofull spectacle of the Churches barrennes seene in our times.

Who hath nourished these?] Those who are baniſhed and often remoue their habitation can not well nouriſh nor bring vp children: So, when the law and doctrine of godlines sounds no more in the Temples, spirituall nouriſhment must needs faile. But the Lord who stands in no need of humane helps, begets vnto himselfe children after an extraordinarie maner, by the incredible vertue of his holy Spirit, and these he nouriſheth, how, and in what place it pleaseth him. Now to accompliſh this propheſie, he hath contrarie to all hope, raised vp nurses, so as the Church admires not without cause at the fostering and bringing vp of her children.

Vse.

When we reade this propheſie we are admoniſhed not to vex our selues aboue measure if at any time we see the Church left like a widow. Neither so farre to giue way to distrust, as to thinke that God who is all sufficient, can not in a moment renue and restore her to a perfect estate, though for the present we see no likelihood nor appearance at all of it.

Vers. 22. Thus saith the Lord, Behold I will lift vp mine hand to the Gentiles, and set vp my standard to the people, and they shall bring thy sonnes in their armes: and thy daughters shall be carried vpon their shoulders.

A confirmation added to the Churches admiration.

I Saiah cõfirmes that which he said erewhile, to wit, that ỹ Lord would cause the Church which a long time was a widow and barren, to bring forth an innumerable of-spring, so as her selfe should be constrained to admire at her owne fruitfulnes. And this he doth to remoue all scruples and doubtings, which peraduenture might arise in their minds. But the the Lord pronounceth, that he will not only giue children to his Church among the Iewes (as in former time) but among the Gentiles alſo: and yet he ſhewes, that this generation ſhal be ſpirituall, to wit, by the grace of adoption. To which purpoſe appertaines the ſimilitude of the ſtandard, for thereby he incourageth the faithfull to hope for a new kinde of generation, far different from that which we ſee in the common courſe of nature. It was neceſſarie then that the Lord ſhould ſet vp his ſtandard, and to diſcouer his ſecret power by the preaching of the Goſpell, that among ſo many ſorts of languages and differing diſpoſitions, he might bring children to the Church, and to be made one with her in the ſame faith, euen as brethren gather together into the lap of their mother.

The preaching of the Goſpell, and the efficacie of the holy Ghoſt muſt goe together.

Thoſe are deceiued who by the metaphor of the hand, and ſtandard, thinke the preaching of the Goſpell is only ſignified, ſeparating it from the efficacie of the holy Ghoſt, for both muſt be conioined together. The vertue of the holy Ghoſt muſt in no wiſe be ſeparated (I ſay) from the preaching of the Goſpell, witneſ 2.Cor.3.6. We muſt run therefore to this 1 hand of God, and to this ſtandard, when we ſee 2 the Church oppreſſed vnder the tyrannie of the wicked. For albeit they be euer plotting all ſorts of miſchiefe vtterlie to ouerturne it, yet is Gods hand ſtronger then all, and men Iob.9.4. in the end ſhall gaine nothing by reſiſting him, for at laſt he wil ſubdue and bring down their rebellion, that his Church may haue ſome breathing time in deſpite of them all. In that he promiſeth the childrē of ỹ Church ſhall be brought in betweene the armes, and vpon the ſhoulders, it is a figuratiue maner of ſpeech, in which he would ſignifie that God will no way be hindred, when he meanes to gather his Church from the ſcattering, wherin he ſhal find her, becauſe all the Gentiles ſhal help him. And howſoeuer this be in the firſt place to the baniſhed and diſperſed Iewes, yet no doubt it is to be extended vnto all Gods elect in all places, who are, or ſhall be receiued in, to participate of the ſame grace.

Verſ. 23. And Kings ſhall be thy nurſing fathers, and Queenes ſhall be thy nurſes: they ſhall worſhip thee with their faces towards the earth, and lick vp the duſt of thy feet: and thou ſhalt know that I am the Lord: for * they ſhall not be aſhamed that wait for me.

* Or, all.

HAuing ſpoken of the obedience of the Gentiles, he ſhewes, that it not only appertaines to the common people, but euen to Kings alſo, whom he compares to foſterfathers, who bring vp other mens childrē, and Queens to milch nurſes, which are hired forth for that purpoſe. Why ſo? Becauſe Kings and Queenes ſhall furniſh ỹ Church with all things neceſſarie for her children. For whereas before they baniſhed Chriſt out of all their coaſts, now they ſhall from henceforth acknowledge him for their ſouereigne King, and ſhall yeeld him honor, homage, and ſeruice. And all this came to paſſe after God manifeſted himſelfe to all the world by his Goſpel, for the great Kings and Princes therof not only ſubmitted themſelues vnder the yoke of Chriſt, but alſo imployed their wealth & riches to reſtore & maintaine the Church, ſo as they became the protectors and defenders of it.

Whence we note, that a ſpeciall and particular dutie is heere required of Princes, beſides their ordinarie profeſſion of the Chriſtian faith. Why ſo? Becauſe the Lord hath clothed them with power and authoritie, to the end they ſhould prouide for the Churches good, and alſo procure the glorie of God. I grant this dutie belongs to euery one, but by how much the greater power Princes are indued withall, the more carefull ſhould they be to imploy their ſtudies and paines about theſe things. That is the cauſe why Dauid expreſly names them, and exhorts them to be wiſe, to ſerue the Lord with feare, and to kiſſe his Sonne, Pſal.2.10.11. Hence alſo we may diſcerne of their follie and madnes, who affirme that Kings can be no Chriſtians vnleſſe they giue ouer this office and dignitie. For this was accompliſhed vnder the kingdome of Chriſt, when Kings being conuerted vnto God by the preaching of the Goſpell, came to this hie degree and dignitie, which far ſurmount all ſorts of rule and principalities, to wit, to be the nurſing fathers, and defendors of the Church.

A ſpeciall and particular dutie required heere in Kings and Princes.

The follie of ſuch as affirme that Kings can be no Chriſtians vnleſſe they giue ouer their dignities.

The Papiſts thinke none can be right nurſing fathers to the Church vnleſſe they leaue vnto Prieſts, Monks, and idle bellies, great reuenues, large poſſeſſions, & fat prebendaries, to fatten them vp as ſwine in a ſtie. But this nouriſhment tends to a far other end, then to cramme and ſtuffe the guts of ſuch a companie of inſaciable gulphs. For the queſtion is not here touching the inriching of their houſes, who vnder a fained pretence of holines will needs be taken for the Miniſters of the Church (who haue bin the only poyſoners and corrupters of the Church of God, with the deadly venome of the whores cup) but rather to roote out Superſtitions, and vtterlie to ouerthrow all Idolatrie, to aduance the kingdome of Chriſt, to conſerue the puritie of doctrine, to remoue ſcandalles and offences, and to purge out the filthie dregges of falſe doctrine, whereby the wholeſome doctrine of God is corrupted, and whereby his glorie is darkned and obſcured.

After what maner Kings ought to be nurſing fathers to the Church.

1
2
3
4
5

When Kings haue taken order for theſe things, then are they alſo to furniſh the Paſtors and Miniſters of the word with all things neceſſarie, let them relieue the poore, and looke that the Church ſuſteine not by their negligence beggerie, or vndecent wants. Then let them erect Schooles, and endow them with ſufficient pentions for the teachers: let them foſter and cheriſh Studients, let them build Hoſpitals for the aged and diſeaſed, and performe other offices which ſerue for the maintenance and conſer-

Paſtors.

The poore Schooles erected and endowed with ſufficient penſions.

Building of Hoſpitals.

conſeruation of the Church. But theſe exceſſiue expences ſuperfluouſlie beſtowed towards the founding of Maſſes and Oratories, and imploied for the making of veſſels of gold and ſiluer, rich & gorgeous veſtments, in which Papiſts glory and brag; only ſerues for a pompe and ambition to corrupt the pure and ſincere nouriſhment of the Church; yea, to choke and extinguiſh Gods ſeede, which is the onely food by which the Church liues.

If Kings in ſtead of nurcing fathers to the Church, become tormenters of her, it is the iuſt reward of our ſins.

Now when we ſee things otherwiſe carried at this day; to wit, that Kings in ſtead of nurcing fathers to the Church, become tormentors & deſtroiers of the Church, that the true doctrine is reiected, the faithfull Miniſters baniſhed, and that greaſie idle paunches, inſatiable gulfes, and ſuppoſts of Satan are put in their roomes, (for to ſuch, Princes diſtribute their riches: that is to ſay, the blood of the people which they haue ſucked) when alſo thoſe Princes, who otherwiſe being faithfull, yet wanting power, and therefore hauing little or no courage to defend the word, or to maintaine the church. Let vs acknowledge that this is the iuſt reward of our iniquities, and let vs confeſſe that wee be vnworthy to inioy ſuch good nurcing fathers. Notwithſtanding after theſe ſo horrible ruines, wee muſt be euer waiting and looking for the reſtauration of the Church; and for ſuch a conuerſion of Kings, as that they ſhall ſhew themſelues fathers and protectors of the faithfull, and ſuch as ſhall conſtantly vphold the doctrine of the word in their dominions.

They ſhall licke the duſt of thy feete.] The Papiſts in like manner offer violence to this place, to eſtabliſh the tyrannie of their Idoll: as if forſooth, Kings and Princes could not otherwiſe ſhew themſelues the true and lawfull ſeruants of God, vnleſſe in his ſtead they ſhould fall downe at the feete of their diſguiſed head of the Church. This they account a teſtimonie of great ſeruice done to God, when they will abaſe themſelues to kiſſe his feete with great reuerence. But firſt of all, if they will know what an opinion we ought to conceiue of ſuch an idolatrous and barbarous reuerence, let them learne it from Saint Peter, whoſe ſeat they brag to hold: for hee would not ſuffer Cornelius the Centurion to doe him ſuch reuerence: Act. 10. 26. Let them alſo learne it from Saint Paul, what to doe in this caſe, who rent his garments, and reiected this honour with great deteſtation: Act. 14. 14. Is any thing more abſurd then to ſay that the Sonne of God, in ſtead of ordaining a Miniſter of the Goſpell, ſhould conſecrate a prophane King, exerciſing a Perſian-like, pompous ſtate, vtterly inſupportable? But let vs remember that whileſt the Church is a pilgrime in this world, that ſhee may bee humbled, and that ſhee may bee conformed to Chriſt her head, ſhee is ſubiect to the croſſe. And if her enemies giue her any reſt, yet you ſhall perceiue that her cheefeſt glory and beautie conſiſts in modeſtie. Whence it followes, that ſhee is ſtripped of her ornaments, when ſhee is decked with a prophane arrogancie.

S. Peter.

S. Paul.

The Pope a prophane King.

The Churches cheefeſt glory conſiſts in humilitie.

The Prophet then by theſe words vnderſtands nothing elſe but that adoration by which Princes humble themſelues before God, and that obedience which they yeeld to his word in the Church: for we muſt carefully beare in mind what hath been ſaid before; to wit, that the honour which is done to the Church, muſt neuer be ſeparated from her head. For this honour and ſeruice appertaines vnto Chriſt: and if it be in any ſort attributed to the Church, it is in ſuch wiſe, that it alwaies remaines intirely to her onely head. Adde alſo that Kings doe not ſubmit themſelues to the true religion, that they ſhould beare the yoke of men, but that they might ſubmit themſelues to the doctrine of Chriſt. Who euer he be then that reiects the Miniſters of the church, and refuſeth to beare the yoke which God impoſeth vpon all his ſeruants by her hand: ſuch a one hath no communion with Chriſt, neither can hee be the child of God.

The honour done to the church, muſt neuer be ſeparated from her head.

Hee is no child of God, that will not beare the yoke which he impoſeth vpon him by the Churches hand.

For thoſe that wait for me, &c.] I take the word Aſcher, for a particle of rendring a reaſon: for the words runne on ſo in a line, that thoſe who diuide them, doe much darken the Prophets meaning. For by this argument, he proues that it is good reaſon Kings and Princes ſhould cheereſully bow vnder Gods gouernment, and need neuer be ſquemiſh to humble themſelues before the Church; becauſe God will not permit any that wait for him, to be aſhamed. As if he ſhould ſay; This ſhall be no ſlauiſh, but an honourable and an amiable ſubiection.

No ſlauiſh, but an honorable ſubiection, to humble our ſelues before the Church.

Now he ioines his truth with our ſaluation: as if he ſhould ſay; Let me be held neither for God, nor true of my word, if I accompliſh not that which I haue promiſed. Hence we gather an ineſtimable fruit. For as it is impoſſible that God ſhould lie or repent, ſo is it neceſſarie that the ſtablenes of our ſaluation, which the Prophet drawes from the truth of God himſelfe, ſhould euer remaine ſtedfaſt, without being moued or ſhaken.

Verſ. 24. Shall the pray be taken from the mightie? O the iuſt captiuitie deliuered?

25. But thus ſaith the Lord; Euen the captiuitie of the mightie ſhall bee taken away, and the pray of the tyrant ſhall be deliuered: for I will contend with him that contendeth with thee, and I will ſaue thy children.

HAuing anſwered an obiection in the former verſe, which might ariſe in the minds of the faithfull: now hee confirmes this ſolution yet better. For it ſeemed a thing incredible that the Iewes ſhould euer be deliuered from vnder the hands of ſo mightie an enemie, who held them priſoners by the law of armes, and had iuſtly ſubdued them vnder bondage. He addes this interrogation then (as it were) in the perſon of all the common people, who, as it is likely, had this ſpeech rife in their mouthes: to which he makes anſwer, as wee ſhall ſhall ſee anon. But firſt we muſt obſerue the ſimilitude, in that the Church is called the pray of the mightie, and the iuſt captiuitie: that is to ſay, lawfull. For he is called a iuſt poſſeſſor, which hath gotten it lawfully: as in a iuſt war, he that takes the ſpoile, is the iuſt poſſeſſor of it. Such was the condition of this ancient people, whileſt they were in exile; for they loſt both their Countrie and libertie together, and the vanquiſhers vvill onelie was a law?

Godteſtifieth in theſe verſes, that he will oppoſe his power againſt the power of ſuch as tyrannize ouer his Church, be they viſible or inuiſible aduerſaries.

But yet we are diligently to obſerue this ſimilitude; to wit, that the Church ſhould be oppreſſed by the tyrannie of Princes, & made a pray to the throte of wolues: and yet notwithſtanding ſhee ſhould be eſteemed good purchaſe, yea eſteemed a iuſt captiuitie. What is more vniuſt? But thus were our fathers handled: and are we better or more worthy then they? But let them boaſt as long as they liſt of their iuſt captiuitie, and let them glory at their pleaſure in this vaine title, the Lord pronounceth them abominable (cut-throtes) and theeues, in affirming that he will bee auenged of them, and plucke the pray out of their teeth, for God vſeth not to ouerthrow iuſt poſſeſſors. Whence it followes, that the dominion which they vſurped ouer Gods people, was an vniuſt tyrannie, and plaine robberie. Neither could their weapons nor munitions hinder the Lord from taking from them, that which they vnlawfully detained.

And this promiſe ſtands in force not onely againſt tyrants, and viſible enemies, but alſo againſt the tyranny of Satan, from which we are now deliuered by the admirable power of God. I grant, Satan is a powerfull aduerſarie; but the Lord, which is ſtronger then he, will bind him, and take away his weapons, and caſt downe his ſtrong holds, that he may reſtore vs vnto liberty: Mat.12.29. Haue wee tried the power of God then in this behalfe? The greater reaſon haue we to relie vpon his deliuerance ſtill, as oft as our enemies tread vs vnder their feete, and tyrannize ouer vs with cruelties. 2.Cor.1.10.

Now when he ſaith, he will contend for our ſakes: firſt, he therein brings vs to the conſideration of his power, that wee ſhould not iudge of things either by common reaſon, nor yet by the ſtrength of mans arme. Wee muſt not look then vpon that which we are able to doe, or to the meanes which we haue in a readineſſe; but commit the whole ſum of our affaires vnto the good will of God, who vouchſafes both to care for vs, and to defend vs. And not onely ſo, but aſſures vs that he is furniſhed with ſtrong arguments, to anſwer all the ſlanders of our aduerſaries. For we haue ſaid a little before, that the wicked doe not onely aduance themſelues, by violence and crueltie againſt the Church; but do alſo lode her with infinit ſlaunders, as if they had iuſt occaſion giuen them to tyrannize ouer her.

Is not this conſolation more then needefull then; to wit, that God will maintaine our innocencie, and by his allegations, will cauſe the vaine pretext to vaniſh, which may anie way ſerue to augment the crueltie and impudencie of the godleſſe? Therefore it is that hee addes once more, And I vvill ſaue. Heere then you ſee wee haue a ſingular conſolation, knowing that we are made one with the Lord in ſo faſt a couenant, that hee oppoſeth himſelfe againſt all thoſe that contend with vs. So as he will bleſſe thoſe that bleſſe vs; and on the contrary, will curſe thoſe that curſe vs: in a word, hee teſtifies that he is an enemie to our enemies. From this word ſaue, we muſt alſo note, that whē we are ſet free from bondage, and defended againſt the furie of our enemies, or ſaue; hat we impute not theſe things to the worke of fleſh & blood: leſt any ſhould aſcribe that to his owne induſtry, which God commands vs wholly to expect and vvait for onely from himſelfe, in regard it is a ſingular benefit that proceeds from his hand. See Chap. 26.12.

Verſ. 26. And I will feed them that ſpoile thee with their owne fleſh, and they ſhall be drunken with their owne blood, as with ſweet wine: and all fleſh ſhall know that I the Lord am thy ſauiour, and thy redeemer, the mighty one of Iakob.

IN the firſt place hee ſhewes what ſhall become of the enemies of Gods Church, threatning that the time wil ſhortly approch, in which they being enraged and ſet on fire vvith hearts burnings one againſt another, ſhall at laſt butcher one another. Truly is is the Lord which depriues them of reaſon, and plungeth them into frenzies, and that in ſuch wiſe, that they bend againſt themſelues the very weapons, which in times paſt they had drawne forth to maſſacre the Church withall. And thus they turne their ſwords points one againſt another, till they haue ſought their owne vtter ruine, as the Madianites did: Iudg.7.22. The ſumme of all is, that the Church ſhall haue no need of mans helpe, nor of any preparation at all, when God is minded to confound and bring the wicked to nought: for hauing firſt ſmitten them vvith giddineſſe, they ſhall fall to eat and deuoure one another, being ſet on fire with the furies of hell, euery one againſt his fellow. The chu ches enemies ſhall at length turne their ſwords points againſt themſelues, which they drew forth to maſſacre her withall.

And all fleſh ſhall know.] Hee repeates the ſame thing which wee haue ſeene in verſe 23. namely, that the time ſhall come, in which the God of Iſraal ſhall be acknowledged of all, the true and onely God: becauſe he hath ſaued his people from deſtruction. For he would haue this to be noted as a ſpeciall teſtimonie of his Diuinitie, when hee appeared in all mens ſight the ſauiour and redeemer of his people. Some reade the name of Iakob in the vocatiue caſe: but I expond it in the genitiue. For the Lord ſhews that he is the ſauiour, redeemer, and the mightie one of Iakob; that his people might learne to reſt themſelues ſecurely vnder his ſauegard and protection.

CHAP.

THE L. CHAPTER.

Vers. 1. Thus saith the Lord; Where is that bill of your mothers diuorcement, whom I haue cast off? or who is the creditor to whom I sold you? Behold, for your iniquities are you sold; and because of your transgressions is your mother forsaken.

The Lord proues the lawfulnes of the Churches diuorce, vnder two similitudes.

THis place is diuersly expounded: but very few haue attained ỳ Prophets meaning. To the end wee may haue the sum briefly, we must note this coniunction, whereby the Lord in manie places testifies, that his people are obliged and bound vnto him: namely, that he is as it were our husband, and we his wife: for it is a spirituall mariage consecrated by his eternall word, and sealed vp with the blood of Iesus Christ. As he then for his part receiues vs into his protection as his beloued wife, vpon condition that wee keepe faith and loyaltie towards him: so when we play false with him, he reiects vs; and then it is rightly said, that he puts vs away: euen as if a husband should banish an adulterous wife his house. Now, because wee could not easilie conceiue the reason why God should reiect the Iews which were pressed vnder so many and great calamities, it was necessarie she should here come to manifest the cause of this diuorce. But for as much as we are ordinarily too eloquent in couering of our owne faults, and striue to lay all the blame where we should not; that is to say, vpon God himselfe: so the Iewes also then murmured at their estate, as if the Lord had done them wrong so to reiect them. Why so? Because they could not bee brought to acknowledge that the promises were made vneffectual, and the couenant abolished by their leaud behauiour. At least they could not be drawne to make this confession, but with much adoe: for they posted ouer their fault to their predecessors, as if they forsooth had borne the punishment of their offences. From thence proceeded those complaints recited by Ezekiel; Our fathers haue eaten sower grapes, and our teeth are set on edge: Ezek. 18.2. Now because such prouerbs at that time went currant among them, the Lord bids them bring forth that lesse of diuorce, by which they might iustifie their owne innocencie, and proue that God had vniustly put them away.

Our spiritual mariage with God consecrated by his word, and sealed vp by the blood of Christ.

The first Simile.

It was the custome then to giue a woman vniustlie diuorced, a letter in her hand: for thereby her husband was constrained to testifie, that his wife had liued chastly and honestly with him: that all might know that she was not put away for her owne fault, but because she pleased not her husband. And thus the wife was set at libertie, and her innocencie approued; and the fault was laid onelie vpon the husband, to whose discontented mind the cause of this rent was imputed. Moses ordained this law, Deut. 24.1. in regard of the peoples hardnesse of heart, as witnesseth our Lord Iesus Christ, Mat. 19.7. The Lord by a very fit similitude then shewes, that hee is not the author of this diuorce, but that the people put away themselues by their owne fault, and so pursued their lusts, that they vtterly dissolued the mariage knot. This is the cause why he asks for this lesse, whereof they boasted so much: for there is great weight in ỳ pronoune demonstratiue shas; by which the Prophet meant to tax their vaine excuses. As if hee should; You haue skill to put the fault farre enough from you, and to reproch the Lord; you haue your defences in your hands readie to shew; and yet in the meane while your selues haue violated the faith of mariage; neither are you able to alleadge any iust matter for your selues, whereby to disproue the lawfulnesse of your diuorce.

Where is the creditor? Heere hee sets forth the same thing by another similitude: when any was so farre indebted, that hee could not satisfie his creditors, hee was constrained to giue his children in paiment. The Lord now askes if hee were forced to doe this; to wit, whether hee hath sold or giuen them to pay his creditors; or whether he was like to those vnthrifts, who fondly waste their substance: or to those housholders, who suffer themselues to runne ouer shooes in debt. As if he should say, I am sure you are notable to charge mee with any such matter. And therefore it is euident to all, that you haue been sold & brought into bondage for your iniquities. And thus the Lord maintaines his owne iustice against all false imputations; which by this second member hee thus repulseth, in regard the Iewes were sold and put away by their owne fault.

The second Simile.

Saint Paul vseth the same similitude when he saith, We are sold vnder sinne: Rom. 7.14. but in a diuers sense. Besides, the Hebrues are wont thus to speake of wicked ones, who giue ouer themselues to commit sinne with a reprobate mind. But heere the Prophet onely meant to conuince the Iewes, in regard that by their owne offences, they had wittingly pulled all the euils they sustained vpō themselues. If any aske; but can the Lord reiect his heritage? Can hee disanull or breake his couenant? No verily; but it is said hee forsakes and prophanes his heritage: as in Psal. 89, Ezech. 24. because we can iudge no otherwise of it by outward appearance. For in that he bare not that affection towards them hee was wont, it was a kinde of diuorce or reiection, iection. To be ſhort, we muſt note theſe oppoſitions, either that the wuiſe is diuorced by the husbands fault, or becauſe her ſelfe is a ſhameleſſe harlot. Againe, that the children are ſold, either by reaſon of their fathers pouertie, or for their owne vnthriftineſſe. And thus the context of this text will be eaſily vnderſtood.

1. Kin. 21.25

1 2

Verſ. 2. Wherefore came I, and there was no man? I called, and none anſwered: is mine hand ſo ſhortened that it can not help? or haue I no power to deliuer? Behold, at my rebuke I drie vp the ſea: I make the floods deſert: their fiſh rotteth for want of water, and dieth for thirſt.

IT may be the Prophet renders a reaſon heere why the people hauing prouoked the holy one of Iſrael to anger, hath not only pulled vpon themſelues a ſea of euils, but are alſo worthely cut off by their owne obſtinacie from all hope of pardon and ſaluation. But I rather thinke the Lord proceeds yet further. For hauing ſhewed that he had good cauſe giuen him to reiect this people, who willinglie chooſed rather to liue a ſeruile life then to be free, he addes, that it is none of his fault that they were not forthwith deliuered. And as in the former verſe he ſhewed that the fault whollie reſted in the Iewes, ſo heere he proues that their owne malice was the cauſe why they grew old and putrified in their miſeries, for there wanted neither will nor power in the Lord to haue holpen them if they had not ſtubbornly refuſed his grace and liberalitie. To ſhut it vp in a word, Iſaiah ſhews, that both their entrance, and continuance in this calamitie came only from their owne fault, that he might free God from blame: and ſignifies, that the Iewes did wickedlie when they accuſed him to be the author of their miſeries; or in complaining, that he came not ſoone enough to their ſuccor.

The Lord proceeds on in proouing his plea to be iuſt.

Firſt then the Lord ſaith, that he came. But to what end? To reach the Iewes his hand. Whence it followeth, that they are iuſtlie deſtitute of help, in regard they deſpiſed his fauor. Now the Lord comes, when he giues vs any ſignes of his preſence. He comes by the preaching of his word, and by the ſundrie benefits which he beſtowes vpon vs: as alſo, by the many teſtimonies which he vſeth to manifeſt the fatherly loue and good will he beares vs. Was there euer any people, ſaith Moſes, that ſaw ſuch ſignes and wonders as thou haſt done, or that hath heard the voice of God ſpeaking out of the middes of a fire, and liue? Deut.4.33.34. Seeing ſuch a dayly ſummons ſerued to no purpoſe; and that in ſetting hope of mercie before thé, he ſought to draw them to repentance, doth he not iuſtlie cõplaine as of a prodigious thing, that they would not come forth to meet him? They are cõuinced of ingratitude then, that whereas they ought to haue ſought vnto God, they would not vouchſafe to meet him. For what a vile vnthankfulnes is it, not to receiue that grace which is freely offred?

1 2

In that he ſaith, I called, he repeates the ſame thing in diuers words. When God calles vs we ought to giue eare, and to offer our readie and willing obedience. For this is the anſwer (which he complaines is not giuen him) to wit, that we ſubmit not our ſelues whollie vnder his command. But this word ſutes very well heere to the circumſtance of this place, in that they wilfullie deſpiſed God, who offred them preſent deliuerance out of their troubles. It auailed him no more to ſpeake vnto them therefore, then if he had ſpoken to ſo many deafe and dumb men. Thence he concludes, that their deliuerance was deferred only in reſpect of their owne backwardnes, which he confirmes vnto them by former teſtimonies, in that he had in former time manifeſted to their fathers the ſufficiencie of his power.

Now leſt they ſhould cauill and excuſe themſelues in affirming that they were not ſaued, though they deſired it: God on the contrarie affirmes, that they muſt ſeeke the cauſe of ſuch a change ellewhere then in him. For ſure it is, his power was not diminiſhed. He would not haue bin ſlack in reaching out his hand to them in their affliction, if they had not obſtinately reiected his offer.

Now by this Interrogation, he expreſſeth the equitie of his cauſe, as one that maintained a thing cleare and manifeſt. For who dares obiect that his power is leſſened? And to that end he puts them in mind of that power of his, by vvhich he brought them out of Egypt, leſt they ſhould imagin ỹ ſame were now diminiſhed, but might rather acknowledge that their vices ſtopped the courſe of this power, that it could not now manifeſt it ſelfe. At his rebuke he ſaith the ſea is dried vp, as if he had terrified it, in rebuking of it. For by his commandement the waters parted in twaine to giue his people paſſage, Exod.14.21. And Iordain fled back, Ioſh.3.16. Pſal.114.5. ſo as the fiſhes being deſtitute of water, died and rotted.

Verſ. 3. I clothe the heauens with darknes, and make a ſack their couering.

HE alſo mentions the thick darknes which was ſpread ouer the whole land of Egypt for the ſpace of three daies, Exod.10.21. for then the heauens were in a maner clothed vvith mourning vveeds, becauſe as a faire and cleare day glads our hearts, ſo a darke and gloomie day brings ſadnes & heauines with it. Therefore it is ſaid that the heauens vvere couered vvith a ſack, or with a mourning garment, as ſignes and teſtimonies of affliction. And if any had rather take them for generall ſentences, he may do ſo if he will. But as I thinke the Prophet hath reſpect to the hiſtorie touching their deliuerance out of Egypt. From whence they might gather, that God who had deliuered their fathers after ſo wonderfull a maner, was now letted from ſuccoring thé in the miſeries which oppreſſed them, by reaſon of their owne vnthankfulnes.

It was not for want of power in God that he ſuccored not the Iewes: but it reſted whollie in their owne vnthankfulnes.

Verſ. 4. The Lord hath giuen mee a tongue of the learned, that I ſhould know how to miniſter a word in due ſeaſon to him that is wearie: he will raiſe me vp in the morning; in the morning hee will awaken mine eare to heare, as the learned.

After a double reprehenſion, he addes a conſolation.

HAuing twice conuinced the people of ingratitude; now, according to his cuſtome, he addes a conſolation: for the Lord ſo ſhames vs, that he forthwith mindes to free vs from ſhame and confuſion. Albeit then vpon good grounds hee hath proued, that the people were iuſtly reiected, and periſhed by their owne deſerts; yea, and had made themſelues vtterly vnworthy of deliuerance: notwithſtanding all this, hee promiſeth them helpe and ſuccour. Now becauſe in a matter ſo difficult, there was need of more then ordinarie authoritie, the Prophet ſaith, that God ſent him, and fitted him with abilitie to execute that which was inioined by him. All in a manner doe refer this place vnto Chriſt, as if it ſuted not to the Prophets perſon, whē he ſaith he was ſmitten. We reade not indeed that Iſaiah was ſo handled: and yet it followes not therefore that their argument is ſound enough. For Dauid complaines that his garments were diuided; which properly appertained vnto Chriſt: & yet it followes not that the like befell not Dauid. For mine own part, I am out of doubt that Iſaiah brings in himſelfe as one repreſenting the perſon of all Gods ſeruants, as well touching thoſe that were before him, as of thoſe that were to ſucceed him.

Now hee ſaith that the Lord gaue him a tongue, to the end the promiſes, whereby hee ſeekes to cheere vp the peoples hearts, might haue the greater weight: for our faith ſoone begins to wauer, if we once deeme that men ſpeake without warrant. Beſides, the condition of this people was ſo forlorne, that they could not be drawne nor allured by any reaſons that could be alleadged to hope or expect deliuerance. The ſumme is then, that the meſſage of their preſent deliuerance is brought them from heauen: ſo as if any will refuſe to credit it, ſuch a one ſhall ſhew himſelfe no better then a rebell againſt God.

None are fit to teach others, but ſuch as haue firſt been taught of the Lord.

Now howſoeuer the Prophet indeuors to purchaſe authoritie vnto himſelfe in this behalfe: yet hence we may gather in generall, that none are fit to teach, vnleſſe they be firſt taught and inſtructed of the Lord. Thus then all faithful teachers are admoniſhed to craue that of Gods Spirit, which otherwiſe they can neuer haue. I grant they ought to ſtudie diligently, leſt they ſhould get vp into the chaire without ſufficient preparation: but yet we muſt hold this principle, that whatſoeuer ſerues to furniſh them for able Miniſters, muſt be ſo many gifts of the holy Ghoſt. And to ſpeake the truth, what boldneſſe and preſumption is it to repreſent themſelues in the publike aſſemblies in the name of God, if they bee not the organs and inſtruments of the holy Ghoſt.

That I ſhould know.] Somewhat muſt be ſupplied heere (which wee alſo haue done) that is, to miniſter or publiſh. Vnder the word To know he comprehends that wiſdome and dexteritie which a Paſtor of the word ought to haue that meanes to preach the word faithfully and fruitfully. As if he ſhould ſay; I haue been well inſtructed in Gods ſchoole, and therefore I haue attained ſufficient skill to ſpeake a word in due ſeaſon, for their comforts that are loden with the burthen of their ſinnes.

He calles them wearie, who were broken with many afflictions, as wee haue ſeene before. I giue ſtrength to him that is wearie. And Chriſt ſpeakes thus, Mat. 11.28. Come vnto mee all you that are wearie and laden. Thus hee meanes then that God hath inſtructed and taught them, that he might bee fitted to comfort the afflicted with apt and fit words: ſo as the broken hearts might be healed by the ſenſe and feeling of Gods mercie in Chriſt. Hence we gather, that the Miniſters of the word ought chiefly to extend their care ouer ſuch as are in diſtreſſe, and to comfort thoſe that are oppreſſed, and in a manner ouerwhelmed with the weight of their calamities: and then to teach them wherein the true reſt of the ſoule conſiſts: as wee haue ſhewed, Chap. 29 18.22. Moreouer, heere we ſee what euery one of vs ought eſpecially to ſearch after in the holy Scriptures; namelie, how to arme and fit our ſelues with proper and apt ſentences to miniſter conſolation to our owne ſoules in the time of need. He then that ſhall bee able to cheere vp and ſuſtaine his owne ſpirit with ſolid cōfort when things are perplexed; nay, when they ſeeme altogether deſperate: let ſuch a one aſſure himſelfe, that he hath well profited in the Goſpell. I confeſſe the doctrine of the holie Scriptures hath many other vſes. For they not onelie containe in them matter that is meete and profitable to comfort the weak and afflicted, but alſo ſharpe rebukes and threatnings againſt the obſtinate: 2. Tim. 3.16. But Iſaiah heere ſhewes, that his principall charge was, in due ſeaſon, to miniſter or bring a word of comfort to the Iewes, who were now in a maner comfortleſſe.

Chap. 50.29.

Ouer whom the Miniſters ought to extend their chiefeſt cares.

What euery one of vs ought eſpecially to ſeek in the ſcriptures.

2. Tim. 3.16.

He will waken me in the morning.] Heere the Prophet witneſſeth, that the Lord is ſo carefull of the miſerable and oppreſſed, that he will giue them comfort in the morning: that is to ſay, in time conuenient. I grant we are often left deſtitute of conſolation: but howſoeuer the Lord ſuffers vs to languiſh for a time, yet the fit times and ſeaſons are in his owne power, in which hee will preuent our neceſſities by his ſuccours. And if it ſo fall out that he tarry long, let vs impute it to our negligence: for we ſtop and hinder the courſe of his mercies from flowing in vnto vs by our owne ſloth: or rather indeed, by our rebellion. But howeuer it be, yet he watcheth alwaies carefully for our ſaluation, and makes ſpeede to ſuccour vs: nay, whileſt wee flee from him and reſiſt him, he then allures vs to himſelfe, himſelfe, that he might refreſh vs by his loue and fauour.

He repeates the word morning twice, thereby ſignifying a daily continuance: leſt wee ſhould thinke there were any paſſions in him, as there are in men, to reiect & deſpiſe them afterwards, whom hee hath once taken into his cuſtodie. No, contrariwiſe, he makes them alwaies to feele his goodneſſe euen vnto the end, and neuer deſtitutes them of conſolation.

That I may heare as the learned.] His meaning is, that his eare was attent, not like to one that is ignorant, or dull witted, but that hee was fitted and wel inſtructed for the purpoſe. And yet withall hee ſhewes by his example, that God teacheth all ſuch Miniſters as hee ſends forth, for the ſaluation of the Church with efficacie: for it were to ſmall purpoſe for them to be indued with humane learning, vnleſſe therewithall they had the inward teaching of the holy Ghoſt. By this wee ſee yet better, how true that is which wee haue ſaid before; namely, that none proue good teachers, but ſuch as haue firſt been good diſciples. Such the Prophet calles them taught and learned: for thoſe that will not vouchſafe to learne, as thinking that they know enough, are twice mad and fooliſh. For by Gods owne cenſure, none are truly taught and learned, but ſuch as ſuffer themſelues to be taught, before they take vpon them to teach others; that ſo they may haue the certaine knowledge of the things which they meane to teach them. Now to publiſh ought abroad to the world, which they may not with good conſcience proteſt they haue receiued from God. To ſhut vp all in a word; thoſe are learned, vvho in learning dailie diſdaine not to grow ſtill in learning.

He ſhall neuer become a good Doctor in the Church, that hath not firſt been a good diſciple.

Verſ. 5. The Lord God hath opened mine eare, and I was not rebellious; neither turned I backe.

HE repeates that againe which he ſaid before, and heere comprehends whatſoeuer is fitting for the office of a teacher. For the opening of the eare, ought not onely to be referred to doctrine, but to the whole vocation: as firſt, to his entrance: ſecondly, when he that is to bee ſent, receiues his charge, touching all that which he is to performe; to wit, the commandement it ſelfe, and authoritie to execute the ſame. Beſides, the Lord not onely opens the eare, when hee manifeſts his will, but when hee toucheth the mans heart with efficacie, and ſo mooues him, that hee yeeldes him his obedience. As in the fortie Pſalme; Thou haſt pierced mine eare. And Chriſt ſaith; Whoſoeuer hath heard and learned of my Father, hee comes to mee: Iohn 6. 45.

Hitherunto appertaines the ſecond member, where the Prophet ſaith, he was not rebellious. The ſumme is, that hee vndertooke nothing at random; but being well aſſured of the calling of God, hee performed the office of a teacher: notwithſtanding it was heauie and tedious to beare, becauſe he was made fit and willing to obey.

Verſ. 6. I gaue my backe to the ſmiters, and my cheekes to the nippers: I hid not my face from ſhame and ſpitting.

HE oppoſeth the inuincible force wherewith hee is indued, to the reproches, ſcornes, and outrages of the wicked: as if he ſhould ſay; Albeit the contemners of God vſe many deuices, yet will he ouercome all their iniuries: ſo as hee will neuer repent himſelfe of that labour which hee hath taken in hand. Moreouer, this place manifeſtly ſhewes, that the Miniſters of the word cannot faithfullie diſcharge their duties, but they muſt therewithall prepare to buckle againſt the world, yea, to ſuſtaine ſharpe aſſaults on all ſides. For Iſaiah no ſooner affirmes that hee was readie to obey Gods commandement, but by and by he addes, that his perſon was expoſed to the ſmiters. Wherefore the faithfull ſeruants of God cannot auoid this condition, in preaching the word as they ought; but they muſt looke for ſtripes, reproches, hatreds, ſlanders, and diuers aſſaults of the aduerſaries, who repine at the libertie which the true Miniſters of God muſt needes vſe in their reprehenſions and admonitions. Let them arme themſelues therefore with faith and conſtancie: for there is a terrible combat prepared for them.

Miniſters muſt make account to meete with oppoſitions in the diſcharge of their duties.

But he not onely expreſſeth what meaſure the Prophets ſhall haue at the hands of the wicked, but alſo the contempt of the world: for the wicked will haue men ſuppoſe that their cauſe is good and iuſt, euen whileſt they oppreſſe the Miniſters of the Goſpell, and perſecute their doctrine: for they will haue Gods ſeruants reputed as euill doers, that by this meanes they may bring them into diſgrace and hatred. That is the cauſe why they rent and teare them with varietie of falſe imputations, and belch out all the outrage they can. And haue not wee experience hereof at this day? Doe not our aduerſaries load vs with the nickenames of ſeducers, ſeditious, ſchiſmatikes, and heretikes, and diſgorge manie other reproches, wherewith they haue heeretofore taxed Chriſt and his Apoſtles? Iohn. 18. 30.

Now he complaines that he was ſmitten and ſpitted vpō, not only by ſtrangers and open enemies, but he toucheth the wrongs which were done him by thoſe that made ſhew to be of the Church. For it is alwaies ſeene, that out of the lap of the Church there ariſeth wicked contemners of God, who are the ſurlieſt enemies that the Prophets of God haue. Thoſe then who will ſerue God purely, muſt fit themſelues aforehand to beare all theſe things with patience, that ſo they may paſſe as well through good as euill report, 2. Cor. 6. 8. Yea, let them not only deſpiſe bands, tortures, baniſhments, and death, but reproches and ſpittings alſo, though ſometimes theſe things ſeeme harder to beare then death it ſelfe. This doctrine appertaines indeed to all the faithfull, but eſpeciallie to the Miniſters of the word, who ought to be the ringleaders to others, and to be as ſtandard-bearers.

Verſ. 7. For the Lord God wil help me, therefore I ſhall not be confounded: therefore haue I ſet my face as a flint, and I know that I ſhall not be aſhamed.

To thoſe oppoſitions of men, the Prophet ſets the help of God.

HEere the Prophet ſhewes from whence this great magnanimitie proceeds, wherwith he and other the ſeruants of God were indued to ſuſtaine the violence of all commers, namely, the help of God: for by faith therein Iſaiah affirmes, that he hath hardned his face as a flint againſt all the iniuries of the vngodly. Hauing then with a ſtout courage, wherewith he is endued, ſet light by all his aduerſaries, he alſo labors to draw others to the ſame conſtancie with him; and (as in a glaſſe) deſcribes to the life what the ſtate and condition of all Miniſters of the word is, and ſhall be. For thus he would turne them from the loue of the world, that they might giue themſelues whollie vnto God, and to fixe their eies altogether vpon him, for there is no combat ſo ſharp, in which they ſhall not be more then Conquerors vnder the leading of ſuch a Captaine.

By the ſimilitude of a flint, he ſhewes, that come what come will, he will not ſhrinck an inch, for the ſignes of feare and aſtoniſhmẽt, and of all other affections appeare by and by in the face, which plainely vtters to all how matters goe within. When Gods ſeruants are handled thus ſhamefullie, they muſt needs quaile vnder ſo many iniuries, if they had not browes of braſſe and yron to repulſe them. And in this ſenſe it is ſaid, that Ieremiah was ſet as a defenced Citie, and yron pillar, and vvalles of braſſe againſt the Kings of Iudah, againſt the Princes, and againſt all the people, Iere. 1. 18. Ezechiel alſo had his forhead made as hard as the adamant, which is much harder then the flint, that he might not recoile back from the obſtinacie of the people, Ezech. 3 9.

This ſentence, I ſhall not be aſhamed, is not to be taken in the ſame ſenſe with that in the former member: for there it is referred to the affection, and heere to the effect, or the thing it ſelfe. When in the beginning of the verſe then he glories that he ſhall not be confounded becauſe God is on his ſide, it is to ſhew, that it ſufficeth not to know that God will help vs, vnleſſe we alſo feele the ſame by experience. For what profit haue we by his promiſes, vnleſſe wee put our confidence therein? Faith then is required, both to vphold our comfort, and aſſure vs of Gods fauor: but in the end of the verſe the Prophet boldly proteſts, that he is vndoubtedlie perſwaded of an happie iſſue. And thus to be aſhamed, ſignifies to be diſappointed. For they that conceiue a vaine hope, are ſubiect to mocks and reproches. Heere we ſee then that the faithfull teachers and Miniſters of the word haue promiſe of a ſpeciall defence. Let Satan and the world bend their forces together then to aſſaile them with all their power: the more they aſſault them, the ſtronger ſhall Gods defence and protection be ouer vs. Thence we muſt conclude, that all ſuch as are fainthearted and quaile when they come to the triall, were neuer yet well fitted to execute their office. For he that hath not learned to fight, is neither apt to ſerue God nor his Church; neither is he fit to preach the doctrine of the word. 2. Tim. 2. 5.

Verſ. 8. He is neere that iuſtifieth me, Who will contend with me? Let vs ſtand together: Who is mine aduerſarie? Let him come neere to me.

9. Behold, the Lord will help me: who is he that can condemne me? Loe, they ſhall wax old as a garment: the moth ſhall eate them vp.

A Miniſter that hath a good conſcience, may haue alſo great boldnes.

WEE muſt alwaies remember that the Prophet ſpeakes nothing heere that is proper to himſelfe only, but teſtifies what a one God will, and euer ſhall be towards the faithfull Miniſters, that ſo being aſſured of their lawfull calling, and executing their offices faithfullie, they might boldly contemne all aduerſarie power, and neuer ſlack their duties an inch for any ſlanders. Why ſo? Becauſe the Lord who iuſtifies them, hath, and euer will be readie to maintaine and defend his owne truth. Now whoſoeuer he be that will indeed boldly proteſt this, he ought to haue a pure conſcience. For if he haue vnaduiſedly intruded himſelfe, not hauing a ſure teſtimonie of his lawfull calling: or if he be ſuch a one as brocheth his owne dreames and fanſies, in vaine ſhall he boaſt of this promiſe, for it appertaines to none but to ſuch as being called of God, doe faithfullie and purely diſcharge their duties.

Intruders can not challenge to thẽſelues this priuiledge.

Now howſoeuer mockers and deſpiſers of God will neuer ceaſe to make many replies againſt his ſeruants, yet Iſaiah ſtil offers himſelfe to pleade his maſters cauſe, and that as boldly, as if none durſt enter the liſts againſt him, or to forge any ſlanders for their defence. Not that he was able to charme their tongues, but becauſe he was well aſſured they ſhould gaine nothing by all their tattle. Thus then he ſhewes, that notwithſtanding all the falſe imputations which the aduerſaries lay vpon the word and the Miniſters thereof, they muſt not be diſcoraged. For there is no crime with which they doe not charge vs. But all in vaine. Why ſo? Becauſe the Iudge that defends their innocencie is neere. The faithfull Miniſters therefore may (by S. Pauls example) ſummon the falſe and ſiniſter iudgements of men before the Iudgement ſeate of God, who will giue a iuſt ſentence, 1. Cor. 4. 4.

Let vs ſtand together.] The faithfull teachers ought to be ſo confident, as without feare to challenge all their enemies the field. For Satan with all his ſuppoſts dare not at all times ſtand to their tackling openly, but eſpecially when they encounter vs with lies. But they haue haue cloſe and ſecret practiſes, and iugling tricks vnder boord to ſurprize ſuch as ſtand not vpon their watch. Yet the ſeruants of God feare not to ſhew their faces, nor to enter the liſts againſt the aduerſarie: neither are they abaſhed to reaſon and debate the matter, if the enemie dare appeare. For the truth is of ſuch ſtrength, that it flees not the noone day, as we ſee heere, that Iſaiah feares not boldly to egge and prouoke all thoſe to the fight, whom he ſaw to lie in wait to trap him. And here he vrgeth them againe ſaying, Let him come neere me. For the true Paſtors ought to be alwaies readie to yeeld a reaſon of their doctrine. But where is he that vouchſafes to heare them patientlie, or that will conſider what his doctrine is which they preach. I grant the aduerſaries are readie enough to draw neere, but it is only to draw out their ſwords, and to cut the throates of Gods ſeruants, or to whet & file their tongues, that they may be fit to defame them by all ſorts of ſlanders. In a word, their beſt defences conſiſts in fraude, and tyrannie, for with reaſons orderly gathered from the Scriptures, they dare not encounter, we therefore being well aſſured of the equitie of our cauſe, are readie with a chriſtian fortitude to challenge them the field. For though they condemne vs without hearing our defences; yea, and though the numbers of thé be great, which ſubſcribe to their ſayings, yet will we not be outfaced, for God, whoſe cauſe we defend, is the Iudge, who at the laſt will giue ſentence on our ſide.

It ſeemes S. Paul alludes to this place, where he ſaith, It is God that iuſtifies, who ſhall condemne? Rom. 8. 33. For wee may boldly appeale to the Iudgement ſeate of God, when we are clothed with his free righteouſnes in Ieſus Chriſt. But Iſaiah handles another argument heere. For he ſpeakes not now of mans ſaluation in generall, but of the miniſtrie of the word, whereof the Lord will be the protector againſt all the aſſaults of the wicked, neither will he ſuffer his ſeruants to be ouerwhelmed with their falſe packing nor violences. In the end of the verſe he ſhewes that he vaunts not of his fortitude as one out of gunſhot, or as if he meant to fight with his owne ſhadow, but he proteſts that he will keepe his ſtanding in the face of the proudeſt of them all that dare aſſaile him. For whoſoeuer they be that bid battell to Gods word, ſhall but daſh themſelues vpon their owne deſtruction by reaſon of their owne brittlenes, and ſhall forthwith vaniſh to nothing.

Now as if he had had the thing before his eies, he vſeth a particle demonſtratiue, Behold, or loe, they ſhall waxe old as doth a garment, the moth ſhall conſume them. The Pſalmiſt vſeth the like ſimilitude, when he compares the men of this world with the children of God, Pſal. 49. For albeit the worldlings braue it out, and that they ſhine as pretious ſtones, yet ſhall they periſh. But the faithfull who now lie couered with filth and rubbiſh, being once decked with new beautie, ſhall in the end ſhine as the ſtarres. But in this place Iſaiah properly ſpeakes of theſe mad dogs, who hate and barke at the faithfull Miniſters of the word. Now howſoeuer ſuch prophane wretches are in beſt eſteeme with the world, and in great authoritie in the middeſt of thé, yet all their brauadoes ſhall fall and come to nought, euen as the beautie of garments that are defaced by the gnawing of the moth.

Verſ. 10. Who is amongſt you that feareth the Lord? Let him heare the voice of his ſeruant: he that walketh in darknes, and hath no light, let him truſt in the name of the Lord, and ſtay vpon his God.

HAuing ſpoken of the inuincible ſuccors which God giues to all his Prophets, Iſaiah now directs his ſpeech to the faithfull, admoniſhing them to ſuffer themſelues to be gouerned by Gods word, and to yeeld themſelues teachable. Whence wee may gather how farre he inſulted ouer thoſe with an holy pride which were his detractors. For in regard the wicked among the Iewes at that time preuailed, in reſpect of their multitudes, the little flock were in danger to haue their faith extinguiſhed by them. In that he asks where thoſe were that feared the Lord? it is to note out the fewnes of them. And yet he calles thoſe few to take part with him, that they might ſeparate themſelues from that great rout, leſt they ſhould conſent with them in their wicked plots, ſo much condemned of God. As in Chap. 8. Say yee not a conſpiracie, &c. Thus then howſoeuer Gods enemies make a great armie in regard of their multitudes, yet Iſaiah aſſures himſelfe, that there is a remnant left who wil profit by his doctrine. Heere the Prophet turnes his ſpeech to the faithfull.

Now he ſpeakes to ſuch as feare God, for where religion and the feare of God is wanting, there wholeſome doctrine can take no place. We ſee how thoſe who otherwiſe will be taken for great clerks, and ſharp witted, do yet reiect the ſame. Why ſo? Surely thoſe that are ſwollen with pride, and hate modeſtie and all humilitie, proue more then doltiſh when the matter concernes the diſcerning of this wiſdome of God. It is no maruell then that Iſaiah layes this as the foundation, to wit, the feare of the Lord, that ſo the word may in deed be diligentlie and attentiuely receiued and heard. Whence alſo it appeares, that there is no true feare of God where the hearing of his word is contemned. For hypocrites will make great brags of pietie, and the feare of God: but by their contempt of it they plainly manifeſt their rebellion, in that they obſtinately reiect the doctrine of the Goſpell, and all ſound admonitions. Take a ſure triall heere then of ſuch kind of perſons, that ſo you may pluck off their vizard wherewith they would couer their faces.

Let him heare the voice of his ſeruant. He might euen as well haue ſaid the voice of God, but he chooſeth rather to ſay, of his ſeruant. For God will be no otherwiſe heard of vs, but by the voice of his Miniſters, whoſe ſeruice he vſeth for our inſtruction. Iſaiah then ſpeakes firſt of himſelfe, and next of all his fellow brethren, who haue the ſame office of teaching with him. The voice of Gods Miniſters the voice of God.

him. And thus heere is a close opposition betweene the audience which he requires, and that licentious contempt of holy doctrine, which being basely accounted of among the impure, they by their pride drew others, as witlesse and giddie headed as themselues, to the like base estimation of it.

Now because the faithfull might reply, that the fruit of their feare and pietie did not yet appeare, but that they were contrariwise in miserable seruitude, as if they had been wicked liuers; the Prophet meetes with this complaint, and affirmes that the faithfull, who hitherto had been hardlie dealt withall, should not for all that lose their labour, in yeelding obedience to God and his word: for though they haue walked in darknesse, yet they shall at the length inioy the light of Lord.

Darknesse taken for afflictions.

By darknesse the Prophet meanes not ignorance, nor blindnesse of minde, but the afflictions whereby Gods children are in a manner ouerwhelmed. And this is the consolation whereof he spake vers. 4. where hee said, that the tongue of the learned was giuen him, that hee might know how to minister a word in due season to him that was wearie. And he also heere promiseth, that those who hitherto haue been almost drowned in so many calamities, shall be comforted.

Vers. 11. Behold, all you kindle a fire, and are compassed about with sparks: walke in the light of your fire, and in the sparkes that yee haue kindled. This shall yee haue of mine hand, yee shall lie downe in sorrow.

The difference betweene Gods comforts, and those of our owne deuising. Verse 10.

HEe reprocheth the Iewes because they chose rather to make a fire alone by themselues, to walke in the light thereof, then approch to Gods light. This place hath bin ill expounded. And if we would haue the right meaning of it, wee must note the opposition which is betweene Gods light, and mans light: that is to say, between the consolation which the word of God brings, and the vaine comforts of men, who will indeuour to put away their sorrowes, by things ridiculous and of no value. Hauing spoken before then of light and darknesse, and hauing promised light to such as gaue eare to the voice of the Lord; hee now saith, that the Iewes reiected this light, to kindle one of their owne: and in conclusion affirmes; that they shall be consumed as with a fire, by their owne light.

In this sort Christ reprocheth the Iewes, for reioicing in Iohn Baptists light: Iohn 5. 33. Because they abused his person, to darken, nay rather to quench the glory of Christ. For in opposing Iohns person against Christs, to darken his glory: what did they else but put out the light of God, shining in a mortall man, to kindle themselues another? Which yet directed them not to walke in the right way; but made them wander in by-paths, wherein they had small cause to reioice.

In saying that they were compassed about with the sparks, he taxeth their froward imaginations, which harried them to and fro: and therewithall derides their vanitie, in that they ranne swiftlie and with great alacritie, whither soeuer their deceiueable lusts led them.

Walke.] As if he should say; You shall feele by experience how vaine and vanishing your light is, when your vncertaine hopes haue failed you. And thus by this so taunting a permission, hee signifies that they shall both lose their time and their labour. Others expound, that the wicked kindle against themselues, the fire of Gods wrath. But the Prophet hath an higher drift; neither doe I thinke that this exposition agrees to this place.

Of mine hand.] In regard the wicked being beguiled with a false confidence, think themselues vtterly out of danger, and doe boldly contemne all after claps, by trusting in their light; that is to say, in the meanes wherewith they haue furnished themselues: the Lord shewes that they shall lie downe in sorrow, and that this shall proceede from his hand. In a word, that such as forsake the light of Gods word to seeke consolation elsewhere, shall miserably perish.

THE LI. CHAPTER.

Vers. 1. Heare mee yee that follow after righteousnesse, and yee that seeke the Lord: looke vnto the rocke whence yee are hewen, and to the hole of the pit whence ye are digged.

A consolation or exhortation vnto patience.

NOw the Prophet exhorts the Iewes not to faint, though they were few in number: for they were so humbled and diminished, that they seemed neere their vtter ruin: euen as if they had been hopelesse of any posteritie to succeed them. Hee therefore brings them to their originall; to teach them that howsoeuer they were but a small handfull now, yet God was able to increase & multiply them. Then he commands them to looke vnto their father Abraham, who being but one man, yet grew into a great number, and God gaue him children as the starres in the firmament: Gen. 15. 5. (and as the sand vpon the sea shore: Gen. 22. 17.) Thence they might collect, that if God in so small a space was able so admirably to multiply their fathers, he was no lesse powerfull to make them increase heereafter, seeing his power is no whit abated, nor his will changed.

Looke

Looke to the rocke.] Some thinke that Abraham is heere called a rocke, becauſe hee was ſtrong in faith: as Saint Paul ſaith, Rom.4.19. Others alleadge a reaſon cleane contrarie to this ſimilitude: for they thinke Abraham is heere called a rocke or ſtone, becauſe he was vnfit to beget children: and that Sara was called a caue, becauſe ſhe was barren. But all of them, as I take it, are deceiued: for it is a plaine ſimilitude taken from ſtones. He ſaith then, that they were hewen or digged out of Abraham and Sara, as ſtones are hewen or digged out of a rocke or caue. There was exceeding need that the faithfull ſhould be vpheld by this admonition, in the ruine of the whole nation. God had promiſed (as we ſaid before) that Abrahams ſeede ſhould be as the ſtarres, and as the ſand. This promiſe in outward appearance was aboliſhed in the deſtruction of Ieruſalem: for then thoſe that remained, were like a ſmall cluſter of grapes that remaines after the vintage. But in regard they had alreadie prooued how powerfull God was, to create a great people of nothing; the Prophet exhorts them to hope well ſtill, that they may not bee taxed of vnthankfulneſſe towards God. And thus hee directs his ſpeech properly to the faithfull, who had much adoe to ſuſtaine ſo ſharpe temptations: for hee ſpeakes not to all in generall, but to thoſe only that reſted vpon the promiſes, whom he calles followers of righteouſneſſe.

Gen.15.5. & 22.17.

The Prophets alwaies make a diſtinction betweene the faithfull and the hypocrites.

The Country was filled with vnbeleeuers and hypocrites, who had for a long time been apoſtataes from the exerciſe of pietie: the more praiſe thoſe deſerued then, who conſtantly followed a godly and a ſincere courſe. Where there is a deſire of righteouſneſſe, there God hath audience: but where infidelitie raignes, there is no place at all for the promiſes. Thus then, albeit they boaſted they were Abrahams children, yet all were not capable of this doctrine. In the next place the Prophet ſhewes the way how to follow this iuſtice, to wit, in ſeeking the Lord: for it muſt needes be that ſuch as ſeeme to follow righteouſnes, and yet aime not at this marke, doe erre in all the parts of their life. Theſe two things then, to follow righteouſneſſe, and to ſeeke the Lord, muſt be ioined together.

Note.

Verſ. 2. Conſider Abraham your father, and Sara that bare you: for I called him alone, and bleſſed him, and increaſed him.

The application of the former conſolation.

THis application ſhews ſufficiently whereunto the Prophets exhortation tended; namely, to confirme the peoples hearts in the hope of a better eſtate. He ſaith he called him alone, not onely becauſe Abraham had no companions with him when he was called to forſake his Country; but becauſe the Lord ſuffered him to inhabit the land of Canaan, without hauing iſſue, till his old age: ſo as he looked not to haue any at all. And beſides that, Sarah his wife was alſo barren: but at the laſt they had a ſonne giuen them to comfort their old yeeres in their afflictions. Which was no ſooner giuen, but it ſeemed that God had appointed him to the ſlaughter: and yet for all this, the Lord furniſhed him with a great number of children. I told you ere while, how neceſſary this conſolation was for the Iewes; which wee may alſo iudge by that wofull and miſerable eſtate in which they then were; as hiſtories doe at large record.

Vſe to vs.

It is alſo no leſſe needfull for vs at this day, in regard of the ſcattering of the church; that ſo our ſmall number may no whit diſcourage vs. No, wee are rather to hope that God wil one day multiply the ſame, by means to vs vnknowne. For we haue heere a manifeſt and an excellent example thereof in this bleſſing, whereby wee ſee how the Lord in Abrahams old age, weakens, yea and out of death it ſelfe multiplied his of-ſpring. Which promiſe appertaines not onely to the Iewes, but to other nations: and therefore his name is no more called Abram, but Abraham: Gen.17.5.

Verſ. 3. *Surely the Lord ſhall comfort Zion, hee ſhall comfort all her deſolations, and hee ſhall make her deſert like Eden, and her wilderneſſe like the garden of the Lord: ioy and gladneſſe ſhall be found therein, praiſe and the voice of ſinging.

*Or, a place of pleaſure.

THe Prophet ſhewes that the example propounded in Abrahams perſon, agrees to all ages. For as the Lord created ſo great a ſtocke out of one man in a moment; ſo will hee repleniſh his Church by extraordinarie and vnknowne meanes: not for once onely, but as oft as in the worlds account ſhe is become a widow and barren. And thus after S. Paul hath ſpoken of Abrahams faith, and commended the excellencie of it, he applies the ſame doctrine to euery one of vs in particular: Rom.4.24.

After darkneſſe, light.

Where he addes, and ſhall comfort all her ruines; it may be thus expounded. The Lord will comfort his Church, not onely whileſt ſhee floriſheth, but euen when ſhe ſhal be brought to deſolation and ſolitarineſſe. And it was neceſſary indeed that ſhe ſhould be waſted and deformed euen to the vtmoſt, before ſhee could rightly taſte the helpe whereof hee heere ſpeakes. Whereas it followes, that her deſert ſhall be as a place of pleaſure, the Prophet hath reſpect to that place of Moſes, where he ſhewes how man at the beginning was put into the garden of Eden: Gen.2.15. that is to ſay, into a place of pleaſure: whence by his owne fault he was baniſhed. Now we which are depriued of this benefit and bleſſing which God beſtowed vpon our firſt father, are alſo ſcattered vpon the face of the earth, and depriued of theſe pleaſures. Wherefore when many deſolations befall vs, and that wee ſee the order of nature ouerturned, and nothing to bee perceiued but miſerable waſtes and ſcatterings, let vs acknowledge that this is the iuſt puniſhment of our infidelitie, and

The Church muſt be very low brought before ſhe is fit to receiue comfort.

The Garden of Eden, a place of pleaſure. Gen.3.23.

of the reſt of our horrible iniquities. Let vs alſo remember the ſentence pronounced againſt our father Adam, or rather againſt his whole poſteritie, which as we are to do in the whole courſe of our liues, ſo then principallie when wee ſee the deſolations and wracks of the Church. For the earth which otherwiſe of it ſelfe vvould abound vvith all ſorts of pleaſures, is now brought into a vvilderne by our fault, and the Church which euery where floriſhed, is deſtroyed and laid waſte. Now in the next place the Prophet addes ioy and gladnes, wherby he ſignifies, that there ſhal be ſuch a wonderfull change, that the Church ſhall mourne nor lament no more: for whileſt ſhe was oppreſſed vnder ſo heauie a bondage, there was nothing heard but ſighs and grones, but being reſtored, the ſhall reioyce, and ſing praiſes vnto God. Heere then we are admoniſhed to praiſe and bleſſe the name of God, after we haue taſted of his liberalitie, Pſal. 14.7.

A good meditation for vs in the Churches deſolation.

Verſ. 4. Hearken ye vnto me, my people, and giue eare vnto me my people: for a law ſhall proceed from me, and I will bring forth my iudgement for the light of * the people.

*Or, peoples.

IT is not without cauſe that the Lord ſo often calles for audience: for wee haue too wofull experience how dull wee are of hearing, and chiefly in aduerſitie. When wee ſtand in greateſt need of conſolation, then by our impatiencie and faint-heartednes we put it farre from vs. Wherefore it ſtands euery one of vs in hand to pluck vp our ſpirits, eſpeciallie when aduerſities do pinch vs to the quick, that by this meanes wee may rouze vp and awaken our ſpirits, and baniſh all ſlothfulnes to receiue cõfort. Such an attention thẽ is heere required as may confirme our hearts in patience, till the time of grace be come. And thus the Lords meaning is, that he will reigne againe, and reſtore his Church to her firſt eſtate, in which he will haue his name called vpon.

Our ſlow attention cauſes God to double his exhortation: See verſe 1.

Albeit the word Law ſignifies as much as the Edict which the Lord will publiſh when he is determined to gather together his ſcattered Church, yet therewithall he ſhewes by what meanes he will reigne, to wit, by his law, and by the doctrine thereof. And thus we ſee that where the doctrine of the law is reiected, there God reignes not: that is to ſay, there men acknowledge him not.

How God wil raigne in his Church.

By Iudgement, he meanes the rule of a well ordered gouernment, by which he will reſtore his kingdome. He ſaith, that this Iudgement ſhall be for the light of peoples, becauſe miſerable men by nature are drawne out of darknes when God begins to raigne, and are then enlightned by the doctrine of the word.

The verb I vvill bring forth, is diuerſlie tranſlated by the Interpreters, becauſe the Hebrue word Rega hath diuers ſignifications, for ſometimes it ſignifies to cut, and to open, ſometimes to reſt. Some then expound, I will cauſe to reſt: that is to ſay, I will make firme, and this ſenſe agrees not ill. Many among the Iewes vnderſtand it otherwiſe, but I will not trouble the reader with their harſh and intricate expoſitions, I rather willinglie receiue this tranſlation, I will bring forth; or cauſe to come forth: that is to ſay, I will manifeſt my iudgements, for this I thinke ſutes beſt with the former member. Now we know that the Hebrues are wont to vſe many repetitions. And therefore albeit the Lord repeates one thing twice, yet the ſenſe is but one and the ſame. For where he ſaid, that a law ſhould proceed from him, now he promiſeth to bring forth, or to manifeſt his iudgement.

Verſ. 5. My righteouſnes is neere: my ſaluation goeth forth, and mine armes ſhal iudge the people: the Iles ſhall wait for me, and ſhall truſt vnto mine arme.

HEE confirmes the former doctrine. The righteouſnes of the Lord hath relation vnto men, who haue experience that he is iuſt. When the people were oppreſſed vnder ſo ſore a bondage, they had good cauſe to think they were iuſtlie chaſtiſed for their ſinnes. But they might wonder they were thus left and forſaken, that Gods worſhip was diſſolued, and his holy name blaſphemed by the prophane & vngodly, who committed many outrages againſt him without puniſhment. That he might giue them ſome conſolation then, Iſaiah promiſeth that God will ſhortly aſſiſt them, that ſo his truth and righteouſnes may be publiſhed throughout the whole world. But by the word Iuſtice, he meanes not that recompence, which he giues to euery one, but that faithfulnes of the Lord, who protects his Saints, and beſtowes many graces vpon them, and keeps his promiſe touching their deliuerance, in not ſuffring them to be ouerwhelmed. This appeares yet better to be ſo by the member following, where by way of expoſition he addes, that his ſaluation is gone forth: for the righteouſnes of God appeared in the ſaluation of the people. The captiuitie of the Iewes in Babylon was vnto them as a kind of death, and this is the cauſe why he calles this deliuerance ſaluation.

A confirmation of the former doctrine.

Mine armes ſhall iudge.] By armes he ſignifies the manifeſtation of his power, for it is a figuratiue maner of ſpeech much vſed in the Scripture. Now becauſe Gods ſoueraigntie and power ſeemes to be limited within very narrow bounds; yea, ſometimes appeeres not at all, therefore he mentions his armes, thereby ſignifying that his kingdome ſhalbe ſpread farre and neere.

Verſ. 6. Lift vp your eies to the heauens, and looke vpon the earth beneath: for the heauẽ ſhal vaniſh away like ſmoke, and the earth ſhall wax old as a garment, and they that dwell therein ſhall periſh in like maner: but my ſaluation ſhall be for euer, and my righteouſnes ſhall not be aboliſhed.

WHileſt wee ſee ſo many changes fall out in the world, and that ſ Church as

The ſtabilitie of the Church.

as we often thinke ſhall be violently ſwallowed vp therein, it is very needfull that our minds ſhould be gathered vp farre aboue the whole order of nature, otherwiſe the ſaluation of the Church ſhall ſeeme to hang in a net, and to flote vp and downe in the middeſt of theſe tempeſts, wee may eaſily diſcerne 1 with vvhat vviſdome God gouernes all things both in heauen aboue, and in the earth below: ſecondly, with what a fatherly care he vpholds 2 and preſerues his work, and the whole frame of the world: thirdly, with what equitie he 3 diſpoſeth and prouides for all his creatures therein: but his care and prouidence ouer his Church is ſurpaſſing great, which indeed he hath ſeparated from the reſt of the world. The Prophet hath here comprehended both theſe points, for he commands the faithfull to turne their eies on euery ſide of them, to conſider Gods admirable prouidence as well in the heauens, as in the earth, by which he hath conſtantlie continued from the creation that goodly order by him then eſtabliſhed. Hee addes, that although theſe things ſeeme to fall to decay, yet it is vnpoſſible that ỹ Church which hath her ſure foundatiõ in God ſhould euer be ſhaken. As if he ſhould ſay, Heauen and earth ſhall periſh an hundreth times rather then the promiſe (vpon which the ſaluation of the Church is grounded) ſhould be aboliſhed. He therefore puts ſaluation in the firſt place, and then he addes righteouſnes, which is the ſolid foundation wherewith this ſaluation is vpheld: when dangers threaten vs on all ſides then, let vs learne to flee to this citie of refuge.

Vnto this ſentence alſo belongs that which is in Pſal.102. The heauens ſhall wax old as doth a garment, but thou, Lord, art the ſame, and thy yeeres ſhall not faile: and therefore thy children ſhall dwell, &c. Both places do admoniſh vs, that the fauor which God ſhews in the conſeruation of his Church, farre ſurpaſſeth all the reſt of his works in excellencie; for the whole matter and ſubſtance of the heauens and earth is but periſhable and tranſitorie, but the ſaluation whereby God preſerues his Church neither is nor can be liable to ſuch changes and alterations, becauſe it is eternall.

Verſ. 7. Hearken vnto me, yee that know righteouſnes, the people in whoſe heart is my law. Feare not ye the reproch of men, neither be ye afraid of their rebukes.

A third exhortation to attention: ſee verſ.1. and 4.

BEcauſe the wicked hauing all things at their wiſh, deride and ſcorne our hopes, and make themſelues ſport with our miſeries & calamities, the Prophet exhorts the faithfull to ſuffer with patience, and not to feare their rebukes; neither to be diſcouraged for their outrages, becauſe the felicitie which they inioy, ſhall be but of ſhort continuance. For notwithſtanding their meriments ſtuffed ſo full of deriſions and proud diſdainings, they are alreadie ordeined to be meate for mothes and wormes: as on the contrarie, that God holds the ſaluation of the faithfull (which for a time he ſeemes to neglect) ſafe in his owne hand. But we are againe to note the repetition of this verb, To hearken, for this is the third time the Lord hath required audience in this Chapter: for when we be in perplexities, and tremble in regard of our miſeries, we haue much ado to apprehend or imbrace the promiſes. There is great need then that we ſhould often be rouzed and wakened vp to attention, vntill we haue wound our ſelues out of all entanglings. Verſ.1. & 4.

Verſe 8.

But he directs not his ſpeech heere to the hypocrites, but to ſuch as know righteouſnes. For howſoeuer the faithfull do not oſtentimes ſhut the dores againſt this righteouſnes, and ſo hinder the ſame from hauing any entrance, becauſe in aduerſitie they ſtop their eares, and nouriſh diſcomfortable thoughts within them. To the end then that they might giue the promiſes entrance, and ſuffer themſelues to be comforted, the Prophet awakens them againe, and bids them giue eare. The faithfull againe diſtinguiſhed from hypocrites. See verſe 1.

The order of his words is alſo to be noted, for firſt he ſhewes who they be of whom the Lord would haue audience, namely, of ſuch as know righteouſnes: ſecondly, expounding what this knowledge is, he addes, the people in vvhoſe heart my law is written and planted, for there is no righteouſnes without Gods word. Let men make neuer ſo many lawes, and that in the beſt forme they can deuiſe, yet they can not bring vs to true righteouſnes: they may well bring vs to ſome ſhadowes of it, but they ſhall neuer attaine ſo farre as to expreſſe it to the life. He alſo therewithall ſhewes the way how to profit in the law of the Lord: for the law hath not his ſeate in the braine, but in the heart, that ſo being leauened with this heauenly doctrine, Matth.13.33. we may be whollie transformed into it, 2.Cor.3.18. 1 2 Note.

Verſ. 8. For the moth ſhall eate them vp like a garment, and the worme ſhall eate them like vvooll: but my righteouſnes ſhall be for euer, and my ſaluation from generation to generation.

A preuention of an obiection.

BEcauſe the faithfull ſeruants of God were to indure many iniuries & wrongs which the enemies of the world would load them with: therefore the Prophet exhorts them againe to beare theſe things patiently: for the diſgraces and checks which we often receiue from the wicked, wound vs more to the heart then their fires or ſwords. But we muſt hold it our glory and crowne of reioicing, that wee be contemned of them, and accounted as the of-ſcouring of all things. Thence ariſeth that fortitude, though the world reiects vs as the ſcumme of the vvorld: for God holds vs precious in his ſight, in regard our cauſe is his owne. Let vs then with Moſes, eſteeme the rebuke of Chriſt aboue all the riches of Egypt, Exod.2.11.Heb.11.26. Let vs with the Apoſtles reioyce, who went from the Councell with glad hearts, in regard they were counted worthie worthy to suffer rebuke and wrongs for the name of the Lord Iesus: Act.5.41.

Now because it were little ioy to vs to see the wicked brought to nought, vnlesse wee might inioy our freedome and safetie; the Prophet shewes what our condition shall be, namely, neuer to be destituted of the righteousnesse and saluation of God. But this comparison seemes not verie fitting, when the ruine of the vngodly is opposed to his righteousnesse. For it might haue been more properly and plainly affirmed, that howsoeuer the wicked reioice, yet they shall shortly perish, and the faithfull, who now resemble dead men, shall liue. For seeing he mentions not them at all, but onely recommends vnto them the perpetuitie of his righteousnesse; it might bee obiected, what profit shall we haue by this, that Gods righteousnesse shall remaine for euer, whilest we in the meane while, are ouerwhelmed with miseries? But the Prophet in these words aduertiseth vs, that the consolation which belongs vnto vs in afflictions, must arise from hence, that our health and saluation is after a sort shut vp in God. For whilest men rest in themselues, they cannot conceiue so much as the least dramme of hope, which will not forthwith vanish. And therefore he turnes our eies vnto God, whose mercie indures for euer, vpon them that feare him, and his righteousnesse vpon their childrens children, as Dauid saith, Psal.103. In regard that our saluation then is founded on Gods mercy and truth, Isaiah brings vs vnto it, that all men being accounted as nothing, wee may wholly trust in the saluation of the Lord. For thus we must reason; Saluation is in God, not for himselfe, but for vs: as also his righteousnesse, which hee is readie to manifest for our defence. From the saluation & righteousnesse of God then, wee ought to gather that his seruants can neuer perish. Which we haue also prooued from the testimonie of Dauid; Thou art alwaies the same, and thy yeeres shall not faile: the children of thy seruants shall continue, and their seede shall stand fast in thy sight: Psal.102.27,28. Wee see then how hee applies this perpetuitie vnto Gods children, who stand not by their owne strength, but in God, who is the rocke of their saluation.

Saluation in God, not for himselfe, but for vs.

Vers.9. Rise vp, rise vp, and put on strength, O arme of the Lord: arise as in the old time in the generations of the world. Art not thou *the same that hath cut Rahab, and wounded the dragon?

*that arme.

10. Art not thou the same which hath dried the sea, euen the waters of the great deepe, making the depth of the sea a way for the redeemed to passe ouer?

Gods promises must beget in vs the affection of Praier.

THe Prophet heere teacheth, that when God raiseth vs vp by his promises, we on the other side ought instantly to intreat him to accomplish that which hee hath promised. For he giues vs not comfort to nourish vs in idlenesse; but the more to inflame vs with a greater affection of praier, and to a daily exercising of our faith. Now the Prophet speaks heere according to our vnderstandings. For we thinke that God sleepes, as long as he deferres to relieue our miseries: and yet the Lord beares with vs thus far, that hee suffers vs to pray with such words, as sauour somewhat of the infirmitie of our natures. The faithfull then pray that God would arise, or awake: not as if he were idle, or asleepe in heauen; but they rather acknowledge therein their owne dulnesse or slothfulnesse, in regard they cannot conceiue ought else of God, as long as he deferres to helpe them. Notwithstanding howsoeuer the flesh imagineth that hee sleepes, and neglects our miseries, yet faith lookes higher, and apprehends his infinite power.

In what sense God is said to wake, &c.

The Scripture therefore is wont to say, that God awakes, and puts on strength, when he manifests some testimonies of his presence and power: for without this, we esteeme him either idle or asleep. Now when the Prophet calles it the arme of the Lord which was then hid; he sets it heere before them, as if it were present, that they might conclude; surely our enemies could not afflict vs thus cruelly, if that the Lord had not withdrawne his arme, and helping hand from vs. We haue shewed you the cause of this delay in Chap.50.1. namely, for their reuolt from God.

By the daies of old, hee shewes, that they ought to remember all the wonderfull works which God had in former time wrought for their saluation. For howsoeuer he seemes to sit still as one vtterly careless of vs, yet is he the same God still, who of old hath gouerned his Church, and therefore can neuer now reiect or abandon those whom he hath receiued into his protection.

Wee must meditate on Gods works of old.

In the generations of old.] This repetition doth yet better expresse, that wee ought not onely to consider what was done yesterday, but those things also which were done long agoe: for we must extend our thoughts euen to the most ancient generations, that wee may ouercome those temptations, which otherwise would seeme to ouerwhelme vs. The Prophet doth heere then gather together in one, all the testimonies of Gods fauour, which he hath from time to time manifested to his people, that if two or three were not sufficient, yet at least the great numbers of them might wholly confirme the faith of the elect.

Now because it was too tedious to draw a long catalogue of all, hee names this first and excellent miracle among the rest; namely, the wonderfull deliuerance of the people out of Egypt. For by Rahab, I doubt not but he means proud and cruell Egypt: as in the 87. Psalme; I will make mention of Rahab and Babylon, among those which know me. Also, Ezechiel calles the King of Egypt a dragon: 29.3. Behold, I come against thee Pharaoh King of Egypt, the great dragon, that lieth in the midst of the riuers. Thus it sufficiently appeares, peares, and all (in a maner) are of the ſame opinion, that the Prophet heere puts them in minde of that ſtrange deliuerance of the people out of Egypt. If the pride and loftineſſe of Egypt was at that time brought low; if the dragon was then ſlaine; why ſhould wee not ſtill hope for the like?

Art not thou that arme?] The Prophet reaſons from the nature of God: for this cannot bee ſaid of the arme of fleſh: the ſtrength whereof (be it neuer ſo great) yet decaies and diminiſheth in ſucceſſion of time. Milo, who was the ſtouteſt and ſtrongeſt among many, waxing old, and looking vpon his arme, ſighed, becauſe hee felt himſelfe deſtitute of that force which once hee inioied: but it is not thus with God, for his power can neuer diminiſh. Theſe words then, Art not thou that arme? muſt be read with a certaine vehemencie: for the Prophet ſhewes that the Lord is the ſame which he was wont to be, in regard he continues alwaies one and the ſame.

Miloſigheth.

Now howſoeuer Iſaiah recites not all the miracles which God did, when he deliuered his people from vnder the bondage of Egypt; yet he meant in a word to comprehend whatſoeuer Moſes expreſſeth at large; that the Iewes being admoniſhed by this briefe ſentence, might from thence call to minde after how manie waies God did then manifeſt his power.

Hee mentions the red ſea, which was dried vp; not onely for the rareneſſe of the miracle, but becauſe all the former miracles tended to this end, that the people being now ſet free from an vniuſt oppreſſion and tyrannie, might paſſe out of Babylon into the land of promiſe: and therefore hee makes expreſſe mentiõ of the way which was opened for the redeemed. From this example we may conſider what a one God hath been towards vs, that thence we may conclude, that he will for the time to come, bee alwaies like himſelfe, as plainlie appeares by the coherence of the text.

Verſ. 11. *Therefore the redeemed of the Lord ſhall returne, and come with ioy vnto Zion; and euer laſting ioy ſhall be vpon their heads: they ſhall obtaine ioy and gladneſſe, and ſorrow, and mourning ſhall flee away.

*Or, a ſong.

NOw hee ſhewes that more plainly, which he briefly touched before: for hauing recited the wonderfull workes of God, whereby in times paſt hee manifeſted his power in Egypt, for the deliuerance of his people, hee concludes that neither the high rockes, nor the bottomleſſe gulphes, no nor the gates of hell themſelues ſhall be able to let him from bringing backe his people out of Babylon. Now the better to confirme and apply this, he calles them the redeemed; to teach them that God intitles not himſelfe to bee the ſauiour of his people, but for their ſakes: and alſo to aſſure them, that he will ſhew ſuch a teſtimonie of his power for their deliuerance, as hee once did; in regard the cauſe is now the ſame.

An amplification.

Vnto Zion.] That is to ſay, vnto that place where he once appointed his name to be called vpon, that ſo hee might aſſure them that the Temple ſhould be reedified, and Gods pure worſhip eſtabliſhed. For when the Iewes who were in Babylon, were to looke for that deliuerance which their fathers formerlie had, in regard God was alſo the redeemer of their children: they had yet a priuiledge aboue their fathers, becauſe God had choſen Mount Zion, in which he had promiſed to reſt for euer: Pſal. 131.14. But becauſe the worke of God promiſed heere by Iſaiah, was extraordinarie, therefore he exhorts the people to thankſgiuing. The word Rinna may be ſimply taken for ioy: but becauſe it often ſignifies that praiſe, which wee yeeld vnto God in the acknowledgement of his benefits, I had rather take it for a ſong in this place. The Prophets meaning is then, that there ſhall be an vnwonted, and an vnexpected change; ſo as the faithfull ſhall haue an exceeding cauſe of ioy and thankſgiuing.

In ſaying that euerlaſting ioy ſhall bee vpon their heads; he alludes vnto thoſe crownes and garlands of flowers, wherewith they were adorned at banquets. He addes, that they ſhall obtaine ioy: meaning thereby a firme and ſolid ioy. Laſtly, for amplifications ſake, hee ſaith, that all ſorrow ſhall flee away: and this was to confirme them againſt that ordinary feare which men haue; namely, when as all their ioy in a moment is turned to mourning. And yet heerewithall the Prophet admoniſheth them to wait patiently for that happy iſſue which he hath promiſed, though for a while (if neede bee) they are in heauineſſe and ſorrow.

Verſ. 12. I, euen I am he that comfort you. Who art thou, that thou ſhouldeſt feare a mortall man, and the ſonne of man, which ſhall be made as graſſe.

THe Lord not onely promiſeth ſaluation and grace heere to the Iewes, but complaines that they would not beleeue his word, neither would they make that account of his power, which they ſhould haue done. For what an vnworthy thing is it, that the threats of men ſhould ſo terrifie vs, as to make vs ſet light by the promiſes of God, who is ready to manifeſt his power, that ſo at the leaſt wee might be fortified againſt all aſſaults? Wee ſhew our ſelues flat contemners of God then, when we nouriſh in our ſelues an inordinate feare of man. Whence it appeares how odious a thing it is to make a tumult in our mindes, by reaſon of mens threats, when God calles vs to reſt quietly in him. Truly the ingratitude of men is too groſſe, if in hearing that God is of their ſide, they conceiue not hope from ſo many famous promiſes, to cry with boldneſſe; If God be with vs, who can be againſt vs? Rom. 8.31. That is the cauſe then that when dangers appeare, they ſtand as men amazed; and attribute more power to a mortall mortall man to harme them, then to God to help them. He iustly reprocheth the Iewes then, that they had fortified thémselues no better with these promises, and that by them they were no better armed against all dangers. For what greater dishonor can we doe vnto God, then to call the truth of his promises into question, which yet falles out, when men so affright vs, that we can not quietly rest in the things reuealed?

A complaint againſt the peoples inordinate feare, proceeding from infidelitie.

This repetition I, I am, hath great weight, because he that promiseth this consolation is true, neither can the forces, nor deceits of men defeat him of his purpose. Who art thou, &c He shewes how fraile, transitorie, vaine, and brittle mans nature is, the better to bewray the sottishnes of this people, whilest they preferred bubbles, a smoke, and shadowes to ỹ strong God. But withall he shews, that men can not be ouerwhelmed with feare as long as they retaine within them the remembrance of Gods power. Doe wee then stand amazed when dangers approch? It is a signe that we haue forgotten God, and therfore he addes,

Prou.24.10.

Vers. 13. And forgettest the Lord thy maker that hath spread out the heauens, and laid the foundations of the earth? And hast feared all the day continuallie because of the rage of the oppressor which is readie to destroy? Where is now the rage of the oppressor?

We must beware how we feare the creature aboue the Creator. See Chap.43. 15.

IT is not enough to imagin that there is one God, but wee must acknowledge and imbrace him by faith. In calling himselfe a maker, it must not be referred to the generall Creation, but to spirituall regeneration, as we haue noted before in diuers places. And in this sense Paul calles vs the workemanship of God, because he hath created vs vnto euery good worke, Ephe.2.10. If we remember then the worke of our Creation and adoption, from this beginning we may hope of perseuerance vnto the end, lest we should proue vnthankfull vnto God, when after so vndoubted testimonies, he hath manifested his faithfulnes and truth vnto vs.

Besides, the Prophet ioines Gods infinite power with his speciall goodnes which he shewed to his people: and this power he opposeth to mans imbecilitie, who in the former verse he compared to grasse. He shewes by his works what his power is, so as those which perceiue not the same therein, are more then blinde. For which way can we turne our eies but we must needs behold most ample and large testimonies of Gods power and goodnes? which he notwithstanding notes out here in a word, whé he speakes of the spreading out of the heauens, and of laying the foundations of the earth. It is our brutishnes then, & matchlesse sensualitie to forget the same, seeing there are so many infinite testimonies of Gods power, which may dayly refresh our memories.

And hast feared.] Hee continues the same comparison. For what are men, saith he, that thou shouldest so feare them, if thou compaiest them with God, who hath promised to relieue thee? Truly it is an exceeding dishonor done to his Maiestie, if we beleeue not that he hath more power to saue vs, then the enemies haue to destroy vs. The Lord therefore would haue vs to consider well what and how great he is, and how farre his power extends it selfe that we should not feare the rage of the oppressor, nor the furie of a mortall man, who vanisheth as a puffe of winde, or as the smoke.

See 2.Kin.6. 16.2.Chr.32. 7.1.Ioh.4.4.

Vers. 14. The captiue hasteth to be loosed, and that he should not die in the pit, nor that his bread should faile.

THis verse is diuersly expounded: for some thinke it is to be referred to Cyrus, and so they expound the word Tsoah (which we haue translated banished) he which causeth to remoue. But the most receiued opinion is, that this word is to be taken for him that is bound or oppressed: or, for one exiled, wandring hither and thither. The Iewes were not only banished, but were so held captiues, that it was impossible for them freely to returne home into their countrie: and therefore I expound this of the Iewes: but yet it may be taken both waies, either that the Prophet reproues their ouer-great haste to be loosed, in regard of their impatient wishing to returne: or it signifies, that their returne into their countrie shall come in due season, that their long expectation might not put them vtterly out of heart. As if he should say, The time in which you are to depart home is hard at hand. This second exposition is the most approued, and I willinglie receiue it, because it agrees with the scope of the text.

A thousand yeeres with the Lord is but as one day.

1

2

But is it not strange that he saith, the people shall shortly returne, seeing the captiuitie indured so long a time. But it is not without cause that God saith, his deliuerance which he deferred to a fit time should forthwith be accomplished: for albeit the same seeme very long to vs, yet is it but short in deed, because it is the fittest and best time. And truly if we shall consider the estate of this so great and mightie a Monarchie, which had not then so much as any appearance of euer being ruinated, we may safely affirme that the time was very short.

Thus then, whereas we thinke Gods promises long in performing, we shall esteeme the time but a moment; prouided that wee lift vp our eies vnto the heauens, Psal.123.1. This exposition is yet better confirmed by that which is added, that he die not in the pit. See how the Lord hastens then to deliuer his elect in due season, that out of the darke dungeon they may come forth safe and sound. Neither doth he promise his people a speedie dispatch, to free them from their bonds only, but also that he may do thé good after their deliuerance, for he promiseth them all things necessarie for this life present, that so they may rest whollie vpon the Lord, who is not wont to aid his people for once only, but is wont

wont to be with them, euen till their latter end.

Verſ. 15. And I am the Lord thy God that diuided the Sea when his waues rored: the Lord of hoſtes is his name.

HE mentions his power againe. For mens diſtruſt and ſlothfulneſſe is ſo great, that albeit the ſame his power bee manifeſted in their ſight, yet the leaſt temptation that is, prooues ſufficiently that they are not well perſwaded thereof. For they alwaies turne to their old bias againe, when the euill preſſeth them; neither can they conceiue how this power which is in God, appertaines any whit vnto them. Hee ſpeakes not heere generally but alleageth that worke of wonder, ſo often mentioned heeretofore: for in that redemption of their fathers, hee gaue hope of eternall ſaluation to all their poſteritie. He therefore rightly affirmes himſelfe to be that God, who long ſince diuided the ſea, Exod.14. 21. Then he adornes this miracle, in ſaying, that at his voice the roring and boiling waues were appeaſed. Let vs know then that there are no floods ſo violent, but the Lord can ſtil and aſſwage them, for the deliuerance of his Church: Pſal.93.3,4. For it is hee that calmes the ſea by his power, as Iob ſaith, Chap.26.12. though it bee very boiſterous and vntamed. He alſo raiſeth the tempeſts when it pleaſeth him. But the Prophet, as I haue ſaid, chiefly reſpected the hiſtorie of their deliuerance out of Egypt.

He giues God the title of the Lord of hoſtes, to teach vs how farre his power extends it ſelfe; which hee is readie to manifeſt, as oft as hee purpoſeth to giue reliefe vnto his Church.

Verſ. 16. And I haue put my words in thy mouth, and haue defended thee in the ſhadow of mine hand, that I may plant the heauens, and lay the foundations of the earth, and ſay vnto Zion, Thou art my people.

HEe returnes againe to the doctrine by him propounded before; namely, that God, who comforts his Church, and ſaith I, euen I am hee that comfort you, verſ.12. affirmes heere, that hee hath put that into the mouthes of the Prophets, which they haue in charge to deliuer. Hence we may gather, that theſe things proceeded not from man, who commonly is mutable; but from God, that cannot lie. The Lord ſpake to all the Prophets: firſt, to Iſaiah, then to others ſucceſſiuely; but at laſt we muſt come to Chriſt: and yet we need not reſtraine this to Iſaiah, nor to Chriſt; but to extend it to al the Prophets. Moreouer, it is the Lords meaning that wee ſhould hearken as diligently to the conſolations of the Prophets, as if he taught them vs in his owne perſon: yea, he ſaith heere, that it is hee which ſpeakes by their mouthes. Hence wee gather, that others needs not draw neere to giue comfort to the Church, but ſuch as by whoſe mouth God ſpeakes: for wee ought to reiect all ſuch as broach their owne inuentions, albeit they ſhrowd themſelues neuer ſo much with the title of Gods name.

But let vs a little ſee into the Prophets meaning. For hauing ſhewed that mens conſciences alwaies wauer, till the Lord haue ſecured them, it teacheth vs to hold this principle, that it is God, who ſpeakes by his Prophets: for otherwiſe our conſciences would remaine in doubtings and perplexities ſtill. There is alſo great weight in theſe words, in that he recites the commandement of God: for by the authoritie heereof, he was hartened on to performe his office. Acts 28.25. *Heb.*1.1.

And haue kept thee in the ſhadow of mine hand.] Though this was ſaid in Chap.49.2. yet was it no needleſſe repetition. For hence wee learne, that God will vndoubtedly defend his Miniſters at all times, that ſo being vpheld by his ſuccour, he may fit them to paſſe thorow the pikes. Now that we may be couered with this ſhadow, two things are required: First, that wee be well aſſured that we publiſh nothing to the people but Gods word: ſecondly, that we doe this at Gods command: for ſuch as raſhly intrude themſelues, may well crake of the title of teachers, but to no purpoſe; for they ſhall turne their backes, when it comes to the triall indeed. But if we haue the teſtimonie of a good conſcience, to witneſſe with vs that we are called of God, then may we reſolue our ſelues aſſuredly of Gods aid and protection, and that in the end we ſhall haue the victory. God will alwaies protect his Miniſters. 1 2

The end of the ambaſſage is added; that I may plant the heauens, ſaith he: that is to ſay, that I may bring all things into their right order. I grant this is diuerſly expounded: but the moſt natiue ſenſe, as I thinke, is, that heauen and earth are renewed by the doctrine of ſaluation; becauſe in Chriſt (as Paul ſpeakes) all things both in heauen and earth, are gathered together in one: Eph.1.10. For in regard that ſince the fall of the firſt man, we ſee nothing heere but ſuch horrible confuſions as burthen the very inſenſible creatures, and make them as it were to beare the puniſhment of our ſinne: Rom.8.22. this diſorder can no way be repaired but in Chriſt. Seeing then that the whole face of the earth is diſfigured by this wofull deſolation, it is not ſaid without cauſe, that the faithfull teachers doe reuiue the world, euen as if God did caſt heauen and earth into a new mould againe, by their hand. By this let vs take a taſte of the grieuouſneſſe of ſinne, ſeeing ſuch an horrible downefall hath ſucceeded in the nature of things. It is ſaid then that the heauens are planted, and the earth ſet vpon her foundations, when the Lord eſtabliſheth his Church by the miniſterie of his word. This he doth by the hands of the Miniſters, whom hee directs by his holy Spirit, and defends them againſt all the furie and plots of their enemies, that they may effectuallie accom- The world renued as it were by the the Goſpell preached.

pliſh the worke impoſed vpon them.

Laſtly, he ſhewes that this miniſterie tends to an higher end, then to the viſible forme of this world, which ſuddenly vaniſheth away; to wit, that hee will raiſe vp and nouriſh in the hearts of the faithfull, the hope of the bleſſed life. For the true reſtauration of the Church, and of the world, conſiſts in this, that the elect may be gathered into the vnitie of faith, and that they all with one accord may aſpire vnto God, ſeeing he ſo louingly allures them by theſe words, I am thy God. By this we may ſee what account God makes of his Church, and the ſaluation thereof, in that he not onelie preferres it aboue the whole world, but ſhewes that the ſtabilitie of the world depends vpon it. We are alſo to obſerue what word it is which God will haue preached: for in it we haue the rule of a godly life preſcribed, and beſides, it teſtifies vnto vs our adoption, wherein eſpecially conſiſts our ſaluation.

Verſe 15. and in this verſe, Thou art my people.

Verſ. 17. Awake, awake and ſtand vp O Ieruſalem, which haſt drunke at the Lords hand the cup of his wrath: thou haſt drunke the dregs of the cup of trembling, and wrung them out.

IN regard the Church was to ſuſtaine and indure many afflictions, the Prophet furniſheth her with conſolation, and meetes with a difficultie that might come betweene; namely, the enemies tyrannizing ouer the poore Iews, when as in the meane while, they felt no fruit of theſe promiſes. His meaning is then, that the Church ſhould be reſtored and ſhall recouer her full ſtrength, though now ſhe be afflicted, and toſſed vp and downe with diuers tempeſts. And by the word awake thee, he raiſeth her from death, and as it were out of her graue. As if he ſhould ſay; No ruin can be ſo wofull, nor any deſolations ſo horrible, that can let God from effecting of this reſtauration. Such a conſolation doubtleſſe was of ſingular vſe: for when ſorrow hath ſeazed vpon our hearts, wee by and by thinke that the promiſes belong nothing at all vnto vs. It is very needfull then that wee be often put in mind of this, and may alſo haue it euer in our ſight; namely, that it is God who ſpeaks and thus calles, not ſuch as are in a flouriſhing eſtate, but thoſe that are brought low, yea and dead: for theſe hee can awaken notwithſtanding, and raiſe vp by his word: for this doctrine of ſaluation is not ordained for thoſe that are in good plight, but for the dead, which haue loſt all hope.

Which haſt drunke, &c. The cup of wrath, is taken two waies: for ſometimes it is ſaid, that the Lord giues vs a cuppe of wrath to drinke, when hee ſmites vs with giddineſſe, and depriues vs of ſenſe: and this wee ſee often befalles men in their affliction. Sometimes alſo it is taken ſimply for the bitter and ſmart blowes, wherewith hee corrects his children in wrath: in which ſenſe, this word ought to be taken in this place, as it appeares, becauſe the relative His, is thereunto added. Neither doth this croſſe that which is ſaid; to wit, that the Church was amazed and drunke: for this happened in regard the Lord chaſtiſed her ſo ſeuerely. Now this is a ſimilitude much vſed in the Scriptures, by which the Lord calles his rod, wherewith he corrects his children, a drinke or potion, diuided to euery one. Notwithſtanding when it ſpeaks of the elect, this word cup, ſerues to ſet forth the meaſure which God keepes in his iudgements: for he ſauours his blow, though hee chaſtiſeth his people ſharpelie. See Chap. 27.8. Ier. 30.11.

I take the word Tarela, for anguiſh, or trembling, wherewith men are ſeazed, when they feele themſelues oppreſſed with grieuous afflictions. Wee may alſo ſay they be drunke, in regard they haue ſwallowed al that was in the cup; ſo as their calamitie and miſerie is growne to the height: and to this belongs the word preſſing, or wringing out. Beſides, the Church is heere aduertiſed, that all her calamities whatſoeuer which befell her, proceeded from Gods immediate hand, to the end ſhee ſhould not imagin that ſhee was wrongfully afflicted, or that her miſeries fell out by chance: for the Prophets drift is to let the people ſee, that they bee iuſtly puniſhed for their iniquities. Neither can a man euer be raiſed vp, vnleſſe hee confeſſe firſt of all that he is fallen; nor rid out of his miſerie, except he acknowledge himſelfe miſerable by his owne fault. In a word, what haue we to doe with conſolations, vnleſſe the doctrine of repentance goes before?

The dregs then are not to be taken in this place, as they are in Ieremy 25.15. where he ſpeakes of the reprobates (whom the Lord chokes and ſtifles with the drinke of this cup) but for a iuſt and ample puniſhment, which yet the Lord meant ſomewhat to moderate. After he hath chaſtiſed vs then after his own will, and is purpoſed to put an end to our miſeries, he ſaith; the dregs are drunke vp: as wee haue ſeene, Chap. 40.2.

Verſ. 18. There is none to guide her among all the ſonnes whom ſhee hath brought forth: there is none that taketh her by the hand of all the ſonnes that ſhee hath brought vp.

THe Prophet heere deſcribes a pitifull eſtate wherein the Church was: for what greater griefe, then when the children which ſhee had brought forth, would not yeelde her any reliefe or comfort at all? But he ſets forth this her miſerie in this wiſe, to teach her to wait for conſolation from God, albeit ſhe were in this pitifull plight, becauſe God will neuer forſake his ſeruants, no not although they were plunged into the depth of hell. The doctrine is then, that albeit the Church be forſaken of men, yea of her owne children, whō ſhe hath nouriſhed vp in her lap, yet God will aſſiſt her. A mother cannot be more pinched at the heart, then to ſee her children to abandon her, of whom ſhe expects loue for loue. This ingratitude and inhumanity cuts her much more then the cruell rage of her enemies: for why doth ſhe nurce and bring vp children, but that they may be a ſtaffe vnto her in her age? But when children neglect their duty, what can ſhe elſe imagin but that ſhe hath loſt her coſt and labour? Thus then, howſoeuer the Church had performed the office of a Mother, and had brought forth and brought vp her children to mans eſtate, notwithſtanding Iſaiah pronounceth, that there is no ſupport nor ſuccor, to be looked for at the hands of the vngratefull.

The Church oft times findes leaſt reliefe of thoſe that come out of her owne boſome.

cuts

And yet the Prophets ſpeech hath a further ſcope, to wit, that the children that will not relieue their mothers neceſſities, are baſtards and degenerate, that ſo ſhe might the more quietly beare their deſtruction. It was a very beauie and dolorous thing to ſee the Church ſtripped of all her of-ſpring, and to be left a widow. And yet this befell her. But the Prophet admoniſheth the Church, that her children deſerue not to be bewailed of her, but that ſhe ſhould rather deſire to haue others in their ſtead, as it is in Pſal. 102. 18. that the people which ſhall be borne, ſhall praiſe the Lord.

Who takes the miſeries of the church to heart?

Moreouer, that miſerie which the Prophet heere deſcribes belongs wholly to our time. Many now brag that they are the children of the Church, but which of them takes the miſeries of their mother to heart? Who laments her ruins? Who feeles his ſpirits ſo moued thereat, as to put his ſhoulders to vndergoe the burthen with her? How many are there which betray; and more cruelly perſecute her vnder this title, then the open & ſworne enemies? And therefore after all the reſt of her miſeries this comes in at the laſt to make vp the meaſure of them to the full. Againe, thoſe which will be reputed the pillars of the Church, and not only boaſt that they are children, but brag that they are her fathers, are euen they who cowardly and treacherouſly haue forſaken her when ſhe called them to ſuccor her. What maruell is it then if God cut them off, that he may hereafter giue his Church naturall children which may aſſiſt her.

Verſ. 19. Theſe two things are come vnto thee: who will lament thee? Deſolation and destruction, and famine, and the ſword: by whom ſhall I comfort thee?

*Or, bruſing.

THe Prophet vſeth the like words in a maner touching Babylon in Chap. 47. Theſe two things ſhall come to thee ſuddenly in one day, the loſſe of children, and widowhood. But here the Prophet promiſeth a better iſſue and end to the Church, becauſe the Lord wil draw her out of this bottomleſſe gulph of miſeries: yet he threatens an extreame miſerie, that he might fit the faithfull for patience, and that in the middes of their anguiſhes they ſhould not ceaſe to lift vp their prayers and ſupplications vnto God. The ſumme is, that the Church ſhall be ſo oppreſſed vnder all ſorts of calamities, that ſhe ſhall ſeeme euen to be ouerwhelmed with them. How ſo? Without, ſhe was to looke for many ſharp afflictions: ſecondly, ſhe ſhould receiue no comfort nor reliefe from her owne children, verſ. 18. Theſe are the two great euils whereof the Prophet ſpeakes. But yet this diuiſion ſeemes not to agree, for after he hath mentioned one euill, to wit, that none ſhall giue the Church comfort or conſolation, he names three kinds of euils, deſolation, ſorrow, or breaking, ſword, and famine. Some expound that the Church was famiſhed within, and vexed with both by her enemies. But I am of another opinion, as I haue already ſhewed. For it is a phraſe of ſpeech (to ſpeake by an interrogation) much frequented among the Hebrues, when they purpoſe to denie a thing abſolutely. And this hath its elegancie among them, though it hath not ſo much grace in another language. Iſaiah then mentions theſe two euils, the one outward, in regard ſhe was waſted and deſtroyed with warre and famine, which he hath ſignified by the foure former kinds. The other inward, in that ſhe ſhall be left deſtitute of conſolation, and none would lament her. For by the interrogation he ſhewes that ſhe ſhould haue no conſolation. This verſe then anſwers to the former, where we haue already told you to what end the Prophet deſcribes this ſo lamentable and wofull an eſtate of the Church.

The Church muſt make her account to meet not only with inward, but outward calamities alſo.

Verſ. 20. Thy ſonnes haue fainted, and lie at the head of all the ſtreetes as a wild bull in a net, and are full of the wrath of the Lord, and rebuke of thy God.

HE ſets forth this ſorrowfull condition of the Church at large, when he ſaith, that her ſonnes lie proſtrate. What ſorrow is more bitter to a naturall mother then to ſee the throtes of her children cut, and not only one or two of them, but the ſtreetes to be paued with the multitudes of them thus ſlaine? He addes a ſimilitude taken from a Beare, or from ſome other wilde beaſts, thereby ſhewing, that the ſtrongeſt among the Iewes were ſnarled as it were in the net.

A miſerie to a mother to ſee her ſonnes ſlain, from whom ſhe expects ſuccor.

In ſaying that they were full of the wrath of the Lord, it is to admoniſh them, that it came not to paſſe by fortune. For he would not haue them impute this worke to chance; neither yet to accuſe God of hard dealing, in that they were afflicted ſo ſore. Why ſo? Becauſe his iudgements are alwaies iuſt and right: which he ſhewes further, in telling them, that this plague proceeded from Gods rebuke, or threatning. But withall, wee muſt note his meaning, which I haue touched before, namely, that the faithfull ſhould not caſt away the hope of their ſaluation, notwithſtanding their many miſeries and deſolations daily ſolicited them thereunto.

Verſ. 21. Therefore heare now this, thou miſerable and drunken, but not with wine.

NOw he ſhewes more plainely, why he hath ſpoken of the calamities of the

A mitigation of the Churches sorrow in this and in the next verse. Quest.

Church, namely, that the faithfull should not doubt of the Lords readinesse to comfort them, though they indured many and great extremities. But wherefore calles hee the Church miserable? Is there any estate so blessed as to be in Gods favour, especially seeing this blessednesse cannot bee taken from vs? Fos it is not said without cause in Psa. 144.15. That the people are blessed which have the Lord for their God. I answer, she is miserable onely in appearance. Also the Lord calles her not by this name in vaine, for himselfe is the helper of the miserable, and of those that be destitute of succour; as wee have said before.

Ans. The Church miserable onely in appearance. See Hos. 14.4

Where he calles her drunken: we must note that the faithfull doe not alwaies indure their afflictions with such patience and constancy, that they are not sometimes astonied: but notwithstanding their amazednesse, they ought to conceave that the Lord chastiseth them justly; and also to be assured, that hee will succour them. For he speakes not to the strong and valiant, but to the feeble, miserable, the humbled, and to such as resemble those that are drunken: to such hee promiseth comfort. To be short, by this word he asswageth the Churches sorrow, and shewes that hee keepes a measure in the greatest afflictions, that he may draw her out of perdition; as if he raised a dead and rotten carkase vnto life.

Vers. 22. Thus saith thy Lord God, euen God that pleadeth the cause of his people; Behold, I haue taken out of thine hand, the cup of trembling, euen the dregs of the cup of my wrath: thou shalt drinke it no more.*

*Or, Thus saith the Lord, thy ruler and thy God, the protector of his people.

IT is not without cause that he adds three epithetes to the name of the Lord: First, that he is the ruler, or patron: Secondly, thy God: And lastly, the protector of his Church. For we must alwaies consider what acquaintance we haue with God, who is such a one as beckens vs to come vnto him in familiar maner; because in making himselfe one with vs by a perpetuall covenant, he manifests that hee hath once chosen vs to bee his people. The Iewes in their time no doubt, were incouraged by this preface, boldly to imbrace that which is heere promised: and the new people, whom God hath now created, and receiued into his safegard and protection, as well as the people of old, haue no lesse cause to imbrace the same promises with them.

1
2
3

Psal. 102.18

Now the Lord attributes to himselfe the title of protector, to teach vs that when we see great dangers approching, and that we suppose they will worke our ruine; euen then to run to this strong tower, namely, that God is the protector of his people. It ought also to bee a shield of defence vnto vs, as well against all Satans fierie darts, as against the assaults of our visible enemies.

Behold I haue taken. He propounds vnto the matter of good hope, to wit, that God chastiseth his Church but for a time. By which, the Iewes were to learne, that all the calamities which threatned them, were iust recompences of their transgressions: as also that the rod should bee tied to their backes, till God had receiued them to mercy. The summe is, that his wrath will be appeased in such wise, that he will mitigate their afflictions, and will cause the indgements wherewith he had for the present visited his Church, to cease. In the seuenteenth verse wee haue spoken of the similitude of the cup: and this place doth sufficiently confirme that which was said there. God mentions the cuppe of his wrath then, which caused his Church to tremble, as if shee had bin smitten with giddines: notwithstanding the Prophet vseth the word Tarasta, which some translate Anguish: others, Trembling. By the dregs, he meanes that the measure of Gods vengeance shall be full; so as God, for the loue hee beares to his children, will be satisfied.

God afflicts his Church but for a time.
1
2

Vers. 23. But I will put it into their hand that spoile thee, which haue said to thy soule; Bow downe, that we may goe ouer: and thou hast laid thy body as the ground, and as the streete to them that went ouer.

THis is the other part of the consolation, where hee promiseth, that the Lord will not onely content himselfe to deliuer his Church out of so many euils, but will also send vpon her enemies, all the calamities wherewith she was afflicted. Are wee pressed then, & persecuted? A time will come, wherein God will speedily turne our captiuitie, and our (enemies in their turne) shall be plauged to the vtmost. For it is just with God (as Paul saith) to render affliction to those which trouble you, and to you that are troubled, rest with vs, when the Lord Iesus shall shew himselfe from heauen with his mightie Angels in flaming fire, rendring vengeance vnto thé that know not God, nor obey not the Gospel of our Lord Iesus Christ: 2. Thes. 1.6,7,8.

God corrects his own first, but the wicked must keepe their turne next: Prou. 11.8. Hest. 7.10.

The temporall punishments then which God inflicts vpon them in this life, are the beginnings of their endlesse torments in hell, to which at the last they shall bee adiudged. And the better to describe the insolencie and pride of their enemies, (the like whereof we taste at this day from our aduersaries) hee sets downe their words, in which they shamefully tyrannized ouer the children of God: for pride & crueltie are the inseparable companions of impietie: for as the true knowledge of God makes men lowly; so the ignorance of God makes men proud and cruell. Wee see how such as know not God, flatter themselues, and proudly doe they insult against the Lord, and against his faithfull seruants. I grant this is a thing ful of misery, and a great indignitie; but seeing he is pleased to suffer his name to be exposed to the outrages of the wicked, let vs not much be moued, if we be wronged for his names sake: for wee are not

Bow downe, &c. True knowledge makes vs lowly: ignorance makes vs proud and cruell.
1

Iohn. 13.16. not better then hee; neither muſt we expect better vſage from our aduerſaries now, then the Church of old had from theirs. Dauid vſeth another ſimilitude, when hee reſembles the Church to a field that is plowed and dreſſed many waies: 129.3. Whereby hee ſignifies, that ſhe muſt be often afflicted and trampled on; to teach vs, that we muſt looke for no better meaſure heere.

THE LII. CHAPTER.

Verſ. 1. Ariſe, ariſe, put on ſtrength O Zion; put on the garments of thy beautie, O Ieruſalem, the holy Citie: for henceforth there ſhall no more come vnto thee, the vncircumciſed and the vncleane.

A confirmation of the former doctrine.

HEe confirmes the former doctrine, that he might the better awaken and rowze vp the peoples mindes, which were drenched in griefe & anguiſh: for it was neceſſarie this ſhould be added to the former, as a ſpurre to quicken them vp, and to make way for this doctrine, that it might the more eaſily enter into their amazed and inſenſible hearts. He ſpeakes to the Church, as to one aſtoniſhed and in a ſlumber, and bids her ariſe to gather new forces, and to reſume her ſoule afreſh. Which hee repeates twice, and not without cauſe: for it is very hard to awaken, and to cauſe ſuch to take heart againe vnto them, that are ſmitten; nay, laid flat vpon all foure with the feeling of Gods wrath.

Put on thy ſtrength.] As if hee ſhould ſay; Thou haſt hitherto wallowed thy ſelfe in duſt and aſhes, as one forlorne, by reaſon of thy anguiſhes: but now ariſe, and fit thy ſelfe to receiue that happy eſtate into which the Lord is purpoſed to ſet thee. Hee oppoſeth ſtrength then to fainthartedneſſe, with which we are vſually combred, when things grow deſperate; and the beautifull or glorious garments, to filthineſſe and naſtineſſe.

Then he addes the reaſon; to wit, that God will henceforth ſuffer the wicked no more to take their ſwinge, as they haue done in waſting and ſpoiling his Church at their pleaſures. She hath now cauſe therfore to reioice, being rid out of the tyrants hands: and alſo for her ſafetie, wherein there is plentifull occaſion of ioy and gladneſſe miniſtred vnto her for the time to come. But herewith Iſaiah ſummons vs to a common and generall reioicing, when the Church is receiued againe into Gods fauour: for queſtionleſſe, if there bee any ſparke of true godlineſſe in vs, wee ought to be exceedingly moued at her happineſſe, and to laugh and ſing for ioy when ſhe floriſheth, and to vveepe with her when ſhe is perſecuted. In a word, ſhe ſhould be the very fulneſſe of our ioy: according as the Pſalmiſt ſaith; Let my tongue cleaue to the roofe of my mouth, if I preferre not Ieruſalem to my chiefe ioy: Pſal. 137.6.

Rom. 12.15.

By the word come, hee meanes that which we ſay commonly, To haue entrance: for the Lord ſhuts vp the paſſage againſt the wicked, that they cannot range abrode at their pleaſures vnpuniſhed, as they were wont. By vncircumciſed and vncleane, hee meanes all ſuch prophane ones, as corrupt the pure ſeruice of God, and oppreſſe mens conſciences by their tyranny. They are wont to call all them vncircumciſed, who were ſtrangers from Gods Church, who had the ſigne of circumciſion; for with that all the faithfull were marked. But in reſpect that many bare this badge of the couenant, who were no whit better then the reſt; to remoue all ambiguitie, he addes, the vncleane. For the cutting away of the foreſkinne, was nothing in it ſelfe; and is by Saint Paul accounted as vncircumciſion, if the puritie of the heart bee not ioined therewith: Rom. 2.25. Gal. 3.6. Thus the Prophet ſhewes then, that ſuch kinde of perſons ſhall haue no place in the Church; that all corruptions being aboliſhed, and the true worſhip of God reſtored, ſhe may inioy a perfect and happy eſtate. In the meane while, I conſent to thoſe who refer this to the open enemies of the church, whom the Prophet brands with theſe odious names; that the ſeueritie of this chaſtiſement might put the Iewes in mind of the greatnes of their iniquities.

Anoir entré.

The ſigne of circumciſion auailes nothing, vnleſſe the puritie of the hart doth concurre therewith.

Verſ. 2. Shake thy ſelfe from the duſt: ariſe, and ſit downe, O Ieruſalem: looſe the bands of thy necke, O thou captiue daughter Zion.

An amplification.

THe Prophet deſcribes the Churches deliuerance more at large, and ſets it forth in very excellent termes. In bidding her to ſhake off the duſt, and to ariſe, let vs not by and by gather, that wee haue free will in our ſleeues to vſe it when we thinke good: for it belongs to God onely to pull vs out of the duſt, and to ſet thoſe that are fallen, vpon their feet, and to looſe the priſoners, by taking off, or breaking aſunder their bands and fetters. But wherefore doth the Prophet then inioine vs that, which ought not (as it ſeemes) to be required of vs, ſeeing it is not in our powers to performe it? I anſwere, that to ſpeake in this commanding ſort, hath much greater force in it to awaken vs, then if he had onely ſaid in naked termes, that we ſhould doe this or that: and therefore he pronounceth, that God hauing ſet her into her firſt libertie, ſhe ſhould now come forth of the mire.

No free will in vs to that which is good.

Queſt.

Anſ.

The word to ſit, ſignifies a floriſhing eſtate, and is oppoſed to the verb to lie, whereby is meant an extreame miſerie. I grant, that ſometimes to ſit downe, ſignifies to be made low: as when it is ſaid to Babylon, Sit thou in the duſt, Chap.47.1. But it is heere taken in another ſignification, for hauing commanded her to ariſe, he by and by addes, and ſit downe, meaning, that ſhe ſhould no more lie along, but ſhould be reſtored to her former eſtate, and ſhould no more afterwards be troden downe by her enemies.

Verſ. 3. For thus ſaith the Lord, yee were ſold for nought, therefore ſhall yee be redeemed without money.

It will be as eaſie for God to redeeme his Church, as it was for him to ſuffer her to be ſold.

THis verſe hath bin ill expounded by many, who haue deſcanted here too ſubtilly, for they haue inuented many things beſides the Prophets purpoſe. Now this agrees with that which he hath ſaid in the 50. Chapter verſ.1. where he asketh for the creditor to whom he ſold them: and here he ſaith in like maner, you were ſold for nought: as if he had ſaid, that he tooke no money, neither was he engaged to any creditor at all that could challenge them by right of ſale. This ſerues greatly to cõfirme the promiſe: for the Iewes might doubt touching the truth of this promiſed freedome, in regard the Chaldeans the mightieſt of all nations, held them priſoners a long time. But the Lord preuẽts this doubt, ſaying, I neither ſold, nor pawned you. You were ſold for nought, and therefore I may require you againe, and claime you as mine owne. Stand not ſo much then whether the matter be hard to compaſſe or no, ſeeing I haue promiſed you libertie, neither diſpute you too and fro of the matter by your carnall reaſon, for ỹ Chaldeans haue no right at all to kee pe poſſeſſion, neither can they be able to hinder your paſſage. To conclude, euen as in the place before alleaged he cleared himſelfe from the imputation of an vnthrift, who is compelled to make ſale of, or to pawne his children for debt, ſo in this place he ſhewes that they were taken from him, and were let go of him gratis, for no other cauſe, but in regard they had prouoked him thereunto by their iniquities, Chap.50.1. Therefore there is no more difficultie to redeeme them, then there was in parting from them.

Some expound this more ſubtillie, that we are redeemed freely by Chriſt. The doctrine no doubt is true: but it agrees not with the Prophets intention (in this place) for his meaning is to correct the diffidence of the Iewes, that he might aſſure them of their freedome. Let it ſuffice then that when God is purpoſed to redeeme his Church, he will not ſtand much about beating the price with the Chaldeans, whom he will eaſily chaſe from their vniuſt poſſeſſion, and that whether they will or no.

Verſ. 4. For thus ſaith the Lord God, My people went downe afore time into Egypt to ſoiourne there, and Aſhur oppreſſed them without cauſe.

An argument taken from the leſſe to the greater, in this, and in the next verſe.

THe expoſitors ſoare aloft heere, and in the meane while come nothing neere the matter. The Iewes forge three captiuities heere. The Chriſtians differ from them, in ſuppoſing that it is ſpoken heere of the third captiuitie vnder Antichriſt, frõ which Chriſt ſhall deliuer them. But in my iudgement the Prophet hath a farre other meaning, for he argues from the leſſe to the greater, and alleageth the captiuitie vnder Pharaoh, from which the people in old time were deliuered by the wonderfull power of the Lord. His argument ſtands thus then: If the Lord puniſhed the Egyptians becauſe they dealt ſo barbarouſlie with his people, much more will he be reuenged on the Chaldeans, who no leſſe cruellie tyrannized ouer them. For Pharaoh had much more ſhew of reaſon to domineere ouer the Iewes then the Chaldeans had. For Iacob going downe into Egypt with his familie, ſubiected himſelfe therby vnder Pharaohs power, who in thankfulnes for the good ſeruice which Ioſeph had done him and the kingdome, aſſigned out to his father and brethren a very large countrie, fit to nouriſh their cattell in for their abode. The ſucceſſors of Pharaoh prouing vnthankfull, and forgetting the benefits receiued by Ioſephs meanes, they afflicted all Iacobs poſteritie diuers waies. Neither was the Lord behind hand with them in recompenſing this vnkindnes and ingratitude with a ſwift and ſeuere vengeance. But the wickednes of the Chaldeans was farre worſe, and more inſupportable, in that they caſt the Iewes out of their countrie, vnto which they had a iuſt title, to leade them away captiue. If the Lord then could not indure the ingratitude, nor the vniuſt taxes which the Egyptians laid vpon the Iſraelites, though they might claime a iuſt poſſeſſion, how much leſſe would he ſuffer this violence and crueltie of the Chaldeans, who had no right at all to retaine his people, but oppreſſed them by force and tyrannie? See Chap.49. 24. 25.

By Aſhur, he meanes the Chaldeans, who were ioined vnder one Monarchie with the Aſſyrians: but he names the Aſſyrian eſpeciallie, becauſe he was the firſt who greatly afflicted Iudeah, and made a way to this captiuitie.

Verſ. 5. Now therefore what haue I heere, ſaith the Lord, that my people is taken away for nought, and they that rule ouer them make them to howle, ſaith the Lord? and my name all the day continuallie is blaſphemed?

HE proſecutes, and confirmes that which I haue ſaid, namely, that he hath no reaſon to ſuffer his people to lie any longer vnder this ſeruitude: in theſe words therefore he doth as it were blame his owne delay. As if he ſhould ſay, Shall I not manifeſt my power? Shall I not defend my people? If Pharaoh who who was ſo lawfull a poſſeſſor, could not reſiſt me; ſhall theſe theeues and robbers bee ſtronger then he?

In the next place he recites the cauſes that ſhould mooue him to call backe their captiuitie. But we muſt heere ſupply a cloſe oppoſition in the word taken: for the Egyptians led not Iacob captiue forcibly: hee went downe thither willingly when famin preſſed him; and yet his poſteritie was ſet free. How much more ſhall they bee violently plucked out of their hands, who forced them out of their owne Country, to ſubdue them as ſlaues againſt their will?

Afterwards, to augment the indignitie of the fact, he ſaith his people were conſtrained to howle, or cry, without ceaſing. Some expound it otherwiſe: but I thinke it is ſaid to augment the fault, in regard hee expreſſeth what violence and oppreſſion the Chaldeans exerciſed ouer the Iewes: for they contented not themſelues to vſurpe an vniuſt dominion ouer them, but they handled their priſoners cruelly. Moreouer, to cry or howle, argues a deeper miſerie then when we ſigh or weepe. Doubtleſſe there is appearance that the ſorrow is violent, when the ſame extorts yellings and pitifull cries. It is indeede a ſimilitude taken from wilde beaſtes, which ſhewes an extreme deſpaire.

And that my name ſhould be expoſed all the day long to blaſphemies.] This is the third and principall reaſon why the Lord will deliuer his people; namely, that his name may not alwaies be made a ſcorne, nor laid open to the outrages of the wicked; for hee reſpects his owne honour, and therefore conſerues his Church, and the worſhip of his name: but when the Church is ſcattered, then the wicked by and by take occaſion to belch forth their blaſphemies, and offer proud contempt euen againſt the higheſt Maieſtie. It is rightly ſaid then, that in deliuering his people, he will defend his own cauſe. I will neither ſtand to recite nor confute the diuerſities of expoſitions vpon this place, becauſe I thinke it ſufficient that I haue briefly touched the natiue ſenſe of the Prophets words.

Verſ. 6. Therefore my people ſhall know my name: therefore they ſhall know in that day, that I am he that doth ſpeake: behold it is I.*

*Or, I will be preſent.

The concluſion.

THe Prophet concludes that from this verſe, which hee touched in the two former verſes; namely, that the people ſhould in the end bee deliuered by the Lord, who will not be found contrary vnto himſelfe. For if hee hath redeemed their fathers: and if hee hath alwaies aſſiſted his Church (in former times) he will neuer ſuffer their ſucceſſors to be ouerwhelmed, whom he hath adopted. We are diligently to obſerue the verb Shall know: for the knowledge of the name of God, conſiſts

1 firſt, in reiecting all ſuperſtitions: ſecondly,
2 to know him in his word, which is his liuely
3 image: and thirdly, by his works. We muſt not forge a god after our owne fantaſies & luſts; but ſo comprehend him, as he hath manifeſted himſelfe vnto vs. Thus the Lord concludes then, that he will effectually aſſiſt and accompliſh whatſoeuer hee hath promiſed; that the people may know their expectation is not in vaine, and may heereby bee more and more confirmed in the knowledge of his name.

But we muſt remember what we haue ſaid heeretofore touching that experimentall knowledge, which ſubſcribes to the authoritie of the word. Moreouer, Gods ſpeaking is to bee referred to his promiſes, and his preſence to his actuall power. As if he ſhould ſay; Albeit you heare nothing now but the ſound of words, in which I promiſe you things almoſt incredibe, yet heereafter you ſhall ſee the performance thereof: for I purpoſe really to act that which I haue promiſed. Hence we may gather a generall doctrine; namely, that the promiſes and the execution thereof, are knit together with an inſeparable bond. As oft as Satan then ſolicites vs to diſtruſt, as if God had quite and cleane reiected vs; let vs remember this point, and let vs truſt boldly in the name of our God, who neuer promiſeth ought in vaine: and if it falles out that he performes not the ſame forthwith, yet he will doe it in conuenient time.

Experimentall knowledge.

The promiſes and the execution thereof, inſeparably knit together.

Verſ. 7. How beautifull vpon the mountaines are the feete of him that declareth and publiſheth peace! that declareth good tidings, and publiſheth ſalnation, ſaying vnto Zion; Thy God raigneth.

THe Prophet confirmes the faithfull againe in the certaintie of Gods word: Another confirmatio.
1 Firſt, to giue them certaine aſſurance of being reſtored to their firſt freedome: and
2 next, that hee might in the meane while ſuſtaine their hearts in good hope, during this ſore bondage. Hee ſpeakes elegantly in the commendation of this meſſage, that the faithfull might content themſelues in this calamitie, with the offer of the hope of their ſaluation to come. For indeed, they were to imbrace this conſolation propounded vnto them, that being fortified therewith, they might quietly and patiently expect an happy iſſue of the promiſe. That the faithfull then might bridle their deſires by patience, he adornes the word of God with excellent titles. (As if hee ſhould ſay) Can you be ſo vnthankfull, as not to content your ſelues with this ineſtimable treaſure of God word, which brings ſo many commodities with it? Will you let looſe the raines to your vnbridled affections? Will ye indeed complaine of God? For his meaning is to call backe the people from their diffidence, who were ouercarried through diuers allurements, and would not reſt ſecurely vpon the truth of Gods word. For this cauſe hee extolles the excellencie of his doctrine, and ſhewes, that the Lord will giue much more by it, then wee can aske or thinke.

Beſides, it is plaine that hee ſpeakes not heere of euery kind of doctrine, but of that onely which is fit to yeeld conſolation. Hee ſhewes then that the feete of ſuch as bring glad tidings from Gods mouth, are pleaſant and deſirable. Why ſo? Becauſe this conſolation ſerues not onely to aſſwage our ſorrows, but brings with it ineſtimable ioy: for he ſpeakes heere of the doctrine of ſaluation; and therefore he ſaith, that by it, peace, good tidings, and ſalvation is publiſhed. By the word peace, hee vnderſtands an happy and proſperous eſtate: but wee haue heeretofore intreated at large touching the ſignification of this word.

Saying to Zion, &c.] Hence we gather what the beginning of this doctrine is, which Iſaiah publiſheth, and what it is wee ought principally to deſire; namely, that the kingdome of God may be eſtabliſhed amongſt vs: for if he reigne not, all things muſt needes fall to ruine, and ſo by conſequence, our eſtate muſt be miſerable. As on the contrary, the onely way to ſalvation is, when God vouchſafes to take the care of vs: and it is alſo the meanes whereby wee obtaine peace, how confuſed or deſperate ſoeuer things otherwiſe are.

Let vs alſo remember that this meſſage appertaines to Zion; that is to ſay, to the church. For what haue the prophane and ignorant ſort to doe with it? The Apoſtle Saint Paul alleageth this place, Rom. 10. 15. to proue that the preaching of the Goſpell is of God, and not of men; and that it is hee who ſends the Miniſters, which bring the glad tidings of ſaluation. Now he vſeth this gradation; Whoſoeuer ſhall call on the name of the Lord, ſhall bee ſaued: but vve cannot call vpon him vvhom vve know not? For what giues praier entrance but faith, by which, hauing imbraced God for our father, we may familiarly diſcharge all our cares into his boſome? But whereupon is this faith grounded? Vpon the doctrine of the Goſpell, whereby the Lord manifeſts his loue vnto vs: and for this end vſeth the labours and miniſtry of men. In concluſion therefore, the Apoſtle addes, that none is fit to preach this word, vnleſſe he be ſent of God. But it ſeemes as if Saint Paul wreſted theſe words of the Prophet, to ſerue his owne turne: for hee ſpeakes not heere of Gods ſending forth of Miniſters, but rather how welcome their comming ought to be vnto vs. I anſwere, that the Apoſtle hath held this reſolued principle; namely, that we muſt deſire none, but ſuch as are ſent of God. But from whom comes this ſaluation? Comes it from men? No, ſuch matter: for a benefit ſo excellent, can come to vs from none but God himſelfe. He rightly concludes then, that this ſalvation proceeds from God, and not from man.

1
2 Faith giues praier entrance.
3
4 Obiect. Anſ.

Verſ. 8. The voice of thy watchmen ſhall bee heard: they ſhall lift vp their voice, and ſhout together: for they ſhall ſee eye to eye when the Lord ſhall bring againe Zion.

A continuation of the former confirmation.

HE continues on his ſpeech, ſhewing, that the reſtauration of the people ſhall be ſuch, as the meſſenger ſhall boldly publiſh it.

By the lifting vp of the voice, he ſignifies the ſame that he ſpake of before touching theſe words, vpon the mountaines: for the thing ſhall not be done in a corner, but it ſhall be ſo manifeſt and apparant, that all ſhall be ſmitten with aſtoniſhment. Thoſe who ſpeake of things doubtfull, mutter them out betweene the teeth, and dare not lift vp their voice: but this ſhall be no perplexed or doubtfull matter. The Prophet borrowed this ſimilitude from watchmen, whom they were wont to place in Cities: though all the Prophets indeed are called by this name, becauſe they are placed in the watch-tower to watch for the peoples ſafetie. Hab. 2. 1. Chap. 21. 11.

When hee ſaith, they ſhould lift vp their voice, it is to ſhew, that during the captiuitie, there ſhould be ſilence; becauſe the tongues of the Prophets ſhould then cleaue to the roofe of their mouthes: for albeit they admoniſhed euery one priuatly, yet they ſhould not haue liberty to preach publikely. In which reſpect alſo, Ieremiah ſaith, I will put my mouth in the duſt: Lam. 3. 29. But when the Lord ſhall cauſe the captiuitie of his people to returne, then the watchmen which were dumbe before, ſhould haue their mouthes opened to publiſh their freedome: for they ſhould not ſpeake in hugger mugger, neither ſhould they content themſelues to giue ſome priuie token of this conſolation; but ſhould boldly proclaime this ſalvation vpon the mountaines: verſ. 7. Which alſo appeares by that in Chap. 40. 1, 2, 3. where wee haue handled this matter more fully. Ezek. 3. 16.

Eye to eye.] That is to ſay, plainly and openly. Theſe things are indeed to bee extended to our ſpirituall conuerſion. I grant wee are to tie our ſelues to the literall ſenſe; yet ſo, that we are to comprehend vnder the ſame, that fauour which God ſhewed to this ancient people: for theſe things were accompliſhed when he ſet the Iewes free; and for this end hee vſed the miniſtrie of Zerobabel, Ezra, and Nehemiah. But yet wee muſt ſtretch the ſame euen to Chriſts comming, at which time the Church was gathered from all the parts of the world: yea, more then that, euen to Chriſts laſt comming, in which all things ſhall be ſet into their perfect eſtate.

Verſ. 9. O yee deſolate places of Ieruſalem, bee glad and reioice together: for the Lord hath comforted his people: he hath redeemed Ieruſalem.

An exhortation to reioice.

HE exhorts the faithfull to thankſgiuing. But his ſpeciall drift is to confirme their hearts in the expectation and aſſurance of this ſalvation, as if the inioying of the thing called them preſently to thankfulnes. For the truth is, we are too little affected when the Lord proteſts that he will aſſiſt vs: yea, wee thinke he doth but mock vs, vnleſſe he effect that which he hath promiſed. The Prophets therefore are wont to inſiſt very much vpon this point, namely, in confirming the peoples harts, & in ſetting their deliuerance as it were before before their eies. Now howsoeuer it seemes auke and absurd to call to songs of ioy in the time of heauines, as in Psal. 137. 4. yet wee haue formerly shewed; that this maner of speech is very fit to awaken such as grone vnder the burthen of care, feare, or sorrow. He mentions the deserts, or desolate places of Ierusalem, to the end they should hope for the re-edifying thereof, notwithstanding the now lay in the dust: for this title agrees better for the remouing away of feare, then if he had called her an happie or flourishing citie. From the time then that she fell into this most miserable estate, they would haue thought these promises had concerned them nothing at all, vnlesse the miseries against which they were to encounter had bin manifested vnto them. Which taught them to wait for this restauration in assured hope, though they now saw nothing but horrible ruins, and desolations.

Why the Prophets inſiſted ſo long in preſſing the promiſes.

For the Lord hath comforted.] The Lord turned the peoples mourning into ioy, and of captiues, set them free. Some may obiect that this was not yet come to passe. But in Gods promises we must behold those things plainly, which as yet appeare not to our senses, how farre soeuer they surpasse the reach of our reason.

Obiect. Ans.

He hath redeemed his people.] Heere wee see that the deliuerance of the Church is the proper worke of God. And if this ought to be affirmed in regard of that deliuerance out of Babylon, which was but a figure or shadow, what shall we say of our spirituall deliuerance it selfe? Can that be attributed to men, without offring great wrong vnto God? Let vs conclude then, that as it appertaines to God only to deliuer his Church, so none but he can preserue her free estate.

Vers. 10. The Lord hath made bare his holy arme in the sight of all the Gentiles, and all the ends of the earth shall see the saluation of God.

God discouers his arme two waies.

HATH made bare.] This is a similitude taken from men of armes, who turned vp their sleeues when they prepared themselues to the combate. Though to make bare heere signifies not so much the making of the arme naked, as the manifesting of it, and stretching it forth. For when wee sit still, our armes are lightly folded one in another, or wee couer them: so in regard of our senselesnes, we imagin that God sits idle, as men are wont to do, vntill he manifest his power.

He calles it the arme of his holines, in regard that he should display his power for the saluation of the people: for there is heere a mutuall correspondencie betweene God and his Church, which is consecrated vnto him. I grant that his arme is made bare in the gouernment of the whole world: but it is neuer called the arme of his holines (as in this place) but when he giues some speciall relefe vnto his Church. The power of God must be considered two waies: first, generally, in the conseruation of all the creatures: then, especially in the protection of his Church, for the care he hath thereof is particular, and not common to others.

1
2

In the sight of all the Gentiles.] His meaning is, that this deliuerance shall be worthie of so great admiration, that euen the blind themselues shal see it. Whereas this noble spectacle is manifested to the ends of the earth, we therein perceiue that the Prophet speakes not only of the bringing againe of Zion, as in vers. 8. which should happen some few yeeres after, but of the generall restauration of y whole Church both of Iewes and Gentiles. The Rabbins therefore do malitiously restraine this to the deliuerance out of captiuitie from Babylon. And the Christians on the other side vnaptly to our spirituall deliuerance, which wee obtaine by Christ: for we must begin at the deliuerance vnder Cyrus, and goe on still euen till our owne times. Thus then the Lord began to manifest his arme among the Medes and Persians, but afterwards he made it appeare in the sight of all nations.

1
2

Vers. 11. Depart ye, depart ye: go out from hence, and touch no vncleane thing; goe out of the midst of her: be ye cleane, that beare the vessels of the Lord.

An exhortation, incouraging the Iewes to depart out of Babylon.

HE now exhorts the people to be alwaies readie to depart, and yet in the meane while patientlie to indure their miserie: for as the ouer-great haste of the people to be loosed deserued to be represled, so their drousines was to be quickned, in respect that before their deliuerance euery ones desire was wonderfullie kindled to returne, but whe the time was expired, their long expectation had abated their heate, and had depriued them not only of all hope, but of all will or desire to returne, so as the number of those that came back againe into Iudea was very small. They were mingled amongst the Babylonians, who had so entised and corrupted them, that they made little or no reckning at all of their countrie. It was very needfull therefore that they should be awakened and quickned vp to be of good courage in this their long attendance, and that they should not suffer themselues to be stained with the filthinesses of the Babylonians.

The second member wherein he forbids them to touch any vncleane thing, doth better confirme that I was about to say. For he commands them to keepe themselues pure and cleane frō the pollutions in which the Chaldeans plunged themselues, because there was danger that they might be corrupted with heathenish superstitions, to which vice wee are by nature too much enclined, and are therefore easily misled by euill examples. He exhorts them then notwithstanding their captiuitie, not to yeeld to any thing whereby to please their cruell Lords, in hope to mend their condition: not to be drawne away by any allurements from the pure worship of God; nor to defile themselues with Babylonish Idolatries: that they should not so much as in outward shew bow downe to the Idols,

1
2
3
4

nor

To what temptations captiues are subiect, that are oppressed vnder Tyrants.

nor consent to false religion, for this is that accursed pollution which the Lord exhorts them heere to auoid. Such temptations as these aforenamed, are incident to poore prisoners that are oppressed vnder Tyrants, which sometimes so faint, that they giue themselues leaue to doe many wicked and vnlawfull things, vnder pretence that they would thereby asswage the furie of Tyrants. But in this place we see how friuolous their excuses be. For the Prophet not only requires this puritie of the Iewes when they shall be set free, but also during the time of their slauerie and bondage, yea, though it were with the losse of their liues in the very place.

Doubtlesse these aduertisements also belong vnto vs, who by S. Paul are exhorted to purge our selues from all impuritie both of body and minde, 2. Cor. 7. 1. Moreouer, Esaiah directs this exhortation particularly to the Priests and Leuites, who were to shew themselues most constant, in regard they were the standard-bearers: not that it was lawfull for others to defile themselues, but he speakes principallie to them, that they might giue good example to those ouer whom God had placed them as Captaines and Leaders. We are also to remember what we haue seene heretofore, which Isaiah also will repeate againe in the end of his booke, namely, that there should be a new Priesthode planted ouer the redeemed people. And yet I willinglie consent, that the Leuites & Ministers of the Temple are heere mentioned by way of excellencie, for all the people. Thus this doctrine then appertaines at this day not only to the Ministers of the word, but to all Christians in generall, who are also called a royall Priesthood, 1. Pet. 2. 9. and are not only appointed to beare the vessels of the temple, but are also themselues the temples of God, 1. Cor. 3. 6. For this cause Ezechiel hath foretold, that in the restauration of the Church, the Leuites should be high Priests, and all the people should be put in the place of Leuites. Seeing then that the Lord hath aduanced all vnto so high a degree and dignitie, it necessarilie followes, that this puritie is required of all without exception, and therfore S. Paul applies this place to the whole Church, 2. Cor. 6. 17.

Vers. 12. For ye shall not goe out with haste, nor depart by fleeing away: but the Lord will goe before you, and the God of Israel will gather you together.

An amplification.

THe Prophet againe amplifies this benefit of their redemption, for they were all so swallowed vp with despaire, that they thought it a matter incredible. He especiallie speakes to them that were to goe into captiuitie, that they should not faint in being brought to such a wofull condition. But he promiseth them that this deliuerance shall not be by flight, as that out of Egypt was. For there is heere a close comparison betweene their deliuerance out of Egypt, and this out of Babylon. For they fled by night out of Egypt, fayning as if they had only meant to haue gone three dayes iourney to offer sacrifice vnto God, Exod. 3. 5. and 8. 27. Afterward, they went forth hastily and with tumult, as it was enioined them, Exod. 12. 31. and then Pharaoh pursued them, thinking vtterly to haue destroyed them, Exod. 13. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9.

But heere it is said, it shall be farre otherwise with the Iewes (at this time) for they shal goe forth like Conquerors, so as none shall dare to stop their passage. In a word, they should depart thence (as wee are wont to say) with banner displayed. This deliuerance then shal be much more excellent and admirable, then that of Egypt.

Ils s'en iront a en seigne desployee.

The Lord shall goe before you.] That is to say, hee shall leade you, and be your Captaine in the way. But will some say, Did not God also conduct the ancient people, when he brought them out of Egypt? It is true indeed: but he shewed not his maiestie so fully then as hee did heere. For now he brought out his people as a valiant Captaine doth his souldiers, after her hath gotten the field of the enemie. To this appertaines the word, shall gather: for they should not bee scattered one from another, as it falles out in some sudden astonishment; neither should they wander to and fro, but should march in troupes in good aray, as vnder their colours. It is as much then as if he had said, God will conduct you like an armie assembled by himselfe, one shall not follow another as it were by stealth, but being knit all together, you shall march boldly without feare, none shall hinder you, for you shall be gathered vnder the leading of God, to returne home into your countrie.

Quest.

Anſ.

Vers. 13. Behold, my seruant shall prosper: he shall be exalted and extolled, and be very high.

The restauration of the Church consists wholly in Christ.

ISaiah hauing spoken of the restauration of the Church, comes now to Christ, in whom all things in heauen and in earth are gathered together, as saith the Apostle, Ephes. 1. 10. Some expound the verb Iascil, Shall behaue himselfe prudentlie: but because it is by and by added, that he shall be exalted, the scope of the text requires it (as I think) that we should rather translate, He shall prosper, seeing the infinitiue, Sacal, signifies so much. Hee speakes then touching the prosperous estate of the Church. But because there was no such thing to be seene in outward appearance, he brings vs to the soueraigne King, who should set all things in their perfect estate, and bids them to wait for him. Now the oppositions which the Prophet heere vseth are diligentlie to be marked, for he opposeth the highnes of this King whom the Lord would exalt, to the poore and miserable condition of this people, who were almost brought into despaire. And he promiseth that this King shall be the head of the people, who shall florish vnder so worthie a leader, though now they be afflicted and brought to the gates of destruction. Why so? Because all things shall prosper that their King takes in hand.

1

2

He

He calles Christ a seruant, in respect of the office which God had imposed vpon him. For Christ is not to bee considered of heere, as bearing the person of a priuate man; but with that office which the Father had committed vnto him, namely, that he might be this leader and conducter of the Church, and might restore all things. And let vs for our part know, that the things heere spoken of Christ, doe also belong vnto vs. Christ is giuen vs of God, and therefore haue wee interest in his office. For the Prophet might haue said in a word, that he should be exalted and be verie high: but in attributing to him the name of a seruant, it is as much as if he had said; Hee is therefore exalted for your sakes.

Chap. 9. 6.

Vers. 14. As many were astonied at thee, his visage was so deformed of men, and his forme of the sonnes of mens.

*Or, beautie.

A preuention in this and the next verse.

HEe vseth this preuention, in regard this maiestie and dignitie of Christ appeared not at the first bluish: for which cause they might take occasion to reiect him. Therefore the Prophet shewes, that Christ must first be humbled and made low. And thus he preuents the doubts which might haue caused them to stagger, in beholding his abiect and deformed estate. As if he should say; You must not despise this his baseneſse and deformitie, for it brings with it forthwith eternall felicitie.

By men, I vnderstand not this by way of comparison, as many expound it, to wit, More then men: or, Aboue that which falles out among men. But I willingly accept of the plainest sense; namely, that Christ was deformed amongst men: or, that his beautie was defaced, in regard of the peruerse iudgements of men.

All were astonished.] Some take this astonishment for that admiration which men were in, when they saw the miracles which Christ did: and yet being brought to the Crosse, they straightway reiected him. But they come nothing neere the Prophets meaning: for hee saith, that Christ shall be so deformed, that all shall be astonied at him: his baseneſse of birth was such, as all despised him; his glory was hid vnder the infirmitie of flesh. And howsoeuer a maiestie worthy of the onely begotten Sonne of God, shined in him; yet men discerned it not: but they rather gazed vpon that his abasement, which eclipsed and darkened his glory. See heere the true cause of this astonishment then, namely, because he conuersed among men, without any outward pompe. For the Iewes expected not a Messias of so meane an estate. Now at his crucifying this astonishment was augmented much more.

Luke 9. 58.

Saint Paul speakes of this abasement of Christ, and then of his exaltation, when hee saith; He being in the forme of God, thought it no robberie to be equall with God: but he humbled (or emptied himselfe) by taking vpon him the forme of a seruant, and was made like vnto men; and was found in shape as a man. Hee humbled himselfe and became obedient vnto the death, euen vnto the death of the Crosse. Wherefore God hath also highly exalted him, and giuen him a name aboue euery name, that at the name of Iesus, euery knee should bow, both of things in heauen, and things in earth, and things vnder the earth: and that euery tongue should confesse that Iesus is the Lord, vnto the glory of God the Father. It was needfull the that Christ should first be humbled and shamefully intreated, and that this glory into which hee was exalted, should not appeare at the first. But after his humiliation vpon the Crosse, came a glorious resurrection, with a soueraigne degree of honour.

Phil. 2. 6. and he vnto following.

Christ humbled before he was exalted.

Vers. 15. So shall hee sprinkle many nations: the Kings shall shut their mouthes at him: for that which had not been told them shall they see, and that which they had not heard, shall they vnderstand.

OThers expound; He shall distill: so, vnder a figure, taking it To speake. But seeing the verbe Nasa signifies to sprinkle; and being so taken in the holy Scriptures, I had rather follow this interpretation. His meaning is, that the Lord shall spread his word among many nations. In the next place he addes the effect of this doctrine, in saying, that Kings shall shut their mouthes in signe of astonishment: but yet diuers from that which he mentioned before: for men shut their mouthes and stand astonished, when the matter is of such consequence, that they are vnable to expresse it, because they can finde no wordes wherewith to vtter the same.

They shall see that which was not told them.] The Prophet shewes that this astonishment shall not proceede from the bare sight of Christs person, but rather from the preaching of the Gospell: for though he rose againe, yet all esteemed him dead, if the glory of his resurrection had not been published. The preaching of the gospel therfore manifested those things which neither the eye had seene, nor the eare heard of before: as also in regard the publishing of this doctrine came to Kings and nations farre off, euen to the ends of the world.

1. Cor. 2. 9.

Saint Paul alleadgeth this text, and shewes that it was fulfilled in his ministerie, reioicing that hee had preached the Gospell to those who had neuer heard of it: Rom. 15. 21. For this is the office of an Apostle, and not of euery Minister now. Thus then our Prophet shewes, that the kingdome of Christ shall not be shut vp in so narrow bounds, as within the land of Iudeah; but should spread it selfe further off. The Iewes vnderstood somewhat by the Law and the Prophets; but the Gentiles knew nothing at all. This therefore by consequence belongs vnto them.

The Apostles office.

Shall vnderstand.] By this hee shewes that faith consists in certentie & in assured knowledge:

Faith consists in certaintie of knowledge.

No faith without certaintie of knowledge.

ledge: for where this wants, there faith questionlesse is not. Whence we may discerne how ridiculous the opinion of the Papists is, touching their implicite faith, in beleeuing as the Church beleeues: which indeede is nothing else but an absurd ignorance, or to say better, a meere circle and blinde imagination.

THE LIII. CHAPTER.

Vers. 1. Who will beleeue our report? and to whom is the arme of the Lord reuealed?

An holy complaint in the person of all the Ministers of the Gospell.

WEe will not stand to speake of the diuision, or rather dismembring of this Chapter: for it should rather haue begunne at the 13. verse of the former Chapter. And this ought to be ioined to that which was said a little before: for the Prophet staies heere as it were in the middle of his speech. For hauing said before, that the name of Christ should be published farre and neere, euen amongst strange nations; and yet that he shall be so contemptible, that these things shall in a sort be esteemed no better then fables, he now suddenly stops in the mid way as it were, and cries, that none would beleeue him. And therewithall he also expresseth his griefe, to think that men should be so incredulous, as to reiect their owne saluation. This is an holy complaint then: for his will is, that all should know Christ, and yet he sees but a few which beleeue the Gospell: which makes him to vtter this lamentable cry; Who hath beleeued our report?

Vse.

Let vs then sigh and complaine with the Prophet: yea, let vs be euen greeued in our soules, if wee see little fruit to come of our labours, and let vs powre forth our complaints before God. For thus ought the faithfull seruants of God to bee affected, if they meane sincerely to discharge their duties. Isaiah shewes then, that the number of those shall bee very small, that shall submit themselues to the Gospell of Christ: for when hee cries; Who will beleeue our preaching? it is as much as if he had said; That of an hundred that heare the Gospell, scarcely one of them will proue a beleeuer.

If they that haue preaching continue blind, how miserable blinde must they be that haue no preaching at all.

Neither speakes hee of himselfe onelie heere, but as one representing the person of all the faithfull Ministers. Although God send many of his seruants then, yet there are but a few that beleeue: What shall become of them that inioy no preaching at all? shall we need to wonder much at their extreame blindnes? If the earth that is well husbanded, brings forth but little fruit; what is to bee expected from that that is vtterly barren, and vnhusbanded? But the Gospell loseth no whit of his excellencie, though it get but few followers: neither doth the small numbers of beleeuers diminish the authoritie thereof, nor yet obscure the infinit glory of it; but rather so great is the mystery of it, that it can hardlie find any welcome in the world: for it is esteemed folly, 1. Cor. 1. 23. because it is far aboue the reach of their carnall reason.

The reason why so few beleeue.

In the second member Isaiah more cleerly sets downe the reason why there are so few beleeuers. What is that? None can come vnto God, without the especiall illumination of his holy Spirit. But those are deceiued in my iudgement, who thinke that arme heere signifies Iesus Christ. For it is a rendring of the cause, why the Gospell gets no more attendants; namely, they cannot comprehend the mysteries thereof by the dexteritie of their turall wit. This is a very worthy sentence therefore, and it is alleadged both by Saint Iohn and Saint Paul to this very purpose: Iohn saith; that albeit Christ had done so many miracles, yet they beleeued not: that the word which Isaiah had spoken might bee fulfilled; Lord, who hath beleeued our report? and to whom is the arme of the Lord reuealed? Iohn 12. 37 And Saint Paul saith; But all haue not obeied the Gospell: for Isaiah saith, Lord, who hath beleeued our preaching? Rom. 10. 16.

Both of them shew, how we are not to wonder if that which was so long since foretold, doth still come to passe, that so they might remoue that scandall which otherwise would remaine, in regard of this peoples reuolt, who in stead of acknowledging and receiuing Christ when he came, did obstinately resist him. And yet Isaiah meant not to tax his own Countrymen alone with this sinne, but comprehends all those that shall succeed them to the end of the world: for as long as Christ shal haue any kingdome on earth, this prophecie must be daily accomplished. And therefore the faithfull ought to be confirmed with this testimonie, against such an offence. Moreouer, this refutes their ignorance, who imagin that faith is in euery mans power, because the word preached is common to all. For though all be called to saluation by the ministery thereof, yet the Prophet expresly affirmes, that the outward voice which calles, profits nothing, vnlesse the particular grace of the holy Ghost concurre therewith. But whence is this difference? Onely from Gods secret election, who reserues the cause thereof hid in his owne counsell.

This incredulitie common both to Iewes and Gentiles.

Many called, but few chosen.

Vers. 2. But hee shall grow vp before him as a branch, & as a roote out of a dry ground: he hath neither forme nor beautie: when we shall see him, there shall be no forme that we should desire him.

This sentence hath reference to vers. 14. where it was said, that at the first appearing

Wee must not iudge of Chriſtes glorie by outward appearances, but according as the Scriptures deſcribes him vnto vs.

ring of Chriſt, he ſhould haue no forme nor beautie in mens eyes; but before God, he ſhould be highly exalted into a ſoueraigne degree of honour, and greatly eſteemed. By which wee are taught, not to iudge of Chriſts glory according to outward appearance, but by faith; ſo to apprehend him, as the holy Scriptures haue deſcribed him. And therefore this particle Before him, is oppoſed to humane reaſon, which cannot comprehend this his admirable greatneſſe.

He vſeth almoſt the very ſame ſimilitude with that in Chap. 11. 1. where he ſaid, that a rod ſhould come forth of the ſtock of Iſhai: for the houſe of Dauid was then like a withered ſtock of a tree, which had no ſap nor any appearance of beautie left. And therefore in that place hee names not the houſe royall, but of Iſhai, whoſe name was then little renowned. Onely the Prophet addes heere, a dry ground: thereby ſignifying, that Chriſt ſhould take no force from the moiſture of the earth, to cauſe him to grow as trees do: but ſhould increaſe after a ſupernaturall manner. Thoſe who allegorize heere, and thinke that the Virgin Mary is called a dry ground in this place, becauſe ſhee conceiued by the holy Ghoſt, and not by the ſeed of man, doe miſſe their marke: for the queſtion is not heere touching Chriſt his birth, but of his whole kingdome.

Now the Prophet ſaith that he ſhall be like a branch iſſuing out of a dry ground, which in appearance will neuer grow to any ſtature. For indeed, if wee ſhall conſider by what meanes Chriſt hath eſtabliſhed his kingdome, and what perſons he hath vſed; the weake beginnings; and the numbers of aduerſaries that reſiſted him, we ſhall eaſily perceiue that all things came to paſſe as Iſaiah foretold. What were his Apoſtles, that they ſubdued ſo many Kings and Nations by the ſword of the ſpirit? May they not well be compared to little ſprigs? Thus the Prophet ſhewes then by what meanes Chriſtes kingdome ſhould be erected and eſtabliſhed, that we ſhould not iudge thereof as of a worldly kingdome. The deformitie whereof he ſpeakes in the next place, is not only to be referred to Chriſtes perſon, which being contemptible and deſpiſed of the world, was at laſt adiudged to a ſhamefull and curſed death: but alſo to his whole kingdome, which hath no forme, beautie, nor glorie at all in the eies of men: in a word, no appearance at all to procure any great admiration in the eies of worldlings. For albeit Chriſt roſe againe, yet the Iewes alwaies eſteemed him a man crucified, and full of reproch, ſo as they proudly diſdained him.

1 2 3 4

Iob. 12, 36.

This deformitie is not only to be referred to Chriſtes perſon, but to his whole kingdome.

Verſ. 3. He is deſpiſed and reiected of men: he is a man full of ſorrowes, and hath experience of infirmities: We hid as it were our faces from him: he was deſpiſed, and we eſteemed him not.

The doctrine of this verſe is all one

THis preſent verſe tends to the ſame purpoſe with the former; namely, that men ſhould reiect Chriſt, becauſe nothing was to bee ſeene in him but ſorrowes and infirmities. The Iewes needed to haue this often repeated vnto them, that they might not conceiue a falſe opinio of Chriſt, nor of his kingdome: for he that wil righely ſee his glory, muſt paſſe from his death, to his reſurrection. Many are offended at his death, as if he had been ouercome and ouerwhelmed of it. But they muſt paſſe forwards to that diuine power and maieſtie which ſhined in his reſurrection: Rom. 1. 4. Yet if any ſhall begin at his reſurrection, hee ſhall not follow the order heere preſcribed by the Prophet; neither ſhall he comprehend the mightie power of the Lord.

with the former.

He that will take a right view of Chriſtes glorie, muſt paſſe from his death to his reſurrection.

We almoſt hid our faces from him.] It is not without cauſe that hee vſeth this word we: for thereby he ſhewes, that thus all men ſhall iudge of him. Neither ſhall any man be able euer to conceiue otherwiſe, vnleſſe the Lord correct and reforme his iudgement by the holy Ghoſt. And howſoeuer he ſeemes heere to taxe the Iewes principally, who ſhould diſdainfully reiect the Sonne of God promiſed and offered; yea and puts himſelfe in the number, as being a member of that body: yet let vs learne from this place notwithſtanding, that the whole world is here taxed and condemned of ingratitude, for contemning of Chriſt; becauſe they iudge him vnworthy the looking vpon, nay they turne their eyes from him, as from an abominable thing.

Verſ. 3. Surely hee hath borne our infirmities, and carried our ſorrowes: yet we did iudge him as plagued, and ſmitten of God, and humbled.

Now the Prophet ſets downe the cauſe why Chriſt was thus farre humbled.

THe particle Surely, is not onely an affirmatiue, but alſo ſerues for an expoſition; to wit, when any thing is brought to light that ſeemes ſtrange and vnwonted. For is it not wonderfull, nay monſtrous, that hee to whom God hath giuen ſoueraigne power ouer all creatures, ſhould be thus abaſed and humbled? So then, if the cauſe were not rendred heere, all would eſteeme this no better then a fable. Why was Chriſt thus couered ouer with dolours and infirmities? Surely becauſe he bare our ſorrowes. Saint Matthew alleadgeth this propheeie, after he hath told how Chriſt healed diſeaſes of diuers kindes: Chap. 8. 17. And yet it is moſt certaine, that he was appointed rather a Phyſition of mens ſoules, then of their bodies. Adde alſo that the Prophet ſpeakes of ſpirituall ſorrowes. But in the miracles ſhewed in the healing of mens bodies, Chriſt manifeſted a plaine proofe of that power hee had to heale the ſickneſſes of their ſoules. This healing then whereof S. Matthew ſpeakes, extended further then to their bodies: for he was ordained a Phyſition of ſoules: Matth. 9. 11, 12. And this is the cauſe why Matthew attributes that to the ſigne, which agrees to the thing ſignified.

In the ſecond member the Prophet ſhewes the greatneſſe of this peoples ingratitude and peruerſitie, in that they did not ſee the cauſe why Chriſt was thus farre humbled and afflicted, but did rather iudge that hee was smitten of God for his owne sinnes: and yet they knew well enough that hee was an innocent; yea the Iudge himselfe testified it: Matth.27.24.Luk.23.4.14.22.Iohn 18.38. Since then they saw well that he being not guiltie, bare the punishment of sinnes which hee neuer committed, wherefore did they not conceiue some rare excellencie to be in him? But in regard they saw him smitten and despised, they neuer stood to examin the cause, but iudged onely by the euents, as the fooliſh are wont to doe. And for this cause Iſaiah complaines of the frowardneſſe of mens iudgements: which considered not of the reason why Christ was so greatly afflicted. And especially he bewailes the senslesnesse of the Iewes, in esteeming God the sworne enemie of Christ, without thinking of their owne iniquities, which by this meanes were done away.

Verſ. 5. But hee was wounded for our tranſgreſſions, hee was broken for our iniquities: the chaſtiſement of our peace was *vpon him, *and with his ſtripes we are healed.

*Or, In his wounds is our medicin.

HE once again repeats the cause of these so great afflictions of Christ, to preuent the scandall that might arise: for the spectacle of the Crosse driues many farre from Christ. That is to say; whilest they onely consider of that which is present before their eies, not looking whereunto the same tends. But all offence is remoued, when they see that by his death, he hath not onely done away our iniquities, but hath also obtained saluation for vs.

A repetition of the cause, lest any should be offended at Christs abasement.

Some thinke that chaſtiſement, is here called the chastisement of peace; because men were growne senslesse, and hardened in their sinnes: and therefore it was needfull Christ should suffer. Others referre this peace to the conscience; namely, that Christ hath suffered, to giue our consciences rest. To which purpose Saint Paul saith; Being iuſtified by faith, wee haue peace with God: Rom.5.1. But I take this word simply for reconciliation; because Christ bare the chastisement which was due vnto vs. And thus the wrath of God iustly inflamed against vs, is appeased, and the peace made betweene God and vs, by meanes of this mediator, so as wee are now reconciled.

Hence wee gather a generall doctrine; to wit, that wee are freely reconciled vnto God, becauſe Chriſt hath paid the ranſome of our peace. The Papists will confesse thus much I grant: but by and by they restraine this doctrine to originall sinne: as if after baptisme, free reconciliation had no more place; but that we are to satisfie for the rest by our workes and merits. But our Prophet deales not heere with one kind of remiſſion onely, but extends this benefit to all the parts of our liues: so as it cannot bee lessened nor restrained to one certaine time, without committing horrible sacrilege. And by this also it is easie to ouerthrow the friuolous distinction of the Sophisters, touching the remission of the punishment and the fault: for they will not haue the punishment remitted, vnlesse it be abolished by satisfactions. But the Prophet plainlie shewes, that the punishments due to vs for our sinnes, is laid vpon Christ. What doe our Papists then but make themselues ioint redeemers with Christ, attributing vnto themselues the same power with him?

A generall doctrine.

A friuolous distinction of Sophisters, touching the fault and punishment answered.

And vvith his ſtripes vvee are healed.] Hee brings vs againe vnto Christ, that wee may haue recourse to his vvounds, if euer wee meane to recouer life: for the Prophet heere opposeth him to vs, in respect that there is nothing to bee found in vs, but death and damnation; and in Christ onely life and saluation. It is he alone that hath procured vs a plaister; yea, by his ſickneſſe hath he giuen vs health, and by his death, life: for he alone it is, who hath pacified and reconciled the Father with vs. I confesse heere is ample occasion afforded mee to speake of many things touching the fruits that come to vs by the passion of our Lord Iesus Christ: but my purpose is now rather to expound, then to preach. Let vs therfore content our selues now with this short and plaine exposition. And I wish euery one by himselfe to gather consolation from hence, and to apply the fruit of this doctrine to his particular vse: for these matters doe as well concerne all in generall, as euery one in particular.

Verſ. 6. All wee like ſheepe haue gone aſtray: wee haue turned euery one to his owne way, and the Lord hath laid vpon him the iniquities of vs all.

THat he might the better imprint the benefit of Christs death in our hearts, hee shewes how necessarie this healing is, which he mentioned in the latter end of the former verse. For if we acknowledge not our miserie and pouertie, wee shall neuer know how desireable the remedie is, which Christ hath brought vs; neither shall we euer hunger or thirst after the same, with such a longing affection as we ought; but being acquainted with our owne forlorne estate, then feeling our wants, we will runne with greedinesse to receiue the remedie, which otherwise wee shall lightly esteeme. That Christ then may bee receiued as hee deserueth, let euery one consider and examine himselfe, and acknowledge that he is lost, vntill Christ seeke him out.

The necessitie of this healing described.

Luke 19.10.

We see heere that none are excepted, seeing the Prophet comprehends all: for all mankind had been vtterly lost, if Christ had not wrought our saluation. No, he excepts not the Iewes, who yet were puffed vp with a false opinion of their dignitie; but hee euen wraps them vp in the same condemnation. Now he compares them to sheepe, not to lessen their fault, as if themselues for their parts were harmlesse: but the more plainly to shew that the proper office of Christ, consists in gathering from among the dispersed, those who resembled brute beasts.

None excepted out of this lost condition.

In adding afterwards euery one: he descends from

The Prophet deſcends frō the generall, to euery one in particular.

from the generall in which hee comprehended all, to the particular: to teach euery one apart, whether it be not ſo indeede: for a ſentence generally propounded, moues vs not ſo much, as when euery man conſiders that it belongs to him in ſpeciall. Let euery one then awaken vp his owne conſcience, and let him preſent himſelfe before the iudgement ſeate of God, confeſſing his miſery.

In the next place the Prophet ſhewes wherein this ſtraying conſiſts, namely, that euery one hath followed his owne vvay: that is to ſay, hath lined after his owne pleaſure. And thus he ſhewes that there is but one vvay to walke in; out of which, if any one turnes, he can doe nothing but wander and loſe himſelfe. Neither ſpeaks he of vvorkes only, but of our very nature, which cauſeth vs all to go aſtray. For if wee could recouer the right way againe, and deliuer our ſelues from error, either by the inſtinct of nature, or by our owne wit, Chriſt had died in vaine. Wee are all loſt then till Chriſt hath deliuered vs: and the more wee ſhall relie vpon our owne wiſdome or induſtry, the more ſhall we draw perdition downe vpon our owne heads.

Thus then the Prophet ſhewes in what eſtate weare, till we be regenerated by Chriſt: for all are wrapped vp in the ſame condemnation: there is none righteous, no not one: there is none that vnderſtands, there is none that ſeeketh God. They haue all gone out of the way, they are all become vnprofitable: there is none that doth good, no not one: Pſal. 14.3. & 53.4. As S. Paul alſo manifeſts it more fully, Rom.3.10,11,12.

And the Lord hath laid vpon him.] Heere is a goodly oppoſition: for in our ſelues wee are 1 ſcattered, in Chriſt we are gathered: by nature 2 wee erre, and run headlong into deſtruction; 3 in Chriſt we find the vvay by which wee are 4 directed to the hauen of ſaluation: our ſinnes 5 preſſe vs downe to hell; Chriſt diſchargeth vs of 6 them, to lay them vpon his owne backe: whileſt we were loſt then, and ſo eſtranged from God, that we runne poſt haſte to hell, Chriſt tooke vpon himſelfe all our filthineſſes and iniquities, that hee might deliuer vs from eternall death. But we muſt refer this only to his condemnation and puniſhment: for hee was no way guiltie, otherwiſe then by imputing of our ſinnes vnto him. Let euery one of vs then make a diligent examination of his own iniquities, that ſo he may bring himſelfe to a true taſte of this grace, and may feele the fruit of the death of Chriſt.

Verſ. 7. Hee was oppreſſed, and hee was afflicted; yet did hee not open his mouth: hee is brought as a ſheepe to the ſlaughter; and as a ſheepe before her ſheerer is dumbe, ſo opened hee not his mouth.

*Or, lambe.

Chriſts obedience commended.

HE here praiſeth Chriſts obedience which he ſhewed, when he was to ſuffer death. for had hee not done it willingly, hee might haue ſeemed not to haue ſatisfied for our diſobedience. As by the diſobedience of one then, all were made guiltie, (as Paul ſaith) Rom.5.19. ſo by the obedience of one, many were made righteous. And in another place; Hee was obedient to the death, euen to the death of the Croſſe: Phil.2.8. This is the cauſe why he held his peace before Pilats iudgement ſeate, Mat.27.12.14. though hee might haue pleaded his iuſt defence. But in regard hee had bound himſelfe to ſuffer for vs, hee willingly ſubmitted himſelfe to an vniuſt iudgement, vvithout muttering one vvord; that wee vvith full mouth might reioice, in being freelie iuſtified by faith, and ſo acquited from the righteous ſentence of our condemnation.

Chriſts patient ſuffrings, our example.

And heere alſo by the way wee are exhorted to patience and meeknes, that by Chriſts example wee may be readie to indure reproches, iniuries, wounds, and tormens for his ſake. In which ſenſe, Saint Peter alleageth this place, 1.Pet.2.22,23. ſhewing that wee ought to be conformed to our head Chriſt, that ſo wee may follow him in patience and modeſtie.

For the further explication of this and the verſe following, reade his Comment vpon Act.8. 32,33.

In the word lambe, there may bee an alluſion to the ſacrifices vnder the Law: in which ſenſe hee is called the Lambe of God: Iohn 1.29.

Verſ. 8. Hee was taken out of priſon, and from iudgement: and who ſhall declare his age? For hee was cut out of the lande of the liuing: for the tranſgreſſion of my people was hee plagued.

Hauing ſpoken of Chriſts death, he paſſeth to his reſurrection.

THis place is diuerſly expounded. Some thinke the Prophet proſecutes the argument which he beganne to handle, verſ.6. namely, that Chriſt was ſmitten with Gods hand, and afflicted for our ſinnes. The Greeks tranſlate; And in his abaſing, his iudgement appeared. Others, He was lifted vp without delay. Others expound; That he was lifted vp vpon the Croſſe: that is to ſay, Chriſt was led to the place of execution, immediately after his apprehenſion. For mine owne part, I rather agree with thoſe who thinke that the Prophet paſſeth now to the glory of his reſurrection, hauing before ſpoken of his death: and by this meanes, meant to meete with mens perplexed thoughts, which might trouble and greeue the hearts of many.

For when wee ſee nothing but ſtripes and ſhame, we remaine aſtoniſhed: mens natures abhorre ſuch ſpectacles. The Prophet then teacheth, that Chriſt was liſted vp: that is to ſay, deliuered from priſon, and from iudgement or condemnation; and afterwards was exalted into a ſoueraigne degree of honour, leſt any ſhould iudge that hee was ouercome, or ſwallowed vp by this horrible and ſhamefull kind of death. Truly hee triumphed ouer his enemies in the midſt of death it ſelfe: yea, he was ſo condemned of it, that now himſelfe is ordained the ſoueraigne Iudge of all, as it well appeared in his reſurrection. Iſaiah then keepes the ſame method that Paul doth, who hauing in Philip.2. ſpoken of Chriſts humili- tion euen to the death of the Crosse: addes, that for this cause, he was aduanced to an high exaltation; hauing now obtained a name, vnto which euery creature in heauen, earth, and vnder the earth, must bow their knees, and yeelde their obedience.

Pauls method agrees with Isaiahs in this place.

Arians. Heretikes must be conuinced not with shewes, but with plaine euidences of truth.

As touching the exclamation following, it hath been racked and rent by diuers expositions. The ancient Fathers abused this place to confute the Arians, who denied the eternall generation of Christ. But they should haue contented themselues with plaine and manifest proofes of the holy Scriptures, that so they might not haue made themselues a scorne to heretikes, who by this meanes oftentimes take occasion to grow the more impudent: for they might haue replied, that the Prophet had no such meaning. Chrysostom referres it to Christs humanitie, because he was miraculously cõceiued in the virgins wombe, without the vse of mans helpe: but he roues farre off from the Prophets meaning. Some others thinke that the Prophet cries out vpon them that crucified Christ. And some againe refer it to the posteritie which should succeede; to wit, that Christs linage or offspring should greatly increase, though himselfe died. But seeing the word Dor, signifies Age, or lasting; I doubt not but he speakes of Christs age, namely, that notwithstanding the sorrowes wherewith he was ouerpressed, hee shall not onely be freed from them, but shall also haue a florishing age, yea such a one as should indure for euer. For hee shall not resemble those that are deliuered from death, and yet must die neuertheless afterwards, because hee rose againe to liue eternally. For as S. Paul saith, Rom. 6.9. Hee can die no more, death can haue no more dominiõ ouer him. And yet we must remember that the Prophet not onely speakes of Christs person, but comprehends vnder it, the whole body of the church, which must neuer bee separated from her head. Wee haue heere then a notable testimony touching the perpetuity of the church: for as Christ liues for euer, so will he not suffer his kingdome euer to perish: Iohn 14. 19. In the next place wee are to appropriate this immortalitie to euery member in particular.

Chrysostom.

Psal. 102. 24. 27.

Christ can die no more.

A note touching the perpetuitie of the Church.

For he was cut off.] It may seeme strange at the first blush, that the death of Christ should be the cause and well-spring of life. But in regard hee indured the punishment due to our offences, all the ignominie which appeared in the Crosse, ought to bee laid and charged vpon vs. And yet in the meane while we may see a wonderfull goodnesse of God shining in Christ, who hath so manifestly discouered his glorie to vs, that we ought to be carried into a wonderfull admiration of it.

For this cause hee once againe repeates, that he was plagued for our transgressions: that wee might diligently cõsider how he suffered for vs, and not for himselfe: for he bare the torments which wee had deserued; and should for euer haue borne them, had not this ransome and satisfaction come between. Let vs acknowledge then that the fault is ours, whereof hee bare the punishment and condemnation, by offering himselfe to his heauenlie Father in our name, that in his condemnation wee might receiue our absolution.

Vers. 9. And hee made his graue with the wicked, and with the rich in his death, though he had done no wickednesse, neither was any deceit in his mouth.

SAint Ierom translates; And hath giuen the wicked for buriall; as if the Prophet spake of the punishment, whereby the Lord will auenge himselfe of those which crucified Christ. But he rather speakes of Christs death, and of the fruits of it, and toucheth not this vengeance. Others thinke that the particle Et, signifies As: and they translate, Hee hath made his graue as that of the wicked. Some againe translate With: and by the rich, vnderstand Ioseph of Aremathea, in whose sepulchre Christ was buried: but this exposition is constrained. Where he addes, and to the rich: I thinke the singuler number is put for the plurall, according to the custome of the Hebrewes. I see no reason why Oecolampadius hath translated; Hee hath exposed his high places to the rich. By the rich, vnderstanding tyrants and proud men; for they are wont to wax insolent and intemperate, in regard of their riches, which they abuse to play the Tarmogants.

Saint Ierom.

Christ seemed to be buried as it were in the hands of the wicked.

Oecolampadius.

Thus I thinke that by the wicked and rich, he vnderstands one and the same thing. Isaiahs meaning is then, that Christ was subiect to the contumelies, insolencies, and lusts of the wicked. For the Scribes and Pharisies on the one side rushed vpon him with a desperate fury: and on the other side, the factious people cried nothing but crucifie him, crucifie him: Matth. 26. 66. Pilat contrary to all equity & law, gaue an vniust sentence of death vpon him, though hee were informed of his innocencie: Marke 15. 14. And the Roman souldiers greedy of any pray, put the cruell and wicked sentence cruelly and wickedly in execution: Iohn 19. 16. Who would not haue thought now, but that Christ had been vtterly ouerwhelmed, and buried amongst the bloody hands of these cruell murtherers? For I take the graue heere by a metaphor, in regard the wicked and their executioners had almost ouercharged him. And if any obiect that Christ was buried honourably; I answere, that this burriall was the beginning of his glorious resurrection. But heere hee speakes of his death, which is often signified by the graue. This then I take to be the true meaning: and yet I giue euery man leaue to iudge as it pleaseth him.

Scribes and Pharisies.

The factious people. Pilat.

The Roman souldiers.

Obiect. Ans.

Though he had done none iniquitie.] The Prophet sets Christs innocencie heere before vs, not so much to defend him against the slanders of the wicked, as to recommend vnto vs the fruit of his death, least wee should imagin that he suffered at aduenture. He was innocent and suffered by Gods decree, not for his iniquities, but for ours: for he bare the punishment due to vs. Now in two words he expresseth Christs

Chriſts perfect innocencie; to wit, that hee ſinned neither in word nor deed. Surely euerie one will confeſſe that this cannot be affirmed of any mortall man: it followes then, that it appertaines to Chriſt onely.

Verſ. 10. Yet the Lord would breake him, and make him ſubiect to infirmities: when hee ſhall make his ſoule an offering for ſinne, hee ſhall ſee his ſeede, and ſhall prolong his daies; and the will of the Lord ſhall proſper in his hand.

The fruit of Chriſts death expreſſed.

BY this we may the better diſcerne of that which I haue briefly touched; to wit, that the Prophet propounding Chriſts innocencie, had a further drift then to defend him againſt the contumelies and reproches of the wicked. The marke hee aimes at then, is to make vs looke vnto the very cauſe, that ſo we might feele the effect thereof in our ſoules: for God neither ordaines, nor executes ought at random. Whence it followes, that the cauſe of Chriſts death was lawfully vndertaken. The expoſition alſo is ſtill to bee remembred of vs, which we touched in verſ. 6. There was no ſinne in Chriſt: but why would the Lord then haue him ſuffer? Euen becauſe hee ſuſtained our perſon and cauſe: for there was nothing at all that could ſatisfie Gods iuſtice, but the death of his only begotten Son.

Obiect.

Anſ.

The word Aſham, ſignifies ſinne, and oblation for ſinne; and ſo oftentimes it is found in the latter ſignification in the Scriptures: Exod. 29.14. Ezech. 45.22. For the beaſt ſacrificed, was ſo offered, as that bearing the puniſhment and curſe of the ſinne, it alſo blotted it out. And the Prieſts ſignified ſo much by the impoſition of hands; euen as if they had laid vpon the beaſt the ſinnes of the whole people: Leuit. 4.4. And if any priuate man had offered, he alſo put his hands vpon the head of the beaſt; as if hee had thereby tranſlated his ſinne from himſelfe, vnto it: Leuit. 4.27.29. And therefore Saint Paul calles Chriſt the curſe, or execration, ſaying; Chriſt hath redeemed vs from the curſe of the law being made a curſe for vs: Galat. 3.13. And in another place; Hee made him to be ſinne for vs, who knew no ſinne, that wee might be made the righteouſneſſe of God in him: 2. Cor. 5.21. Alſo in Rom. 8.3. For that which was impoſſible to the law, in that it was weake by reaſon of the fleſh, that hath God done by ſending his owne Sonne in the ſimilitude of fleſh, ſubiect to ſinne, and for ſinne, hath condemned ſinne in the fleſh, that the righteouſneſſe of the law might be fulfilled in vs. The Prophet then by this word Aſham, ſignifies the ſame, which Paul calles curſe, and ſinne, in the places formerly alleadged.

Now heere the fruit of Chriſts death is expreſſed, in regard that by his ſacrifice, ſinnes are done away, and God is pacified towards man: for the vertue of this word ſacrifice muſt be referred heereunto. Hence it followes, that the aboliſhing of ſinne, and ſatisfaction for ſinne, is no where to bee found, but in Chriſt. Now that we may the better remember theſe things: firſt, wee muſt note that we are all guiltie before God; ſo as we are accurſed and lothſome in his preſence. Will wee then bee brought againe into his fauour? Sinne muſt be taken away. But this cannot bee done with purgations deuiſed by man. How then? We muſt reſort to Chriſts death, becauſe wee cannot otherwiſe make ſatisfaction to God. In a word, Iſaiah teacheth that ſinnes cannot be pardoned, vnleſſe wee flee to this death. If this language ſeemes harſh, and not ſeemly for the perſon of Chriſt, let ſuch a one enter into his owne heart, and conſider in good earneſt, how fearefull and terrible Gods iuſtice is, when nothing is able to appeaſe it but the ſacrifice of Chriſt. And ſo the meſtimable grace, which ſhines in the curſe of Chriſt, will eaſily remoue all offence.

No ſatisfaction can be made to God for our ſinnes, but by chriſts death.

Hee ſhall ſee his poſteritie.] The Prophets meaning is, that it ſhall bee ſo farre off, that Chriſts poſteritie ſhall be diminiſhed by his death, that contrariwiſe, it ſhall be the meanes to raiſe vp ſeed vnto him. For in quickening the dead, he begets a people which he afterward will cauſe to multiply exceedingly. Neither is there any abſurditie at all in it, to call the faithfull the poſteritie of Chriſt (though they bee his brethren) for they bee his offſpring.

Where hee addes; Hee ſhall prolong his daies, ſome ſupply the relatiue Aſher, Which: ſaying, that the poſteritie ſhall indure long. But I expound it more ſimply; that the death which Chriſt ſhall ſuffer, ſhall not cut off the length of his daies: that is to ſay, from liuing eternally.

Some departing out of this life, doe leaue children which ſhall ſuruiue them; yet vpon condition that their fathers be firſt dead. But Chriſt ſhall haue his children with him: for he dies not as men doe, but obtaines eternall life both for himſelfe and his. And thus the Prophet ſhewes, that both the head and the members ſhall liue eternally.

The will of the Lord ſhall proſper in his hand.] This word hand, is often taken for miniſtrie: as where it is ſaid, that the Lord gaue the Law by the hand of Moſes: Numb. 36.13. Alſo the Lord did this by the hand of Dauid: 2. Sam. 3.18. meaning, that he vſed his ſeruice. In this ſort alſo ſhall the will of the Lord proſper in the hand of Chriſt: that is to ſay, the Lord will cauſe Chriſts miniſtrie to bring forth his fruit, that it may not ſeeme he was expoſed to ſo many cruell torments in vaine. Vnder theſe foure or fiue words, is comprehended a very large and ample doctrine, which euery one may collect by himſelfe: for wee will content our ſelues now with expounding the text onely.

The will of the Lord, is taken in the ſame ſenſe heere, as it was in the former member: for he vſeth the word Kephets, which ſignifies a franke and liberall affection, full of mercy. This text then ſets two benefits of God before vs: Firſt, that hee ſpared not his owne Sonne, but deliuered him vp for our ſakes, to redeeme vs from death: Rom. 8.32. Secondly, that he ſuffers not this his death to be fruitleſſe, and vnprofitable, but cauſeth it to fructifie very largely: for what benefit should we reape thereby, vnlesse wee felt the power and efficacie thereof in our selues.

Two benefits to be learned in this verſe.

Vers. 11. He shall see the trauaile of his soule, and shall bee satisfied: by his knowledge shall my righteous seruant iustifie many; for hee shall beare their iniquities.

The former argument further prosecuted.

ISaiah prosecutes the same argument. For he shewes that after Christ hath suffered death, he shall reape the fruit thereof, from the saluation of men. To the words shall see therefore, must be supplied the fruit and efficacie. Surely these things containe wonderful consolation in them: for Isaiah could no way better expresse Christs infinit loue to vs, then in shewing that hee takes a singular pleasure in the worke of our saluation: and doth herein as it were refresh himselfe, as with the fruits of his owne labours. Euen as one that reioiceth to see that which aboue all things hee desired to inioy, as if nothing but that could content him.

In the next place he shewes the meanes by which we may feele the vertue and power of Christs death; to wit, by his knowledge. This word knowledge, or doctrine, may be read in a double sense; to wit, in the actiue, or passiue: but in whether of them you reade it, we shall easilie see the Prophets meaning. Neither shall the Iewes be able to cauill so impudently, but wee will force them to confesse that which is heere said; to wit, that Christ is the onely Doctor and author of righteousnesse: for the Prophet manifests so much by the effect, saying, that he shall iustifie many. Thus then men shall not only learne in the schoole of Christ, to define what this righteousnes is, but themselues also shall be made iust, really and effectually thereby.

Note.

The difference betweene the righteousnes of the law, and that of faith.

And heere behold the difference betweene the righteousnes of the law, and that of faith. For albeit the law shewes what it is to bee iust; yet Saint Paul shewes it is impossible to obtaine righteousnes by it. Which he proues by experience, in regard the law is but a looking glasse, serning to manifest vnto vs our owne vnrighteousnesse: Rom. 3.9,10. But the doctrine to obtaine the righteousnesse which Christ sets before vs, is nothing else but a knowledge of him; to wit, faith: that is, when we accept the benefit of his death, and doe wholly rest our selues therein.

Philosophers.

The Philosophers giue many goodly precepts, wherein they thinke all iustice is comprehended: but they were neuer able yet to make any man righteous by them. For where is he that had euer yet the power to liue according to their rules? It is a small matter to know wherein true iustice consists, vnlesse therewithall we taste the benefit of it. But to let the Philosophers passe, we see the law it selfe, which containes a perfect rule of a godly life, is not able to conferre righteousnesse (as we haue said:) Not because there is any want in it, for Moses testified and protested that hee did set before them in it, good and euill, life and death: Deut. 30.19. But the law is vnable to confer righteousnes to vs, in regard of the corruption of our nature: as S. Paul well affirmes, that this impossibilitie proceeds from our flesh, and not from the law: Rom. 8.3. For our nature is enmitie vnto it, and our lusts ouercarry vs violently, as wild beasts, to rush against the commandement of God. And thus, the law ingenders vvrath, rather then righteousnesse: Rom. 4.15. The law then condemnes all men, and hauing discouered their sinne, makes them without excuse. We must therefore seeke out another meane whereby to obtaine righteousnes; namely, in Christ himselfe, whom the very law points vs vnto, as to the end of it: Rom. 10.4. But what is that righteousnes of the law? Doe these things, and thou shalt liue: Leuit. 18.5. Gal. 3.12. But none can doe them. Then you must seeke another righteousnes, which S. Paul collects out of a place of Moses; The word is neere thee, in thy mouth, and in thine heart. This is the word of faith which wee preach: Deut. 30.14. Rom. 10.8. By this doctrine we are iustified: not as it is nakedly and barely propounded, but as it offers vnto vs Christ and all his benefits, by which our sinnes are done away, and we set at peace with God: for if vvee imbrace this benefit by faith, vve are reputed iust before him.

Why the law is vnable to confer grace.

Christ our righteousnes. Ier. 23.6. & 33.16.

And our Prophet also expounds his owne meaning, in shewing wherein this knowledge consists; for these two members must be ioined together. By his doctrine, or by the knowledge of himselfe, he shall iustifie many; because he shall beare their iniquities. For as hee hath once offered himselfe for the purgation of all our iniquities: so now hee daily allures vs to receiue the fruit of his death, by the preaching of the Gospell. The publishing of which his death and passion, is the substance and foundation thereof, that by hearing of it, wee might be iustified. Saint Paul also accords very well with this sentence of the Prophet. For hauing shewed that Christ was offered for the remission of our sinnes, that wee might bee made the righteousnesse of God in him; hee addes, we are ambassadors for Christ, and do beseech you that you will be reconciled vnto God: 2. Cor. 5.20.

My righteous seruant.] The Prophet teacheth that Christ iustifies vs, not onely as he is God, but also as he is man; in regard he hath obtained righteousnesse for vs in his flesh. For hee calles him not My sonne, but My seruant: that whilest we consider him as God, we may also apprehend his humane nature, in which hee yeelded that obedience which absolues vs before God. This is the foundation of our saluation then, namely, that hee offered vp himselfe in sacrifice: as he testifies in the Gospell. And for their sakes sanctifie I my selfe, that they also may be sanctified through the truth: Iohn 17.19.

Christ iustifies as he is both God and man.

The foundation of our saluation.

Vers. 12. Therefore will I giue him a portion with the great, and hee shall diuide the spoile with the strong, because hee powred out his soule vnto death, and he

he was counted with the tranſgreſſors, and he bare the ſin of many, and praied for the treſpaſſers.

The victory that Chriſt obtained by his death.

ISaiah ſhewes further, what iſſue Chriſts death ſhall haue: for it was neceſſary hee ſhould adde this doctrine touching the victorie which he obtained by his paſſion; becauſe the knowledge of our reconciliation with the Father by his death, would not otherwiſe haue ſufficiently confirmed our hearts. Now hee borrowes a ſimilitude heere from thoſe who vſed triumphes. For hauing obtained the victory, they were gloriouſly apparrelled, and receiued with ſtately ſhewes: ſo Chriſt, as a valiant and noble Generall, triumphed after the conqueſt ouer his enemies.

He ſhall diuide the ſpoile with the ſtrong.] It is the ſame with the former member, and a repetition much vſed among the Hebrewes: for thoſe which before he called great, now hee calles mightie and ſtrong. Thoſe who tranſlate; I will giue him a portion with many; peruert the meaning of the Prophet, as I thinke. All the difference in the two members is, that God firſt ſhewes what he gaue to Chriſt: and in the ſecond hee addes, that Chriſt inioied this benefit. Now he inioies it not for himſelfe, but for vs: for the fruit of this victory is made ours. How ſo? Chriſt hath ſubdued death, the world, and the diuell, for vs. In a word, the Prophet heere extolles this victory which Chriſt atchieued by his ſufferings, who though he died concerning to the infirmitie of the fleſh, yet hee was raiſed againe by the wonderfull power of the holy Ghoſt: 2. Cor. 13.4. and triumphed ouer all his and our enemies.

1 2

Chriſt conquered Satan, ſin, and death, not ſo much for himſelfe, as for vs.

Heereunto appertaines the ſimilitude of ſpoiles, which the Prophet vſeth. For he aſcended into heauen, led captiuitie captiue, and gaue gifts vnto men: Pſal. 68. Eph. 4.8. And afterwards he adds, that the abaſing of Chriſt, was the beginning of his imperiall dignitie. As alſo S. Paul ſaith, that after Chriſt had taken away the hand writing which was againſt vs, he triumphed vpon the croſſe, Col. 2.14. So far was it off then, that the reprochfull death which he ſuffered, did any thing diminiſh his glory; that it was rather a meanes by which God his Father aduanced him into an high degree of honour.

Iſaiah alſo expreſſeth the kinde of death: as S. Paul alſo, who hauing ſet forth Chriſts obedience, and ſhewing that hee humbled himſelfe vnto the death, addes by and by, that it was no common death, but the death of the Croſſe: that is to ſay, a ſhamefull and an accurſed death: Phil. 2.8.

Now the Prophet minding yet to amplifie this contumelie to the full, ſaith, that Chriſt was counted among the wicked. But the greater the contempt was before men, ſo much the greater was the glory of his reſurrection. Saint Marke alleadgeth this place, when hee tels vs how Chriſt was hanged betweene two theeues: Mark. 15.28. for then was this prophecie truly accompliſhed indeed.

But the Prophet ſpake generally, to ſhew that Chriſt died not a common death. For that they might make him the more odious, they hanged theſe two theeues with Chriſt, and himſelfe in the midſt, as the Captaine. And thus Saint Marke alleadgeth this text to very good purpoſe, and according to the circumſtance of this place.

He bare the ſinne of many.] This is added by way of correction, leſt in hearing tell of the ignominie of this death, we ſhould conceiue ſomewhat that might redound to Chriſts indignitie. With which conceit our mindes being poſſeſſed, we might happily be depriued of the victory which hee hath purchaſed for vs; to wit, the fruit of his death. The Prophet then ſhewes, that all this was done to the end hee might receiue the burthen of our ſinnes vpon himſelfe: as alſo, that when mention ſhould bee made of Chriſts death, wee might forthwith remember our owne purgation. This fruit ſwallowed vp all the ſhame of his croſſe: ſo as his maieſtie & glory ſhined more fully, then if we had ſeene him ſit in the heauens. Why ſo? Becauſe in him we haue a memorable teſtimonie of Gods loue, in that he was thus humbled, ſcorned, and miſuſed, with all the indignities that might be, that we who were appointed vnto eternall deſtruction, might with him inioy immortall glory and happineſſe. 1 2 Note.

I haue followed the common tranſlation in theſe words; he hath borne the ſinne of many: although by the Hebrew word Rabbim, wee may vnderſtand the Great and Noble: and ſo the oppoſition would be the more manifeſt; namely, that Chriſt being accounted among the wicked, is appointed and offered as a pledge of the moſt noble and excellent, and bare the ſhame which thoſe that are in higheſt degree in the world had deſerued. But I leaue it to the iudgement of the readers to chuſe whether of both readings they like beſt. In the meane while I approue the common tranſlation; that hee alone hath borne the ſinne of many: in reſpect the condemnation of the whole world was laid vpon him. And the word many, is ſometimes taken for All: as it appeares by many teſtimonies, eſpecially in Rom. 5.19. For as by one mans diſobedience, many were made ſinners, &c.

The word Many ſometimes taken for All.

And praied for the treſpaſſers.] Becauſe the purgation wherewith we are cleanſed, that is, the death of Chriſt, was ratified and approued in regard of his interceſſion towards the Father, it was neceſſary this ſhould be added. For as in the old Teſtament, the high Prieſt, who neuer entred without blood, made prayers alſo forthwith for the people, Exod 30.10. Heb. 5.7. ſo that which was there prefigured, was accompliſhed in Chriſt. Firſt, he offered his body in ſacrifice, and ſhed his blood for the ranſome of our ſins: & then, that the purgation might be auaileable, he performed the office of an aduocate and interceſſor for all thoſe that imbrace this his ſacrifice by faith: as it appeares in that famous prayer which himſelfe hath left vpon record in Iohn 17.10. Father, I pray not onely for theſe, (that is, for my Diſciples) but alſo for all thoſe that ſhall beleeue in me through their word. If wee then be of that number, let vs know for certaine, that Christ hath suffered for vs, that now we might injoy the fruit of his death. He makes expresse mention of the trespasses, to aduertise vs that it is our duties to runne with boldnesse to the crosse of Christ, when the dread and horror of sinne affrights vs. For, for such is he an aduocate and intercessor: without which, our transgressions would hinder vs from approching neere to the maiestie of God.

Chriſt ſuffers and praies for treſpaſſers.

THE LIV. CHAPTER.

Vers. 1. *Reioice, O barren, that didst not beare: breake forth into ioy, and reioice thou that didst not trauel with child: for the * desolate hath mo children then the married wife.*

*Or, widow.

From the doctrine of Christs passion & death, the Prophet turnes his speech to the Church, that she might seek the fruit and efficacie thereof.

HAuing handled the doctrine of Christs passion, hee now fitly turnes his speech to the Church; to the end we might feele in our selues the efficacie of his death. For we cannot perceiue it in Christ, if we consider him by himselfe: and therefore wee must come presently vnto his Church, which is his body, because hee suffered for it, not for himselfe. This order wee know is obserued in the articles of our Creed. For hauing confessed that vve beleeue in Iesus Christ, vvho suffered and vvas crucified for vs, we adde, I beleeue the Church; which hath issued as it were out of his side: Gen. 2. 1, 21, 23. And therefore after Isaiah hath deliuered the doctrine of Christs sufferings, of his resurrection, and triumph he descends now in due season to mention the Church, which can neuer be separated from her head: to teach all the faithfull from their owne experience, that Christ hath not suffered in vaine. If he had omitted this doctrine, the faithfull could not so well haue confirmed their hearts in the hope of the restauration of the Church.

Barren.

Now this exhortation to reioicing, plainely shewes, that after Christ by his death shall haue got the conquest ouer death, sinne, and hell, that hee shall not liue so much for himselfe, but that he therewithall will inspire life into the members of his body. He calles his Church barren, because shee seemed to haue none issue, whilest this wofull seruitude lasted. And indeed, if a man had onely looked vpon her outward estate, hee would surely haue iudged her neere to destruction. Moreouer, besides the misery that appeared externally, there was nothing sound within, all were corrupted and defiled with superstitions. They had also prophaned themselues with the idolatries of the heathen.

A widow.

Neither contents hee himselfe to call her barren, but he also termes her a widow: although one of them had been sufficient enough to haue taken from her all hope of posteritie. But when both are ioined together, what was to bee expected but an horrible desolation? Notwithstanding he exhorts the people to bee of good courage, in the midst of so many miseries: for she that is desolate, shall haue more children then the married wife. This place may bee expounded two waies; either that the Church is compared to the Gentiles, which florished like a woman that had an husband: or to the estate she was in before her captiuitie: both senses wil agree well. But I had rather follow one lesse constrained: for I doe not thinke the Prophet makes a comparison heere betweene two estates. But it is rather a forme of speech vsuall with him, to signifie the extraordinarie fruitfulnesse of the Church, that so we should not iudge of her, according to the order of nature. Why so? Because God will worke in his behalfe wonderfully and miraculously. And yet I confesse that shee was then in widowhood; for long time before, God had put her away by his Prophets, and sued out a diuorce betweene him and his people, which was then effected, when he banished them out of their country. But the Prophet pronounceth that this iudgemnt shall bee temporarie, as wee shall more fully perceiue heereafter.

Desolate.

Vers. 2. Inlarge the place of thy tents, and let them spread out the curtaines of thine inhabitation: spare not, stretch out thy cords, and make fast thy stakes.

3. For thou shalt increase on the right hand, and on the left: and thy seede shall possesse the Gentiles, and dwell in the desolate Cities.

A prosecution of the former doctrine vnder other figures.

HEe prosecutes his argument vnder other figures, and promiseth that the Lord will not onely restore his Church, but will also dignifie her with a more excellent estate. Those who thinke that there is a comparison heere betweene the Church and the Synagogue, are deceiued, as I thinke. Neither doe they ought else heereby, then confirme the Iewes in their obstinacie, who perceiue well enough that violence is offered to the sense of this text, by such an exposition. For mine owne part, I doe indeede confesse that these things appertaine to the kingdome of Christ, and that they were then onely fulfilled, from the publishing of the Gospell. But it doth not therefore follow, that the Prophet should not also respect that time which went before Christs comming: for the accomplishment of this prophecie beganne vnder Cyrus, who gaue the Gospell leaue to returne: then it extended it selfe to the comming of Christ, in whom it receiued the full accompliſhment. The Church then conceiued, when the people returned home: for at that time the body of the people was gathered, of whom Chriſt ſhould be borne; that ſo the pure worſhip of God, and his true religion might againe be planted amongſt them. I grant this fruitfulnes did not then appeare; for the conception was hid as it were within the mothers wombe, which outwardly could not be any whit diſcerned. But after the people multiplied; and after the birth, they were at the firſt like a child: then they grew to mans eſtate, euen till the publiſhing of the Goſpel. Which time indeed, was the true infancie of the Church. Afterwards, ſhe grew to womans eſtate, and ſhall ſo continue euen till Chriſts laſt comming, when all things ſhall be ſet in their perfect eſtate. Wee muſt therefore comprehend all theſe things together, if we wil attaine to the true meaning of the Prophets words. And in this ſenſe it is that Zacharie, Malachi, and Haggai doe incourage the people touching the hope of their eſtate to come, whileſt they thought they loſt ſo much time in reedifying the Temple: Zach.2.5. Hag.2.7. Mal.4.2. For they promiſed that the glory of the ſecond Temple ſhould bee more glorious then the firſt: but yet this was not perceiued. And therefore they extended theſe promiſes to Chriſt: for it was needfull they ſhould be ſuſtained with the expectation of him, and with the aſſurance of his comming, in the building of the Temple. This conſolation then was common both to the Iewes that liued vnder the Law, and to vs, who now ſee this reſtauration of the Church in Chriſt more euidently.

in

1 2 The infancie of the Church.

The perfect eſtate of the Church.

Of thy tents.] This is a ſimilitude taken from Tabernacles which were commonly vſed in that country. The Church then is compared to pauilions, becauſe ſhe hath no ſetled habitation in this world: for ſhe ſeemes to be fleeting, and a pilgrime, in regard ſhe is ſubiect to be often tranſported hether and thether, by reaſon of her diuers changes. And yet I doubt not but he aimes at that firſt deliuerance, (according to the cuſtome of the Prophets) at which time, the Iſraelites dwelt vnder tents the ſpace of fortie yeeres: for which cauſe, they euery yeere celebrated a ſolemne feaſt of Tabernacles by the commandement of God: Leuit.23. from 33. verſe, to 43.

Why the Church is compared to a tent.

Obiect. But ſome will obiect, that the building which the Miniſters of the word do reare vp, is ſo firme, that it ought not to be compared to tents. I anſwere, that this ſimilitude of Tabernacles is rather to be referred to the outward eſtate of the Church, then to her ſpirituall or inward eſtate: for the true building of the Church, is the very kingdome of God, which is not vnſtable, nor like vnto pauilions. And yet the Church ceaſeth not for all that, to be tranſported hether and thether, in regard ſhe can find no ſure reſting place in this world. But ſhe is more firme then a rocke touching her inward eſtate: for in reſpect ſhe is vpheld by the impregnable power & ſtrength of God, ſhee boldly contemnes as dangers. Shee reſembles tents alſo, becauſe ſhe is not built vpon riches nor earthly forces.

Anſ. The Church compared to a tent, rather in reſpect of her outward, then of her inward eſtate.

In the next place the Prophet addes the reaſon why he commands her to ſpread abroad the cords, to inlarge her pauilions; namely, becauſe a little place would not containe that great multitude of people which God would gather together in one, from all parts. Now in as much as Iudeah was waſted with ruines and deſolations which had befallen it: therefore hee ſaith, that the deſolate Cities ſhall bee inhabited.

Verſ. 4. Feare not, for thou ſhalt not be aſhamed; neither ſhalt thou be confounded: for thou ſhalt not be put to ſhame; yea, thou ſhalt forget the ſhame of thy youth, and ſhalt not remember the reproch of thy widowhood any more.

HE heere confirmes (as before) the hearts of the faithfull, and ſpeakes to the whole Church: for the calamitie was vniuerſall, and her eſtate was almoſt vtterly ruinated. Now he bids her be of good cheere, and addes the reaſon; namely, that her deliuerance ſhould be ſo famous, that ſhee ſhould not be confounded. As if hee ſhould haue ſaid; Though now for a while thy caſe be deſperate, yet thy matters ſhall ſucceed proſperouſly: for thoſe that truſt in the Lord, ſhall not be confounded: as the Pſalmiſt ſaith, Pſal.25.2. Chap.49.23. A confirmation.

He repeates it twice, be not aſhamed: that is to ſay, Hope ſtill, and truſt confidently. For ſuch bluſh for ſhame, who being fruſtrated of their hopes, are forced to hang downe the head. Then hee addes the like reaſon to the former, in the word Ci, for I take it heere as before, for a particle rendring the cauſe: ſo as it is one and the ſame ſentence repeated in diuers wordes; vnleſſe you will, that the firſt member be referred to the inward affection, and the other to an outward cauſe. But the plaineſt ſenſe will be, that there is in both a promiſe touching an happy and ioyfull iſſue. As if hee ſhould ſay; Thy calamitie ſhall haue an end.

But thou ſhalt forget thy ſhame.] This is a confirmation of the former member, by which he vnderſtands the calamities that ſhould befall the Church, when ſhe ſhould begin to grow: for the felicitie ſhee ſhould afterwards inioy, would vtterly deface the memory of them. Wee told you ere while, that ſhee is called a vvidow in reſpect that at this time God had forſaken & put her away frō him: Chap.50.1. Verſ.1.

Verſ. 5. *For hee that made thee is thine husband (whoſe name is the Lord of hoſtes) and thy redeemer the holie one of Iſrael ſhall bee called the God of the world.

*Or, all.

HEere he renders a reaſon why ſhee ſhall forget all the ſorrowes and afflictions which ſhe ſuſtained before; namely, becauſe God would accept her into his fauor againe: for the captiuitie was a kind of diuorce; as we haue ſhewed in Chap.50.1. Now he ſaith, he that Reaſons by which he confirmes the former conſolations.

that made thee, ſhall be thine husband: for ſo the words ſhould be ſo conſtrued. Hee calles himſelfe the maker or creator of his Church, not onely becauſe hee hath created her with the reſt of the world, but in regard hee hath vouchſafed to adopt her for his ſpouſe: which prerogatiue is as a new creation. Now albeit the Iewes were fallen from their excellencie, (in regard men are apt by and by to decline out of the right way, if they be not regenerated by the power of the holy Ghoſt) yet their ſpirituall creation was not wholly defaced, for the memorie of the couenant remained ſtill, by meanes whereof, God alſo created them anew.

Creation taken for regeneratiō.

Where hee calles himſelfe the Lord of hoſtes, it is to be referred to his power, in which we haue cauſe to reioice, if wee be his children: for the greater his power is, and the more renowned his name is, the greater is our glory, as long as hee accounts of vs as of his children; and that we boaſt not of ſuch a title in vaine. Now the Prophet amplifies this benefit, when he ſhewes that God doth vs the fauour, to admit vs into the place of his wiues; for ſo we may indeed lay claime to this his almightie power.

Thy redeemer.] He attributes this name to himſelfe, that hee might the better confirme the people in good hope; and alſo to aſſure them, that notwithſtanding the firſt deliuerance out of Egypt ſeemed to bee aboliſhed when they were now carried away captiue; yet they ſhall be ſo reſtored, that they ſhall well perceiue Gods grace ſhall not be fruitleſſe. The verbe, Shall be called, may be either referred to the redeemer, or, to the Holy one: or to them both. For mine owne part, I willingly refer it to both; to wit, The holy one of Iſrael ſhall be called thy redeemer, and the God of the whole earth. Hee mentions all the earth, (that is to ſay, the whole world:) for before, the name of God was onely knowne in Iurie, Pſal. 76.1. but after the publiſhing of the Goſpel, the Gentiles were alſo called to one hope of ſaluation with them. God is now the God of the Gentiles, as well as of the Iewes: Rom. 3.29. With whom he hath aſſembled vnder his dominion the Gentiles alſo, who before were farre off.

Verſ. 6. For the Lord hath called thee, being as a woman forſaken and afflicted in ſpirit, and as a young wife when thou waſt refuſed, ſaith thy God.

A preuention of an obiection.

HE meetes with a doubt which might haue troubled the mindes of the faithfull, vnder this grieuous ſeruitude: for they ſeemed to be ſo reiected of the Lord, as if they were to expect nothing but vtter ruine. The Prophet therefore admoniſheth them betimes, not to quaile, tho ugh they were forſaken, becauſe God accordi ng to his wonted fauour, is inclined to bee reconciled with them againe: yea, and to recouer them out of their graues.

Hee calles her a young maried wife, or wife of youth; that by this ſimilitude he might the better confirme the peoples hope: for the new maried couples are eaſilier reconciled, then thoſe that haue dwelt long together. Yong yeeres, and tender loue, allures young folkes to keepe amitie. And thus he ſhewes that God will be eaſilie pacified. As if he ſhould ſay; I grant thou art now diuorced from me, but the diuorce ſhall not long hold, but the Lord will be at one with thee: yea, of his owne accord he will allure thee to be reconciled.

Simile.

Verſ. 7. For a little while haue I forſaken thee: but with great compaſſion will I gather thee.

8. For a moment in mine anger I hid my face from thee for a little ſeaſon: but with euerlaſting mercy haue I had compaſſion on thee, ſaith the Lord thy redeemer.

THe Prophet now expounds the former ſentence at large, and ſhewes the maner of this diuorce; to wit, that the Church ſhall be ſhortly reſtored to her firſt eſtate. Now he ſets forth this mercy of God very excellently, and thereby aſſwageth the dolour which might preſſe downe the hearts of the faithfull: for it was not enough to put them in hope of ſome kinde of reſtauration, vnleſſe they were therewithall aſſured that God would alſo be quickly appeaſed. We are out of heart by and by, and quaile, if ſo bee the Lord be not neer preſently to reach forth his hand vnto vs. And therefore after Iſaiah hath mentioned the Churches reſtauration, hee forthwith addes, that her reiection ſhall not long indure, but that God will haue compaſſion on her with euerlaſting mercy.

An expoſition of the preuention.

I

When he ſaith, he forſooke his people: it is as much as if he had confeſſed it to bee ſo: for God hath in ſuch wiſe adopted vs, that mens diſloialtie cannot fruſtrate the ſame. Why ſo? Becauſe he is faithfull, and will neuer therefore finally reiect or forſake his elect. This reiection then, muſt bee referred to our apprehenſion, and to our ſeeming in outward appearance: for we thinke God hath caſt vs off, when we neither feele his preſence, nor protecti-on. And yet it is neceſſary we ſhould taſte the bitterneſſe of Gods wrath, (as the wife whom her husband hath put away, laments her eſtate) that we may know he hath iuſt cauſe to deale ſo ſeuerely with vs. But on the other ſide, it is as needfull that we forthwith ſhould drinke a deepe draught of his mercy, which being infinite and euerlaſting, will make all our afflictions ſeeme light; yea, and of ſhort continuance, in reſpect of that. As often then as calamities doe preſſe vs downe, let vs haue our recourſe to this conſolation.

God neuer forſakes his people: See 1. Sam. 12. 22. Lam. 3. 31. 32.

We may alſo note that this was ſaid, and that truly, of the whole body of this people, who had made this diuorce by their iniquities: Chap. 50. 1. And howſoeuer God did not indifferently receiue them all to grace, but that remnant which he had choſen; yet there is no abſurditie nor inconuenience at all in it, that he directs his ſpeech vnto all. Hee repeates peates the ſame thing againe in the next verſe, that it might take the deeper impreſſion in the hearts of the faithfull: as alſo, that no aduerſitie might too much diſmay them. And had he iuſt cauſe to doe ſo? Yea doubtleſſe: for in this horrible darkneſſe, the poore captiues could not eaſilie behold the louing countenance of the Lord. And howſoeuer that which is heere ſaid, for a moment in mine indignation, is properly to be vnderſtood, that God in fit ſeaſon brought his baniſhed home againe into Iudeah: yet thence wee may gather a generall doctrine, namely, that the afflictions of the Church are but for a ſhort ſpace, when we lift vp the eies of our mindes to the eternall & bleſſed life. For we muſt remember the admonition of Saint Paul, to wit, that all the afflictions of the faithfull, are light to beare, and ought to be eſteemed very ſhort, if wee looke to that eternall waight of glory which is laid vp for vs in heauen: 2. Cor. 4. 17. Rom. 8. 18. And if this compariſon come not betweene; daies will ſeeme vnto vs as long as yeeres. Neither were there any reaſon to compare ſeuentie yeeres captiuitie to a moment, if the continuall progreſſe of Gods fauour were not oppoſed vnto it.

If we ſet not the eternall weight of glory againſt our momentany afflictions, daies will ſeeme to vs as long as yeeres.

Verſ. 9. For this is vnto mee as the waters of Noah: for as I haue ſworne that the waters of Noah ſhould no more goe ouer the earth, ſo haue I ſworne that I will not bee angry with thee, nor rebuke thee.

As God ſatisfied himſelf with one deluge, ſo hee will ſatisfie himſelfe with this laſt waſte of the Church.

THis may bee read two waies: firſt as wee haue tranſlated, This is to me as the daies of Noah: but the matter is not great. The principall therefore is to haue an eye to the Prophets meaning: for the expoſitors haue but roued a farre off at it, as I thinke. They expound in generall termes; that the Lord by oth promiſed Noah, there ſhould neuer be any deluge againe, and that this oath ſhould remaine for euer: for without this, the good man might haue trembled and feared death at the next ſhower of raine that had fallen, but that the Lord had ſworne to him it ſhould neuer come to paſſe. And thus, when afflictions are at hand, wee may iuſtly feare to be ouerwhelmed by them, vnleſſe the Lord had promiſed that his Church ſhould bee preſerued in ſafetie. But as I thinke, this ſhould be reſtrained to the captiuitie of Babylon: for hee compares this captiuitie to the deluge, which then deformed the face of the whole earth; ſo as the Church ſeemed to be vtterly waſted, the people were all in a maner carried away, and transformed into a ſtrange nation, the kingdome and gouernment were ouerthrowne, their bondage was extreame, and no man would haue imagined but that their memorie and name had been wholly blotted out. And queſtionleſſe that which our Prophet ſaid in the firſt Chapter, came to paſſe, namely, that if the Lord had not left a ſmall remnant, they ſhould haue been like to Sodome and Gomorah.

It is not without cauſe then, that he compares this captiuitie to the waters of Noah: that is to ſay, to the deluge. For which cauſe, I am of their opinion who reade; For this is to me as the waters; becauſe this reading ſeemes more ſolid, as I thinke: and all the Rabbines haue followed it. Theſe words, This ſhall be to me, ought to bee well weighed alſo, as I take it; which the expoſitors notwithſtanding haue lightly paſſed ouer. For his meaning is, that this calamitie ſhall be vnto him as the deluge: that is, as he contented himſelfe with one deluge, ſo as he will neuer ſend a ſecond: ſo will he alſo ſatisfie himſelfe with this onely waſte of the Church, and he will neuer ſuffer it to be any more thus ruinated againe. Thus then I ſuppoſe this text ought to bee expounded and applied to the ſimilitude, namely, that the ouerthrow of the Church ſhall bee the ſame now vnto God, as the deluge was, which happened in the daies of Noah: for euen as hee then ſware, neuer to puniſh the ſinnes of men more vnlike this ſo horrible a chaſtiſement, ſo will he neuer conſume the Church any more, as he hath done vnder the captiuitie of Babylon. And truly whatſoeuer waſte there happened after, yet the Church alwaies ſtood, and continued in ſome forme, till Chriſt his appearing: for then the ſeed of the Goſpell was ſowen abroad euery where, that it might bring forth children to the Lord, out of all the nations vnder heauen. To conclude, the Lord promiſeth heereafter to mittigate his wrath, and neuer to puniſh his people ſo ſeuerely againe.

But ſome will obiect, that ſince that time the Church hath indured wonderfull ſtraits, ſo farre forth as in mans iudgement ſhee was welnie brought to nought: which being ſo, then haue not I giuen a right expoſition of the Prophets words? I anſwere, God neuer afterwarde ſo afflicted his Church, that the whole face thereof was aboliſhed, as it fell out when the people were caried away captiue into Babylon. For albeit Antiochus and others made terrible waſtes, after which followed thoſe reuolts which Saint Paul foretold, 2. Theſ. 2. 3. 1. Tim. 4. 1. And that all the world in a maner was defiled with infinit ſuperſtitions, ſo as Chriſtianitie was almoſt raced out: yet there euermore remained ſome forme of a Church, though much disfigured. Neither was the building ſo defaced, but ſome relikes thereof remained vnwaſted aboue the deluges, that ſo this oath of God might ſtand faſt. Obiect. Anſ. Antiochus

So haue I ſworne.] This muſt not be barely vnderſtood as it is in it ſelfe, but by way of compariſon, for he oppoſeth this member to the former, promiſing neuer to correct his people ſo ſeuerely againe, but that hee will both mittigate and moderate his ſtripes. Although tyrants then play the wilde beaſts in running vpon vs with a deſperate furie; and that Satan on the other ſide leaues no plot vnattempted to bring the Church to deſtruction; and that God for our vnthankfulnes lets looſe the raines vnto them, yet wil he neuer ſuffer it to be vtterly ſwallowed vp of the moue, and the hils ſhall fall downe: but my mercie ſhall not depart from thee, neither ſhall the couenant of my peace fall away, ſaith the Lord, that hath compaſſion on thee.

Verſ. 10. For the mountaines ſhall remoue,

A confirmation of the former ſentence.

HE confirmes the former ſentence, and ſhewes, that heauen and earth ſhall paſſe and come to nought, before his mercie ſhall faile. Some are ſo fond to demand here how mountaines can remoue, or, how hilles ſhall fall downe? But they deſerue none anſwere, for it is a compariſon taken from things that ſeeme to be faſt and firmely rooted, thereby ſignifying, that the Church is much more ſtable and vnmoueable. The mountaines are very firme and ſtrong; neither doe earthquakes happen ſo often there as in plain and champian countries. The Lord then pronouceth, that though theſe great and huge mountaines ſhould remoue, or that heauen and earth ſhould meet, Pſal.46.2, yet his couenant ſhall ſtand immoueable, and his mercie ſhall be perpetuall towards his Church.

And to this purpoſe it is ſaid in Pſalm.93.1. That the Lord ſhal reigne, and that the world ſhall be ſtabliſhed that it can not be moued. And in Pſal.102.26.28. The heauens ſhall periſh, but the Church of God ſhall remaine for euer. In the word mercie we are to note what the foundation of this couenant is: for we can haue no acquaintance with God, vnleſſe he freely receiue vs by pardoning our ſinnes.

Peace, taken for all proſperitie.

The couenant, is by him called the couenant of peace, becauſe the Lord therein offers vs all that which belongs to our chiefe good: for vnder this word peace, the Hebrues vnderſtand all happines and proſperitie. Seeing this couenant then conteines a firme and ſtable bleſſednes, it muſt needs follow that all thoſe are miſerable which are excluded out of it. In that he ſaith, it is he who hath compaſſion, he againe confirmes that which we haue ſaid, namely, that he hath no other reaſon to ſhew mercie, but becauſe he is pitifull, and readie to forgiue, Chap 55.7.

Verſ. 11. O thou afflicted and toſſed with tempeſt, that haſt no comfort: behold, I will lay thy ſtones with the Carbuncles, and lay thy foundation with Saphirs.

The glorie of the ſecond Temple greater then the firſt, in this and the next verſe.

HE proſecutes the ſame argument, and promiſeth, that the Lord will put the Church into her firſt glorie; yea, that he will cauſe her to ſhine exceeding clearely, in that ſhe ſhall be more gloriouſlie beautified then before, euen as if ſhe were whollie built with pretious ſtones. Haggai in Chap.2.10. ſhewes the ſame in a word, when he ſaid that the glorie of the ſecond temple ſhould exceed the firſt.

Wee neede not ſtand to decipher out the qualities of theſe precious ſtones, which Iſaiah heere mentions, ſeeing the Hebrue expoſitors themſelues agree not together in this behalfe. It is enough that wee haue the ſenſe of the place. Now this maner of ſpeech hath great weight in it to aſſwage the ſorrowes of the faithfull: for it is as much in effect, as if he had ſet the little barke of the Church cleare off the ſands, when it was now in danger of drowning. As oft therefore as we ſee her ride in boiſterous waues, and preſſed with infinite calamities, yea, and depriued of all conſolation, let vs remember that theſe miſeries are meanes to prouoke God to giue her ſuccor.

Verſ. 12. And I will make thy windowes of Emerandes, and thy gates ſhining braſſe, and all thy borders of pleaſant ſtones.

BY theſe ſimilitudes he ſhewes, that the eſtate of the Church ſhall be more excellent then it was wont to be, as we haue noted before. The Church is heere compared to a building, a ſimilitude which we often meet withall in the holy ſcriptures, and therefore the Prophet layes downe a platforme of a ſtately and ſumptuous building. But wee are to note, that God is heere made the maiſter workeman of this building, for the whole worke muſt be attributed vnto him.

Obiect.

Some may aske what the Prophet meanes by Carbuncles, Saphires, verſ.11. Pearles, and other pretious ſtones: for S. Paul hath noted out the doctrine of the Goſpell by a like ſimilitude: I haue laid (ſaith he) the foundation as an expert maſter-builder: and if any build vpon this foundatiō, gold, ſiluer, pretious ſtones, wood, hay, or ſtubble, euery mans worke ſhall be made manifeſt, 1.Cor.3.10.12.13. I anſwere, the verſe following will ſhew whether the Prophet meant the ſame thing heere or no.

Anſ.

Verſ. 13. And all thy children ſhal be taught of the Lord, and much peace ſhall be to thy children.

The former things ſpoke not of doctrine, but of men.

HEnce wee may eaſily collect, that Iſaiah ſpake not in the former verſes of doctrine but of men, whereof the ſpirituall building of the Church is compact. I grant, the Church is builded by doctrine, but that is done in gathering men in, and by fitting them to be liuely ſtones in this building, 1.Pet.2.5. See the difference now betweene Paul and Iſaiah. Paul referres pretious ſtones to doctrine, and Iſaiah to the gifts of the holy Ghoſt, wherewith men are inriched and endued, that of them a Church may be reared vp. But the diuerſitie of gifts wherewith the Lord adornes his ſeruants are to be obſerued. For all are not Saphires or Carbuncles: the Lord diſtributes to euery one his meaſure according to his owne wil, 1.Cor.12.11. Eph.4.7.11. Whence wee alſo are to remember, that whatſoeuer ſerues for the adorning of the Church, proceeds only from the meere grace of God. For if wee be Carbuncles and Saphires becauſe wee are taught of God, then it followes that we get not this honor by nature.

Now the Lord teacheth vs two waies, namely, by the externall miniſtrie of man, and by the ſecret reuelation of the holy Ghoſt. Ieſus

Chriſt

Chriſt ſhewes in Ioh.6.45. which of theſe teachings the Prophet heere ſpeakes of: for he alledgeth this text, and therefore we neede not ſeeke for a better expoſitor. It is written in the Prophets (ſaith he) And they ſhall be all taught of God. Whoſoeuer then hath heard and learned of the Father, commeth vnto me. If this place then ſhould be vnderſtood of the externall preaching, that which Ieſus Chriſt concludes hence would not be firme enough. For this is no good conſequence, The Goſpell is preached, therefore all beleeue: for many reſiſt it, others openly ſcorne it, and ſome are hypocrites. The elect only who are choſen to eternall life become teachable, to whom properly it belongs to be accounted in the number of Chriſt his true diſciples. The Goſpell I grant is preached indifferentlie both to the elect & caſtawaies, but the elect only come to Chriſt, becauſe they are taught of God. Hence let vs conclude then, that the Prophet ſpeakes in this place of them, and of none other.

Chriſt the beſt expoſitor of this place.

1
2
3

By this we may ſee, how and by what meanes wee are made liuing and pretious ſtones to ſerue in the building of the Lords ſpirituall temple, to wit, vvhen the Lord hath ſquared and poliſhed vs by his holy ſpirit: and to the outward preaching of his vvord, ioines the inward power and efficacie of the ſame ſpirit. And thus we are alſo taught how great the peruerſitie of mans vnderſtanding is, in that it can not be bowed nor reformed, vnleſſe the Lord worke vpon the ſame mightily by the powerfull operation of his bleſſed ſpirit.

The maner how we become pretious ſtones, fit to ſerue Gods ſpirituall building.

Our Prophet hath conioined theſe two maners of teaching together, to wit, both the inward, and the outward. For he calles thoſe the children of the Church, who are taught of the Lord: if they be children, then haue they bin conceiued in her womb, and nurced vp in her lap, firſt with milke, afterward with ſtrong meate, 1.Cor.3.2. Hebr.5.12. 13.14. vntill they grow vp, and become perfect men in Chriſt Ieſus, as Paul ſpeakes Epheſ.4.13. The outward miniſtrie of the word then is required if we will be his diſciples.

Whence it appeares, how abſurd and blockiſh the raging of thoſe fantaſticall ſpirits is, who peruert this teſtimonie, to ouerthrow the preaching of the word, and the miniſtrie of the Church. For children of the Church can they not be, vnleſſe they will be nouriſhed vp in her lap. Let them goe then with their ſecret reuelations; for the holy Ghoſt teacheth none but ſuch as ſubmit themſelues vnder the Churches miniſtrie. Well may ſuch be the diſciples and children of Satan, but not of God, ſeeing they contemne the order which hee hath eſtabliſhed. For theſe two points, to wit, the children of the Church, and the ſchollers of God, are ſo linckt together, that thoſe who refuſe to be taught of the Church ſhall neuer be Gods diſciples. I grant they muſt be aptly diſtinguiſhed, euen as Iſaiah alſo doth, leſt that be attributed to men which only belongs to the power of the holy Ghoſt. And yet they muſt be ſo linckt one to the other, that we muſt know that in this worke God will ſerue his turne by man.

Anabaptiſticall reuelations tixed.

Whoſoeuer refuſeth to be taught of the Church, ſhal neuer be Gods diſciple.

Moreouer by this verſe we are taught, that Gods calling works with efficacie in his elect. S. Auguſtine hath prudentlie pondered this place, and very fitlie applies it againſt the Pellagians, who extolled mans free will againſt the free grace of God. Theſe Heretiks I grant ſeemed to attribute ſomewhat vnto Gods grace, but in ſuch ſort, that they left it to the free will of man either to chuſe or refuſe: which our Papiſts do at this day, who affirme that euery one may reiect or receiue this grace. But all, ſaith S. Auguſtine, ſhall be taught of God. His diſciples therefore are taught with efficacie, and follow his calling, Ioh.10.27. He alſo alledgeth that ſixth of Iohn by vs cited before, whence it manifeſtly appeares that it proceeds not from any free election that man hath in himſelfe, to be able to bow his will which way him liſteth.

S.Auguſtine.

Pellagians, Heretiques.

The Papiſts become Pellagians.

We are alſo to note hence what account the Lord makes of his doctrine, whereby he fits vs for this building, to the end we may be Pearles, Saphires and Carbuncles. For thoſe that goe about to erect a Church without the preaching of the word, ſhall rather build a Stie for Hogs, then a Church for God. By this alſo we may learne what to iudge of that infolded faith wherof ỹ Papiſts tattle ſo much: for thus they would make men to differ in nothing from brute beaſts, that ſo they might play the Merchants with them openly, without controle. But I trow, if we be taught of God, it is no reaſon we ſhould reſemble vnreaſonable beaſts.

Thoſe that will build a Church without the preaching of the word, ſhall rather build a Stie for Hogs, then a Church for God.

It may be demanded, whether the Patriarks, Prophets, and other of the faithfull were taught of God vnder the law or no? Certainely they were. But our Prophet ſpeakes heere by way of compariſon. For vnder Chriſt the Lord ſpake ſo euidentlie, that he openly manifeſted himſelfe to be the teacher of his Church, and after he gathered to himſelfe a great number of diſciples. Moreouer, this place accords with that of Ieremiah, Chap.31. 34. And they ſhall teach no more euery one his neighbour, nor euery man his brother, ſaying, Know the Lord, for all ſhall know me from the leaſt of them to the greateſt, ſaith the Lord. Wherefore if it were of neceſſitie that all the children of God in old time were the diſciples of ỹ holy Ghoſt, much more ought we to be ſo in theſe times, ſeeing this propheſie properly belongs to the kingdome of Chriſt.

Queſt.

Anſ.

And there ſhall be abundance of peace.] By the word peace, he meanes felicitie, that is, all good things. Hence we are to gather wherein mans chiefe happines conſiſts, namely, in hauing our minds illuminated of God, to comprehend that ſaluation which is manifeſted to vs in Chriſt. For as long as wee bee ſtrangers to this knowledge wee are the vnhappieſt people vnder heauen; for ſo the very bleſſings of God are turned into curſings, Mala.2.2. till they be ſanctified vnto vs by faith.

Peare, taken for felicitie.

Mans chiefe felicitie.

Verſ. 14. In righteouſnes ſhalt thou be eſtabliſhed, and be farre from oppreſſion, for thou shalt not feare it: and from feare, for it shall not come neere thee.

As God is the teacher of his Church, so will he be her protector.

HIs meaning is, that God shall bee the workeman and Master builder of his Church. I am not ignorant that others expound it otherwise, and take righteousnesse for good workes: which exposition hath some shew of reason in it, because the Prophet hath before spoken of the doctrine of faith: and wee are taught, to the end we should liue holily and righteously. But the Prophet hath another scope, namely, that the Church shall bee restored vnder the conduct of God, who would bee her protector and defender. For heere hee opposeth righteousnesse to that violence and oppression, whereby the Church was ruinated: or rather, by this word he notes out the firmnes and stabilitie of it. As if hee should say; This shall be no building of stones nor timber, which may haue some faire glosse set vpon it for a time, because God will faithfully maintaine the worke of his owne hands: and in regard he is iust, he will cause her, being restored to her perfect estate, to stand for euer. Let men conspire what they will then to worke the ruin of the Church, their practises shall all come to nought; because God will preserue her by his righteousnesse. Wee haue seene the like speech heertofore. This plaine interpretation therfore contents me, though the other may seeme more plausible to many.

Reade the exposition of the verse following, for the better vnderstãding of this.

Verse. 15. Behold, the enemie shall gather himselfe, but without me: whosoeuer shall gather himselfe in thee, against thee, shall fall.

The Church must not promise to her selfe any secure resting place in this world.

THe summe is, that albeit many rise vp to ouerthrow the Church, yet shall all their plots and assaults be defeated, and vanish into smoke. Yea, it seemes that God not onely promiseth helpe against the open enemies, but also against them within: for many creep into the bosome of the Church, as if they meant to be her children: but afterward, they fall like vipers to eate out the bellie of their mother. Some translate; In assembling, he shall assemble against thee: vnderstanding this of all the enemies of the Church in generall. This is the most receiued interpretation: neither doe I reiect it, prouided that wee therewithall comprehend the wiles, ambushes, and treasons wherewith the Church is assailed. And no doubt but that is heere expressed, which is contained in the second Psalme; to wit, the tumults and conspiracies against Christ and his Church: for not one, but many nations rise vp against her, and yet it is very likely that the Prophet heere expresly ioines the domestike enemies, and those from without, who crept in to assaile her in her owne bosome as it were. For it is said, in thee, against thee: that is to say, they shall set vpon thee from within, yea euen in the middest of thee.

To bee short, his meaning is, that the Church shall neuer inioy such abundance of peace, but she must looke for many aduersaries that will assaile her. But how agrees these things together, may some say? for in the former verse he said shee should be farre from oppression, and from feare, for it should not come nigh her? And now he shewes she shall haue intestine conspiracies. But the Prophet hath added this in very fit season, lest the faithfull should promise vnto themselues a secure resting place in this world, as if the wicked and hypocrites should no way molest her. The Church then you see, is so deliuered from reproches and oppression, that she is perpetually to incounter with open and secret enemies: for Satan wil euery day be raising vp of new alarums against her, so as by his good will, she shall not haue a minute of rest. This therefore is a correction as it were of the former sentence, teaching the faithfull to be alwaies vpon their watch, and neuer to promise themselues any truce. But for our comfort, the Prophet addes a promise; namely, that the Lord will protect her in the midst of all dangers.

Obiect.

Ans.

Without God, signifies as much, as in vaine, or without any good successe. For his meaning is, that the plottings of the wicked shall come to nought, though they busie all their wits, and doe the worst they can. They shall cast themselues headlong into an headlesse rage, but the onely hand of the Lord shall giue his people an happy euasion and issue. Now hee alludes to that which was said before, namely, that the Chaldeans should come vnder the conduct of God, to destroy the land of Iudeah. The people were then destroied because God was their enemie: but now the enemies comming to assaile the Church without God, that is to say, without his fauour, they shall flee and be confounded.

The plots of the wicked shall be all brought to nought: and why?

Which hee better expresseth by and by after, saying; Hee that shall gather himselfe in thee, against thee, shall fall. That is, whatsoeuer hee hath imagined against thee, shall fall vpon his owne head: yea, though the whole world should rise vp against thee, yet should it crush and ouerwhelme it selfe by the owne burthen.

The particle in thee, is to bee noted: for when the Lord driues our enemies farre off from vs, then we grow confident: but if they approch and draw neere, then wee are out of heart. Therefore he saith, though they pierce euen to thine inward parts, yet will the Lord destroy them, and deliuer thee.

Verse. 16. Behold, I haue created the smith that bloweth the coales in the fire, and him that bringeth forth an instrument for his worke, and haue created the destroier to destroy.

God knowes how to work well by euill instruments.

THe Lord sheweth how easie it is for him to deliuer his Church from the wicked enterprises of his enemies: for they can accomplish no more then that which hee permits them to doe; yea he vseth them as his instruments to chastise his children withall. Now this may as fitly bee referred to the Chaldeans, as to the rest of their enemies, which afterward molested the chosen people of God. If wee receiue the first sense, God plainly phainly ſhewes, that in a moment hee can chaſe them away, whom he hath brought together; and bring them downe, whom hee hath exalted. And if we referre it to Antiochus, and his like, the ſenſe will not be much different; to wit, that euen thoſe ſhall not hurt as they would; for they ſhall not ſo much as remooue their leaſt finger without Gods leaue.

Obiect. But doth not the Prophet ſeeme to contradict himſelfe? For in the former verſe hee ſaid, that the wicked ſhould aſſaile the church without the Lord: and heere hee ſhewes that they fight as it were vnder his colours, and that vnder his conduct and authoritie, they waſte and deſtroy the Church? Anſ. I anſwere, we muſt conſider the oppoſition; namely, that the Lord had raiſed vp the Babylonians to ſcatter the Church: for wee are to note the ſimilitude of the deluge, mentioned in the ninth verſe, whereby he ſignified an vtter deſtruction: ſo as the Church was then in a maner cleane waſted by the Babylonians, whom he vſed for that ſeruice. But he there proteſts to moderate his indignation ſo as he will neuer ſuffer the enemy to aboliſh his Church againe, though for a time he giue the ſame ouer to be chaſtiſed by their hand. Indeed that is the enemies drift; for they imploy the vtmoſt of their power and force, to bring the Church to confuſion and vtter ruine, but the Lord repreſſeth their rage, in regard they doe it without him, verſ. 15. that is to ſay, without his commandement.

Some expound, that the Smith is created for his worke: that is to ſay, to practiſe his owne death: and the deſtroier to deſtroy himſelfe. But I thinke the firſt ſenſe is more ſimple, where the Lord ſaith, that hee createth the deſtroier; it is not onely referred to their nature, as they are borne men, but to the act of deſtroying: and yet wee muſt not lay the blame vpon God, as if he were the author of the vniuſt crueltie which remaines in men: for God conſents not with their wicked will, but diſpoſeth of their indeuors by his ſecret prouidence, and vſeth them as the inſtruments of his wrath. But we haue handled this matter in another place.

Verſ. 17. But all the weapons that are made againſt thee ſhall not proſper: and euery tongue that ſhall riſe againſt thee in iudgement, thou ſhalt condemne. This is the heritage of the Lords ſeruants, and their righteouſneſſe is of mee, ſaith the Lord.

HE againe repeates that which was noted before; namely, that the wicked ſhall loſe their labours, let them plot as much as they will: for their violent determinations are conducted and held ſhort by the ſecret counſell of God. Now he vſeth the particle All, ſignifying that the wicked ſhould haue meanes of all ſorts, and in great number, to worke the Churches ouerthrow: but all ſhould vaniſh like ſmoke, becauſe the Lord would repreſſe them. God indeede permits them to worke their wils for the triall of the faithfull: but after patience hath had her perfect worke in them, he ſtrippeth the wicked of all the force and power in which they truſted. Now hauing ſpoken in generall of the weapons and inſtruments of warre, wherewith the vngodly inuade the Church; hee names the tongue expreſſly, which is the moſt peſtilent and deadly weapon of all: Iames 3. 8. For the wicked content not themſelues to rent and teare the ſeruants of God by outrages and ſlanders, but they alſo labour as much as in them is, to extinguiſh the truth of God, and to alienate mens mindes from the loue of it: and this ought more to pierce and wound our hearts, then if we were to loſe our liues an hundred times. Adde alſo that good men are more deeply wounded with falſe imputations, then with the deepeſt gaſh that can be giuen them with a ſharpe ſword: and therefore we muſt not ouerpaſſe this mortall and deadly weapon of the tongue. The tongue a peſtilent enemie.

Afterwards when hee addes, that theſe tongues riſe vp in iudgement: it is to ſhew that the wicked ſhall be ſo bold and inſolent, that they ſhall malicioufly prouoke and moleſt the children of God; yea they ſhall doe it in iudgement: for they couer themſelues vnder goodly pretences, that they may make the world beleeue their cauſe is exceeding good. As when the Papiſts call vs dogs, heretikes, and ſchiſmatikes; they plead againſt vs in iudgement (as you would ſay) and will be eſteemed the defenders of the Catholike faith, though they onely be the vpholders of idolatry and lies. And yet their accuſations are painted ouer with ſuch colours, that ſo they may make vs the more odious among them, who are ignorant of our iuſt cauſe. But admit they aſſaile vs with open violence by the ſmitings of the tongue, Ier. 18. 18. or with any other weapon, yet let vs not doubt but we ſhall be more then conquerours, as this propheeie witneſſeth: for the victorie is heere promiſed vs. Seeing therefore we may be bold to relie vpon the truth of it, let vs buckle our ſelues to the combat, with a ſtout and inuincible courage.

This is the heritage.] Hee ſhewes that the Lord hath giuen this to his ſeruants as it were by the right of their inheritance, whereof they ſhall not be defrauded: for as there is no title ſo ſure as that of an inheritance, ſo he alſo ſhewes, that the ſeruants of the Lord ought to aſſure themſelues of this priuiledge aboue any thing in the world beſides, namely, of his protection and perpetuall ſafegard, by which he defends and keepes all his, from all dangers whatſoeuer.

Righteouſneſſe is heere taken for that which we commonly call, Their right. To conclude, his meaning is, that the Lord will ſhew himſelfe the protector of his Church, that he may maintaine their innocency. As oft then as men offer vs any violence, let vs learne to run ſtraightway to God: for in regard we ſeeke to other helpes, it comes to paſſe that wee are deſtituted of his defence and protection. Leur droit.

THE LV. CHAPTER.

Verſ. 1. Ho, every one that thirſteth, come ye to the waters, and ye that haue no ſilver, come, buy, and eate: come I ſay, buy wine and milke without ſilver, and without money.

A generall ſummons.

THE Prophet here greatly magnifies and extols Gods goodnes, which ſhould be ſpread abroad largely, and in greater abundance then was wont vpon the Church, vnder the kingdome of Chriſt, vnto whoſe cuſtodie all the treaſures of Gods graces are committed, for in him God giues himſelfe wholly vnto vs. So as the ſaying of S. Iohn is truely accõpliſhed, namely, that of his fulnes we all haue receiued grace for grace, Ioh. 1. 16. I grant the fathers vnder the law felt this goodnes and ſpirituall liberalitie of God, which is here mentioned: Oh how great ſaith Dauid is the goodnes which thou haſt laid vp for them that feare thee? Pſal. 31. 19. notwithſtanding this goodnes was much more fullie and liberallie ſhed abroad vnder Chriſt. Behold heere then a ſingular commendation of Gods grace, which is ſet before vs in Chriſtes kingdome. The Prophet then not only teacheth that which ſhould be once done, but that alſo which is dayly effected when the Lord ſummons vs by his doctrine to the inioying of all theſe benefits.

Some referre the word waters to the doctrine of ỹ Goſpell, others to the holy Ghoſt: but both (as I thinke) are deceiued. For thoſe that vnderſtand it of the doctrine of the Goſpell which they oppoſe to the Law (whereof the Iewes ſuppoſe the Prophet ſpeakes in this place) do only comprehend one part of that which Iſaiah meant to ſay. For the others, who referre it to the holy Ghoſt, they haue a little more colour, and they alleage that place of S. Iohn: If thou kneweſt the gift of God, and who it were that ſaith vnto thee, Giue me drinke, thou wouldſt haue asked of him, and hee would haue giuen thee waters of life, Iohn 4. 10. And a little after, it ſeemes that Chriſt expounds this text of the Prophet, when he ſaith, Whoſoeuer ſhall drinke of this water ſhall thirſt againe; but, he that drinks of the water that I ſhall giue him ſhall neuer be more athirſt; but the water that I ſhall giue him, ſhall be in him a well of water ſpringing vp into euerlaſting life, verſ. 13, 14. Yet I doubt not but Iſaiah vnder theſe words waters, milke, wine, and bread, heere comprehends whatſoeuer is neceſſarie to the ſpirituall life: for they are ſimilitudes taken from that ordinarie foode wherewith wee are dayly ſuſteined. Looke then how we are nouriſhed with bread, wine, milke, and water, ſo alſo let vs know that our ſoules are fed and ſuſteined with the doctrine of the Goſpell, with the holy Ghoſt, and with the other gifts of Chriſt.

Why the Prophet is faine to make this exclamation.

Now the Prophet makes a loude exclamation, and cries Ho, for men are rocked ſo faſt aſleepe, that they can hardly be wakened: they feele not their pouertie though they be affamiſhed, neither do they deſire that meate whereof they haue great neede. This drouzines of men therefore ought to be rouzed with great and continuall cries. The careleſnes then of ſuch as are deafe at this exhortation, is ſo much the more hatefull and deteſtable, and the ſlothfulnes of ſuch as flatter themſelues in their ſloth, albeit they haue bin ſpurred to the quick.

Moreouer this is a generall ſummons. For who is he that ſtands not in neede of theſe waters, or, to whom Chriſt can not bring much profit? for this cauſe he calles every one, without exception of perſons. But men are ſo wretched, that notwithſtanding they feele well enough what neede they haue of Chriſt, yet they ſeeke out meanes which way to deprive themſelues of ſuch a benefit: and doe rather giue credit to Satan, who furniſheth them with ſundrie impediments, then to giue eare to this ſo gracious and gentle a call.

We are to know then wherein the true preparation conſiſts to receiue this grace, which he expreſſeth in ſaying, he that thirſteth: for ſuch as are ſwollen vp with a vaine cõfidence, and are full gorged: or, who being bewitched with earthly delights, feele not the pouertie of their ſoules; neither will they giue place vnto Chriſt. Why ſo? Becauſe they feele no reliſh in the ſweetnes of this ſpirituall grace. They may well be compared to ſick folks that haue neede of good nouriſhment, but becauſe they are filled with winde, with diſdaine they reiect their meate; or, being caried with ſome fond imagination, they feede vpon their owne dreames, as though they ſtood in neede of nothing at all. And in this ſort, ſuch as are ſwollen with pride, or with a falſe perſwaſion of their owne righteouſnes; or, poſſeſſed with the allurements of the fleſh, do either deſpiſe, or reiect this grace of God. It is then required that we be athirſt, that is to ſay, to haue an ardent deſire, that we may be fitted to be partakers of ſo great benefits.

Buy without ſilver.] The Prophet meanes not that there are any which haue ſilver in abũdance: but it muſt be thus reſolued; Notwithſtanding you be extreamely poore and needie, yet the way is open for you to come vnto Chriſt, through whom theſe gifts are freely giuen. But will ſome ſay, How can a man be ſaid to buy, without paying ought? I anſwere, That the meanes whereby we attaine any thing, is heere improperly called buying. The verb to buy heere then, is taken for to get, or obtaine. And the price, for the labor or induſtrie; or, any other way where-

Obiect. Anſ.

by

by men obtaine any thing. He ſhewes then that we are vtterly poore and beggerly, hauing nothing in the world to get this grace of God, but are heere gently allured to receiue all things of his hand freely, without any recompence on our part.

Verſ. 2. Wherefore doe yee lay out ſilver, and not for bread? And your labour without being ſatisfied? Hearken diligentlie vnto mee, and eate that which is good: and let your ſoule delight in fatneſſe.

A generall complaint.

HEe complaines of mens folly and ingratitude, who either reiect or diſdaine Gods bountie, in offering them all things liberally: and yet in the meane while, wearie themſelues much in following after ſundry toies, which can bring them no profit at all. For the diuell hath ſo bewitched them, that they had rather erre in their forlorne by-paths, yea and to kill themſelues for nothing, then to reſt vpon that grace which God preſents before them. The experience of the time in which we liue ſhewes ſufficiently, that the Prophet tooke not vp this complaint onely againſt them of his owne nation, but againſt all men, of what time or age ſoeuer. For all the ſucceſſors of Adam are caried away with this rage, namely, that whileſt they pretend to ſeeke the way to eternall life, they whollie erre and goe aſtray, and rather follow their vaine opinions then the voice of God. The Prophet then complaines not onely of their ſlothfulneſſe, who hauing vtterly forgotten both God and themſelues haue no care at all of the ſpirituall life of their ſoule, (the numbers of which kind of perſons are very many) but of thoſe who ſeeme to deſire life, and yet neither keepe nor obſerue the way or means to attaine vnto it, but wander in their owne crooked paths.

Heere then are condemned all ſuch means to obtaine ſaluation by, as men haue forged vnto themſelues, without Gods word; and are therefore called vnprofitable coſts. For by ſilver, he vnderſtands all induſtrie, ſtudie, and paines of men: not that God eſteemes a ruſh of all that which wee offer him in vaine to ſerue him; but in regard the ſenſe of the fleſh eſteemes thoſe labours very precious, which we haue fooliſhly taken vp.

By the word bread, hee vnderſtands that which he ſaid before touching waters: and by labour, that which he called ſilver. As if he ſhould ſay; Men wearie themſelues much for nothing. For when they follow their inuentions, they muſt looke for no reward, though they vex and martyr themſelues neuer ſo much. Therefore the Prophet ſaith, that thoſe who labour inconſiderately, ſhall neuer be ſatisfied. For if they forſake God, to ſeeke out new meanes of ſaluation, they ſhall neuer be filled, becauſe, as Hoſea ſaith, they are fed with wind. Chap. 12. 1. They may well ſeeme to be full, whileſt a vaine conceit blinfolds them; but they ſhall be like thoſe, who being ſwollen with wind, feele not their hunger. And yet it were much better for them to bee ſo pinched with hunger and thirſt, that they might thereby be prouoked to cry earneſtlie vnto the Lord to be filled: according to that in Pſalme 63. 2. My ſoule thirſteth for thee, like the dry ground. But bread or water alone, would not ſuffice to fill vs, neither can our life bee ſuſtained with one of them. That is the reaſon then why the Prophet hath vſed diuers words, to ſhew that God furniſheth vs with all things abundantly, that are neceſſary to preſerue life, leſt we ſhould vſe any vnlawfull ſhifts to ſuccour our ſelues elſewhere.

But becauſe euery one ruſheth himſelfe into error by his owne counſels; and all hauing forſaken God, doe vaniſh away in their owne peruerſe imaginations, the Prophet heere addes a remedy, namely, that we whollie depend vpon the mouth of God. For whoſoeuer ſubmits himſelfe vnto his word, needes neuer feare that hee hath miſpent his time. And heere we ſee a wonderfull goodneſſe of God, in that he offers his grace, though men be vnthankfull and vnworthy of it.

Yet notwithſtanding he addes a condition, for the entrance into life, cannot bee made, vnleſſe wee giue eare vnto him. And as the cauſe of our ruine is, that we ſtop our eares againſt Gods word: ſo the way to heauen is open vnto vs, if wee hearken vnto him diligently. He repeates the ſame admonition againe, the better to moue our affections: and redoubles the word, Heare, in hearkening. And that hee might the better win vs with ſweete allurements, he proteſts the fault to be our owne, if we be not fully ſatisfied with all ſorts of good things.

Verſ. 3. Incline your eares and come to mee: heare, and your ſoule ſhall liue: and I will make an euerlaſting couenant with you, euen the ſure mercies of Dauid.

The ground of Gods couenant.

BY this heape of words wee may the better conceiue of that which I haue ſaid before, namely, that God omits no meanes to awaken and correct our dulneſſe: and yet heere is a reprehenſion. For it muſt needs be granted that ſuch are too drowzie headed, who being ſo louingly called, doe not forthwith yeelde their obedience. An excellent place: which ſhewes that our happineſſe conſiſts in that obedience which wee ought to yeeld vnto the word. Now when he ſpeakes thus, his meaning is, to bring vs to ſaluation: and therefore the fault reſts wholly in our ſelues; for wee contemne this ſauing & quickening word. Moreouer, if God ſhould onely command vs to doe that he hath inioined vs, hee ſhould therein ſhew vs the way indeede how to obtaine life, but yet without any profit to vs. For the law, as it comes forth of Gods mouth, is the miniſter of death, 2. Cor. 3. 7. but when he calles vs to himſelfe, and adopts vs for his children, when he promiſeth remiſſion of ſinnes and ſanctification; this cauſeth them which heare, to receiue life of him. We are the to consider what kinde of doctrine it is that hath life in it, that we may therein seeke our saluation.

From this place also we gather, that there is no hope of saluation, vnlesse we be obedient to God and his word: and by this all men are conuinced, so as they can pretend no cause of ignorance; for he that vouchsafes not to heare, shall neuer be able to alleage one sound reason for his owne defence. But, as I haue said, these repetitions set forth the patience of God in calling vs. For he summons vs not for once only; but if he perceiue that we be slow, he admonisheth vs the second, yea, the third time, that he might ouercome our stubbornnes. He reiects not those then at the first which disdaine him; but after he hath many times allured them.

The nature of faith.

Furthermore heere is expressed the nature of faith, when he commands vs to come vnto him: for wee must so heare the Lord, that the fruit thereof may also follow. Those also who receiue the word of God in faith do cast away their lusts, and reiect the world wherewith they were fast bound, that they may willingly draw neere vnto God, and that with much ioy and gladnes of heart. Yet faith can not be conceiued without hearing, Rom.10.17. that is to say, without vnderstanding of the word, and therefore he commands vs to encline our eare before we come. When mention shall be made of faith then, let vs remember that it must be ioined to the word, in which it hath her foundation.

1 2

Gods word the ground of faith.

Where he addes, and I will make a couenant: some demaund, whether God had not made a perpetual couenant with the Iewes before: for he seemes to promise a new and vnaccustomed thing heere. I answere, he promiseth no new thing, but that which God had before contracted with the people, and therefore it is but a renuing and a confirmation of the couenant, to the end the Iewes should not thinke that Gods promise was abolished, though they saw themselues so long banished. For whilst they were driuen out of that countrie which was promised and giuen them, being without the Temple, and without the sacrifices, and had no marks at all left, but the couenant of Circumcision; who would not haue thought but that God had vtterly shaken them off? Isaiah then hath fitted this phrase of speech as you see to the capacitie of the people, that they might know how the couenant of God made with their fathers was firme, stable, and eternall, and neither mutable nor temporarie.

Quest.

Ans.

He signifies the same thing by the mercies of Dauid: but by this clause he shewes that the couenant is free, because it hath its foundation laid in nothing but in the meere goodnes of God. As oft then as wee meete with this word Conenans in the Scriptures, wee must therewithall call to minde the word mercie, or grace.

Couenant, and mercie, must alwaies be matched together.

Now he pronounceth he will be faithfull therein: and forthwith he signifies, that he will be found true and constant, so that none shall be able to charge him with double dealing, as if he had broken his couenant. Nay, the Iewes themselues rather were become trecherous and disloyall, in regard they had reuolted from him: for, he for his part can not repent himselfe touching the promise or couenant, which he had made.

He calles them mercies of Dauid, because this couenant which was now so solemnly confirmed, was made in Dauids hand. True it is that the Lord made the couenant first with Abraham, Gen.15.5. and 17.7. and afterwards confirmed it by Moses, Exod.3.15. and lastly he established and ratified it in the hand of Dauid, 2.Sam.7.12. that it might continue for euer. When the Iewes then thought of the redeemer, that is to say, of their saluation, they were to remember Dauid as the mediator, representing the person of Christ. For Dauid must not be considered heere as a priuate man, but with that title & person aboue mentioned.

1 2 3

Dauid, a figure of Christ.

The time also is to be noted, for the dignitie of the kingdome being extinct vnder this captiuitie of Babylon, and the royall title obscured and prophaned, it might seeme that the truth of God was abolished in the ruine of this familie. He therefore commands them by faith to looke vnto that royall seate of Dauid, which for a time was throwne downe.

See Psal.89. 38. &c.

Vers. 4. Behold I gaue him for a witnes to the people, for * a Prince and a master vnto the people.

* Or, a Leader.

NOw the Prophet explanes that yet better which he briefly mentioned before touching Dauid, to wit, because the promise of the redeemer was made to him; and that this speech therefore was fitlie applied to his person, in regard he was the pledge of the couenant: for he was not placed in that office to performe his owne affaires, but was set there as the mediator betweene God and the people. Notwithstanding, it is certaine that Isaiah brings vs directly vnto Christ, to whom wee may easily descend from Dauid: as if he should say, this successor of Dauid shall come, by whose hand perfect saluation and felicitie is promised. And in calling him a witnes, he signifies that the couenant by him contracted shal be ratified & established in Christ. There is great weight in this word witnes then: for the Prophet shewes, that this couenant shall be approued in Christ, through whom Gods truth shall be manifested, because he shall testifie that God is true.

An explanation of the former verse in this, and the verse following.

Wee must descend from Dauid, to Christ.

A witnes.

But this testimonie consists in doctrine, for without it we should receiue but little profit by Christs comming, in which sense it is said in Psal.2.7. I will preach the decree. And in the same sense Isaiah in Chap.49.2. saith, that Christs mouth should be like a sword, or, an arrow. For this cause also he calles him a Leader, and a Master, that to him and to his doctrine audience might be giuen: for if we heare him not speake, nor with certaine affiance imbrace that which he saith vnto vs touching the good will of his Father, his power is abolished. For after this sort the name of Christ makes a great sound among the Papists: but seeing they will not receiue him for their Doctor and Master,

A Leader.

A Master.

Maſter, but onely acknowledge him in name, their brags which they make thereof, are but vaine and ridiculous.

These words, to the peoples, are added by way of amplification: for the Church could neither bee eſtabliſhed in her firſt dignitie, nor get increaſes, but by the vocation of the Gentiles. It was therefore neceſſary that the voice of Chriſt ſhould ſound thorow all the quarters of the world, becauſe he is ordained to be the witneſs, conductor, and teacher of all mankind.

Verſ. 5. Behold, thou ſhalt call a nation that thou knoweſt not; and a nation that knew not thee ſhall runne vnto thee, becauſe of the Lord thy God, and the holie one of Iſrael: for he hath glorifiſied thee.

Iſaiah expounds that now at large, which he touched before but in a word: for hee ſhewes that Chriſt ſhall be the conducter, not of one people onely, but of all. To call heere, notes out the poſſeſſion: ſo as there is a correſpondencie betweene the word To call, and, to anſwere. Chriſt then being called by authoritie, as hee which is furniſhed with a ſoueraigne power, hee calles the nations to bring them in order touching their duties, and to ſubiect them to the word. Now he ſaith they ſhall be readie to obey, though they were not knowne of him: not that the Sonne of God who created them, knew them not what they were, Pſal. 94. 9. but it is ſpoken in regard they were reiected and deſpiſed, vntill they beganne to haue a place in the Church: for God had particularly called the Iewes; and the Gentiles ſeemed to be vtterly excluded, as if they had nothing at all appertained vnto them. But now, ſpeaking to Chriſt, he promiſeth that he ſhall conſtraine them to obey, though before they were wholly eſtranged from vnder his dominion.

Afterwards, he declares this more plainely in the progreſſe of the text, where indeed he vſeth the plurall number, that he might the better ſhew that the Church ſhall be gathered out of diuers nations: ſo as thoſe who were ſeparated and ſcattered, ſhould now be aſſembled into one body: for the word, ſhall runne, is to be referred to the conſenting of faith.

Moreouer, he ſaith heere, that the Gentiles haue not knowne: but it is to be take otherwiſe then that which he ſaid before, namely, that Chriſt knew nowthem: for ignorance is properly attributed to the prophane and vnbeleeuers, in regard they are deprined of the heauenly doctrine, without which we ſhall neuer know God. And howſoeuer this knowledge is naturally ingrauen in the hearts of all, yet it is ſo obſcure & confuſed, and wrapped in ſo many errors, that if the light of the word bee not added thereunto, whileſt they know God, they ſhall be ignorant of him, and not know him at all, but ſhall miſerably erre in darkneſſe.

A teſtimony touching the vocation of the Gentiles.

Wee haue heere an excellent teſtimonie then touching the vocation of the Gentiles: for whom Chriſt is ordained a redeemer, as well as for the Iewes. Whence alſo we gather, that God hath now care of vs, if wee will ſubmit our ſelues vnder his gouernment: ſo as hee will not onely watch ouer vs, as he doth ouer the reſt of his creatures, but as a father that is vigilant ouer his children. The word ſhall runne, doth better expreſſe the efficacy of this vocation: for the end thereof is, that we may obey God, in yeelding our ſelues reachable with a ready and glad heart in his preſence, and willingly to receiue from his mouth, the leaſt of his commandements. For as S. Paul ſaith, Rom. 1. 5. and 16. 26. Obedience is the end of our vocation. But becauſe the Gentiles were farre eſtranged from God, it was neceſſary they ſhould valiantly inforce themſelues to breake thorow all impediments, to draw neere vnto him.

Becauſe of the Lord.] Iſaiah ſhewes from what fountaine this willingneſſe and cheerfull alacritie ſhall ſpring, namely, the Gentiles ſhall know they haue to doe with God. For if we conſider Chriſt as man onely, his doctrine will not much moue vs: but if we apprehend God in him, we ſhall be inflamed with a wonderfull affection. Now he is heere deſcribed vnto vs as a Miniſter, ordained of God to perfect his worke. For in taking vpon him our nature, he therewithall tooke vpon him the forme of a ſeruant: and in this behalfe it is no diſparagement to him to ſee him ſubiected vnto the Father, as one of vs.

Moreouer, we are to remember that which we haue often touched before, touching the coniunction of the head with the members. For that which is ſaid of Chriſt, appertaines to his whole body: and therefore glorification is common to the whole Church. I grant that Chriſt alwaies holds the ſoueraigne degree: for being highly exalted, he rules ouer the whole world, to the end all nations may runne vnto him. To conclude, the Prophet ſhewes that men yeeld obedience to Chriſt, and ſubmit themſelues to his doctrine, becauſe God hath exalted him, and would that his excellencie ſhould bee acknowledged of all men: for otherwiſe, the preaching of the Goſpell would profit very little, vnleſſe God gaue efficacie to the doctrine, by the power of his holy Spirit.

Verſ. 6. Seeke the Lord whileſt hee may be found: call ye vpon him whileſt he is neere.

The Gentiles ſet before the Iewes, to prouoke them to follow them.

HAuing ſpoken of the fruit of the Goſpell among the Gentiles, who were before eſtranged from Gods kingdome, he now pricks forward the Iewes, that they may be aſhamed to ſleepe whileſt others runne: for ſeeing they were firſt called, it were a ſhame for them to come lag. This exhortation therefore properly belongs to the Iewes, before whom Iſaiah ſets the example of the Gentiles, that hee might prouoke them to follow them: which the Lord alſo had foretold, namely, that he would prouoke the Iewes to iealousie by a foolish nation: Deut. 32. 21.

The time To find, is not taken altogether in the same sense heere, as it is in the 32. Psalme: but for that time wherein God offers himselfe; as in other places he hath set down a certaine limited day, within the compasse whereof his fauour and saluation shall bee found. And yet I grant that Isaiah also notes the time wherein necessitie presseth vs to aske helpe of God: but we must principallie remember that God is sought in a fit time, vvhen himselfe comes forth to meete vs; for it shall be in vaine for the drowzie and sleepie to bewaile the losse of that grace, which themselues haue wittingly reiected. The Lord beares with our slothfulnes for a time, and patiently waits for vs; but if he gets nothing by it, hee will leaue vs, and bestow his grace vpon others. Christ therefore admonisheth vs to walke whilest it is day, because the night will come, in which wee can walke no more forward: Iohn 12. 37.

Hence wee are to gather a singular consolation, namely, that we are heere assured not to lose our time in seeking God: Seeke, saith Christ, and you shall finde; knocke, and it shall be opened; aske, and you shall receiue: Matth. 7. 7.

The word call, may be taken heere generally: but I thinke hee notes out a particular seeking of God, such an one as is principall aboue others: as if he commanded vs to haue recourse vnto him by praiers and supplications. Now hee then shewes himselfe to bee neere, when hee summons vs familiarly vnto him, in opening the gate, or presents himselfe before vs, to the end we should not wander hither and thither to seeke him.

While he is neere.] Saint Pauls distinction is to bee noted, who saith, the preaching of the Gospell is signified by these words: Rom. 10. 10. The Lord is neere, and offers himselfe vnto vs, when the voice of the Gospel sounds in our eares. Neither ought we to seeke him a far off, nor to fetch many circuits, as the vnbeleeuers doe: for he presents himselfe vnto vs in his word, to the end wee for our parts may draw neere vntó him.

How God is said to be neer vnto vs.

Vers. 7. *Let the wicked forsake his waies, and the vnrighteous his owne imaginations, and returne vnto the Lord, and hee will haue mercie vpon him: and to our God, for he is very readie to forgiue.

*abundant in pardon.

A confirmation of the former sentence.

HE confirmes the former sentence: for hauing called men to receiue Gods grace, he at large describes the way how to recouer the same. We know how the hypocrites yell and cry with open mouth after God, when they would bee succoured in their miseries, and in the meane while they harden their hearts through a wicked obstinacie. That the Iews then might not disguise themselues in seeking of God, Isaiah exhorts them to true pietie. Whence wee gather, that the doctrine of repentance ought perpetually to be ioined with the promise of saluation: for men can neuer taste Gods goodnesse, vnlesse first of all they bee displeased in themselues for their sinnes, and haue both renounced the vvorld, and themselues also. For no man will euer in good earnest desire to be reconciled vnto God, nor to obtaine remission of his sinnes, vnlesse he be touched with a true and sound repentance.

The doctrine of repentace must alwaies be ioined with the promises of saluation.

The Prophet describes the nature of repentance three waies, or by three phrases of speech; Let the vvicked forsake his vvaies, and the vnrighteous his imaginations; and then, let him returne vnto the Lord. Vnder the word vvay, he comprehends the whole course of our liues: and thus hee requires that they bring forth fruits of righteousnesse, to shew their newnesse of life. In adding thoughts; he signifies that it is not enough to correct the outward actions, but that wee must begin at the heart. For though according to mens iudgements, we haue as it seemes, changed our life from worse to better, yet wee haue indeed made but a weak beginning, if the heart be not first changed. Repentance therfore cõtaines in it the change of the whole man. Wherein wee haue first to consider the imagination, then the deliberations, and lastly, the outward actions. Men see the actions: but the roote from whence they proceed, is hidden within the heart: it behoueth therefore that it bee first renued, that afterward from thence there may flow forth fruitfull workes. First the vnderstanding must be clensed from all the filthinesse that is in it: and then must we cast off the wicked affections and lusts, that from thence, outward testimonies may afterward manifest themselues. If any one boast that hee is changed, and yet liues a disordered life; his reioicing is vaine: for these two things must be required together, to wit, the conuersion of the heart, and the change of the life.

The nature of repentãce described.

Note.

The conuersion of the heart, and the change of the life must go together.

Besides, God calles vs not to turne to him, till the former reuolt be amended. For hypocrites would be well enough contented that that which they doe should be praised, so they might still bee suffered to rot in their filthinesse: but we can haue no acquaintance with God, vnlesse we come forth of our selues, especially when we haue estranged our selues from him, by a wicked backsliding: wherefore the renouncing of our selues, goes before our reconciliation with God.

The renouncing of our selues, goes before our reconciliatiõ with God.

And he vvill haue mercy.] This knitting togerher of the text ought to be diligently noted. For it shewes that men can neuer bee brought to repentance, but by setting before them the assurance of the remission of sins. Whosoeuer preacheth the doctrine of repentance then, without mentioning Gods mercie, and the free reconciliation, he loseth his labour. For we see how our Popish Doctors thinke they haue wel discharged their duties, when they haue long insisted vpon the former point: and yet in the meane while, they doe but babble and lie in preaching this doctrine. Yea, though they should teach the true way to repentance, yet would it bee to small purpose, seeing they omit the foundation

Remission of sinnes must not be separated from the doctrine of repentace.

tion of free remiſſion of ſinnes which only appeaſeth conſciences. Truly the guiltie ſinner will alwaies flee the preſence of God (as we haue ſaid in another place) as long as he ſhall be haled before his iudgement ſeate to yeeld an accoũt, neither will he euer be humbled to obey, nor feare, till his conſcience be at reſt. Now becauſe it is a difficult matter to quiet terrified conſciences, Iſaiah drawes an argument from the nature of God, ſaying, that he will be mercifull, and abundant in pardoning. The holy Ghoſt inſiſts long vpõ this point of doctrine, becauſe wee alwaies doubt whether God will pardon vs or no. For howſoeuer we haue ſome opinion of his mercie, yet dare we not perſwade our ſelues ſo aſſuredly that it belongs vnto vs as wee ought. You ſee it is not without cauſe that the Prophet addes this member, becauſe he thereby labors to diſpoſſeſſe our minds of that trembling which is incident vnto vs, as oft as we ſtand in doubt of his infinite mercie towards vs.

Gods nature deſcribed.

Why the holy Ghoſt inſiſts ſo lõg vpon this doctrine.

Verſ. 8. For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your waies my waies, ſaith the Lord.

9. For as the heauens are higher then the earth, ſo are my waies higher then your waies, and my thoughts aboue your thoughts.

Gods affection diſtinguiſhed from ours.

FOr my thoughts.] This place is diuerſlie expounded. Some thinke that mens conuerſation is here condemned in generall, to the end they ſhould not pleaſe themſelues therein, nor flatter themſelues in their vices, becauſe there is no acceſſe vnto God, vnleſſe we be emptied of this vaine opinion of our own righteouſnes. For none will ſeeke after the Phyſition, but ſuch as feele themſelues vehementlie ſick, and that deſire both the remedie and their health. And therfore they compare this place with that in Luk. 16. 15. That which is highly eſteemed before men, is an abomination in the ſight of God. But I think the Prophet hath another meaning. Thoſe therefore who thinke that Gods affection is heere diſtinguiſhed from humane affections, expound it beſt (as I thinke.) For men are wont to meaſure God by their owne ell (as they ſay) and becauſe themſelues are irreconciliable, and can not be pacified but with much adoe: they in like maner thinke that God can neuer be appeaſed, after they haue once offended him. But the Lord ſhewes that he reſembles them nothing at all. As if he ſhould ſay, I am not a mortall man that I ſhould be ſo ſeuere, and an enemie to you for euer: no, my thoughts are farre vnlike yours, for though it be impoſſible for you to be pacified, and that it be an hard matter to bring you to be reconciled with thoſe which haue offended you, yet it is not ſo with me, I will not ſhew my ſelfe ſo inhumane towards you. To this agrees very well that place of Dauid, Pſal. 103. where deſcribing Gods mercie, hee ſaith, that it is higher then the heauens are aboue the earth: and though the application be to another purpoſe there, yet the ſenſe is all one with this. In a word, there is none ſo gracious, or ſo inclined to mercie as the Lord is, and therefore we muſt impute it to our owne diffidence, if we obtaine not pardon of him.

We muſt impute it to our owne vnbeliefe, if we obtaine not pardon at Gods hand.

Now there is nothing which troubles our conſciences more, then when we thinke God reſembles vs, for this makes vs afraid to draw neere vnto him: nay, we rather flee from him as our enemie, and can neuer be in any reſt. So thoſe who meaſure God according to that which they conceiue of him, doe indeed conceiue a flat Idoll directlie contrarie to the nature of God, neither can they do him a greater diſhonor then this. Are not men who are corrupt, and ſtuffed full with inordinate luſts aſhamed to compare the moſt pure nature of God with theirs? and to impriſon him that is infinite within ſo narrow bounds, wherein they feele themſelues miſerablie enthralled? For in what more noyſome dungeon can any of vs be incloſed, then within our owne infidelitie? I take it that this is the Prophets true and naturall meaning; and yet I denie not but he had ſome reſpect to mens maners, namely ſuch as he hath deſcribed them in the former verſe.

To be ſhort, his meaning is, that men muſt forget themſelues when they meane to turne to God, becauſe there is no impediment ſo dangerous as when we thinke him to be irreconciliable. Let vs remoue this falſe imagination then out of our minds.

Beſides, by this place it appeares how farre they are out of the way, which abuſe Gods mercie to take the greater libertie to ſinne. For ſee how the Prophet argues; Repent; forſake your vvicked vvaies, becauſe Gods mercie is infinite. When men doubt or deſpaire whether they ſhall obtaine pardon or no, this makes them more wicked and ſtubborne; but the feeling of mercie drawes and conuerts them. It followes then that ſuch as neither forſake their leaud life, nor change their minds, haue no part in this mercie.

Verſ. 7. Verſ. 8.

Verſ. 10. Surely as the raine commeth downe and the ſnow from heauen, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it to bring forth and bud, that it may giue ſeede to the ſower, and bread vnto him that eateth.

To the commendation of Gods mercifull nature, he addes a promiſe that our faith might be the more ſurely ſtaied.

HAuing ſpoken of the tender affection and incredible loue which God beares vs, he again placeth promiſes in the middle, that ſo being grounded vpon them, we might be aſſured to paſſe ſafe and ſound through all dangers. For it would ſerue to little purpoſe that one ſhould deſcribe vnto vs the nature of God, or informe vs of his ſecret counſell, if therewithall wee were not brought to the word, wherein the ſame is manifeſted: but God ſpeakes plainely and familiarly vnto vs, ſo as we haue no neede to enquire further. We muſt therefore come to the word, which plainely opens his will vnto vs, if ſo be we will containe all our ſenſes within the bounds of it, for otherwiſe we ſhall alwaies remaine in ſuſpence, and doubt what ſhall become of vs, though the Lord ſhould tell vs an hundred times that he reſembles men nothing at all. And yet men (if they would confeſſe the truth) do deſire to be certaine of their ſaluation, and to know what ſhould befall them afterward. We are therefore to obſerue this order well which the Prophet heere keepes. And thus Moſes brought the people to the knowledge of the word, ſaying, Aske not who ſhall aſcend vp into heauen, or who ſhall deſcend into the deepe, for the word is neere thee in thy mouth and in thine heart, Deut. 30.12. and this is the word of faith (ſaith Paul) Rom. 10.10. which we preach.

in

Now the Prophet borrowes a ſimilitude here from a thing ordinarie amongſt vs, and it is exceeding fit for his purpoſe: for if wee ſee ſo great efficacie in the raine which waters and fattens the earth, much more will the Lord manifeſt his power in his word: for the raine vaniſheth, and is ſubiect to corruption, but the word is immortall, immutable, and incorruptible, and cannot conſume away as the raine doth.

But that we may the better vnderſtand the Prophets words, wee are to ſearch out his drift. Men doubt whether God will accompliſh that which hee hath promiſed in his word; for wee thinke his word hangs in the ayre without any effect: but by the very order of nature hee ſhewes, how deteſtable this opinion is. For it is too abſurd a thing to attribute life to the word, then to an inſenſible creature: and therefore hee teacheth, that the vvord is neuer vvithout his effect. Some vnderſtand it, as if the preaching of the Goſpell were neuer in vaine, but that it alwaies brings forth ſome fruit. Which I grant to be atruth, for the Lord workes by his Spirit, & giues increaſe, 1. Cor. 3.7. that the labour of his Miniſters may not be in vaine. But the Prophet meant another matter, namely, that God caſts not the ſeede of his word vpon the ground, without effect, neither ſcatters hee his promiſes in the ayre, but we ſhall gather the fruit thereof, if ſo be wee reſiſt him not by our owne incredulitie. Now hee mentions two effects of the raine, which makes the earth fruitfull by falling vpon it: First, that men may thereby haue
1 plentie of food to ſuſtaine them: ſecondly,
2 ſeed to ſow: the benefit whereof, is to be reaped the yeere following. If then Gods power bee ſo great in things tranſitorie, how much more effectuall may wee thinke his word is?

Verſ. 11. So ſhall my word bee, that goeth out of my mouth: it ſhall not returne vnto me void, but it ſhall accompliſh that which I will, and it ſhall proſper in the thing whereto I ſent it.

God ſpeakes to vs by men.

THe vvord goes ſo out of Gods mouth, that it alſo goes forth of the mouthes of men: for God ſpeakes not from heauen, but vſeth men as his inſtruments to declare his will by their miniſtrie. But the authoritie of the promiſes is better confirmed vnto vs, when wee heare that they proceede out of the ſacred mouth of God. Although then that hee vſe witneſſes on earth, yet hee teſtifies, that whatſoeuer they ſhall promiſe in his name, ſhall bee ratified and confirmed afterwards, before him. And that he might the better ingraue in mens mindes, the power and efficacie of preaching, he aduertiſeth vs that hee ſcattereth not this precious ſeede at randon, but hath ordained it to a certaine end; in regard whereof, no man is to doubt of the effect. For there is nothing whereunto men are more inclined, then to iudge of God according to their owne fantaſies, that ſo they may reiect his word. It was needfull therefore that this doctrine ſhould bee often repeated and beaten into our heads, that wee might know how God will ſurely performe that which he hath once ſaid. As oft then as wee heare of Gods promiſes, let vs conſider what his meaning is in them: as when hee promiſeth free remiſſion of ſinnes, let vs aſſure our ſelues of reconciliation through Chriſt. But as the word of God is powerfull to ſaue the faithfull, ſo hath it alſo his efficacie to condemne the wicked: which Ieſus Chriſt himſelfe affirmes, Iohn 12.48. The word which I haue ſpoken, that ſhall iudge in the laſt day.

We muſt haue an eye to Gods intention in his promiſes.
1
2

Verſ. 12. Therefore ſhall yee goe out with ioy, and bee led forth with peace: the mountaines and the hilles ſhall breake forth before you into ioy, and all the trees of the field ſhall clappe their hands.

NOw the Prophet concludes the argument of this Chapter: for that which he hath ſpoken touching Gods mercy, tended to aſſure the Iews, that God would deliuer them. Now he applies his diſcourſe touching Gods infinite goodneſſe to his purpoſe, and ſhews, that his thoughts are nothing like to the thoughts of men. Take a paterne heere then of a right order of teaching, namely, when we apply generall doctrines, to the preſent vſe.

The concluſion in this and the verſe following.

A right form of teaching.

Laſtly, Iſaiah ſpeakes of the peoples reſtitution, which depended vpon the free mercy of God.

By mountaines and hilles, he ſignifies, that all ſtumbling blocks which ſhould lie in the way, ſhould notwithſtanding ceaſe to aid thoſe that ſhould returne vnto Ieruſalem. Theſe are ſimilitudes then whereby hee ſhewes that all creatures are at Gods becke, and are ready to imploy themſelues to ſet forward his worke: yea and reioice to doe it.

He alludes to the deliuerance out of Egypt, according to the cuſtome of the Prophets: for ſo it is written in Pſal. 114. The mountaines leaped like Rammes, and the hils as lambes: What ailed thee O ſea, that thou fleddeſt backe? O Iordan, why waſt thou turned backe? For in regard that the reſtauration of the church is as it were a renuing of the whole world, it is ſaid, that heauen and earth are changed, as if they had quite altered their ordinarie courſe, courſe. All this depended vpon the former prophecies, by which they had a promiſe touching their returne.

All creatures at Gods becke.

Verſ. 13. For thornes, there ſhall grow firre trees: for nettles, ſhall grow the mirrhe tree; and it ſhall bee to the Lord for a name, and for an euerlaſting ſigne that ſhall not bee taken away.

AGaine hee extolles Gods power, which ſhould appeare in the peoples deliuerance: for he teacheth that there ſhall be ſuch a change, that the way ſhall bee made verie eaſie for their returne. Some expound this allegorically; and by thornes, vnderſtand that ſuch as indeuour to hurt and hinder others, ſhould now become firre trees: that is to ſay, bearing fruit, and bringing profite to their neighbours: but this expoſition is too curious. I denie not but theſe things indeed appertaine to Chriſts kingdome, and therefore ought to be ſpiritually vnderſtood. For the Prophet beginnes at the returne from Babylon, and comprehends the whole eſtate of the Church, vntil the manifeſtation of Chriſt to the world. But it doth not therefore follow that this allegorie is any thing to the purpoſe, becauſe Iſaiah ſpeakes of the peoples returne into Iudea. For, that they might the better paſſe, the Lord promiſeth to remoue all impediments out of the way, and would furniſh them with all things neceſſarie, that ſo they might bee free from all annoiances.

And ſo, when Chriſt promiſeth the benefit of our redemption, he therewithall takes away whatſoeuer thing might hurt or hinder the ſame: nay, he turnes it wholly the contrarie way, that out of euery euil we might draw ſome good: for all things turne to the beſt (as Paul ſaith) to them that loue God: Rom. 8. 27. And thus God vſeth the moſt hurtfull and dangerous euils, as remedies to purge the faithfull, that they may not giue ouer themſelues to the loue of the world, but may bee made the more liuely, and ready to performe the will of their Maſter.

All things fall out for the beſt to them that loue God.

When he addes that this ſhall be for a name to the Lord, it is to ſhew the end of the Churches reſtitution; namely, that Gods name might bee the more praiſed among men, and that the memory thereof might flouriſh, and bee conſerued. And therefore hee addes, for a ſigne: that is to ſay, for a teſtimonie, or for a perpetuall memoriall. Although the Church floate then, and bee diuerſly toſſed among theſe waues and tempeſts, yet ſeeing the Lord is purpoſed that the memorie of his name ſhall laſt for euer, hee will both defend and maintaine her.

THE LVI. CHAPTER.

Verſ. 1. Thus ſaith the Lord; Keepe iudgement and iuſtice: for my ſaluation is at hand to come, and my righteouſneſſe to be reuealed.

In the former verſes God hath manifeſted the ſignes of his fauour towards vs: now he ſhewes what duties wee owe to him.

THIS is a notable place. For the Prophet ſhewes what God requires of vs, as ſoone as he manifeſts the ſignes of his fauour, or promiſeth to bee recõciled vnto vs, to the end our peace may be aſſured. The thing he requires of vs, is ſuch a conuerſion as changeth both our iudgements and affections: ſo as hauing forſaken the world, wee forthwith aſpire vnto heauen: and therewithall hee requires the fruits of repentance.

Vnder the words iudgement and iuſtice, hee comprehends all the duties of charity, which conſiſts not onely in abſtaining from euill, but in doing good to our neighbours, according to our abilities. And this is the ſumme of the ſecond table; in the obſeruation whereof, we giue teſtimonie of our pietie, if there bee any at all in vs. The Prophets alwaies bring vs thither: for by this meanes it will quickly appeare what we are within: and the true integritie of the heart is thus diſcerned, from thoſe outward ceremonies wherein hypocrites pleaſe themſelues; as wee haue ſhewed heeretofore. Now he renders a reaſon, and forthwith ſhewes the beginning from whence all muſt frame themſelues to newneſſe of life; namely, that in as much as Gods iuſtice is at hand to bee reuealed to vs, we in like manner ought to preſent him with ours.

our iuſtice towards men.

The ſumme of the ſecond Table.

God often tries our loue to him, by

The Lord calles himſelfe iuſt, and ſaith that iuſtice is his; not that hee holds it ſhut vp in himſelfe; but becauſe he ſheds it abroad vpon men. He alſo calles that his ſaluation, by which he deliuers men from deſtruction.

Beſides, howſoeuer theſe words be directed to the Iewes, that with a ſincere affection of heart, and with an vnfeined deſire of godlines, they might ſhew themſelues thankfull to their redeemer; yet it alſo belongs to vs all in generall: for the whole world is loſt in it ſelfe, vnleſſe it recouer ſaluation in God. Let vs alſo note this exhortation; for thereby we are taught to be ſo much the more moued to the true feare of God, as we are neere vnto him: and therefore Saint Paul admoniſheth the faithfull, to caſt off the workes of darkneſſe, and to put on the armour of light; becauſe our ſaluation is neerer vs then wee be aware of: Rom. 13. 12.

Verſ. 2. Bleſſed is the man that doth this,

this, and the sonne of man which layeth hold on it: he that keepeth the Sabbath,
* Or, violates it not. *and * polluteth it not, and keepeth his hand from doing any euill.*

To the duties of the second Table vers 1. he now adds those of the first.

IN calling them blessed, who hauing imbraced this doctrine, doe submit themselues vnto God, walking in vprightnes, he closely insinuates, that there are many deafe, or vnteachable. But to the end their peruersitie or sluggishnes might not discourage the faithfull, he recommends his exhortation to them by the fruite which comes thereof. That the faithfull then should not recoile back, but casting off all impediments, they might readily prepare themselues to walke vprightly, he cries out that such only are blessed, to whom grace is giuen to be thus wise-hearted.

Obiect. In the former verse we haue said that the duties of the second Table were comprised vnder the words of Iustice and Iudgement. But heere he mentions the Sabbath, which appertaines to the first Table.

Ans. I answere (as I haue touched before) that such as liue innocentlie and iustlie with their neighbours, doe giue good testimonie of their sincerities towards God. It is no wonder then if after the Prophet hauing spoken of the second Table, he now mentions the first, because they must be ioined both together. In a word, Isaiah meant to say, that he shall be an happie man who submits himselfe vnto God in the obseruation of the whole law, for to such an one the righteousnes and saluation of God belongs, vers. 1.

The duties of both Tables must goe together.

But because men wander and erre in their imaginations, and seeke diuers meanes how to draw neere vnto God, the Prophet shewes that there is but one way, namely, when we studie how to order and rule our liues according to the Decalogue. Besides, heere is an excellent place, for it teacheth vs, that nothing is pleasing vnto God, but the obseruation of his commandements.

Quest. If it be asked whether men can obtaine righteousnes and saluation by works;

Ans. the answere is easie: for the Lord offers vs not saluation as being preuented by our merits (nay he rather preuents vs) but he offers himselfe freely to vs, and only requires that wee draw neere vnto him. Seeing then that of his owne good will he calles vs to himselfe, and offers his righteousnes freely, we are to take heed, that we depriue not our selues of so great a benefit.

Now because the Sabbath (as it appeares by Moses and Ezechiel, Exod. 31. 13. 17. Ezech. 20. 13.) was the principall signe of Gods seruice, therefore by the figure Synecdoche it containes in it selfe all the exercises of pietie, a part being taken for the whole. We must vnderstād the Sabbath then, with all his circumstances. For God rests not himselfe contented with the outward ceremonie, neither delights he in our idlenes, but he requires that we freely renounce our selues, that with hart and hand we may yeeld him absolute obedience.

That keepeth his hand &c. The Prophet also addes another Synecdoche in the end of the verse, to note out charitie. The summe is, That God is not serued aright, vnlesse true pietie and innocencie of life goe together: as also vnder these two parts he hath distinguished the maner of well liuing. In a word, here is an exposition of that true righteousnes which is contained in the law of the Lord, that in it we may rest, for in vaine shall any man seeke a way of perfection out of it. This then ouerthrowes all deuised worships, and all superstitions.

Vers. 3. And let not the sonne of the strāger which is ioined to the Lord speake and say, The Lord hath surely separate me from his people: neither let the Eunuch say, behold, I am a drie tree.

A preuention of an obiection.

THe Prophet shewes that this grace of God shall be such, that those who were farre off from him before, and against whom the gate was shut, should now obtaine a new estate, or should be placed againe in their right. And thus he meets with their complaints, that they should not say they were reiected, vnworthie, aliants, or shut out for any infamous note; because the Lord would take away all lets and impediments. Now this may 1 be as well referred to the Iewes, whose temporarie reiection had made the like to strangers, as to the prophane nations: and for mine owne part, I referre it both to the one and to the other, that so it may agree with the prophesie of Hosea, I will call them my people which were not my people. Hose. 1. 10. 2

Moreouer when he saith, that they shall be ioined to the Lord, it is to admonish them that this consolation only appertained to such as followed the voice of Gods call. For there were many Eunuches to whom the Lord shewed no mercie, and many strangers, which were not ioined to the Lord. This promise therefore is restrained to those, who being called, should obey. Vnder strangers and Eunuches, he notes out all such as seemed vnworthie to be reputed among the number of Gods people, who once had chosen them for his peculiar inheritance, and afterwards banished them out of his land. Other nations were shut out of his kingdome, as it appeares in euery place of the holy Scripture. Saint Paul saith in the Epistle to the Ephesians, Chap. 2. 12. 13. that the Gentiles had nothing to do in the Common wealth of Israel, but were strangers from the couenants of promise, without hope, and without God in the world; but now in Christ Iesus (saith he) you which were once farre off, are made neere by the blood of Christ.

Thus then the Gentiles might in the beginning doubt whether this benefit of adoption belonged vnto them or no, seeing it was properly appropriated to the Iewes. And therefore wee see how the Apostles auoided this thing; though the Lord had commanded them to preach the Gospel thorowout all the world: Mark. 16. 15. For they thought the doctrine of the Gospell should haue been prophaned, if they should indifferently publish it as well to the Gentiles, as to the Iewes. And the same scruple might also trouble the minds euen of the elect people, in regard their banishment out of the holy land, was a 2

signe

ſigne vnto them of their reiection. The Prophet therefore wils them to remoue all ſuch doubts as theſe out of their heads.

Vnder the word Eunuch, by the figure Synecdoche, hee comprehends all thoſe that bare any note of infamie vpon them, which might be an occaſion to ſeparate them from Gods people. For it ſeemed that ſ Eunuches, and ſuch as had no children, were reiected of God, and excluded out of the promiſe: wherein he had ſaid to Abraham, that his poſteritie ſhould be as the ſtarres in the heauens, and as the ſand of the ſea: Gen. 15.5. and 22.17. In a word, he withdrawes all men from the conſideration of themſelues, that they may wholly fix their mindes vpon the calling of God, that thus they might imitate the faith of Abraham, who conſidered not his body now dead, neither the deadneſſe of Sarahs wombe, ſo as to enter into any diſpute with himſelfe through his owne incredulitie touching the power of God: but aboue hope, beleeued vnder hope: Rom. 4.18, 19, 20. The Prophet then ſpeakes to the vile and contemptible, leſt they ſhould be diſcouraged, becauſe, as Saint Peter ſaith, God is no accepter of perſons; but in euery nation, he that feareth God, and vvorketh righteouſneſſe, is accepted of him. Act. 10.34. 35.

Verſ. 4. For thus ſaith the Lord vnto the Eunnches that keepe my Sabbaths, and chuſe the thing that pleaſeth me, and take hold of my couenant.

A confirmation.

NOw followes the confirmation. For the faithfull ſeruants of God which kept the Sabbath, and cleaued to the righteouſneſſe of the Law, ſhould haue place in the Church, although they were Eunuches, or had any other impediment. And thus it ſeemes the Prophet aboliſheth all the externall markes and viſible ceremonies, wherein the Iewes onely gloried. For the dignitie of the new Church is not outward, but ſpirituall: and albeit the faithfull haue no appearance of glorie before the eies of worldlings; nay, they are rather deſpiſed and wronged by them, yet are they of precious eſteeme in the ſight and preſence of God.

The dignitie of the new Church is not externall, but ſpiritual.

When he ioines obedience to the obſeruation of the Sabbath: thence we may eaſilie gather, that in ſpeaking of the day of reſt, hee had not ſo much reſpect to the bare ceremonie, as to a perfection of holineſſe. Where againe he impoſeth bands vpon the faithfull, that they ſhould not ſtart the leaſt ſtep from the duties of the whole Law: for it is not permitted them to chuſe any thing that likes them, but that which God hath reuealed to be pleaſing and acceptable to him. Hypocriſie and inconſiderate zeale therefore are here condemned, in that God oppoſeth his commandements to mens inuentions, and inioines them to take ſure hold of his couenant.

Hypocriſie and inconſiderate zeale condemned.

Verſ. 5. Euen vnto them will I giue in mine houſe, and within my wallet, a place, and a name better then of the ſonnes and of the daughters: I will giue them an euerlaſting name that ſhall not be put out.

HEere wee may euidently ſee, that the doore is ſet open for all perſons to enter into Gods kingdome (how vnworthy ſoeuer they be.) The Prophet alludes to Ieruſalem, and to the Temple, wherein the Lord had put the memoriall of his name. Now none but the Iewes had any place there: for they would haue thought the Temple prophaned, if any Gentiles had come within it. And this, as you know, was the cauſe that ſo great a multitude aroſe againſt Saint Paul, who had brought ſome vncircumciſed ones into it: Act. 21. 28. But heere the Lord receiues all thoſe without exception, whom before he had reiected: and hath aboliſhed that difference, by bringing vs, who were ſtrangers, into the Temple; that is, into the Church. For it is not now ſhut vp within the bounds of Iudea, as once it was; but it extends it ſelfe farre and neere, thorowout the whole world: as in Marke 16.15.

The word Iad, is taken heere, as in many other texts, for place. It may alſo be taken for power or authoritie, in regard they are aduanced to ſuch dignitie, as to be held for the children of God. Where hee adds, a better name; it may be demanded whether the Lord compares the Iewes which were then in the Church, with the faithfull which afterwards he will call into their roome: or the eſtate of the people to come, with that it was then. For it is certaine that the name of the Gentiles is more honourable now, then the name of Iewes, who for their infidelitie were cut off: and we haue ſucceeded them, who being wilde Oliues, were grafted into the naturall ſtocke: as S. Paul ſpeakes, Rom. 11.24. We may expound it then, that the Eunuches and ſtrangers ſhall haue a better name then the children, and thoſe of the houſhold; who were vnto God as his heritage. But I had rather take it in another ſenſe, namely, that the dignitie of the faithfull ſhall be greater vnder Chriſt, then it was vnder the law. The Patriarks had an excellent name, in reſpect that they called vpon God as their Father, and were knit vnto him by (a perpetuall) couenant: but at Chriſts comming, Gods grace was more abundantly ſhed abroad, and therefore we at this day haue obtained a better, and much more excellent name then they.

He calles it an euerlaſting name, becauſe it is vvritten in the heauens, where it ſhall not wither, but ſhall floriſh for euer. The wicked wil haue their names to be remembred in this world, and vſe all the meanes they can that their renowne may continue perpetually: but it is periſhable, and therefore laſts not long. But this is another kind of name; for wee are ſo made heires of the heauenly kingdome, that wee are accounted for Gods children in the preſence of his Angels. The word Mibhanim, may alſo be interpreted, for the name which a man gets by meanes of his children: for men make their names after a ſort perpetuall by their of-spring. Now the Prophet promiseth that this name shall be much more excellent. But I had rather follow the first exposition.

Vers. 6. Also the strangers that cleaue vnto the Lord, to serue him, and loue the name of the Lord, and to bee his seruants: euery one that keepeth the Sabbath, and polluteth it not, and imbraceth my couenant.

A repetition. Vers. 5.

HEe repeates that he said before, namely, that God will so open the gates of his Temple to all without exception, that there shall be no more distinction betweene Iew and Gentile: but such as the Lord shall call by his word, Act. 2.39. which is the band of our adoption, shall be ioined vnto him. And therefore these are those espousals, in compassion, and faithfulnesse, whereof Hosea speakes, Chap. 2.19,20. Now he not onely allots them an outward court to worship the Lord in, as the people in old time did, Luk. 1.10. but he attributes vnto them a more honourable order, to wit, that God will auow them for Priests and Leuites, which were prophane before.

But the end of their vocation which immediatly followes, is to be noted, namely, that the Prophet saith, they shall be Ministers of the Lord, on condition that they loue the name of the Lord. And thus al hypocrites are heere reiected, because the expresse tenor of our vocation runnes thus; that we serue the Lord with a free and ready affection of the heart: for wee cannot serue him, vnlesse wee yeeld him a franke and voluntary obedience. That therefore, which is said of almes-giuing, ought to be applied to all the parts of our life; namely, God loues a cheerfull giuer: 2. Cor. 9.7. that thus vnto our Lord and Master, wee may render such a seruice as proceedes from loue.

Hypocrites reiected.

In adding, vvhosoeuer shall keepe: hee againe mentions the Sabbath; vnder which (as wee haue said before) the whole worship of God is comprehended. But the people neglected that which they should principally haue obserued vpon this day: for in contenting themselues with the outward ceremonie, they omitted the truth; that is to say, amendement of life. The Lord on the other side meant they should so rest, that yet in the meane while they should keepe their hands, vers. 2. and their soules pure from all vncleannes and iniquitie.

Vnder the particle, and shall imbrace: he expresseth the zeale and constancie of such as subiect themselues vnto God, and cleaue fast vnto his word. If therefore wee be ioined to the Lord by couenant, wee must keepe it stedfastly, and be fast glued as it were to the pure doctrine, that nothing whatsoeuer may turne vs backe, or diuide vs from him.

Vers. 7. Them will I bring also to mine holy mountaine, and make them ioyfull in mine house of praier: their burnt offerings and their sacrifices shall be accepted vpon mine Altar; for mine house shall be called an house of praier for all people.

The difference betweene the circumcised and vncircumcised taken away.

BY these phrases of speech hee expresseth that which he said before, to wit, that the strangers which were shut out of GODS Church, are called now vnto it: so as the difference betweene the circumcised and the vncircumcised, shall bee abolished for euer. For these words cannot bee referred to the proselytes; that is, the strangers conuerted to the Iewish religion, who were taken into the body of Gods people by circumcision: for then the Prophet had spoken of no new or vnwonted thing. But hee testifies that Gods grace shall bee spread ouer the whole world; which could not be done, but the Gentiles must needes bee vnited with the Iewes, to make one body with thē: which came to passe, whē the difference touching vncircumcision and circumcisiō was taken away. There is nothing now therefore that can hinder thē Gentiles from seruing of God, seeing they are called into the Temple: that is to say, into the societie of the faithfull. Yea, as a little before we noted, the priesthood was translated from the Tribe of Leui; not onely to the whole body of the Iewes, but euen to very strangers also. It is well enough knowne, in how great detestation the Iewes haue this sentence. For albeit they reade these words of the Prophet, yet they hold it for a thing extreamly prodigious, that God should call the Gentiles to the participation of this so excellent a benefit, which was peculiarly alotted vnto them. And yet that which the Prophet saith is so manifest, that none can without grosse impudencie, call the truth thereof into question. Vers. 6.

He extols this grace by the fruit that should flow from it; for the true and solid felicitie stands in our being vnited with God as his children. I grant that the wicked ouerflow in iollitie; but all their ioy shall be turned into wailing and gnashing of teeth, because it is accursed of God. In the meane while, he filles the hearts of the faithfull with vnspeakeable ioy, as well in shewing himselfe pacified towards them, as in causing them to feele his fauour and good will, by giuing an happy successe to their affaires. Yet the chiefe and principall ioy consists in the peace of conscience; which Saint Paul attributes to the kingdome of God: Rom. 14.17. which wee then inioy, when wee are reconciled vnto God by Iesus Christ: Rom. 5.1.

He also promiseth to accept of their sacrifices: for we are all called of God, to the end we should offer vp our bodies, and all that wee haue, as sacrifices vnto him. By the word sacrifices, he meanes Gods spirituall worshippe, such as the Gospell describes vnto vs: for the Prophet spake according to the customes of his owne time, wherein the worship of God was wrapped with diuers ceremonies. But now, in stead of sacrifices, wee haue praises, thanksgiuings, thankſgiuings, good workes, &c. And laſtly, wee offer vp our bodies and ſoules: Rom. 12.1. When he ſaith their ſacrifices are acceptable: let vs not thinke the ſame proceeds from their merit or excellencie, but from the free bountie of God: for he might iuſtly reiect them, if he onely looked vpon them as they are in themſelues. And yet by this goade are wee quickned vp with a prompt deſire to ſerue God, ſeeing he aſſures vs that our works (which are nothing) are yet no leſſe pleaſing in his ſight, then if they were pure and ſpotleſſe ſacrifices.

See Exod. 28.36.37.38.

He addes, vpon mine altar: for the ſacrifices were not allowed of God, vnleſſe they tooke their holines from the altar vpon which they were offered. And thus, whatſoeuer we offer, ſhall be vncleane, vnleſſe it bee ſanctified by Chriſt, who is our altar. See Chap 60 7.

Chriſt our Altar.

For mine houſe ſhall be called, &c.] The Temple was onelie deſtinated to the Iewes, by whom the Lord would eſpecially bee called vpon. And therefore when Paul would ſhew that the Iewes were aboue the Gentiles in dignitie, he ſaith, that to them belonged the ſeruice of God: Rom. 9.4. Thus then the Temple was built amongſt them by a ſpeciall priuiledge, ſeeing no other nation in the world was permitted to haue the like. But now that difference is taken away, and euery perſon, of what place or Countrie ſoeuer, may enter into the Temple: that is to ſay, into Gods houſe, becauſe all nations are called to worſhip God. Here then we ſee the manifeſt difference betweene the Law and the Goſpell: for vnder the Law, there was but one people which might ſerue God purelie; for which cauſe the Temple was particularly built: but now all may freely enter into Gods Temple, there purely to worſhip him: that is to ſay, euery where.

The difference betweene the Law and the Goſpell.

But wee muſt note the phraſes of ſpeech which are vſual and familiar among the Prophets: for they vſe ſuch figures as fitted their owne times (as we haue alreadie ſhewed:) for by the Temple and ſacrifices they meane Gods pure worſhip and ſeruice. The Prophet here therfore ſets forth or deſcribes the ſpirituall Kingdome of Chriſt, vnder which it is lawfull to call vpon God, and to lift vp pure hands in euery place, 1. Tim. 2.8. And neither in this place nor at Ieruſalem, ſaith Chriſt, ſhall men worſhip the Father any more: but the true worſhippers ſhall worſhip the Father in ſpirit and truth, verſ. 23. With our eies therefore do we behold the accompliſhment of this propheſie, namelie, that Gods houſe is made the houſe of prayer to all nations, that ſo in all languages he may be called vpon, Abba Father. The Iewes therfore can no longer boaſt that they onely are Gods peculiars. Thus you ſee then how neceſſarie it was that the Prophets ſhould ſute their manners of ſpeech to the times and cuſtomes then in vſe, that ſo all might vnderſtand them: for the time of the full and open reuelation of things was not yet come, but Gods ſeruice was clothed with diuers figures.

Mal. 1.11.

And yet no queſtion but this Temple thus conſecrated for the ſeruice of God, was truly and really his houſe: for he had told by Moſes, that he would be preſent in euery place where he ſhould put the remembrance of his name, Exod. 20.24. And Salomon in dedicating the Temple ſaid, When they ſhall come and pray in this houſe, then wilt thou heare in heauen thy dwelling place, 1. King. 8.33. which is the cauſe why Chriſt reprocheth the Iewes for making his Fathers houſe a denne of theeues, Math. 21.13. and thereunto addes this our text to that In Ieſe. 7.11. Now Chriſt called the Temple the houſe of prayer, as hauing reſpect to thoſe times in which the Goſpell was not yet publiſhed. For albeit he was come, yet he was not then knowne, neither were the ceremonies of the law aboliſhed. But when the vaile of the Temple was rent in twaine, Mat. 27 51. and remiſſion of ſinnes preached in his name, Luk. 24.46.47. Act. 13.38. then theſe high praiſes touching the Temple and other ceremonies tooke their end, for then God began to be called vpon of all nations.

And yet herewithall let vs marke that we are called into the Church vpon condition that we call vpon the name of God. For thoſe do but glorie in vain who hold a place therein, and yet make little or none account of prayer, nor of true inuocation. In what place ſoeuer we be then, let vs beware we deſpiſe not this exerciſe of faith, ſeeing it ſufficientlie appeares by the words of our Prophet, that prayer is the greateſt and the moſt excellent ſeruice that God requires of vs: as alſo it is ſaid in Pſal. 50.15. that the holines of the Temple conſiſted in the prayers which then had their force there.

We are called into the Church vpon condition to call vpon God.

Verſ. 8. *The Lord ſaith which gathereth the ſcattered of Iſrael, yet will I gather * to them thoſe that are to be gathered to them.*

*Or, vpon him.

HE againe confirmes that which he ſaid before touching the reeſtabliſhing of the people, for he hath heretofore wonderfullie extolled that grace of God wherby he ſhould deliuer his choſen: but the eſtate of the Church was ſuch, that theſe promiſes ſeemed ridiculous. Theſe are no needles repetitions therefore, but were of neceſſitie to be added for the ſuſtentation of the weake, that that which otherwiſe was incredible, might be aſſuredly confirmed vnto them.

A confirmation of the former doctrine.

Who gathers &c.] Iſaiah giues God this title in regard of the circumſtance of the matter in hand, becauſe it is his office to gather in the Church when it is ſcattered abroad, which is confirmed in the ſame ſenſe out of the words of the 147. Pſal. verſ. 2. The Lord builds vp Ieruſalem, and gathers together the diſperſed of Iſrael. For this cauſe then he promiſeth to aſſemble them againe, yea, and to ioine diuers nations vnto them, that ſo the Church might grow and multiplie into a great number. As oft then as we doubt of the reſtauration of the Church by being aſtoniſhed at the ſight of ſo many ſtormes & tempeſts wherewith it is toſſed, let vs lay hold vpon this buckler, and couer our ſelues therewith, namely, that it is the Lords office to gather together the diſperſed of Iſrael; yea, though they were diuided and ſcattered to the vtmoſt part vnder heauen, yet, that euen thence will the Lord eaſilie gather vs, and reſtore vs to our perfect eſtate: Deut.30.4.

Yet will I gather vpon him.] I willinglie retaine the proprietie of the Prophets words: Gnal, that is, to, or vpon: for (as I thinke) he hath an eie vnto that which he ſaid in the former verſe, namely, that the Temple ſhould be ſet open to all people: and here ſignifies, that God ſhal adde to the Iewes which ſhould be gathered a great number of others, which is now indeed accompliſhed. For he not only gathered together thoſe which were diſperſed in Babylon, but alſo gathers together other ſcattered ſheepe, which often, and almoſt euery day came to paſſe, Iohn 10.16. ſo as he neuer ceaſed gathering till he had added a great heape to thoſe which were firſt gathered.

Verſ. 9. All ye beaſts of the field, come to deuoure, euen all ye beaſts of the foreſt.

Hauing comforted the faithfull, he now turnes himſelfe to the hypocrites.

IT ſeemes this propheſie agrees not with the former, becauſe whatſoeuer the Prophet hath hitherunto ſpoken was ful of ſweet conſolation, and now he denounceth terrible threatnings, and an horrible deſtruction. Truly one would take theſe things as contradictorie one to another. But hauing comforted the faithful, we muſt not thinke it ſtrange if he now aduertiſe them notwithſtanding touching the calamitie which ſhould enſue,
1 to the end that whē they ſhould ſee all things in an vprore and confuſion, yet they ſhould
2 not faint nor be diſcouraged: as alſo that their neceſſities might therewithall ſtir them vp to runne to the free grace of God with the 3 greater zeale and diligence. There was yet another reaſon. For the hypocrites abuſe Gods promiſes, and glorie thereof falſly: they are readie to conceiue a vaine hope, proudly inſulting in thoſe matters which do nothing at all belong vnto them. Now you ſee the cauſe then why the Prophet meant to diſappoint them of all matter of reioicing. And thus this propheſie hath a two-fold vſe: Firſt, to preſerue the faithfull from deſperation at the ſight of ſo many calamities which ſhould in a maner ouerwhelme them: and that euen

This Chapter hath a two-fold vſe.

whileſt all things were quiet, by faith foreſeeing the euils to come, yet they ſhould content themſelues with this only remedie. Secondly, that the hypocrites might be aſtoniſhed with feare and trembling, that they ſhould not inſult in their ouerweenings, nor bleſſe themſelues, vnder pretence of theſe promiſes.

God therefore calles not men, but cruell beaſts to deuoure the people. He commands the faithfull then not to be troubled, nor to ſuffer themſelues to be tranſported in their
1 minds by diſtruſt whē theſe wild beaſts ſhould
2 be ſent. And yet therewithall he meant to awaken them that he might draw them to repentance: and to exhort them patientlie to wait for Gods mercie, that ſo the promiſes might not loſe their authoritie.

By the beaſts of the field, he meanes all ſorts of beaſts, and ſo comprehends not only the Chaldeans, and Aſſyrians, but alſo Antiochus, the Romanes, and other nations, who afflicted this people with diuers warres. But he eſpeciallie reſpects that diſcomfiture of ỹ people by the Chaldeans, who afterwards led them captiues into miſerable thraldome. Antiochus.

Verſ. 10. Their watchmen are all blind: they haue no knowledge: they are all dumb dogges: they can not barke: they lie and ſleepe, and delight in ſleeping.

NOw he addes the cauſe why the people were deſtinated to this deſtruction, namely, in regard they were gouerned by wicked Princes and Paſtors. Not that the fault reſted whollie in them, and that the people were innocent; but becauſe their ſinne was the beginning of this miſchiefe. For if we follow blind guides, that ſhall not excuſe vs; but we rather worthily beare the puniſhment of our owne iniquities, in regard the Lord takes away good Gouernors frō ſuch as he meanes to chaſtiſe for their vnthankfulnes. The cauſe of the peoples deſtruction.

By the word vvatchmen, he not only vnderſtands the Prophets which had the gift or charge of teaching, but the Iudges, Gouernors, & Kings, whoſe dutie it is to adminiſter all things with equitie and vprightnes. And thus he comprehends two ſorts of gouernors, namely, both Ciuill, and Eccleſiaſticall, whom the Lord had eſtabliſhed as the two eies in the bodie for the well ordering of ỹ Church. If they be wicked or faithleſſe, there can not a more dangerous plague happen to the Common-wealth. 1 2 Magiſtracie and Miniſtrie, as the two eies in mans body, to gouerne the Church by.

In the firſt place then the Prophet reprocheth them for their ignorance. For as the principall vertue of a good Paſtor is to know what belongs to his charge, that he may be able to diſcerne and iudge what is profitable or hurtfull for his flock, and then to watch ouer them carefullie, and to ſtand as it were vpon his vvatch-tower, that by all meanes he may procure the ſaluation of his ſheepe: ſo is there nothing in the world that doth worſe beſeeme him then ignorance & blindnes. No man then ſhall be fit for this office, vnleſſe he be acquainted with the right maner of gouerning the people. Hence it appeares what account is to be made of the Idols of our time, who proudly vaunt with intollerable inſolencie of the title of Paſtors, though in the meane while they be vnlearned, and groſly ignorant. 1. Ignorance. Nothing more vnſeemely then ignorance in a Miniſter. Idoll Miniſters.

Secondly, in calling them dumb dogges, he taxeth them of idlenes, and careleſnes. For ſeeing it is required of a good Paſtor that he be diligent & induſtrious: in calling them ſlow-bellies, he ſhewes there was nought in them worthie the title of Paſtors. When wee then are depriued of good Paſtors, and that either ſots, or cruell wolues ſucceed them, let vs ſee and acknowledge Gods wrath therein; and let vs aſſure our ſelues that deſtruction is not farre 2. Idlenes. Deſtruction not farre off whē learned and painefull Paſtors are remoued, and ignorant idle-bellies placed in their roomes.

farre off. For from thence, the Prophet gathers his threatnings, and denounceth deſolation to the people, when their Paſtors are dumbe: Prou. 29.18. It followes then, that Paſtors are ordained of God to performe the office of dogges: that is to ſay, to watch, to ſcare away theeues and robbers, and not to ſuffer them to enter into the ſheepfold. If dogges then ſtand ſo carefully vpon their watch, and in ſuch wiſe regard their Maſters profit, as to be alwaies watching for his ſafetie, and will neuer ceaſe barking at thoſe, who it may be are able to kill them: ought not the ſleepie and idle Paſtors bluſh to bee ouermatched by a brute beaſt?

Verſ. 11. And theſe greedie dogges can neuer haue enough: and theſe ſheepheards cannot vnderſtand; for they all looke to their owne way, euerie one for his aduantage, and for his owne purpoſe.

3. Couetouſneſſe.

THe third vice he reproues in theſe wicked Paſtors, is their inſatiable couetouſneſſe. Though they be idle in gouerning, ſaith he, yet they are valiant and hardie enough in ſupping vp the broth. Some extend theſe words of the Prophet further, namely, that ſuch rule with crueltie: and this vice is expreſſly reproued by Ezechiel, 34.4. For falſe Prophets are ordinarily fierce, and behaue themſelues vnciuilly and barbarouſly ouer the poore people. But hee that ſhall aduiſe himſelfe well touching theſe words, hee ſhall ſee that the Prophet taxeth their vnmeaſurable auarice, which hee alſo in the next words paints out at large.

Euery one looketh to his owne way.] That is to ſay, they are diligent in their affaires. Euery one ſeekes his aduantage. In a word, his meaning is, that there was none, but preferred himſelfe firſt: as if euery one had bin borne for himſelfe onely.

The word Mikkaſehu, is diuerſly expounded; for ſome tranſlate; To his end: that is to ſay, to his affaires: but this agrees not with the Prophets meaning. Others, After the limits of his couetouſneſſe. But the moſt naturall ſenſe (as I thinke) is right: which phraſe of ſpeech, is alſo common among vs. Euery one then being giuen vnto couetouſnes, they drew and appropriated all things vnto themſelues, ſeeking their owne commoditie, without regarding the good of others.

He which is giuen to inordinate luſts, can neuer ſerue God.

Hence wee gather, that he which is giuen to inordinate luſts, can neuer ſerue God: and whoſoeuer he be that buſies his braines to heape vp riches, will neuer apply his mind to build vp the Church of the Lord. I know not a more dangerous blindneſſe then couetouſneſſe. A true Paſtor therefore ought aboue all other vices to flee that, if he will ſerue God faithfully. Doe wee ſee then that the Prophet complained thus of the wicked Paſtors of his time? Let vs not bee troubled if the like befall vs now: neither let vs thinke it any new thing, if wee ſee ſo few to imploy themſelues in good earneſt, in the worke of the Lord.

Vſe.

Verſ. 12. Come, I will bring wine, and wee will fill our ſelues with ſtrong drinke: and to morrow ſhall be as this day, and much more abundant.

HAuing reproued the couetouſneſſe and idleneſſe of the Paſtors: now hee ſets forth their malice and deſperate obſtinacie: for hee brings them in ſpeaking, and deſcribes their wicked talke: whereby we may diſcerne, they could not be reduced into the right way, neither by any admonitions nor threatnings; but audaciouſly contemned whatſoeuer was ſaid vnto thē. In Chap. 22.13. & 28.15. the Prophet hath recited the flouts of ſcorners, who inuited one another to play the epicures and drunkards, whileſt by the ſeruants of God they were exhorted to faſt in ſackcloth and aſhes. Let vs eate and drinke, ſay they, for to morrow we ſhall die: as if they ſhould haue ſaid; What meane theſe Prophets to importune vs ſo much? Wee ſhall looke but with leane cheekes, if wee follow their counſell. Theſe and the like blaſphemies they were not afraid to vtter: as we haue ſeene in Chap. 22. and 28. And Iſaiah repeates the ſame complaint heere, to wit, that the Paſtors hardened their hearts, and obſtinately contemned the iudgements of God. 4. Deſperate obſtinacie.

Now hee reproues them not for drinking wine and ſtrong drinke, which in it ſelfe is no vnlawfull thing: but he taxeth their braineſickneſſe and brutiſhneſſe, which makes men proudly and preſumptuouſly to deſpiſe the word of the Lord. The abuſe of wine is condemned in other places. But the Propher in this place inueighs againſt this frantike malapartneſſe, whereby they loftily combined themſelues againſt God, and trampled vnder feete all threatnings, admonitions, reprehenſions; and in a word, all religion. And yet no doubt but hee taxeth this horrible and hatefull vice, in that they ouercharged themſelues with wine and meates, when they had no neede; that neither ſhame, feare, nor reuerence of God or man, might diſquiet their meriments. For it is the cuſtome of the wicked, to glut themſelues with all the belly-cheere they can deuiſe; that ſo they may with the greater boldneſſe and intemperancie, plunge themſelues in their filthineſſe. But is it not an horrible and fearefull example to ſee ſuch a contempt of God; not in ſtrangers, not among the common people; but in the heads and gouernours, who by their godly conuerſation, (in this holy and ſacred order, which was the figure of Chriſt) ſhould haue bin guides vnto others? For the Kings and Prieſts bare in them his image, and were types of him. Wee may eaſily iudge how inſupportable this pride is, whereby men thus furiouſly oppoſe themſelues againſt Gods word. For when we come once to reiect this ſoueraigne and laſt medicine, our caſe is deſperate; we are paſt cure; becauſe we will not ſuffer the Lord to bring vs againe into the right way. For this cauſe, in Chap. 22. 14. the Lord vowes, that this iniquitie ſhall neuer be pardoned.

Chap. 5.

Thus then the Prophet notes out an extreame impietie: and let vs obſerue his words diligently; To morrow ſhall be as this day: that is to ſay; Haue we bin merry to day? wee will be yet more merry to morrow: let vs not pine our ſelues away before the time.

He amplifies their fault, becauſe in deriding Gods patience and long ſuffering, they promiſed to themſelues impunitie: as if God ſlept, or ſate idle in heauen, as oft as hee deferres his iudgements. Men at this day indeuor to benumme and bewitch their owne conſciences with ſuch diabolicall prouerbs as theſe, mentioned in this text, that they may the more freely wallow themſelues in all ſorts of voluptuouſneſſe, and take libertie to commit wicked and execrable impieties. That we then may eſcape this horrible iudgement of God, let euery one ſearch and try his owne waies, and a far off let vs eſpie the wrath of God; leſt being ouertaken at vnawares, wee be ſuddenly ouerwhelmed therewith.

Diuelliſh prouerbs.

THE LVII. CHAPTER.

Verſ. 1. The righteous periſheth, and no man conſidereth in heart: and merciſull men are taken away; and no man vnderſtandeth that the righteous is taken away from the euill to come.

The Prophet continues on his argument ſtill.

Iſaiah proſecutes his argument ſtill. For hauing ſhewed how ſecurely hypocrits repoſe themſelues in their pleaſures, and with what impudencie they deſpiſe Gods word; he further complaines, that they conſider not the workes of the Lord: for we are placed in this world, as vpon a ſpacious Theatre, to behold the acts of our God. Neither is there any of his works, how meane ſoeuer they appeare in our eies, that we ſhould lightly eſteeme; but ought rather diligently and attentiuely to obſerue and conſider them. Now among other teſtimonies of his prouidence, the Lord ſets before vs the death of the faithfull, and of approued men whom hee takes out of this world, when he is purpoſed ſeuerely to chaſtiſe and correct his people. But no man laies it to heart, neither imagines that ſuch matters ſhould be forerunners of imminent deſtruction, namely, that the good are gathered to God, and laid vp in ſafetie, that they may not be wrapped vp with others, in ſo many common miſeries. The ſumme is, that the wicked greatly deceiue themſelues, in thinking that the prolonging of their liues, ſhould bee the onely happineſſe that can befall them: and that for this cauſe they ſhould take themſelues to be in better caſe then the faithfull, who die ſooner then they. For as they are glued to the world, ſo vnder this pretence, doe they harden their owne hearts, that (as they ſuppoſe) God fauours them exceedingly, in ſuffering them to bee ſafe and ſound, whileſt others die.

If by men of mercy you vnderſtand the charitable and pitifull, then this epithete muſt be diligently noted; for thereby the Prophet ſhewes what the true righteouſneſſe of Gods children is, whereas hypocrites place their righteouſneſſe in things of no value. Now there is no vertue more pleaſing vnto God, then liberalitie, whereby wee manifeſt our righteouſneſſe, and diſcouer vnto all an heart void of guile. But merciſull men may as well be taken in the paſſiue ſignification, namely, for ſuch to whom the Lord ſhewes mercie: for this maner of ſpeech is common enough among the Hebrewes. Neither is it from the purpoſe to ſay, that the grace of God ſhould be priuily oppoſed to the peruerſe and ſiniſter iudgements of men, who are wont to condemne ſuch as die in the flower of their youth. And yet ſeeing the Prophet in many places adornes the children of God with this title, of being merciſull and liberall, I ſee no inconuenience, if (as I haue ſaid) we make it a true definition of righteouſneſſe.

By this it appeares that then the Lord gathered a great number of good men out of the world vnto himſelf, whoſe death prognoſticated ſome horrible calamitie; & yet that the Iewes regarded not ſuch forewarnings. Nay, which is worſt of all, they tooke occaſion thereby to ouerflow with the greater freedome in all licentiouſneſſe, thinking all ſhould goe well with them, when they ſuruiued the beſt men.

Now this doctrine is very fitting for all ages & times. For, for the moſt part, it comes to paſſe that God takes the good out of this world, when hee is purpoſed ſharply to puniſh the ſinnes of the wicked. Why ſo? Surely as hee hath a tender care ouer thoſe that be his, ſo he puls them often times as brands out of the fire, hauing compaſſion on them, to the end that ſuch as ſhall ſuruiue them, may therein perceiue a token of Gods wrath. And yet this is not a perpetuall law, ſeeing the elect are often wrapped vp in the temporall iudgements with the wicked. Notwithſtanding the taking of them away firſt, is a thing ſo ordinary, that it ſeldome falles out otherwiſe: whereof in our time we haue a famous example in the death of Martin Luther, who was taken out of this world a little before Germany was pitifully waſted with that furious warre, which many yeeres before he had foretold, whileſt hee thundered againſt the the contempt of the Goſpell: againſt the villanies and foule enormities which then ouerflowed in euery place. Often he entreated the Lord to take him out of this life before he ſhould ſee thoſe horrible iudgements which he had threatned: the apprehenſion whereof made him to quake for feare: and this requeſt he obtained of the Lord. Soone after his death a ſudden and vnexpected war began to inuade, and miſerablie to afflict Germanie: euen then when they ſuſpected nothing leſſe. And examples hereof alſo we haue dailie. And doubtleſſe, if men did well conſider of them, they would not flatter themſelues ſo much in their iniquities as they doe. But I haue thought it good to recite this in particular, not onely becauſe it hath happened within theſe few yeeres: but alſo that it might be the more apparant, in regard it fell out according to that which ſo excellent a Preacher of the Goſpell, and a Prophet of God had foretold. We therefore ought diligently to obſerue the worke of the Lord as well in ſ liues, as in the death of the iuſt: but moſt of all in their death. Whereby the Lord calles them to the enioying of a better life: that ſo they may bee deliuered from thoſe miſeries, into which the wicked muſt at length be plunged.

Martin Luthers death.

Verſ. 2. Peace ſhall come: they ſhall reſt in their beds, euerie one that walketh before him.

The ſtate of the faithfull after their death.

THe Prophet here deſcribes what the ſtate of the faithful is after death. For the wicked who thinke there is no life after this, do iudge that good men are periſhed, becauſe they can apprehend nothing in death but ruine and perdition. Iſaiah therefore ſaith, that ſuch a peace ſhall come, as is more deſireable then a thouſand liues that are repleniſhed with troubles. As if hee compared the good to craſed ſouldiers, who are permitted quietly to take their eaſe.

Simile.

He addes the ſimilitude of ſleepe, to ſhew, that they ſhall bee ſet free, and deliuered from all diſquietneſſe and care, as if they ſafely and ſweetly ſlept in their beds. Whereas he addes, euery one that walkes: I referre not whoſoeuer to the word peace, as ſome expound it. Namelie, that peace ſhall goe before the faithfull, as if it led them the way. But I think he therein notes out the faithfull. As if hee ſhould ſay, Whoſoeuer walkes before God, he ſhall haue peace. And therefore when the righteous doe die, they (after the enduring of many troubles) are called to peace and reſt, as hauing finiſhed their courſe.

Now they reſt in their beds, in regard they doe not yet inioy full and perfect glorie and bleſſednes: but wait for the laſt day which ſhall be the time of their reſurrection, wherein all things ſhall be fully reſtored. And mee thinkes Iſaiah meant to ſay ſo. But, may ſome

Queſt.

ſay, Doe not the iuſt inioy peace in this preſent life? For the fruite of faith is that wee poſſeſſe our ſoules in patience, Luk. 21.19. Rom.5.1. I anſwere, that albeit faith begets peace in our hearts, yet notwithſtanding wee are toſſed to an fro with many waues, and are neuer ſo ſecure and quiet in this life, as when the Lord drawes vs home to himſelfe. The death of the iuſt then you ſee brings them to a ſweete reſt and peace, becauſe the ſame is precious in Gods ſight: Pſalm. 116.15. But the death of the wicked is ful of horror. From this place alſo we may gather, that our ſoules are immortall: for were they without any ſenſe, as ſome braineleſſe ones haue dreamed, then could they not bee ſaid to enioy any peace. They are in peace and reſt then, becauſe they liue in Chriſt.

Anſ.

Verſ. 3. But you witches children, come hither, the ſeed of the adulterer, and of the whore.

The curſed life and death of the wicked, oppoſed to the bleſſed life and end of the godly.

HAuing ſpoken of the happie and peaceable death of the faithfull; he inueighs with exceeding vehemencie againſt the wicked, who for all this, ceaſed not to leade a leaud and laſciuious life without taking the death of the righteous to heart. For as he hath affirmed that the faithfull are in peace: ſo contrariwiſe he denounceth an vnreconciliable warre againſt the other. Nay, which more is, he hath ſhewed that death to Gods ſeruants is an hiding place which defends them from the whirlewinds, haile, and other tempeſts: that afterwards the obſtinate contemners may bee laid open to all ſorts of calamities. For we muſt note here the oppoſition betweene the faithfull which walke before God: and the wicked who ceaſe not obſtinately to reſiſt him. The former after death, ſhall haue peace: the latter ſhall bee vexed whileſt they liue, and after death ſhall feele horrible torments.

He ſummons them before Gods iudgement ſeate: becauſe they thought to eſcape by their ſophiſtications. But he ſhewes that they ſhall gaine nothing thereby, becauſe they ſhal be drawne before the ſame whether they will or no. For, as they had made their hearts ouer hard, ſo was it needfull that they ſhould be pricked with the ſharper launcers: doubleſſe the Prophet could not vſe too much ſeueritie, as well to awaken their drowſineſſe, as to beate downe their pride. Who knowes not with how great ouerweening the Iewes inſult in regard of their race? The Prophets therefore are vſually wont to cruſh this their arrogancie and hie mindednes, by affirming that they were none of Abrahams children, in reſpect they behaued themſelues as baſtards, and ſuch as were degenerate.

This is the cauſe why our Prophet termes them, the ſeed of the adulterer, and of the whore. With which alſo Ezechiel reproueth them in Chap.16.3. ſaying, Thy father was an Amorite, and thy mother an Hittite. And the like phraſes of ſpeech are vſed in many other places: Hoſea.1.2. Thus then hee brings their intollerable pride downe to the ground, and in deſpite of their teeth drawes them forth into the light, that they ſhould not thinke they could eſcape the tribunall ſeate of God.

Verſ. 4. On whom haue yee ieſted? vpon whom haue ye gaped and thruſt out your tongues? Are not yee rebellious children, and a falſe ſeede.

Hypocrites vnmasked in this, and the verses following.

THe Prophet ſhewes that the Iewes haue no occaſion at all to glorie ſo much vnder pretence of their linage or ſtocke, ſeeing they derided the Prophets of God. Now they thought it was but with men, with whom they had to deale when they reiected the word. And ſo at this day wee ſee how impudently the wicked deſpiſe the doctrine of their ſaluation, and ſcorne the Miniſters of it; and yet in the meane while, couer themſelues vnder a vaine ſhew of religion. This is the reaſon then wherefore the Prophet preſſeth them ſo neere, and reprooues them ſo ſharply. As if he ſhould ſay, When you thruſt out your tongues on this manner againſt God, and ſcorne his word, doe ye thinke you haue to deale with a mortal man? For theſe words, on whom, ſignifies that they ſought out euaſions and pretences to cloake their impietie withall. For the vngodly will not acknowledge that they rebell againſt God: no, they thinke foule ſcorne any man ſhould ſo iudge of them: but yet they muſt bee brought out into the light, and conuinced of their wickedneſſe. And ſeeing there is a God, they muſt be told that they make open warre vpon him, in reſiſting or in reiecting his word, and in eſteeming no better thereof, then of a fable.

To open the mouth, and to thruſt out the tongue, is heere taken in one ſignification: vnleſſe that vnder theſe two phraſes the Prophet meant the better to diſcouer their impudencie, namely, in that they thought it not enough only to rebell the Lord, but they muſt alſo deride him. For the inward contempt of the heart cauſed them to vtter forth ſuch manifeſt ſcoffes and blaſphemies, ſo as they were not touched at all with any feare of dishonoring themſelues.

Laſtly he concludes, that they are rebellious children, a lying ſeed, and therefore hath iuſt cauſe to eſteeme them the ſonnes of an whore, for ſuch a contempt could not be found in the children of Abraham. By this we learne how the wicked ought to be handled, and with what ſeueritie they are to be reproued, that they may haue no cauſe left them whereby to flatter themſelues: and, the more they deſpiſe whatſoeuer is propounded vnto them in the name of God, the more ought we to diſcouer and to manifeſt in all mens ſight their impieties ſo full of ſacriledge.

Verſ. 5. Inflamed with Idols vnder euery greene tree? and ſacrificing the children in the valleyes vnder the tops of the rocks.

OThers tranſlate, Who take pleaſure in conſolation. But our Prophet takes a ſimilitude vſed in many places of the Scriptures, and very fitting to the circumſtance of this place. For the Lord is wont to compare luſt, wherewith poore and miſerable Idolaters are furiouſly tranſported and inflamed, to the loue of brothels, for they keepe no meaſure at all, neither will they ſuffer any to reſtraine them from their follie. Now Idolatrie in Gods ſight is a moſt hatefull kind of whoredome.

As touching the Hebrue word Elim, ſome tranſlate it Gods, others okes; we may take it in whether ſenſe we will, for there will be no great difference: and all the expoſitors agree that the Prophet condemnes Idolatrie. I contend not then about the words, though it be very likely that one thing is repeated twice, according to the cuſtome of the Hebrues: and yet it may be vnder an ambiguous word he alludes to their gods.

Sacrificing children.] Heere he preſſeth the Iewes neerer, and ſhewes that they are none of Abrahams true children. Why ſo? Becauſe they polluted themſelues with all maner of ſuperſtitions: and in regard they pleaſed themſelues in ſuch forgeries, therefore he diſcouers their villanies. As if he ſhould ſay, You pretend religion, but I proteſt that you play the whoremongers with Idols. For thus muſt wee manifeſt and point out (as it were with the finger) the impietie which ſubtle and politique heads indeuor to varniſh ouer with ſundrie delightfull colours. The Prophet therefore diſchargeth his dutie moſt faithfullie, in adiuring them thus before Gods tribunall, and in prouing to their faces that they were guiltie, though they meant to play the cauillers to the full.

Now he ſhewes that they were rebellious, and had reuolted from Gods law through deteſtable Idolatries. Then he comes to ſome particulars, and mentions an horrible, nay, a prodigious and execrable kinde of ſeruice, namely, Sacrificing of children. Whence it is euident, how greatly the ſpirit of error preuailes ouer men after they haue once turned away from God. For Satan ſo poſſeſſeth their vnderſtandings, that he makes them become ſtarke bedlems. For we muſt needs conclude that ſuch are frantique and out of their wits who ſpare not their owne children, but will cut their throates, and thinke they haue then performed an acceptable ſacrifice. And yet theſe cruell murtherers wanted not their pretences wherewith to couer their execrable villanies, to wit, the example of Abraham, who ſpared not his only ſonne. For the ancient Hebrues are of opinion that theſe cuſtomes proceeded frō an inconſiderate zeale: as if they ſhould haue ſaid, Seeing wee are deſcended from Abraham, we ought no more to ſpare our children then he did. But this good Patriarke did it in obedience to God, Gen. 22.2, 12, 16. and theſe on the contrarie had no commandement, but did it on their owne heads.

Abrahams example was extraordinarie, in which the Lord meant to prooue and to manifeſt to all the faith of his ſeruant. Againe, Iſack was not offred, in reſpect that the Lord ſatisfied himſelfe with Abrahams prompt and readie willingnes: but theſe ſacrificed their children,

1 2

How greatly the ſpirit of error preuailes in ſuch as are reuolted frō God.

Abrahams example in offring vp his ſonne inconſiderately and peruerſly followed of the Iewes.

children; and therefore this imitation was peruerſe and damnable, ſeeing they trode nothing at all in the ſteppes of their father. This muſt be well obſerued: for the moſt of our ſuperſtitious obſeruāces haue ſprung frō this fountaine of incōſiderate zeale, becauſe men haue greedily ſnatched at any occaſion, and without iudgement haue followed whatſoeuer their fathers haue done.

Whence ſuperſtitions haue ſprung

Verſ. 6. Thy portion is in the ſmooth ſtones of the riuer: they, they are thy lot: euen to them haſt thou powred a drinke-offering: thou haſt offered a ſacrifice. Should I delight in theſe?

HEe proſecutes the ſame argument, and ſundry waies taxeth the ſuperſtitions which raigned in Iudea; for there was no place exempt from idolatry: there was neither rockes, riuers, vallies, nor any corner free, wherein they had not left ſome memoriall of their ſuperſtitions. They had their woods and mountaines, where they ſacrificed according to the cuſtomes of the heathen.

Whether we reade it poliſhed ſtones here, or Parts of the riuer, the ſenſe will be alwaies one. For the Prophets meaning is that the Iewes choſe a ſeruice of God after their owne fantaſie, and turned themſelues away from that rule which he had preſcribed them in his law. Alſo, that by meanes hereof all the ſacrifices by them deuiſed were wicked and abominable, in regard God only ought to be heard, when there is any queſtion touching his religion and worſhip. If you will turne it poliſhed ſtones, then Iſaiah taxeth them for the contempt of the law, wherein God had forbidden them to cut or poliſh any ſtones with hammers for the framing of his Altar. Exod. 20. 25. Deut. 27. 5. 6. becauſe he would haue them ſacrifice no where elſe but vpon one only Altar. But in reſpect that it was the faſhion of the Heathen to erect Temples neere vnto fountaines and riuers, the other ſenſe agrees well alſo.

Theſe words they, they, haue great weight: and it is to be vnderſtood as if the Lord gaue the Iewes leaue to cleaue to their inuentions, ſeeing they had forſaken him, and rather turned after Idols, and forged inuentions. As alſo the Lord by Ezechiel ſaith to the people, Goe, and ſacrifice euery one of you to his Idoll, ſeeing you will not obey me: Ezech. 20. 39. And as I thinke this expoſition agrees beſt. As if he ſhould ſay; I euen leaue you to your owne inuentions; and it contents me that you are wholly addicted thereunto. And yet no doubt but the Prophet alludes to that place of Moſes, by whoſe mouth God had promiſed to be the lot and portion of his people, that they might content themſelues with him alone. According to which alſo Dauid ſaith, The Lord is my portion and my inheritance: Pſal. 16. 5. For as much as the Iewes then were reuolted from God, and followed Idols, the Lord had iuſt cauſe to ſay they might cleaue vnto them, thereby ſhewing that they ſhould haue no more to do with him.

To them haſt thou powred drinke-offrings.] He continues to put them ſtill in mind of their ſuperſtitions, and proues that they had renounced and forſaken God, becauſe they had attributed vnto them whatſoeuer he would ſhould be wholly reſerued as his proper right vnto himſelfe. But the Iewes might haue replied to euery one of the Prophets words, and haue ſaid; that in all theſe things they had none other purpoſe thē to ſerue God. And yet you ſee the Prophet feares not to charge them with idolatry, for all their vaine and idle pretences: for Gods wrath is prouoked by ſuperſtitions; and the longer they be continued and maintained, the more hotter doth it wax. Hence let vs learne what ſobrietie we ought to keepe in erecting Gods worſhippe, that we may depend vpon his onely will and word. For hee that ſhall ſwarue but the leaſt iot from that, ſhall not onely loſe his time, but ſhall alſo inkindle Gods diſpleaſure againſt him, whoſe Maieſtie, as much as in him is, hee labours to violate and diminiſh.

Should I delight?] We may alſo turne it; Shall I repent? And this is the moſt receiued interpretation, becauſe hee meanes to ſhew the cauſe wherefore he chaſtiſeth the people. As if he ſhould ſay; When I ſhall reuenge theſe enormities, can I repent? Notwithſtanding the expoſition which I haue followed, ſeemes to ſute beſt: Should I take delight or comfort in theſe ſacrifices which you offer mee? For idolaters are wont to pleaſe and flatter themſelues in their inuentions; and therefore preſume that God alſo reioiceth and takes delight and comfort in all things, vpon which they dote with burning luſt. Such an interrogation is not ſuperfluous then, when men thinke that God reſembles them, and that he likes and approoues of all that they thinke well of: but he on the contrary ſhewes, that nothing pleaſeth him, nor is approued of him, but that which accords with his word.

Interrogation.

Verſ. 7. Thou haſt made thy bed vpon euery high mountaine: thou wenteſt vp thither, euen thither wenteſt thou to offer a ſacrifice.

HEe repeates the ſame ſimilitude againe which we haue touched before. For ſuperſtitious ſort commit whordome with their Idols, in regard that hauing forſaken the puritie of the word, they breake that holy mariage knot which God had contracted with them, and ſell themſelues ouer vnto Satan. But Iſaiah meant heere to expreſſe ſomewhat more: for in telling them that they had made their bed in an high place, it is as much as if he had ſaid; They were become ſhameleſſe, for they cared not who ſaw their villanie, no more then an impudent harlot ſhunnes the preſence of men, but is careleſſe of her reputation: ſo theſe committed whordome in the ſight of the Sunne, and being paſt ſhame, aſcended vp to euery high and imminent place, to doe it in.

A repetition of the former ſimilitude, verſ. 4.

Hee compares Chapels and Altars to beds, vpon vpon which this curſed filthineſſe is committed, and men which ſacrifice there to bold and brazen faced ſtrumpets.

In the end of the verſe he ſhewes without any figure, what this harlotry is which he condemnes, namely, that they ſacrificed to Idols. I grant they thought in ſo doing to ſerue God; but hee reiects whatſoeuer it is that men forge, according to their owne luſts, and deteſts ſuch a laſciuious courſe.

Verſ. 8. Behind the doores alſo and poſtes, haſt thou ſet vp thy remembrance: for thou haſt diſcouered thy ſelfe to another then mee, and wenteſt vp, and diddeſt enlarge thy bed, and make a couenant betweene thee and them, and louedſt their bed in euery place where thou ſaweſt it.

An amplification of the fault.

HE amplifies the crime whereof hee ſpake before, that the people ſhould not flatter themſelues in their inuentions. Now it is verie likely that Iſaiah alludes to Moſes words, wherein the Lord commanded that they ſhould alwaies haue the Law before them: that they ſhould fixe it vpon the doore poſtes of the houſe, and write it in roles, to wrap it about their armes, and about the fringes of their garments, that they might be continually admoniſhed of their duties: Deut. 6.9 and 11.20. Numb. 15.38.39.40. But contrariwiſe, the Iews ceaſed not to pollute the doores and the poſtes of their houſes with markes and ſignes of idolatry; and left no corner nor nooke free from ſuch defilings. Thus God and his Law were reiected in all places, and in ſtead thereof, they had ſet vp prouocations and inticements vnto whoredome.

Thou haſt inlarged thy bed.] Yet once more he repeates that which he had ſaid before, and comes to this clauſe againe, to wit, that the Iewes committed groſſe adulterie with their Idols; and yet thought they ſerued Gods: but this came to paſſe, becauſe they neglected to follow the rules of the word. For it is all one, as if a woman hauing forſaken her husband, ſhould goe and proſtitute her ſelfe to the ſtewes, and make her ſelfe common indifferently to all commers: as if the bed were now become an open field, which might containe a great troope of men.

Simile.

For this cauſe he ſaith, that ſhe diſcouered herſelfe vvithout him: becauſe hauing ſhaken off the ſhamefaſtneſſe of mariage, ſhe ſuffered others to abuſe her. For God holds the place of an husband, to which ſhee ought to haue been ſubiect: but ſhee ſought out new companions, and brake the faith of marriage. He amplifies this crime, in regard the Iewes did voluntarilie preſent themſelues before the idols: as if a diſloyall wife ſhould runne after another man, to haue his companie.

Moreouer, vnder another figure, he taxeth their inordinate luſt, in reſpect that one onelie glance of the eie ſerued the turne, to carry them ſuddenly and dotingly away into euerie place. Therewithall alſo he conuinceth men of raſhnes: who thinke themſelues very ſharp witted in things belonging to Gods ſeruice; and make choice of their places where themſelues liſt. But this is a diuelliſh wit; for the Lord will haue our eies fixed in ſuch wiſe vpon him and his word, that they reſt cloſed and ſhut vp againſt all other things.

Verſ. 9. Thou wenteſt to the Kings with oile, and diddeſt increaſe thine ointments, and ſend thy meſſengers farre off, and diddeſt humble thy ſelfe vnto hell.

It is iuſt that ſuch as will not reſt contented with God, ſhould wander vp and downe reſtleſſie without reliefe.

HEre the Prophet reprooues another vice almoſt like the former: for impietie begets many errors, and forceth light heads that are void of Gods feare into very ſore and perplexed moleſtations. And is it not good reaſon that ſuch as will not reſt in God ſhould bee reſtleſſe, or rather toſſed vp and downe with whirlewinds? He reprocheth the Iewes then that they vexed themſelues ſo much, and ſo long a time in hunting after the helpe of ſtrangers, namelie, when they endeuoured to oppoſe the aide of the Egyptians againſt the Aſſyrians: and then being defrauded of their hopes, they began to trot to the Chaldeans. For when men haue forſaken the feare of the Almightie, then they ſeeke helpe in others, and not onelie wearie themſelues, but are a great coſt and trauell to atchieue the ſame. And whileſt the Lord giues quiet ſleepe to his beloued ones, that they may quietly finiſh that they haue to doe, the wicked vexe themſelues for nothing. They riſe early, and goe late to bed, and eate the bread of carefulneſſe: as it is in Pſalm. 127. 2. And yet in the meane while they cannot enrich themſelues the value of a naile: becauſe they do nothing vnder Gods authoritie or gouernment. Now the Lord puniſheth them thus, to the end they may wander vp and downe, as men at their wits end, being euer in doubt and perplexitie, without euer enioying the benefit of a quiet and contented mind.

See 2. Sam. 18.5.6.7.

Verſ. 10. Thou wearieſt thy ſelfe in thy manifold iournies, yet ſaidſt thou not, There is no hope: thou haſt found life by thine hand, therefore thou waſt not grieued.

Men labour in vaine when they follow not God.

HIs meaning is, that men labour in vaine when they follow not God. For they vex themſelues without profit, as wee haue ſaid before: becauſe whatſoeuer it be that is taken in hand contrarie to the will of God, can neuer haue good ſucceſſe. And here hee doth wittily deride the peruerſe endeuors of ſuch, as in taking much paines, had rather vvaſte and conſume the ſtrength of bodie and mind, then vvith quietneſſe to goe vvhither the Lord called them.

It is labour loſt.] That is to ſay; Albeit thou ſeeſt thy iournies ſerue thee to no purpoſe, yet doeſt thou obſtinately go on in purſuing thy enterpriſes. And yet very Idiots are wont to repent, when their counſels proſper not well.

Such

Who they be that deserue to be called peruerse and obstinate.

Such then must be called peruerse and desperate, who hauing experience of Gods cursing and crossing their affaires, are not moued sometimes to enter into their own harts, and to say, What doest thou? Ieremiah in his 18. chap. and 12. verse toucheth this obstinacie; but in other words: for he shewes that the Iewes were growne so stubborne, that they desperately said, It is done: that is to say, We will walke after our owne imaginations: we haue concluded it shall be so, and we purpose neither to alter nor change our determinations. But Isaiah in this place reprooues that senselesnesse wherewith they were so besotted, that they could not bee brought to acknowledge their owne follie, nor repent so, as to turne into the right way againe.

Thou hast found life.] Some take life here for foode. As if the Prophet had said; This thy labour hath been as acceptable to thee, as if thou hadst gotten thy liuing, in labouring with thine hands. Others take life of the hands for delite or great voluptuousnesse: and these two expositions come to one reckoning. But there is yet a little more difficultie, namely, whether he speakes here in good earnest, or by way of scorne. For if there be no figure vsed here, then the sense will be thus: Thou wert not sorrow, because fortune seemed for a time to fauour thee. Whilest the affaires of vnbeleeuers succeed well, thē they flatter themselues more and more in their infidelitie. As the common prouerb is, Prosperitie blinds men. But this falles out then especiallie, when hauing forsaken God, they follow their owne waies and deliberations. For then they despise the Lord. It may also be read by way of scorne, as if he should say, Whence is it, I pray thee, that thou breakest not off thy course, nor repentest? why doest thou not acknowledge thy follie? Is it because thou hast life in thine hands, and because all things fall out according to thy desire? This reading pleaseth me best: though I reiect not the other. Truelie it appeares sufficientlie by the histories that this people had small cause to glorie in their good successes. For the league which they first made with the Egyptians, next with the Assyrians, and lastly with the Babylonians was pernicious and deadly vnto them. So as they felt by experience how vnaduised they were to call such companions into their rescue. The Prophet then had good reason to obiect against them that they had found life by their hand. He sets out the sottishnesse of the Iewes therefore, in regard they wittinglie plunged themselues into ruine, and obstinately pursued their owne perdition; whereas at least they ought (euen by the example of fooles) to haue become wise after they had tasted the whip.

Vers. 11. And whom didst thou reuerence or feare, seeing thou hast lied vnto mee, and hast not remembred mee, nether set thy minde thereon? Is it not because I held my peace, and that of a long time? Therefore thou fearest not me.

There can be no true feare of God, but where hee is worshipped purelie.

HE inueighs here more sharpely against the Iewes, in that they were destitute of all feare of God: howsoeuer they bragged of their holinesse, and pretended a vaine title of religion. For hypocrites not onelie flatter themselues in their superstitions, but the common people take them for pettie gods: and for this cause they insolentlie aduance themselues both against God and men, and set forth themselues with an impudent malepertnesse. But our Prophet pronounceth that there can be no true feare of God, where he is not purely worshipped, nor according to the precise rules of his holy word. For let men esteeme the best they can of all their goodlie superstitious deuotions; yet all is but meere follie and impietie. Thus then hee protests that they haue no feare of God, nor no religion at all in them, though they gloried neuer so much of their painted sheathe. Nay, which was worse; by their ceremonies they made it manifest as by infallible testimonies, that they had no reuerence nor awe of God in them. For the Lord testifies by Moses, that he would proue whether they loued him from the heart, in suffering false Prophets to bring in superstitions and idolatries: Deut. 13. 3. All such then as runne after such trumperie doe euidently shew that their hearts are void of Gods true feare: for if they considered, that one day they must yeeld an account thereof before his iudgement seate, they would not so presumptuously treade his commandements vnder their feete.

Where he complaines, that they had forgotten him; it is to shew that they had not sinned against him through ignorance, but of an obstinate maliciousnesse. For hauing a certaine rule of a godlie life set downe before them, they wittingly reuolted from God, and brake their faith which they had promised him. We are heedefully to obserue how terrible this thunderclap is which is shot from heauen, as it were against all hypocrites, who scorne all threatnings, and couer themselues vnder vaine pretences: when hee thus testifies, that they haue no sparke of the feare of God in them: that they haue forgotten him: and are full of lies. 1 2 3

It is not because, &c.] I haue thought it fit to insert the particle of rendring the cause here, which must be supplied, to the end the Prophets meaning may be the more manifest. For those that supplie it not, vex themselues much to draw out an exposition. But we know how vsuall this manner of speech is among the Hebrewes. The Prophet blames the Iewes for thus abusing the patience and long suffering of God: which notwithstanding should haue mollified their hearts: Rom. 2. 4. But such is mans malice, that he thereby imboldens himselfe in sinning: and thinkes he hath good leaue to do whatsoeuer him listeth as long as hee is suffered to escape vnpunished: Psalm 50. 21. And therefore I expound this member thus: Thou fearest not me, because I haue held my peace: whereas on the contrarie, contrarie, my lenitie should haue broken thine hard heart. Hence we gather, that the Iewes had no cause to complaine that God dealt too seuerely with them, seeing that though hee patiently forbare them a long time, yet they became the worse; and that by meanes of this impunitie. The Lord was vrged therefore of necessitie to take another course with them: and to punish their iniquities with the greater rigor.

Vers. 12. I will declare thy righteousnesse and thy workes; and they shall not profit thee.

Though God suffer long, (yet his patience being abused) he will be auenged at length.

THe Prophet shewes that God will suffer no more so long as he hath done in times past, but that heereafter he shall be constrained to take another course with them. Hee mentions their righteousnesse, by way of derision: for vnder this word, hee vnderstands all the impieties and errors wherewith they were stained and defiled. As if he should say; I will haue your righteousnesse to be seene of all. For whilest God holds his peace, those that are most vniust, & filled with all corruptions, seeme to be pettie Saints: but when God gets vp into his iudgement seate, then men are forced to come out of their dennes, and their villanies are manifested to euery one: Psal. 50. 21. The Prophet therefore meant to say, that the world esteemes horrible impieties to be vertues, as long as God is silent: but this shall vanish at the last, when hee shall sit to iudge of them. For after men shal haue flattered themselues much, and for a long time together, yet in the end they shall feele him to be their iudge.

And they shall not profit thee] This appertaines to the effect; by which men are wont to iudge of things for the most part. For they care not whether the matter bee iust or vniust, but imagin, that whatsoeuer is profitable, ought to be approued of: and therefore denounceth, that all the vvorkes from whence they expected any benefit should turne to their detriment and ruine.

Vers. 13. When thou crieft, let them that thou hast gathered together, deliuer thee: but the winde shall take them all away; vanitie shall pull them away: but hee that trusteth in mee, shall inherit the land, and shall possesse mine holy mountaine.

The former verse amplified.

HEe shewes now more at large, that which hee touched but briefly in the former verse, namely, that when the matter shal come to the vp-shot, they shall be confounded: for the clause, let them deliuer thee, signifies as much as if he had said; they shall not be able to doe it. In this verse then hee alludes to that which he said before, in vers. 9. to wit, Thou wentest to Kings with thy presents. And for this cause hee calles all the meanes whereby the Iewes thought to secure themselues, gathered: for in resting thereupon, they prostituted themselues to all kindes of villanies, as if they had had been liable to no punishment at all, in regard they were fortified with ramparts on euery side. But the Lord shewes how vaine all their preparations are, that are thus gathered together without him.

The cry here signifies that calamitie wherewith they should be afflicted. For being setled vpon leagues and succours of their confederates, they thought themselues in such safetie, as if before they had neuer been annoied by such associates. But hee protests, that all the aid which they haue gathered together, shall serue them to no vse: for the hopes which we conceiue in the things of this world, and in the helpe of man, ioined with the forsaking of God, is accursed and abominable: Ier. 17. 7.

Hee reproched the Iewes in Chap. 8. 6. for not contenting themselues with the still waters of Sih, but searched out swelling and roring riuers, which would ouerwhelme them in the end: which indeed came so to passe. For the Assyrians, Egyptians, and in the end the Chaldeans, not onely were vnprofitable to the Iewes, with whom they were confederate, but at last were also their destruction.

Afterwards there followes an opposition, wherein he recalles them to trust in God; which was the onely remedie that ought to bee opposed to all calamities: as on the contrary, all our miseries flow from our owne infidelitie and distrust. And whereas hee promiseth an heritage to those that hope in the Lord, it is as if hee should haue said; What is it that you seeke, but that you may liue in safetie, and that your inheritance may remaine whollie vnto you? And I am sure my selfe can giue it you. For (tell me) who brought you into this land? Who gaue you possession in it? And yet you trot downe into Egypt, and seeke aid from men which cannot helpe you, and you set mine assistance at nought. The word heritage out of all doubt is meant of Iudea, wherin the Iewes desired to remaine securely. For afterwards, he mentions the mountaine of his holinesse, whereupon the Temple was built. Thus then the Iewes sought to turne God out of his office as it were, seeing they rather ranne for succour to the Egyptians and Assyrians, then to him.

All our miseries flow from our owne infidelitie.

Hence let vs gather a generall doctrine, namely, that all our affaires shall succeede well, if we trust in God: but if wee reiect that, wee are not to wonder if wee be tossed from post to pillar, and carried with the violence of diuers tempests, whither we would not. By the holy mountaine, to which the Iewes were to be brought againe, hee meanes, that neither life, nor none of the commodities thereof, are to be desired, but vpon condition that we may therewithall inioy the true worship of God: for the end of mans life is, that God may haue a people to call vpon his name purely. Let our eies then be alwaies fixed vpon the honour and seruice of our God, if wee either desire deliuerance from troubles, or to inioy life with the commodities thereof.

Doctrine.

The end of mans life.

Vers.

Verſ. 14. And he ſhall ſay, Caſt vp, caſt vp: prepare the Way: take vp the ſtumbling-blocks out of the way of my people.

See verſ 13.

BEcauſe this promiſe (to wit, that thoſe who truſted in the Lord ſhould poſſeſſe the land) might ſeeme ridiculous, ſeeing ſoone after they ſhould be baniſhed out of their countrie: therefore this ſecond promiſe is added for the little remnants ſake which yet remained. In which he promiſeth that they ſhall be brought home againe into the land of Canaan, though for a time they were caſt out and driuen into a farre countrie. He meetes with a doubt which might ariſe, that ſo the faithfull might not be diſcouraged during this long and tedious exile, nor eſteeme Gods promiſes to be vaine.

A preuention.

Some expound, That the Lord would ſend true and faithfull Prophets which ſhould remoue and purge out thoſe offences of the Church, wherewith it was corrupted by falſe prophets, and wicked gouernors. For they, as he ſhewed in Chap. 56. 10. 11. were the cauſe of the ruine of it, and therefore they iudge that heere is a better and more deſirable eſtate promiſed. But this expoſition ſutes very ill, and therefore I had rather follow the firſt, namely, that albeit the Iewes for a time were to be depriued of this land, yet the Lord would eſtabliſh them therein againe, who will to that end command the rough vvaies to be made ſmooth, for their returne. This place therefore agrees with that which we haue ſeene in Chap. 40. 1. 2. 3. 4. where the Lord commanded that the people ſhould be comforted: that their returne ſhould be proclaimed: and that the vvaies ſhould be cleanſed. For being yet in Babylon as in a ſepulcher, and the diſtance of place very great, and the paſſage tedious, they were hardly drawne to hope that they ſhould euer returne againe into their countrie.

1 2 3

Iſaiah therefore was not lightly to paſſe ouer this matter, that ſo he might take from them all feare of being hindred in their iourney, either in regard of the mountaines or the ſea. He ſpeakes to Cyrus and Darius then, into whoſe minds God would inſpire a will to giue the Iewes both paſſage, and all neceſſaries fit for the ſame. As if he ſhould ſay, The Lord will ſend the Iewes ſuch ſeruants of his as they little thinke of now, by whoſe miniſtrie he will prepare the way, and bring back his people. The maner of ſpeech whereby he commands, hath greater vehemencie in it, then if he had ſpoken in the third perſon.

Cyrus. Darius.

In that he bids them to take away the ſtumbling blocks: he ſignifies, that they ought not to be diſmayed for the lets and impediments that lay in their way, for the Lord would eaſily remoue them in his good time. Out of the vvay of my people. The hope of the returne is included in this, namely, that after God had brought back his people, he would againe place them in the land of Canaan. And therfore howſoeuer for ought they could ſee, there was no way nor paſſage left for them, yet would be prouide one, and would breake all barres and obſtacles. Why ſo? Becauſe they had the Lords promiſe here for their returne: and in deed it was he that brought them home in ſafetie.

Verſ. 15. For thus ſaith he that is high and excellent, he that inhabiteth the eternitie, whoſe name is the holy one, I dwell in the high and holy place: with him alſo that is of a contrite and humble ſpirit to reuiue the ſpirit of the humble, and to giue life to them that are of a contrite heart.

A confirmation of the former ſentence.

HE confirmes the former ſentence touching the reſtoring of the people after their captiuitie. But this verſe may be two waies expounded; either, that the Prophet preuents a doubt which might fall into their minds of the faithfull, and ſo he mentions things oppoſite; or, that he drawes an argument from Gods nature, to confirme the hearts of the weake. That this may be the better vnderſtood and opened: firſt of all we know that our minds are often diſtracted by ſuch thoughts as theſe, to wit, That God in deed is in heauen, but in the meane while there is a great diſtance betweene him and vs: and that he little regards vs; or elſe lets things goe at ſix and ſeuen in the world: or that hee cares little or nothing for our matters. Now to correct this imagination, the Prophet grants it is true that God dwels on high, but yet doth not therfore ceaſe to behold and to gouerne this world by his prouidence: for he is careful of mens ſaluations, and dwels alſo vvith the afflicted, and with thoſe that are of a contrite and broken heart. For though the Lord be high, yet he beholdeth the lowly, as it is in Pſal. 113. 3. 4. and 148. 6. and in other places.

1 2

The other ſenſe is, that God reſembles vs nothing at all. For we tremble in aduerſitie, becauſe we meaſure him according to our owne capacitie: and thus we mutter, How can the Lord help vs, ſeeing vve are ouerwhelmed with troubles? Moreouer, the afflicted are for the moſt part deſpiſed and neglected. And thus we thinke that God is careleſſe of vs, becauſe we conceiue of him according to the reach of our carnall reaſon. But it is our parts to iudge farre otherwiſe of him, and therfore the Prophet ſaith, that he dwel. in the heauens, to ſignifie, that he is not ſubiect to humane affections: for he is alwaies like himſelfe, and neuer changeth his counſell. As he therefore hath once promiſed to reſtore the people to their former libertie, ſo will he aſſuredlie performe it.

This expoſition I approue of, and yet rather accept of the firſt, which is more ample and copious, and alſo agrees with other teſtimonies of the holy Scriptures, where theſe two things are often conioined, namely, That God dwels in heauen, and yet hath reſpect to things below: but eſpeciallie of his children, as I ſaid erewhile.

Dwelling in eternitie.] But we grouell on the earth, we are vnſtable, and neuer continue ſtayed nor ſetled in that which we haue once

Obiect.

Anſ. imbraced: and therefore hee ſeparates God from men; for in him there is not ſo much as a ſhadow of turning: Iames 1.17. Contrariwiſe, wee are not ſo affectioned, as to haue a perpetuall care ouer ſuch as neede our helpe.

I dwell in the high and holy place.] The holy place is often taken for the Temple; but heere it is taken for heauen it ſelfe. We ſee wherefore the Lord calles himſelfe holy, and dwelling in an high and holy place, euen that hee might cauſe vs to know vvhat difference there is betvveene him and vs, and betweene his nature and ours. Beſides, we may hence collect a ſpeciall conſolation, namely, that the Lord will aſſiſt the poore, yea, and dwell in the middeſt of them, if ſo be they acknowledge their miſeries. For the wicked ſhall be preſſed with diuers calamities; but in the meane while they ceaſe not to remaine haughtie and vntamed. Let ſuch neuer looke to haue God dwell vvith them: for thoſe that will expect any comfort from him, muſt be rightly humbled, and brought low in their owne ſight. But he ſtoopes euen to the dead, that by inſpiring new life into them, he may create them anew. Afterwards, he makes expreſſe mention of the humble ſpirit, and contrite heart, to let vs vnderſtand, that theſe promiſes appertaine to none that are rebellious and ſtiffe-necked in their afflictions, but to ſuch as hauing at laſt ſubdued all loftineſſe of ſpirit, ſhall ſhew themſelues humble and meeke.

Why God calles himſelfe the holy one, dwelling on high.

A conſolation.

With whom God will dwell.

Verſ. 16. For I will not contend for euer, neither will I be alwaies wroth: for the ſpirit ſhould faile before me, and I haue made the breath.

He proſecutes the ſame matter ſtill.

HE proſecutes the ſame doctrine. For this was an hard matter to perſwade them of, in regard that in this tedious baniſhment, they felt God as it were their enemie. It was no eaſie matter then for them to conceiue ſuch a taſte of this grace, as might cauſe them to take heart vnto them, and to bee of good cheere. The Prophet therefore meetes with this doubt, and ſhewes that the euils which they were to indure, ſhould laſt but for a time, and that God vvould not alwaies be vvroth. No doubt but hee hath iuſt cauſe giuen him to be angry: but hee rather parts with his right, and pardons that which he might iuſtly exact. And thus he ioines vvith Gods vvrath, that moderation vvhereby hee comforts the faithfull, leſt the ſpirit ſhould faile. For albeit he reaſons from the nature of God, yet this promiſe is particularly directed to the Church. Let vs for euer then keepe this point in our remembrance in our extreameſt anguiſhes; that ſo we may not thinke that God will ſtand to contend or to plead the caſe with vs.

In wrath God ſtill remembers mercie.

When he ſaith that God is vvroth: it is by way of yeelding ſo much vnto vs, in reſpect of the weakneſſe of our fleſh: for in aduerſitie we can conceiue no otherwiſe of God, but as of an angry Iudge: and no queſtion it is profitable for vs to bee touched with this feeling, which ought to bring vs to repentance. This phraſe of ſpeech then muſt wholly bee referred to our weakeneſſe, and not vnto God.

For the Spirit ſhall be clothed againe.] Heere he renders a reaſon wherefore the Lord will not contend for euer: but this place is diuerſly expounded. Among other expoſitions, this ſeemes to agree beſt; that the Spirit is clothed with the body, as with a garment. In which regard, the body alſo is called the Tabernacle or dwelling place of the Spirit. If we receiue this expoſition, there will be a double ſenſe: for ſome referre this place to the laſt reſurrection, and ſay, that the ſoule ſhall bee clothed: that is to ſay, after it ſhall depart from the body, ſhee ſhall returne the ſecond time into it, as into her houſe. And thus it ſhould be an argument from the greater to the leſſe, thus; I will raiſe the dead bodies: wherefore then ſhould not I put you into a better eſtate, though you ſeeme as good as dead? The other ſenſe which ſome others follow, will be better, and leſſe conſtrained: for this interpretation touching the laſt reſurrection, ſeemes far remote from the ſcope of the text.

I haue compaſſed the Spirit in vvith the body.] As if hee ſhould ſay; It is I that haue created men; you muſt thinke that I will haue a care of them then. But I ſhould thinke that the Prophet mounts higher: for he teacheth that the Lord handles vs thus mildly and graciouſly, becauſe hee knowes and is well acquainted with our frailtie and infirmities. This doctrine is confirmed vnto vs by many other places of the Scriptures; but amongſt the reſt, out of Pſal.103.13,14,15. Euen as a father pitieth his owne children, ſo is the Lord compaſſionate ouer ſuch as feare him. He knowes whereof we be made, he remembers we are but duſt. Man is like to graſſe, he floriſheth as a flower of the field. In Pſal.78. 38,39. it is ſaid in the ſame ſenſe; But he being merciefull, forgaue their iniquities, and deſtroyed them not. He often called backe his anger, and ſuffered not his vvhole diſpleaſure to ariſe: for he remembred they vvere but fleſh, and a vvinde that paſſeth avvay, and returneth not againe. And me thinkes the Prophet meant thus much in this place, as if the Lord ſhould haue ſaid; Should I doe trying my force againſt a little vvinde, or breath; or againſt a leafe, or graſſe, which vaniſheth in a moment, and withers away as ſoone as it hath felt the heate of the Sunne?

Some expound the verbe Iaatoph, Shall faile: and this agrees well enough to this place; for our Spirit muſt needes faile, as ſoone as the Lord doth begin to manifeſt his power againſt vs: Pſal.104.29. But not to ſtand vpon the ſignification of the words, we ſee, I hope, what the Prophets meaning is: for he ſhewes that God ſpares vs, and vſeth great lenitie towards vs, in correcting our vices, becauſe he reſpects our infirmity, and meanes to ſupport and relieue it.

Verſ. 17. For his wicked couetouſneſſe, I am angry with him, and haue ſmitten ſmitten him: I hid me and was angry, yet he went away, and turned after the way of his owne heart.

A complaint. HEre he complaines of the deſperate obſtinacie of the people, and ſhewes that the Lord had exceeding iuſt cauſe to puniſh them thus: ſo as they could not complaine of his ouer great ſeueritie.

For his luſts.] Others turne it, For his auarice. And in this ſenſe if you vnderſtand it of auarice, it is by a figure called Synecdoche, taken as a part for the whole. For couetouſneſſe is the roote from whence other vices ſpring. But we may take it generally for all luſts. For the Lord was wroth againſt ſo many wickednesſes, wherewith the Iewes were ſtained: and puniſhed them ſeuerely for them. But he ſpeakes expreſly of luſt, to ſhew that they were chaſtiſed, not ſo much for their manifeſt and open ſinnes, as for that they were guiltie before God. For this ſufficeth to all mens condemnation, that God is the Iudge of thoughts. So as he will not onely puniſh notorious iniquities, but alſo the ſecret inordinate and wicked luſts and affections of the heart. Beſides, hee aduertiſeth them that they are iuſtly ſmitten: that by feeling their guiltineſſe, they might humblie ſue for pardon.

I haue ſmitten him, and hid my ſelfe.] The meaning of theſe words is, that his grace ſtood a farre off and was hidden from them for a time. But he ſpeakes according to our opinions. For we apprehend God as an enemie and angrie with vs, when he puniſheth our offences, as we haue ſaid before. And doubtleſſe it is needefull we ſhould thus conceiue of him and apprehend him, that thereby we may be brought to acknowledge our ſinnes: which we will neuer do in good earneſt, neither will we be effectuallie touched with the horror of them, vnleſſe we conſider and be aſſuredly perſwaded in our minds and conſciences that we haue thereby prouoked the wrath of God againſt vs. Now as it is expedient that we be brought to repentance by this meanes, yet let vs beware that we be not ouerwhelmed with ſorrow, in imagining either that God is irreconciliable, or that he will haue no more to doe with vs. Thus then the Prophet mitigates theſe exceſſiue feares, and forbids vs to meaſure God according to our owne ell. For albeit he chaſten vs, yet ceaſeth he not to beare a gracious loue and fatherly affection towards them whom he hath adopted.

Beware of being ouerwhelmed by deſperate ſorrow.

But he vvent his vvay.] This is the rebellion which the Prophet taxeth and reproues, namely, that the people amended not by their ſtripes, but obſtinately perſeuered in their wickednes: and therefore he ſhewes they were growne paſt cure, in regard the violent remedies which God vſed could not bring them back into the right way.

Verſ. 18. I haue ſeene his waies and will heale him: I will leade him alſo and reſtore comfort vnto him, and to thoſe that lament him.

THe Lord here on the contrarie magnifies his mercie, in regard that he is fauorable to this ſo obſtinate and rebellious a people, and in preuenting them of his meere bountie and compaſſion. As if he ſhould ſay, I haue indeuored to bring them to repentance by my rods and chaſtiſements, euen whileſt they purſued their luſts: but they haue ſhewed themſelues obſtinate and incorrigible, ſo as I haue ſpent all my labour in vaine. I might therefore (if I would) iuſtly deſtroy them, yet had I rather heale and ſaue them. But this can not be effected vnleſſe I manifeſt my great and infinite mercie. Well, I will therefore withdraw my corrections. You ſee then that our Prophet by degrees amplifies and ſets forth Gods mercie, whom he brings in as a careful Phyſition, bethinking himſelf of the apteſt and fitteſt medicines to cure this peoples maladies. But they are incurable, vnleſſe the Lord preuent vs for his owne mercie and truths ſake. Let his rods be neuer ſo ſharp and biting, yet can they not draw vs to repentance, vnleſſe the Lord worke it in vs by his holy Spirit. Alas! without it wee are in danger to grow the more obſtinate and hard hearted. In this people therefore we may behold the image of mans corrupted nature, therein the better to take knowledge of our owne obſtinacie and rebellion againſt God; as alſo what remedies are the meeteſt to heale our ſpirituall ſicknesſes: ſo as being ſick, nay halfe dead, yet wee may recouer health, and be brought into the right way, and therein remaine.

Our maladies incurable, if the Lord ſhould not preuent vs by his grace.

Reade Exod. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. and 12. Chapters.

Our Prophet ſhewes herewithall, that perſeuerance in a good courſe is the only worke of God, whereupon followes a great conſolation, which yet wee can not haue, nor faith neither, if repentance be wanting: for ſuch as are not at oddes with themſelues in regard of their ſinnes, can neuer conceiue ought but Gods wrath, terrors, and deſpaire. Wee are carefullie to obſerue the order then which Iſaiah keepes heere; for he doth not raſhly adde a conſolation to the healing, becauſe ſuch as recouer their health, do therewithall recouer ioy of heart, whereof they were before depriued.

Perſeuerance the only worke of God.

When he addes, and to thoſe that lament him; he ſeemes eſpeciallie to note out the faithfull who were few in number, as it appeares by the Prophets complaints, who make ſharp and bitter inuectiues againſt the drouzines wherewith this people was whollie poſſeſſed. He ſpeakes to thoſe then who being guiltie of common offences, were conſtrained to weepe in regard of the griefe which preſſed them neere: and lamented not only the calamities of the people, but alſo in pitifull ſort mourned vnder the ſenſe of Gods wrath, whileſt others plunged themſelues in their voluptuouſnes.

Verſ. 19. I create the fruit of the lips to be peace: peace to them that are farre of, and to them that are neere, saith the Lord; for I will heale him.

An explication of the former sentence.

THis is the explication of the former sentence, namely, by what meanes the Lord would comfort this people, to wit, by promising and offering them peace: for by the fruit of the lips, he signifies, that they shall heare such good newes of peace, as shall reuiue and reioice their hearts. And, as I take it, he speakes of the publishing of that peace, which was committed first to the Prophets, then to the Apostles, and other Ministers of the Gospell: as Saint Paul teacheth, 2.Cor.5.20. Wee are Ambassadors for Christ (saith he) and doe beseech men to be reconciled vnto God.

The repetition of the word peace, serues not onely for the greater confirmation, but it also signifies a continuall progresse of it. As if he should say; You heare nothing now but terrible threatnings: the doctrine of grace and saluation is as good as buried: for you are vncapeable of it; your obstinacie is such, that you must bee thundered against with terrors and menaces: but one day I will restore vnto you the doctrine of peace, and I will open the lippes of my Prophets, which shall publish the same in your eares.

To those that are farre off.] This was added in regard the people, who were carried away captiue, thought that these things appertained not vnto thē, because they were farre off, but such as were left in the Country, might happily inioy this fruit; for their exile was vnto them as a kind of reiection. But the Prophet protests, that euen they shal taste of this grace, though they be farre remote. Lastly, the effect is added, namely, that God would heale the people: that is to say, would keepe them safe and sound. Hence we gather that which I touched but erewhile, to wit, that whatsoeuer appertaines to the true and perfect felicitie of the Church, is the free gift of God.

It seemes Saint Paul had an eye to this place, in Eph. 2.17. where he saith, that Christ hath brought peace to those which were neere, and to those a farre off. Now hee speakes of Iewes and Gentiles: for the Iewes were neere, because God had made a couenant with them; and the Gentiles were farre off, in regard they had no part in this couenant. But Obiect. it seemes our Prophet speakes onely of the Iewes? I answere, that the Apostle retaines

Ans. the Prophets true meaning, if all be well considered: for the Iewes are said to be farre off heere, because they seemed to be banished out from the house of the Lord: and in this respect their condition was like to that of the Gentiles. Seeing then that during the time of their banishment, there was no difference betweene them and the Gentiles, Saint Paul had iust cause to put them both in one ranke, and therefore makes them paires: and thus applied that to the Gentiles which our Prophet had said touching the Iewes: as in like maner he applies the place of Hosea, Chap.1. 10. to the Gentiles: Rom.9.26.

Vers. 20. But the wicked are like the raging sea, that cannot rest, whose waters cast vp mire and dirt.

A denunciation against the wicked.

HAuing spoken of that peace which the faithfull should inioy, he on the contrarie denounceth against the wicked continuall warre and perpetuall troubles, and garboiles of conscience, wherewith they should be vexed. And the rather, that the faithfull for their parts might the better prize this excellent benefit of peace: as also, that the wicked might know, that this peace is so promised to Gods children, that their condition shall no whit be bettered by it. But in regard these doe often vainly and falsly pretend the name of God, and glory in it as a cloke to couer their wickednesse withall; therefore the Prophet shewes, that they shall haue no cause to reioice heerein, or to attribute any thing to themselues in regard of this promise; because they can haue no part in this peace. It should bee little to their good then, though God shewed mercy to his people, receiued them into fauour; or that hee gaue men authoritie to publish peace vnto them.

This similitude of the sea, is elegant and verie fit to expresse the disquietnes of the wicked. For the sea troubles it selfe, and is tossed with hideous tempests, though the windes be calme: the waues iustle one against another with great violence, and breake with a verie terrible noise: and so the wicked are vexed with a secret worme, which cleaueth fast to their consciences; for they are in continuall terrors, by reason of the gnawing and stings thereof, which is a torment that surmounts all the rest, and the most cruell hangman that is to be found in the whole world. The furies of hell harrie and pursue the wicked, not with burning Torches, as the Poets faine; but through anguishes of cōscience, and ꝯ tormēt of their wilfull rebellion: for euery one of thē is affrighted, and extremely tortured by his owne iniquitie: their wicked cogitations amaze them, and cause them to rage, and the guilt and scruples of their consciences astonish them. He hath very aptly then compared the wicked to the raging sea. He that would escape and auoid these tempests and horrible boiling of spirit: let him beware how hee reiects this peace which the Lord offers him. There is no meane betweene these two: for vnlesse wee abandon all our lusts, to entertaine this peace, we must of necessitie be continually tormented and vexed after an horrible maner.

1
2

Vers. 21. There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked.

A confirmation of the former denunciation.

THe Prophet confirmes the former sentence, namely, that the wicked shall gaine nothing in seeking this peace; for they shall haue alarums rung in their eares on euerie side; and in regard that God makes warre vpon them, therefore they shall but lose their labour to hope for peace. I grant the wicked would with all their hearts inioy peace, yea they much desire it. For what seeke they elsе

in

in this world, but to be ſecured, and to rocke their conſciences aſleepe, that they may take their fill of pleaſures, and giue themſelues ouer without checke, vnto all laſciviouſneſſe.

What course the wicked take to attaine peace.

They indeuor to baniſh frō them al thoughts of Gods iudgements, and would faine become ſenſleſſe: and theſe they take to be the true meanes whereby to obtaine peace: but they ſhall neuer this way inioy it; for till they be reconciled vnto God in Chriſt, their conſciences will euer be galling them, and they ſhall not ceaſe to be moleſted with the accuſations thereof. And thus hee brings in God the onely author of peace, who by this terrible ſentence, takes from the Iewes their peace, and calles him his God: oppoſing it againſt their vaine glory, who falſly couered themſelues vnder ſuch titles. For they could not be ſaid to haue any knowledge of God, whileſt they reiected both his Prophet and doctrine: and therefore Iſaiah is bold by Gods expreſſe commandement, to proclaime open warre againſt them.

THE LVIII. CHAPTER.

Verſ. 1. Cry aloud, ſpare not: lift vp thy voice like a trumpet, and ſhew my people their tranſgreſſions, and to the houſe of Iacob their ſinnes.

This Chapter depends vpon the former.

THis preſent Chapter was ill diuided, in regard this is knit vnto the former: ſo as if we will vnderſtand the Prophets meaning, wee muſt reade this as if there were no breakingoff. Iſaiah hath teſtified that the people ſhould be ſo chaſtiſed, that yet ſome hope of peace remained for them. Now hee confirmes this doctrine, and teacheth that the Lord hath charged him to cry out of the throte, or as wee commonly ſay in our ſpeech, with open throte. To what end? Forſooth, to ſhew the people their ſinnes. Neither ſpeakes hee onely of the liſting vp of the voice, but of that vehemencie and ſeueritie of ſpeech (whereof hypocrites ſtand eſpecially in need) as if God thundered vpon them from heauen. For they flatter themſelues in their vices, if they be not rounly dealt withall, and bee forced to come into the light: nay, no good is to bee done vpon them, vnleſſe they bee laid vpon with maine blowes.

A plaine goſier.

Where he addes, ſpare not: it is a forme of ſpeech much vſed among the Hebrewes; I ſpeake, and will not hold my peace: as we alſo commonly ſay; Cry without ceaſing. We haue told you that the Prophet ſpeakes not heere ſimply of the ſound of the voice, but ſignifies a ſharpe & biting kind of reprehenſion, wherewith hypocrites muſt be galled to the quicke: as for example, if the Prophets ſhould onely propound the Law of the Lord, and ſhew wherein the rule of a well ordered life conſiſts, ſhould fall into the praiſe of Gods worſhippe, and without any vehemencie reproue iniquities; what would hypocrites haue been the better for ſuch a cold manner of preaching? For their conſciences are ſo drowſie, that they cannot be awakened, but with loud and ſhrill cries. A cold maner of preaching then would doe them no good, vnleſſe they were ſharply preſſed and thundered vpon with terrible threats.

Crie ſans eſpargner.

Saint Paul (imitating the Prophets) hauing proued all mankind guiltie and worthy of death, he riſeth vp with great vehemencie, againſt ſuch as had ſome appearance of holineſſe, and yet abuſed Gods patience. Behold, ſaith he, thou art called a Iew, and reſteſt in the Law, and glorieſt in God, thou knoweſt his will, and approueſt the things that are excellent, being inſtructed in the Law. Thou takeſt vpon thee to be a leader of the blind, a light to ſuch as are in darkneſſe, an inſtructer of the ignorant, and an inſtructer of them that lacke diſcretion, hauing a forme of knowledge & of ỹ truth in the Law. But thou which teacheſt others, teacheſt thou not thy ſelfe? thou that preacheſt another ſhould not ſteale, yet doeſt thou ſteale? &c. Rom. 2. Againſt ſuch, in concluſion, hee denounceth iudgement, and the horrible vengeance of God; becauſe they abuſed Gods goodneſſe, and gloried in his name in vaine. Likewiſe in this place the Prophet taxeth the Iewes in particular, who gloried in the name of the Lord, and in the meane while roſe vp in armes againſt him.

This is the courſe then that muſt be taken with hypocrites, who content themſelues with an outward maſke of holineſſe, if wee meane to diſcharge our duties profitably, and as we ought. And euen as the Lord hath exerciſed his Prophets in this combat, ſo muſt wee alſo at this day be in like maner exerciſed; that we may not feare the faces of hypocrites, nor content our ſelues to haue reproued them lightly, in two or three words, but to cry aloud with might and maine againſt them.

Obiect.

But, may ſome ſay, If the Lord command ſuch to be reproued for their ſinnes, to whom he promiſeth peace, then no doubt but his meaning was to leaue them ſome hope of ſaluation: and yet it is out of queſtion, that this ſpeech is directed to the reprobates, againſt whom before he proclaimed open war. I anſwere, the faithfull were then few in number: for a ſmall remnant only imbraced this peace which was offered them. When Iſaiah then giues hope of a peace neere hand, he had reſpect to that little flocke: when he proclaimed warre, that was to terrifie the multitude, who were reuolted from God, and contemned all admonitions. For the ſtate of the people was ſuch that nothing was ſound nor pure among them, as we haue ſeene in chap. 1. 21.

He mentions the houſe of Iacob, in regard the moſt of the people were corrupted. Now this diſtinction in the Prophets Sermons is diligently to be noted of vs, in that they now ſpeake to the whole bodie of the people: and by and by reſtraine their ſpeech to a ſmall number of the faithfull. But it is not without a very ſharpe and biting reproch that hee calles thoſe his people, and the children of Iacob, which were degenerate from their originall, and had ſhamefully reuolted from the faith of the Patriarks. This therefore is a yeelding of ſo much to them: but with a plaine mocke. As if he ſhould ſay, There are no deſerts at all of theirs which ſhall priuiledge them from hearing their owne.

Verſe. 2. Yet they ſeeke mee daily, and will know my waies, euen as a nation that did righteouſlie, and had not forſaken the ſtatutes of their God: they aske of me the ordinances of iuſtice: they will draw neere vnto God, ſaying.

A preuention to an obiection.

HE meant here to take from hypocrites all occaſions of replies, for they had their exceptions readie, We feare, ſerue, loue, and ſeeke God with our whole hearts. Wherefore blameſt thou vs as if we were infidels? For we would thou ſhouldeſt wel know we order our liues according to the ordinances of the law. But to meete with this obiection, hee denies that they doe any thing purely or ſincerelie: but that all is hypocriticall, and from the teeth outward; and therefore God who chiefflie requires a perfect heart, reiects ſuch a fained ſeruice. Gen. 17. 1.

And wee are to obſerue the order which the Prophet here followes. For hauing proclaimed open warre againſt the wicked and hypocrites, he now ſeuerely reprooues them, and ſtripes them quite of their fained pretence, vnder which they ſhadowed theſelues. For thus they were to be handled and to bee ferreted out of their lurking holes: otherwiſe doctrine would profit them but little or nothing. Which order as al the faithful are to obſerue in regard of others; ſo ought euery one to applie this doctrine to his ſeueral vſe, that he may not pleaſe nor flatter himſelfe in his vices, leſt he deceiue his owne heart, or ſuffer himſelfe to be ſeduced by the illuſions of the diuell. Let euery one bring with him a pure and an vpright heart, if he meane to profit in the pure doctrine; and to be acceptable to his God.

How he ought to come to bee fitted that] meanes to profit by the word.

Moreouer, although Iſaiah attributes to theſe diſſemblers and diſloyall ſome kind of holineſſe: yet he againe taxeth them with a verie bitter flout, as if hee ſhould ſay, Your impudent boaſting is accompanied with too manifeſt an obſtinacie. And thus it is not only a plaine mocke, but there is a complaint mingled therewith, for preſuming to ſerue God in hypocriſie. Whereas if their ſhewes were rightlie examined, and that the whole courſe of their liues were ſufficiently ſifted, it would be found that their hearts were farre remote from God.

They aske of me.] Thoſe who thinke that hypocrites doe here complaine of God, and riſe vp againſt him as it were to pleade the matter with him, haue not rightly conceiued of the Prophets meaning. I confeſſe we ſhal ſee this hereafter: but before that he plucks off from them that maske of fained holineſſe. Hauing ſaid then that they ſought God dailie, as if nothing had bin deerer to them then religion, he proſecutes the ſame ſentence, and ſaith, that they asked of him ordinances of iuſtice, to the end they might honour God, and follow an vpright courſe of life; to wit, when they made ſhew to burne with zeale.

And no queſtion but the Prophet here recites the chiefeſt exerciſes of the faithfull, which ſometimes hypocrites in appearance ſeeme to imitate. Now the maine point of true godlineſſe conſiſts in ſeeking to Gods reuealed will, that our conuerſation may bee ſquared according to the rules which hee giues, and to depend vpon his ſacred mouth. But the hypocrites doe counterfeit this in ſuch wiſe, that for the moſt part they ſeeme to practiſe that which appertaines to Gods worſhip in an highet meaſure then the faithfull.

Verſ. 3. Wherefore haue wee faſted, and thou ſeeſt it not? Wee haue punſhed our ſelues, and thou regardeſt it not. Behold, in the day of your faſt you will ſeeke your will, and require all your debts.

He ſtill proſecutes the ſame argument in this and in the next verſe.

HEe paſſeth on further in the ſame argument, and ſaith, that beſides this hypocriſie which thus blindes thoſe that ſerue God to the halues, pride doth ſo ſuperabound in them, that they dare in plaine termes make oppoſition againſt God himſelfe: and when hee preſſeth them neere, they burſt forth into complaints, as if he offered them great wrong. As if they ſhuld haue ſaid; Haſt thou any reaſon to reiect our ſeruices, faſts, and praiers? Wherefore ſhouldſt thou not accept of them? Canſt thou in equitie ſuffer vs to puniſh our ſelues thus for nothing? Hee hath already granted to the hypocrites ſome ſhew of holineſſe, whereby they deceiued the world: but now he ſhewes that they were beſotted, and ready to burſt with pride inwardly, vnder pretence of their painted workes, with which they thought to ſatisfie God, and in regard thereof, outfaced the Prophets, and flattered themſelues in their wickednеſſes, namely, in their infidelitie, rebellion, and obſtinacie againſt God; diſtruſt, crueltie, deceit, and oppreſſion. Theſe were light matters with them, and they thought they might eaſilie purge themſelues of them, by faſtings and ſuch bodily exerciſes: for theſe were their goodly merits in which they imagined the whole worſhip ſhip of God conſiſted, and by which they hoped to be abſolued from all their ſinnes. And thus they ſtrained at a gnat, and made no bones to ſwallow a Camell: Mat. 23. 24.

But if the Iewes had onely been ſuch, and that the world were now growne better, then ſhould we be inforced to ſeeke our examples heereof farre hence: but ſeeing we haue experience euery day of the like dealing, we need not ſpend much time in the expoſition of this text.

Beſides, this complaint may as well be referred to the word as to the power of God. For the Lord iudgeth hypocrites both waies. 1 2 First, he reprooues them by his word: and ſecondlie, he puniſheth their wicked obſtinacie. This may then be referred as well to his corrections, as to the former reprehenſion. But yet I had rather referre it to the word: and I thinke that the hypocrites who vaunted of their faſts, are here rebuked for oppoſing theſe exerciſes againſt the Prophets admonitions. As if forſooth they had been the true ſeruants of God, and that they were wrongfully reproued.

Neither am I of their mind who thinke that the people complaine of God for vſing them ſo ſeuerely in this their baniſhment. But I rather thinke they complaine of the Prophets of God, who as they thought, rebuked them too ſharpelie. For the Iewes would needs be held for zealous and deuout men, and could not endure that any ſhould condemne them of impietie or iniquitie. And for this cauſe the Prophet diſcouers their affections; & tels them that they ſtroue againſt God: that ſo they might know they had not to doe with a mortall man.

In the ſecond part of the verſe (in the perſon of God) he refutes the vertues which the hypocrites proclaimed with ſound of trumpet. The reaſon is, becauſe they neuer made any reckoning, touching ŷ putting off of their froward and carnall affections, nor began not at the deniall of themſelues. For hee condemnes them eſpecially for being giuen to their luſts: and then mentions certaine particular vices. Whence wee may gather, that they were touched with no care of repentance.

Verſ. 4. Behold, yee faſt to ſtrife and debate, and to ſmite with the fiſt of wickedneſſe: yee ſhall not faſt as yee doe to day, to make your voice to be heard aboue.

The reaſon Why God regarded not the Iewes faſts.

THis verſe muſt be ioyned to the former. For in regard the Lord brought in the hypocrites complaining of ŷ Prophets vehemencie and ſharpeneſſe in the firſt member: now in this ſecond he yeelds a reaſon wherefore the Lord regarded not their faſts and other workes: namelie, becauſe none of theſe things proceeded from a pure affection of the heart. Now he ſhewes what their hearts were by the fruites: for he brings them to the commandements of the ſecond table, whereby it is eaſie to diſcerne what wee are within.

The puritie of the heart manifeſts it ſelfe in an vpright conuerſing with our neighbours, and in abſteining from all fraud and violence. Theſe are ŷ liuely repreſentations of a pure affection: without which God reiects, yea abhorres all externall ſeruices. For where deceit, extortions and robberies haue the full ſcope, it is moſt certaine that there the feare of God hath no place at all. He reprocheth the hypocrites then that vnder colour of their faſtings, they took the greater libertie to oppreſſe their brethren, and to follow their luſts the more freely. Wee haue experience of this euery day: for manie faſt, not onely to obtaine pardon for their fraudes, and thefts, and libertie to play the theeues the more freely; but alſo that during the time of their faſts, they may haue the better leiſure to caſt ouer their reckonings, to reade their bils and obligations, to count what gaines are come in by their vſurie, and Vſurie. to deuiſe waies how to intangle the goods of their debters within their nets. And therefore for the moſt our hypocrites put off this buſineſſe vntill Lent, and to the ſet faſting Lent. daies; and ſuch as are the moſt notorious hypocrites, will heare manie Maſſes euery daie, that vnder pretext of religion, they may plot their coſenages and treacheries with more freedome, that ſo no man may come to interrupt them. Laſt of all, the Prophet reiects their faſts, notwithſtanding the high account which they made of them; becauſe by meanes hereof, Gods wrath was the more prouoked.

And by and by after he alſo reiects their prayers: whence it appeares (as we haue more largely ſhewed vpon the firſt Chapter) that God approues no ſeruices at all, vnleſſe they proceed from the ſincere affection of the heart. Truly there is no ſacrifice more excellent then prayer, and yet we ſee notwithſtanding that the impuritie of the heart pollutes and defiles all our prayers. Moreouer, in regard that faſts are vſuallie ioined with prayer, the Prophet takes it for granted, for indeed, it is a dependance of prayer. He forbids ſuch kind of men then to make ſolemne prayers with faſts, becauſe they ſhall gaine nothing thereby, vnleſſe peraduenture that the Lord will puniſh them the more ſeuerely for it. And hence we gather (as we haue ſaid before) that ŷ Lord reiects all externall works, if the true feare of his Maieſtie goes not before.

God approues no ſeruice, but that which proceedes from the ſincere affection of the heart.

Faſting, a dependance of Prayer.

The faſt which was in vſe among the Iewes is not here in it ſelfe condemned, as if it had bin a ſuperſtitious ceremonie, but the abuſe of it, & vaine confidence in it. Which we are well to obſerue: for we muſt goe another way to worke with the Papiſts, if we ſhould ſtand to reproue their faſts, which are meerely ſuperſtitious, in regard they are tied to certain daies and times, as if the reſt of the yeere it were lawfull to cram their bellies. They alſo hold fleſh to be vncleane, and in the meane while ſtuffe themſelues vp to the throates with iunckets, & delicate meates. In a word, if ſo be they eate and drinke their fils only once in the day when they keepe their faſt,

The Iewes faſt not condemned in it ſelfe.

Faſt of Papiſts meerely ſuperſtitious.

they thinke then they haue done a worke of supererogation. Seeing then that there is nothing in all that which they doe that may be approued of, wee may simplie condemne them. But Isaiahs dispute was in another kind: for the fast which the Iewes obserued was laudable in it selfe, because God had instituted it, Leuit 23.27. and 16.29.30. But the false opinion only was condemned. As for the Papists, wee must condemne not only their false opinion, but the institution of their fasts also, in regard it is wicked. The Papists ioine together with the Iewes in this, namely, that they thinke God beholding to them for it, and in that they thinke to merit by it. But a fast alone is no seruice of God, neither is it required in it selfe as other works commanded in the law: but it is an outward action, as an handmaid vnto prayer; and is profitable either to tame the flesh, or to testifie our humiliation. As when we feele our selues guiltie, we desire God in the day of our aduersitie that hee would turne his wrath away from vs. But he that would be further instructed touching this point, let him resort to our Institutions, Lib 4. Chap.12. Sect.14.15.16.17. and there he shall find a more ample discourse both concerning the vse and end of it.

Fasting alone is no seruice of God.

Institutions of Caluin.

Vers.5. Is it such a fast that I haue chosen, that a man should afflict his soule for a day, and to hang downe his head like a bulrush; and to lye downe in sackcloth and ashes? wilt thou call this a fasting, or an acceptable day vnto the Lord?

A confirmation of the confirmation.

HE confirmes the former sentence, and shewes that God neither approues nor condemnes fasting in it selfe further then when it is applied to the right end. Now his meaning was not vtterly to abolish it, but the wicked abuse of it, to wit, when men put holines in it, and either in despising or neglecting true godlines, they thinke that the bodilie exercise alone sufficeth. For hypocrites are euer wont to make the most they can of their externall ceremonies, and that no lesse, then if they were satisfactions to appease God withall. Now in regard that men according to their headines date of themselues define what Gods seruice is, he therfore brings vs backe expreslie to his own difinition of it, to the end our reason may not giue sentence that a thing is right, vnlesse we be first assured that he approues of it: for howsoeuer men please themselues, and be highly conceited of their owne vnderstandings, and malepertlie vaunt thereof, yet the Lord reiects and abhorres such pride; for he reserues it in his owne power to make choice of that which he likes best, neither doth it belong to any other.

To chuse, is as much as to like or allow of: but he protests that this is not acceptable vnto him to see one continue a day without meate, and to goe sorrowfullie with his head hanging downe. The Prophet hath vsed a very fit similitude: for as the bulrush bowes it selfe easily, notwithstanding it stands bolt vpright, so hypocrites haue skill to bow and hang downe the head, as if they were brought low with faintnes, or to signifie some vaine appearance of humilitie. His meaning was therefore to taxe these superstitious gestures wherein hypocrites are wont to place a kind of holinesse.

Simile.

Sackcloth and ashes were added to fasting then chieflie, when they made solemne profession of their repentance: for they couered themselues with sackcloth, and laid ashes vpon their heads. God approued this as an holie and laudable exercise. And we also see that the Prophets summoning the people to repentance, haue called them to sackcloth and ashes, Ioel.1.13. But as we haue formerly said that fasting is not here condemned in it self, no more doth Isaiah condemne these externall rites; only he rebukes hypocrites for separating the truth from the signes.

When sackcloth and ashes were chieflie in vse.

If any shall aske, whether sackcloth and ashes agree to our times or no: I answere, that they are things indifferent, which may also be vsed to edification. And yet it is not needful to vse such shadowes now in the light of the Gospel, which hath brought vs greater libertie. Herewithall we are also to note the difference which is betweene the Easterne people who vse many ceremonies: and the Westerne, who are much more sparing therein, so as if wee should imitate them, it would be little better then a may-game, or apish tricks. And yet this hinders not them who are desirous to confesse their faults; to clothe themselues in vile rayment after the manet of the penitents, who craued pardon and mercie.

Quest. Ans.

An acceptable fast.] From hence we obserue that fasts were celebrated whē solemne prayers were made; and that all the Church was assembled together. For fasting is but the handmaid of prayer, as we haue shewed before; and wee also see that Christ addes it thereunto, Matth. 17. 21. It is not instituted then in regard of it selfe, but tends to another end.

Fasting the handmaid of prayer.

Vers. 6. Is not this the fasting that I haue chosen, to loose the bands of wickednes, to take off the heauie burthens, and to let the oppressed goe free, and that yee breake euery yoke?

THe Prophet shewes wherein the true offices of pietie which are principally commanded of God consist, namely, in comforting the poore and oppressed. But it seemes the Prophet vtterlie aboliseth fasting, when in stead thereof hee recites those works which are much more acceptable vnto God. I answere, that fasting is then approued, when charitie is ioined with it. The Prophet brings vs to this principle, to wit, that our consciences may be pure & sound, & that we exercise our selues in shewing brotherly kindnes one to another. For if this order be duly obserued, then fasting being added thereto, wil be pleasing and acceptable to the Lord. But, may some say, here is not a word vttered touching the

What duties God allowes of in fasting.

Obiect.

Ans. Fasting approoued when charity is ioyned with it.

Anſ. the puritie of the heart. I anſwere, it is vnderſtood by the fruits that proceede from the ſame, or from the workes by which it is eaſie to diſcerne what the heart is. In the next place he numbers vp the duties of the ſecond Table, and ſo vnder this part vnderſtands the obſeruation of the whole Law; as wee haue ſeene in Chap. 56. For it is not enough to be beneficial to our neighbours, if in the meane while we contemne God. But we are to note our Prophets meaning: for in as much as we cannot hold the band of brotherly loue with our neighbours, vnleſſe the loue of God goe before, to examine whether this loue and feare of his Maieſtie bee in vs or no, hee requires theſe Chriſtian duties, as the neereſt ſignes therof, namely, if we liue with our brethren, iuſtly, louingly, and without offering them any hard meaſure. Adde alſo, that an outward appearance will not ſerue the turne: for where the Spirit of God beares not rule, there charitie is cold. And therefore S. Paul makes expreſſe mention of loue among the fruits of the Spirit: Gal. 5. 22. When the obſeruation of the Law is mentioned then, we vnderſtand not onely the outward actions, but the affections of the heart muſt alſo come into account.

To looſe the bands of vnrighteouſneſſe.] Some expound it; The wicked thoughts, wherewith men are bound and intangled. But it ſeemes Iſaiah meant otherwiſe, to wit, that hypocrites are very mercileſſe towards the poore, and lay very heauie yokes vpō them. He calles that knots or bands, which wee commonly terme oppreſſions. To which agrees that which is added, to take off the heauie burthens, vnder the weight whereof, the poore & needie grone, and are in a maner ouerwhelmed therewith. The Prophet then ſets not downe the definition of a faſt, but ſhewes what the Lord chiefly and principally requires in the 1 firſt place: alſo by what meanes our ſeruice
2 may bee acceptable before him: and how
3 thoſe ought to bee fitted and prepared that meane to faſt.

Verſ. 7. Is it not to deale thy bread to the hungry, and that thou bring the poore that wander vnto thine houſe? When thou ſeeſt the naked, that thou couer him, and hide not thy ſelfe from thine owne fleſh?

He ſtill goes on in deſcribing the duties of loue.

HEe goes on in deſcribing the duties of loue, which hee touched in the former verſe. For hauing ſaid in the firſt place, that 1 wee muſt abſtaine from doing any wrong;
2 now he admoniſheth vs to ſhew our ſelues liberall and lowly towards the afflicted, and ſuch as ſtand in neede of our helpe. For there are two parts of equitie and iuſtice. Firſt, that

Two parts of equitie.

1 we offer no man any wrong: ſecondly, that
2 we imploy our riches and goods towards the maintenance of them that are in want and neceſſitie: and theſe two parts muſt be ioined together. For it is not enough to abſtaine from violent courſes, vnleſſe therewithall we ſhew mercy in relieuing our poore brethrens wants. Neither is it ſufficient to ſuccour one, if you rob from ſome to beſtow vpon others: for wee muſt not relieue our neighbours wants by thefts and pillages. And if thou haſt committed any iniuſtice, crueltie, or extortion, thou oughteſt not to make amends by calling in God to thee, as if thou wouldſt make him partner with thee of thy ſpoiles. It is neceſſarie then, you ſee, that theſe two parts be ioined together, if we would haue God to approue and allow of our charitie.

In commanding them to breake their bread to the hungry, he meant to take away all excuſes from the couetous and niggardly, who are wont to reply, that their goods are their owne: like Nabal, 1. Sam. 25. 11. It is mine owne, ſay they, and therefore I may keepe it to my ſelfe. Why ſhould I make that common, which God hath giuen me for my particular vſe? The Prophet anſwers, that it doth indeed appertaine vnto thee, but vpon condition that thou dealeſt out part thereof to the hungry and thirſtie: and not that thou ſhouldeſt eate all thy ſelfe alone. Truly common reaſon teacheth vs, that the hungry are defrauded of their right, vnleſſe their wants be ſupplied: yea, ſuch a wofull ſpectacle often moues the moſt barbarous and cruell to compaſſion.

Afterwards hee reckons vp ſome particulars, which are vſually wont to mollifie the ſtonieſt heart, and moue them to ſhew mercie. The reaſon is, that their inhumanitie which are not touched with the ſenſe of the pouertie, and need of their brethren, might be the leſſe excuſable.

Laſtly, hee concludes, and hide not thy face from thine owne fleſh: where we are to note this word fleſh; for thereby he meanes all men in generall; not one, whereof wee can behold, but therein of neceſſitie wee muſt view our owne nature, as in a glaſſe. It is great inhumanitie then to diſdaine and deſpiſe thoſe in whom wee are forced to acknowledge our owne image.

Verſ. 8. Then ſhall thy light breake forth as the morning, and thine health ſhall grow ſpeedily: thy righteouſneſſe ſhall goe before thee, and the glory of the Lord ſhall imbrace thee.

THe Prophet ſhewes that God is not ouer rigorous, neiter requires hee of vs more then is neede, though hypocrites complaine cauſleſly neuer ſo much, in accuſing him of too great ſeueritie: for when their workes are condemned, then they gnaſh the teeth, and anſwer, that God can neuer be content; and therefore they know not what they ſhould doe more, nor what way to take. Hee anſwers them againe, that God requires no more but a pure and vpright heart: that is to ſay, a good conſcience. If they haue that, he will ſhew them mercy, and in gathering them together againe, will giue teſtimonie of their holineſſe, and will bleſſe them euery manner of way, whom he hath iuſtly chaſtiſed for their diſloyalties.

A preuention of an obiection.

disloyalties. In a word, that they shall haue no occasion at all to murmure, as if he were too sharpe towards them; because they should taste of his bountie and liberalitie, if in reiecting all hypocrisie, they would dispose themselues to worship him in sinceritie.

We must note the particle then. For on the contrarie, it signifies that hypocrites are very farre off from this pure worship of God, though they would be taken for the holiest men in the world. But the Prophet holds them more then conuinced, when by their owne workes he shewes that they neither feare nor reuerence the Lord.

By the word light, he meanes a prosperous estate: as on the contrarie; darkenesse signifies a life full of miserie and calamities. And this we know is a phrase of speech much vsed in the Scriptures. Health, notes out an happie and quiet life, as we shal see anon in another place. For the plagues which were inflicted vpon this people by the hand of God in regard of their sinnes, had almost consumed them: so as they pined away as a sicke man that is brought low by a languishing disease. For there is no sickenesse so sharpe, as to be presséd with the iust vengeance of God, or to be wasted vnder his curse.

Mich.7.8. Chap 42.16.

The word righteousnesse may be taken two waies: either for a testimonie of vprightnesse: or for an estate well ordered: because God would heale the confusions, and place all things in their first estate. The first sense then will be; after God shall be reconciled with thee, the testimonie of thy righteousnesse shal appeare before him and before men; as if an Herauld of armes went before thee. There are other expositors, which had rather take righteousnesse, for a well ordered commonwealth, which is a gift of God, and no small token of his fatherly loue. And in other places also we haue seene that it is taken in this sense amongst the Hebrews. But the last member which followes, the glorie of the Lord; causeth me rather to follow the first exposition, Thy righteousnesse shall goe foorth, that is to say, All shall know that thou art iust and holie; whereas before thou wast guilty and conuicted. And thus the glorie of the Lord shall be put vpon thee: whereas before thou wert ouerwhelmed with ignominie and reproches. For we are exposed to shame and contempt, when we beare the punishment of our transgressions.

Vers. 9. Then shalt thou call, and the Lord shall answere: thou shalt crie, and hee shall say, Here I am: if thou take away from the middest of thee the yoke, the putting foorth of the finger, and wicked speaking.

The same argument further prosecuted.

Isaiah prosecutes that which he hath alreadie begun to intreate of, namely, that the Iewes should prosper in all things, if they liue in such equitie, and so abstaine from all wrong, that thence men may take notice of their piety and religion. For he pronounceth that which is said by Hosea, and is repeated by Christ: That mercie ought to bee preferred before sacrifice: Hos.6.7. Matth.12 7. Hauing spoken then of the duties of charitie, and likewise hauing protested that such as performe them shall be happie; now he ads, Then thou shalt cal, and the Lord shal heare thee. For herein consists the chiefest part of our happinesse: namelie, if God vouchsafe to heare vs: contrariwise, there cannot befall vs a more wofull condition, then when hee is our enemy.

Wherein our principall happinesse consists.

Now for the exercise of our faith, he attributes that to our prayers which he is minded to bestow voluntarily, and of his meere liberalitie. For if he should still supplie vs with his benefits while we slept, as it were; the affection of prayer would grow cold in vs, yea would be vtterly frozen vp; and so his liberality should nourish our sloth & negligence. Albeit then that hee preuent vs by his free grace; yet will he haue our prayers to come betweene: and therfore he addes, Thou shalt crie, and he shall say, Here I am. For this promise containes also an exhortation, to the end we should not remaine idle. When hee saith, Here am I: this appertaines not to our outward senses; but by the effects he shewes that he is neere vnto vs, and a fauour vs.

And in the end of the verse he repeates againe, that God will be pacified towards the Iewes, if so be they did repent. By the yoke, he comprehends all the molestations wherewith the poore were vexed. As if hee should say, If thou ceasest to molest thy brethren, and abstainest from deceit and violence: the Lord will blesse thee euery kind of way.

The lifting vp of the finger also, containes vnder it all manner of iniuries. For wee are wont to say, Lift vp thy finger, when we meane to deale cruellie with our neighbours, or to offer them any outrage. The word of vanity, is the third kind of wrong, by which wee hurt our neighbour in deceiuing them with sweet and sugred words. For all iniquitie is composed either of secret fraud and malice: or of open violence.

Vers. 10. If thou powre out thy soule to the hungrie, and refresh the troubled soule: then shall thy light spring out of darkenesse, and thy darkenesse shall be as the noone day.

Powre out thy soule.] He continues to recommend vnto them the duties of charitie. For the whole summe of his exhortation is to shew that men worship God in vaine, if they onely offer vnto him some cold and naked ceremonies, seeing Gods true and pure worship consists not in such childish things: but rather commands and chargeth vs to liue in innocencie and vprightnesse with our neighbours: doing them good to our powers, and being readie to helpe them when need is, readilie and cheerefully.

The two parts of this dutie are to be marked, which Isaiah also hath expresly distinguished. For in the first place he commends vnto vs the affection of pitie and compassion: in the the next place he exhorts vs to manifeſt the ſame by the effects. For it is not ſufficient to doe good to men, vnleſſe it proceede from a franke and willing mind. If I diſtribute all my goods to the poore, ſaith S. Paul, and haue not loue; I am nothing: 1.Cor.13.3. Thus then to powre out the ſoule, ſignifies nothing elſe but to pitie our brethrens miſeries, & to be as much affected with their wants, as if we our ſelues were afflicted with them: Heb.13.3. As contrariwiſe all ſuch as are ſtrait laced being giuen to their priuate commodities, ſhutting vp their bowels, and are void of affection, 1.Iohn 3.17. are called men of an hard heart.

Whereas others tranſlate, If thou preſenteſt thy ſoule: it agrees not. The ſame promiſe with that in verſe 8. followes, and vnder the ſame ſimilitude or figure. For by darkneſſe he vnderſtands a wofull eſtate: and by light, an happie and proſperous condition. As if he ſhould ſay, The Lord will cauſe all thy miſeries which now ouerwhelme thee to ceaſe: and a ſudden felicitie ſhall ſucceed the ſame. Hee ſhewes therefore that they had no cauſe to complaine of God when afflictions preſſed them ſo the quicke; becauſe they ſhould foorthwith eſcape, and enioy an happie eſtate, if they ſerued and obeyed God.

Verſ. 11. And the Lord ſhall guide thee continually, and ſatisfie thy ſoule in drought, and make fat thy bones: and thou ſhalt bee like a watred garden and like a ſpring of water, whoſe waters faile not.

THe Lord ſhall guide thee.] Now hee more clearely expreſſeth that which he touched before in briefe, and vnder borowed ſpeeches. Namely, that God will bee their leader: ſo as nothing ſhall hinder them from enioying all things in abundance. It is ſaid that God guides vs, when we feele by experience that hee goes before vs, as if wee ſaw him with our eies. Next hee addes, that this ſhall not be for a time; becauſe God neuer leaues thoſe that bee his in the mid way; but with an vnchangeable courſe continues his benefits alwaies vnto them. For this cauſe the Prophet alſo promiſeth fulnes and ſatietie in their extreameſt penurie. For God hath abundance of bleſſings alwaies in his hand wherewith to relieue the wants of his children. And ſurely his onelie bleſſing is more worth then the ſweeteſt dewes that can fall in an whole yeere. And yet he doth not promiſe to the faithfull, that they ſhall haue alwaies a goodly and plentifull increaſe of fruites, and good ſeaſons to end their haruеſt and vintage well; but that God will nouriſh them, albeit the earth ſhould bring foorth no foode at all. And thus he commands them to depend vpon Gods helpe, and to content themſelues therewith, notwithſtanding that the barrenneſſe of the earth ſhould put them to their ſhifts.

In this ſenſe it is ſaid afterwards, Hee will make fat thy bones. He ſaith not ſ they ſhall be full fed and fat; but ſo leane, that their bones ſhall pierce the very skinne. Hee calles them bones then, who are pinched with penury and famine. In a word, ſuch as in whom there is nothing left but skinne and bones vtterlie ſhrunke vp and withered. And thus he ſignifies that the Iewes ſhould haue to wreſtle againſt famin and leannes, vntill God ſhould be pleaſed to reſtore them.

Heereunto appertaines that which hee addes touching a watered garden, and of the ſpring of waters. For Iſaiah cannot ſatisfie himſelfe in expreſſing the largeneſſe which God would powre out vpon his ſeruants, that ſo men might ſeeke the cauſes of dearth no where but in themſelues. The ſumme is, that this ſountaine of Gods bountifulneſſe ſhall neuer faile nor bee drawne dry, if ſo bee wee ſtoppe not vp the ſame by our frowardneſſe.

Verſ. 12. And they ſhall be of thee, that ſhall build the old waſte places: and thou ſhalt raiſe vp the foundations for many generations; and thou ſhalt be called the repairer of the breach, and the reſtorer of the paths to dwell in. *Or, reſtore the old deſerts.

BY deſerts, the Prophet meanes an horrible waſte which befell the Iewes at that time, when they were led captiues: for the Land became like a deſert, the cities were ruinated, the Temple was razed, the people made bondſlaues, and ſcattered into all quarters. Hee calles them deſerts, and old, becauſe they could not be ſo ſoone reedified; neither was there any hope left that the people ſhould be reſtored to their firſt eſtate. If any Citie be waſted or laid on heapes, yet as long as the inhabitants remaine there, it may in ſhort time be reſtored: but if the inhabitants which dwelt therein be dead, or haue bin carried away into a farre Country, and ſhall be long abſent, what hope is left that ſuch a Citie ſhould be new built againe? Wil it not ſeeme ſtrange if a long while after the ruine thereof, one ſhould ſay; The people which ſeemed forlorne, ſhall build and repaire it againe? Seeing this promiſe then was incredible, the Prophet meant to meete with this doubt. For they might obiect; If the Lord meant to raiſe vs to our former eſtate, why ſuffers he vs to languiſh ſo long a time? He anſwers, that the length of time ſhall not let God to raiſe vp the things againe that were fallen to the earth for many yeeres together. Now this muſt not be reſtrained to the building of the Temple begun by Zerobabel, and continued by Nehemias, Ezra.3.8. but it comprehends the reſtauration of the Church, which was effected ſome ages after. An obiection preuented.

Of thee] ſignifies that out of this people almoſt dead; ſhould come foorth ſuch as ſhould repaire theſe wofull ruines. And thus they ſhould be the Carpenters and Maſons to reedifie Ieruſalem. A little after he ſeemes to attribute to all the people that which he now restraines to some particulars, but the sense notwithstanding remaines alwaies the same. For if it be asked, Who reedified Ierusalem? Truly it was this people. But out of this infinite multitude God culled out an handfull, and cut off all the rest. Some thinke that the Cities should not be big enough to containe so many people, for which cause they should be forced to build those againe which were throwne downe before. But this seemes too farre fetched.

to

By the foundations from generation to generation, whereof he speakes in the second member, some thinke that the Prophet only repeates that which he said before, and so expound foundations of generations, because they had a long time bin ouerthrowne, in regard these buildings were forthwith to be reedified and set vp: but many impediments should come betweene that should cause the worke to cease: notwithstanding this may be referred to the time to come thus; Thou shalt reare vp the buildings which shall remaine for a long space, for he seemes to promise vnto the Church such an estate as shal continue a long while: as if he should say, other buildings stand not long, but this shall indure for many generations. If any had rather referre it to the time past, I gainsay him not.

And thou shalt be called.] The Prophet here comprehends two points. First, that the people 1 should resemble a ruinous building: Secondly, 2 that they should shortly be built againe. But he attributes to the Iewes that they shall be the repairers and directers of the paths, in regard the Lord shall vse their seruice to that end. Wee haue heere then an excellent promise, namely, that the ruins of the Church shall be gathered againe together, and repaired. Now seeing the Lord will vse our selues in this worke, let nothing hinder vs from imploying our whole seruices this way. And albeit the world resist and scorne vs as witlesse people, yet let vs be of good courage, and ouercome all these impediments. For we must be valiant and bold when we know it is the Lords worke, who hath enioined vs thus to doe.

Vers. 13. *If thou turne away thy foote from the Sabbath, from doing thy will on mine holy day, and call the Sabbath * a delite, to consecrate it as glorious to the Lord, and shalt honor him, not doing thine owne wayes, nor speaking * a vaine word.*

* Or, delites.

* Or, thy words.

SOme thinke the Prophet hath respect to the outward obseruation of the Sabbath, because it was not lawfull to trauaile on that day. Now howsoeuer I reiect not this, yet I take it that the sense hath a larger extent; for vnder the figure Synecdoche, he signifies the whole course of mans life, it being a thing well knowne to all, that by walking, our whole conuersation is vnderstood. He saith then, If thou ceasest to follow thine owne swinge: if thou shut vp all passage against thy selfe: walke not whither thy fansie leades thee, &c. For they are said to turne their feete from the Sabbath who impose not this law vpon themselues, namely, not to wander whither their vnbridled lusts would carrie them.

Now as before vnder the fast he comprehended all ceremonies, and shewed that these disguisings in which they placed their holines, were nothing but vain and vnprofitable things, so in this place he shewes wherein the true obseruation of the Sabbath consists, to the end they should not thinke it to be in the outward rest from bodily labor, but in the true renouncing of our selues, that is, in abstaining from all wickednes, violence, voluptuousnes, and euill thoughts.

First, by the word foote he meanes their works: for the Iewes durst not trauaile nor dresse any flesh vpon the Sabbath day, and yet they made no scruple at all to vex their poore neighbors, and to scorne the afflicted, notwithstãding, he comes forthwith to speake of the will, and words, that he might comprehend all the parts of that obedience which is due vnto God.

The word delights ought to be referred vnto God, and not to men. For there is nothing which pleaseth him better, or is more acceptable vnto him then the obseruation of the Sabbath, and his pure worship. He carefullie repeates that men do much ouershute themselues if they cõtemne the commandements of God, to set vp their vnprofitable workes in the stead thereof, and also admonisheth vs to suffer our selues to be gouerned by his only will.

Moreouer, he mentions some particulars, whereby he shewes that the true obseruation of the Sabbath consists in the renouncing of our selues, and in the conuersion of the whole man: and therefore he layes the will for the foundation, that from thence may flow words, and deeds, for we lightly vtter the 1 conceptions of our vnderstandings, and by our 2 words we manifest our will, then followe 3 the actions. Whosoeuer then will indeuor to serue God as he ought, he must first of necessitie whollie renounce his will and carnall reason. Hence we see wherefore the Lord so oft requires the obseruation of the Sabbath in the Scriptures: Exod. 20. 13. Doubtlesse he looked higher then to the externall ceremonie, which is this rest, in which the Iewes placed a worke of great holinesse. No, he rather meant, that hauing put off all the concupiscences of the flesh, and renounced all their inordinate affections, they should testifie their sincere obedience. For in truth, that man can neuer be said to meditate aright of the heauenly life, that is not dead both to the world and to himselfe. Now howsoeuer this ceremonie bee abolished, yet the substance remaines. For Christ is dead and risen againe, to the end we might keepe a perpetuall Sabbath; that we cease from our own workes, to suffer the Spirit of grace to worke powerfully in vs.

For a more particular explication and application of this 13. verse, see Widley vpõ the Sabbath, Lib. 2. Chap. 4. Sect. 2.

Vers. 14. Then shalt thou delight in the Lord, and I will cause thee to mount vpon vpon the high places of the earth, and feede thee with the heritage of Iaakob thy father: for the mouth of the Lord hath ſpoken it.

Then ſhalt thou delight. It ſeemes he alludes to the word delights, in the former verſe. For the word Tithannogh, which the Prophet vſeth, comes of the word Onegh, which hee vſed in verſ. 12. in ſaying, that the Lord tooke great delights in the true obſeruation of the Sabbath. In a word, his meaning is, that the people receiued no delight from God, becauſe they prouoked him to anger, & would not obey his will. For if wee ſquare our liues according to the rules of Gods Law, wee ſhall be his delights, and hee ſhall be our ioy and contentment. He teſtifies then that the Iewes are the cauſe themſelues that God takes no more pleaſure in them: alſo that their owne liues are ſo comfortleſſe. By this then hee priuily reproacheth the Iewes, namely, that through their owne folly, they haue drawne downe ſo many calamities vpon them.

Afterwards he addes, that they ſhall mount vpon the high places of the earth: thereby promiſing vnto them their returne, and a ſafe abode in their Country: for we know that Iudeah was ſituated on high, aboue the regions round about: and that Babylon was ſeated lower, ſo as the people was hid there, as within a caue. And yet hee ſhewes more plainly, what he meant by this word to mount: for hee promiſeth to them the poſſeſſion of that heritage which was promiſed and giuen to the Fathers, which they alſo ſhould then inioy, after that for a time they had been depriued of it.

He addes, for the mouth of the Lord hath ſpoken it; that they might know for certaine, that all theſe things ſhould take effect. But this muſt not only be vnderſtood touching theſe promiſes; but muſt alſo be referred to the former part of this Chapter. For therein hee hath ſharply cenſured the hypocrites, who thought to haue made their party good againſt God; ſhewing alſo that they were (notwithſtanding their plea) iuſtly puniſhed for their iniquities: yea, that it was in vaine for them to quarrell with God, by oppoſing their vaine and vnprofitable workes to his iuſtice. And therefore hee brings them backe to the true obſeruation of the Sabbath day, and ſhewes that all ſhall goe well with them, if they worſhip the Lord purely: and in the end concludes, that in all theſe things they had not to doe vvith a mortall man, but vvith the eternall God, vvho is the Iudge that teſtifies theſe things.

THE LIX. CHAPTER.

Verſ. 1. Behold, the Lords hand is not ſhortened, that it cannot ſaue: neither is his eare heauie, that it cannot heare.

2. But your iniquities haue ſeparated betweene you and your God, and your ſinnes haue hid his face from you, that he will not heare.

The Prophet maintaines Gods equall dealing, againſt the ſlanders of the wicked.

THis Sermon is in a manner like to the former. For after hee hath vnmasked the hypocrites, who falſly vaunted théſelues, and ſhewed that their puniſhmét is iuſt; now hee anſweres to the reſt of their obiections. The cuſtome of ſuch kind of perſons is to accuſe God either of impotencie, or of ouer great ſeueritie: and therefore he ſhewes, that neither power nor will is wanting in God, to ſaue thoſe that be his: but that it is their owne peruerſitie that hinders him from cauſing them to feele his liberalitie: and conſequently, that they did wickedly to complaine of him, in vttering ſuch ſlanders againſt him, ſeeing that themſelues rather deſerued to be accuſed.

The word Behold, hath great weight in it: for it is as much as if the Prophet in ſpeaking of a thing preſent, ſhould haue pointed it out with his finger for the greater certentie, that ſo he might at once cut off all the cauils and replies of hypocrites. Now we muſt ſupply oppoſitions in the words ſhortned and heauie: as if he ſhould ſay; The hand of the Lord vvas once ſtrong enough to ſaue his children: and once his eares vvere open to heare their praiers: and now hee is no changeling, as if his hand were maimed, or as if his eares were heauie, that he ſhould not be quicke enough of hearing. The ſum is, that men are not to charge God with mutabilitie, as if he had altered his nature; but that the whole blame reſted in themſelues, in regard that by their ſinnes they had as it were ſhut vp the paſſage againſt his bountie, and would not admit of his ſuccour. So that if themſelues had not laid impediments in the way, hee would haue cauſed them to haue felt his power and mercy, as well as their fathers in times paſt had done. And thus he drawes his argument from the perpetuall and equall conſtancie of God, whoſe grace they reiected by their ſins, and would none of his helpe.

Hence we gather that it is our ſinnes only that depriues vs of Gods fauour, and ſets him and vs at oddes. For that which the Prophet ſaid of his time, agrees to all ages: for hee maintaines Gods cauſe againſt the ſlanders of the wicked. God therefore is alwaies like himſelfe, and is neuer wearie of well doing; his power is not leſſened: but it is wee our ſelues that ſhut vp the gate againſt his grace. Doctrine.

But ſome will obiect, that God cannot bee preuented Obiect.

Obiect. Anſ.

preuented by mens deſerts: and therefore it muſt needes be that hee doe good to the vnworthy. I confeſſe this is true: but yet I ſay that mens peruerſitie ſometimes ouerflowes ſo farre, that it ſtops vp all paſſage againſt Gods benefits; no leſſe then if of ſet purpoſe we meant to driue him farre away from vs. And albeit hee neuer heares any, but with pardon; it being alſo our duties alwaies to bring with vs into his preſence requeſts touching the forgiueneſſe of our ſinnes; yet hee neuer heares the prayers of the wicked. We are not to wonder then if the Prophet accuſeth the people for hauing reiected Gods benefits by their wickednes, and for making him vnappeaſeable by their obſtinacie. To be ſhort, for making a diuorce, by which they repulſed and turned backe the ordinary courſe of Gods graces.

Verſ. 3. For your hands are defiled with blood, and your fingers with iniquitie: your lippes haue ſpoken lies, and your tongue hath murmured iniquitie.

He deſcends from the generall to particulars.

NOw he brings their workes to light, to ſtop their contendings: and that they ſhould not call into queſtion what theſe ſins were, which had made this diuiſion. He takes away from thé all excuſe then, in diſcouering vnto them theſe particular vices; as if their wicked life had been blazed in an open theater. Now he ſpeakes in the ſecond perſon, in regard that he maintaines and proſecutes the cauſe of God, whoſe aduocate he is: and therefore he ſeparates himſelfe out of the wickeds ſocietie, to whom now he will not ioyne himſelfe, although hee were not vtterly exempt from ſinne. But hee feared and honoured God notwithſtanding: and therfore had his conſcience cleare. For he which ſhal be tainted with the ſame offences, cannot freelie condemne others: neither ſhall he be fit to debate the matter, becauſe he bereaues himſelfe of his authoritie by his ſcandalous and wicked life. For we ought not to be culpable of the vices which wee reproue in others, vnleſſe we meane to make the doctrine which we teach, a matter of ſcorne and deriſion; and our ſelues to bee taken for bold and impudent fellowes. But on the other ſide, when we ſerue our God in a pure and good conſcience, then hath the doctrine which we deliuer maieſtie and power in it, and leaues the aduerſarie the more without excuſe.

He is vnfit to controle others that is guiltie himſelfe of the ſame crimes.

1 2

Now it is not to be held as a matter ſuperfluous, that he laies forth the vngracious life of this people thus, by peece meale. For men are wont to ſeeke out many ſtarting holes; neither can they be brought into any good order, vnleſſe they bee firſt brought to acknowledge their offences.

In mentioning of blood; his meaning is not that they committed open murthers; but thereby he notes out the inhumanitie, rapines, violence and outrages which the hypocriticall ſort exerciſed ouer the poore, and ſuch as were not able to reſiſt. We muſt not thinke he had to deale with notorious murtherers or theeues; but with the King and States-men; who were honoured and reſpected, in regard of their great places. Theſe are they whom he calles men of blood; in that they cruellie vexed poore innocents: and in that by force and violence they wrung vnto themſelues other mens goods.

For this cauſe in the next place, hee puts iniquitie inſtead of blood. And howſoeuer hee ſeemes to extend his ſpeech further off; yet it is but a repetition or redoubling of the words; which the Hebrewes often vſe for amplifications ſake. For he expreſſeth more by the fingers then by the hands. As if hee ſhould haue ſaid, There is not the leaſt part of your bodies which is not ſtained with extortion.

Next, hee toucheth another kind of wickedneſſe: to wit, when one of them circumuented another by ſubtilties, periuries, and treacheries. For iniquitie by which we wrong our neighbours, is fortified with crueltie or lies and deceit, as with the court gard. Now the Prophet in this place inſiſts vpon matters belonging to the ſecond table, and by the ſinnes which they had committed againſt the commandements therein contained, hee ſhewes that they were wicked perſons, and vtterly void of the true feare of God. For that barbaritie and diſloyaltie which violates humane ſocietie, meerely proceeds from the contempt of God. See here the reaſon then, why from the hands; that is to ſay, from extortions and outrages, hee deſcends to lying, wicked practiſes, periuries, and other diuelliſh ſubtilties, whereby wee circumuent our neighbours.

Iniquitie fortified by crueltie.

Violating of humane ſocietie proceeds from the contempt of God.

Verſ. 4. No man calleth for iuſtice: no man contendeth for truth: they truſt in vanitie, and ſpeake vaine things: they conceiue miſchiefe, and bring foorth iniquitie.*

* Or, crieth.

THe Prophet meant to ſay, that there was no regard of equitie or vprightnes among thé: That no man oppoſed himſelfe againſt the iniuries, which the great ones practiſed againſt the weake. And, that all licentiouſneſſe grew and increaſed, becauſe all looked through their fingers thereat, and no man did ſet his heart to maintaine iuſtice. Now it is not enough that we only abſtaine from violence our ſelues, vnleſſe as much as poſſiblie we can, we therewithall endeuour to hinder men from doing the ſame to others. Truely, who euer he bee that permits that which he may hinder; the ſame may be ſaid in a ſort to command it. For ſilence is a kind of conſent. And to this appartaines the ſecond member.

It is not enough that we abſtaine from offering violence, vnleſſe we hinder it in others.

Some take the verb Niſhpat in the paſſiue ſignification, and thinke the Prophets meaning is, That none is iudged iuſtly. For the whole State is ful of corruptions, and yet no man oppoſeth himſelfe againſt them. But the actiue ſignification agrees better, in reſpect of the anſwering of theſe two points one to another, No man calles for iuſtice: No man contends contends for truth. For whereas ſome tranſlate, No man iudgeth himſelfe in truth: it is a little too nice. Beſides, in as much as this verb, To crie, is taken, to contend; the ſcope of the text ſeemes here to runne better, No man ſets himſelfe to maintaine the right, with a loud voice freely to maintaine and defend iuſtice. In a word, to contend againſt the wicked. Vnleſſe we had rather refer this crying for iuſtice, to the miſerable, who were vniuſtly oppreſſed. As if he ſhould ſay, Theſe poore wretches held their peace, becauſe they gained nothing by their cries. But this ſenſe would be ſomewhat too harſh. Well, if ſuch as are careleſſe in defending of mans right; and ſuch as relieue not the afflicted are thus rigorouſlie condemned by the Lord: what ſhall become of vs, if our zeale in maintaining the glorie of God, prouokes vs not to crie without ceaſing againſt iniquities? if we winke at the ſcoffes wherewith the wicked deride the doctrine of ſaluation, and prophane the name of our God: or if wee ſet light by the plots wherewith they goe about to ouerthrow the Church, ſhall not our ſilence deſerue to be condemned of diſloyaltie and high treaſon? (I trow yes.) To be ſhort, Iſaiahs meaning is, that all good order falles to ruine by our fault, if we reſiſt not the wicked as much as in vs lies. Secondly, that there is an extreme confuſion, when no man ſtirres his foote to vphold iuſtice.

Note.

1

2

When he ſaith, that they truſt in vaine things; it is to ſignifie that they heaped vp multitudes of peruerſe counſels, by meanes whereof they became vtterly obſtinate. Will you ſee the height of iniquitie then? Surely wee may then be ſaid to be come vnto it, when in ſeeking out ſweete allurements heere and there, we accuſtome our ſelues with a ſetled malice to contemne God; for by ſuch meanes Satan inueigles the reprobates, till hee hath wholly bewitched them. So as hauing firſt of all ſhaken off all feare of God, they come by degrees to reiect all wholſome admonitions, and at laſt, with an inſupportable pride and ſawcineſſe to deride and ſcorne them. Becauſe arrogancie then tranſports vs, when wee oppoſe our vaine hopes againſt Gods iudgement; it is not without cauſe that our Prophet brands this truſt vnder which ſcorners hide themſelues, with a note of deſpaire. For a man may ſee well enough that the maladie is growne incurable, when the wicked make no bones to flatter themſelues in all mens ſight; and when being built as it were vpon their owne frowardneſſe, they thinke they haue licence to doe whatſoeuer they liſt.

3

The height of iniquitie.

Hee addes, that one might diſcerne a farre off, what their thoughts and maners were in their ſpeech, according to the common prouerbe; The tongue is the meſſenger of the heart. And yet this particle may be expounded two waies; either that they vttered nothing that was good, but that their tongues were framed to deceiue without ceaſing: or that their wickednеſſe brake forth into manifeſt ſwaggering. And this ſecond expoſition pleaſeth me better then the firſt.

Prouerbe.

They ſhall conceiue miſchiefe, and bring forth iniquitie.] Theſe ſimilitudes are elegant. For by them he compares the wicked to women, who nouriſh their fruit in their wombe, and afterward bring it forth. Likewiſe, hee ſaith that the wicked are like great bellied women, whileſt they are plotting their treacheries in their breaſts, euen till the full time approch, in which they muſt be deliuered; namely, as ſoone as they haue found fit opportunities. Now hee ſaith, that they conceiue hurtfull counſels, to the end they may afterward oppreſſe the innocent without cauſe. As if hee ſhould ſay; They plot their miſchiefes long afore hand, and are alwaies readie to execute ſome outrage: for they ceaſe not heere and there to ſearch out cloſe conueiances to trouble ſuch as onely deſire to bee at peace.

Simile.

Verſ. 5. They hatch Cockatrice egges, and weaue the ſpiders webbe: he that eateth of their egges, dieth, and that which is troden vpon, breaketh forth into a Serpent.

THe Prophet paſſeth on further, comparing the Iewes not onely to women, but alſo to venomous beaſts; the better to ſignifie, that whatſoeuer proceeded from them, was dangerous and deadly. Firſt then hee ſaith that they hatched Cockatrice egges. As a Viper then cannot but hatch a venomous egge; ſo were they ſo defiled and ſtuffed with iniquitie, that they brought forth nothing but poiſon.

A compariſon taken from venomous beaſts.

Simile.

By the Spiders vvebbe, he meanes that they were ſo fruitleſſe and emptie of goodneſſe, that by the onely appearance of goodneſſe, they beguiled euery one. And thus he paints out the wicked with two colours as it were: Firſt, that all their works manifeſted the corruption of their nature. Secondly, that they were profitable for nothing, neither were they readie to ſhew themſelues louing, amiable, charitable, and faithfull to thoſe with whom they conuerſed. I am not ignorant that this place is otherwiſe expounded by ſome, namely, that whileſt the wicked are weauing the webbe of other mens deſtruction, they ouerthrow themſelues; and thinking themſelues very wiſe, doe notwithſtanding plot their deuices in vaine. And thus are caught in their own nets, and fall into the pit which they digged for others: Pſal. 7. & 9. But mee thinks the Prophet meant to expreſſe that which I haue touched, to wit, that the wicked alwaies, euery vvhere, and in all things, are miſchieuous, and neuer profitable to any. Whoſoeuer ſhall haue to doe with them, ſhall taſte their venome, and that they ſting to death. Hereunto belongs that which hee ſaith, namely, that deadly poiſon is in their egges, and that if one doe but tread vpon them, a Serpent by and by iſſueth forth.

Verſ. 6. Their webbes ſhall be no garment, neither ſhall they couer themſelues with with their labours: for their workes are workes of iniquitie; and the worke of crueltie is in their hands.

A repetition and confirmation of the former similitude.

HEe both repeates and confirmes one and the same thing, namely, that they euermore are hurtfull to mankind, whatsoeuer they enterprize or execute: because of set purpose they haue all duties of charitie in abomination. Heere then is a signe of a nature wonderfully corrupted, namely, to be so wholly giuen vp to commit euill, that no hope is left of reaping any fruit from their life, who desire to be vtterly void and stripped of all iustice. Others expound; that they striue to get riches, and to be aduanced to honors: but all to no purpose. Yet I had rather plainly expound it thus; that none of them should cover himselfe with his workes, because his webbe is altogether composed of rotten and vnserviceable stuffe.

Now hee repeates one and the same thing in diuers phrases of speech, to shew that their workes should be vtterly fruitlesse. Wee are borne to doe our neighbours good, according to our power, and to be doing of somewhat that may serue for the common good. These are wild beasts then, and not worthy the names of men; seeing they are so industrious to hurt, and so prouident, as to do nothing that is of any worth. Last of all, without any figure, hee addes, that they are giuen and as it were, dedicated vnto iniquitie.

Vers. 7. Their feete runne to euill, and they make haste to shed innocent blood: their thoghts are wicked thoughts: desolation and destruction is in their pathes.

HE here diuers waies describes vnto vs an image of an hatefull impietie. Namely, when men are so farre past grace, and destitute of all feare of God, that they rush into all kind of wickednesse, as the horse into the battell: and ouerflow in cruelties, roberies, and outrages. They runne (saith he) because they are strong and ouerbold to commit wickednesse. Now hauing spoken before of the hands and tongue, now he also addes the feete, to shew that they are their crafts Masters in all sorts of mischiefe. So as no member of their bodies was exempt from acting some iniquitie. For some vse violence, but they can restraine their tongues. Others againe who resemble a certaine rauenous bird called an Harpie, content themselues with the first pray they meete withall. The Prophet then confesseth that those of his nation were light of foote, to spoile and rob.

A bird called an Harpie.

By the word desolation, hee signifies that whersoeuer these cormorants came they fared like sauage and wild beasts, who rauin and deuoure all they meete withall, and leaue nothing remaining. So as by their terrible course, they scatter and cause all beasts to flee; which dare not come neere them. Plinie takes vp the like similitude touching Domitian, who tyranized like a cruell beast. And the same may we see to be in all these blood thirstie ones, whom all the world flees as from furious and vntamed wild beasts. And thus their waies become desolate, and solitarie, when they will suffer none to haue any fellowship with them.

Plinie. Domitian.

Vers. 8. The way of peace they know not, and there is none equitie in their goings: they haue made them crooked paths: whosoeuer goeth therein, shall not know peace.

SOme take this word peace, too nicely, for peace of conscience, in respect that the wicked are euermore vexed. But the Prophet so brings them to Gods iudgement, that yet in the meane while by transgressing the second table, he shewes that there was neither faith nor charitie in them. In a word, that they were void of affection. The way of peace (saith he) they know not. Why so? Because their wooluish minds had bereaued them of this Iustice and equitie; which two vertues vphold humane societie, and cause men to dwell quietly and friendlie one with another. For iustice and integritie nourisheth peace. But if euery one with furie rusheth violently vpon his neighbour, in offering them open wrong: there, open warre is proclaimed. For wee can by no meanes maintaine peace in the midst of vs, vnlesse euerie one in particular squares al his doings by the rules of equitie.

Iustice and integritie nourisshe peace.

He expresseth this more fully by the word iudgement. As if he should say, whersoeuer they came, they were a terror to all; because they had cast off all vprightnesse. The last member may be taken two waies, either that whosoeuer walkes in them, shall also be farre off from peace: Or, He which falles into the hands of the wicked shall feele their cruelty and murtherous minds. Both expositions may agree well, and (as I thinke) we need not much contend about it. And therefore after the Prophet hath spoken generally before, and shewed, that the fault was not in God, that the Iewes prospered no better in their enterprises; now he descends to the particulars, wherein he more fully declares how they had reuolted from God, and so made themselues vnworthie of his fauour.

Peace cannot be maintained without equity.

Obiect.

But here ariseth a difficultie, in regard that Saint Paul alleageth this place in the Epistle to the Rom. 3. 17. to condemne all flesh as vicious, corrupt, and vtterlie void of any thing that is good. But contrariwise it seemes the Prophet applies it in particular to the men of his time. But the answere is easie. For when he directs his speech to the Iewes, who were reputed as pettie Saints in respect of others, of necessitie the Gentiles must all come within this rancke. If any obiect, that the Gentiles in liuing iustly were a law vnto themselues, and that their vncircumcision is counted to them for vncircumcision.

Ans.

Obiect.

Rom. 2.

Anſ. Rom.2.26. I anſwer, that the Prophet brings God in complaining of all ſuch as were not regenerated by his holy ſpirit. And thus none can be exempt, if he be conſidered of in his owne nature. And yet the Prophet exempts himſelfe out of this number, in regard he was regenerated and gouerned by the Spirit of God. S. Paul therefore hath alleaged this ſentence to very good purpoſe when he minded to ſhew what men are, being forſaken of God, and are led by the light of their owne nature. I grant that the perueriſitie of men breakes not alwaies foorth into open ſinnes. Well, our Prophets meaning is to reproue the corruptions of thoſe times wherein iniquities were growne to ſuch an height, that one might well diſcerne as in a glaſſe how (lothſome a ſinke and) bottomleſſe gulph of all abominations mans nature is. In the meane while there is no doubt but this Sermon ſtung the Iewes to the very quick, in regard they were puffed vp with a vaine conceit of their race forſooth; but in as much as the ſpirit of God ſpared not them, the reſt of the nations who were no leſſe corrupted by nature, had no reaſon at all to wallow themſelues in their pleaſures.

Verſ.9. Therefore is iudgement farre from vs; neither doth iuſtice come neere vnto vs: we wait for light, but loe, it is darknes: for brightnes, but we walke in darknes.

Why is the liuing man ſorrowfull? man ſuffers for his ſinne. *Lam.*3.39. HAuing ſhewed how much the eſtate of this people was peruerted and corrupted, he therewithall teacheth that they are iuſtly corrected thus ſeuerely, to the end they ſhould take vp no complaints, as if they were more hardly dealt withall then there was cauſe. He hath by peecemeale then deciphered out their open and knowne corruptions, that they might acknowledge how many waies they were guiltie before God: and now he puts them in minde that it was no wonder if God caried a ſtrait hand ouer ſuch obſtinate ſpirits, in handling them according to their deſerts. Now he ſaith, that iudgement was farre off, in reſpect that they were the only miſerable people in the world, and had not God their protector, as at other times. He takes iudgement & iuſtice for Gods particular care and ſafegard ouer vs, namely, when he expreſſeth ſo much by the effects. By Iuſtice, he meanes Gods protection, by Iudgement, the vengeance which he executes vpon ſuch as offer any violence againſt vs. But here he affirmes, that God hath no more care ouer his people, and that he hath withheld his aid and ſuccor from them, becauſe they were vnworthie thereof. We are alſo to note this particle therefore, for thence it followes, that they were not to murmure againſt God, as if he kept no meaſure in his corrections, ſeeing they had ſo often abuſed his Maieſtie.

Hereunto appertains that which he addes, namely, that a perpetuall darknes enuironed them, who waited for light. This metaphor ſhewes, that they were almoſt conſumed in their miſeries, and were then fruſtrated of their hopes, whileſt they promiſed vnto themſelues ſome releaſe. By light, is meant a proſperous eſtate, as on the contrarie, by darknes, a ſtate vnhappie, as is well enough knowne in diuers places before. His meaning is then, that it was in vaine for them to expect better fortunes, becauſe he would haue this people learne to impute theſe calamities to their owne deſerts, and not to imagin either that they came by chance, or that the Lord handled them too ſharply, for his whole ſcope and drift is to bring them to the doctrine of repentance.

Verſ. 10. Wee grope for the wall like the blinde, and wee grope as one without eies: wee ſtumble at the noone day as in the twilight: we are in ſolitarie places, as dead men.

One and the ſame thing expreſſed, vnder diuers maners of ſpeech. BY varietie of phraſes he expreſſeth one and the ſame thing. For in regard many complaints would be heard to paſſe from this people, he would omit nothing that might ſerue to lay forth their wofull calamities. It may be he vtters theſe things, as if he conſented with them, that they were ſo indeed; as if he meant to ſay, Our matters are brought into wonderfull ſtraits: but wee are aboue all things to conſider the cauſe thereof, ſeeing wee haue deſerued to be handled with much more ſeueritie. And yet the ſenſe will not ſute amiſſe if we ſay, That the drouzie are here awaked, to bethinke them of their miſeries: for, howſoeuer they were but too forward in making their complaints, yet Satan benumned their ſenſes, leſt the ſignes of Gods wrath ſhould ſolicite them to repentance.

Now he alludes to that ſimilitude which he mentioned in the former verſe, where he ſaid, that the people were in darknes and obſcuritie, without any hope of getting out. Here he ſignifies that they were deſtitute of counſell, and ſo preſſed with anguith, that no refuge nor remedie at all appeared vnto thē. When ſome light affliction befalles vs we looke this way and that way, and haue hope of ſome iſſue: but in great extremities we are able to diſcerne nothing, in regard of deſpaire which hath ſurprized vs: for this cauſe the Prophet ſaith, that being intangled in a maze of perplexities, they groped.

We ſtumble.] This phraſe of ſpeech tends to the ſame end, and hath alſo greater weight in it, namely, that if they ſet but one foote forward, ſo many impediments preſented themſelues on all ſides, that they could finde no more releaſe, then if the day had bin conuerted into the night. By ſolitarie places, I vnderſtand deepe gulphes, or deſert and barren lands. For in this place I allow S. Ieroms reading, who deriues theſe words ſolitarie places, from the verb Aſham, which ſignifies as much as to be horriblie deſtroyed and deſolated. S. Ierome.

The Rabbins who will needs draw it from Shamen, which ſignifies, to be fat, argue chil- Rabbins.

diſhly, as I thinke, neither do they alleage any thing that makes to the purpoſe. For by ſolitarie places they thinke men are vnderſtood, becauſe Shemmen ſignifies anointment, and thus iudge, that the Gentiles are noted out in theſe words. But the Prophets true meaning is, that the Iewes were brought into ſolitarie places, that being baniſhed from the ſocietie of men, they might reſemble the dead, and might bee left without any hope of deliuerance.

Verſ. 11. We roare all like beares, and mourne like doues; wee looke for *equitie, but there is none; for health, but it is far from vs.

*Or, iudgement. *Or, ſaluation.

HEe notes two ſorts of men that cannot beare their miſeries with patience, but they muſt diſcouer them by outward teſtimonies. For ý firſt cry very loud like beares; & the other mourne like doues. He vſed this latter ſimilitude in Chap. 38. 14. where he deſcribed the ſighings of Hezekiah. And this happens at ſuch times as wee would faine repreſſe our ſorrowes, and yet wee cannot ſo reſtraine them, but whether we will or no ſome ſignes thereof will breake forth outwardly. The ſumme is, that one while the weight of their miſeries extorted from them loud cries; another while they were ouercome with groues, and broken ſighings: but neither their roarings nor mourings, brought them any releaſe, becauſe their eſtate was not changed for the better.

1
2

For this cauſe he repeates it once againe, that they waited in vaine for iudgement and ſaluation: whereby he meanes that the people were depriued of that ſuccour from God, which aboue all things they wiſhed and longed for. And he hath vſed the word ſaluation, the better and the more fully to expreſſe what hee meant before in verſ. 9. by iuſtice; and heere, by iudgement. Hence let vs gather, that we are miſerable through our own faule, and that wee wither and waſte away in our miſeries, till wee be conuerted to our God. Wee may well roare and mourne; but without repentance our ſorrowes ſhall receiue no reliefe. Our miſeries then cannot ceaſe, as long as we prouoke the Lord to anger, nor till we indeuor with our whole hearts to be reconciled vnto him.

No ſaluation without conuerſion.

*Or, multiplied.

Verſ. 12. For our treſpaſſes are *many before thee, and our ſinnes teſtifie againſt vs: for our treſpaſſes are with vs, and we know our iniquities.

A confirmation of the former ſentence.

HE confirmes his former ſpeech, namely, that the people did ill in accuſing God of cruelty, and that they did not rather acknowledge that they receiued the iuſt recompence of their ſinnes, the heapes whereof reached vp to the heauens. And in this ſenſe it is that the Prophet ſaith, they were multiplied. Alſo this particle before thee, hath great weight: for the Prophet deſcends into himſelfe, and acknowledgeth the iuſt iudgement of God, which was hidden from mens eies. His meaning is then to note out a cloſe oppoſition, which is betweene mens iudgement & Gods. Men flatter themſelues, and thinke not of their ſinnes; but God who is the Iudge, leaues not to condemne them for all that, neither cares hee for all the vaine and idle excuſes, wherewith they would faine daube them ouer. And therefore he contents not himſelfe ſimply to condemne this people, but he adds, that they had multiplied their iniquities: that is to ſay, they were guilty before God many waies. He acknowledgeth then that God is iuſt, and executes the office of a good Iudge, ſeeing among men there is not to bee found ſo much as a droppe or graine of iuſtice or equitie. And therefore it is he adds, that it was not needfull to cite any witneſſes, nor to bring them from the Court of heauen, becauſe the Iewes were ſufficiently conuinced and condemned by the teſtimonie of their owne conſciences. This manner of ſpeech therefore ought to be well obſerued; for it ſhewes that God hath no great neede of proofes, ſeeing our ſinnes hold vs ſufficiently conuicted. We haue no reaſon then to contend with God, as if he puniſhed vs wrongfully, or as if he chaſtiſed vs too ſeuerely: for our owne iniquities teſtifie plainly enough againſt vs, whoſe euer we are, neither hath God needs to ſeeke out for any other witneſſes. Verſ. 4.

With vs.] Others tranſlate, Vpon vs: but I had rather keepe the proprietie of the word. Men make many turnings, and tranſforme themſelues into many ſhapes, that they might be taken for iuſt: but all in vaine, becauſe they beare their iniquities about with them in their boſomes, from which they cannot flee. As alſo when God condemned Cain, he pronounced that his ſinne plaid the watchman at the doore. So, hee that deſpiſeth Gods iuſt iudgement, ſhall vex himſelfe in vaine, if he thinks to eſcape by rebellion. Cain.

When hee ſaith, the Iewes knew their ſinnes; he meanes not that they were truly touched with them in their hearts, for then repentance would haue followed: but hee ſhewes, that albeit they ſtroue to flee the iudgement of God, yet the teſtimonie of their owne conſcience kept them impriſoned, and confined them in ſuch wiſe, that they loſt their labour to frame or forge excuſes. Now whereas hee ſpeakes in the firſt perſon, putting himſelfe alſo in the ranke, it is a thing very rife in the Scriptures: and yet therewithall he ſhewes, that this euill had ſo ſpread it ſelfe through the whole body, that there was no member ſound nor free. Now howſoeuer hee might for his owne particular, proteſt his vprightneſſe in the preſence of God, yet in reſpect that iniquitie had ouerflowed into all the parts of the body, he confeſſeth himſelfe to be (as it were) one of thoſe rotten members, and to be infected with the common contagion. Neither doth this any way gainſay our former aſſertion, namely, that he hath hitherunto exempted himſelfe from the common reuolt, that he might gall them the more to the quicke. Now to take away all exceptions, hee vvrappes himſelfe alſo vp in the number with them.

hee

Verſ. 13. In treſpaſſing and lying againſt the Lord, and wee haue departed away from our God, and haue ſpoken of crueltie and rebellion, conceiuing and vttering out of the heart falſe matters.

In verſe 12. the Iewes are taxed generally, here particularlie.

HEE heere reckons vp ſome particular kinds of ſinnes, that he might with the greater vehemencie prouoke the people to acknowledge their ſinnes. Now truly it is monſtrous that thoſe which were chaſtiſed, and in a maner ſhatteted to peeces by the hand of God, ſhould yet ſtand to ſet vp the creſt, and that their necke ſhould bee of ſuch an yron ſinew, as that they could neither bee bowed nor humbled by the feeling of their miſdoings. For the Lord labours to ſoften our hard hearts by his roddes and ſtripes. But when chaſtiſements profit vs nothing, wee may then be ſaid to bee growne paſt recouerie. Iſaiah inſiſts long vpon this point, namely, to ſhew how woful ſtate of this people was, who albeit they were almoſt ground to powder, yet did they ſtil grudge againſt God, and could not endure to be brought vnder ſubiection. He therefore often repeates this admonition, and ſtands the more vehemently vpon it, that he might tame the rebellion of this people.

He alſo taxeth their iniquities with many words, and ſingles them out one from another, hauing ſhewed before generally what ſinnes reigned euery where amongſt them. Neither doth he reprooue any pettie offences, or of a ſmall handfull of people, but rather a generall reuolt. For by this verſe hee giues vs to vnderſtand that they were ſo corrupted, that there was not one dram of faith, integritie feare, or conſcience in them. For what is it to lie againſt God, but wickedly to departaway from him, as if they plaid the flat rebels? He not onely reprocheth them then with the breach of one or two commandements of the law, but ſaith, that they renounced God, and reuolted from him, leſt they ſhould come at his call.

In the next place he ſaith, that they were giuen to forge vvicked matters, and that they were wholly ſtained with falſehood. For it is much more deteſtable to vtter falſe matters out of the heart then to be ſuddenly ouertaken vvith a lie, yea or to deceiue vpon the inſtant. In the meane while theſe rebukes no doubt cut the very hearts of the Iewes, who were readie to braſt with pride; taking themſelues to be exceeding holy men. But hypocriſie muſt bee thus dealt withall; becauſe a plaine admonition in ſuch a caſe would haue done little good. By this example then al Paſtors when they ſee the Church of God corrupt, and men to pleaſe themſelues in themſelues, & to lie rotting in their dung; thus muſt they oppoſe themſelues, and crie ſharply and ſhrillie againſt the ſame.

Verſ. 14. Therefore iudgement is turned backward, and iuſtice ſtandeth a far off: for truth is fallen in the * ſtreet, and equitie cannot enter. * Or, place.

THoſe are deceiued who thinke he returns to his firſt ſpeech, in verſ. 9, as if he now ſpake of the puniſhments which the people had felt from Gods hand. For he ſtill proſecutes his former diſcourſe; and diſcouers the corrupt diſeaſes of the people: to teſtifie vnto all that they were iuſtly puniſhed. But this verſe we muſt thus diſtinguiſh frō the ninth, where he ſaid, That iudgement vvas gone farre off. For in that place hee pronounced that the Iewes were depriued of Gods helpe, in regard they had made themſelues vnworthie that hee ſhould be any longer a defender of their cauſe. But here he ſaith that iudgement vvas turned backward; becauſe they had ouerturned all iuſtice and equitie amongſt themſelues. They receiued then a recompence according to their deſerts, when Gods iuſtice ſtood a farre off, and appeared not for their helpe; ſeeing they had baniſht iudgement and iuſtice farre away from them. For we doe but loſe our time, to expect that from God, which wee haue denied vnto others, and haue caſt behind our backes.

The former diſcourſe ſtill proſecuted in this, and in verſe 15.

In the place.] That is to ſay, in the publike aſſemblie. For his meaning is to ſpeake of thoſe places where they held their courts. And thus hee ſignifies, that corruptions had not onely ſeazed vpon ſome priuate perſons, but that the whole eſtate of the people was ſo depraued, that there was nothing ſound amongſt them. If any vices raigne among the common people, there may ſome good order be taken to remedie the ſame as long as iuſtice hath place: but if the iudgement ſeates themſelues be ouerturned or corrupted, then it muſt needes be that all things are infected with an vniuerſall contagion. Hee alſo bewrayes their vnbridled libertie, in that they were not aſhamed to doe euill in publicke places, and that they neither fled from the light, nor from the eies of men.

Where iudgement ſeates are corrupted, there the contagion of ſinne is vniuerſally ouerſpread.

Verſ. 15. Yea truth faileth, and hee that refraineth himſelfe from euill maketh himſelfe a pray: and when the Lord ſaw it, it diſpleaſed him, that there was no iudgement.

BY this it ſufficiently appeares, that Iſaiah ſpake not in the former verſe of the puniſhments which the people ſuſtained: For he proſecutes the very ſame diſcourſe with the former: and ſhewes that the people had no cauſe to complaine of the rigor of their chaſtiſments, ſeeing they had ſo groſely offended and prouoked the Lord. Hee confirmes his former ſpeech then: namely, that truth was fallen, iuſtice had no more place: and here he amplifies the ſame further, in adding that he which refrained himſelfe from euill, made himſelfe a pray. The moſt of the expoſitors among the Hebrewes reade this part of the verse with a breath, thus; Truth is fallen, and was made a pray, in refraining it selfe from euill. But I see no reason why they haue accepted of this sense. Saint Ieroms exposition (which I also haue followed) is much better, and more agreeable. This phrase of speech is very frequent in Scriptures, as wee see in Iob 1.1. of whom it is said, that he was an vpright and iust man, fearing God, and eschewing euill. Salomon also saith, Prou.14,16. That a foole rageth; but the wise man feareth; and departeth from euill. Well, the Prophets meaning is, that all honest courses were so hated and abhorred, that the small remnant of the faithfull could not liue in safetie. As if he should say, Whosoeuer meane in these times to haue societie with men, must of necessitie be as wicked as they: according to the old prouerbe; Hee must howle amongst vvolues: but he that will refraine from euill, shall be deuoured of the wolues like a poore sheepe. Truly hee heere expresseth the height of impietie: for he shewes that truth vvas so fallen, that no honest man durst conuerse amongst them. Why so? Because whosoeuer refrained himselfe from euill, did by and by fall into the iawes of Lions.

A confirmation and amplification of the former ſentence.

S. Ierom.

Prouerbe.

The height of iniquitie.

And the Lord saw it.] This tends to the consolation of this people: for his meaning is, that notwithstanding this peoples obstinacie wich in a manner seemed irremissible, yet God would tender their welfare. And howsoeuer for a time he had seuerely punished them, yet would he at last thinke vpon his couenant: so as in curing their euils, hee would restore vnto them incredible comfort. He speakes heere of the time to come, and promiseth that a day will come after all these calamities, that God would send some reliefe to the remnant of his inheritance: for the Iewes had been left destitute of all hope, if the Lord had not added this consolation.

Aconsolatiõ.

Take a view heere then after what sort men are wont to plunge themselues into contrarie vices. Are they reproued? then either they grow stubburne, or being surprized with terrors, they fall into despaire. We are therefore carefully to obserue our Prophets course which he heere takes: for in the first place it was needfull that the Iewes should be sharply rebuked, that so being touched and humbled by repentance, they might cease to murmure or repine against God. In the second place he promiseth them a moderation of their chastisements, with hope of deliuerance, that they should not faint, but wait for the Lords helpe, who neuer suffers his Church to perish: for he so corrects his chosen for a time, that hee will neither forsake, nor vtterly consume them.

1

2

If any had rather restraine this discontent and displeasure of God to his iudgements, in regard that hee iustly condemned and abhorred this wicked people; I gainsay him not. As if hee should haue said; God saw nothing in this people but matter of hatred: whence it followes, that he had no other motiue to send them reliefe, but onely because hee saw that things were brought to vtter ruine.

Verse. 16. And when hee saw that there was no man, hee wondered that none would offer himselfe. Therefore his arme did saue it, and his righteousnesse it selfe did sustaine it.

THe Prophet prosecutes the same argument still: but hee laies that out more at large now, which he briefly touched before. For that which hee said in the former verse, might peraduenture seeme obscure, namely, that it displeased the Lord, because there vvas no iudgement. In this place then hee repeates, that the Lord saw there was no man that would succour the Church, and he wondered at it. He vseth a verbe which signifies, that the Lord tooke vp an occasion of wonderment. As if he should say; He stood as one amazed. Some translate the word Mephgia, Intercessor: but I thinke the sense is, that no man presented himselfe to set the things in order, that were confused; there vvas no Physition that vvould put to his hand to prescribe a remedie for this sicknesse, and therefore the Lord vvondered. But it is easie to iudge why he attributes this astonishment vnto God: for by this reproch, he meant to shame the Iewes, that so (according to their custome) they might not seeke out pretences to couer their sinnes withall.

The same argument prosecuted.

Now in regard it was a thing incredible or rather monstrous, that amongst the holy and elect people there was not a man to be found that would oppose himselfe against iniustice, he brings in God as one astonied at so rare a matter, that by meanes hereof they might be brought at last to wonder and blush at their owne hypocrisie. For might they not worthily be taxed of detestable obstinacie if they would not blush at that which draue the Lord into this admiration, and that by reason of their stubbornnes? And therewithal he taxeth their hypocrisie, in that they made shew of hauing pietie and holines in great estimation, and yet when God came to make a diligent search, there was not a iust man to be found amongst them.

Moreouer, by this text he magnifies and extols the greatnes of Gods mercie, in that he vouchsafes to pull out a people as out of the bottome of hell, that were in such a pitifull plight. For no doubt but the Iewes by these words were admonished by what means they were to expect their deliuerance, namely, euen because the Lord was willing by a miracle to saue this forelorne people. Now this word to vvonder, sets forth Gods fatherly care. Sure it is that there are no such affections in God, namely, that he should be astonied at new and vnwonted accidents, as if they were strange to him. But herein he rather applies himselfe to our capacities, that being touched to the quick with the sense of our miseries, we might be brought to abhorre our wofull condition.

God is not subiect to humane passions.

When he saith then that the Lord saw, it is to signifie, that there is no reliefe to bee found in our industries: and when he vvonders, it telles vs that we are more then blockish kiſh and ſenſeleſſe; in regard that we neither know nor regard the miſeries we are in. And yet that our careleſnes hinders not the Lord from working ſaluation of his Church.

1
2

We muſt not deſpaire though mans helpe faile vs.

So his arme brought ſaluation.] In theſe words he ſhewes that we are not to deſpaire, albeit the helpe of man doe faile vs. Nay, all aides whatſoeuer being aboliſhed, the Prophet attributes the beginning and end of his nations ſaluation, yea, of all mankind, to the free goodneſſe, and onely power of God. Euen as then in affirming that God is powerfull enough; yea, almightie to deliuer the Iewes, he therefore reacheth out his hand to the weake: ſo in telling vs that we cannot ſo much as ſtir a finger towards the procuring of our owne ſaluation, he thereby caſteth to the ground all high imaginations, that ſo being ſtripped of all confidence in our workes, we might the more freely draw neere vnto God.

1

2

We muſt not onely marke what the Prophets ſay; but alſo obſerue their ſcope and drift.

This is the Prophets meaning: and I would haue it well obſerued. For in reading the bookes of the Apoſtles and Prophets, we muſt not onelie marke what they ſay, but why and wherefore they haue ſaid this or that. In this place then we are principallie to conſider whereat the Propher aimes, namely, to ſignifie, that God is of ſufficient power in himſelfe to accompliſh the worke of our ſaluation, that our eies might be kept from wandring here and there; becauſe our minds are too much tied to outward meanes. What then? but that wee repoſe the whole hope of our ſaluation in the arme of the Lord: and the true reſtauration of the Church in his righteouſneſſe. Bee it therefore knowne, that ſuch erre groſely, who place it in any thing elſe, ſeeing God borrowes nothing out of himſelfe.

The vſe of this doctrine.

The vſe and profit of this [illegible] extends it ſelfe euen vnto vs. For albeit all helpes do ſometimes faile vs, yet will the Lord find ſufficient ſuccour for vs in his arme and power. As oft then as outward meanes doe faile vs, and that wee bee ouerwhelmed with all ſorts of miſeries, perceiuing nothing but preſent death before our eies: let vs haue our refuge to this doctrine: and let vs bee well aſſured that God is ſtrong enough to protect vs: and ſeeing he ſtands not in need of any mans helpe, let vs learne to reſt our ſelues boldly vpon his aſſiſtance. But yet we muſt herewithall retaine the generall doctrine. To wit, that the deliuerance of the Church is a worke and benefit which onely belongs to the wonderfull power of God: that ſo wee may neuer attribute any thing either to the ſtrength or induſtrie of man. We ought alſo to abhorre their pride who wreſt and wring part of this praiſe vnto themſelues, which whollie belongs vnto God: ſeeing in him alone conſiſts the cauſe and effect of our ſaluation.

Note.

The Churches deliuerance a benefit proceeding from Gods wonderfull power.

Arme here ſignifies his power and might: Righteouſneſſe, that equitie which he vſeth in procuring the ſaluation of his choſen when he becomes their protector, and deliuers them from death. Whereas he ſaith, that his owne arme obtained ſaluation: it muſt not be referred vnto God, neither muſt we reade it as if God had ſaued himſelfe: but it is to bee referred to the ſaluation of the Church which hee deliuered out of the hands of her enemies.

Verſ. 17. For he put on righteouſnes, as an habergeon, and an helmet of ſaluation on his head, and hee put on the garments of vengeance for clothing, and was cladwith zeale as with a cloake.

If God put himſelfe in armes to fight, he muſt needs carrie away the victorie.

THe Prophet armes the Lord at all points; not onely to confirme the faith of the godlie, but alſo to ſtrip all men of all confidence in their owne vertue. For the ſumme comes to this, that nothing ſhall be wanting vnto God, neither for diſcomfiting, nor for bearing away the victorie ouer his enemies. Why ſo? Becauſe that of his righteouſneſſe, power, grace, and exceeding affection towards his Church, he will make armour of proofe. And this we are to note with no leſſe diligence, then the doctrine of the former verſe. For albeit we confeſſe that God is almightie, yet doth not that ſatisfie vs, but wee will bee ſeeking out of other helpes. Our minds are alwaies giuen to infidelitie, ſo as they are wonderfully hampered, and glued faſt to outward meanes. To correct this vice our Prophet ſets before vs this liuely deſcription. As if he ſhould ſay, know ye that God hath all the ſafegards of your ſaluation readie, ſo that nothing ſhall bee wanting vnto him for your deliuerance, and for your returne home againe: doe your enemies what they can. There is no neede then why you ſhould tremble at all. Beſides, wee are verie eaſilie carried away to thinke, that wee bring ſome of our owne vnto God. And thus wee attribute part of his praiſe to our ſelues, which ſhould wholly be reſerued vnto him.

Whereas hee clothes the Lord with vengeance and indignation as a cloke; it appertaines vnto the enemies againſt whom God riſeth vp in wrath, for the zeale hee beares to his people. The more then that Satan indeuors, and with might and maine plots our ouerthrow, the more will the zeale of the Lord of hoſtes bee inflamed, and will ariſe with his admirable and omnipotent power to releeue vs. Although this worrier of mankind then, and all the reprobates with him ceaſe not day nor night how to oppoſe all the impediments they can, to hinder our ſaluation, yea, and that they breake forth into open rage to roote vs out; yet will our God ſcatter all their plots by his onely power.

Verſ. 18. As to make recompence, as to requite the furie of the aduerſaries, with a recompence to his enemies: hee will fully repay the Ilands.

A confirmation of the former concluſion.

HEe confirmes the concluſion of the former verſe. For heere hee ſhewes, what that vengeance is, wherewith hee clothed the Lord,

Lord, namely, that he is readie to render the like vnto his enemies. But the reason why the Prophet armes the Lord thus readie with indignation to execute his vengeance, is to be noted, to wit, because the deliuerance of his Church is ioined with the ruine of the wicked. It is needfull therefore that God should be armed to meete those enemies which would worke our destruction.

Vse. Hence let vs consider how infinite that loue of God towards vs is when he beares vs such an affection, as to hate those that hate vs, and to protest that he will requite the furie of our aduersaries. So exceedinglie doth he loue his little flock, that he esteemes it more then all the world besides. This is the cause then wherefore he testifies that he will repay the Ilands, that is to say, the nations beyond the seas farre remote from them: for, for the deliuerance of his people he ouerthrew such mightie Monarks as seemed inuincible.

Vers. 19. So shall they feare the name of the Lord from the West, and his glorie from the rising of the Sunne: for the enemie shall come as a flood, but the spirit of the Lord shall chase him away.

God will make the Churches deliuerance glorious in the sight of the whole world. NOw hee testifies that this deliuerance shall bee so glorious and magnificent, that all the world shall wonder thereat, and shall speake honourably of it: and afterwards, being smitten with astonishment, shall giue glory vnto God. But it is vncertaine whether he means this of the conuersion of the Gentiles, or of the terrour by which the Lord would bring downe his enemies. For mine owne part, I rather incline to the first exposition, namely, that so the vtmost parts of the earth, Gods name shall be glorious and fully renowned: so as the Gentiles shall not onely bee amazed, but shall also worship and serue him in true repentance.

The expositors agree not about the rendring of the cause which followes. But the true sense, as I suppose, is, That the violence of the enemie shall be so great, that as a flood spoiles and carries all away before it with the force thereof, so shall he seeme to teare vp, and beare away: But the Lord will forthwith cause him to recoile and to vanish away. It is an amplification then of Gods power, who in an instant breakes in sunder all the terrible power and furious rage of his enemies, so as their violence being turned backward, it falles to nothing.

Quest. Ans. But some may aske, of what deliuerance the Prophet here speakes. I answer, as I haue done in another place, that these promises must not be restrained (as they are wont to be) to one deliuerance only. For the Iewes referre it to the deliuerance out of Babylon, and the Christians only to Christ. Now I ioine them both together, that so we may comprehend the whole time frō the peoples returne, with that which followed vnto the comming of Christ: for this prophesie was neuer fulfilled, but in him; neither can that which is here said agree to any other then to him only, because Gods glorie was not manifested before to all the world, nor the enemie so put to flight, that they gathered not their forces together againe, vntill Christ came and triumphed admirablie, hauing obteined conquest ouer Satan, sinne, & death.

Vers. 20. And the redeemer shall come vnto Zion, and vnto them that turne from iniquitie in Iaakob, saith the Lord.

A second confirmation touching the redemption of the Church. HE againe confirmes that which he said before, namely, that the people should be deliuered, and that God would be the only author of so great a benefit. For this cause then he bids the people to be of good comfort in this exile, in regard it should not be perpetuall: afterwards he placeth the hope of their deliuerance in God only, to the end their thoughts might not rest in any thing but vpon the promises.

Vnder the word Zion, he meanes (as heretofore) the prisoners, and banished: for albeit they were scattered farre off from their countrie, yet was the Temple still to remaine planted as it were in their hearts. But lest the bastard children of Abraham should indifferentlie applie this vnto themselues with the heires of promise, he forthwith shewes who they be to whom this deliuerance shall come, namely, to such as shall be truly conuerted vnto the Lord. And yet it is very certaine that many returned from Babylon into Iudeah, which were not touched with any repentance at all; who neuertheless had their part in this benefit: but the Prophet speakes of that full redemption, which is onely proper vnto the elect. For howsoeuer the externall fruit of the deliuerance redounded to the hypocrites; yet imbraced they not this benefit of God to their saluation. The Prophet meant to say then, that the punishment of their banishment should haue fruit, to the end that the Lord hauing purged his Church from her filthinesse & corruptions, he might againe gather together her dissipations. We must also euer beare in mind that which I haue heeretofore touched, in respect of the diminution of this people. Thus then our Prophet exhorts the elect to the feare of God, that so they might make benefit of the stripes which they receiued.

To whom this deliuerance appertaines.

No reconciliation without conuersion. Hence let vs gather, that we can not be reconciled vnto God by the blood of Iesus Christ, vnlesse we be first of all thorowly displeased with our selues for displeasing of him. Not that our saluation depends vpon our repentance, seeing that is grounded vpon the remission of sinnes. But the hatred of euill, and the loue of good, is so conioined therewith, that they can not be separate. For those whom the Lord receiues into fauour, are in such wise regenerated by the holy Ghost, that they abhorre their vices, and change their course of life.

Conuersion deserues not remission of sinnes.

Papists confound repentance and remission of sinnes together. The Papists vtterly ouerthrow the whole doctrine of saluation, in mingling and confounding repentance and remission of sinnes together: neither are they of the ignorant sort ſort only that do this, but thoſe alſo who will be reputed the moſt ingenious amongſt thé. They confeſſe indeed that a man is iuſtified freely by Chriſt: but they adde, it is becauſe we are renued by him. And thus they tie one part of their righteouſnes to the remiſſion of ſinnes, and another part to repentance. But in this doing our conſciences ſhall neuer be at reſt, becauſe we are alwaies farre off from being perfectlie regenerated. We muſt therfore diſtinguiſh theſe things without ſeparating or confounding them together, and ſo hold faſt the foundation of our ſaluation.

1 2

They muſt be diſtinguiſhed, not ſeparated.

S. Paul alleageth this place, to ſhew, that there yet remaines ſome hope of ſaluation for the Iewes, howſoeuer by their vntamed obſtinacie wee might gather, that they were vtterly reiected, and iudged to eternal death: Rom. 11. 26. But in regard that God alwaies remembers his couenant, and that his gifts and calling are without repentance, Rom. 11. 29. Saint Paul aptly concludes it to be impoſſible, that ſome remnant ſhould not at laſt bee gathered vnto Chriſt, to inioy that ſaluation which he hath purchaſed. The Iews in the end muſt be gathered in with the Gentiles, that both peoples may make one fold vnder Chriſt. But yet the Prophet ſpeakes heere (may ſome ſay) of the deliuerance from Babylon. I grant it: notwithſtanding we haue ſaid, that vnder this hee comprehends the kingdome of Chriſt, and that ſpirituall deliuerance, to which this prophecie belongs. Thence the Apoſtle concludes, that Chriſt could not ſo be the redeemer of the world, that it ſhould not appertaine to ſome of the Iews, out of whom he had elected their fathers, and made this promiſe expreſly in fauor of them: Rom. 11. 1, 2. In the end of the verſe, the ratification of ſo excellent a ſentence is added.

Queſt.

Anſ.

Verſ. 21. And I will make this my couenant with them, ſaith the Lord; My Spirit that is vpon thee, and my words which I haue put in thy mouth, ſhall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy ſeede, nor out of the mouth of the ſeede of thy ſeede, ſaith the Lord, from hence forth, euen for euer.

BEcauſe the doctrine before propoſed by our Prophet hitherunto was hard to bee beleeued, he labours by diuers meanes to confirme the Iewes that without wauering they might aſſuredly reſt vpon this promiſe of ſaluation: and ſhould ſo farre foorth honour the Lord, as to ſtay vpon his word. This word couenant is diligently to be noted. For thereby the Prophet ſets forth the greatnes and excellencie of this promiſe. For the promiſes haue a large extent, and may bee compared to ſtones in the building; whereof the couenant is the foundation, that ſuſtaines and beares vp the whole burthen. Thus then he hath vſed this word couenant, that they ſhould not eſteeme hereof, as of ſome common matter. And hee addes this confirmation, to the end that howſoeuer this promiſe was not by and by accompliſhed; yet they ſhould hope for the ſame, euen aboue hope. And it may be, here is a cloſe oppoſition, to cauſe the faithfull with the greater alacritie to aſpire to the new couenant which ſhould bee eſtabliſhed in the hand of Chriſt.

But that which he addes afterwards ſeemes to bring but colde comfort with it, when he would haue the Church to content her ſelfe with vvords, and the Spirit. As though forſooth there were ſome great happineſſe in hanging in ſuſpence, touching the accompliſhment of Gods promiſes. But howſoeuer the Prophet hereby recommends the excellencie and worth of doctrine; yet notwithſtanding I am well aſſured that it is not ſeparated from his effect.

Obiect.

Anſ.

Now in regard that God thus orders & diſpenceth his grace, that he alwaies exerciſeth the patience of the faithfull, whileſt they liue here below; and neuer wholly ſatisfies their deſires: this is the cauſe why he brings them to the vvord. As if he ſhould ſay, Thou ſhalt truely feele that I am liberall; and that I will many waies procure thy good: but thou oughteſt not to wiſh greater happineſſe, then to feele my preſence by my word. Whence wee gather, that the greateſt treaſure the Church hath, conſiſts in this, that the Lord hath choſen her for his dwelling place, that in the hearts of the faithfull he may make his abode by his Spirit, and may conſerue the doctrine of the Goſpell among them.

The richeſt treaſure the church hath.

Laſtly, he foretels that God will neuer forſake his people, but will alwaies aſſiſt them by his vvord and ſpirit: which two are conioined together, becauſe without the efficacie of the Spirit, the word would profit nothing, but would remaine fruitleſſe. On the other ſide, wee muſt not ſeparate the one from the other, as ſome fantaſticall ſpirits dreame, who in reiecting the vvord, pretend the name of the Spirit, and are readie to burſt with a vaine confidence, which they haue conceiued in their fantaſticall imaginations: for wee muſt hold that for the ſpirit of Satan, which is ſeparated from the word of God; to which, the holy Spirit is euer more annexed. Now when he quickens the externall word, writing it in our hearts by the finger of his Spirit, then is our condition happy euen in the midſt of infinite miſeries. Neither doe I doubt but it was the expreſſe purpoſe of the Lord to ſay, that albeit God meant to deale graciouſly with his Church, yet ſhee muſt know that her life and ſaluation is hidden in him by faith. And thus the ancient people is diſcerned from the new: for as the Kingdome of Chriſt is ſpirituall; ſo from his reſurrection from the dead, the ſoules of the faithfull muſt aſcend vp on high with him.

Why the Spirit is ioined with the word.

That is to be held for the ſpirit of Satan that is ſeparated frō the word.

Now hee promiſeth that the Church ſhall neuer be depriued of this inеſtimable benefit, namely, of being gouerned by the holy Ghoſt, and ſuſtained by the heauenly doctrine: for it were to little purpoſe that the Goſpell ſhould be offered vs, and the holy Ghoſt giuen uen withall, vnleſſe they ſhould alwaies dwell and remaine with vs.

God ſpeakes vnto vs but by the mouth of his ſeruants.

When hee ſaith, in thy mouth, it is to ſhew, that the Lord ſo ſpeakes vnto vs, that in the meane while hee meanes to vſe the ſeruice and miniſtry of man. Hee might indeed if it pleaſed him, ſpeake vnto vs from heauen, or ſend his Angels from thence: onely heerein he hath reſpect to our weakeneſſe. Why ſo? Why God rather ſpeaks to vs by man, then by himſelfe. Becauſe hee would call and exhort vs by our like; that by their voice he might draw vs vnto him the more familiarly. This order therefore was by him eſtabliſhed in the Church: ſo as they who reiect his Miniſters, brag in vaine of their obedience vnto God. His meaning is then, that we ſeeke the doctrine and word of life, in the mouthes of his Prophets, and in the teachers who preach in his name, and by his commandement.

My words ſhall not depart.] Some tranſlate in the imperatiue; Let not my words depart: and ſo the future tence is often taken for this. But an exhortation or a commandement in this place agrees not, in regard the Prophet rather promiſeth what God meanes to accompliſh. I denie not but hence we may draw an exhortation: but the promiſe muſt goe before. Now the tenure of the promiſe is, that the Lord will ſo aſſiſt his Church, and haue ſuch great care of her, that he will neuer ſuffer her to bee depriued of the doctrine of the word. When afflictions preſſe vs then to the quicke, and things ſucceede not as wee would wiſh; let vs haue an eye to this ſentence: for it is the word and Spirit, by which we muſt be raiſed vp and ſuſtained; of which the Lord heere promiſeth neuer to deſtitute vs.

THE LX. CHAPTER.

Verſ. 1. Ariſe O Ieruſalem; bee bright: for thy light is come, and the glorie of the Lord is riſen vpon thee.

In Chap. 59. 21. hee ſpake of the word, now hee ſpeakes of the efficacie of it.

IN this place the Prophet ſhewes what the efficacie of this word is, whereof hee ſpake in the former Chapter. For he comforts the church in her low and afflicted eſtate, and reſtores her to her brightneſſe. And in reſpect that he repreſents the perſon of God, he heere manifeſts his authoritie: and for that cauſe, vſeth a commandement, that he might giue his ſpeech the greater weight: as if by his abſolute power, he placed the Church in that happy eſtate, which hee before promiſed her. The ſumme is, to aſſure the faithfull that the Prophet ſpake not as in the aire, but effectually.

Now he commands her to Ariſe, in regard that before he ſaid, ſhe ſate vpon the ground: which two words are oppoſites. In the 47. Chapter of this booke, hee ſaid to Babylon; Come downe, and ſit in the duſt. And in Chap. 32.18. he ſaid of the Iewes themſelues; My people ſhall ſit in the duſt: and yet on the contrarie, in Chap. 52.1,2. hee ſaith; Ariſe, Ariſe, O Zion, put on the garments of thy beautie: ſhake thy ſelfe from the duſt. Now in this place againe hee raiſeth vp the Church, as if he tooke her by the hand, to the end ſhee might againe recouer her ſeate of honor, who now ſate in the duſt, wholly couered ouer with filth and dung.

Now that the poore Iewes might not by reaſon of the darkneſſe of their euils, be vtterly ouerwhelmed with deſpaire, hee telles them that the light which had been ſmothered for a time, ſhould immediately breake forth againe. Heerein alluding to the ordinarie courſe of the day, ſucceeding the night. As if he ſhould ſay; The Lord hauing compaſſion vpon thee, will draw thee out of theſe obſcure dungeons, in which thou haſt ſo long bin held priſoner. I haue ſatisfied my ſelfe in correcting thee, it is time now therefore thou ſhouldeſt begin to take ſome eaſe. And therefore by the word To ſhine, vnder a figure hee meanes a recouery of health, and a floriſhing eſtate: as heeretofore by darkneſs, Chap. 58.10. and 59.9. he ſignified the calamitie of the Church. Simile.

But heerewithall he admoniſheth her, that this light ſhall ariſe vnto her from none but from the brightneſſe of Gods countenance, at ſuch time as he ſhall bee pleaſed to manifeſt ſome tokens of his fauour: for all things fall out to the beſt, when the Lord lightens vs with his brightneſſe: but if he be againſt vs, we cannot poſſible meete with a greater miſery nor infelicitie.

Verſ. 2. For behold, darkneſſe ſhall couer the earth, and groſſe darkeneſſe the people: but the Lord ſhall ariſe vpon thee, and his glorie ſhall be ſeene vpon thee.

NOw hee amplifies this grace which hee mentioned before by way of compariſon, to the end wee might conſider of the infinit loue which God beares to his elect; yea and how great the priuiledges are, which are giuen and granted vnto them by him. The ſumme is, that whileſt the world is preſſed, and in a maner ouerwhelmed with infinite miſeries, God will haue care ouer his people to inrich them with ſundry benefits. He ſhewes then that the light of grace and fauour, mentioned in the former verſe, ſhall not be common to all, but particular to the people of God. Wee told you before that the word brightneſſe, notes out the floriſhing eſtate of the church; but yet wee muſt not iudge thereof by any outward appearance: for the Prophet flies an higher An amplification of the grace mentioned in verſ. 1.

higher pitch. Neither make I any doubt, but he here propounds vnto vs a ſpiritual brightneſſe and light. Otherwiſe the phraſe of ſpeech which hee vſeth in verſ.3. (namely, that the Gentiles ſhould walke in this light) would not agree. And the coherence of the text of this chapter with the former, ſhewes it plainely. For in verſe 21. of chap.59. hee ſaid, that the couenant was encloſed in the vvord and ſpirit: from the oppoſition then, it is eaſily gathered, that the felicitie promiſed to the Church in the beginning of this Chapter conſiſts in ſomewhat elſe then in meate, and drinke, idleneſſe and carnall ſecuritie. Nay, let vs rather conſider of the matter aright, and wee ſhall ſee, that ſince that time, all the Gentiles were not couered with a cloud of miſeries, whileſt the Iewes in the meane while enioyed their eaſe. Seeing then the condition of the Church is ſeparated from the ſtate of the whole world; the benefit which Iſaiah poſſeſſeth the Church of in this place, is ſpirituall. As alſo this brightnes which he promiſeth, is ſpirituall. This therefore belongs to the ſpirituall kingdome of Chriſt, whereby the light of the Goſpell enlightned all parts of the world. Yea, the ſtrange nations were enlightned by it.

To this appertaines that which followeth, The Lord ſhall ariſe vpon thee. For albeit hee ſhewed that Gods fauour ſhould appeare by manifeſt ſignes and effects: yet he leaues not out that which was the principall: namely, that the faithfull ſhould ſenſiblie perceiue that hee was their father, to the end they might wait for their ſaluation from him.

Doctrine 1. Hence let vs gather, that we are ouerwhelmed with darkeneſſe, till ſuch time as the Lord lightens vs with the teſtimonie of his free adoption. I ſpeake of all mankind: for Iſaiah teacheth that this quickning light proceeds from God only: thereby to ſignifie that it is the eſpeciall gift of his owne hand. Secondly, we are to note, that the Church only partakes of this brightnes, ỳ is, the elect of God. Whence it followes, that it is no common or naturall gift: but ſuch a one as with which the Lord ſupplies the common defect of mans nature. And hereby alſo wee perceiue that there was neuer any ſparke of true light, but in the Church. For all men beſides are enwrapped with darkeneſſe, albeit they thinke to be in the light, and that they haue a great ſplendor: neither can they be deliuered out of this darkneſſe, but by the light of the Goſpell. He addes the word glorie. For after the Lord hath once receiued vs into his fauour, he ſo continues the ſame vnto vs, that his benefits doe daily more and more flow in vpon vs with greater increaſes.

2

No light out of the Church.

Verſ.3. And the Gentiles ſhall walke in thy light, and kings at the brightnes of thy riſing vp.

A confirmation in this and the verſe following. THe Propher now confirmes that which we were ſaying, to wit, that men haue no light of their owne, but that whereby the Lord enlightens them through his word. All will confeſſe ſo much; but they doe not worthilie eſteeme of this grace as they ought: they onely take it for ſome common thing which appertaines naturally to euerie man: but here it appeares that it is ſupernaturall. And therefore it muſt be diſtinguiſhed from nature; as the repetition of theſe wordes, vpon thee, ſufficientlie ſhewes. Firſt then let vs hold it for certaine, that this benefit proceedes onely from God: ſecondly, that all indifferentlie do not partake hereof, but the elect onely, whom the Lord enlightnes by his free grace, that he might exempt them out of the common rancke of other men. 1 2

Now this is done by Chriſt, who is called the ſunne of righteouſneſſe: Mal.4.2. becauſe we are inlightned by his beames. Moreouer, the Prophet teacheth, that the grace which was communicated vnto the Iewes, ſhall bee ſpread far and wide. According as the words of the couenant often ſound, In thy ſeede ſhall all the nations of the earth bee bleſſed: Gen.22.18. For the light which was proper onelie to a particular nation, would bring no benefit at all to others. But for as much as the doctrine of the Goſpell was to be ſpread into all parts of the world, Iudea bare this light; that from thence it might ſhine to the Gentiles, who ſaw not one ſparkle thereof before. For in that he makes this light proper to one people, he ſhewes that the world could not otherwiſe be enlightned nor attaine to the participation of this benefit, but in ſeeking this light in that word which came forth of Iudea, and was heard in Ieruſalem; where the lampe of the Lord was kindled; and from whence the Sunne of righteouſneſſe caſt his beames, that thence he might afterwards enlighten all the habitable corners and quarters of the earth. As in chap.2.3. wee haue ſeene, That the law went forth of Sion. There is no light then, but in the doctrine of the Prophets: ſo that whoſoeuer they bee that recoile backe from it, they falſely bragge of vvalking in this light.

By the brightneſſe of thy riſing vp, hee alludes to the breake of day. For as the morning ſtar begins the day, by ſtriking thorow the heauen onely, and foorthwith the ſunne ſhines ouer all the world: ſo the breake of day began firſt in Iudea; whence the light aroſe, and ſpread it ſelfe throughout the vvhole vvorld. For there is no corner of it, which the Lord hath not enlightned with this light.

This light belongs as well to Kings as to common perſons. He mentions kings, that we ſhould not imagine this light belonged to the common people only, but to Princes and great Lords, who otherwiſe doe much pleaſe themſelues in their dignities. Truely, the honour which he here attributes to the Church is exceeding great, ſeeing her brightneſſe ſhall bee ſo glorious, that it ſhall draw vnto her, kings and nations. He calles it the Churches light, not becauſe ſhee hath any light of her ſelfe; but in regard ſhee borrowes it from Chriſt, as the Moone takes her light from the Sunne.

As the Moone drawes her light from the ſunne, ſo the Church borrowes her light from Chriſt.

Verſ.4. Lift vp thine eies round about, and behold: all theſe are gathered and come to thee: thy ſonnes ſhall come from farre, and thy daughters ſhal be nouriſhed at thy ſide.

BY many words he confirmes this promiſe touching the reſtauration of the Church, which ſeemed a thing altogether incredible: and therefore was a matter hard to bee beaten into the heads of the Iewes, in an eſtate wherein things were ſo perplexed and confuſed. For then none but the kingdome of Iudah ſtood: which daily decaied, till at laſt it fell flat to the ground. Afterwards, when the people were carried away captiue, all things grew ſo deſperate in theſe horrible ſcatterings and wofull ruines, that as it ſeemed the Church was vtterly aboliſhed. It was needful therfore that this doctrine ſhould be many waies confirmed, that mens minds, which of themſelues are too much inclined by nature to diſtruſt, might no longer remain intangled with doubtings. For this cauſe then he brings the Iewes as it were, to ſ̄ thing done, notwithſtanding it were yet farre off: to the end they might aſſure themſelues no leſſe of ſ̄ accompliſhment thereof, then if the thing were alreadie effected before their eies.

Men inclined ouermuch by nature to diſtruſt.

Now hee commands the faithfull to lift vp their eies on high, that is to ſay, aboue al humane thoughts: for whileſt we remaine fixed to outward appearances, wee cannot ſauour the fruit of theſe promiſes. He ads round about, that they might certainlie know the people ſhould not come from one nation alone, but from all parts, to be knit together into one bodie. Neither doth hee alone promiſe an end, and a remedie to the ſcattering which was to come, as in Pſalm. 147. 2. and chap. 56. 8. that God vvould gather in the ſcattered of Iſrael: but this gathering ſhould extend it ſelfe further off. For it ſignifies that there ſhould be a wonderfull change in the world: ſo as thoſe who before vvere ſtrangers and diuided, ſhould be gathered into one bodie. To conclude, the ſpreading of the Church to the vtmoſt bounds of the earth is here noted out vnto vs. We muſt alſo ſupplie a cloſe oppoſition here, which manifeſts that miſerable and wofull eſtate whereinto all mankind is plunged till we be gathered in vnder the conduct of Chriſt.

A teſtimonie touching the calling of the Gentiles.

Some, by ſonnes allegorically vnderſtand thoſe who were ſtrong and ſtedfaſt in faith: and by daughters, the weake. But I thinke the Prophet was not diſpoſed to ſpeake ſo acutely. I therefore take it ſimplie thus, That ſonnes and daughters ſhall in time to come, runne vnto the Church. That is to ſay, ſhall not onely be begotten within doores, but without alſo: yea, euen in the furtheſt parts of the world. For the wombe of the Church ſhall no more be ſhut vp in a corner of the earth, but ſhall ſpread it ſelfe as farre, and as wide, as the whole world hath any ſpace.

Verſ. 5. Thou ſhalt ſee and ſhine: thine heart ſhall be aſtoniſhed, and enlarged, becauſe the multitude of the ſea ſhall be conuerted vnto thee, and the riches of the Gentiles ſhall come vnto thee.

THeſe things at the firſt bluſh ſeeme to haue ſome repugnancie in them; ſeeing in the former verſe he ſpake in the preſent tence; and now in the time to come. But there hee ſpake of the eies of faith, which apprehends that, that men cannot comprehend by nature: here, hee handles that which concernes the euent of the thing it ſelfe. Or, rather; by ſpeaking in the preſent tence before, he meant to ſignifie the truth and ſtedfaſtneſſe of the promiſe: and now reſtraines the ſame ſentence; to teach the faithfull to limit themſelues within the bounds of patience. Beſides, howſoeuer the promiſes of God be for a time ſhadowed from mens ſight: yet doe the faithfull cleerely behold them by faith; ſo as they wait for the vndoubted accompliſhment thereof, though others will beleeue nothing at all of them.

By ſpeaking in the preſent tence verſ. 4. hee ſhewed the certaintie of the promiſe ſpeaking; now in the future, hee teacheth them to be patient.

And ſhine.] Becauſe the verb Nahar, ſignifies to ſhine, and to flow foorth, it may be tranſlated both waies. For we may referre it to that ioy which carrieth and cauſeth the Church to ouerflow, when ſhee growes and increaſeth in this world: or, to that decking of her, which makes her to ſhine. But it ſeemes to agree but vntowardly with the text, that hee couples aſtoniſhment, with brightnes or ioy. Truely I doubt not but by this word hee vnderſtands ſuch an amazednes as ariſeth from an admiration and wonderment, with which the Church ſhall be rapt vp and carried away in ſeeing her ſelfe to riſe to ſuch an vnexpected honour, and to be exalted to ſo high a degree of glorie. As if he ſhould ſay, The greatneſſe of this worke ſhall be ſuch, that it ſhall farre ſurmount thy hope. It is no aſtoniſhment then that is conceiued through ſome feare of danger or calamitie; but ſuch as we ſee to happen in great wonders, which ſurpaſſe the reach of our vnderſtandings: when being aſtoniſhed wee are for the time as in a dreame: Pſalm. 136. 1. And this trembling ſuites very well with ioy.

Verſ. 6. The multitude of Camels ſhall couer thee: and the Dromedaries of Midian, and of Epha: all they of Sheba ſhall come: they ſhall bring gold and incenſe, and ſhew forth the praiſes of the Lord.

7. All the ſheepe of Kedar ſhall bee gathered vnto thee: the Rammes of Nebaioth ſhall ſerue thee: they ſhall come vp to bee accepted vpon mine Altar: and I will beautifie the houſe of my glorie.

VNder borrowed ſpeeches the Prophet deſcribes the glorie of the Church, and applies his doctrine, both to the time and perſons, with which he had to doe. For wee muſt keepe that in mind which we haue often

He that is truly conuerted vnto God, will dedicate all he hath to his ſeruice.

ſaid, namely; that the Prophets had reſpect to the people whom they taught. And for that cauſe, mentioned the things beſt known, and the ceremonies moſt in vſe; that vnder the figures thereof, they might note out Gods ſpiritual worſhip and ſeruice. For it was good reaſon the Iewes ſhould bee firſt inſtructed: and the Gentiles (in the ſecond place) to whom the truth of theſe things is come. As if hee ſhould ſay; The people of farre Countries ſhall come with their riches, in the power of God.

And where he ſaith, the Church ſhall be enriched, it is not to be referred to the perſons of men: but in regard of the vnion which the head hath with the members, that which appertaines to God and Chriſt, is heere attributed to the Church. The Iewes deale abſurdlie therefore, who vnder colour of this propheſie, by their inſatiable couetouſnes deuoure all the riches of the earth: neither doe the Papiſts leſſe fondly wreſt theſe words to the maintaining of their riches, and ſuperfluous pomps.

Abſurd collections from this place of Iewes and Papiſts.

Now he mentions Camels, incenſe, gold, and ſheepe, as hauing regard to that wherewith euery region abounded in, thereby ſignifying, that all ſhould conſecrate vnto God whatſoeuer they inioyed; and ſhould offer themſelues and all their riches vnto him in ſacrifice. Whence wee are to gather, that we can not truly be conuerted vnto the Lord, vnleſſe we offer vp vnto him all that euer we haue: for theſe are thoſe ſpirituall oblations which he requires, 1. Pet. 2. 5. Rom. 12. 1. which we can not poſſiblie denie him, if our hearts be truly dedicated and conſecrated vnto him. The wicked abuſe the gifts of God to exceſſe and wantonnes, and as much as in them is corrupt them by an execrable prophanenes, but the faithfull who vſe them with good conſcience, conſecrate them vnto the Lord. None can rightly ſay hee is the Lords then, vnleſſe he therewithall dedicates and conſecrates vnto the Lord himſelfe and all that he hath.

Doctrine.

1. Pet. 2. 5. Rom. 12. 1.

As touching the regions here mentioned by the Prophet, it is not needfull for vs to diſcuſſe in what place euery one of them is ſituated. Notwithſtanding by the way we note, that he ſpeakes of ſuch as lay Eaſtward, and chiefly Arabia, and the places neere adioining, which he ſignifies by Kedar, and Nebaioth. The Papiſts haue alſo abuſed this place, to proue that Kings came from the Eaſt to offer gifts vnto Chriſt: wherein they ſhew themſelues too ridiculous, ſeeing the Prophet ſpeakes of all ſorts of people. But they ſnatch vp without iudgement all ſuch like places wherein mention is made of gold, or incenſe, as if the Prophets meant to ſpeake of the gifts which the wiſe men offred, Math. 2. 11. There is nothing obſcure in this place then: for the Prophets meaning is, that God ſhall in time to come be called vpon in euery place, and all ſtrangers ſhall be gathered vnto him to yeeld him obedience.

Another abſurd collection of the Papiſts. Kings of the Eaſt.

As touching the words, they ſhall come vp; ſome tranſlate, They ſhall come vp vpon mine altar in good pleaſure. And this ſeemes to me not vnapt; as if the Prophet meant to ſay, that the offrings of the Gentiles ſhould be acceptable vnto God. Others expound, They ſhall come vp acceptable: which ſuites not with the proprietie of this tongue. For Raſon ſignifies good pleaſure, good will, or fauor: and therefore I thinke it ſhould be read as I haue tranſlated it, namely, that the oblations ſhould come vp in good pleaſure vpon the altar; ſo as the words may thus be reſolued, They ſhall goe vp, to appeaſe God: for the altar was ordained, and the ſacrifices offred, to the end God might be mercifull and fauorable vnto men, who according to his promiſe, accepts the ſacrifice offred vpon his altar: for then the Altar was the meane to obtaine Gods fauor. Exod. 20. 24.

The Prophet then expreſſeth three things here diſtinctly. For firſt when he ſaith, that the ſacrifices vvent vp, he alludes to the ceremonie which in old time they vſed in the ſacrifices, for they lifted vp their offrings: Exod. 29. 24. Leuit. 8. 29. to ſignifie, that they were to lift vp their minds, that ſo they might not be glued to the earth; or only, to fixe their eies vpon that which was offred. Secondly, that theſe ſacrifices were acceptable vnto God, that ſo they might be diſtinguiſhed from the ſacrifices of the Gentiles, which were offred without faith. Thirdly, vpon the Altar, which only ſanctified the oblations: for whatſoeuer was offred vpon any thing elſe was polluted and abominable. Moreouer, this figure ought to leade vs vnto the truth of it: for Chriſt is Gods altar, as wee haue ſeene in Chap. 56. 7. and vpon him muſt we offer our ſacrifices, if we would haue them vvell-pleaſing vnto God.

Three things noted in the ſacrifices of the Iewes.
1
2
3
Chriſt, Gods Altar.

Beſides, vnder the beautie of the Temple he ſignifies the reſtauration of the people; in regard the principall part of their felicitie conſiſted in hauing the Temple wherein God was purely worſhipped to ſtand in perfect beautie. And there muſt wee begin, namely, to haue God reigne amongſt vs, if we would be truly happie, for which cauſe the Lord minding to ſhew that his Church ſhall be reſtored, mentions the Temple, vpon which he will put his glorie. As if he ſhould ſay, My houſe is now expoſed to the mocks of the Gentiles, but in the end I will put my glorie againe vpon it, vvherevnto it is now deprined. Now out of Zacharie, Haggai, and Malachi it appeares, that this was not accompliſhed preſentlie after their returne out of captiuitie: for wee muſt not thinke that there was that true dignitie in this ſumptuous building, wherby Herod would cunningly haue inſinuated himſelfe into the fauor of the Iewes. The dignitie or glorie here mentioned therefore appeared not till God opened the dore of heauen to Ieruſalem, and afterwards manifeſted the hope of eternall ſaluation to all the Iewes.

Herod.

Verſ. 8. Who are theſe that flee like a clonde, and as the doues to their windowes?

The Prophet amplifies this multiplication of the Church by an admiration.

BEcauſe the Prophet could not content himſelfe with mentioning this benefit of God, being rapt into an admiration, he cries out, Who are these? Which maner of speech hath much more vehemencie in it, then if he had simply affirmed, that a great number did flee; yea, though he had vsed the same similitudes. He meant then more fully to expresse how glorious this multiplying should be, seeing he could find no fit words to set forth the same withall.

Psa. 110.3.

Which flee as a cloud.] Some thinke that by this the Apostles are meant, who with an incredible swiftnesse, ranne to the vtmost parts of the world. I grant this exposition hath some colour: but the Prophet speakes of the assembling of the whole Church, namely, that the nations should runne vnto it from all parts, with great nimblenesse and alacritie.

Simile.

The similitude of doues, which hee vseth, is very apt for this purpose. For when these birds be in the fields, they seeme to be of the number of other wild birds; yet they belong to an house, and haue their louers, vnto which they retire, and in which they make their nests. So in like manner, the faithfull begin to know their gathering together, being illuminated by faith; that so they may withdraw themselues out of that horrible scattering in which they are. Whosoeuer shall consider the miserable and wofull state of those times, shall easilie perceiue how necessarie this aduertisement was. For if the Prophets, who without ceasing, had so many yeeres instructed the Iewes, reaped little or no profit thereby; what was to bee expected from the Gentiles, who were wholly estranged from God? Yet the Prophet hath not spoken excessiuely: but hee so admires the thing, that he also drawes vs therewithall into admiration with him.

Vers. 9. Surely the Iles shall wait for me, and the shippes of Tarshish at the beginning, that they may bring thy sonnes from farre, and their siluer and gold with them, vnto the name of the Lord thy God, because he hath glorified thee.

That these things might haue the more weight, God himselfe is brought in speaking.

HAuing magnified the excellent benefit of this restauration, with all the praises he could possibly deuise, hee brings in God himselfe speaking, that his speech might haue the greater authoritie. Some take To wait heere, To desire: as if he should say; Let this be done, because the strange nations are as men affamished, longing after him, by feeling themselues destituted of life and saluation. Others take it simply, To hope: but the word also sometimes signifies, To obserue. And in this sense Dauid takes it, in Psal. 56, saying, The wicked waited for my soule: that is to say, they spread snares for my life. And in this signification wee may take it heere. They shall wait: that is to say, they shall obserue my countenance, as seruants are wont to depend vpon the will of their Masters: as if he should say; Marueil not if so many nations runne after the Church, for the Iles which despise and resist me now, shall be so attentiue to my voice, that they shall doe whatsoeuer I command them. And questionlesse it appeares by the rest of this verse, that such a kind of obedience is heere mentioned.

Psal. 123.2.

The shipps of Tarshish.] If any will, they may heere supply the particle of similitude thus; As the shipps of Tarshish once sailed vnto Iudea, and brought that which was necessarie for the building of the Temple, and for mens vse: so it shall come to passe, that they shall saile thither againe, and this interrupted nauigation shall recouer the first course.

By Tarshish, that is, Cilicia, which was opposite to Iudea; vnder the figure Synecdoche, he vnderstands all voyages and traffikes, which they made by sea with strange nations. Wee may also take it without figure thus; The shipps of Tarshish which were wont malapartly to scorne my Church, shall subiect themselues to my authoritie, and thereunto shall bring children from a far Country.

Their gold is vvith them.] He againe repeates his former speech, to wit, that the Gentiles shall so yeeld their obedience vnto God, that they shall offer to him both themselues and all theirs. The Popish Doctors doe heere againe (as I touched in vers. 6.) shew their extreme impudencie, when they abuse these and the like places, to vphold those tyrannous and Persian-like pompes, whereby that Antichrist of Rome, and his suppostes, glister and will be wondered at. And albeit they ouerflow in costly raiment, being couered from top to toe with gold and pearles: in a word, though they apparell themselues like a strumpet; yet are they not ashamed to make the holy Ghost the author of all these abominations. For when the Prophets doe but mention gold or siluer, straightway they apply the same to their dissolutions. Truly in this behalfe they resemble the Iewes, who leape for ioy as oft as the Prophets mention gold or siluer; hoping to wallow themselues therein, when the Messiah shall come. So the Papists thinke on nothing else but vpon gold and siluer, with which vaine appearance, their mindes are so bewitched, that they cannot aspire to heauen: but this blockishnesse hath no need of any refutation. The summe is, that God vvill exalt his Church vnto an high and soueraigne degree of honour, and decke her vvith ornaments befitting her. But to the end the faithfull might not doubt that any impediments should hinder them to receiue so glorious a promise: or lest they should attribute ought to their merits, God himselfe promiseth to be the author of this thing. Moreouer, Isaiah now assignes the riches of the Gentiles, whom heretofore he had abandoned from the Church, to bee an holy offering vnto God, and as spoiles and recompences of her victory. And thus hee more cleerely expresseth that which I haue said, namely, that wee ought to desire nothing so much, as to see the whole world subdued vnder Gods dominion.

Impudencie of Popish Doctors, in their absurd collections.

Rem. 17.8. Persian like pride noted in the Pope and his Clergie.

Iewes and Papists iump together in their fond collections.

Vers. 10. And the sonnes of strangers shall build vp thy walles, and their

Kings

kings ſhall miniſter vnto thee: for in my wrath I ſmote thee, but in my mercie I had compaſſion on thee.

The ſame argument proſecuted, and in the next verſe expounded.

HE proſecutes the ſame argument. And as hee ſaid heretofore that ſtrangers ſhould ſubmit themſelues vnder Gods authoritie to reedifie the Temple: ſo now hee ſaith, that the ſtrangers ſhall beſtow their labour in building vp the walles. The compariſons whereby he promiſeth the Churches reſtauration are diuers. For it is a thing vſuall in the Scriptures, where the Church is ſpoken of, ſometimes to ſet it foorth vnder the Temple, and then againe, vnder Ieruſalem. Now hee promiſeth that the ſtrangers ſhall helpe to ſet vp this building, leſt the Iewes ſhould faint being aſtoniſhed at their pouertie, or ſmal number. For in the captiuitie they might bee ſolicited to diſtruſt, thinking that albeit they ſhould returne into their countrie, yet there was no likelihood that euer they ſhould perfect ſuch a worke. But Cyrus did this, who furniſhed them with great ſums of gold and ſiluer. And yet theſe things were but figuratiue in him; for they had their full accompliſhment in Chriſt, to whoſe kingdome all that which is here ſpoken muſt bee referred. For firſt of all he vſed the ſeruice of a few weake men, to wit, the Apoſtles, who were diſfurniſhed of fit meanes for ſo long a buſineſſe; afterwards therefore he raiſed vp ſtrangers out of whom he choſe Paſtors, and made their Princes to be nurſing fathers to the Church.

Cyrus.

Apoſtles.

Paſtors.

Kings and Princes.

The Papiſts too malepertly do ouerthrow and corrupt this place, when they wreſt it to eſtabliſh the tyrannie of their Pope; to whō they giue ſoueraigne dominion our Kings and Princes. And herein they ſhew themſelues impudent liers (againſt the truth) in calling him Chriſts Vicar: ſeeing the kingdome of Chriſt is not of this world: Ioh. 18. 36. And yet this companion on the contrary domineeres in pride and crueltie; and takes vpon him to change kingdomes. Now Kings ſo ſubmit themſelues vnto Chriſt, that yet they ceaſe not to be kings ſtill. Onely they are to imploy their power for the maintenance of Gods ſeruice; and to gouerne their ſubiects with equitie. Whence wee ſee how farre off they are from Chriſts kingdom, who would rent from Kings their power and authoritie, to make themſelues Lords ouer them.

Papiſts malepert in giuing their Pope ſoueraigntie ouer Kings.

Papiſts ſhameleſſe liers in calling their Pope Chriſts Vicar.

Kings ſo ſubmit themſelues to the Church, that they hold their kingly authoritie ſtill.

From this place wee may alſo refute the Anabaptiſts, who ſo ouerturne politike gouernment, that Kings can no otherwiſe bee Chriſtiās, then in renouncing (ſay theſe bedlems) their authoritie. But wee ſee here that God will haue himſelfe honoured of the Kingly order.

Anabaptiſts would haue no kings.

Moreouer that none might obiect, that it had been an eaſier matter to haue maintained the Church in her firſt eſtate, then now to plucke her out of hell: God preuents this alſo, and ſhewes that the Iewes were iuſtly thus afflicted, in regard they had too much prouoked him by their iniquities. But hee giues them matter of good hope, becauſe he will not puniſh them with rigor according to their demerits, but will content himſelfe that they haue been humbled vnder temporarie chaſtiſements. And yet therewithal he informeth them touching the cauſe of ſuch a change: leſt they ſhould iudge therof according to their ſenſe. For when kingdomes are changed, and ſometimes on a ſudden exalted; and forthwith fall backe into ruine: we thinke ſuch things fall out by chance, and that it is but the courſe of the world. The Iewes might thinke the ſame, when after the ruine of the Chaldean Monarchy, they were ſet at liberty. And therefore the Lord proteſts that all theſe things were guided by his Prouidence; that they ſhould not be partners with infidels in their blindneſſe; It is as much then as if he had ſaid; If thou askeſt wherefore thou haſt endured ſo manie miſeries: truly, becauſe I was angrie with thee, and tooke vengeance of thy offences. But if thou wouldſt know the reaſon of thy deliuerance, it hath proceeded from my meere good will; not for thy merits: or a iumbling together of ſecondarie cauſes. Calamities then fall not out by chance. Neither is the Lord angrie without cauſe. Neither yet is he euer ſo angrie but he leaues way for his mercie.

1
2

In my wrath I ſmot thee.

Gods free mercie, and not our merits, the cauſe of our redemption.

1
2
3

Verſ. 11. *Therefore thy gates ſhall be open continually: neither day nor night ſhall they be ſhut, that men may bring vnto thee the riches of the Gentiles, and * that their kings may be brought.*

* Or, and their Kings led.

THis verſe is ill expounded of the moſt Interpreters. For they thinke the Prophet meant to ſay, that the Church ſhall be in ſafetie vnder the fidelitie and protection of God. Why ſo? Becauſe open doores, ſhew that danger is fare off. But me thinkes the Prophet expounds himſelfe: namely, that the gates ſhall be open, that riches may be brought into the citie from all parts. And in as much as they are wont to beare their burthens by day: the day, ſaith he, ſhall not ſuffice in regard of the continuall reſort of ſuch as ſhall bring precious treaſures thither. Wherefore carriages ſhall not ceaſe, in ſo much that the gates muſt be kept open day and night.

Where he ſaith, ỳ the Church ſhal haue the riches of the Gentiles, it is not to be referred to temporall commodities, but to the obedience which all the world ſhall yeeld vnto God in his Church: to which he giues that which is offered vnto him, in regard he hath nothing which is not hers.

What is meant by the riches of the Gentiles.

And their kings led.] I had rather retaine the participle which the Prophet vſeth, then to follow them who change it into a verbe: for they ouerthrow his meaning; in regard that he expreſſely addeth this, becauſe the pride of kings is ſuch, that they will not willingly ſuffer themſelues to bee led. Nay, on the contrarie, ſtanding too much vpon their owne power, they wax intemperate; and in ſtead of being led whither they ought; they carrie carrie away with them al others as with a violent flood. He shewes then that notwithstanding their naturall and vntamed rebellion, they shall submit themselues to God and his Church.

Kings naturally vnwilling to ſubmit their neckes to Gods yoke.

Vers. 12. For the nation and the kingdome that will not serue thee shall perish: and those nations shall bee vtterly destroyed.

A confirmation of the former doctrine.

THe Prophet stands much vpon the confirmation of the hearts of Gods children, to assure them that they should behold the restauration of the Church one day, as hee hath now described it out vnto them. These thinge were altogether incredible: and howsoeuer we our selues are sufficiently confirmed by the euents of these things which are manifested in all mens sight; yet if wee were not gouerned by the spirit of Christ, hardly should wee conceiue them in our minde. He shewes then that there is no cause at all wherefore the Iewes should doubt of the restauration of the Temple; because the Gentiles should come to aide them with all their power. But Isaiah regarded something more high in this place, then the building of the visible Temple. For his meaning is to speake of that obedience which Kings, Nobles, and the commons should yeelde vnto the Church, when they should aduance as much as in them lay, the puritie of doctrine. Yea, hee passeth yet further in pronouncing that the kingdomes and nations which will not serue the Church, shall perish. If such as helpe not the Church, are condemned with this fearefull and terrible sentence; what shall we say of those tyrants who set themselues furiously against her, and labour with might and maine to worke her ouerthrow? If the slothfull and carelesse shall not escape vnpunished, ought not the wicked to wait for some horrible vengeance, seeing they striue to hinder and ouerthrow the worke of the Lord?

If such as serue not the Church shall perish, how shall they escape that persecute her?

He repeates that now in the plurall number, which he said before in the singular; to shew, that if the whole world were guiltie, yet they should wholly perish. For the multitude cannot free those from perishing, that estrange themselues from God: neither shall the wicked be excused, if they hinder one another from comming to saluation; or if they incourage one another to commit iniquitie. Now it is said (as we haue seene before) that Kings and nations serue the Church, not in regard that shee exerciseth any dominion of her selfe, but because God hath giuen and committed the scepter of his word, by which hee rules, vnto her custodie.

And those nations, &c.

Vers. 13. The glory of Lebanon shall come vnto thee, the firre tree, the elme and the box tree together to beautifie the place of my sanctuarie: for I will glorifie the place of my feete.

Isaiah vseth yet another similitude, which hee brought in when hee compared the Church to a building or Citie. For he recites such things as are necessarie to build withall, to wit, the firre tree, the pine tree, and the box tree; all which grew in Lebanon, a forrest that abounded with goodly and excellent trees. His meaning is then, that whatsoeuer was faire and exquisite in this forrest, should be brought vnto the Church. But we must refer the truth of these figures to Gods spirituall worship; for he adornes his Church with the title of the sanctuarie, because himselfe dwels in the midst thereof: notwithstanding hee hath alwaies respect to the Temple, and to the customes of those times. He sets before vs then a paterne of the Temple that stood in Ierusalem; that vnder the image thereof we might consider of the spirituall Temple, whereof wee are the matter and the liuing stones: Eph. 2. 21. 1. Pet. 2. 5.

By the place of his feete, he signifies that hee so dwelles in the Temple, that yet his Maiestie is not inclosed therein, for he is not contained within so narrow limits. There is nothing but his feete then, that is to say, his lowest and meanest part: thereby teaching vs, to aspire vp vnto heauen, and not to rest fixed in these externall signes, which instruct vs according to our slender capacitie. According to which, it is said in Psal. 99. 5. Worship the footstoole of his feete, for he is holy. Also, We will enter into his Tabernacle, and worship before his footstoole: Psal. 132. 7. Not that Gods essence is diuided into pieces, part in heauen, and part in earth; but in regard that by such helpes, hee raiseth vp his seruant as it were from his feete to his head.

Gods essence not parted into pieces.

Vers. 14. The sonnes also of them that afflicted thee, shall come and bow vnto thee; and all they that despised thee, shall fall downe at the soles of thy feete, and they shall call thee, The Citie of the Lord, Zion of the holy one of Israel.

HE prosecutes the same argument still. For he shewes how wonderfull this worke of redemption shall be, when those that persecuted or despised the Church, shall come to prostrate themselues humbly before her feete, and with their whole hearts shall submit themselues to her seruice. By the children of those that afflicted her, hee meanes the tyrants and persecuters which vexed her. Now this was partly accomplished when the Iewes returned into their country. But this returne was but an obscure shadow of that deliuerance which wee haue obtained by Christ. Thus these things then were truly accomplished vnder Christs kingdome; yet so, that we must wait for the perfect consummation thereof, till his second comming: as in another place before we haue noted.

The same argument still prosecuted.

But, will some say, is not this honor whereof the Prophet speakes, too excessiue, and greater then of right belongs to the Church? For to bow, and fall downe vpon the ground, are such signes of honour, which no mortall man ought Quest.

Anſ. ought to accept of. I anſwer, that this honor is not made to the members, but to the head, which is Chriſt, who is worſhipped in the Church: and thoſe who hated and perſecuted him before, come now to do him this reuerence. Now we ſay that Chriſt is adored in the Church, not according to the Popiſh opinion, who thinke they indeed worſhip Chriſt whilſt they kneele before that Romane Idoll to kiſſe his pantable. Thoſe, in fauor of whom this is affirmed, hate and reiect ſuch a doctrine. They only honor Chriſt then who obey his voice; as alſo the Prophet ſaith, that the ſtrangers which were out of the Church ſhould willingly ſubmit themſelues to yeeld obedience vnto Chriſt, whoſe Maieſtie ſhines in the doctrine which himſelfe adminiſters by the ſeruice of men.

This honor not done to the Church, but to the head Chriſt.

The Romane Idoll.

And ſhall call thee, &c.] The Church was adorned with this title heretofore, but it was in a maner defaced when the Citie was deſtroyed, the Temple raced, and the people led away captiue. Ieruſalem was no more the ſame, neither was there ought to be ſeene in her but an horrible waſt, and yet he promiſeth that ſhe ſhall be ſo reſtored, that all ſhall acknowledge her for the Citie of the Lord. Afterwards he ſpeakes of the Temple, to ſignifie vnto vs that this dignitie is attributed to Ieruſalem in regard of the Temple: that is to ſay, for the ſeruice of Gods ſake which was there eſtabliſhed.

Zion of the &c.

Verſ. 15. Whereas thou haſt bin forſaken and hated, ſo that no man went by thee, I will make thee an eternall glorie, and a ioy from generation to generation.

THE Prophet had an eie to ỹ middle time which alreadie approched: for a little after his death the people were driuen out of their heritage, and led away captiue, ſo as all thought that the Iewes had bin for euer rooted out. That this thought then might not ariſe in the minds of the faithfull, whereby they were in danger to fall into deſpaire and ſay, We are vndone; there is no way left how to remedie theſe ſo extreame miſeries: neither are we euer to expect a better condition; he on the contrarie ſhewes, that theſe ſore calamities can not let God to reſtore them againe. For howſoeuer for a time they were after a ſort forſaken when the Lord thus corrected them, yet was it no maſterie for him to ſet them in a more happie and better eſtate then the former.

Obiect. If any obiect, that this magnificence of the Church was of no long continuance: the anſwere is ſoone made. For howſoeuer the people were diuerſlie afflicted after their returne home, and that the Chriſtian Church alſo did not long hold her excellencie, yet is all that which the Prophet foretold accompliſhed: for Chriſtes glorie ſhines forth from vnder the croſſe, ſo as Gods name reſ nes, and a people alſo that calles vpon his name by faith.

Anſ.

Chriſtes glorie ſhines vnder the croſſe.

Beſides, we are to note, that our owne vnthankfulnes hinders vs from receiuing the fruit of theſe promiſes, becauſe we breake off the courſe of Gods working by our infidelitie; and by our owne frowardnes wee loſe the profit which wee might reape from the ſame. To conclude, we are alwaies to remember that which I haue ſo often told you, namely, That the Prophet ſpeakes not of yeeres heere, or of a few daies; but comprehends the whole courſe of our redemption from the end of the captiuitie vntill the publiſhing of the Goſpell, and ſo ſucceſſiuely, till he ſhall giue vp the kingdome to God his Father.

Vs.

Verſ. 16. Thou ſhalt alſo ſuck the milke of the Gentiles, and ſhalt ſuck the breaſts of the Kings: and thou ſhalt know that I the Lord am thy ſauiour and thy redeemer: the mightie one of Iaakob.

HE ſpeakes of the ſpreading forth of the Church. But it was neceſſarie that one and the ſame thing ſhould be often repeated, in regard it ſeemed incredible that the Church of God being now brought to ſo low an ebbe, ſhould euer be raiſed, or ſpread ouer the whole world: for her condition was lamentable, but in the end ſhe was rebuilt againe, to the aſtoniſhment of all, and that by a ſmall remnant, as a brand recouered out of the fire; and the ſeed thereof was ſcattered farre and wide thorow all the quarters of the world. And therefore it is as much as if he had ſaid, Though thou beeſt now incloſed within ſtrait and very narrow bounds, and haſt nothing in common with the Gentiles, yet ſo it is that thou ſhalt receiue from them much fruites in abundance.

By milke, and breaſts, he meanes nothing elſe but that ſeruice and obedience which the Gentiles ſhould render to the Church to nouriſh her offspring. For hauing ſaid before, that of an handfull ſhould proceed an infinite number of children: now he prouides milke to ſuckle them with, vntill they be come of ſufficient age. And he expreſly ſpeakes of Kings, in regard it was the harder to be beleeued. And thus Kings by the way are admoniſhed of their duties, who if they will diſcharge the ſame as they ought, then muſt they be ſeruants of the Church, otherwiſe the Lord will call them to account for it, and we know what Dauid pronounceth in the ſecond Pſalme, verſe 10. 11.

Kings admoniſhed of their duties.

But wee muſt note after what maner the Church ſhall ſuck the milke and the breaſts of the Gentiles. For ſhe is not permitted wholly to draw in vnto her ſelfe all the abilities and riches of the world, but only thereby to preſerue her owne eſtate in ſafetie. For can any thing in the world be more contrarie to the nature of the Church, then to be an inſatiable gulph, ſwallowing vp into her belly whatſoeuer ſhe may come by? Theſe things therefore muſt be referred to the ſpirituall eſtate of the Church, namely, that by meanes hereof, God may be purely worſhipped in her, that the miniſtrie of the word may floriſh and be aduanced there, and that ſhe may thereby

No maruell contrarie to the nature of the true Church, then to be come an inſatiable gulph.

Discipline.

thereby retaine some discipline which may serue as a bridle to curbe euery one. And yet herewithall, that the faithfull must remember, it is a more blessed thing to giue then to take: Act.20.35, that thus they may be instructed to beare pouertie patiently, to the end they may inrich others with their spirituall riches.

Lastly he addes, that that which for a time was hidden shall be discouered: namely, the Iewes should know, that they were not elected in vaine, in regard they should feele by experience that God was carefull of their saluation. But some may aske if they knew not this before they were led captiue. I answere, this banishment resembled a thicke and grosse darknesse; which comparison also our Prophet vsed in the beginning of this chapter. Seeing then that vnder this grieuous seruitude, they could behold neither the power nor glorie of God, he now drew them into the open light. Not that faith failes in afflictions: but because the feeling thereof is one thing, and experience another. Whilest we seeme forlorne, then faith soares vp aloft farre aboue the present miserie, and those thicke mists with which we be enwrapped. And if God be pleased to restore vs to our perfect estate, then wee perceiue the thing, not by the eies of faith but by experience it selfe: loe here that manifest knowledge whereof hee speakes. As if he should say, after I shal haue dealt liberally with you, you shall then see by the effects that I am your redeemer.

Quest. Ans.

Faith and experience distinguished.

He doth of set purpose vse the title of the mightie one of Iacob: in regard he had formerly often shewed himself to be such an one towards them. And that not onely Iacob himselfe had many waies felt Gods power by experience, but that his successors also had prooued that it was in him in whom they were to seeke assured helpe. Thus then hee calles him mightie, to the end they might acknowledge that God would be the same for euer towards them, which in times past hee had been to their fathers.

Vers.17. For brasse I will bring gold, and for iron will I bring siluer, and for wood brasse, and for stones iron. I will also make thy gouernment peace, and thine exactors righteousnesse.

The excellencie of Christs spirituall Temple discribed.

THe Prophet alludes to the building of the old and ancient Temple, and compares it with the spirituall and heauenly. As if hee should say, When you shall bee carried away captiue, then you will bewaile the ruine of the Temple: but I will so worke, that you shall build it after a more excellent manner. In stead of brasse then, I will bring gold, and in stead of iron, siluer; for wood, brasse, and for stones, iron. As if he had said, All shall bee full of magnificence and glorie in that second Temple which shall succeed the first. Now we know that this propheste was neuer accomplished in the externall restauration of this people. Nay, it is certaine that the beautie of the second Temple was farre inferior to the first: Ezra. 3.12.13. It followes then, that the Prophet who in spirit, saw the true redemption, recites not only that which should fall out presently after the returne of the people; but publisheth the excellencie of the spirituall Temple, which is the Church of Christ: we must therefore come by a direct line, as it were vnto Christ, if wee will attaine the true meaning of this propheste. In his kingdome these things were fully accomplished, and the dignity of the first Temple was much surpassed: For the Lord shed abrode the gifts of his holie spirit, which farre excelled either gold, siluer, or precious stones. Wee may now then see the Temple built of precious stones, as it was in Chapter 54.11.12.

As concerning the word superintendaner, others tanslate tribute. Neither do I doubt but the Prophet meant closelie to compare ỹ miserable seruitude, vnder which the people should be held, with that excellent dignitie, to which they were afterwards aduanced. For to peace and iustice, he opposeth the exactors, who vniustly tyrannised ouer them, whilest the Iewes were vexed with the couetousnesse and crueltie of the Babylonians. Now he shewes that the exactors being cut off, there shall be no other superintendancie then peace and iustice. This was more fullie accomplished, when we were deliuered from the tyrannie of the diuell by Christ. For by his Gospell he erected a kingdome of righteousnesse, which is not yet finished. But wee are to wait for his last comming to see the perfection thereof: and yet in the meane while to content our selues with these first fruits.

Vers.18. Violence shall no more bee heard of in thy land, neither desolation, nor destruction within thy borders: but thou shalt call saluation thy walles, and praise thy gates.

An amplification of the former doctrine.

HE here more largely expresseth that which we haue said: namely, that in describing the happie estate of the Church, hee priuilie opposeth the miseries and calamities wherewith shee had been diuersly afflicted, thereunto. For which cause hee promiseth that in time to come shee should no more be vexed by them. I grant notwithstanding that many euils befell them after their deliuerance. What of that? Yet the people were neuer so vtterly wasted, but some forme of a Church still remained; and by meanes hereof they enioyed peace, feeling by experience that God kept and defended them by his power. Wee must not take it then as if the Prophet in these words promised them to be exempt from all trouble and encumbrance. But this consolation was added by way of comparison, in regard of the miseries to come: to wit, that the Lord will spare his Church; which shall be in safetie vnder his protection.

protection. And queſtionleſſe in the courſe of their deliuerance, they euidently perceiued ſome teſtimonies of this peace which the Prophet doth here ſo highly extoll. To bee ſhort, we muſt alwaies remember that which we haue ſo oft repeated; namely, that wee feele all theſe things in part onely; becauſe the kingdome of Chriſt is not yet accompliſhed.

And thy gates.] He alludes to the building of the Temple, or of the Church, as we haue ſaid elſewhere: and ſhewes that her ſafetie ſhall not conſiſt in towers, walles, or other encloſures; and that howſoeuer humane helpes ſhould faile her, yet ſhould ſhee haue ſufficient ſafetie and quiet contentment in God alone. But to the ſaluation of the Church he ioyneth praiſe, or ioy: for being now in perfect ſafetie ſhee ſhould reioyce: whereas before during her oppreſſion, ſhe lay trodden vnder foote in an hopeleſſe ſilence.

Verſ. 19. Thou ſhalt haue no more Sunne to ſhine by day, neither ſhall the brightneſſe of the Moone ſhine vpon thee: for the Lord ſhall bee thine euerlaſting light, and thy God, thy glorie.

20. Thy Sunne ſhall neuer goe downe, neither ſhall thy Moone bee hid: for the Lord ſhall be thine euerlaſting light, and the daies of thy ſorrow ſhall bee ended.

The Churches felicitie not temporall, but eternall.

HEe teacheth that the Churches felicitie ſhall not be temporarie, but eternall. For he ſeparates her from the common condition of men, among whom, nothing is ſtable nor permanent. Why ſo? Becauſe whatſoeuer is vnder the Sunne, be it neuer ſo well eſtabliſhed, yet is it ſubiect to diuers mutations and changes. But the ſtate of the Church muſt not be meaſured according to the dangers of this preſent life, in regard ſhee is preſerued euen in the midſt of greateſt ſtormes. As if he ſhould ſay; Iudge not of thy ſaluation by outward appearances; but bee thou ſure that God holds that ſafely in his hand. The Lord will bee thy Sunne; ſo as thou ſhalt haue no more need of the light, neither of Sunne nor Moone. Feare not any change then, or confuſion of things; for thou ſhalt inioy a perpetuall and an immoueable light. And yet we muſt not take it as if the Prophet meant heereby to affirme that Gods children ſhould be depriued of the commodities of this preſent life. For ſeeing the Lord hath beſtowed them on all men indifferently, then hath hee much more ordained them for his ſeruants, for whoſe ſakes, euen all things were created of God, in regard he hath a ſpeciall care ouer them. But the Prophet meant yet to ſignifie ſomething more excellent, which the children of God onely doe inioy, namely, that heauenly light. This the wicked cannot apprehend, and therefore they deadly hate it. For howſoeuer they haue the light of the Sunne, and other like benefits; yet cannot their felicitie bee firme nor ſtable, becauſe they are without feeling, which hinders them from taſting the principall good thing, to wit, that God is their Father. Our Prophet therefore diſtinguiſheth the condition of the Church, and of the faithfull therein, from the common eſtate of men in the world: to teach vs not to meaſure it according to the changes and alterations of inferior things: as alſo to informe vs, that in the midſt of the moſt palpable and groſſe darkneſſe, God vſeth to let the light of his fatherly countenance ſhine vpon his children, to cauſe them to reioice. Though all the elements then ſhould ceaſe to doe their office, or ſhould threaten vs with an heauie looke, let it ſuffice vs notwithſtanding that God fauours vs.

Though the felicitie of Gods choſen conſiſts in eternall good things, yet are they not therefore to be deprined of the vſe of temporall things.

By the name of Sunne and Moone, vnder a part hee comprehends the ſtate of the whole world, which is often times changed.

Verſ. 21. *Thy people alſo ſhall be all righteous: they ſhall poſſeſſe the land for euer: the graffe of my planting, euen the worke of mine hands, that I may bee glorified.

*Or, peoples.

THe Prophet ſhewes heere, wherein the true eſtabliſhment of the Church conſiſts: truly when ſhee is ſeparated from the godleſſe, and that the faithfull onely haue place in her. But we know that hypocrites are alwaies mingled amongſt the true children of God in the Church. We haue alſo told you that the kingdome of Chriſt is heere deciphered out; not ſuch a one as it ſhall be in euery particular moment of time, but in its perfection. Chriſt at his firſt comming, began to accompliſh that which is heere ſaid, when he purged his Church: in which regard, he calles his Goſpell a fan, becauſe by it the chaffe is ſeparated from the wheat: Mat. 3. 12. And he continues ſtill euery day to purge it, and wil hold on that courſe euen to the day of harueſt. In the meane while, there muſt be much refuſe mingled amongſt the good graine, which in that day ſhall at laſt bee vtterly purged and cleanſed out.

The Church is then truly eſtabliſhed, when ſhe is ſeparate frō the godleſſe, and that the faithfull alone haue place in her.

Moreouer, heere is a cloſe oppoſition betweene that prophane and wicked troope, who by their filthineſſe doe pollute the ſanctuarie of the Lord. Further alſo he ſeemes to mention the vocation of the Gentiles, when in the plurall number he ſaith, that all peoples ſhall be righteous.

Where hee addes, that they ſhall inherit the land for euer, I doubt not but he had reſpect vnto Iudea, and cloſely oppoſed the time of the reſtauration, to that of the captiuitie, which was at hand. As if he ſhould ſay; Albeit I doe baniſh my people out of their inheritance, yet after ſeuentie yeeres, I will bring them backe againe to poſſeſſe it for euer. It is alſo to be noted, that he reſtraines this promiſe which appertained to all the people of Zion, to the righteous. For thus there is a kind of correction, whereby he ſhuts out all hypocrites, who are wont vainly to vſurp & ſnatch vnto them those titles, which onely belong to the true children of God. This sentence then agrees with the beginning of the 73. Psalme: Yet God is good to Israel, euen to the pure in heart. For here the Prophet attributes the name of Israel, which all bragged of, to the true seruants of God onely. And so in this place we may say as much of the word peoples, to wit, that little remnant which shall be purged from their vncleanesse. This was not wholly accomplished among the Iewes: they had the beginnings of it indeed, when they were restored home vnto their Country againe; that so afterwards by their meanes, the possession of the whole world might be giuen vnto Gods children. And as he spake heeretofore of the restauration of the Temple, which was not perfect in Ierusalem, but should bee extended thorow all the quarters of the world: so this possession of the land must not bee restrained to Iudea alone, seeing it stretcheth it selfe further off, in regard all men are called to haue their part therein: that so by faith they may bee the children of Abraham, and consequently be made heires.

vnto

The phrases of speech vsed by the Prophets, ought diligently to be obserued.

These phrases of speech then which are much in vse among the Prophets, ought to be diligently obserued, that we may the better attaine to their meaning, and not to curtall their sentences, nor wrest them to a wrong sense. Their exposition then is too far fetched, and farre remote from the propriety of the Prophets language; who by the land, vnderstand heauen & the blessed life. For the land of Canaan was giuen to the children of Israel, that being separated from the rest of the world, as the peculiar flocke of God, they might in that place serue him purely. And therefore to possesse the land by right of inheritance, signifies nothing else, but to continue and remaine in the Church of God.

Where God affirmes that the graffe of his planting shall be the worke of his hands; it serues to confirme the hope of the faithfull. For in mans iudgement it was a thing vnpossible that euer the Church should bud againe; for all esteemed her forlorne, chiefly in respect her roote lay hidden. That she might sprout afresh then, the Prophet saith, that God will play the husband man, namely, in replanting that which was withered after it was plucked vp by the rootes. In a word, hee signifies that the deliuerance of the Church out of this miserable seruitude, shal be an admirable worke of the Lord, and not of men; in regard she shall be raised vp as it were from death. And truly that which belongs to the heauenly life, is not giuen vs by nature, nor obtained by our industry; but flowes vnto vs, and proceedes from Gods free bountie. Euery one of vs also ought to apply vnto himself in particular, that which is here said of the whole Church in generall: for we were planted of God before the foundations of the world: Eph. 1. 4. and afterward incorporated and called; to the end we might haue assurance of our election and plantation. The wicked were neuer planted of God: and therefore Christ pronounceth that those whom his heauenly Father hath not planted, shall be plucked vp: Mat. 15. 13.

1 2

To conclude, the end wherefore we be planted, is by and by added, namely, that wee might set forth the praise of God, and tell of his wonderfull workes: as we are taught verie well by Paul, in Eph. 1. 12. And by Peter in his first Epistle: Chap. 2. 9.

The end why we are planted.

Vers. 22 A little one shall become as a thousand, and a small one as a strong nation: I the Lord will hasten it in due time.

A confirmation of that which was said before.

HE confirmes that which he hath alreadie said, namely, that albeit they were few in number, yet the Church of God should bee plentifully repleniſhed with people. When the Prophet foretolde these things, there were great multitudes of people: but in short time after, they were so diminished, that the remainders were very few; as we haue seene in the first and tenth Chapters, yet this small number, saith he, shal so increase, that in processe of time, it shall become an infinit people of great power.

Vse.

Let vs know then, that whatsoeuer was said vnto the Iewes in this behalfe, is also said vnto vs at this day. For howsoeuer we be but a poore handfull of people, and seeme to bee neere our vtter ruine, yet the Church cannot perish, but shall grow and increase to a great multitude, because it is the planting of God: vers. 21. which we must not esteeme of by outward appearances, nor by the force or multitudes of men.

I the Lord.] Now the Prophet shews to what end all his former speeches haue tended, namely, that we should not resemble God vnto men, whose counsels and indeuors easilie vanish and come to nothing. If they would take vpon them to alter the state of the world or of a kingdome; alas, they could doe nothing: but the Lord can change all these things in a moment. He speakes not then of an ordinary gouernment, but of a rare and admirable worke, whereby the Lord will deliuer and multiply his Church.

In the end of the verse he promiseth to hasten the accomplishment of this worke: but he addes a particle that is worthy to bee noted, touching the time of the Church. For the relatiue is in the feminine gender; so as they who refer it vnto God, are deceiued. And those who translate, In his time, are the cause of this error, in regard this word His, is ambiguous. The Prophets meaning is, that there is an appointed time set, in which the Church should be deliuered. And thus hee exhorts the faithfull vnto patience, that they should not fall away; but rather depend vpon the vnchangeable decree of God, who hath skill enough to dispose of the moments of times.

First of all the he notes the fit time wherein it shall be most for the Churches profit to be deliuered. We cannot iudge of this: for we would haue God doe that which hee hath promised out of hand: and if he foreslow the time, we storme. But he defers for our good; & in respect that the fit time is not yet come. Afterwards terwards he ſpeakes of haſtening, becauſe we imagin that the Lord is aſleepe, or takes his eaſe, when hee deferres. And yet hee haſtens, to execute all things according to that time and ſeaſon which he alone knowes to be fitteſt.

THE LXI. CHAPTER.

Verſ. 1. The Spirit of the Lord God is vpon me, therefore hath the Lord anointed me: hee hath ſent me to preach good tidings vnto the poore, to bind vp the broken hearted, to preach libertie to the Captiues, and to them that are bound, the opening of the priſon.

That which is here ſaid appertaines to Chriſt as the head, and all the Prophets and Apoſtles as his ſeruants.

Or as much as Chriſt expoundeth this place of himſelfe, Luk. 4.18. therefore the interpreters doe without any difficultie reſtraine it vnto him: holding it for a principle, that Chriſt is here brought in ſpeaking: as if theſe things onely appertained vnto him. The Iews ſcoffe at ſuch, who inconſiderately haue attributed to Chriſt alone, the things which doe alſo agree to the reſt of the Prophets. To ſpeake then what I thinke, it ſeemes to me, that this Chapter is added as a ſeale vnto the former, thereby to confirme ỳ which hath been ſaid hitherunto touching the reſtauration of the Chriſtian Church. And that to this end Chriſt proteſteth, that God hath anointed him: which is the cauſe that he (and that very iuſtly) appropriates this propheſie vnto himſelfe: in regard hee hath exhibited that to vs clearely and manifeſtly which others haue taught obſcurely. Yet this hinders not, but ỳ this ſentence may in like manner agree to the reſt of the Prophets whom the Lord hath alſo anointed. For they ſpake not in their owne names, neither did they execute their offices from their priuate authoritie: but they ſhewed foorth the authoritie and office of Chriſt; to whom it not onely belongs to publiſh theſe things; but alſo to fulfill them. This place then muſt be thus vnderſtood, namely, that Chriſt who is the Prince of the Prophets, obtaines the chiefe place among thẽ: and that it is he only who manifeſts all that which is here mentioned: & alſo that Iſaiah, with the reſt of the Prophets, and the Apoſtles, are his ſeruants; euery one of them imploying theſelues to the vtmoſt in preaching and publiſhing the benefits which we receiue frõ him. So as ỳ which Iſaiah hath ſaid ſhould be finiſhed by Chriſt, wee now ſee it accompliſhed by the effects.

This Chapter is added as a ſeale vnto the things before going.

For this cauſe he hath anointed me.] This ſecond member was added in ſtead of an expoſition. For firſt it would haue been obſcure to vs, If he had concealed the cauſe, wherefore God had giuen him his Spirit: but now wee may euidently perceiue his meaning, when he ſhewes the vſe thereof: namelie, that hee exerciſeth a publicke office, that ſo hee may not bee taken as ſome priuate perſon.

Now as often as the Scripture mentions the ſpirit of God, and ſaith, that it dwels in vs: 1.Cor.3.16. let vs conſider of his efficacie and power; and not imagine it to be ſome vaine and idle thing in vs without any effect. Wherefore after the Prophet hath ſpoken of the Spirit of the Lord: in the ſecond place he addes the anointing thereunto: thereby vnderſtanding the vertues which proceed from that ſpirit. To which purpoſe Paul ſaith, 1.Cor.12.4. that there are diuers gifts: but only one ſpirit from whence they flow. This place is diligently to be obſerued of vs, for no man ought to take vnto himſelf power or authoritie to teach in the Church of God, vnleſſe he be able to ſhew that he is called therunto by the vertue of Gods ſpirit. And ſo teſtifies S. Paul in 1.Cor.12.3. namely, that no man can ſay, Ieſus is the Lord, but by the holy Ghoſt.

We muſt not thinke of the ſpirit without his efficatie.

No man ought to take vpon him the office of a Teacher, vnleſſe he be able to manifeſt that hee is called therunto of God.

But, may ſome ſay, wee ſee that euery one bragges of the ſpirit. For the Pope, the Anabaptiſts and other heretikes and fanaticall ſpirits haue alwaies the holy Ghoſt in their mouthes, as if hee were their gouernour. How, or by what meanes then may wee diſcerne of him that is ſent by God, and conducted by his ſpirit, from him that is not? By the anointing. That is to ſay, if he be endued with gifts anſwerable to this charge. If hee then who is ſent of God haue the graces and gifts which his office requires; then hath he aſſuredly the holy Ghoſt. But if hee will take vpon him the office of a teacher; and in the meane while is deſtitute both of knowledge and doctrine, let him be held for a ſeducer.

Obiect.

Anſ.

To preach.] The Prophet attributes not vnto himſelfe the authoritie of a teacher, till hee hath made it manifeſt that he was ſent of God. His authoritie is founded vpon his anointing: namely, in being fitted and furniſhed by the Lord with ſufficient gifts. It is our duties to giue him audience then, not as to a priuate perſon, but as vnto a publike Miniſter ſent from heauen.

To the afflicted.) Others tranſlate, To the mecke: and the word Anauim, ſignifies both the one and the other. But I had rather retaine the firſt ſignification, in reſpect the Prophet ſpeakes of the priſoners, and of thoſe that are bound. And yet, as I take it, he comprehends both. For he ſpeakes of ſuch, who being vtterly forſaken and reiected, are alſo miſerable in themſelues. Chriſt is only promiſed to ſuch as are humbled and brought low by the ſenſe of their miſeries, who hauing no conceit of their own worth, do willingly containe themſelues within the bounds of modeſty and humility. Hence we gather that our Prophet ſpeakes properly of the Goſpell. For the law was giuen to bring downe all loftie imaginations, and ſuch as are ſwollen with vaine confidence: but the Goſpell is ordained for the afflicted: that is to ſay, for ſuch as confeſſe thẽſelues emptie of all good things, that by and through it they may be raiſed vp and comforted. For to what end are the Prophets, Apoſtles, and other Miniſters anointed, but to reſtore and comfort the heauie hearts by the doctrine of grace?

imaginations,

To binde vp.] The Prophet vſeth diuers phraſes of ſpeech that he might the better expreſſe one and the ſame thing. In the word to binde vp, he expreſſeth ſomewhat more then in the former member. For he ſhewes, that the preaching of the Goſpell is no emptie ſound vaniſhing away in the aire, but a medicine that is operatiue, which works not vpon thoſe that are ſtubborne and ſtrong, but vpon ſuch as haue broken and contrite hearts. It is alſo the end of the Goſpell to ſet the captiues at libertie. We are all priſoners and fettered, vntill Chriſt haue let vs free by his grace, Iohn 8.36. But let vs beware that we reiect not the benefit which he offers vs whẽ he is about to ſmite off our yrons. Generally we may note that the benefits here mentioned are diſtributed vnto vs by the Goſpell, but none are capable hereof, except thoſe who feeling their pouertie doe ardentlie deſire the help of Chriſt, according as himſelfe ſaith, Math.11.28. Come vnto me all yee that trauell and be heauie loden, and I will refreſh you.

Vpon whom the Goſpell works.

Who are capable of the Goſpell.

Verſ. 2. To preach the acceptable yeere of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God, to comfort all that mourne.

HE here expreſſeth the very time wherein this ſo excellent grace ſhould be ſpread abrode, ỹ ſo he might take away all ſcruples & doubts that might come into their heads. For all of vs are ſubiect to ſundrie cares, and many incumbrances ariſe vp in our minds, which hold them intangled with infinite diſcourſes, whereof we taſt by dayly experience. Now the Prophet affirmes that he is the Herald of the grace which is to be reuealed, the time whereof reſts wholly in the diſpoſition of the Almightie: for as himſelfe was to be the redeemer of his Church, by his meere fauor, ſo was it in his owne power (and that by good right) to make choice of the time himſelfe wherein to performe the ſame. It may be the Prophet alluded to the yeere of Iubile, Leuit.25.10. Howſoeuer it be, he boldly pronounceth that they were patientlie to wait with meeke and quiet ſpirits, vntill it pleaſed God to ſtretch forth his hands.

The time when this grace ſhould be manifeſted.

The yeere of Iubile.

S. Paul in his Epiſtle to the Rom.16.26. and to the Galath.4.4. calles this yeere the fulnes of time. We haue alſo ſeene heretofore that the Prophet in Chap.49.8. ſaid, Behold the acceptable time, behold the day of ſalvation: which ſentence S. Paul in 2.Cor.6.2. applies to his preaching of the Goſpell. For when the Lord ſummons vs thereby, then is the gate of heauen ſet open vnto vs, that wee ſhould forthwith enter into the poſſeſſion of Gods graces. Wee muſt not therefore put it off till to morrow; but wee muſt make vſe of the time, and take the occaſion whileſt ſo large mercies are offered vnto vs.

But heere ſeemes to be a repugnancie betweene theſe two, namely, the acceptable yeere, and the day of vengeance. What is the reaſon why Iſaiah hath ioined things ſo different together? Truely, becauſe God can not vvorke the deliuerance of his Church, but he muſt therewithal ſhew himſelf a iuſt Iudge in reuenging himſelf vpon ỹ wicked. The acceptable time then is to be referred vnto the elect: and the day of vengeance vnto the wicked, who neuer ceaſe perſecuring of the Church. It is needfull therefore that in the deliuerance thereof they ſhould be chaſtiſed. According to which Paul ſaith, 2.Theſſ.1.6. that it is a righteous thing with God to render vengeance vntó the enemies who vniuſtly afflict the faithfull, and to giue reſt to the afflicted. Neither could the Iewes expect any good iſſue out of ſo many miſeries, vnleſſe it were by the confuſion of their aduerſaries.

Queſt.

Anſ.

In the meane while it is good to note the cauſe of this deliuerãce, which muſt be wholly aſcribed to the free grace of God, and not to our merits, worthines, or any induſtrie that is in vs. The Prophet ſeemes indeed, as I haue ſaid, to allude to the yeere of Iubile: but yet we muſt principallie obſerue this, namely, that our ſaluation conſiſts altogether vpon the free will of our God.

To comfort.] We muſt remember what I haue touched before, to wit, what the end of the Goſpell is: namely, That we being deliuered out of all miſeries, and reſtored to our firſt liberty, our teares wiped from our eies, we may enioy ſpirituall comfort and conſolation. But if we be depriued of ſo great a benefit, let vs impute the ſame to our owne incredulitie and vnthankfulnes, whereby we both reiect and repulſe God, who freely offers himſelfe vnto vs.

Verſ.3. To appoint vnto them that mourne in Zion,* and *to giue vnto them * beauty for aſhes, the oyle of ioy for mourning, the garment of gladnes for the ſpirit of heauines, that they may be called trees of righteouſnes, the planting of the Lord, that he might be glorified.*

*Or, to eſtabliſh.

*Or, magnificence.

HE proſecutes the ſame argument, and declares, that the chaſtiſement wherewith the people ſhould be exerciſed, ſhould not be ſo ſharp, but that there was hope notwithſtanding left for them touching remiſſion of ſinnes. Which that hee might the better perſwade thẽ of, he ſaith, the Lord hath giuen him charge to publiſh this deliuerance, and that not to himſelfe alone, but alſo to all the Prophets, euen til the comming of that great Embaſſador, to wit, Chriſt Ieſus, who ſhall indeed publiſh and accompliſh that which God would now haue diuulged for the time to come: yet therewithall he ſignifies, that their ſorrowes ſhall not be able to let God from giuing them matter of ioy, whẽ it ſhould ſeeme good good vnto himſelfe. For to eſtabliſh, is as much to ſay, as to appoint a time, that the long delay might not diſcourage them. Againe, by the verb, To giue, he recommends vnto them the efficacie of his prophecie, to the end they might be vndoubtedly perſwaded touching the euent thereof. Well, he alludes herein to the ancient Ceremonies of the Iewes, who, when any affliction in thoſe times preſſed them, were wont to couer their heads with aſhes, and to clothe themſelues with ſackcloth. By theſe things then he notes out that mourning and deformitie, which of neceſſitie was to enſue vpon the peoples wofull condition, and oppoſeth the ſame to that ioy and gladnes which they ſhould be filled withall, after they had obtained their freedome and libertie.

The ſame argument continued.

But yet me thinks I can not let paſſe the anſwering of theſe words Peer, and Epher, one to another, which ſignifie magnificence, and aſhes. For by the tranſpoſition of the letters, they ſignifie things cleane contrarie: by which elegant turning of the words vpſide downe, he meant to note out the change of their eſtate.

Trees of righteouſneſſe.] By theſe words hee ſets out the peoples reſtauration. As if hee ſhould ſay; Whereas in times paſt you were rooted vp, and reſembled a withered ſtocke; now you ſhall be planted againe and eſtabliſhed. He brings them then to the conſideration of Gods power, to the end that howſoeuer they ſhould be ouerwhelmed & brought to deaths doore, yet were they notwithſtanding to aſſure themſelues to bee ſo reuiued, that they ſhould take roote, gather ſtrength, and grow.

A generall Doctrine. Hence we may gather a generall doctrine, namely, that we cannot be quickened, vnleſſe we be planted by the Lord. True it is that we are called his plants, Chap. 60.21. becauſe hee hath elected vs from the beginning: Eph. 1.4. But yet there is another kind of planting

Two kinds of planting. which ſucceeds this firſt; to wit, our calling, which by faith grafts vs into ye body of Chriſt. This the Lord brings to paſſe by the labours of his ſeruants, the Miniſters of the Goſpell: but the whole muſt be aſcribed vnto him, becauſe it is hee onely that giues the increaſe: 1.Cor.3.7. Yet we are alwaies to keep in mind that doctrine, which brings vs from this firſt deliuerance, vnto the ſpirituall kingdome of Chriſt.

He cals them trees of righteouſneſſe, in whom Gods iuſtice ſhines, or, an order rightly compoſed. Yet let vs know that the Lord adopts vs vpon condition that we be new creatures, and that righteouſneſſe may rule and raigne in vs. And thence it followes that by nature we are all corrupt and peruerſe, and cannot bring forth any good fruit, till the Lord haue changed and planted vs. This alſo aboliſheth

Popiſh preparations. that vaine and proud conceit of the Papiſts, who in forging vnto themſelues preparations, forſooth, or, ſome helps of free will, vſurp vpon that which belongs vnto God. If we bee planted of the Lord, then it followes that by nature wee are drie and vnfruitfull.

For my glory.] See heere the end wherefore we be planted. But of this matter we haue ſpoken in Chap. 60.21.

Verſ. 4. And they ſhall build the old waſte places, and raiſe vp the former deſolations: and they ſhall repaire the Cities that were deſolate and waſte thorow many generations.

THe Prophet amplifies this reſtauration of the Church, and inſiſts principally thereabouts; that the Iewes might conceiue in their mindes a certaine and an aſſured hope of their deliuerance: for theſe promiſes ſeemed altogether incredible. And this is the cauſe why hee adornes the benefit of this redemption with ſo many glorious and goodly titles. Thoſe erre, who will haue theſe words, Of the age, and from generation to generation, referred to the time to come. As if the Prophet ſhould haue ſaid; that the building whereof he ſpeakes, ſhall be firme and ſtable: whereas his meaning is farre otherwiſe. For he ſhewes (as I noted in Chap. 58.12.) namely, that the old ruines of the Citie ſhould not hinder the Lord from rearing it vp againe. After the inhabitants of any Citie haue been long ſcattered heere and there, what hope is left that it ſhould be built againe? As for example; who is he that thinkes of the reedifiing of Athens? So whileſt the Iewes were baniſhed for a long time into a forrain country, and that Ieruſalem lay waſte the ſpace of ſeuentie yeeres; who durſt expect that euer the Citizens thereof ſhould haue reedified it? For this cauſe Iſaiah calles deſerts of an age, the places formerly deſolated; the Cities waſted, the ſolitarie places from generation to generation: to ſhew that none of theſe ſhould hinder the Lord in due ſeaſon, as was noted in Chap. 60.22. to bring backe his elect to Ieruſalem, and to cauſe them to dwell there.

An amplification in this & the verſes following.

Athens.

Vſe. Moreouer, theſe things ought to bee applied to our deſolate times. For howſoeuer the Lord permits his Church to be raced, and to lie long in her ruines, without any hope at all of being reſtored; yet let vs confirme and ſtrengthen our hearts with theſe promiſes; for it is Gods proper and peculiar office to build vp and to renue the things which for a long time haue beene ruinated and lien rotting in a perpetuall conſumption. But wee haue handled this matter before in Chap. 58.

Verſ. 5. And the ſtrangers ſhall ſtand and feede your ſheep: and the ſonnes of the ſtrangers ſhall be your plowmen, and dreſſers of your vines.

HIs meaning is, that the ſtrangers ſhall bee readie to obey them. For in reſpect they were at that time diuided from other nations, no man would lend them their hand. And therefore hee ſaith, that the ſtrangers doe ſtand: that is to ſay, are readie preſt to meete and to ſuccour them.

Where he addes, that they shall feede their sheepe and shall be the plowmen and vinedressers, these are borowed kinds of speeches. For the Prophet speakes of Christs kingdome, which is spirituall; and sets foorth the perfect felicitie thereof, vnder these figures; that we might the better conceiue of those things which are here proposed vnto vs by examples. Let vs know therefore that wee shall bee truely happie, when Christ shall reigne ouer vs: for by meanes thereof many commodities whereof the posteritie of Adam is worthily depriued, shall be restored vnto vs vnawares.

Who shall be truly happie when Christ shall reigne ouer vs.

Vers. 6. But yee shall be named the Priests of the Lord; and men shall say vnto you, The Ministers of our God: yee shall eate the riches of the Gentiles, and shall be exalted with their glory.

THis verse giues vs a little better light into the former: for in the second part thereof Isaiah foretels, that the faithfull shall eate the riches of the Gentiles, and shall be exalted with their glorie. The Iewes lay hold of these places with great earnestnesse, and greedily deuoure al the goods of other nations, as if one day they should be masters of all: and glorie, as if all the pompe of the world should fall to their shares. But for our better vnderstanding of these things, wee must especially obserue two points. First, that the Prophets minding to set forth the glorie and felicitie of Christs kingdome; borrow similitudes from things belonging to men. Secondlie, in speaking of the Church, they so conioyne the head with the members, that sometimes they rather respect him then the members.

1
2
Two points must be obserued for the better vnderstanding of the Prophets.

Neither must we reape this fruition of other mens goods, as if those which should bee conuerted vnto Christ should gripe vnto themselues riches, glorie, or the dignities of others; for this would not stand with the rules of charitie. But in respect that all things should be subiected vnder Christs dominion; that so he might obtaine the soueraigne rule and authoritie ouer them. This is it which I haue alreadie said, to wit, that the Prophet hath not so much regard of the members, as of the head himselfe. But when riches are brought vnder Christs power, then they are called ours; because he hath nothing which belongs not to his spouse the Church. It is said in chap. 45.14. in the same sense that the enemies of Christ shall fall downe at his feet, and make supplication vnto him: and yet this is done to the Church, in whom they acknowledge Christ, & submit themselues vnto his doctrine. See chap. 60.14. Isaiah then shewes what the Father will giue to the Sonne, who hath lawfull power ouer all the world: to whom also all things ought to be subiect.

In the meane while we must not omit that which I touched erewhile: namely, that God feedes his elect liberally in this world, to the end thy might feele that their estate is better then that of the infidels. For howsoeuer they may want many things, yet a little contents them; for which they giue God heartie thankes: so as their wants to them are much better, then all the wealth of the world is to the wicked.

By the word Priests hee shewes, that the condition of the common people shall bee much better then it was in times past. As if he should say, Hitherunto the Lord hath chosen you for his heritage onely: but hereafter he will indue you with more excellent giftes, for hee will make you Priests. Now howsoeuer all the people were a kingdome of Priests, Exod. 19.6. yet wee know that the Tribe of Leui onelie exercised this office, Deut. 33.10. But our Prophet here testifies that afterward it shall be common to all. Yet this was not manifested till Christ came. I grant that the restauration of the Church began at the returne of the people out of Babylon: but in the end at Christs comming, the faithfull were adorned with this dignitie.

Hereunto appertaines that which is written in 1. Pet. 2.9. You are an holy nation, a royall Priesthood. But withall we ought diligently to note what this kind of Priesthood is: for we must no more offer vnto God any brute beasts; but reasonable men must now be offered and sacrificed to the obedience of Christ. According to which S. Paul saith, that hee offered vp the Gentiles by the sword of the Gospell, that they might afterwards yeeld their obedience vnto God. Rom. 15.19.

Childishnes of Papists in prouing their Priesthood.

Hence we see how childishly the Papists trifle in abusing this place to proue their priesthood: for the Pope and his chaplens ordaine Priests to sacrifice to Iesus Christ; and not to teach his people (both which Moses ioines together in Deut. 33.10.) But Christ offered vp himself by an eternall redemption, & he only once for all hath performed this Priestly office: Heb. 9.12. Minding that the fruit of this sacrifice should now be offered vnto vs by the preaching of the Gospell. They which vsurp this office are sacrilegious persons, namely, such as wil reiterate, that which Christ hath by himselfe accomplished. Euery one ought rather to offer himselfe, with all that hee hath vnto God: Rom. 12.1. that he may exercise this Priesthood as hee ought to doe. Secondly, the Ministers who are especially called to teach, ought to vse the sword of Gods word to offer vp, and to consecrate men vnto God. Lastly, those are indeede faithfull and true Ministers, who enterprise nothing of their owne heads, but boldly and vprightly put those commandements in execution, which they haue receiued from God.

Vers. 7. For your shame, you shall receiue double *, and for confusion they shal reioyce in their portion: for in their land, they shall possesse the double: euerlasting ioy shall be vnto them.

* Or, honour.

A confirmation of the former sentence.

HE confirmes the former sentence, where he had said that the faithful which mourned, med, being couered with ſackcloth and aſhes, ſhould be ſprinkled vvith the oile of gladneſſe: verſ.3. Now this change of their ſorrow into ioy, is heere againe promiſed. Some interpret double to bee in regard that thoſe whom God hath redeemed, ſhould be happie before him, and before men. But I know not whether this expoſition be ſolid enough or no. I had rather take it more ſimply then, as if the Prophet ſhould haue ſaid; The proſperitie of the Church ſhall be ſo great, that it ſhall much exceede all the calamities and aduerſities wherewith it is now oppreſſed. If ſhe be now then diſcontented with her eſtate, ſhee muſt caſt her eies towards this day, in which ſhee ſhall be moſt happy. And ſo Saint Paul oppoſeth a vveight of glory to the momentany afflictions, which are ſuddenly gone: 2.Cor.4.17. The wicked ſcorne vs without meaſure: for they ſeeme luſtie and ſtrong; they abuſe their proſperitie, and tread vnder their feete the poore children of God: but the Lord promiſeth in ſhort ſpace, to cauſe the faithfull (being deliuered from vnder their tyrannie) to reioice in their portion. This began to be accompliſhed when the people returned out of captiuitie: but in Chriſt we haue a more full teſtimonie of it, which daily manifeſts it ſelfe, and at his laſt comming ſhall be finiſhed, who will perfectly renue all things; and the wicked ſhall be conſumed, to the end the poſſeſſion of the world may be ours.

To this appertaines that which hee ſaith by way of yeelding or granting; namely, that the land is now indeede theirs. For then they vaunted themſelues as being Lords of the whole world: but in the end they ſhould feele that it is the proper and particular poſſeſſion of Gods children. Euerlaſting ioy may be referred to the externall eſtate of the Church; becauſe God daily furniſheth them with ample matter of thankſgiuing: but in regard they are conſtrained to ſwallow many anguiſhes, and are inuironed about with all kindes of incumbrances, this prophecie is not accompliſhed vntill the ioy of the Spirit hath gotten ſtrength in vs, and obtained the full victorie in our hearts; nor till wee feele that ſweete peace which paſſeth all vnderſtanding, to raigne there; as ſaith Saint Paul in Phil.4.7. Col.3.15. which peace onely the Saints of God inioy, when they feele liuely teſtimonies within them of their adoption. Hee calles it perpetuall, to ſhew how farre it differs from the ioy of the wicked, which is but of ſhort continuance, and ſuddenly vaniſheth away: yea, and is conuerted into gnaſhing of teeth.

Difference betweene the ioy of the godly, and the wicked.

Verſ.8. For I the Lord loue iudgement, and hate robberie for burnt offering: and I will direct their worke in truth, and will make an euerlaſting couenant with them.

An exhortation added to the former confirmatiõ.

THe Prophet not onely confirmes that which he hath promiſed in the name of God, but alſo exhorts the Iewes to repentance, and ſhewes them from whence they were to looke for ſaluation, and with what a terrible Iudge they had to deale. For he reaſons from the nature of God; and thence ſhewes after what manner they were to frame their liues, that ſo they might not reiect this grace of God now offered them by their owne rebellion.

Vnder the word iudgement, he comprehends all iuſtice and equall dealing. For hee oppoſeth this word to thoſe idle inuentions whereby the Iewes thought to ſatisfie God withall, which yet were but cloakes for their wickednes. But as we haue often ſeene heeretofore, the Lord cares for none of theſe maskes and vaine pretences, but onely requires the true puritie of the heart and hands, purged from all iniquities. He then that will be approued of God, with all that he performes in his ſeruice, muſt needs haue a pure heart, and leade a blameleſſe life.

Hating robberie for burnt offerings.] Vnder a part he comprehends all the fained ſeruices of God. And by burnt offering, is vnderſtood all ſacrifices. There is nothing then more hatefull, then that men ſhould ſacrifice their robberies and coſenages vnto God: or, when they mingle their lies, hypocriſies, and filthineſſes of heart therewith; or, in defrauding God maliciouſly of his right, doe corrupt his pure worſhip. Whoſe ſeruice it is that God approues of.

But this is a vice not onely practiſed of that age, but in all times. For euery one will ſeeme to ſerue God, and the wicked themſelues will be aſhamed to be without the appearance of deuotion, in regard the ſenſe and feeling of the diuine nature is ſo ingrauen in the hearts of all men, that it cannot be raced out. But in the meane while, the moſt part of men doe but triſle & dallie with God, and labor to ſatisfie him with pretie gawdies and roies. Iſaiah therefore condemnes and deteſts ſuch an hypocriſie; and teacheth that the Lord rather requires mercy of vs, then ſacrifices: Hoſ.6.7. Mat.9.13. and 12.7. For wee cannot ſerue God, vnleſſe vve obſerue the duties of the ſecond table, namely, in abſtaining from all violence and fraudulent dealing: for he who either deceiues, or offers violence to his neighbours, doth alſo therewithall offer violence vnto God himſelfe. To bee ſhort, the Prophets meaning is, to teach vs the true meanes to attaine repentance: firſt, if in caſting off all hypocriſie, and in reiecting all inuentions of men, the ſeruants of God doe giue themſelues to the duties of brotherly loue. The meanes to attaine true repentance. 1 2

I vvill eſtabliſh their vvork.] Some expound, The reward of their work. But I rather thinke heereby are vnderſtood all the enterpriſes of this life, vnto which the Lord promiſeth an happie ſucceſſe. That which men purpoſe in themſelues to doe, comes not to a good end, either in regard they neglect to aske counſell of God, or becauſe they doe not things vnder his conduct and leading. And therefore they worthily beare the puniſhment of their boldneſſe: for they either truſt in their own counſels, or depend vpon chances. Now in any of all theſe things there is not ſo much as a dramme of truth, but onely a deceiueable ſhadow of it. On the other ſide, it is no mar- Why mens affaires haue commonly ill ſucceſſe.

uell if all things prosper well in their hands, that are gouerned and directed by the holie Ghost, and doe whollie cast both themselues and their affaires vpon the prouidence of the almightie: for all prosperitie doth absolutelie flow from his onely blessing.

Moreouer, by the word truth is vnderstood an equall course: for the vnbeleeuers are sometimes puffed vp with a worldly ioy, but it foorthwith vanishes into smoke. In the end of the verse hee shewes the cause of this stabilitie; namely, God doth not only guide them with his hand for once, and so away: but directs them in their way continually. Loe here the solid stay and vpholding of our perseuerance: to wit, in that he vouchsafeth to make an euerlasting couenant with vs: wherein he binds himselfe voluntarily; and freelie bestowes all things vpon vs, albeit in truth he owes vs nothing at all.

Vers. 9. And their seed shall be knowne among the Gentiles, and their buds among the people. All that see them shall know them, that they are the seede whom the Lord hath blessed.

An amplification touching the enlargement of the Church.

THe Prophet discourseth here more clearely touching the aduancement and growth of the Church which was then shut vp within a narrow scantling, and in an out corner of the world, and were afterwards much diminished and lopped: as wee haue seene in the first and tenth Chapters. Isaiah then speakes of the Church, which after so many diminishings shall spread againe ouer the whole world, and that in such wise, as she shall bee viewed of all nations. And yet this fell not out, no not vnder the reigne of Salomon whilest the Iewes flourished in greatest abundance of riches and glorie: 1. King. 10. 21. 27. now this seemed incredible. This is the cause also why the Prophets insist so much in perswading the Iewes, repeating it ouer againe and againe: to wit, that they should not measure this restauration according to their carnall sense, nor to outward appearances.

Quest. Ans. 1 2

Now it may be asked, whē these things came to passe. I answer (as I haue often done) that they began to be accomplished, when the people came home into their countrie: for then, and afterwards in succession of time they tasted many waies of Gods fauour towards them. Yet in regard there were but a few small sparkles of these things to bee discerned in those times: therefore the perfect beautie of them shined in Christ, vnder whose kingdome these things were whollie accomplished. For then religion was as it were buried; Abrahams posteritie began to sprout; in respect that strangers were by faith ingrafted into the bodie of the elect people. And thus the barbarous nations came to know, that the Iewes were the blessed seed of God: namely, when they vnited themselues vnto them in the same confession of faith. Neither was this only accomplished once, but is euery day more and more fulfilled. Whereas the Iewes were first preferred, and obtained the chiefe place in Gods couenant, it must be attributed vnto Gods free mercie as S. Paul teacheth in Rom. 3. 2. For hauing there shewed that they differ in nothing by nature from the Gentiles, and that hee hath subiected them to the same condemnation with them: he therewithall shewes that they had this excellent priuiledge to be the first vnto whome the word and promises of God were giuen. But that all these things proceeded meerelie from Gods free grace, and not from their merits or deserts.

Vers. 10. I will greatly reioyce in the Lord, and my soule shall be ioyfull in my God: for hee hath clothed me with the garments of saluation; and couered mee with the robe of righteousnesse: he hath decked mee like a bridegrome, and as a bride tireth her selfe with Iewels.

THe Prophet here brings in the Church giuing of thankes vnto God, the better to perswade them of the truth of that which he hath said heretofore. And it is a liuely description, as it were, wherein he paints out the thing done in a table, and placeth it before their eies, that hee might remooue all scruples. For naturally wee are inclined to distrust: and withall so inconstant, that wee will rather giue credit vnto mens dreames, then to the word of God. But touching this kind of confirmation wee haue discoursed both in Chap. 12. 1. and 26. 1. as also in other places.

To what men are naturally inclined.

For he hath clothed me.] Surely these things were yet very farre off. But it was necessarie they should be seene and comprehended by faith. Yea, it is very needfull that wee lift vp our eies to heauen, when the Prophet preacheth to vs the doctrine of righteousnes and saluation. There is nothing visible here, and much lesse can we apprehend so great a felicitie: seeing all things are still bending towards a dissolution. But in regard that euen at this day such a beauty, as this appeares not in the Church, which (for the most part) on the contrarie is vnder the horror of the crosse, and therefore contemptible to all the world: it is needfull here that faith should come betweene, which comprehends celestiall and inuisible things.

Iustice is ioyned with saluation, in regard the one cannot be separated from the other. These similitudes of garments & robes, are well enough knowne: and it is as much as if the Church should haue said, that iustice and saluation were giuen her together. Seeing it is the Lord then who distributes these benefits, let vs conclude in our selues, that it is onelie he, of whom we must aske them, and none but he, from whom we must expect them. In these words, he hath decked me, there is a figuratiue kind of speech, which they think to be taken from the Priests garments: for which cause some haue descanted here vpon the prieſthood of Chriſt. But as I thinke, the Propher meant not to ſpeake ſo ſubtilly, in vſing the ſimilitudes of the bride & bridegroome. The Church was in miſerable plight before, and euery one contemned her as a vvife diuorced from her husband. But he hauing receiued her into fauour againe, ſhee ſhines vvith vvonderfull beautie. And the place in Hoſea, 2. 20. anſwers vnto this. Such an ornament was giuen at the comming of Chriſt, and we alſo receiue it daily, when the Lord clothes vs with righteouſneſſe and ſaluation. But all theſe things ſhall bee fully accompliſhed at Chriſts laſt comming, as we haue often ſaid.

Priesthood

Verſ. 11. For as the earth bringeth forth her bud, and as the garden cauſeth to grow that which is ſowne in it: ſo the Lord will cauſe righteouſneſſe to grow, and praiſe before all the heathen.

THe Prophet confirmes the former promiſes, by another goodly ſimilitude: for he brings the Iewes to the ordinarie power of God, which ſhines in his creatures. Wee ſee that the earth brings forth her bud euerie yeere; the gardens grow greene after they haue beene ſowen vvith ſeedes: to be ſhort, the graſſe and plants which in winter ſeemed as good as dead, doe reuiue againe in the ſpring time, and recouer new ſtrength. Now theſe are infallible teſtimonies of Gods power, and of the good will which hee beares vs. Seeing theſe things then come thus ordinarily to paſſe, ſhould men doubt thereof? Hath hee giuen this vertue and power vnto the earth, and will he not much more manifeſt the ſame for the deliuerance of his people? Will not hee cauſe the elect ſeede to bud, and bring forth; which as he hath promiſed, ſhall alwaies remaine in the world?

Before all the Gentiles.] Hee ſhewes againe that the bounds of the Church ſhall no more bee ſo narrow as they were; becauſe the Lord will cauſe her to repleniſh the whole world. Afterwards he mentions righteouſneſſe, which was fully reuealed at ſuch time as the Lord redeemed his people: but Gods righteouſneſſe did then eſpecially appeare, when Chriſt was manifeſted vnto the world. Not that he concealed it till that time, but in regard men attained not to ſuch a cleere knowledge of it. It is as much then as if he had ſaid; The Lord will ſo deliuer and reſtore his Church, that all ſhall know his righteouſneſſe: for deliuerance is an excellent teſtimonie thereof.

He addes praiſe, in reſpect that ſuch a benefit ought to be accompanied with thankſgiuings: for the end of righteouſneſſe is Gods glory. And therefore he exhorts vs to beware of ingratitude, ſeeing it were too vnworthy a thing to haue our lippes ſhut vp, after the receiuing of ſo many benefits from God. 1 2

THE LXII. CHAPTER.

Verſ. 1. For Zions ſake I will not hold my tongue, and for Ieruſalems ſake I will not reſt, vntill the righteouſneſſe thereof breake forth as the light, and the ſaluation thereof as a burning lampe.

The cauſes of theſe often repetitions.

IN regard that this ſorrowfull exile approched neere, which ſhould in a maner vtterly extinguiſh the name of this people, it was needefull for the faithfull to bee confirmed and hartened with many words, that in ſure and ſtedfaſt confidence, they might bee ſupported with theſe promiſes, vnder the heauie burthen of the Croſſe. In this verſe the Prophet diſcharging that office which was committed vnto him, plainely proteſts, that hee will no vvay be idle in the performance of his duties; neither will be ceaſe to ſpeake, till he hath cheered vp the hearts of the faithfull in the hope of their ſaluation to come, that they might know and bee perſwaded that God would deliuer his Church. For himſelfe (good man) might be diſcouraged in beholding the peoples incredulitie, and might be driuen to forſake all, in regard he knew things would grow euerie day worſe and worſe. Adde alſo, that he well foreſaw this horrible vengeance to bee at hand. But as one vtterly neglecting all theſe incumbrances, hee notwithſtanding vowes a conſtant perſeuerance in his courſe: to ſignifie vnto all, that neither the common calamitie, nor yet the peoples diſſidence, ſhould be able to hinder God from the performance of his promiſes, when the appointed time thereof was come. Now it was needfull that theſe things ſhould be often repeated vnto them, becauſe the peruerſitie of our minde is ſuch, that we preſently forget Gods promiſes. 1 2

In that he ſaith, he vvill not hold his peace: he therewithall admoniſheth others alſo of their duties, that they might be couragious, and with aſſurance of faith to wait for their redemption, though it were deferred for a time: yea, that their hope ſhould not ceaſe to anſwer Gods voice, which ſounds continually in their eares. We haue daily experience of the neceſſitie of this dutie, when Satan labours with might and maine to turne our feete out of the right way. Thus then the Prophet not onely ſhewes what hee himſelfe would doe, but by his example teacheth what end all faithfull Miniſters ſhould propound vnto themſelues; to wit, wholly to imploy their vtmoſt indeuors for the benefit of the Church. For when he ſaith, for Zions ſake, it it is to shew that our principall care ought to extend it selfe about the procuring of the perpetuall safetie and prosperous estate of the Church: as also that such deserue not the titles of good and faithfull Pastors, vnlesse they haue taken the care of her welfare so to heart, that they refuse no paines whatsoeuer, for the bringing thereof to passe.

What ought to be our principall care.

Some referre these words to praiers: but I
1 had rather referre it to preaching; and so the sense agrees best, namely, that the Prophet will not be discouraged for any incumbrance or iniurie, that he should meete withall in the way: neither would he suffer his zeale to bee cooled, for any impediment whatsoeuer, from pursuing his office of publishing that which God had inioined him, touching the Churches deliuerance. For had he liued vntill this wofull desolation fell out, no doubt but hee should haue suffered many outrages, by reason of the multitudes infidelitie, as well as other Prophets did. But what euer came, hee protests that he is fortified with such inuincible constancie, that he will neuer be ashamed for any disgraces that men shall offer him, but will manfully hold on his course. By
2 this phrase of speech also he shewes, that his prophecies are all true, and therefore addes the more authoritie vnto them, that after his death they might neuer cease to sound in the eares and hearts of the faithfull.

Hee takes righteousnesse for the Churches right, which during the time of her affliction, seemed to be condemned. Her righteousnesse brake forth and appeared then, when shee was restored vnto her perfection, and had recouered her first estate: for this righteousnesse was hid as long as they were captiues.

Saluation is coupled with righteousnesse: for whom God iustifies or maintaines their right, such recouer their saluation by the same meanes. Hence we gather that wee are most miserable and succourlesse, whilest God withdrawes his grace, in regard of our frowardnesse. The Prophet therefore in other places hath attributed that righteousnes vnto God, which he now saith belongs vnto the church. Wee are vndone then when we are depriued of Gods grace; that is to say, whilest wee lie snorting in our sinnes, and God manifests his iust iudgement in punishing vs for them.

Moreouer, the verbe to breake forth signifies, that the righteousnesse of the Church was hidden and buried as it were for a time. Truly shee deserued to haue been consumed and brought to nothing before God. Nay, more then that, her great iniquities were come to such an height, that there was nothing to be expected but the iust vengeance of God. Verily, it was so in respect of men, who gaue the Church thus afflicted, for lost; and by their pride and cruelty, deiected her euen almost to the bottome of hell. To be short, he compares her with the world, in respect whereof she is righteous, when hauing been purged from her filthinesse, God beginnes to take her cause into his owne hands. By this then the Prophet aduertiseth vs alwaies to hope well touching the restauration of the Church, though for a time she be plunged into an horrible darknes, yea euen into death it selfe. For howsoeuer for a moment she seemes to be ouerwhelmed and forlorne; yet hath she God still for her defence in the heauens, who after he hath corrected her in measure, (as it is in Chap. 27. 8.) will at last manifest the care he hath ouer her. For it must needes be that his righteousnesse should breake forth and be manifested; namely, in the saluation of such as he hath chosen for his people and heritage.

Vers. 2. And the Gentiles shall see thy righteousnesse, and all Kings thy glorie: and thou shalt bee called by a new name, which the mouth of the Lord shall name.

NOw he shewes more fully, why hee protested before that hee would not hold his tongue; euen because the faithfull might bee assured that saluation was not promised them in vaine. Glory is heere taken for saluation. In this place wee see with what argument the Prophets must furnish themselues to preserue their constancie; to wit, that the Lord is faithfull, who will in the end accomplish that which he hath promised, albeit he deferre for a time. The reason of the Prophets vehemencie in verse 1.

The word Kings, serues for amplification: as if he should say; Not onely the cõmunaltie and meaner sort should see and admire the glory of God; but that euen Kings themselues, who were wont proudly to contemne that which in it selfe is precious and honourable: for their owne glory so blindes them, and their greatnesse so bewitcheth all their senses, that they cannot willingly ackonwledge any dignitie but their owne. Kings do not willingly acknowledge any dignitie but their owne.

The new name is taken heere for magnificence: for the people were in such wise scattered and dispersed, that there was no certaine body of them to be seene, but seemed as vtterly forlorne. I grant the multitude of them which were carried into captiuitie was very great; yet in respect they were mingled here and there among the Babylonians, they were rent one from another, as a body diuided into many peeces: so as they could not well bee said to retaine so much as the name of a people any longer: which also they had beene forewarned of. But at their returne home, they beganne to bee knit into a bodie againe: and thus recouered that name, of which they had been depriued. Notwithstanding new is taken for vnaccustomed. As if the Prophet should haue said, your glorie shall bee singular, and such as was not heard of before. Which we know in processe of time came to passe. For this handful of people which inhabited the country by way of entreatie, were not able to get vnto themselues such a magnificence by any greatnesse, or signes of honour: but at length after the preaching of the Gospell, the name of the Iewes was both knowne and renoumed.

Now Isaiah confirmes that which was hard hard to bee beleeued, by adding that God ſhould be the author of this glorie. For it was not in the power of man thus to raiſe vp the poore Church, being then couered ouer with ſhame and diſhonour: but God who raiſeth the needie out of the duſt, was able in a moment to adorne and beautifie his Church with new honour. For example, was there ſo much as any face of a Church to bee ſeene amongſt vs within theſe 40. yeeres? The Lord had indeede a ſmall ſeede (ſcattered here and there) but it was ſo confuſed and couered, that there could be no viſible Church of God perceiued. And yet hee gat his Church a name, when it pleaſed him to gather the ſame by the preaching of the Goſpell. This ſo admirable a worke of God then, ought to confirme vs in this point, namely, that God wil neuer vtterly abandon his church. For albeit the wicked do rent & teare vs in peeces with curſed ſpeakings, and that they ſlander and abhorre vs; endeuouring by all meanes poſſible to make vs an abomination in the eies of the world: yet let vs remember that they cannot plucke Gods righteouſneſſe from him, but that he will make our glorie to ſhine here below, ſeeing hee hath been pleaſed to write our names in heauen: Luk. 10. 20.

1. Sam. 2. 8.

God will neuer forſake his Church.

Others expound this more ſubtillie, namely, that in ſtead of being called Iſraelites, they ſhould be called Chriſtians. But I rather ſuppoſe, that the former ſenſe ſutes beſt with the ſcope of the Prophets text: as alſo with that language which he is wont to vſe. Moreouer, we ought dilligently to obſerue and marke theſe phraſes of ſpeech, which are peculiar vnto the Prophets; that wee may acquaint our ſelues with their ſtile. In ſumme, Iſaiah meant to ſay, that the people, which ſeemed to be rooted out, ſhall be reſtored: and ſhal receiue a newe name, not from men, but from God.

Verſ. 3. Thou ſhalt alſo be a crowne of glorie in the hand of the Lord, and a royall diadem in the hand of thy God.

The ſame argument further proſecuted.

HE proſecutes the ſame argument; which wee are not to wonder at. For, to iudge thereof according to humane reaſon, what man could euer haue conceiued in his mind, or by hope expected a thing of ſo great conſequence? Beſides, his meaning was by theſe words to raiſe vp the hearts of the faithfull to looke towards the kingdome of Chriſt: which it behooued him to beautifie and adorne with theſe glorious titles, by how much the more it was then obſcure and farre remote from them. For it was needfull to preuent a twofold danger, leſt the Iewes in ſeeing themſelues ſo farre recoiled backe from their firſt dignitie, ſhould neither deſpiſe the grace of God, nor reſt themſelues in theſe ſmall and firſt beginnings. And thus in ſetting light by Chriſt, they ſhould ſuffer themſelues to be glued onelie to the commodities of this life preſent. It is the Prophets drift then, as you ſee, to aduertiſe the Iewes, that their returne home ſhall be as a preparatiue to this honour, which they were to looke for in the manifeſtation of Chriſt in the fleſh.

1

As touching the firſt member; theſe poore baniſhed exiles, and bondmen could apprehend nothing at al but matter of deſpaire, in conſidering the outward eſtate of things: yea, after they were returned and ſettled in their countrie, yet they proceeded but ſlowlie forward in building of the Temple. Hee therefore ſtirres them vp to looke vnto God, that from him they might expect that glorie which now was hidden, in reſpect of mans reaſon. And in as much as they were aſſured that they were deare and precious in his ſight, that they ſhould content themſelues therewith, till he ſhould more liberallie endow them by the hand of Chriſt.

2

He calles the Church the crowne of God, in reſpect that he will haue his glorie to ſhine in vs. Wherein wee haue great cauſe with admiration to conſider of the ineſtimable goodneſſe of God towards vs: who though we are by nature corrupt and vncleane, and more vile then the filth in the chanell; yet he vouchſafes ſo to adorne vs, as to make vs the diadem of his kingdom. Let vs be prouoked then by this goodnes of God to hunger and thirſt after holineſſe of life, that ſo his image may daily bee reformed in vs more and more.

God ineſtimable goodneſſe ſingularlie ſet foorth.

Verſ. 4. It ſhall be no more ſaid vnto thee, forſaken; neither ſhall it be ſaid any more to thy land, deſolate: but thou ſhalt bee called Hephzi-bath, and thy land Beulah. For the Lord delighteth in thee, and thy land ſhall haue an husband.

HE now meetes with a difficultie which might trouble the minds of the faithfull, whileſt they ſaw themſelues reiected and left deſtitute: and yet in the meane while had theſe glorious titles giuen them, of a crowne and a diadem. For might not theſe titles ſeeme ridiculous; ſeeing the Iewes were hated and abhorred of all nations, yea now and then their enemies trampled them vnder feete; and no ſuccour appeared: and yet notwithſtanding that they ſhould be exalted vp to heauen, and incloſed in the hand of God? Thus his meaning is to ſay, that howſoeuer the people were for a time, as a woman left and forſaken of her husband: yet they ſhould be reſtored againe in ſuch wiſe, that their name and condition ſhould be changed. As if he ſhould ſay, this ſhall bee no perpetuall diuorce, for God will at length marrie thee againe vnto himſelfe. Howſoeuer the Church then ſeemes to be contemptible, and in outward appearance bee like a woman reiected and put away, yet will the Lord one day put an end vnto her miſerie and calamities.

The preuention of an obiection.

Though for a time the Church ſeeme contemptible, yet ſhall ſhe not remaine ſo alwaies.

But withall the Prophet teacheth, that this proceedes onely from Gods delite; that is to ſay, from his free fauour: leſt any thing ſhould bee attributed to the merits or dignitie of men. To which purpose hee saith in Hosea; I will marrie thee vnto me in mercy and compassion. Hos. 2. 19. Thus then the Prophet shewes that their prosperitie shall spring from none other fountaine then this, namely, because God will be pleased of his owne infinit loue, freely to be reconciled with those whom hee hath reiected. Now howsoeuer this appertaines properly to the Church; yet generally are we hence to learne, that Cities and Kingdomes also are restored to their first estate, by the fauour and good will of God: which whilest his wrath and indignation lay vpon them, seemed as vtterly forlorne.

The Prophet then discouers vnto the Iews, the originall of all calamities, in witnessing that their happinesse rests onely in Gods being well pleased with them. For hence wee may gather, that God was displeased with them before, whilest they were afflicted. Moreouer, the similitude of marriage, whereby he notes out the peoples restauration, is very notable, and containes two points in it. First, that the discord betweene God & his Church shall cease. Why so? Because she that before was diuorced, shall be receiued againe into the place of a wife, Gods anger being pacified: and secondly, that the multitudes of the people shall abolish the shame of their widowhood. For the land is married with her inhabitants, as the trees with the vines: on the other side, it is called a widow, when it is destituted of those who were wont to inhabit there.

Simile.

The good pleasure of the Lord is in thee.] Isaiah repeates and confirmes that which wee said euen now; to wit, that it is of Gods free fauour, when the Church is restored and setled in her first estate, and that the land receiues her inhabitants. For if he turnes his louing countenance away from vs, and reiects vs, there is nothing to be expected but desolation: neither can we then expect any thing that shall doe vs good, either from the power or policies of men.

Vers. 5. For as a young man marrieth a virgin, so shall thy sonnes marrie thee, and as a bridegroome is glad of the bride, so shall thy God reioice ouer thee.

An exposition & confirmation of the former verse.

THis verse onely containes the exposition and confirmation of the former. But there seemes to bee some repugnancie betweene them, because in the latter member hee makes God the sole husband of his Church; and in the first he assignes her many. Yet the solution is easie: for when we speake of this marriage of the Church, she hath but one husband, that is, God; who alwaies attributes this title to himselfe. Now this is accomplished in Christ, to whom the Pastors marrie and couple the Church, as a chaste and pure virgin; as Saint Paul speakes, 2. Cor. 11. 2. Notwithstanding, this hinders not that this similitude of the marriage should not be transferred to expresse the vnitie of faith, which all the children of God haue with their mother the Church: yea, God is so her husband, that yet hee marries her with all nations that are gathered into her: for whilest shee is lest destitute of children, she is after a sort left as a desolate and solitarie widow. This therefore is spoken in regard of God, who by his wisdome, ratifying the holy vnion betweene the members of his Church, extends the fruit of this marriage to all the body.

From this verse we must gather, that then the Church of God shall bee truly peopled; that is to say, shall haue many children when shee shall be married vnto her husband; namely, vnto God: for at him wee must beginne, that he may raigne ouer his Church, and that vnder his conduct we may be gathered into her lap. Then indeed shall this marriage be holy: but if this be wanting, it is not the multitude of people that makes the Church, but rather a filthy brothell house. As in the Papacie, where Gods name roles vp and downe amongst them, and yet his Maiestie is no where more defaced with horrible sacrileges. Doctrine.

Vers. 6. I haue set watchmen vpon thy walles, O Ierusalem, which all the day and all the night continually shall not cease: yee that are mindfull of the Lord, keepe not silence.

THe Prophet minding to describe the perfect felicitie of Christs kingdome, collects into a summe all things that belong to the prosperous and florishing estate of a Citie or Country. To the rest of the former benefits then hee addes garisons and watch; because the abundance and sufficiency of all things would serue to small purpose, vnlesse wee were well fortified against the rage of the enemie. Hee therefore shewes, that the Lord will not onely furnish the Church with all things necessarie, but will also plant sufficient gardes about her, to defend her from theeues & enemies: that thus it might appeare how God is the author both of the inward and outward blessed life. God is the author not onely of inward graces, but of outward defences.

Shall not cease.] To hold ones peace, is heere taken to be quiet. As if he should say; They shall euermore be vpon their watch, to espie a far off imminent dangers.

But in the next place he shewes what these watchmen are; to wit, those that are mindfull of the Lord: that is, such as haue his name in an honourable estimation. The Angels also may bee put in the number of these watchmen, for we know that is their office: Psal. 91. 11. But in regard they watch willinglie and cheerefully for the saluation of the Church, Heb. 1. 14. and haue no neede of being quickened vp by exhortations, the Prophet directs his speech to other watchmen.

The verbe which he vseth is somewhat ambiguous. For sometimes it signifies Remember, and sometimes To call to minde: either of both expositions sute not ill. But me thinkes the Prophet meant simply to say; that these watchmen should be Ministers of God, to celebrate his name. Some translate; Those which which publiſh or preach the Lord. But this is too conſtrained, and breaks off the Prophets ſentence: for ſuch expoſitors keep not themſelues to the ſimilitude of watchmen of a Citie, which the Prophet heere vſeth. Albeit indeed his meaning was to teach without any figure; that the Church ſhall bee freed from all dangers, in regard ſhee hath God for the protector of her ſaluation.

The nature of Chriſts kingdome.

And yet reſpect muſt alwaies be had to the nature of Chriſts kingdome here on earth. For it is not maintained, neither by weapons, nor force of men: but as it is in it ſelfe ſpirituall; ſo is it vpheld by ſpirituall armour, and defences. The Lord then will haue his Miniſters, whoſe ſeruice hee will vſe for the preſeruation of his Church by the ſword of the ſpirit, which is the word of God. Shee ſhall be ſafelie kept then, not by mans helpe; but by the ſecret and ſpirituall power of God.

And the Prophet in ſaying, You that remember the Lord, expounds himſelfe. Now howſoeuer this ſentence appertaines to all the faithfull, who are commanded as much as in them is to extoll the name of God in all places: yet hee alludes eſpeciallie to the Prieſts, who being publike officers were to leade the way vnto others, and to bee giuen wholl their affections to the ſetting foorth of Gods praiſes. Beſides, the Paſtors are here admoniſhed of their duties: for it is not enough to feede the Lords flocke, vnleſſe therewithall they defend the ſame againſt the aſſaults of wolues and robbers. They muſt be vigilant then, and ſtand day and night in their watch-tower, if they meane to diſcharge their duties as they ought. The Lord forbids them to be ſilent: for he would haue them carefull and diligent in their places. In which hee ſhewes what great care he hath ouer his hurch. This text alſo witneſſeth that it is a ſingular fauour of God, when he ſends faithfull Paſtors amongſt vs that are carefull of our ſaluation. For we lie open to infinite dangers, and are by and by inuironed with Satans nets, if the Lord preſerue vs not by his ſuccours. We ought therefore euermore to begge of him that hee would furniſh vs with meete helpes, which he knows to be neceſſarie for vs.

Paſtors muſt not onely feede but alſo defend the Lords flocke.

Verſ. 7. And giue him no reſt till hee repaire, and vntill he ſet vp Ieruſalem, the praiſe of the world.

To the dutie preaching, he addes prayer.

HItherunto the Prophet hath diſcourſed touching the office and dutie of teaching. But becauſe this would not ſuffice without prayer were added, hee exhorts the Miniſters thereto. For as I take it the particle him, muſt be referred vnto God. We ought therefore to be inſtant, and to importune ỹ Lord continually, that he may be pleaſed to giue good ſucceſſe vnto our labors, which otherwiſe would become vnfruitfull. So then whileſt we ſhall diligently imploy our ſelues in preaching the word, and forciblie reſiſt and withſtand the practiſes of Satan with all our might, let vs learne therewithall foorthwith, to turne our hearts towards God, beſeeching him by humble prayer, that hee would not ſuffer our labours to be in vaine. Euen as in the beginning of the Chapter then, hee referred ſilence vnto doctrine, ſaying, That hee vvould not hold his tongue: ſo in this place hee referres it vnto prayer, by which we obtaine ſome fruit from the doctrine. Yea the very Angels whet on our diligence by their example to this affection of prayer. For one of them, as we reade in Zach. 1. 12. praies with great feruencie for the reſtauration of the Church.

Prayer muſt goe with preaching.

Till hee repaire.] Hence let vs gather that theſe are two diſtinct benefits, firſt, in enioying faithfull paſtors which watch for the ſaluation of the Church: ſecondly, that the Church is reſtored and vpheld in her eſtate by their paines. But God who ſpeakes here, doth properly attribute ỹ beſtowing of theſe benefits to himſelfe, as in many other places. How ſhall they preach, ſaith S. Paul, vnleſſe they bee ſent: Rom. 10. 15. It is Gods peculiar office then to eſtabliſh good paſtors: for otherwiſe no man would euer bee fit to exerciſe ſo difficult & inſupportable a charge: 2. Cor. 2. 16. Againe, hee onelie ſets forward the reſtauration of the Church by their meanes, for their endeuours would proue vterlie vaine and fruitleſſe, if the Lord gaue them not good ſucceſſe. Here wee ſee then, that mens externall labours, are ioyned to the efficacie of the holie Ghoſt. For albeit the Lord himſelf alone begins, and makes an end, yet hee vſeth inſtruments by whom hee ſerues his turne for the erecting & building vp of his Church. This admoniſheth vs, not to be out of hart, no, though we ſee nothing but ruines, and a wofull ſcattering. But let vs pray that the Lord would bring all confuſions into a right order: which he for his part hath alſo promiſed to doe.

1
2
1
It is Gods peculiar office to eſtabliſh good Paſtors in his Church.
2

Where he adds, vntill he ſet vp Ieruſalem, it is as much to ſay, As to cauſe the Churches beautie to appeare: ſo as matter of ioy may proceed thence. For as long as wee onelie feele Gods ſeueritie, wee become mute and confounded: but when he frees vs from trouble, therewithall he reuiues vs and opens our mouthes in furniſhing vs with matter of praiſe and thankſgiuing.

Verſ. 8. The Lord hath ſworne by his right hand, and by his ſtrong arme, ſurelie I will no more giue thy corne to bee meate for thine enemies, and ſurely the ſonnes of the ſtrangers ſhall not drinke thy wine, for the which thou haſt laboured.

* Or, if I giue.

ISaiah proſecutes the ſimilitudes which hee vſed before. For in regard Chriſts kingdome could not otherwiſe bee deſcribed, by reaſon of the ſhallowneſſe of our capacities, it was requiſite it ſhould bee repreſented before vs vnder ſuch borrowed ſpeeches. Euen as heretofore then, hee hath promiſed

The ſame ſimilitudes proſecuted.

*Verſ.*3,4. *Verſ.*6. promiſed abundance of all good things: and ſecondly, a faithfull gard, who ſhould carefully watch for the good eſtate of the elect: ſo in this place hee promiſeth peace and tranquillitie, which the faithfull ſhould quietly inioy, and ſhould neuer be diſappointed thereof. As if he ſhould ſay; Whatſoeuer thou poſſeſſedſt heeretofore, was expoſed to pillage and to the ſpoile: but now all things ſhall be ſecured vnto thee, and thou ſhalt be abundantly ſatisfied vvith thy vvheate, and vvith thy vvine. In a word, thy felicitie ſhall bee full of tranquillitie.

But in regard our peruerſitie is ſuch, that we cannot belieue in God, though he makes vs neuer ſo large and liberall promiſes; therefore Iſaiah brings in the Lord binding himſelfe vvith an oath: for the Lord ſtoopes ſo low vnto vs, as to ſweare, the more to reproue our diſtruſt and obſtinacie. Now he ſweares by himſelfe, becauſe hee hath no greater to ſweare by; as the Apoſtle ſpeakes, Heb.6.16. Now he alſo mentions the right hand of God: that is to ſay, his power; becauſe it was fitting for this purpoſe. As if hee ſhould ſay; If there bee any power in mee, then vvill I manifeſt the ſame for your ſalvation: and leſt your mindes ſhould vvax drovvzie in ſo difficult a thing, I ſweare by my invincible hand, that conquers all things, that you ſhall remaine ſafe and ſound by my meanes, vvhatſoeuer dangers can befall you to the contrary. As oft then as hee promiſeth vs ſalvation, let vs forthwith bethinke vs of his vertue and power.

Why God bindes his promiſes with an oath.

If I giue, is a phraſe of ſpeech wherein more is vnderſtood then that which is vttered: and it teacheth vs with what holineſſe and feare we ought to vſe an oath. The words themſelues are as much in effect as if he had ſaid; Let mee not be beleeued heereafter, if the euent of theſe things doe not manifeſt the truth of theſe promiſes.

With what reuerence we ought to vſe an oath.

When hee promiſeth a peaceable inioying of vvheat and vvine, it is to ſhew, that when the Church is deſtituted of them, that it fals not out by chance, but by the iuſt iudgement of God. For as oft as the enemies ſpoile and rob vs of them, let vs aſſure our ſelues that this falles out by Gods permiſſion, according as he threatens vs in his Law: Deut.28.33. As on the contrary, it is by the ſpeciall bleſſing of his hand, when euery one ſits in peace vnder his owne vine, and vnder his owne figge-tree: 1.King.4.25.

God the author both of weale and woe.

Verſ.9. But they that haue gathered it, ſhall eate it, and praiſe the Lord, and the gatherers thereof ſhall drinke it in the Courts of my ſanctuary.

An expoſition & confirmation of the former ſentence.

SEe heere both the expoſition and confirmation of the former ſentence. For hauing proteſted that hee would no more ſuffer the goods of the church to be expoſed for a pray, he now addes, that ſhee ſhall inioy them. In the meane while he ſhewes, that we may iuſtly call wheate and wine ours, when wee haue obtained them by our honeſt labour: for thoſe who rob others of their bread, or get it by vnlawfull meanes, hold it not by any right from the Lord; neither can they attribute goods ſo gotten, to his bleſſing, as if they iuſtly poſſeſſed them. To which alſo, anſwers that in Pſal 128.2. Thou ſhalt eate the labour of thine hands: thou ſhalt be bleſſed, and it ſhall goe vvell vvith thee.

Obiect. But ſeeing he aſſignes food to ſuch as ſhall till the ground; wherefore ſaith he, that they ſhall giue thanks to God? Wherefore ſhould men praiſe the Lord when they reape the corne, and gather in the grapes by their labour and induſtrie? This might ſeeme to be but a fained thanksgiuing, ſeeing it is attributed to mens good husbandry, and that God ſhould deſerue no thanks for that which a man hath atchieued by his honeſt paines. Anſ. But wee muſt note that after the Prophet hath taught them the lawfull meanes of getting their liuing, he therewithall addes, that our labour ſhall be in vaine, if the Lord himſelfe doe not by his bleſſing of the ſame, furniſh vs with things neceſſarie. For all that we inioy, belongs of right to him: and to him alone, ought we to giue the honor of all that which we haue gotten.

When he addes, in my holy courts: he alludes to the ſolemnitie of the ſacrifices. They might drinke any where elſe: it was in euery ones power to eate at home. But he alludes to the cuſtome which they held in ſacrificing their firſt fruits vnto God, at what time they conſecrated the reuenues of the whole yeere, as the Law inioined them: Leuit.2.12. and 23.10. And this ſentence is very frequent in the bookes of Moſes; Thou ſhalt eate and reioice in the preſence of thy God: Deut.12.18.

Verſ.10. Goe thorow, goe thorow the gates: prepare you the way for the people: caſt vp, caſt vp the vvay, and gather out the ſtones, and ſet vp the ſtandard for my people.

*Or, paue it with.

FRom the former words he concludes, that they ſhall freely paſſe thorow the gates of the Citie, which were either ſhut vp, or broken before: ſhut vp, during the ſiege of the enemie: broken, when the Citie was deſtroied and raced euen with the ground. Thus his meaning is then, that the Citie ſhall be ſo reſtored, that the inhabitants thereof ſhall be gathered in great troopes, and that they ſhall often paſſe to and fro.

Some thinke that this ſpeech is directed to the Paſtors, namely, they ſhould enter into the gates, and paſſe thorow before others, as their leaders. But the ſentence is generall and figuratiue; wherein hee compares the Church to a Citie well peopled, which notwithſtanding had been laid waſte for a time, and deſolate, as Ieruſalem was. Others deſcant more wittily, and ſay; that the gates of the Church ſhall be open, when remiſſion of ſinnes is there preached; by meanes whereof, God cals men vnto himſelf. But if we will haue the Prophets true meaning, then let vs note that all this is ſpoken figuratiuely, as wee touched before.

Cleanſe

Cleanſe the vvay for the people.] See wherein the office of the Paſtors properly conſiſts, but the Prophet hath ſpoken generally, and addreſſeth his ſpeech to all ſuch whoſe ſeruice God vſeth to prepare the way for his people. Then, he ſpake to the Medes and Perſians, through whoſe meanes the Lord gaue the Iewes paſſage to returne home, but afterwards he comprehends all others, by whom God reſtored his Church. Now he commands all men with authoritie to cleanſe and make the vvay plaine, that the Iewes might know how euery impediment ſhould eaſily be remoued; and that their greateſt enemies ſhould forthwith yeeld obedience to Gods commandement: and herewithall he alſo bids the faithfull to fit themſelues in good earneſt for their iourney, as if many workmen were alreadie preſt to ſecond them. And the weight which is in the repetition of the words ought to be noted, for they ſerue for the further confirmation of the matter.

Chap. 57. 14.

Paue it vvith ſtones.] The verb Sakal, ſignifies as wel to take away the ſtones as to paue. And I had rather take it in this latter ſignification, though the expoſitors for the moſt part be of the contrarie opinion. Hereunto appertaines that which he ſaith touching the ſetting vp of the ſtandard. For his meaning is, that the nations ſhall as readily obey Gods commandement, as the ſubiects doe their Princes. For they aſſemble and runne together when the enſigne is diſplaid, and imploy their endeuors to bring back the people. He ſpeakes very magnificentlie then of Gods power, that the Iewes might be well aſſured to be reſtored to their firſt eſtate one day.

Verſ. 11. Behold, the Lord hath proclaimed to the ends of the world: tell the daughter of Zion, Behold thy Sauiour commeth: behold his wages is with him, and his worke is before him.

An obiection preuented.

THe Prophet meant to ſay, that ſ Lord in working miraculouſlie beyond all hope and conceit of fleſh and blood will cauſe all nations to know, that this was done by his commandement. For ſome might obiect, How can it be that the nations who now proudly reſiſt God ſhould come to yeeld him obedience? He anſwers, Becauſe the Lord will proclaime your returne, in ſuch wiſe, that they ſhall vnderſtand how you muſt be reſtored by his commandement.

Obiect.

Anſ.

But as touching that he addes, Tell the daughter of Zion, it properly appertaines to the Prophets and Miniſters of the word, to whom the Lord giues this charge, to promiſe ſaluation and deliuerance vnto his Church. Hence wee gather that theſe promiſes ought not to be reſtrained to one particular time, but muſt bee extended euen to all ages, till the ſecond appearing of Chriſt. For if wee beginne at the returne out of Babylon into Iudea, wee muſt paſſe along ſtill to the comming of Chriſt, becauſe then this prophecie was truly fulfilled, and the end of the deliuerance came; becauſe the Sauiour then appeared, when the grace of God was publiſhed by the Goſpell. In a word, he affirmes that Gods voice ſhall one day ſound from the Eaſt to the Weſt, and ſhall not be vnderſtood of one people onely, but of all. Now this voice is; Behold, thy Sauiour commeth: which we know is the proper voice of the Goſpell. He therefore inioines the Teachers of the Church to raiſe vp the hearts of the faithfull, vvith the comming of the Lord; though vnto the people it ſeemed a thing far remote.

Doctrine.

But this promiſe belongs chiefly to Chriſtes kingdome, who fully and perfectly did accompliſh theſe things, for he indeed ſhewed himſelfe to be the ſauiour of the vvorld, as we haue ſeene heretofore in Chap. 40. 10. And leſt any ſcruple might remaine, he furniſheth the Lord with power, when he ſhall appeare, as it is in that very place which we before alleaged; for hee vſeth the very ſame words there which are heere mentioned, as if he meant to ſhew, that as ſoon as it ſhould pleaſe God to ſtretch forth his hand, the effect will in a moment appeare: for whileſt he either ceaſeth or deferres, fleſh and blood eſteemes him idle. Wee alſo ſee that many fantaſticall ſpirits forge I know not what diuinitie, as if they meant to paint out a dead image. The Prophet therefore very aptly addes the vvorke and reward before God, to ſhew that he is the iuſt Iudge of the world in the time of neede.

Verſ. 12. And they ſhall call them, the holy people, the redeemed of the Lord, and thou ſhalt be named a Citie ſought out, and not forſaken.

The fruit of the Lords comming.

HE ſets forth the benefit of the Lords comming, namely, that in ſhewing how his elect are as deare vnto him as his owne heritage, he will make it knowne to all the world that the couenant of Adoption by him contracted with Abraham, is not in vaine: for this cauſe he calles them the holy people, in regard the Lord had ſeparated and conſecrated them vnto himſelfe, for though he gouerned all the nations of the world, yet he vouchſafed to chuſe the poſteritie of Abraham, to haue a ſpeciall care thereof. And in this ſenſe God meant to ſay, that his people ſhal be holy, when he ſhall appeare their ſauiour and redeemer. And as the people are called prophane when they be plunged in their dregs, being afflicted and vexed by the ſcoffings of the wicked: ſo on the contrarie they are ſaid to be holy, when the Lord ſhewes himſelfe by effects to be the God of their ſaluation, which came to paſſe in their wonderfull deliuerance, for then God ſhewed indeed that he remembred his holy couenant touching his heritage which he had (as mans reaſon deemed) vtterly reiected and caſt off. For in theſe words ſought out and not forſaken, we muſt note the oppoſition betweene the ſtate wherein the Lord found vs this diuorce againſt his people: and that wherein he reconciled thoſe againe vnto himſelfe vvhom he had put away.

CHAP.

THE LXIII. CHAPTER.

Vers. 1. Who is this that commeth from Edom with red garments from Bozrah? he is glorious in his apparrell, and walketh in his great strength. I speake in righteousnes, and am mightie to saue.

A prevention of a dangerous temptation.

THE expositors Christian haue misinterpreted this place, as if that which is heere said should appertaine vnto Christ, seeing the Prophet speakes simplie of God himselfe, and thus they haue made a Iesus died all over with red, in regard he was thorowly bathed in his owne blood which he shed vpon the Crosse. But the Prophet had no such meaning at all. The true and plaine sense is, That the Lord presents himselfe here clothed with red garments before the people, to aduertise all that he would maintaine the cause of his chosen, and be auenged on their enemies. For whilest the people of God were pressed with infinite miseries, and that the Idumeans, with the rest of their aduersaries (who were as it seemed out of all danger) ouerflowed in all excesse of riot: it might dangerouslie tempt the Iewes to thinke, either that these things were guided by fortune; or that God made light account of his children: or that at least he chastised them with ouer great seueritie. So then, if God corrected the Iewes because of the contempt of his name and religion; how much more were the Idumeans and other enemies to bee roughlie dealt withall, being the sworne enemies thereof? The Prophet meetes with this so cumbersome a temptation by bringing in God the auenger, Psal. 94.1. returning from the slaughter of the Edomites, as if hee had been stained all ouer with their blood.

The naturall meaning of this verse.

1
2
3

The force of interrogations.

Now this description is liuely and full of efficacie, when hee saith, Who is this? For such an interrogation rauisheth the minds of the hearers into an admiration, and affects them more, then if it had been vttered in plaine termes. The Prophet did the rather vse it, that hee might thereby awaken the Iewes, who were become dreuzie and besotted. We know that the Idumeans were somewhat akin to the Iewes, in regard they were descended from the same ancestors with them. For they were thus called of Esau, who was also called Edom: Gen. 36.1. These hauing corrupted the pure worship of God, though they had the same marke of circumcision, notwithstanding persecuted the Iewes most despitefully. And besides, they exasperated the rage of other enemies against the Iewes; manifesting to all what great pleasure they tooke in the ruine of this poore people, as it appeares by their egging on of the Babylonians. Remember O Lord, saith the Church, Psalm. 137.7. the children of Edom, who in the day of Ierusalems ruine, said, downe with it, downe with it euen to the ground. Thus then the Prophet denounceth, that the Edomits shall also keepe their turne, in being iudged according to their deserts, that none might otherwise think, but they should surely bee punished for the barbarous crueltie by them exercised against their brethren. For the Lord wil so auenge himselfe of the wicked and enemies of the Church, that hee will thereby shew what care hee hath ouer her.

See Obad. 10.11.

Now howsoeuer blood doth vsuallie spot and staine him that vanquisheth, yet Iesiah affirmes that God shall bee glorious in his apparell, after he hath made hauocke of his enemies. As in chap. 34.6. we haue seene that the slaughter of the wicked there was compared to the sacrifices, in regard Gods glorie shined therein. For what garment could hee put on more glorious then his iustice? Therefore that he might speake honourablie of Gods iust reuengings, hee shewes that the blood wherewith he is besprinckled by the slaughter of these desperate wicked ones, is glorious and excellent. As if hee had said, Thinke not that God resembles any common person: for though hee bee died ouer with blood, yet shall not this hinder, but that his Maiestie and glorie shall shine therein.

The Iewish expositors take the word walking diuerslie: for some among them referre it to the people whom the Lord should bring backe from the captiuitie: others, to the nations, whom the Lord would transport into other countries, notwithstanding they then seemed to haue a setled habitation. But I thinke it will better sute to the scope of the Prophets text, if we take it absolutelie. The Prophet then describes the glorious walking of God, and his noble presence, by which he will manifest his admirable power.

The certeintie of the prophesies noted.

I am, that speake.] The Lord himselfe answers: which carries much more maiestie with it, then if the Prophet had spoken in his owne person. And herein he brings the faithful to the former prophesies, to enforme them, that not only Gods righteousnesse and goodnesse, but also his faithfulnesse should appeare in these iudgements. As if he should say, Now you see the accomplishment of that which hitherunto I haue declared vnto you by my seruants. For this effect of my promises, plainely demonstrates that I am true of my word; and that I speake from my heart without fayning, so as I will not by any meanes disappoint your expectations. Now the vision of it selfe had not beene forcible enough, vnlesse the Iewes had therewithall bin put in mind of the things they had heard of before. Seeing the end thereof was to settle their hearts vpon the saluation of God, hee bee therewithall attributes vnto himſelfe, an extraordinarie power and might to ſaue.

Verſ. 2. Wherefore is thine apparell red, and thy garments like him that treadeth in the wine preſſe?

The former argument ſtill proſecuted.

HE proſecutes the ſame argument. But becauſe the bare recitall would not haue been of ſufficient weight, therefore he doth not at once manifeſt from whence this red colour in Gods garments did proceede, but rather continues his interrogation ſtill, that he might the better rouze vp their ſpirits, to the conſideration of ſo rare & vnwonted a thing. For his meaning is to ſay, that this ſprinkling with blood is a matter extraordinarie, and not ſeene before. And therefore the ſimilitude of the preſſer of grapes, ſutes very well. For Bozrah, which hee mentioned in the firſt verſe, was ſituated in a countrie of vines: as if he would haue ſaid, the grape gatherings ſhal be much differing frō the old wont: for blood, in ſtead of the iuice of grapes, ſhall now bee ſqueezed out.

Verſ. 1.

Verſ. 3. I haue trodden the wine-preſſe alone, and of all the people, there was none with mee: for I will tread them in mine anger, and tread them vnder foot in my wrath, and their blood ſhall bee ſprinkled vpon my garments, and I will ſtaine all my raiment.

The viſion expounded. Verſe 1.

NOw the Prophet expounds the viſion, and ſhewes wherefore the Lord is thus died with blood; namely, becauſe he muſt be auenged on the Idumeans, and other enemies, who haue vſed his people very inhumanely. It ſhould bee a thing ridiculous to referre this verſe vnto Chriſt, in regard he hath redeemed vs without the helpe of any man: for the Prophets meaning is, that the Lord will ſo puniſh the Idumeans, that he ſhall ſtand in need of no mans helpe, becauſe himſelfe will bee ſtrong enough to roote them out. For the Iewes might obiect, that the Idumeans were mightie: that no warre was made vpon them, but that they floriſhed and liued at their eaſe. But the Lord ſhewes, this ſhall not hinder him from ſmiting them, when him liſteth. I grant he vſed mens helpe, when hee auenged himſelfe of the Idumeans: but yet in ſuch wiſe, that it was apparant to all how the whole action was managed by his owne hand: neither could any thing therein be aſcribed either to the counſels, or forces of men. For they were ſurprized with a ſudden and vnexpected deſtruction: in reſpect whereof the people could not doubt, but that God only was the author thereof, ſeeing they had been ſo often aduertiſed of it before.

Obiect. Anſ.

Where he ſaith, And of all the people there was not one with him; it is to ſhew, that howſoeuer ſome ſhould be raiſed vp to bring deſtruction vpon Edom, yet Gods worke therein ſhould be ſeparate from theirs. For the infidell enemies neuer dreamed of auenging the vniuſt cruelties of the Idumeans. The Lord would then that his iudgement ſhould ſhine and be conſidered of in the clattering of the harneſſe and weapons, and in theſe violent mouings.

I will goe vpon them. For mine owne part I willingly retaine the future tence, in regard the Prophet ſpeakes of things to come, and not yet accompliſhed. For the Idumeans were to bee ſeuerelie puniſhed for their crueltie: though for the preſent, they were at their eaſe, and in great tranquillity.

Wee haue alreadie in part touched the cauſe why the Prophet hath vſed the ſimilitude of a bloodie preſſer, which is both a hideous and wofull ſight: yet therewithall he addes, that the puniſhments and vengeances of God againſt his enemies are properly his owne, as if himſelfe had gathered them together, when he ſhall either conſume or ſcatter them. Euen as in Chap. 34. 6. ſuch an execution is called a ſolemne ſacrifice: to teach vs that wee are no leſſe to glorifie God, when hee executes his iudgements, then when hee manifeſts the tokens of his mercie. In the meane while hee expreſſeth his ſingular loue towards the Iewes, ſeeing for their ſakes he vouchſafeth to ſprinkle himſelfe with the blood of his enemies ſo farre; that hee vſeth the verbe to ſtaine, or to defile.

In my vvrath.] The Prophet ſhewes that this alone ſufficeth for the deſtruction of the Idumeans: namelie, that the Lord is angrie with them. As if he ſhould ſay, No man ſhall be able to deliuer them when God ſhal haue to doe with them. Hence we are to gather, that mens ruine proceedes from no other cauſe but Gods vvrath: as on the contrarie, our ſaluation depends wholly vpon his meere grace. To conclude, the Lord meant here to teſtifie that the Idumeans ſhould not eſcape vnpuniſhed, ſeeing they had bin perſecutors of his Church.

Mens ruine proceedes from Gods wrath.

Verſ. 4. For the day of vengeance is in mine heart, and the yeere of my redeemed is come.

IN the firſt member of this verſe, the Prophet ſignifies that God will not ceaſe to performe his office: though he executes not his iudgements at the firſt but deferres them to a fit opportunitie which he foreſees to bee beſt fitting. Neither indeed ought wee to preſcribe vnto him either the time when, or the manner how he is to doe this or that; but to commit it as well to his ſecret counſell, as leaue vnto him the time when to execute all things, according to his good pleaſure. Let vs not thinke then that hee ſleepes, or is idle, when he deferres.

Though God ſeeme for a time to deferre, yet he will pay home at length.

In the latter member hee ſhewes, that all theſe things are done in reſpect of his loue to the faithfull, when he ſpeakes of the yeere of his redeemed. Day and yeere, are here taken for one and the ſame terme. Onely the word yeere notes out the length of the banishment, to the end the Iewes should neither despaire, nor be discontent, if their deliuerance was foreslowed. Thus then the Lord punisheth and destroies the wicked, for the deliuerance of the faithfull, and for the redemption of his Church, to which hee hath a speciall regard. And this ought greatly to comfort vs, that when the signes of Gods wrath against the wicked appeare, wee may therewithall know, that the fruit of the blowes which light vpon their backes, shall be ours. By this also wee may euidently perceiue, that our gronings haue been heard; namely, because that when God is minded to succour the afflicted, we see he armes himself with strength, for the confusion of his Churches enemies. Wherefore, howsoeuer the crosse lie heauily vpon vs, & presseth vs downe with the weight thereof, yet in vndergoing it patiently, let vs learne by hope to raise vp our hearts to this yeere, which God hath limited for the execution of his vengeance.

A consolatiō.

Vers. 5. And I looked, and there was none to helpe; and I wondered that there was none to vphold: therefore mine owne arme helped mee, and my wrath it selfe sustained mee.

A further illustration of the former Doctrine.

ALbeit the Iewes were destitute of all helpe, and that no man relieued them either by words or deedes, yet he shewes that the onely arme of the Lord shall suffice to punish the enemies, and to set his Church at libertie. Hee teacheth them then to looke for saluation from God onely; that they should not gaze heere and there, but depend wholly vpon God, who stands in no need of other mens helpe. For this cause he brings him in wondering, that no man reached him forth his hand, when he was about to execute his iudgements, the better to imprint this doctrine in the hearts of the faithfull, namely, that God needes no mans aid, but is al sufficient of himselfe to obtaine saluation for his people. And by this circumstance he further illustrates that succour, which he was determined to giue vnto the faithfull; partly to correct their distrust, and partly to exhort them to thankfulnesse for the time to come: for when God saith he wondred, and was vtterly astonished; hee puts vpon him another person, because this astonishment was indeed properly in the Iewes, who neither would, nor could beleiue more then what men were able to doe. He therefore opposeth his arme to all meanes whatsoeuer; shewing that hee will satisfie himselfe with the inuincible power thereof, as well to manifest himselfe the Sauiour of his Church, as to scatter and ouerwhelme all the wicked.

Vers. 6. Therefore I will tread downe the people in my wrath, and make them drunken in mine indignation, and will bring downe their strength to the earth.

The conclusion.

FRom the former sentence hee concludes that Gods wrath is strong enough to confound the wicked, without hauing aid from any other; lest the power of the enemies might any way daunt the Iewes from conceiuing good hope.

To make drunken, must heere bee taken in a contrary sense, to that which it is in some other places, which we haue expounded heretofore; as in Chap. 29. 9. one while we are said to bee drunke when God takes from vs our senses, or smites vs with giddinesse; or when as at length hee giues vs vp into a reprobate mind. But it here signifies no other thing, but to fill, or to beate them to the full, as we commonly say: and this similitude is often vsed of the Prophets.

I will bring downe their strength: that is to say; though they thinke themselues inuincible, yet will I bring them downe and confound them. The summe is, that the Iewes being afflicted, ought not to despaire of their saluation, as if God hated them; neither to wax obstinate vnder his rods, as if they were smitten at all aduenture; because the rest of the nations, who now oppressed them, should be punished, things should be changed, and those that cried victory before the conquests, should not escape in the end. Now he culles out the Idumeans for a particular instance and example hereof, because they dwelt neerest, and were better knowne then others, who also most molested them.

Vers. 7. *I will remember the mercies of the Lord, and the praises of the Lord, according vnto all that the Lord hath giuen vs; and for the great goodnesse towards the house of Israel, which hee hath giuen them according to his tender loue, and according to his great mercies.

*Or, as vpon.

What ought to be our meditation in the day of affliction.

Isaiah comforts the people in this so miserable and wofull a case, and by his example commands the Iews that in time of their extreme affliction, they should call to mind the former mercies of the Lord, and should betake them to their praiers; that so they might not resemble hypocrites, who neuer haue any taste in Gods goodnesse, but in time of prosperitie. For in aduersitie they are so cast downe, that all the promises in the Bible will not be able to comfort them. Now when the Lord chastens vs, we ought to remember his former benefits, and to breake out into the extolling of them, still hoping of better for the time to come: for God is alwaies like himselfe, and neuer changeth neither his counsell, nor will. And therefore, if wee giue place to his mercy, wee shall neuer be cast off. This I take to be the context, though others take it otherwise, namely, that the Prophet hauing spoken heeretofore of the peoples captiuitie, comforts now himselfe by this assurance of Gods mercy, because God was purposed to saue some. But they are deceiued, in regard they thinke that Isaiah hath hitherunto spoken of the Iewes; as if God meant to punish none but them. Whereas he on the contrarie testifies, teſtifies, that other nations ſhould alſo be chaſtiſed, that the Iewes ſhould not perſwade themſelues that God only hated them. For which cauſe he now exhorts them to celebrate the memorie of thoſe benefits which God had beſtowed vpon their fathers, that by their example they might the better come to apprehend Gods loue towards themſelues. The ſcope of the text alſo ſhewes, that the Iewes are conioined with their fathers, to the end the couenant common to them both might encourage them to hope for better times.

According vnto all things.] He vſeth this particle As, to ſhew, that in aduerſitie theſe benefits of God giuen vnto his people ſhould forthwith come vnto our remembrances, no leſſe then if they were preſent before our eies, though otherwiſe they may ſeeme to be worne out with age. For if they appertained not vnto vs, it were but labor loſt to remember them, which the Prophet alſo confirmes by the particle Vs. Why ſo? Becauſe the Iewes being members of the ſame body, he had good reaſon to account them as the right ſucceſſors of their grandfathers, and other anceſtors. Truly Iſaiah felt not theſe benefits paſt which he heere mentions, but in regard they had bin beſtowed vpon the Church, the fruit of them reached in part vnto him, becauſe he was a member of the ſame.

How wee ought to eſteeme of the communiõ of Saints.

And queſtionles this communion of Saints whereof we make profeſſion, ought to be of ſuch value with vs, as to thinke that whatſoeuer the Church receiues from the hand of God, is alſo giuen to vs. For there is but one Church of God; and that which is now, hath nothing ſeparate from that which was in times paſt.

Iſaiah alſo expounds himſelfe when hee addes, for the great goodnes towards the houſe of Iſrael. Seeing then the Lord ſhewed himſelfe a liberall benefactor towards his people, we ought at this day to expect the like, in regard that we be of his houſhold, and members of his Church. Wel then, albeit we feele him angrie againſt vs for our ſinnes, yet muſt we cheere vp our ſpirits through a liuely hope, and arme our ſelues againſt all diſtruſt, becauſe God can not forſake his Church.

The foundation of our ſaluation.

In the meane while we haue to note that the Prophet highly extols and magnifies Gods mercie heere, thereby to teach vs, that the foundation of our ſaluation and of all other benefits flowes from thence. And this ſhuts out all merits of men, that ſo no man may preſume to attribute any thing at all vnto himſelfe. But to the end this doctrine may be the better vnderſtood, let vs conſider the time whereof Iſaiah ſpeakes. Religion and Iuſtice then principallie bare ſway and floriſhed: for howſoeuer the people had corrupted themſelues, yet Moſes, Aaron, and other holy perſonages ſhewed forth good teſtimonies of their innocencie and holines. And yet the Prophet teacheth, that all the good things which Moſes and the reſt receiued, were not to be aſcribed to their merits, but to Gods mercies. But what are we in compariſon of Moſes, that wee ſhould thinke to merit ought at Gods hands? Thus then as theſe repetitiõs of Gods great goodnes, tender loue, and great mercies, doo greatly ſerue for the raiſing vp on high the weake and broken hearted, that they may ouercome their greateſt temptations, ſo ought the ſame to put to flight and to ſwallow vp all thought and conceit of mens merits. 1 2

Verſ. 8. For he ſaid, ſurely they are my people, children that will not lie: ſo he was their Sauiour.

God lookes that our conuerſation ſhould anſwer our vocation.

HE ſpeakes of the peoples election, and brings in God diſcourſing of it, to put vs in mind of the end of our vocation, namely, that he will haue a people ſeparated vnto him from the world, in the midſt of whom his name may be worſhipped and called vpon. And yet therewithall he accuſeth the Iewes ingratitude, who deceiued God of his expectation: not that the Lord was indeed deceiued, ſeeing he foreſaw well enough what they would be, which he had alſo teſtified by Moſes, Deut. 32. 15. 16. But the ſcripture ſpeakes thus, when men by their vnthankfulnes care not to defraud the Lord of his due, as wee haue ſeene in Chap. 5. I looked that it ſhould haue brought me forth grapes, but behold, wilde grapes. He ſpeakes not of Gods ſecret counſel, but ſpeakes after the manner of men, to ſet forth the mutuall conſent which ought to be betweene God and the faithful, that all thoſe to whom he vouchſafes his preſence as their father, ſhould be readie for their parts to anſwer when he calles vnto them: for this foundation remaines ſure, namely, that none of Gods elect can periſh, becauſe God knowes who are his, 2. Tim. 2. 19. And yet we know that the end of our vocation is to liue in holines & righteouſnes, as all the Scripture witneſſeth, and alſo according to that which hath bin often ſaid in many places: Chap. 43. 21. & 55. 5.

The Lord had iuſt cauſe therefore to ſay that he had choſen the people to be holy and true, and that he might haue children farre from lies and vanitie. But the people did falſifie their promiſed faith, and reuolted from that ſimplicitie of heart which they ought to haue followed: for they were whollie replete with fraude and hypocriſie; and yet the Prophet giues them hope of pardon, if ſo be they would ſeeke the Lord, and humble theſelues before him with true repentance.

He alſo notes out that which is the principall in Gods ſeruice, to wit, that we bring with vs thereunto a pure and vpright heart. Whence it alſo followes, that the Lord neuer forſakes vs, till we haue bin diſloyall towards him in breaking our faith. Seeing this people then pleaſed themſelues in their vices, it was needfull they ſhould be firſt conuinced of their infidelitie, that being conuerted vnto God, they might in the end feele him their ſauiour.

Verſ. 9. * In all their troubles he was troubled, and the Angell * of his preſence ſaued them: in his loue and in his mercie

* Or, in all their anguiſh there was no anguiſh.
* Or, of his face.

he redeemed them, and he bare them and caried them alwaies continuallie.

The inestimable loue which God beares to his Church.

HE amplifies and sets forth Gods goodnes towards his people, shewing, that he bestowed benefits vpó their fathers whilest they suffred themselues to be conducted by him: yea, he had such care ouer them, that himselfe was troubled in their troubles, and bare their miseries and anguishes. In speaking thus, he notes out the inestimable loue which God beares towards his chosen. And the Lord also the better to draw and allure vs to come vnto him speakes after the maner of men, attributing vnto himselfe all the affection, loue, and fatherly compassion that can possiblie be in them. And yet it is impossible to thinke of any loue or good will of men in this world, which he farre surmounts not.

No loue comparable to Gods loue.

I vtterly reiect not the other exposition, to wit, that the people were not troubled in their trouble; because God alwaies supplied them with some remedies for ỹ affwaging of their sorrowes. But in my iudgement, the learned expositors haue hit the marke, in taking the first sense: wherein the Prophet testifies that God laid vpon himselfe the whole weight of the peoples burthen; to comfort them in their calamities and anguishes. Not that he can any way be grieued: but hee attributes to himselfe humane passions by a figure much vsed.

God no way touched with humane affections.

Afterwards he manifests the effect of this care, namely, in that he alwaies saued them by his Angell, whom hee calles the angell of his face: because he was a witnesse of Gods presence; and as it were his herald to execute his commandements. To teach vs, that the Angels runne not before they bee sent, neither that they intrude themselues into this office of succoring vs, by any priuate motion of their owne. For the Lord vseth their seruices; and manifests his presence to vs by their meanes. The Angels can doe nothing of themselues, neither doe they yeeld vs any succour further forth then as the Lord sends them to bee the Ministers of our saluation: Heb. 1.14. Les vs not stay our thoughts vpon them then, seeing their office is only to lead vs directly vnto God.

The seruice of Angels.

If any had rather say that the liuely image of God, is here noted out by this Angell; who being the conducter and protector of the people, did therein openly manifest the face and presence of God as in a glasse; such a sense will not be amisse. And for my part I doubt not but that the office of saving ought to be attributed vnto Christ, who as we know, is the great Angell of the couenant, vnder whose leading, sauegard and protection the Church hath euer hitherunto been vpheld in safetie.

Mal. 3.1.

The cause from whence all benefits proceede.

In his loue he redeemed them.] The Prophet shewes what the cause is from whence these great benefits proceeded: namely, Gods loue and good pleasure. As Moses also teacheth, Deut. 4.37, and 7.7.8. Whence is it that God hath gathered thy fathers, saith hee, but because he loued them, and did set his heart vpon them? And thus he meant to dispossesse them of all opinion that they might conceiue touching any merit: for in themselues they were proud and arrogant and insulted more then they had cause. Now yee see the reason why he shewes, that Gods onelie free bounty was the cause of so many blessings.

In the next place Isaiah takes vp the similitude which Moses vsed in his song: namelie, that God bare his people, as an Egle; which teacheth her young ones to flie: Deut. 32.11. Vnlesse any had rather referre it vnto sheepe, as we haue noted, in Chap. 40.11. He shall feed his flocke like a shepheard: hee shall gather the lambes with his arme, and carrie them in his bosome, &c. And yet this similitude of a mother agrees very well: for shee not onely beares the child in her wombe: but also nurces it vp, till it be come to a competent age. 1 2 3

The sum is, that when the people were deliuered, it was not the first fauour that they receiued from God, but they had tasted so sufficiently thereof in the whole course of their liues, that it was to him only, to whom they were to ascribe all the benefits which had been bestowed vpon them.

For this cause the clause, alvvaies continually, is added: for the Lord is neuer wearie in doing good, neither contents he himselfe to manifest the tokens of his fauour to one age only: for he neuer ceaseth to inrich and adorne his Church with diuers and sundrie gifts.

God neuer wearie in doing good to his Church.

Vers. 10. But they rebelled and vexed his holy Spirit: therefore hee was turned to be their enemie, and he fought against him.

THe Prophet now descends to the second member, in which hee shewes that the Lord was turned to be ỹ aduersary of his children, because they rebelled, and turned back from him; as if the people (in a word) should thus haue obiected, God shewed many tokens of his louing kindnesse to our fathers for a long time together; wherfore taste we not of the same also? Is hee now of another mind. No, God forbid. But wee our selues by our disloyaltie, haue been reiected: yea, we haue thereby repelled and put backe his benefits from vs: Ier. 5.25. And yet the Prophet condemnes not onely the men of his age, but those also of the ages before. For we see that vnder the conduct of Moses himselfe, they rebelled and murmured against God, Exod. 17.2, Numb. 20.3. Hence it came, that God who tenderly loued them, as it is in vers. 7. became their enemie, by their owne rebellion. Are they punished for their iniquities then? let them thanke themselues for it. For the Lord is inclined to nothing more then to shew mercie, neither is any thing more acceptable vnto him, then to pursue vs with his fauours.

The preuention of an obiection.

Mich. 7.18.

Now he saith by a phrase of speech borrowed from men, that wee vexe the holie Ghost by our rebellion: to teach vs to haue sinne in the greater detestation; because it prouokes prouokes the holy one of Israel to anger and indignation. And seeing it is one and the same Spirit, by which God workes our saluation, the Prophet aduertiseth vs that our sins doe estrange vs farre from God, by breaking the band of our coniunction. Vnto which tends Saint Pauls exhortation, Ephes 4.30. Grieue not the holy Spirit of God, by whom ye are sealed vnto the day of redemption. From this text also we are to note, that we haue no cause to accuse those, by whom wee are molested and persecuted, because it is the Lord himselfe who fights against vs, and by their hand auengeth himselfe vpon our sinnes. Let vs rather accuse our sinnes, and condemne them: for thereby wee are exposed to all the miseries, vnder which we are pressed.

Vers. 11. Then hee remembred the old time of Moses and his people, saying, Where is hee that brought them vp out of the sea, with the shepheard of his sheepe? Where is he that put his holy Spirit within him?

Or, in the midst of whom.

The fruit of this chastisement.

THis is the end of the chastisement; namely, that the people might bee awakened out of their drowzinesse, and bee brought to thinke vpon the things they had forgotten before; because prosperitie so besots vs, that the remembrance of God is vtterly buried. These rods therefore serue to recall those thoughts which were abolished in vs; to wit, where is that God which in times past shewed so many mercies to our fathers? For I referre these things to the time past, and therefore haue translated, from the daies of old: for the word age agrees not in this place, seeing the Prophet mentions that time wherein Moses gouerned the people of God. The true sense therefore is, that the Iewes being miserably oppressed, called to minde the ancient times, in which the Lord manifested his power for the preseruation of his people.

Whereas some referre this vnto God, as if he had wrestled with their obstinacie, and had rather gratified the vngratefull, the leaue that worke imperfect, which hee had begun: this seemes harsh, and too far fetched. The Prophet rather recites the sighes and complaints of this poore people, after by chastisements they had learned how miserable a thing it is, not to bee vnder Gods protection.

By the Shepheard, he meanes Moses. Neither see I any reason why it should be translated in the plurall number, rather then in the singular. He also expresseth the means by which he guided the sheepe; namely, in that hee was indued with singular graces of the holy Spirit: for to put his Spirit in the middest of him, is as much to say, as to manifest the power of his Spirit.

Others had rather referre it vnto the people. Neither contradict I their opinion: but in regard that God had chosen and ordained Moses to be the conducter of his people, it is he principally of whom it is said, that the holy Spirit was put vpon him. Now this Spirit was giuen him for the good of the whole people, that he might be an excellent Minister of Gods grace, and might set them at liberty. And so by consequence, the power of the Spirit of God appeared in the middest of all the people.

Vers. 12. Hee led them by the right hand of Moses with his owne glorious arme, diuiding the waters before them, to make himselfe an euerlasting name.

He goes on in describing the peoples deliuerance out of Egypt.

HEe heere prosecutes that miraculous deliuerance of the people, who vnder the conduct of Moses, were brought out of Egypt, and also continues to recite the complaints: which might happily come into the minds of the faithfull. We see heere two things ioined together; to wit, the right hand of Moses, and the glorious arme of the Lord. Who so vseth mans trauaile, that his praise and glory ought at no hand to be lessened or darkened: for these things were so done vnder the conduct of Moses, that they ought wholly to be attributed to the power of God.

As at this day, when it is said, that the Ministers of the Gospell remit sinnes, (which yet belongs to God onely) doth this diminish ought from his authoritie and Maiestie? Truly no: for they are but instruments, who bestow their paines for God, to whom all the glory thereof must be attributed. Alas, what could the sillie hand of man haue done, if the arme of the Lord had not fortified it? 1.Cor.3.5.

For this cause in the end of the verse hee expressly addeth, that God at that time wrought after so admirable a maner, to make himselfe an euerlasting name: whereof, seeing it is vnlawfull to despoile him, so it shall bee no more lawfull to attribute the least part of praise vnto a mortall man.

Vers. 13. Hee led them thorow the deepe, as an horse in the wilderneſſe, that they should not stumble.

14. As the beast goeth downe into the valley, the Spirit of the Lord gaue them rest: so didst thou lead thy people, to make thy selfe a glorious name.

These verses are added as an amplification of the former.

THis is added to amplifie and set forth so great a benefit. He also ioinoines similitudes thereto, to expresse this so great and admirable a power of God; namely, as the horse in the desert, and as the beast in the plaine: that is to say, hee led his people as nicely, as one doth an horse vpon the downes. For the word desert, signifies not that desert of Paran, where the people were by the space of fortie yeeres: but according to the common phrase of the Hebrew tongue, it signifies the pastures where sheepe and heards of beasts walke at their pleasure. Which yet better appeares by the verse following, where in stead of desert, he names the plaine. And so one and the same sense flowes from them both, name-lie, that the people walked ouer deepe pits without stumbling, as horses doe in the wilderneſſe.

In a word, his meaning is, to teach that the red ſea did no more let or hinder the people from paſſing ouer, through the middeſt of deepe places, then if they had walked vpon a plaine and leuelled ground.

In v. 12 he called his name, euerlaſting: and here he calles it glorious; but the ſenſe is one. The people then obiect againſt the Lord, that if hee once made himſelfe a glorious name; then he ought ſtill to haue the ſame care. Otherwiſe it will come to paſſe that the remembrance of the benefits, which hee in former time beſtowed vpon their fathers, would vaniſh quite away.

Verſ. 15. Looke downe from heauen, and behold from the dwelling place of thine holineſſe, and of thy glorie. Where is thy zeale, and thy ſtrength, the multitude of thy mercies, and of thy compaſſions? They are reſtrained from me.

The application of the whole.

HAuing mentioned the benefits of old in the name of all the people: now hee comes to apply the ſame vnto his purpoſe, and intreates the Lord that hee would looke downe from heauen vpon them.

Looke downe, &c.] By theſe words hee ſignifies that the power of God is not diminiſhed, though it appeare not at all times alike. For there muſt be an oppoſition ſupplied, namely, that God had then as it were hid himſelfe, neither ſhewed he himſelfe ſuch a one towards them, as hee had done towards their fathers. As if they had ſaid, Albeit O Lord, that we ſee no tokens of thy preſence, but that thou haſt withdrawne thy ſelfe from vs, as if thou wert ſhut vp in heauen, ſo as thou ſeemeſt vtterly to neglect vs: yet vve beſeech thee vouchſafe to looke downe once againe from heauen, and from the dwelling place of thine holineſſe, behold our miſeries. See how we ought to ſeparate the vnbeleeuers from the faithfull, who acknowledge God to bee both mightie and mercifull: yea euen then when they can diſcerne no ſignes at all, either of his power or bountie. And thus they ceaſe not to call vpon him ſtill, though he hides himſelfe farre away from them. For the Lord neuer ceaſeth to haue care ouer his people, ſeeing without wearineſſe, hee orders and gouernes all the parts of the world.

How to diſtinguiſh betweene vnbeleeuers and the faithfull.

Where is thy zeale?] By this interrogation it ſeemes the faithfull after a ſort vpbraid the Lord, in regard hee is no more touched with his vvonted zeale toward them; or that his power is diminiſhed. But the Prophet hath another meaning. For hee mentions theſe benefits, as I haue ſaid heretofore, becauſe he meant thereby to confirme the harts of the faithfull in good hope: thereby alſo teaching them that God is alwaies one and the ſame, and neuer puts off the bowels of compaſſion towards his Saints. And this will be euident enough by y which followes.

He takes the multitude of bowels and mercies, for the infinit goodneſſe of God: for he diſcouers and powres out his bowels as it were, in ſhewing himſelfe a liberall benefactor towards vs. And theſe ſaid fauours are ſo great, that wee cannot poſſiblie eſteeme nor value them as we ought. But it is no new thing to ſee the faithfull preſſed with griefe to powre out their complaints familiarly in the preſence of God, charging him that hee hath ſhut his bowels from them. I grant they retaine this principle, that God is alwaies mercifull; in regard his nature is vnchangeable: and howſoeuer they impute it to their ſinnes, that they feele him not ſuch a one to them, yet to preſerue themſelues from deſpaire they expoſtulate vvith him, how it can be that hee ſhould handle them ſo ſeuerelie. Yea, in ſhewing them nothing but the ſignes of his wrath, as if he had forgotten himſelfe.

The faithfull euer retaine this principle, namely, that God is alwaies mercifull.

Verſ. 16. Doubtleſſe thou art our father: though Abraham be ignorant of vs, and Iſrael know vs not, yet thou O Lord, art our father, and our redeemer: thy name is for euer.

THe Lord permits vs familiarly to powre out our hearts before him. For prayer is nothing elſe but a manifeſting of the heart in the preſence God; ſo as the beſt remedie we haue to releeue our cares and anguiſhes is to lay them vp in his boſome. Caſt thy burthen, ſaith Dauid, vpon the Lord, and he ſhall nouriſh thee: Pſalm. 55. 22. and 37. 5. The Prophet then hauing numbred vp Gods benefits towards the Iewes, whereby his power and goodneſſe was ſufficiently manifeſted; and yet that men by their ſinnes depriued themſelues from taſting the fruit thereof: he now comes to this point; namely, that Gods goodneſſe is ſo great, that it ouercoms mens ſtubbornneſſe.

A definition of prayer.

He calles him father in the name of the whole Church. For all cannot call him thus; becauſe it is a priuiledge that peculiarly belongs to the Church of God to call him father in his preſence. Thence we may gather, that Chriſt as the firſt borne, or rather as the onely ſonne of God, hath alwaies borne the chiefe ſway ouer the Church: for God cannot be called father, but by him. And againe, here wee ſee that the faithfull contend not with God: but onely draw arguments vnto themſelues from his nature, whereby to ouercome all temptations, and to ſettle their hearts in good hope.

The Churches priuiledge.

God hath neuer been called vpon as a father in the Church, otherwiſe than by Chriſt.

Though Abraham knovv vs not.] Some aske here why the people ſay that the Patriarke knew them not. S. Jerome thinks it was becauſe they were degenerate, and therefore were not worthie of ſo great an honour. But I take this expoſition to be ouer curious. The true ſenſe is, That albeit our forefathers diſauow vs, yet God ſtil holds vs for his children, and ſhewes himſelfe a father towards vs. Thoſe who ſay that Abraham and the reſt of Queſt. Anſ. Saint Ierom.

the

the faithfull had caſt off all care, touching the affaires of this life, doe too ſubtilly wreſt the Prophets words to a wrong ſenſe. I ſpeak not of the thing in it ſelfe; but I ſay theſe words proue not that the Saints are altogether careleſſe of vs. The moſt natiue and pure ſenſe is this; Lord, we acknowledge that in regard thou art our Father, it is a thing ſo firme and ſure, that albeit our fathers after the fleſh ſhould faile vs, yet vvilt thou neuer ceaſe to bee a father vnto vs: Pſal. 27. 10. So as all rights of nature ſhall ceaſe, rather then thou ſhouldeſt ceaſe to ſhew thy ſelfe a father vnto vs: or that thine holy adoption ſhould bee made void, ſeeing it is eſtabliſhed in thine immutable counſell, and ratified by the death of thine holy Sonne.

The true ſenſe of this place.

And yet in the meane while we may hence gather, that the holy men ſo pray and preſent themſelues before God, that they looke not to the interceſſions of others: for praier is inioined them vpon this condition, that wholly reſting themſelues in the fatherly loue of God, they reiect all other confidences. But if our Prophet taught the Iewes not to direct their hearts toward Abraham and Iacob (who yet had receiued ſo many precious promiſes) to be heard of God: then is it certaine that we haue now no more cauſe to runne to S. Peter, to S. Paul, and the reſt, then to them. For this is not a priuate praier made by one or two, but publike, and appertaining to the whole Church in generall: as if the Prophet had heere ſet them downe a forme of praier. And queſtionleſſe our confidence ought ſo to be ſetled vpon Gods fauour and fatherly goodneſſe towards vs, that we ſhould ſhut our eies againſt all interceſſions of men, whether aliue or dead. In a word, the faithfull heere proteſt, that they gaze not heere nor there, but reſt themſelues in God alone.

Saints not to be praied vnto.

But ſome may aske now, why hee onelie names Abraham and Iacob, and makes no mention of Iſaack? The reaſon is, becauſe the couenant was more ſolemnly ratified with theſe two heere noted. I grant that Iſaack had no leſſe part therein then they; but yet hee neither receiued ſo full, nor ſo many promiſes.

Queſt.

Anſ.

Our Redeemer.] Redemption is heere expreſſed as a teſtimonie of this adoption: for by this experiment, God ſhewed himſelfe the Father of this people. And therefore the people pray vnto God, and with aſſurance call him Father, in regard he had manifeſted vnto them ſo admirable a ſigne of his fatherly good will, which gaue them incouragement to hope well. But redemption ſimply in it ſelfe, would not haue ſufficed, vnleſſe the promiſe had bin therewithall annexed. Euen as then hee did once redeeme them, ſo doth he promiſe to be their father for euer.

The clauſe, from all time, ſets forth the ſtedfaſtneſſe and ſtabilitie of Gods fatherly loue. For we haue not deſerued the name of children; but in regard that his will onely, by which hee hath once adopted vs for ſuch, is vnchangeable. Seeing the Lord then hath an eternall name, it thereupon followes, that the title and grace which is thereunto conioined and flowes from this eternitie, ſhall indure for euer.

Verſ. 17. O Lord, why haſt thou made vs to erre from thy waies, and hardened our hearts from thy feare? Returne for thy ſeruants ſake, and for the Tribes of thine inheritance.

Or, wherefore haſt thou turned.

BEcauſe theſe phraſes of ſpeech ſeeme harſh and tart; ſome thinke the vnfaithfull are here brought in murmuring againſt God, and blaſpheming him: for their malice turnes into rage, whē they haue loſt all hope. But the ſcope of the text croſſeth this conceit. For the Prophet ſhewes the fruit which ſhould proceed from theſe miſeries and calamities of the Iewes. How? Becauſe being humbled and brought low, they ſhould ceaſe either to be proud, or to pleaſe themſelues in their vices. They were aſhamed then that in times paſt they had erred ſo farre out of the right way, and acknowledge their owne offences. And to ſay the truth, vvhen they attribute their ſinnes to the vvrath of God, their meaning is not to exempt themſelues from blame, nor to aboliſh their faults.

But the Prophet vſeth a phraſe of ſpeech very ordinary. For the holy Ghoſt is wont to ſay, that God cauſeth men to erre, hardens, and giues men vp into a reprobate mind: 2. Theſ. 2. 11. Rom. 9. 18. and 1. 28. Now when the faithfull ſpeake thus, they meane nothing leſſe then to make God the author of euill, and of ſinne, as if themſelues were innocent; or as if they meant to extenuate their crime. But they aime at an higher marke, and rather confeſſe thus their ſinnes haue ſeparated them from God, and is the cauſe vvhy they are left deſtitute of his holy Spirit. Yea, that thaner is come to paſſe, that they haue been plunged into infinit miſeries.

Thoſe who ſay that God leades vs into error by priuation, that is to ſay, in regard he bereaues vs of his ſpirit, but not the very white. It is ſaid that God both hardens and blinds when he deliuers men vp to be blinded by Satan, who is the miniſter and executioner of his wrath, for otherwiſe we ſhould euer be a pray vnto the will of the diuell: but in regard he is able to doe nothing of himſelfe without Gods commandement, to whoſe beck he is ſubiect, we truely affirme, that God is the author of this blinding and hardening, which alſo the ſcriptures doe witnes in many places. And yet it followes not thereupon that he ſhould be the author of ſinne, becauſe he puniſheth mēs ingratitude by ſuch a blinding. And thus the faithfull in this verſe confeſſe that God hath left them, but their ſinne was the cauſe, ſo as they ſtill acknowledge Gods iuſt reuenging hand vpon them. In like maner after Moſes hath ſaid, Thus thitherunto God had not giuē the people eies to ſee, nor an heart to vnderſtand, hee layes not the blame thereof vpon God, but ſhewes the Iewes where they were to ſeeke the remedie of ſuch a benummednes vvherof they vvere conuinced, Deut. 29. 14. But theſe ſeeme to take another pretext heere, in that they aske a reaſon, and expoſtulate the matter

God the author of blinding & hardening, yet not the author of ſinne.

Anſ. with God, as if he had bin bound to haue handled them more mildly. But I anſwere, that the faithfull haue ſtill an eye to Gods goodnes, whileſt they confeſſe that their afflictions are the iuſt recompences of their ſinnes.

Some referre theſe words to the captiuitie, as if the faithfull complained of the Lord for ſuffring them to languiſh ſo long a time in the ſame. As if the Prophet ſhould ſay, That their obſtinacie increaſed, becauſe the Lord gaue them no taſte of his grace. For the faithfull are often ſurprized with a very dangerous temptation, when they ſee the wicked ouerflow in all abundance, and are almoſt diſcouraged, as Dauid hath well expreſſed it in Pſalm. 125. But the Prophets ſentence ſeemes to be more generall: for the faithfull acknowledge themſelues to haue erred, becauſe they were not guided by the Spirit of God: whereof they complaine not, but rather deſire that this ſpirit may bee giuen them, by which their fathers in former times were gouerned and obtained all things proſperouſlie.

Why haſt thou cauſed our hearts to turne from thy feare?] Some tranſlate, Wherefore haſt thou hardned? but becauſe this ſutes not with that which followes, from thy feare, I had rather tranſlate, To turne backe. And the verbe alſo ſignifies ſo much.

Some thinke theſe words, returne for thy ſeruants ſake, appertaine to all the people. As the Scripture indeede is wont to terme all the houſhold of faith by the name of Gods ſeruants. But I thinke it is properlyto be referred vnto Abraham, Iſaac and Iacob, which ſure lie is much more probable. Not that the people reſted in their intercеſſion, but in regard that God had made the couenant of grace with them, that they might deliuer it ouer from hand to hand vnto their ſucceſſors. Thus then the faithfull ſet not theſe Patriarkes before them as common perſons onely, but in the qualitie of Miniſters, witneſſes, or mediators of the couenant, with the foundation of their faith: as in that ſong Lord, remember Dauid. In which place, the name of this good Patriarke is not ſet before the Lord, as if the faithfull thought hee had been their aduocate; but in regard the promiſe, which was made vnto him touching the reſtauration of the eternall kingdome in his familie, did appertaine to the whole body of the people.

Pſal. 132. 1.

How Papiſts wreſt theſe words, to proue their interceſſion to Saints.

The Papiſts ſnatch vp theſe words with great ioy, as if by them the interceſſion of Saints were proued. But by the true expoſition of the place, we may plainly ſee how eaſie a matter it is to anſwer them. For it is ſpoken of the Fathers, not as if they deſerued ought at Gods hand of themſelues, or were now interceſſors betweene God and vs; but becauſe the free couenant, which not onely appertained vnto them, but alſo to all their ſucceſſors, was contracted onely with them.

To the Tribes.] That is to ſay; Returne to thy wonted fauour towards thy people. By this we ſee that the things aforeſaid, tend to no other end, but onely that the people doe labour, thereby to prouoke the Lord to mercie, after they haue laid before him their miſeries and calamities. Here then we ſee the maner how we are to addreſſe our ſelues vnto God; namely, by putting him in minde of his former benefits, and by manifeſting in his ſight our griefes and ſorrowes. Thus we muſt doe if we would obtaine deliuerance.

How wee muſt come to God.

Of thine heritage.] That is, becauſe God had choſen this people as his proper portion. As if hee ſhould ſay; What ſhall become of thy people if we periſh? Not that God was tied to this people, but in reſpect hee had giuen them his faith by oath. Thus the people durſt very well vrge God with his promiſe, and importune him by their praiers, in regard hee had voluntarily obliged himſelfe both vnto their fathers, and to their children.

But now, ſeeing all promiſes are ratified and confirmed in Chriſt, 2. Cor. 1. 20. and that we haue the truth of all things, wee ought to bee built vp in ſo much the greater confidence: for the couenant is not onely contracted in his hand, but it is alſo confirmed and ſealed with his blood. I grant he was the mediator as well for the fathers as for vs: but all things are now more cleere and manifeſt, in regard they then ſtucke in many obſcure ſhadowes.

Verſ. 18. The people of thine holineſſe haue poſſeſſed it but a little while: for our aduerſaries haue troden downe thy ſanctuarie.

IT is a wonder ỳ the Prophet ſaith ỳ people poſſeſſed the land but for a very little ſpace, ſeeing 863. yeres were expired ſince they began to poſſeſſe it, and 1400. yeeres and more ſince Abraham entred into the land of Canaan. But the promiſe muſt be conſidered, in which it was ſaid, that Abrahams poſteritie ſhould inioy the land, as an euerlaſting poſſeſſion: Gen. 17. 8. and 48. 4. This was but a little while therefore, if it be compared vvith eternitie. The people of God then obiect this ſhort time vnto him, not as accuſing him of breach of promiſe, but to put him in mind of his couenant, and that he ſhould rather haue reſpect to his owne goodneſſe, then to the chaſtiſements which they had iuſtly deſerued. And after this manner the ancient Church complaines, in Pſ. 102. 23, 24. that her ſtrength was abated in the way, & that her daies were ſhortened: and therefore praies, that God vvould not cut her off in the midſt of her daies, becauſe the fulneſſe of time depended vpon the comming of Chriſt.

Our aduerſaries.] This complaint was much more grieuous; namely, that the wicked prophaned that land, which God had conſecrated vnto himſelfe. And the truth is, this went neerer to their hearts, then all the reſt of their miſeries. And good reaſon: for we ought not ſo much to reſpect our ſelues, as Gods ſeruice and religion. And this is the end of deliuerance, to wit, that there might be a people which might praiſe and worſhip the Lord purely.

Verſ.

*Or, a long time.

Verſ. 19. Wee haue been * as they ouer whom thou neuer bareſt rule, and vpon whom thy name was not called.

THe Prophets ſenſe may admit two expoſitions. For ſome take this place as if the people obiected vnto God, that they were choſen when other nations were reiected, and that this couenant was ratified from the time of old. The other expoſition, which I rather follow, is this; that the people complaine and reply vnto God, that there is no difference betweene them and the heathen; in regard they had no ſuccour nor refreſhing at all in their aduerſities: which they hold to be an abſurd and an vncomely thing. This is a notable ſentence, and very worthy of memorie: for heere wee ſee it is lawfull for vs to powre out our complaints vnto God, when afflictions preſſe vs aboue meaſure; and to ſet our calling before him, to mooue him to ſuccour vs; thereby teſtifying what great difference hee makes betweene vs and ſtrangers.

Ouer whom thy name is not called vpon.] This comes all to one ſenſe. For the peoples meaning is, that Gods calling ought not to bee aboliſhed. And indeed it is not the Lords will that wee ſhould call vpon him in vaine: for praiers are vnprofitable, and vaniſh in the aire, vnleſſe the Lord haue reſpect vnto vs. Heere note alſo one marke of the Church; namely, that Gods name is there called vpon. The wicked cannot call vpon him, becauſe there is no acceſſe vnto him but by his word; of which, they haue no knowledge: and therefore faith is neuer ſeparate from praier. For where faith is, there is alſo praier: and if it be not there, let vs know for a ſuretie that there is no faith nor hope at all.

A note of the Church.

Faith bringeth forth praier.

Oh that thou wouldeſt breake the heauens, and come downe: and that the mountaines might melt at thy preſence!

Maſter Calum makes this part of the 19. verſe.

OH that thou wouldeſt breake!] The Hebrew particle, as I take it, comprehends a wiſh. For though it hath many ſignifications, yet the ſcope of the text ſhewes, that this agrees better to this place then any other. For the faithfull heere enter into a more ardent praier; as often it falles out when in the ſharpeſt afflictiõs, a ſet forme of words would want ſufficient vehemencie to expreſſe our deſires. He ſaith, that God breakes the heauens, when hee ſuddenly ſhewes ſome memorable and rare ſigne of his power. And the reaſon of this maner of ſpeech is not onely in regard that men being in great diſtreſſe, are wont to lift vp their eies to heauen, from whence they expect helpe; but becauſe miracles alſo make way for them, by breaking the ordinarie courſe of nature. Now it ſeemes that God is ſhut vp in heauen, whileſt hee neglects to ſuccour vs, and lets all things in the world to goe at ſix and ſeuen. For this cauſe then it is ſaid, that he opens and breakes the heauens, when he giues vs ſome ſigne of his preſence, at ſuch a time as wee iudge him to be farre remote from vs. But theſe things are ſpoken according to our naturall reaſon, as is alſo the clauſe, That thou wouldeſt come downe: for what neede is there that God ſhould change his place? Hee applies himſelfe thus to our weakeneſſe, that we might the better comprehend that which is ſaid to vs of him.

That the mountaines would melt.] That is to ſay; Oh, cauſe thy Maieſtie and glory to appeare in ſuch wiſe, as the elements being aſtoniſhed at the feeling thereof, might bow, to giue way vnto thee: as ſhall bee declared more at large by and by.

THE LXIIII. CHAPTER.

That which in our bookes is made the beginning of this 64. Chapter, is in the Commentarie annexed to the laſt verſe of the 63. Chapter, where you ſhall find it expounded.

Verſ. 2. As the melting fire burned, as the fire cauſed the waters to boile (that thou mighteſt declare thy name to thy aduerſaries) the people did tremble at thy preſence.

3. When thou didſt terrible things which wee looked not for, thou cameſt downe, and the mountaines melted at thy preſence.

A confirmation of the former wiſh in this and in the verſe following.

WEe may reade all this in the future tence, or in the ſubiunctiue. As if hee ſhould ſay; Lord, if thou wouldeſt come downe, the people would tremble at thy preſence, thine aduerſaries would forthwith melt away. But I thinke it to be more native, as I haue turned it: for it is very ſure that the Prophet alludes heere to Mount Sinai, Exod. 19. 20. where the Lord manifeſted himſelfe openly vnto the people. Hence alſo it appeares how vnaduiſedly this Chapter was diſtinguiſhed, ſeeing the contents thereof is recited for the confirmation of the former wiſh, which ſhould haue been placed in the beginning. We haue elſewhere ſeene, that when the Prophets mention the reliefes which God hath giuen to his people, they ſtill bring in teſtimonies concerning the deliuerance out of Egypt. And as oft as they ſpeake of this hiſtorie, they therewithall comprehend whatſoeuer benefits God beſtowed vpon his people: not onely when hee deliuered them from vnder Pharaohs tyrannie, and appeared vnto them in mount Sinai: but that alſo, when by the ſpace of 40. yeeres he furniſhed them in the deſert with all things neceſſarie; who having ſubdued and waſted their enemies, did put them in quiet poſſeſſion of the land of Canaan. To bee ſhort, they comprehend all the teſtimonies, whereby in times paſt he ſhewed himſelfe gracious to his people; and terrible to their enemies.

Note.

Mount

The Prophet ſaith, that the fire made the waters to boile: in regard that contrarie to their wont, fires and lightnings, were mingled with violent raines and tempeſts. As if hee ſhould haue ſaid, This fire (kindled by the Lord) was ſo fierce, that it melted all things, were they neuer ſo hard; and drunke vp euen the very waters.

To this appertaines that which is added touching the melting of the mountaines, before his face. For hee opened a way for his redeemed, euen thorow the greateſt incumbrances that they met withall. Hee ſaith alſo, that the Iſraelites ſaw things which they neuer looked for: in regard, that albeit God had aduertiſed them, and had acquainted them with many experiments of his power; yet this terrible ſpectacle whereof, he ſpeakes, greatly ſurmounted their capacities and vnderſtandings, yea, and all the reaſon of man.

Verſ. 4. For ſince the beginning of the world, they haue not heard, nor vnderſtand with the eare, neither hath the eie ſeene another God beſides thee, which doth ſo to him that waiteth for him.

THis verſe confirmes that which wee haue ſaid before; namelie, that the faithfull deſire nothing here which is ſtrange and vnheard of: but only that God would but ſhew himſelfe ſuch a one towards them, as in times paſt he had done to their fathers; and that hee would continue foorth his liberalitie.

And withall, ſeeing it hath been his cuſtome to ſuccor his people, and to giue them ſome aſſured teſtimonies of his preſence; that he would not now diſcontinue the ſame for the time to come: that ſo his almightie power might ſtill ſhine more and more. For you muſt note, that he ſo brings in the people praying vnto God, that therewithall they ſhould confirme their hope from the remembrance of the time paſt, and with the more boldneſſe might haue their recourſe to the throne of grace.

The eie hath not ſeene.] Doubtleſſe the Prophets meaning is to magnifie Gods goodneſſe by mentioning theſe ſo many benefits, which God in former times had beſtowed vpon his people. This manner of commendation alſo, is very high and excellent: when being raviſhed with admiration in regard thereof, he cries out, that there is no God but he. Likewiſe, that the things which God hath done for his peoples ſake, were neuer heard of before.

But this may be read two waies; for the word God may be taken in the accuſatiue, or in the vocatiue: O Lord, none but thou haſt ſeene the things which thou haſt done to thoſe that wait for thee. But the other reading is more receiued; namely, They haue neuer heard nor ſeene ſuch a God. In this laſt reading the particle of ſimilitude muſt be ſupplied; for without that, the ſentence would bee imperfect. No eare then hath heard, neither hath the eie ſeene ſuch a God, as doth ſuch things. And thus God is here ſeparated from idols; from which the ſuperſtitious ſort thinke they obtaine all bleſſings: but they are onely the deuices of mans braine, which can neither doe good nor hurt. Contrariwiſe, God deales foorth his benefits of all ſorts liberallie to thoſe that ſerue him.

It ſeemes S. Paul expounds this place otherwiſe, 1. Cor. 2. 9. and applies it to another ſenſe. Yea, he cites it in other termes: becauſe hee followed the Greeke tranſlation. The Apoſtles made no ſcruple touching this point, in regard they rather reſpected the ſentences then the words: and thought it ſufficient only to point out this place of Scripture vnto the reader; whither they might reſort to be ſatisfied touching the things which they taught. But where S. Paul ſeemes to haue added of his owne, Neither hath it entred into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them which loue him: this he did, that his ſpeech might be the better vnderſtood. For nothing is added which agrees not very well with the Prophets doctrine. And that wee may the better perceiue this agreement, wee muſt conſider his drift. In that place hee diſputes about the doctrine of the Goſpell, which hee ſhewes doth farre ſurpaſſe all the reach of mans wit. Why ſo? Becauſe it containes ſuch a knowledge, as is contrarie, and wonderfullie farre remote from the wiſdome of the fleſh. In a word, that it is an hidden wiſdome. For which cauſe S. Paul worthilie breakes foorth into this admiration in weighing and pondering of the ſame. And our Prophet calling to mind theſe rare and famous works of God, as one aſtoniſhed cries out; that there was neuer ſuch a thing heard of. So concerning this grace which ſurmounts all the reſt, namely, when Chriſt is offered vs in the Goſpell, we may breake foorth after the ſame manner, and ſay, O Lord, the mercie which thou ſhewweſt vnto thy people, farre ſurmounts all our reaſon. Neither eie, eare, hart, nor ſpirit, can attaine to ſuch an height. S. Paul then you ſee applies this place fitlie to his diſputation: neither doth he corrupt the Prophets ſentence, when he exalts aboue all things in the world that excellent and peculiar grace which God hath beſtowed vpon his Church.

Obiect.

Anſ.

S. Pauls drift in alleaging this text 1. Cor. 2. 9.

Obiect.

Anſ.

There yet remaines another difficultie, namely, that the Apoſtle transferres that to ſpirituall benefits; which is here ſaid of temporall. But we may affirme, that Iſaiah ſimplie reſpected the cauſe from whence theſe benefits of God iſſued, though hee therewithall had an eie to the eſtate of this life preſent. For all the good things which God hath giuen vs here below for the ſuſtaining and and cheriſhing of our naturall life, are ſo many teſtimonies vnto vs of that fatherly loue which he beares vs. And it is alſo the propertie of faith to aſcend by viſible benefits, to inuiſible graces. Thus then howſoeuer the Prophet ſeemes to meddle onely in matters touching their bodily deliuerance, and other things appertaining to this life preſent: yet aimes he therein at an higher marke, and eſpecially reſpects thoſe benefits which in particular manner belonged to the people of God. For what a ſottiſhneſſe were it, if whileſt we inioy benefits temporall, wee ſhould not by them mount vp to the welſpring from which they flow; namely, from Gods meere loue and mercie? Both good and bad doe indifferently inioy theſe common good things: but that particular fauour wherewith he entertaines vs, appertaines to none but to his houſhold ſeruants. Hence it is that wee not onely conſider that which appeares to our outward ſenſes, but wee forthwith aſcend vp to the very cauſe. Vnto which point, though neither eye, nor eare can reach; that is, to comprehend therein the grace of adoption, by which the Lord proteſts that hee will be our Father; yet hee reueales this vnto vs by the witnes of his holy Spirit.

The propertie of faith.

The inioying of temporall benefits, ſhould carrie vp our minds to the meditation of thoſe that are eternall.

It is alſo very likely that the Prophet hauing ſpoken of a particular benefit of God, takes occaſion thereby to ariſe vnto a generall conſideration. For when the matter concernes the meditation of Gods workes, the faithfull are wont to aſcend from one kind of them, to the conſideration of the whole in generall. And therefore this onely example of ſo wonderfull a goodneſſe of God, might well rauiſh the Prophets mind ſo high, that in his meditatations he conſidered of this infinite abundance of bleſſings laid vp in heauen for the faithfull. Yea, we manifeſtly perceiue that this honourable commendation comprehends vnder it the free couenant, by which the Lord adopted vnto himſelfe Abrahams poſteritie, into the hope of eternall life. The ſumme of all comes to this; that ſeeing the goodneſſe and power of God is ſo great, we ought not to diſtruſt him; but our confidence ought ſo to be ſetled thereupon, that we ſhould aſſuredly relie vpon his helpe. And to this belongs theſe excellent benefites which the Prophet heere mentions.

The ſumme of this verſe.

Verſ. 5. *Thou didſt meete him that reioiced in thee, and did iuſtly: they remembred thee in thy waies: behold, thou art angry, for wee haue ſinned, yet in them is continuance, and wee ſhall bee ſaued.

*Or, and.

HE proſecutes the ſame argument. For the people bewailes their miſerable condition, in regard they felt no reliefe nor eaſe in their aduerſitie; though God was wont to be ſo good vnto their forefathers. The faithfull then ſpeake vnto God on this ſort; Thou wert woont to meete our fathers, but thy fauour is now turned away from vs: and it ſeemes thou wilt be no more appeaſed, ſeeing wee gaine nothing by calling vpon thee. For vvhence comes thy aduerſitie, but from this; that as if thou vvert now become changeable, thou ſheweſt thy ſelfe otherwiſe to vs, then thou diddeſt to our fathers in times paſt?

In this and in the verſe following, the Iewes bewaile their miſeries.

In the next place they confeſſe they were iuſtly chaſtiſed, becauſe they had ſinned. I haue heretofore ſhewed, that there is nothing better for vs in afflictions, then to remember Gods benefits: and not onely thoſe whereof we haue had experience, but thoſe alſo which are recorded in the Scriptures. For we can not be fenced with a buckler that is more thick nor large then it, againſt all kind of temptations.

The beſt fence againſt afflictions.

Thoſe who thinke theſe words, him that reioyced, and did iuſtly, ſhould be read together, as if he ſhould ſay, Thou diddeſt meete them which ſerued thee willinglie, and delighted in well doing; doe ill expound this verſe, as I thinke. I rather thinke that by the reioycers thoſe are vnderſtood who are ioyfull in proſperitie, in regard the people were then in ſorrow and heauines. For there is a cloſe oppoſition, thus, Thou wert wont in times paſt to meete our fathers, before they were preſſed with any griefe, and diddeſt giue them as thy comming: but now thou art farre off, and ſuffreſt vs to languiſh with griefe and diſcontentment. To this belongs that which is added, That they remembred God, becauſe they enioyed his preſent grace, and felt him both the author and vpholder of their ſaluation. Thus by the vvaies of God, he vnderſtands all proſperitie: be it that he was more neere vnto them by handling them tenderly, and cockering of them as his children: or in regard that he naturallie is inclined to doe good. But becauſe he hath ſaid that God was wont to meet him that did iuſtly, the remembrance may be referred to the loue of pietie. To wit, that they gaue themſelues carefullie to the ſeruice of God: in which ſenſe, theſe words are the expoſition of the former member, which is a thing vſuall with the Prophets, who are wont to confirme their ſpeeches with many words.

1

2

To remember God, ſignifies, to be ſo ſweetly allured with thinking on him, that we wiſh for nothing beſides, and place our whole felicitie in him. For there is nothing which more reioyceth vs, then the remembrance of his mercie: as on the contrarie, if we feele him angrie, then the remembrance of his name is terrible vnto vs.

And vve haue ſinned.] The Prophet renders a reaſon of that aboue ſaid, for they murmur not againſt God becauſe they felt him otherwiſe to them then he was towards their fathers, but they lay the whole blame vpon themſelues. Hence let vs learne, neuer to thinke of the afflictions wherewith the Lord viſits vs, vnleſſe therwithall we call our ſinnes to remembrance, that ſo wee may both acknowledge our faults, as alſo confeſſe that we are iuſtly chaſtiſed.

The word perpetuall may either be referred to ſinnes, or to the vvaies of the Lord. To ſinnes thus: Although we haue bin obſtinate in our ſinnes, and worthie to be an hundred times condemned; condemned, yet hitherunto we haue bin ſaued through thy mercie. If we referre it to the waies of God, he renders the reaſon wherefore the people were not conſumed, to wit, in regard the waies of the Lord are firme and perpetuall, and becauſe there is no end of his mercie. And this ſenſe I thinke agrees beſt to this place.

Some ſupplie, that perpetuitie was founded in the waies of the Lord. But I had rather take the words ſimplie as they ſound, as Dauid in the 30. Pſalme ſaith, That the Lords anger indures only for a night, but he is appeaſed, and ſhewes mercie for euer: for he is not prouoked nor violently carried away with anger, as men are; but hee continues conſtant and ſtedfaſt in his fauour and in well-doing.

But yet we haue not attained the Prophets full meaning: for he ſaith, that the people are ſaued, who in the meane while were led into captiuitie, as into a ſepulchre, wherein they bewailed their miſerie. And therefore I take the time paſt for the future tence; to wit, we ſhall be ſaued, for, Wee haue bin ſaued: for it is rather a wiſh or praier, then an affirmation. The faithful then boaſt not of that they haue obtained, but rather in complaining of their pouertie, they haue their recourſe to Gods perpetuall mercies. They extoll that then which they deſire, and not that which they had already attained.

Verſ. 6. But wee haue all been as an vncleane thing, and all our righteouſnes is as filthie clouts, and we all doe fade like a leafe, and our iniquities like the wind haue taken vs away.

THe faithfull continue their complaint. For they lament their miſerable eſtate becauſe God regarded them not. Moreouer, the Hebrewes agree not about the expoſition of theſe words, filthie cloutes Notwithſtanding it is certaine, that they ſignifie a baſe and vile thing of no price. Yea, ſuch a thing, which in regard of the lothſomneſſe thereof, ſtinkes in mens noſtrils.

1 2 But two things are here to be noted, firſt, that the faithfull confeſſe they haue offended, and are iuſtly puniſhed: Secondly, that they ceaſe not to complaine touching the weight of the blowes which they receiued. Not by way of pleading againſt God; but to mooue him vnto compaſſion. As when a malefactor would endeuour to pacifie his Iudge, he laies foorth all his miſeries and calamities before him. Simile.

Many vexe and wearie themſelues here, becauſe the Prophet ſpeaking of the filthineſſe of ſinnes; comprehends all the Iewes without exception: though there were among them many of the true ſeruants of God. But they haue no reaſon ſo to doe, for he ſpeakes not here of euery one in particular, but of the whole bodie in generall, which hee compares to filthie cloutes; in regard it was trampled vnder feete, and extreamelie afflicted.

Some haue been wont to alleage this place to proue that it is ſo farre off from meriting any thing by our workes; that euen our works themſelues are infected and lothſome before God. But this ſeemes, as I thinke, to be farre from the Prophets intention; ſeeing he ſpeakes not here of all mankind in generall; but deſcribes their complaints, who being led captiues, felt Gods wrath heauie vpon them. For which cauſe, they confeſſed, that both themſelues, and their righteouſneſſes, were like filthie cloutes. Firſt of all then, he exhorts them to confeſſe their ſinne, and to acknowledge their offence: ſecondlie, to aske pardon. And that the meanes how to obtaine the ſame is, firſt, to acknowledge our miſerable and wofull condition: and therewithall to confeſſe that wee therein receiue the iuſt recompence of our offences. 1 2

Wee all fade. This is a very apt compariſon: which ſhewes that men wither and wanze away as ſoone as they feele Gods wrath. Which point is notablie deſcribed in Pſalm. 90. 5. and 103. 15. and in chap. 40. 6. We are rightly compared to leaues then; becauſe our iniquities are the winds which carrie vs away.

Verſ. 7. And there is none that calleth vpon thy name, neither that ſtirreth vp himſelfe to take hold of thee: for thou haſt hid thy ſelfe from vs, and haſt conſumed vs becauſe of our ſinnes.

THe Prophet confirmes that which was ſaid before. For hee admoniſheth the faithfull to acknowledge that they are worthie of ſuch a reuenging hand of God, how ſharpe and ſeuere ſoeuer it ſeemed. Now he mentions ſome capitall ſinnes. And becauſe it had bin too long to haue ſtood deciphering them out one by one, he ſtrikes at the roote it ſelfe, and ſaith, that Gods ſeruice was contemned. A confirmation of the former ſentence.

Vnder the word Inuocation, hee comprehends the whole ſeruice of God, according to the vſuall phraſe of the Scriptures. For the principall part thereof is, that wee call vpon God; thereby teſtifying that our whole truſt is in him. It is very certaine that prayers and vowes were alwaies in vſe among the Iewes: but becauſe they wanted the affection of the hart; and that it was farre remote from God; therefore he eſteemed none of theſe fained deuotions. Which hee yet better explaines in the particle following; where it is ſaid, that none ſtirred vp himſelfe to ſeeke God. But all of them vaniſhed away, and fell to nothing through their owne ſlothfulneſſe.

Firſt hee ſhewes that the thing we ought chiefflie to deſire is, that we may be fully conioyned with God. For when we are eſtranged from him, it muſt needes follow of neceſſitie, that all things ſhould turne to our deſtruction and woe. Now by nature wee are exceeding idle and ſlothfull: for which cauſe we haue need to be quickned vp with the ſpurre. Seeing then that we take pleaſure ſure in our careleſneſſe; it ſtands vs in hand to hearken aduiſedly to the Prophets counſell, leſt wee become vtterly ſenſeleſſe. Otherwiſe it will come to paſſe in the ende, that the Lord for his part will diſdaine and reiect vs. For the Prophet deſcribes the miſerable eſtate of this people, who had no deſire at all to take hold vpon God: neither was there any meanes left to awaken them vp to a ſincere deſire of godlineſſe.

And haſt conſumed vs.] They complaine againe that they were ouerwhelmed with the weight of their miſeries, without being any thing at all relieued or eaſed by God. For Iſaiah propounds theſe things, in the name of the whole people: and intreates the Lord not to ſuffer them to languiſh any longer vnder ſo great calamities.

Verſ. 8. But now, O Lord, thou art our father; we are the clay, * and thou art our potter; and we all are the worke of thine hands.

* Or, thou art, &c.
* Or, former.

After the laying foorth of their miſeries, they crie for pardon in this, and in the verſe following.

AFter they haue bewailed their miſeries, with which they were almoſt ouerwhelmed; now in plainer termes they deſire the Lord to pardon and eaſe them of their ſmart, and withall doe more boldly profeſſe themſelues now to bee his children notwithſtanding. For it was adoption onely that could raiſe vp their hearts vnto a liuely hope: ſo as notwithſtanding the burthen of afflictions wherewith they were preſſed downe, yet they ceaſed not for all that to reſt vpon God as vpon a father. This order ought to be well obſerued: for to attaine to a ſound and ſincere humilitie of heart, it is needfull that wee be deiected and laid on all foure, as they ſay. But if deſpaire enſue, let vs haſten to this conſolation: for ſeeing God hath vouchſafed to chuſe vs for his children, it is our parts to hope that he will ſaue vs, euen then when things ſhall ſeeme moſt deſperate and confuſed. Thus then, in regard of the free couenant, the Iſraelites proteſt they are Gods children, that they might feele his fatherly good will towards them in ſuch wiſe, that his promiſes might not be in vaine.

1
2

By way of compariſon they amplifie and ſet forth Gods grace, in confeſſing that they were formed of the clay, for they ſeeke for no excellent matter in themſelues: only in their originall they extoll Gods mercie, who of mire and clay, hath bin pleaſed to create them his children. In the ſecond member, where God is called their former, and the people the worke of his hands, it comes all to one ſenſe, for they whollie attribute vnto God their being, and the author of all they had. And this is a right acknowledgment: for God is robbed of his due honor whileſt men glorie in themſelues, be it neuer ſo little. But Iſaiah ſpeakes not heere of the common creation of men, but of their regeneration, for which reſpect the faithfull are in particular called the workemanſhip of God, Chap. 17. 7. and 19. 25. and 22. 11. and 27. 11. and 37. 26. and 43. 1. 15. Epheſ. 2. 10. They heere acknowledge then a ſingular fauour that God hath done them, firſt, in electing them for his people, and then in inriching them with ſo many and excellent benefits.

God is robbed of his glory, whileſt men glorie in themſelues.

Verſ. 9. Be not angrie O Lord aboue meaſure, neither remember iniquitie for euer: loe, we beſeech thee, behold, we are all thy people.

THe people pray that God would mitigate both his wrath and their afflictions. Not that God euer exceeds meaſure, but in regard they ſhould be vtterly ouerwhelmed if he would ſtand to examine thé to the vtmoſt. They pray then that their paines may be moderated. As Ieremiah ſaith, Correct me ô Lord, but in iudgement, that is to ſay in meaſure, Ier. 10. 24. For he oppoſeth iudgement to wrath, as in 2. Sam. 7. 14. it is ſaid ỳ he chaſtiſeth vs with the rods of men, becauſe he wil not come againſt vs himſelfe to vtter all his force in puniſhing vs, leſt we ſhuld be forthwith ground to powder.

The Iewes pray not ſimplie againſt afflictions.

But it is worth the noting, that they do not ſimply deſire to be freed from Gods iudging of them, but ſo offer themſelues to be chaſtiſed, that the blowes may not daſh them to pieces. And this is the cauſe why they deſire that the memorie of their iniquities may be blotted out: for if God ſhould not ſhew thé mercie this way, there ſhould be no end of their miſeries.

Behold we are thy people.

The Prophet repeates that which he had ſaid before in verſ. 8. namely, that God had choſen Abrahams poſteritie. For the beſt aſſurance they had to obtaine pardon, was, that God being true of his promiſes, could not reiect thoſe whom he had once adopted. In ſpeaking of all, he meanes not euery one in particular, but comprehends the whole body of the Church. And howſoeuer the greateſt part of them were cut off by their wicked reuolt, yet this was true, that the Iewes were Gods peculiar people. Neither was this prayer made for all indifferentlie, but only for the little flock of the faithfull. Now the people ſet not forth their merits before God, but flee to his free couenant by which they were adopted. For this indeed is the ſure and only recourſe the faithfull haue: this I ſay is a remedie againſt all miſchiefes, and that is the reaſon why Moſes and all the Prophets doe ſo often repeate the ſame, Deut. 32. 13.

Verſ. 10. Thine holy cities lie waſt: Sion is a wildernes, and Ieruſalem a deſert.

The Church recounts her miſerie againe in this, and in the verſe following.

THe Church here againe recounts her miſeries, that ſhe might thereby bow the Lord to compaſſion and forgiuenes. She ſaith, the Cities were waſted; and for an amplification ſhe addes, that Zion is become a wildernes; for it was the ſeate royall in which God would be called vpon. Then he addes Ieruſalem, wherein Zion was. For it ſeemed ſtrange that the Citie which God had conſecrated to himſelfe, ſhould be laid on heapes and waſted by the enemie.

The Prophet calles them Cities of holines, in reſpect that as God had ſanctified the people, ſo was it his will that the Cities, yea the whole countrie, ſhuld be conſecrated vnto him. Seeing the Cities then were dedicated vnto

God, they were rightly called holy, because God raigned therein, and was called vpon in them. And thus we may call those Cities of holinesse, in which God is purely worshipped, hauing abandoned all superstitions.

What Cities deserue to be called Gods holinesse.

Vers. 11. The house of our sanctuarie and of our glory, where our fathers praised thee, is burnt vp with fire, and all our pleasant things are wasted.

THe sanctuarie is otherwise attributed to the people, then to God. For it being a pledge of that holy vnion betweene God and the people, it is often called the house of God, because it answered to his holinesse. Heere the faithfull call it their sanctuarie, in regard they were thence to draw their sanctitie: which they yet confirme more apparantly by the word glory. For they confesse they had nothing to glory in but the Temple, wherein God was pleased to bee worshipped and serued.

And yet we see that this their reioicing, was often vaine; in so much that Ieremiah reproues them for it, saying; Trust not in lying words; to wit, The Temple of the Lord, The Temple of the Lord: Ier. 7. 4. But as the boasting of such as made faire shewes, and grew insolent, in regard of some titles was vaine: so on the contrary, they reioiced rightly, who honoured Gods ordinance, & laid it vp in their hearts; and also resting vpon the testimonie of the word, were assured to dwell vnder his protection, who had chosen out a perpetuall habitation for himselfe in the middest of them. For the Temple was built by the commandement of God; so as the Iewes might well boast that they had God for the vpholder of their saluation.

But because his seruice was then marred and corrupted, and that all in a manner ran riot after superstitions and impietie, the Prophet mentions the time past, and not the time present. As if he should say; Albeit we haue not yeelded thee that obedience which we ought to haue done, yet behold it is thy Temple still, wherein our fathers serued thee purely: and wilt thou suffer it to be prophaned, and to lie waste? Will not this reproch redound to thine owne dishonor, seeing this building was erected for thy worshippe? The Iewes plead not their merits heere, neither dawbe they ouer their sinnes; no, they rather confesse and lay them open; onely they put God in minde of his seruice, that in remembring his holy couenant, hee would not permit his promises to bee fruitlesse. And all the faithfull ought to imitate this their example.

The verbe To praise, is taken to giue thanks: as if he should say; In this Temple, the lamentable ruine whereof breakes the hearts of the faithfull in sunder, in times past thy praises were wont to sound, when thou diddest entertaine thy people there, in thy mercy and compassion.

Vers. 12. Wilt thou hold thy selfe still at these things, O Lord? Wilt thou hold thy peace and afflict vs aboue measure?

THe people fortifie themselues in vndoubted hope, that God will not suffer his glorie to be thus trampled vnder foote, though he be prouoked to wrath by mens infinite offences. Hypocrites reape no consolation at all by this, but these things indeed belong onely to such as are touched with a true sense of Gods mercy. Such conclude, and are certainly perswaded, that howsoeuer death doth menace them; yet God hauing regard to his owne glory, will at the least bee mercifull to some; that so the whole seed perish not.

Wilt thou afflict vs?] Isaiah shewes that God cannot forget his mercie. Why so? Because he cannot deny himselfe: for his glory is ioined with our saluation. And this is a thing diligently to be noted: or hauing spoken before of Gods glory, now he addes, wilt thou afflict vs aboue measure? The Lord then will moderate his corrections; for his glory requires it, that wee bee deliuered from death: which glory he can in no wise neglect. Let vs then take vp this praier, as oft as our enemies inuade vs: not after the manner of hypocrites, who make a great craking of Gods glory, whereof they haue neither taste nor feeling. But let vs come vnto it with faith and repentance, that so wee may truly reape the fruit of this glory.

Gods glory ioined with our saluatiõ.

Vs.

THE LXV. CHAPTER.

Vers. 1. I haue been sought of them that asked not, I was found of them that sought me not: I said; Behold me, behold me, vnto a nation that called not vpon my name.

In this verse the Prophet turnes from the Iewes to the Gentiles.

NOw the Prophet passeth ouer to the handling of another point of doctrine. For he shewes that God hath iust cause to reiect and cast off the Iewes, because neither admonitions, nor threatnings would serue the turn to reclaime them from their errors, nor to bring them againe into the right way. But to the end they should not imagin that the couenant of the Lord should therefore be broken; he addes, that another people, which then were of none account, should come to him; and that his name should bee honoured and magnified in the places where he was vnknowne before. The Iewes thought this very strange, and iudged thereof altogether contrary to that couenant which God had contracted with Abraham, namely, namely, that such a grace should be communicated to any other nation, then to his posteritie. But the Prophet meant to plucke this vaine confidence away from them, to the end they should not imagin that God was onely tied to the posteritie of Abraham. For the Lord bound not himselfe vnto them, but vpon a certaine condition: which if they happened to breake, they were to be held as traitors and disloiall; and so by consequence, depriued of the fruit of this couenant. Besides, the couenant was not onely made with Abraham and with his posteritie, according to the flesh, but also with all such as should bee ingrafted into the familie of this Patriarke by faith. But it shall be more conuenient for vs to beginne at the second verse, that so wee may the better vnderstand the Prophets meaning: for there the cause of this reiection is expressed.

Vers. 2. I haue spread out mine hands all the day vnto a rebellious people, which walked in a way that was not good, euen after their owne imaginations.

Heere hee shewes the reason of their reiection.

HEre hee accuseth the Iewes, and complaines of their ingratitude and rebellion; wherein he shewes that they haue no occasion giuen them to affirme, that the Lord offered them any wrong, if he made others partakers of the same grace with them. The Iewes proudly insulted against God, as if their merits had been the cause of their election. But for this their insolencie and vnthankfulnesse the Lord reiects them as vnworthie: and vpbraides them, that hee hath but lost all his time, in stretching foorth his hand vnto them, to draw and vnite them to himselfe. For by stretching foorth of the hands, he signifies a dailie summoning of them. Now the Lord is said to stretch foorth his hand diuers waies. For hee drawes vs to him either by his workes, or word: but he principallie respects the latter in this place. The Lord neuer speakes vnto vs, but hee therewithall stretcheth foorth his hand to vnite vs vnto himselfe, and causeth vs to feele that hee is neere vnto vs. Yea, he so manifests his fatherly loue, & so willingly accepts of vs, that if we yeeld not obedience vnto his voice, we ought iustly to impute the same to our owne frowardnes. Moreouer, the clause, all the day long, aggrauates the fault greatly, namely, that God ceased not for the space of many yeeres together, to send his Prophets one after another: yea, as it is said in Ier. 7.13. and 35.14. He rose early, and stinted not his care and paines vntill the euening.

1
2

First, hee calles them rebellious, or disobedient. Next, he shewes what this rebellion was; to wit, the people walked after their owne imaginations: for nothing is more displeasing vnto God, then when men are giuen to follow their owne reason: which he will haue vs to renounce, that wee may be fit to comprehend the true doctrine. The Lord heere protests then that he was not to be blamed, for not vpholding the peoples good estate, and that he fauoured them not as he was wont: but that themselues, through their folly, had reuolted, and loued rather to sticke to their owne inuentions, then to follow him.

Nothing displeaseth God more then when wee follow our owne inuentions.

Now hauing spoken of this reiection, it remaines that wee come to touch the calling of the Gentiles, who succeeded in the roome of the Iewes: for it is not to be doubted but hee speakes thereof in the first place. Now the Lord had long before prophecied of this by Moses; so as this was not to seeme any new thing. As they haue prouoked me, saith the Lord, to ielousie, with that which is no God, and haue stirred me vp to wrath by their vanities; so also will I moue them to ielosie by that which is no God, and will prouoke them by a foolish nation: Deut. 32.21. In a word, the Prophet now pronounceth the same threatning which Christ thundered forth afterwards, Matth. 21.43. when the time of their blinding drew neere; The kingdome of God, saith he, shall be taken from you, and shall be giuen to a nation that will bring forth the fruits of it.

The calling of the Gentiles.

Where hee saith in the former verse, that God manifested himselfe to them that asked not after him; it is to shew, that the Gentiles were preuented with this grace of God, without giuing him any occasion to receiue them into fauour, either by merit, or yet by any worthinesse at all of theirs. Which manifestly agrees with that place which we haue alleaged out of Deut. 32. where Moses calles them a foolish nation. Wherefore vnder this generall title, he makes it apparant what men are, before the Lord hath preuented them by his free grace: for they neither call vpon him, seeke him, no nor so much as thinke vpon him. This place then ought to bee well noted, to establish the certaintie of our vocation, which is as it were the key which opens vs the doore into Gods kingdome. By this our consciences are quieted and appeased, which otherwise would alwaies hang in doubt, and be in perplexities, were they not vpheld by such testimonies. Wee see then that this was not written at a venture, nor vpon some sudden motion, namely, that wee are called the people of God, and are so accounted, because it was thus foretold long since by many prophecies.

The key that opens vs the doore into Christs kingdome.

Our vocatiō long since prophecied of.

S. Paul from this place ingeniouslie disputes to prooue the calling of the Gentiles: and saith, that Isaiah cries, and boldly pronounceth, that the Gentiles were called by the Lord, Rom. 10.20. How so? Because our Prophet expressed more here then the circumstance of his times would permit. Thus then by this text we perceiue that wee were called by an eternall decree of God, long before the thing it selfe came to passe.

In that he twice repeates, Behold me, behold me: he further confirmes that God will manifest himselfe so familiarlie vnto strange and prophane nations, that they shall be well assured of his dwelling in the middest of them. And questionlesse it was needfull that this so vnlooked for a change should be thus effectuallie confirmed, because it was verie hard to be credited. Although euen in this noueltie; the Prophet meant to magnifie Gods vnexpected grace. The ſumme is, that after God ſhall be offered to the Gentiles, and that they ſhall bee receiued into the holy race of Abraham: then there ſhall bee a Church in the world, out of which the Iewes ſhall be expelled. Now wee ſee that all theſe things which our Prophet here mentions, were accompliſhed by the Goſpell, wherein the Lord truely manifeſted and offred himſelfe vnto ſtrange nations. As oft then as this voice of the Goſpell ſounds in our eares: or as oft as we reade theſe holy propheſies, let vs know that the Lord is neere, and offers himſelfe; that being familiarly knowne wee may with boldneſſe and aſſurance call vpon him.

The ſumme of this text.

Vſe.

Verſ. 3. A people that prouoked mee euer vnto my face: that ſacrificeth in gardens, and burneth incenſe vpon brickes.

The fruit that came from walking after their owne imaginations, in this and the next verſe.

HE ſhewes and proſecuteth more at large, in what things the Iewes rebelled againſt God: namely, that hauing forſaken his commandement, they defiled themſelues with ſundrie ſuperſtitions. Heretofore he had ſaid that the Iewes had reuolted from God, in regard they wandred after their owne inuentions. Now he ſets forth the fruit of this their wandring: namely, that hauing giuen their thoughts free ſcope, they ouerthrew the pure worſhip of God. And this indeede is the fountaine, from whence al ſuperſtitions proceede: euen when men pleaſe themſelues in their inuentions, chuſing rather to bee wiſe in their owne eies, then to reſtraine their ſenſes within the liſts of Gods law. It is but in vaine then that the ſuperſtitious alleage their deuotions and good intentions, as they call them: for God ſo abhorres and deteſts them, ỹ thoſe who reſt therin are tainted of high treaſon, and are guiltie of the breach of Gods couenant; becauſe we ought to enterpriſe nothing of our owne braine: but to yeeld our obedience to Gods commandement. In a word, the beginning and perfection of his pure ſeruice conſiſts in teachableneſſe.

The ſpring of all ſuperſtitions.

By the verb to prouoke, Iſaiah ſets foorth the iupudencie of the people, who prouoked the Lord of ſet purpoſe: neither had they any ſuch reuerence of his Maieſtie, as to ſubiect themſelues vnder his gouernement. And this he further amplifies, in adding vnto my face. For ſeeing thoſe that are admoniſhed by the word haue him preſent as it were before their eies; they ſinne with an hie hand and are more guiltie of impudencie and rebellion, then ſuch as neuer heard tell of the word.

He alſo mentions the gardens which they had dedicated vnto their Idoles; and affirmes that God was prouoked by them. Some think it ſhould be ſpoken of brickes here, by way of contempt; and that they are ſecretly oppoſed to the Altar, vpon which God would haue them onely to ſacrifice. And thus they thinke the roofes of the houſes are here meant; where ỹ ſuperſtitious ſort were wont to ſacrifice, in regard they were made of brickes. But I rather thinke this word ſimplie ſignifies the Altars, which they had erected to their idols. In the meane while, howſoeuer they had a faire pretence to imitate the forme of that Altar ordained by the Lord: yet he abhorred ſuch an excuſe, becauſe it was contrarie vnto his word.

Verſ. 4. Which remaine among the graues, and lodge in the deſerts, which eate ſwines fleſh, and the broth of things polluted are in their veſſels.

HE reckons vp other ſorts of ſuperſtitions. Which albeit by reaſon of the breuitie of the words, it bee ſomewhat obſcure; yet from other places of the Scriptures, it may eaſily bee gathered what they were. For as Necromancy was a thing much in vſe among profane nations, ſo alſo the Iewes went into the ſepulchers and deſerts, to aske counſell of diuels; whereas they ſhould onely haue ſought counſell at the mouth of God. And in ſuppoſing to fetch anſwers from the dead, they deſited to be deciued by the illuſions of wicked ſpirits.

Now by the 18. of Deuteronomie, verſ. 11. and other places, it appeares, how expreſſlie the Lord had forbidden this. And we haue touched it ſomewhat before, in Chap. 8. We are here taught in generall, that the Lord requires nothing more of vs then obedience, which hee accepts aboue all ſacrifices: 1. Sam. 15. 22.

Which eate ſwines fleſh.] He complained before that Gods ſeruice was polluted by their ſuperſtitions. Now he addes, that they reiected all difference of things: ſo as they diſcerned not between the pure and vncleane. And he recites one kind: namely, that they abſtained not from ſwines fleſh. This ſeemes but a light matter. Yet is it not ſo for all that. For we muſt not iudge how great this ſinne is, by our rule: but according to that which the Lawgiuer hath preſcribed. Neither is that ſinne to be eſteemed light, which God hath forbidden. This appertaines to the externall profeſſion of faith; by which the Iewes ſhould haue ſhewed, how farre off they were from the prophanations of the Gentiles. Wee muſt not recoile then from that rule which God hath giuen vs: no, not the thicknes of our naile.

Verſ. 5. Which ſay, Stand apart, come not neere to me: For I am holier then thou: theſe are a ſmoke in my wrath, and a fire that burneth all the day.

HE notes out a groſſe impietie that was among the Iewes; namely, that of an obſtinate mind, and an vntamed rebellion, they oppoſed themſelues againſt ỹ true ſeruants of God: neither would they obey any admonitions. For whileſt we giue eare to admonitions and reprehenſions, there is ſome hope of repentance: but if wee reiect them, then is it certaine

certaine that we be past cure. Now howsoeuer the Prophets words in appearance seeme to be obscure; yet the summe of them is, that hypocrites doe disdainfully, and malepartly thrust backe those, who faithfully admonish them, because they attribute vnto themselues, either a shew of holinesse, or, in respect that their pride cannot indure that any should reprooue them: for hypocrisie is neuer separate from disdainfulnesse & pride. Let vs not meruaile then if those who bee tainted with this vice, doe insolently exalt themselues, bragging of their holinesse, and thinke that they excell therein aboue all others: and if we at this day also doe find the like qualities in the hypocrites of our time, which Isaiah hath described to bee in those that then liued. For Satan hath so blinded them, that whilest with a vaine bragging of words, they set their deuotions to sale, they basely esteeme of Gods word.

Hypocrisie neuer separate from disdainfulnesse.

The expositors thinke this should be a generall sentence, which reproues the Iewes for not submitting themselues vnto the Prophets: but me thinks the circumstance of the place should be considered, which they haue not sufficiently respected, namely, that this verse depends still vpon the former: so as the Iewes are sharply reprooued for reuolting from the true religion. And besides, for that they had maliciously followed their owne inuentions, so farre forth, that they commanded such to bee packing, as soothed them not vp therein. For this word, Get backe, signifies nothing else but get thee hence: as if they should say, We will not meddle with such as shew vnto vs the way to life and saluation.

Verse 6. Behold, it is written before me; I will not keepe silence, but will render it and recompence it into their bosome.

THe Prophet alludes to the custome that is among Iudges, who haue lying by them vpon record, the informations, testimonies, acts, and other pieces of euidences, that when neede requires, the offender may bee easily conuicted: for we vse to leaue those things in writing, which we would haue posteritie to remember. The Lord then testifies that these things can neuer bee forgotten, because they bee written before him. For howsoeuer hee winkes at things for a time, yet shall not the wicked escape vnpunished, but shall well perceiue in the end that hee is a iust Iudge.

Doctrine.

Hence let vs gather, that wee ought not to abuse Gods patience, if he forbeares vs long, and lifts not vp his hand by and by to inflict his iudgement vpon vs; for he ceaseth not for all that to keepe a register of all our faults; for which we may be sure he will one day punish vs, vnlesse we repent. I grant the Lord hath no neede to write for his memories sake: but it pleaseth him to vse this phrase of speech, that wee should not imagin him to be forgetfull of any thing, when he deferres the executiō of his iudgements. Nay, in Ier. 17. 1. he saith yet more expresly, that the sinne of Iudah was written with an yron pen, and with the point of a diamond.

Gods patience must not be abused.

To render into their bosome, is a phrase of speech much vsed in the Scriptures, Psal. 79. 12. Ier. 32. 18. because men thinke their sinnes are either couered, or that they shall not come into account. And thus, either they lay the raines of their concupiscences in their owne neckes; or in attributing their faults to others, they become vtterly seareless. This is the cause why God theatens to recompence their sinne into their bosome, to the end they may bethinke themselues what Iudge it is with whom they must haue to doe.

Vers. 7. Your iniquities, and the iniquities of your fathers shall bee *together (saith the Lord) which haue burnt incense vpon the mountaines, and blasphemed mee vpon the hilles: therefore will I measure their old worke into their bosome.

*Or, for they.

HEere he amplifies that which hee said in few words in the former verse. For hee shewes that it was not of yesterday that the Iewes were guiltie of such a disloyaltie; but that it is the example of their fathers, whose steps they now followed: euen as heeretofore the Lord complained that he had a long time forborne this people, and was so wearie at last, that hee could beare them no longer. Thus then the Prophet aggrauates their sinne, when he tels the Iewes that they haue followed the example of their fathers. As if he should say, such birds, such egges. For if men haue been often and diligently admonished, their obstinacie is so much the more to bee condemned, if they repent not. Heere we see that after they had reiected all admonitions and threatnings, they perseuered many yeeres in their corruptions and impieties, which is heere laid to their charges, that they should no longer plead their excuses to couer their faults withall; but that they should rather labour to confesse themselues worthy of most exquisite torments.

The former verse amplified.

Heere also wee may perceiue it to be so far off, that the corruption issuing from the fathers, should any way excuse the children, (as the ignorant are vsually wont to make this a buckler for their defence) that it rather serues as a meanes to pull vpon them a more heauie punishment.

The bad example of our fathers not to be followed.

Are together.] As if the Lord should haue said, that hee gathered and bound vp in one bundle, both the iniquities of the fathers and of the children, that in the end he might reuenge himselfe of them: not that the children are guiltie or punished for the fathers wickednesse, Ezech. 18. 20. but in regard that they followed the wicked course which their fathers liued in. Therefore it is iust with God to wrap them vp with them in the same guiltinesse, and to condemne them according to the same sentence, especially seeing their diseases were growne incurable.

For they haue burnt incense.] The Prophet heere recites one particular, vnder which he alſo comprehends all other kindes of vices. For hee ſignifies all ſuch reuolts as whereby the people were gone backe from Gods pure worſhip, and had giuen and dedicated themſelues vnto ſtrange gods. See here the height of iniquitie: for when the feare of God is ſtollen out of the heart, then is there no ſoundneſſe nor vprightneſſe left behind. He heere points out vnto vs then, the fountaine of all diſorders: which wee are diligently to obſerue, in regard that men flatter themſelues, thinking themſelues worthy of great praiſe, when they ſerue God after their owne fantaſies; and in the meane while, conſider not that there is nothing more abominable in his ſight, than ſuch a ſeruice as is deuiſed according to the appetites of our carnall imaginations. And no doubt but the people heerein deſired that God ſhould accept them, whileſt they burnt incenſe vpon the mountains. But we muſt not iudge of their worke by their deliberation or good intention, as they call it: Wee muſt hearken to Gods voice, who proteſts that he is this way greatly diſhonoured, rather than to all the men in the world; leſt otherwiſe by ſeeking to reſt vpon our intents, we make our ſelues double guiltie before his Maieſtie.

God reiects our good intentions, if we haue not his word to warrant them.

I will meaſure their vvorke. The word old may be diuerſlie expounded, either, I will meaſure againe with their oldneſſe: or, In the firſt place; or, In times paſt; or, from the beginning. But the circumſtance of the place muſt be conſidered. For by that we ſhall the better attaine to the Prophets meaning. You know he ſpake ere-while touching the works of their fathers: there is no doubt thē but he here derides the children, who placed their defence in them. For it is but a ſilly and vaine ſhift to oppoſe againſt God the cuſtomes of our fathers, that is to ſay, a corruption of great antiquitie. Why ſo? Becauſe in thus doing, we pull downe a more heauie iudgement vpon our owne heades. And yet many are ſo bewitched with this excuſe, as they thinke a man ought not at all to reiect the ſame: neither can you get them an inch further. Truely, antiquitie is honourable: But no man is ſo to prize it, that he ſhould therefore in the leaſt thing diminiſh any of that honour which is due vnto God. See here an excellent place to conuince ſuch as will needes maintaine ſuperſtitions by ſucceſſion of yeeres; as if an old error were to be held for a law.

Note.

Verſ. 8. Thus ſaith the Lord, As the wine is found in the cluſter, and one ſaith, Deſtroy it not, for a bleſſing is in it, ſo will I doe for my ſeruants ſakes, that I may not deſtroy them whole.

God neuer threatnes ſo ſeuerely, but he leaues ſome hope of pardon for the faithfull.

THe Prophet here moderates his former ſentence. For otherwiſe it had been a thing too ſeuere, ỹ the iniquities of ỹ fathers ſhould thus be called to mind, to the end the Lord might deſtroy their children with them. Yea, this might ſo haue affrighted the faithfull, that it had been enough to haue driuen them from all hope of ſaluation. We ought then you ſee, to ſtand carefullie vpon our watch, and to conſider for what cauſe the Lord is diſpleaſed with vs. For his meaning is ſo to aſtoniſh vs, as that therewithall hee would draw vs to himſelfe: and not thereby to threw vs headlong into deſpaire. Hee leaues ſome hope for the faithfull here then, leſt they ſhould waxe fainthearted: and in proffering them refreſhing, hee allures them to repentance, of which he reaped neither pleaſure nor profit.

He confirmes this by a ſimilitude. As if a man minding to plucke vp a vine, yet finding ſome fruitfull branch thereon, he ſpares, and reſerues it: euen ſo will the Lord take heed how he pulles vp thoſe, in whom he finds any ſap or vigor. In the fifth Chapter he complained, that the people was vnprofitable: yea, worſe than that; for they brought forth ſower fruits. Eſaiah retaines the ſame ſimilitude: but he applies it otherwiſe. For howſoeuer the people were like vnto a baſtard and barren vine; yet there remained ſome fruitfull branches, which the Lord would not ſuffer to periſh. Simile.

But this may be taken two waies: either that the Lord will preſerue his people for the elects ſake: or, that hauing rooted out the reprobates, he will ſaue the faithfull. There is great difference betweene theſe two interpretations. As touching the firſt, wee know that the wicked are ſometimes ſpared for the godlies ſake, whom the Lord will neither deſtroy nor wrappe vp in one common calamitie with them. And this is manifeſt enough by diuers examples in the holy Scriptures. The Lord would haue ſpared Sodom and Gomorah, had there been found but ten righteous perſons there: Gen. 18.32. All thoſe which were in the ſhip with S. Paul, to the number of 276. perſons, were giuen him of God, and ſaued from ſhipwracke; that ſo the power which he ſhewed in his ſeruant, might be the more euident: Act. 27.32. The Lord bleſſed the houſe of Potiphar, and made him to proſper in all things for Joſephs ſake, who dwelt in his familie: Gen. 39.5. Many like examples there be which euery one may collect by himſelfe. But I rather approue of the other expoſition; namely, that the Lord ſo puniſheth the ſinnes of his people, that yet notwithſtanding he hath reſpect to his beloued ones; and wrappes them not vp all in one and the ſame ruine. Neither is it his meaning onlie that the faithfull ſhall bee ſaued, but that there ſhall be a remnant leſt, in the middeſt of whom God will haue his name called vpon. And this is worth the noting. For he ſhewes that the remnant ſhall be very ſmall, in compariſon of that great multitude which was then in the land: as wee haue ſeene in Chap. 1.9. 1 2

God ſometimes ſpares the wicked for the elects ſake.

Now whereas the faithfull are often puniſhed with the wicked, let vs not thinke God doth them any wrong: For the Lord will eaſilie find faults ſufficient in euery one of vs to afflict and puniſh vs. Beſides, his meaning is to inſtruct and awaken vs by his rods: for being

The faithfull muſt not murmur, if God ſometimes wrap them vp in the ſame iudgement with the wicked.

ing knit, and as it were grafted into the body of a people, it is no wonder if we be ſmitten with the ſame blowes, in regard we are members that haue drawne infection from the ſame. In the meane while, God moderates theſe chaſtiſements, leſt hee ſhould vtterlie teare vp the choſen plants.

Verſ. 9. But I will bring a ſeed out of Iacob, and out of Iudah that ſhall inherit my mountaine: and mine elect ſhall inherit it, and my ſeruants ſhall dwell there.

An explanation of the former ſentence.

THe Prophet explanes the former verſe in other words, and ſhewes that the Lord will reſerue a ſeede vnto himſelfe, which ſhall call vpon his name. For he hath been wont ſo to chaſtiſe his people, that hee hath ſtill continued a Church, in which his truth and pure religion might bee kept. For which cauſe alſo S. Paul calles her the pillar and ground of truth; 1. Tim. 3. 15. Wee are not to iudge of the Church then, by the eſtate of things here below (ſeeing there is nothing ſtedfaſt in this world) but by the counſell of God, who cannot endure to ſee her either ouerthrowne or deſtroyed. Let vs carefullie remember this then, that ſo no calamities, ruines, nor deſolations of the Church may aſtoniſh vs.

We muſt not iudge of the Churches eſtate by outward appearance.

He calles thoſe inheritors of the mountaines, who being ſet free from vnder their captiuitie, ſhould returne home againe into their countrie. Iudeah was full of mountaines, as we know. Againe, hee expounds that which might ſeeme obſcure: for hee ſignifies that the Iewes ſhould returne vnto their firſt eſtate, and that by right of inheritance they ſhould inioy that land out of which they had been exiled. For ſoone after, Iudeah was exceedingly waſted: but the Lord proteſts that it ſhall not continue ſo long. For the greater confirmation whereof, he briefly mentions the couenant, by which this land was ordained for them to poſſeſſe as their heritage.

Thus albeit they were a long time retained as priſoners, yet this word heritage ſerued to put ſome life into them, that they might come to an aſſured cõfidence touching their being repoſſeſſed thereof. But it is to be noted that this grace is reſtrained to the elect and true ſeruants of God, leſt all indifferentlie ſhould preſume to applie the ſame vnto themſelues.

Verſ. 10. And Sharon ſhall bee a ſheepfold: and the vallie of Achor ſhall be a reſting place for the cattell of my people that haue ſought me.*

* Or, ſtocke.

BY theſe figures he meanes nothing elſe but that the land which was waſte, ſhal be againe inhabited. For we haue here a ſecret compariſon thus: howſoeuer after the baniſhment of her inhabitants into a farre countrie, ſhee ſhould remaine ſolitarie and empty: yet ſhall ſhee againe be inhabited, and that in ſuch wiſe, as there ſhall be abundance of ſtockes, and heards: of fruiteſull paſtures, and commons: and ſhould alſo furniſh them in plentifull manner with all things neceſſarie for the ſuſtentation of men.

Godlineſſe hath the promiſe of things belonging to this life, as well as of thoſe to come.

Sharon and Achor were places for paſtures: but the one was apt for ſmall beaſts, and the other for great. And here we ſee that Gods promiſes not onely containe in them the things belonging to the life to come, but alſo to that which is preſent; to the end wee might taſte his bountie and liberalitie to the full. For by earthly benefits, we are inuited to ſeeke for greater and more excellent things touching the heauenlie life.

If God take care of beaſts, much more to vs.

Whereas the Lord extends his liberalitie euen to the brute beaſts, which were created for our vſe: thence are wee to conceiue a more ſure and confident hope touching his fatherly kindnes towards vs. For if hee bee pleaſed to take care of beaſts which are ordained to ſerue vs, much more will hee furniſh vs with all things conuenient both for this life, and for that to come. And yet wee muſt keep in mind that doctrine (whereupon we haue inſiſted heretofore) which brings vs from temporall bleſſings, to the ſpirituall kingdome of Chriſt: Which the Prophets are wont to deſcribe out vnder figures.

For my people.] Here he excludes the reprobates, who with braſen faces, will ſtand to bragge of Gods name falſely and vainely. But howſoeuer they dare malepertly bragge of Gods promiſes and ſacraments, yet are they neuer the neerer for getting any part with Gods children therein, but are depriued of all hope of Gods bleſſings, that ſo they may bee fitted to receiue the recompence of their iniquities.

A note how to diſcerne Chriſts ſheepe from goates.

In adding, who haue ſought mee, hee ſhewes yet more plainely who they bee that haue their part in theſe benefits: that ſo hee might ſtop the mouthes of all reprobates and hypocrites, as wee haue ſaid. See here then the true marke which ſeparates the ſheepe from the goates; and the lawfull heires from baſtards: namely, in ſeeking the Lord. For it is not enough to ſhroude our ſelues vnder ſome name or title; but wee muſt ſeeke the Lord in puritie of conſcience, that ſo wee may cleaue vnto him with our whole hearts.

Verſ. 11. But yee are they that haue forſaken the Lord, and forgotten mine holie mountaines, and haue prepared a table for the multitude, and furniſh the drinke offring to the number.*

* Or, armie.

A preuention.

LEſt hypocrites ſhould beguile themſelues with theſe promiſes, or, leſt they ſhould imagine that this which is ſpoken touching the reſtauration, belonged vnto them; hee once againe directs his ſpeech vnto them. He calles them Apoſtataes, becauſe they had forgotten the mountaine of Zion: that is to ſay, had reuolted from Gods pure worſhip. For by the mountaine of holineſſe, he ſignifies the rule of holineſſe contained in the word of the Lord. For the Temple was built by his commandement, that in it he might be called vpon: with the altar also, whereupon hee inioined them to offer sacrifices. Thus all sacrifices and oblations were abominable, were they offered in any other place then that; or, to other gods; or otherwise then that which the law prescribed. For it is vnlawfull for men to doe any thing in this behalfe, after their owne fantasies; because the Lord requires nothing but obedience, 1. Sam. 15. 22. which cannot bee done without faith, neither can faith be separated from the word, Rom. 10. 17. out of which it is not permitted vs either to seeke or aske of God.

No seeking of God without the word and faith.

In saying, who haue prepared a table, he recites their superstitions. The word Gad is diuersly expounded: for some thinke he meanes Iupiter, or his starre: others, fortune. Saint Ierom translates; Who prepared the table to fortune: thinking that this word notes out happy euents. But it seemes more probable to me, that this word is taken for a band or multitude; yea, euen for an armie: and the etymologie of the word sutes well enough with the scope of the text. There is one notable place amongst the rest in Gen. 30. 20. which serues for the vnderstanding of this word, where Leah reioiceth for the increase of her childrē: for it seemes her speech should be thus expoūded; into a band. As if she should say; I haue now a great number of children: for she had many before; in so much that she called Gad, her fift sonne. So in this place, I thinke Gad, should bee taken for a band, troope, or armie: the reason is, because they had so many gods, that they were scarsly able to count them for their multitudes.

Iupiters star. Fortune.

To furnish, may be taken heere two waies; namely, that they furnished all things for the seruice of their Idols, liberally and magnificently: for superstition can keepe neither end nor measure. And those, who when the matter concernes Gods worship, will not spare a penny; will freely bestow all they haue to set vp their Idols: or that there is not the meanest of their puppets, to which they haue not offered somewhat: and I rather content my selfe with this second exposition. For Idolaters thinke they haue neuer done enough, vnlesse they honour euery Saint: yea, and the more they serue them, the better they thinke to prosper in their businesses. And of this, we haue but too much experience at this day in the Papacie.

By the number, hee signifies that which hee meant by Armie: and this repetition is much vsed in our Prophets language. Thus his meaning is then, that the Table was set vp: that is to say, they sacrificed not to one Idoll alone, but to an infinit number: that by this hee might shew, what sore punishments these Idolaters were worthy of.

Vers. 12. Therefore will I number you to the sword, and all you shall bow downe to the slaughter, because I called, and yee did not answere; I spake, and yee heard not, but did euill in my sight, and did chuse that thing that I would not.

*Or, before mine eies.

THe Prophet alludes to the number of gods, whereof hee spake in the former verse: and shewes, that the Lord will easilie comprehend their great numbers; for he will number them to the sword. By this it is euident, that hee spake not in the former verse of the two planets, Iupiter and Mercurie, as some imagin; but in not satisfying themselues with one God onely, they gathered together an armie of Idols.

Iupiter and Mercurie.

Their coniecture is friuolous, who by the word Meni, which we haue translated, Number, vnderstand Mercurie, because Mena signifies to number; and that Mercurie was the god of the Merchants, who haue their bookes of accounts. For the Prophets meaning is plaine enough, in that he shewes the people shall be numbred to the sword, because they reioiced in an heape of gods, and refused to rest vpon the onely true God.

Mercurie, god of the Merchants.

Because I haue called. He amplifies the greatnesse and hainousnesse of this reuolt, in regard the Iewes sinned of a set malice, and rather against knowledge, then of ignorance. For they had been often taught and instructed, but they insolently reiected all admonitions. In which respect, they were much lesse excusable then those to whom the Prophets were not sent. For as no man aliue can pretend any cause of ignorance; so yet the Iewes much lesse, and those to whom the word of the Lord hath been published: who for this cause shall haue a sharper sentence of condemnation pronounced against them then, and shall be more seuerely punished then any other.

No man can pretend ignorance,

Hee sets downe the meanes of this call; namely, that hee had exhorted them by his Prophets. For by the clause, I spake; hee repeates one and the same thing twice, according to the custome of the Hebrewes, as wee noted before.

To hearken to the Lord, is to obey his word: for it were to little purpose to lend an eare, vnlesse vves follow that which the word propounds vnto vs. For otherwise, what difference is betweene vs and the Asse, who wags his eares? God will be heard with the heart, Prou. 23. 26. As for a fained audience, he vtterly reiects it. Now he shewes the cause why they would not come at his call; surely they stopped their eares against wholsome doctrine. For the beginning of obedience, is to bring with vs a desire to learne.

Before mine eies, is as much to say, as before my face: which phrase of speech, he vsed a little before. Euery man sinnes before the eies of the Lord, neither can any auoid his presence. But it is properly said that we sinne before his eies, when being called by him, wee stand not in awe of his sacred presence: for he is neerest to those whom he calles by his Prophets: yea, to such it may be said, that he shewes himselfe visibly. Therefore so much the more detestable is their impietie, and worthy thy of the more ſtripes, who as it were with whoriſh foreheads deſpiſe God, who in ſuch familiar manner ſummons and calles them vnto him.

Who is said to sinne in Gods eies.

Now by the latter end of the verſe it appeares that the Iewes are not condemned for any enormous ſinnes; but chieflie in reſpect of their new found deuotions, by which they corrupted the ſeruice of God. For albeit they were forward enough in hunting after their forged ſacrifices, thinking thereby to obtaine Gods fauour; yet himſelfe pronounceth that he abhorres all ſuch endeuours; becauſe there is nothing but pollution therin. It is not permitted to euery one then to follow that which ſeemes good in his owne eies; but we muſt haue an eie to that which God approues of, and not turne therfrom, no not an haires breadth. Well, we ſee that this vice hath not raigned in one age onely, namely, that men haue followed their fond appetites; and haue worſhipped their owne inuentions in ſtead of God: when the queſtion hath been touching his pure ſeruice. But how great delight ſoeuer men take herein, ſure it is the Lord proteſts that hee contemnes and abhorres it.

We muſt not follow that in Gods ſeruice which ſeemes good in our eies.

Verſ. 13. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, Behold, my ſeruants ſhall eate, and yee ſhall bee hungrie: Behold, my ſeruants ſhall drinke, and yee ſhall be thirſtie: Behold, my ſeruants ſoall reioyce, and yee ſhall be aſhamed.

14. Behold, my ſeruants ſhall ſing for ioy of heart, and yee ſhall crie for ſorrow of heart, and ſhall houle for vexation of mind.

Hypocrites diſtinguiſhed from the faithfull.

THe Prophet here diſtinguiſheth (yet more clearely) hypocrites which hold a place in the Church only, from his true and lawfull children. For though all will needs take vnto them the title of Gods children, yet he ſhewes that many were to be chaſed out of the houſe; & that thoſe who proudlie inſulted ouer Gods people, ſhould be fruſtrated of their hope, becauſe it was vaine & falſe. And we are to note well the remarkable oppoſition, which is here put betweene Gods ſeruants, and thoſe that falſely glorie in his name. For he ſhewes that their vaine titles, their boaſting, and falſe perſwaſions ſhould ſtand them in no ſtead. Theſe words, they ſhal eate and drink, ſignifie felicitie, and a proſperous eſtate in this preſent life. For it is as if he had promiſed to haue ſuch care ouer the faithfull, that they ſhould want nothing.

Obiect. But it ſeemes the Lord here promiſeth his ſeruants more in words, then he performes in deedes. For are they not often hungrie, and thirſtie, whileſt the wicked ouerflow in all ſorts of good things, and abuſe them to exceſſe and riot?

Anſ. I anſwere, that Chriſts kingdome is here noted out vnto vs vnder theſe figures: for otherwiſe we cannot comprehend it. For which cauſe the Prophets are wont to borrow ſimilitudes from earthly kingdoms, in which when the ſubiects flow in wealth and in the inioying of all bleſſings, there Gods liberalitie is to be eſpied; by which alſo wee ordinarily iudge of his fatherly loue towards vs. But becauſe it is not expedient that the faithfull ſhould fixe their hopes vpon earthly commodities, it is enough for them that they take onely ſome little taſte of them, the better to vphold their faith. And if it ſo fall out, that they bee now and then preſſed with wants, yet by feeling the benefit of contentation with a little, they ceaſe not for all that ſtill to acknowledge God for their father, and to taſte of his liberalitie. Nay, ſhall I ſay more; euen in their very pouertie they are oftentimes richer indeede then Kings, and great Lords of the earth.

Note.

The faithfull richer in their pouertie, then the greateſt Kings in their ſuperfluitie.

But although the wicked enioy neuer ſo much, yet are they the only miſerable people in the world; becauſe they cannot enioy their wealth with a good conſcience. The Prophet therfore hath reſpect to the right vſe of Gods gifts. For ſuch as ſerue him purely, receiue from him as children from the hand of their father, all things needfull for this life preſent. But the reſt as vſurpers and theeues take whatſoeuer they poſſeſſe by ſtealth and robberie. No riches nor abundance can ſatiſfie the wicked: they are alwaies in diſtruſt, and trembling: their conſciences will neuer giue them reſt. The Lord you ſee then promiſeth no more here then hee truely performes; neither muſt we iudge of this felicitie by outward appearances.

No riches can ſatisfie a wicked man.

This wil be better perceiued by the words following, where hee ſpeakes of reioycing and giuing thankes. For no doubt the Prophets meaning is to ſay, that contentment conſiſts not in the inioying of abundance, but in tranquillitie, peace and gladneſſe of mind, becauſe all things are vnſauorie to the vnfaithfull. But the godly take more pleaſure in the ſeeling of Gods fatherly loue, then in all the pleaſures of the world. In the meane while wee are to note, that wee muſt wait for all felicitie from God only, who will not permit any of his to want any thing that appertaines to the bleſſed life.

Contentment conſiſts not in abundance.

Our chiefe felicitie.

Verſ. 15. And yee ſhall leaue your names as a curſe vnto my choſen: for the Lord God ſhall ſlay you, and call his ſeruants by another name.

HE proſecuteth the ſame doctrine; and ſhewes that God in the end, will ſeparate the hypocrites from his true ſeruants. Truely, we are not to maruell that the Prophet inſiſts thus long vpon this point: for there is nothing more difficult to be beaten into the heads of hypocrites, who being puffed vp with pride, deceiue and beguile themſelues.

He proſecutes the ſame matter ſtill.

Now he ſaith, they ſhall leaue their name as a curſe, in regard that they held themſelues to be the holy poſteritie: and that there was none vnder heauen but they, worthie of that title. To that alſo appertaines the verb, To leaue: as if he ſhould ſay, that their vaine

arrogancie

arrogancie, to which they were ſo much addicted, ſhould bee violently plucked away from them. And therefore to the end they ſhould beware how they pleaſed themſelues in a temporall and tranſitory reioicing, the Lord blunts the edge of this their ouerweening, and ſaith, they ſhall leaue their names as a curſe to other ſeruants that he ſhall haue. So as this example ſhould be ſolemnly taken vp as a common prouerb; God ſo curſe thee, as he hath done the Iewes.

A fearefull prouerbe.

Shall call by another name.] He refels the ouerweening of this nation, who thought God ſhould haue no more people remaining, if the children of Abraham were gone. For he proteſts that hee will adopt vnto himſelfe a new people, and that hee is not ſo tied to the Iewes, but hee will eaſilie finde out others, whom hee will adorne with the name of his people.

Whereas ſome by the word other, vnderſtand the name of Chriſtian, it is too much conſtrained: and it appeares by the circumſtance of the place, that the Prophet had another drift. For, in as much as the Iewes proudly bragged of the antiquitie of their name, and thereupon grew inſolent, becauſe God had of old elected them; as if forſooth hee could not bee without them; therefore hee promiſeth that the Lord vvill chuſe and adopt another people. And yet ſhould they haue no cauſe giuen them thereby to accuſe him either of inconſtancie, or variableneſſe; as if he had changed counſell. Nay, he will rather execute his decrees and iuſt iudgements againſt all thoſe, who vnder a falſe pretence of his name, doe darken his glorie, and corrupt all pietie.

Verſ. 16. Hee that ſhall bleſſe himſelfe in the earth, ſhall bleſſe himſelfe in the true God; and he that ſweareth in the earth, ſhall ſweare by the true God: for the former troubles are forgotten, and ſhall ſurely hide themſelues.

The whole world oppoſed to Iudeah.

THe whole world is heere oppoſed to this little corner of Iudeah, where Gods ſeruice was in a manner included and ſhut vp. But ſince God hath manifeſted himſelfe vnto all: he is not now ſerued in any particular region, but in euery place alike. Which Chriſt alſo himſelfe teacheth, in Iohn 4.21. ſaying; The houre is come, and now is, when ye ſhall neither in this mountaine, nor in Ieruſalem, worſhip the Father. And Saint Paul wils that men in euery place doe lift vp pure hands vnto heauen, without wrath or doubting: 1. Tim. 2. 8. He oppoſeth the word, Earth, heere then, which ſignifies all the world, vnto the land of Iudeah.

To bleſſe and ſweare, is taken for the whole ſeruice of God. Sweating is one branch of this ſeruice, as we haue ſeene in Chap. 19. 18. and 48. 1. For thereby we leaue all iudgement vnto God, and acknowledge him the true witneſſe of whatſoeuer is done or ſpoken. We are ſaid to bleſſe, when we looke for all proſperitie frō his hand, & giue him thankes after we haue receiued the ſame. In a word, when we acknowledge that all benefits flow in vnto vs from his meere liberalitie.

By the true God.] That is to ſay, by him who is faithfull in his promiſes, and ſtedfaſt in his counſell. Though I denie not but there may bee a cloſe oppoſition vnderſtood betweene the true God, and the falſe gods of the Gentiles.

The troubles are forgotten and paſt.] This promiſe appertaines onely to the faithfull. Gods meaning is, that he will put an end to the anguiſhes & afflictions, that the Church might know her calamities ſhould not indure for euer. Now this promiſe began to take effect, when the people returned from Babylon: for howſoeuer they were troubled as well in the way, as in their Country, yet their afflictions were neuer ſo ſharp, but God kept a meaſure in them, becauſe at their returne home, the reedifying of the Temple, and the reſtoring of the politike eſtate, aſſwaged the ſorrow, and cheered vp their hearts in good hope, vntill the comming of Chriſt.

Verſ. 17. For loe, I will create new heauens, and a new earth: and the former ſhall not bee remembred, nor come into minde.

A notable change promiſed.

BY theſe ſimilitudes he promiſeth a notable change. As if God ſhould haue ſaid; I haue both will and power to reſtore my Church; yea, & that in ſuch wiſe, that ſhe ſhall ſeeme to haue recouered new forces, and haue an habiration in a new vvorld. Theſe are exceſſiue maners of ſpeeches. But the excellencie of this benefit, which ſhould be offered at the comming of Chriſt, could not otherwiſe bee expreſſed. Neither doth the Prophet meane this alone of Chriſts firſt comming, but of the vvhole courſe of his kingdome, vntill his laſt appearing: as we haue often ſaid in other places.

The world created anew by the comming of Chriſt.

The world therefore you ſee, is created anew (as you would ſay) by Chriſt: for which cauſe alſo the Apoſtle calles it the new vvorld: Heb. 2. 5. Neither is it to bee doubted but hee alludes to this text. Notwithſtanding the Prophet ſpeakes heere of the reſtauration of the Church, after their returne out of Babylon. This I grant to bee true: but yet this reſtauration is imperfect, vnleſſe it bee extended vnto Chriſt: wee are but in our courſe thitherward as yet; neither ſhall theſe things be fully accompliſhed, vntill the laſt reſurrection, which is as it were the vtmoſt bounds and limits of this courſe.

Where he ſaith, that the former things ſhall be no more called to mind: ſome refere it to heauen and earth. As if he ſhould ſay; Heereafter there ſhall be no more newes of theſe creatures. But I had rather referre it to the former time: for his meaning is, that the ioy of being reſtored, ſhall bee ſo great, that they ſhall vtterly forget their miſeries. Vnleſſe any had rather referre it to thoſe benefits which were worthy of memorie, and yet were forgotten when Gods grace appeared. And in this ſenſe the Prophet ſaith, in Chap. 43. 18.

Remember

Remember yee not the former things? Not that God would haue the faithfull to forget their deliuerance; but in regard that the one compared with the other, did darken it, as the Sunne doth the brightneſſe of the ſtarres.

Simile.

Let vs remember then that theſe things are fulfilled in vs, as oft as we be regenerated: but we are regenerated onely in part, and therefore as yet we cannot attaine the ſight of this new heauen and new earth. What meruaile is it then if wee ſigh and mourne, ſeeing wee haue not yet vtterly put off the old man, but many remainders of ſinne doe ſtill ſticke faſt in vs? This renoument muſt begin at vs, who hold the firſt ranke: for the creatures in regard of our offences, grone, and are ſubiect to vanitie, as Saint Paul ſpeakes, Rom. 8.20. But after wee ſhall bee perfectly renued, heauen and earth ſhall be renued alſo, and ſhall recouer their firſt eſtate. Hence we may gather that which wee haue often mentioned, namely, that the Prophet hath an eye to the whole kingdome of Chriſt, euen vnto the end thereof: which for this effects ſake, is called the day of reſtauration and refreſhing. Act. 3.19.21.

Our regeneration onely in part.

1

2

Verſ. 18. But bee you glad, and reioice for euer in the thing that I ſhall create: for behold, I will create Ieruſalem as a reioicing, and her people as a ioy.

An exhortation to reioice, added by way of amplificatiō.

HEe exhorts the faithfull to reioice with condigne ioy, for ſo excellent a benefit of God. And this was added for amplifications ſake; becauſe men neuer eſteeme of the graces of God, according to their worth, amongſt the which, this heere mentioned is the chiefe and moſt excellent; for they prize them at a very low rate. It is needfull therefore that the faithfull ſhould be rouzed and quickened vp by ſuch exhortations as theſe, to the end they ſhould ſhew themſelues neither vnthankfull, nor forgetfull: as alſo that they ſhould not lightly paſſe ouer this benefit; namely, that being redeemed by the hand of Chriſt, they might beare the remembrance thereof in their hearts, as the earneſt pennie of eternall life. This is the cauſe why Iſaiah teacheth that the deliuerance is not acknowledged with ſuch thankfulneſſe as is meete, vnleſſe the faithfull continue on their ioy the whole courſe of their liues, exerciſing themſelues in ſinging the praiſes of God.

Whereas Ieruſalem is called gladneſſe, and the people thereof reioicing; it may ſeeme ſomewhat harſh at the firſt bluſh: yet we may thence gather a good expoſition, namely, that in the deliuerance of the Church, there ſhall be ſuch cauſe of ioy, that it ſhall aboliſh all matter of ſorrow. And ſurely when our miſeries themſelues doe tend to our ſaluation, wee haue therein no ſmall occaſion giuen vs of reioicing.

Verſ. 19. And I will reioice in Ieruſalem, and ioy in my people, and the voice of weeping ſhall be no more heard in her, nor the voice of crying.

THe Prophet expreſſeth ſomewhat more then in the former verſe. For in this his meaning is to ſay, that the Lord will not onely giue matter of reioicing, but alſo that himſelfe ſhall bee partaker with them in this ioy. For ſo great is his loue to vs, that he takes no leſſe pleaſure in our proſperitie, then if he himſelfe inioied the ſame with vs. By which, our faith ought to be much confirmed, namely, when wee heare that God beares vs ſuch an ardent loue. Are we afflicted or ſcattered? He ſaith, that this grieues & troubles him. Contrariwiſe, doe we floriſh and proſper? He profeſſeth that he takes great pleaſure therein. Aceording as wee haue ſeene in Chap. 63.10. that the Spirit of God was vexed, when that order which he requires and approues, is ouerthrowne and confounded. As alſo in Chap. 62.5. he takes vnto him the perſon of a bridegroome, who findes no other contentment then in his wife.

A liuely deſcription of that great loue which God beares vs.

1

2

Verſ. 20. There ſhall bee no more there a childe of yeeres, nor an old man, that hath not filled his daies: for hee that ſhall bee an hundred yeeres old, ſhall die as a young man: but the ſinner being an hundred yeeres olde, ſhall bee accurſed.

SOme thinke the difference betweene the Law and the Goſpell, is heere noted out, becauſe the Law is as a ſchoolemaſter, who held his ſchollers vnder the firſt rudiments; but the Goſpell brings vs to a perfect age. Others vnderſtand it, that there ſhould bee no more any difference of age: for where eternall life is, there needes no diſpute about youth or age. But thus I expound the Prophets words; Be they young or old, they ſhall come to a perfect age, ſo as they ſhall euermore be ſtrong, euen as in the flower of youth: yea, they ſhall bee alwaies luſtie and ſtrong: for wee wax old and feeble by reaſon of our ſinnes. When thou art angry, ſaith Moſes, Pſal. 90.9,10. all our daies are gone as a tale that is told. The time of our life is threeſcore yeeres and ten: and if they bee of more ſtrength, fourſcore yeeres; yet is their ſtrength but labour and ſorrow: for it paſſeth away ſuddenly, and wee flee away. But Chriſt is come to ſtrengthen vs, and to vphold vs in a perfect eſtate.

What bleſſings belong to them that are in the kingdome of Chriſt, in this and in the reſt of the verſes following.

Our life paſſeth like the ſhadow, but in Chriſt we haue ſtabilitie.

Yet we muſt diſtinguiſh betweene the two members. For after he hath ſaid, that the Citizens of the Church ſhall liue long, ſo as none of them ſhall be taken out of the world, till they be full of daies, nor till they haue finiſhed their perfect courſe: he therewithall addes, they ſhall be ſtrong euen in age it ſelfe. Now howſoeuer the greater part of the faithfull are hardly able to indure in reſpect of their weakeneſſe, and that others of them grow feeble before the time; yet is this no vaine promiſe. For if Chriſt doe truly and fully raigne in vs; it is certaine that his

his strength would flourish in vs, and would fortifie both our bodies and soules. Let vs then thanke our owne corruptions, that wee are subiect to so many sicknesses, sorrowes, to age and other incumbrances. Why so? Because we will not suffer Christ quietly to raigne in vs. As also for that we haue not so fructified in newnesse of life, as vtterly to haue put off the old man.

The cause of languishing sicknesse, and vntimely death in our selues.

From this place also let vs note, that corporall and spirituall blessings are onely to bee found in the kingdome of Christ: that is to say, in the Church. For out of it, there is nothing but accursednesse. Whence it followes that all such as are out of this kingdome, are most miserable. And albeit, they seeme lustie and strong: yet are they nothing in Gods account but rotten and lothsome carions.

Corporall and spirituall blessings onlie found in Christs Church.

Nothing but accursednesse out of the Church.

Vers. 21. And they shall build houses and inhabit them, and they shall plant vineyards, and eate the fruite of them.

22. *They shall not build, and another inhabit: they shall not plant, and another eate: for as the daies of the tree are the daies of my people, and mine elect shall * in old age enioy the worke of their hands.*

* Or, shall continue the worke, &c.

IN these two verses hee puts them in mind of the blessings contained in the law; namely, that such as serued God should inhabit the houses they had built, and should eate the fruites of their trees: Leuit. 20. 10. As on the contrarie, the rebellious should bee driuen out of their houses to giue place vnto strangers: neither should they gather the fruite which they had planted: Deut. 28. 30. From this curse (saith Isaiah) shall the Lord deliuer you, to the end you may enioy your substance. Now the Prophet sets before them the things appertaining to this life present: and from thence borrowes similitudes, thereby teaching vs how to ascend vp higher, and to apprehend and lay hold of the blessed and endles life. For we must not sticke fast glued to these transitorie things: but rather vse them as steppes and staires to scale the heauens, that being rapt vp thither, wee may possesse the eternall and immortall benefits. It is also good reason that the enioying of these blessings, whereof the vnbeleeuers depriued themselues, should bee promised to the regenerated Church; which rested wholly vpon the only free fauour and good pleasure of her God.

Temporall blessings ought to bee as ladders, by which wee may ascend to the enioying of eternall benefits.

Where it is added, According to the daies of a tree; some thinke eternall life should be here promised: as if men should then enioy the tree of life. But this deuice is vtterly friuolous and too farre remote from the Prophets meaning. Neither can I sufficiently maruell at the expositors, who vexe themselues so much about the interpretation of this place; seeing our Prophet speakes not onely of life, but of the quiet estate thereof also. As if hee should say; You shall plant vines, and liue of the fruite of them; neither shal you depart out of this world, till you haue enioyed them; both you and your childrens children.

He takes a similitude from a tree, in respect that before hee had spoken of planting of vines. Therefore hee now promiseth, they shall peaceablie enioy their houses and vines, without being any more annoied, either by enemies or theeues. So as this tranquillitie should bee no lesse durable, then the life of a tree.

The worke is continued, or is made perpetuall, when it hath good successe; otherwise, men should trauell a long time for nothing, if God did not blesse their labour; because the enemie would rob or spoile that which men haue begun: so as they should not be able to enioy the fruits of their hands. The worke is continued therefore, not onelie when it hath some good progresse; but when it is come to perfection. Hence let vs note, that we cannot so much as enioy our goods nor haue any true rest, vnlesse we be in the kingdome of Christ (who is the only heire of the world) and stand ingrafted (by faith) in his bodie. I grant, the wicked may enioy the benefits of this life present: but therewithall they shall be in continuall anguish, and the worme of an euill conscience shall continually gnaw them: so as euen their very abundance shall bee their bane and destruction. For onely faith causeth vs to apprehend the things which belong to the blessed life: those then that are destitute of faith, can bee no members of Christ.

No true rest to them that are out of Christs kingdome.

Those that are destitute of faith, no members of Christ.

Vers. 23. *They shall not labour in vaine, nor bring foorth in feare: for they are the seed of the blessed of the Lord, and their * buds with them.*

* Or, offspring.

THe Prophet reckons vp here other kinds of blessings which God promiseth to the Kingdome of Christ. For albeit, God had continued to blesse his people alwaies, yet were those blessings after a sort withheld till Christs comming, in whom there was to be seene full and perfect felicitie. The sum is, that both Iewes and Gentiles should bee euery way happie vnder the kingdome of Christ. Now as it is a signe of Gods wrath and curse when we receiue no fruit at all of our labour: so on the contrarie, it is a testimonie of his blessing when wee enioy the fruites of our trauels. For this cause hee shewes how the Iewes being returned home from their captiuitie, to enioy a true and full deliuerance, shall not labour in vaine; neither shall their works be fruitlesse. The law threatnes the death of friends, warres, losse of goods, and anguish of minde: Leuit. 26. 22. Deut. 28. 65. But God here on the contrary promiseth tranquillitie, fertilitie, peace, and the fruit of our labours. These blessings are well to be noted: for there are few to be found, who in taking paines, fixe their eies vpon Gods blessing, so as to attribute all things vnto him: or to bee perswaded that they doe but labour in vaine, vnlesse the Lord

Few fixe their eies (whilest they labour) vpon Gods blessing.

Lord giue good ſucceſſe thereunto: Pſalm. 127.1. Euen as then we are to expect all bleſſing from God onely: ſo to him alone ought we to render the whole praiſe after wee haue receiued the ſame.

Some expound that which followes, That the women ſhall not bring forth in feare: and that they were not to feare bearing of children; in regard they ſhould feele no paines therein. We know this puniſhment was inflicted vpon the woman, becauſe of her ſinne: namely, that ſhee ſhould bring forth in ſorrow, and ſhould be in danger of death: Gen. 3.16. Children are alſo begotten with feare and trembling, when there are any rumors of warres: and it is more likely that the Prophet alluded to this, to wit, that there ſhould be ſuch tranquillitie, that men and women ſhould haue no cauſe of feare at all. For theſe words muſt be referred to fathers and mothers; who are feareleſſe, in reſpect of their children in time of peace; which they cannot but feare, when any calamitie threatens vs.

Whence feares and terrors ariſe.

The reaſon that is added, That they ſhall be the ſeed vvhich the Lord hath bleſſed, agrees very well. For whence ariſe feares, terrors, and diſquietnes of men, but from Gods curſe? when this curſe then ſhall bee removed, the Prophet hath good cauſe to affirme that the fathers, with their of-ſpring, ſhall bee freed from feares and diſtractions; becauſe being in Gods fauour, they ſhall bee alwaies ſo ſecured from feares and dangers, that they ſhall dwell in ſafetie.

And their of-ſpring with them.] This is contrarie to the priuation of children, which is reckoned vp amongſt the curſes of God, in Leuit. 26.22. And it is as much as if hee had ſaid, I will no more bereaue them of the children they haue begotten; but will cauſe them (with the reſt of other benefits which I will beſtow vpon them) to enioy their children alſo.

Verſ. 24. Yea before they call I will anſwer, and whiles they ſpeake I will heare.

A pretious promiſe.

SEe heere a (moſt) precious promiſe. For what thing is more deſirable then to haue God fauourable vnto vs, and that wee may with boldnes haue acceſſe vnto him? Surely, it is not poſſible wee ſhould be any way miſerable, as long as it is free for vs to haue our recourſe vnto the Lord, though we ſhould be inuironed with infinite thouſands of miſeries and calamities. The Lord heere promiſeth vs then, that euer ſhall not put vp our ſuites to him in vaine. But what? The Fathers vnder the Law had the ſame promiſe; for from the beginning of the world they were heard as oft as they called vpon him. And indeede prayer is one of the chiefeſt fruites of faith. But yet our Prophet confirmes this point more and more. For, in regard the Iewes were to endure a tedious and long captiuitie, the Lord proteſts hee will not ſuffer them to languiſh any longer in exile, neither will hee any longer deferre his help, but will heare them: yea, before they crie. This promiſe principally belongs to Chriſts kingdome, by vvhom we are heard, & haue acceſſe vnto God the Father, as S. Paul cleerely teacheth in Eph. 3.12. I grant the Prophets had the ſame acceſſe: neither could their prayers haue any entrance, but for Chriſts ſake. But the gate which is now made large, and ſet wide open vnto vs, was then narrow, and in a manner cloſed vp. For vnder the law, the people were wont to ſtay vvithout in the court: Luk. 1 10. Nothing now hinders vs from entring into the Sanctuarie; becauſe the vaile of the temple is rent in twaine. By Chriſt then wee haue entrance into heauen; and may boldly, and with aſſurance draw neere to the throne of grace to obtaine mercie and helpe in time of need. Heb 4.16.

Mat. 27.51.

But ſome may aske here, whether there be any faithfull in the world at this day, or any kingdome of Chriſt? for it appeares not that God is thus readie to grant his ſuccours, neither doe we perceiue any fruit of our prayers. I anſwere, that howſoeuer it then onelie appeares that our petitions haue been heard, when the effects manifeſt the ſame; yet notwithſtanding it is true that the Lord reiects not our prayers; becauſe he ſuffers vs not to faint, but ſuſtaines vs inwardly by the vertue of his holy ſpirit, to wait for the euent and iſſue with patience. Neither deferres he, as if he wanted time or leiſure, as men often doe: but rather thereby to exerciſe our faith, and prooue our patience. In a word, God may be ſaid to heare two waies: Firſt, when hee giues vs helpe manifeſtlie: Secondlie, when hee aſſiſts vs inwardly by the ſecret power of his Spirit: ſo as we continue ſtedfaſt and vnmoueable, euen in the middeſt of our afflictions. Were this doctrine deeplie ſetled and grounded in our mindes, then ſhould we with more boldneſſe and alacritie haue our recourſe to our God: neither would wee ſtand diſputing the caſe touching the inuocation of Saints, with ſo great headſtrongneſſe and obſtinacie. For whence is it that men haue forged ſo many patrons vnto themſelues, to whom they had rather go then to Chriſt; but becauſe they haue not receiued this doctrine, and haue reiected theſe noble and excellent promiſes?

Queſt.

Anſ.

Noſa.

The reaſon why God deferres to heare our prayers.

Verſ. 25. The woolfe and the lambe ſhall feede together; and the lyon ſhall eate ſtraw like the bullocke: and to the ſerpent duſt ſhall be his meate. They ſhall no more hurt nor deſtroy in all mine holy mountaine, ſaith the Lord.

HIs meaning is, that all things ſhall be ſet in their perfect order, when Chriſt ſhall raigne; and as it ſeemes here is a cloſe oppoſition betwixt Adam and Chriſt. For we know that all the miſeries of this life preſent, haue flowed into vs from the ſinne of the firſt man: for then were wee depriued of the rule and authoritie which God had giuen man ouer all the creatures, which before willingly ſubmitted themſelues vnto man, and obeied his

Queſt.

Prayer, the moſt principall fruit of faith.

Anſ.

commandements: Gen. 1. 28. But now the greater part of them rise vp against him; yea, and assaile him with open force. When wee see woolues, beares, lions, and other wild beasts to hurt men; and other beasts which serue him, and that those also which should bring him in profit, harmes him, this wee must impute to our owne sinne, who by our disobedience haue ouerthrowne the order of these things.

It belongs to Christ to restore all things to their right order, which by our sinnes are now out of order.

But seeing it is Christs office to bring all things into their right order and perfect estate againe, therefore the Prophet shewes that the confusion or scattering which is now to be perceiued in the things of this world, shall be taken away at his comming; because all corruptions shall then be abolished, and the world shall returne to his first shape. The lion shall liue without doing harme, & shall not rore after his pray. The serpent shall content it selfe with the dust; and shall couch close within the earth; without annoying any by his venomous sting. To be short, whatsoeuer is out of course and disordered, shall then be set into a right frame.

And it is not to be doubted, but our Prophet alludes vnto cruell & blood thirstie men, whose wild and furious natures shall bee tamed, when they shall bow downe their necks to beare the yoke of Christ But first of all we are well to consider what confusion is happened to all creatures, by the sinne of man. For if we haue not an eie to that, we cannot rightly iudge as we ought of the excellencie of this restauration. Wee are also to call to mind that which wee haue said before in the eleuenth Chapter, touching these allegorics.

What men are, being not conuerted.

Heere wee see then what men are before the Lord hath conuerted and changed their hearts, and receiued them into his fold, euen wilde and furious beasts; who then, and not before, abstaine from doing euill, when the Lord by the power of his Spirit, hath subdued their cruell and beastiall natures. He addes, in his holy mountaine; because all things that offend, being purged away, the Lord will gather vnto himselfe a Church, without spot or wrinckle, Eph. 5. For vnder the word All, he signifies a generall purgation: yet wee are not to wonder if so many doe still remaine cruell and vntractable; because there are but a very few that are true inhabitats of Gods holy mountaine: very few that be faithfull and sincere, no nor amongst those that make profession of Christianitie. For seeing the old man still rules and raignes in them, it must needes be that strifes and dissensions should also haue their full sway there.

Few that rightly inhabit Gods holy mountaine.

THE LXVI. CHAPTER.

Vers. 1. Thus saith the Lord; The heauen is my throne, and the earth is my footestoole: where is that house that yee will build vnto mee? And where is that place of my rest?

In the first foure verses he directs his speech to the hypocrites.

THis sermon is different from the former. For the Prophet inueighs here vehemently against the Iewes, who being puffed vp with a vaine confidence of their sacrifices, and of the Temple, were iocund and merrie: and vnder this pretence pleased themselues in their sinnes. But he shewes that this securitie of theirs was not onely vaine and foolish, but execrable and diuelish. Why so? Because such as indeuour to serue God, and to appease him with outward ceremonies, doe grosly flout him to his face. He therefore reprocheth them that they went about to forge vnto themselues an Idol in stead of God, when they fixed him thus to his Temple. Afterwards he discourseth of the Churches renuing, and of the spreading thereof thorowout the whole world.

Besides, minding to gall such to the quicke, as serued God by halues, and in hypocrisie; hee begins at the description of his nature. For in assigning vnto God the heauens for his dwelling place, his meaning is to say, that his Maiestie fils all things, and is present euery where; neither can he be shut vp, nor circumscribed within any place whatsoeuer: so far is it off, that they can include him within the Temple. The Scriptures often affirme that God is in heauen, not that he should be shut vp there, but to raise vp our mindes farre aboue the world, lest wee should imagin ought of him that were cõtemptible or earthly: for the onely aspect of the heauens ought to raise vp our mindes higher, and to rauish vs into an admiration. And yet he testifies in infinite places, that hee is present with vs: that his power is manifested euery where, to the end wee should not thinke it to bee inclosed within the heauens. It seemes this was no hard matter to bee beleeued; and that all then confessed as much. For who among them was ignorant, that Gods Maiestie filled both heauen and earth? Thus they might obiect then, who goes about to plucke God out of heauen? Therefore Isaiah, thou art angry, and inueighest against vs without cause. Neither is it to be doubted but the people insolently reiected this doctrine of the Prophet, and were sharply incensed against him, as if hee had offered them great wrong. But the answer was readie; namely, that whilest they indeuored to pacifie God, according to their owne fantasies, they did as much as in them lay, thereby forge an Idoll, quite contrarie to his Maiestie. These superstitious ones trusted in their bare & naked ceremonies, thinking they had quit themselues wondrous well, if they had been once at the Temple, and offered

A preamble.

Obiect.

Ans.

fered vp their praiers and ſacrifices there. The Prophet ſhewes that we muſt not meaſure Gods Maieſtie by ſuch an elle; as alſo, that whatſoeuer wee offer him without the puritie of the heart, is nothing elſe but vanitie. For ſeeing by Gods dwelling in the heauens, it is euident that he is of a ſpirituall nature; if his ſeruice bee not anſwerable thereunto, it muſt needes bee corrupt and wicked.

Whatſoeuer is offered to God, without the puritie of the heart, meere vanitie.

Vnder the word houſe, he comprehends all the ceremonies wherein they thought Gods ſeruice conſiſted. And for as much as they iudged of God and of his ſeruice, according to the outward face of the Temple, the Prophet ſhewes, that it was vnworthy the Maieſtie of ſo great a Lord, to fix him to a viſible and periſhable building. He diſputes not here ſimply about the eſſence of God, but therewithall of his true worſhippe, ſhewing that it is ſpirituall; that ſo it may be anſwerable to Gods nature, who is a Spirit: Iohn 4.24. For if men did ſeriouſly conſider what God is, then would they not forge vnto themſelues ſo many baſtard kindes of religion; neither would they meaſure his infinit greatneſſe according to their ſhallow capacities. This common and known ſentence therefore hath more weight and efficacie in it, then if the Prophet had ſpoken vnto them of ſome new matter. For thus he ſhewes that they were ſo ſottiſh and ſenſleſſe, that they were ignorant of that which was familiarly knowne to the ſimpleſt idiot. As alſo, that they rather reſembled beaſts then men, in imagining that God was ſet, or ſhould repoſe himſelfe in the Temple. By way of contempt, then he askes, where is this place? For it is not fit that God ſhould dwell vpō earth; or be ſhut vp as within a priſon. The Temple alſo was built vpon a little hill, which little ſpace was vnable to comprehend Gods glory: 1. King. 8. 27.

Gods worſhip muſt be anſwerable to Gods nature.

That place of my reſt.] And yet the Lord had ſaid of the Temple, in Pſ. 132. 8. Behold this is my reſt, heere will I dwell, for I haue a delight therein. And in 2. Chron. 6. 41. Ariſe O Lord, and enter into thy reſt. Moreouer, wee haue ſeene before, in Chap. 11. 10. that Gods reſt in the Temple ſhould be glorious. In a word, the very name of the Temple was honourable. Why then doth the Prophet now reiect it? I anſwere, that the Temple is called Gods reſt, becauſe hee there ſhewed teſtimonies of his preſence. For he had choſen this place to be called vpon therein, in which alſo he manifeſted euident ſignes of his power & might. But hee cauſed it not to bee built, that men ſhould therefore beleeue touching his Maieſtie, whatſoeuer ſeemed good in their eies: but rather, that being admoniſhed of Gods preſence, by the viſible ceremonies, they might from thence lift vp their hearts into heauen, acknowledging the Lord to be greater and more excellent then all the world. And yet men being of their owne natures inclined to ſuperſtitions; the meanes which were giuen the Iewes for their helpe, prooued lets and hinderances vnto them by their owne fault. So farre were they off then from mounting vp to heauen by them through faith, that they kept their mindes groueling heere below, and made themſelues beleeue that God was bound and tied vnto them: for which cauſe they ſerued him by halfes, yea, they toied with him at their pleaſure.

Obiect.

Anſ.

Saint Stephen alleadgeth this place to verie good purpoſe, in Act. 7. 48. And the Apoſtle Paul cloſly applies it to the ſenſe that we haue touched, Act. 17. 24. For both of them ſhew, that ſuch groſly deceiue themſelues, who bring carnall rites vnto God; as if his ſeruice and true religion conſiſted therein: as alſo thoſe who wickedly deface his glory, by ſetting vp Idols and Images. For Saint Stephen directs his ſpeech to the Iewes, who being fixed to the ſhadowes of the Law, neglected true godlineſſe. And Saint Paul ſpeaking to the Gentiles, denies that God dwels in Temples made with hands.

S. Stephen. Saint Paul. 1 2

Verſ. 2. For all theſe things hath mine hand made, and all theſe things haue been, ſaith the Lord: and to him will I looke, euen to him that is poore, and of a contrite ſpirit, and trembleth at my word.

*Or, had a beginning.

THe Prophet refutes the falſe opinion which men conceiued of Gods ſeruice, in regard they thought that ſacrifices and externall ceremonies auailed very much of themſelues. For this is the ſtate of the queſtion, namely, that God contents not himſelfe with bare and naked ceremonies; that he holds them vaine and idle diſguiſings, when men thinke to ſatisfie him with them. 1 2

Where he ſaith, that he hath made all things; it muſt not onely be referred to the Temple, but to whatſoeuer was there offered vnto God. Now hee ſpeakes expreſly of his making of them, to teach men that he hath no need of this externall ſeruice. As in Pſal. 50. 10. he proteſts that all beaſts are his creatures, and by right belong to him; and yet (forſooth) the Iewes would needs pacifie him by ſacrificing of them. But ſee heere the diſeaſe which is rooted in the hearts of the ſuperſtitious ſort, namely, that they transforme God into what Image they liſt, though himſelfe hath ordained an outward worſhippe; not for his owne profit, but for ours, that ſo we might be exerciſed therein, according to the reach of our capacities.

God ordaines his worſhip not for his owne profit, but for ours.

The word beginning, is as much as if he had ſaid; You ought not to compare nee vnto thoſe things which heeretofore haue begunne to be. ſeeing I am eternall, and without any beginning. I haue little need then of your ſacrifices, ſaith the Lord, who was before them. What good, I pray you, then can they do me? In a word, hee contends, that ceremonies are nothing worth in themſelues, but belong to another end. Iſaiah alſo holds it for a thing out of queſtion, that God can receiue no increaſes: whence it followes, that he only contents himſelfe with himſelfe, ſeeing from all eternitie hee neuer ſtood in need of the worlds helpe.

A true definition of Gods seruice.

In the next place the definition of the true worship is added. For in saying that God regardes the humble, I doubt not but the Prophet here priuilie opposeth the humble, and contrite in spirit, to that pompe, brauerie and glistering shew of ceremonies, which are wont to dazle mens eies, and to rauish them out of themselues. The Lord testifies then, that hee rather requires humble and broken hearts, which tremble at his commandement. Vnder which words, hee notes out the inward puritie of the heart, and a true hunger and thirst after righteousnesse: and therewithall also teacheth vs how wee ought to be prepared to become acceptable vnto God.

Obiect.

As touching the word trembling, it might seeme strange at the first, that the Prophet should require this of the faithfull; seeing nothing is more sweete and acceptable, then the word of the Lord: neither any thing more contrarie vnto it then trembling. I an-

Ans. Two sorts of trembling.

swere, that there are two sorts of trembling. With one of them those are smitten who flee and hate the Lord: with the other they are touched and made obedient, who reuerence and feare him. I am not ignorant that some referre this member to the law, which threatens, terrifies and denounceth the horrible iudgements of God against sinners. But I take it more generally, in regard that the faithfull themselues tremble at the promises, when they receiue them in humility. Hence let vs gather, that true pietie consists in hauing all our senses framed according to the obedience of God, without attributiug any thing to our selues through pride or vaine glorie. For it is the nature of faith to yeeld obedience to God: and to heare him speake, attentiuelie and patiently. But no sooner doth any vaine opinion of our owne worth puffe vs vp with pride and lofttinesse of mind: but wee are foorthwith destitute of all godlinesse and feare of God; because if we attribute vnto our selues neuer so little; so much the more doe we contemne and despise him.

A trembling at the promises.

Wherein true pietie consists.

The nature of faith.

And it is diligently to be obserued that he saith, that tremble at my word: for many will brag of their honouring and fearing of God; who yet shew themselues contemners of his Maiestie, in that they set light by his word. All our reuerence which wee professe to owe vnto God, must be manifested by trébling at his word: in which hee will bee acknowledged, as in his liuely image. The sum is, that God preferres this sacrifice before all others; namely, when the faithfull are so humbled in the true deniall of themselues, that they think themselues nothing, yea and are content to be brought to nothing also in Gods sight. In which sense it is said: Psal. 51.17. That a contrite spirit is an acceptable sacrifice vnto God. A broken and a contrite heart O God (saith the Prophet) thou wilt not despise. Now because this modestie of faith, brings forth teachableneesse in vs; therefore the studie of godlinesse is also added: that hauing cast down al our pride and rebellion, we may begin to tremble at ỹ word of God.

A singular consolation.

From these words we haue to gather a singular consolation; namely, that albeit wee seeme to be miserable in this our humilitie and low estate; yea, and that we be thought vnworthie the looking on: yet cease we not for all that to be happie; because it pleaseth the Lord to behold vs with a gracious aspect. When we are solicited then to despaire, let vs thinke: surely the Lord is wont euen by this meanes to raise vp his children vnto heaven, howsoeuer being here for a time brought euen to ỹ gates of hell, they seeme to be ouerwhelmed vnder the waight of the burthen.

Vers. 3. Hee that killeth a bullocke, is as if he slew a man: hee that sacrificeth a sheepe, as if he cut off a dogges necke: he that offereth an oblation, as if he offered swines blood: he that remembreth incense, as if he blessed an Idoll: yea, they haue chosen their owne waies, and their soule deliteth in their abominations.

THis present verse containes two members. In the first, Isaiah plainelie manifests, that God reiects all the sacrifices of his nation, yea, which more is, that he abhorred them. In the second, he notes out an horrible abuse, wherein they had mingled the ceremonies of the Gentiles, among the sacrifices of the law: and by this meanes had peruerted and corrupted all. Many thinke that by these words, the sacrifices ordained in the law are abolished. But they deceiue themselues; because Isaiah handleth that doctrine now, which he touched before in the first, and in the fiftie eight chapters. But Isaiah doth not precisely condemne the sacrifices, but rather the vices & corruptions which were mingled with them; namely, in that the Iewes thought that God contented himselfe with vaine appearances: and themselues in the meane while neglected his feare, and the hauing of a good conscience. Hee speakes not of the thing it selfe then, but taxeth the persons who abused the sacrifices. For in thus doing, they offered him no better then the emptie shels. His meaning briefflie is to say, That God approoues of none other sacrifices, but such as procede from a pure heart and a sincere affection.

1

2

God condemnes not the sacrifices, but the corruptions mingled therewith.

In the meane while it is very likely the Prophet alludes to those horrible and monstrous sacrifices of the Gentiles. For they sacrificed men aliue: or buried them quicke in the earth. And the Romanes, who thought themselues more deuout then others; yea, and the Iewes also, abstained not from so horrible and execrable a crime. Nay, which more is, these men in their inconsiderate zeale defiled themselues with the murthering of many children: thinking therin forsooth to imitate their father Abraham: Gen. 22.10. And Isaiah therfore saith, that in sacrificing an axe, it was al one, as if they had cut a mans throate. And thus he shewes that albeit the Iewes had a religiō apart by themselues, and such a one as was ordained by God; yet were they esteemed no better then the prophane heathen, among whom all things were filthie and vncleane. Also, that God approued no more of the

Gods name no leſſe prophaned by hypocriſie, then by ſuperſtition.

the one, then of the other, in regard his name was no leſſe profaned by their hypocriſie, then by the ſuperſtitions of the Gentiles. But in another place we haue ſhewed how needfull this admonition was. For though the Iewes were ſufficiently conuinced of all manner of abominations, yet they iudged themſelues in good caſe as long as they might lie lurking vnder this couerture. The Prophet therefore meets with them in their turnings, and affirmes that they ſhall gaine no more by thinking thus to pacifie God, then if they offered vp vnto him the ſacrilegious abominations of the heathen.

When in the end of the verſe he ſaith, yea, or, in truth; the place may be tranſlated two waies: becauſe ẏ relatiue may agree as well to the Gentiles, as to the Iewes, namely, that the Iewes had mingled & intangled themſelues in the idolatries of the Gentiles: or that they followed their owne inuentions. The firſt expoſition is not much amiſſe, were it not conſtrained; for he ſpake not of the Gentiles before. And the height of the Iewes impietie conſiſted in this, that beſides the abuſe of Gods pure worſhip, and contempt of the law, they had prophaned the Temple, and all other places with wicked and curſed ſuperſtitions. They ſet vp Altars, they planted groues, they ſet foorth plaies, and ſights: ſo as they walked after euery thing that was ſet vp to corrupt their minds. Thus there was a mingle mangle of all ſuperſtions betweene them and the heathen: ſuch as is at this day to bee ſeene in the papacie: Where wee behold many fragments patched together of all ſorts of ſuperſtitions, not only Iewiſh and heathineſſe, but alſo newly inuented by the diuell himſelfe: that by meanes thereof they might vnder ſuch goodlie ſhewes, the more eaſily coſen and deceiue the world.

Popiſh ſuperſtitions, Iewiſh, Heathenſh, and diueliſh.

The Prophet then meant to ſay, that both themſelues and their companions deſerued double condemnation; becauſe whileſt they gloried in the name of God, and made profeſſion of his ſeruice, they were not aſhamed to pollute the ſame with the ſacrileges of idolatrous nations.

The other expoſition is not obſcure: and it alſo ſutes well; namely, that the Iewes were addicted to follow the vanitie of their owne inuentions; and ſo followed their abominations. And thus he affirmes, that ſuch ſerue not God with a pure affection, who at their pleaſure deſpiſe him. Not onely in reſpect that they are ſtuffed full of auarice, hatred, ambition, guile, crueltie and robberies: but in regard that by their inuentions, they had corrupted Gods ſeruice. And albeit the relatiue ought to bee vnderſtood of the Iewes: yet the Prophet therewithall condemnes all the ſuperſtitions which they had borrowed from prophane nations. Thus there is no great difference in reſpect of the thing it ſelfe. For he only teacheth that whatſoeuer proceeded from them was filthie and abominable, becauſe they had malepertly, and rebelliouſly ſhaken off Gods yoke: ſo as impiety raigned among them in euery place. For how can thoſe riuers be pure and cleane, which receiue nothing but mier and durt from an impure fountaine?

Simile.

Their choice and deſire did more manifeſtly diſcouer their obſtinacie; for hauing wittingly caſt Gods commandements behind their backes, they applied their minds vnto things vtterly contrarie thereunto: as if of ſet purpoſe they had determined to reiect whatſoeuer proceeded from God, that they might yeeld obedience to their owne peruerſe luſts.

Verſ. 4. Therefore will I chuſe out their deluſions, and I wil bring their feare vpon them, becauſe I called, and none would anſwere: I ſpake, and they would not heare: but they did euill in my ſight, and choſe the things that I would not.

THe Prophet meant to ſay that the Iewes ſhould gaine nothing by ſeeking out goodly pretences, and ſtarting holes; becauſe God cannot bee deluded by the fained and coloured words of men. For what reaſon is it indeede, that wee ſhould meaſure God according to our blind reaſon? neither is it meete he ſhould ſtand to mans arbitrement: but wee muſt iudge of his workes by his word.

Gods works muſt be iudged of by his word.

I will chuſe out.] That is to ſay, I will ſo diſperſe the fogges and miſts which they labour to ſpread abroad, that all ſhall be able to diſcerne of the illuſions. They ſeeme now to ſteale away in their darke, but a time will come, wherein they ſhall bee laid open as at noone day. The ſumme is, that in regard the Iewes were addicted to ſuch a licentiouſneſſe, that they preferred whatſoeuer pleaſed them before Gods commandements: it ſhould alſo come to paſſe, that God would alſo take his turne at his pleaſure, to diſcouer all their iuglings.

The ſumme. 1 2

Vnder the word feare, he repeates one and the ſame thing according to ẏ cuſtome of the Hebrues, thus; I will cauſe them to know that they haue erred in ſuch wiſe, that that which they feared, ſhall fall vpon their owne heads. Whereby you ſee that their turnings and windings ſhould ſtand them in no ſtead, in confounding the truth with lies; or to cloake their ſuperſtitions: and all becauſe the Lord hath skill enough to ſeparate the one from the other.

For I haue called.] The Prophet doth againe condemne the obſtinacie of the Iewes: who could not abide that the Lord ſhould correct them. There is but on onely remedy left to tame our vices; that is, to hearken vnto God ſpeaking, when hee labours to bring vs into the right way. But if we harden our hearts (againſt this remedie) then are we paſt cure. Are men ſo audacious then as to prize their inuentions aboue the commandements of God? Surely, then doe they openly ſcorne him, to whoſe will they ought to bee ſubiect. But this yet is more damnable, namely, when there was ſo great hardneſſe of heart, that the gate was ſhut vp againſt al holy admonitions.

But one remedie left to tame our vices.

In vaine therefore did they boast, that their new found deuotions were of any value, to make their seruice acceptable vnto God; because he reiects and abhorres all that, which men chuse and follow, when they haue cast his word behind their backes.

Isaiah also repeates that which he had said before; namely, that the Iewes had sinned in Gods presence: as if they had wittingly determined to prouoke the eies of his glory to wrath. But withall hee addes the meanes wherby they effected it; to wit, in respect that of a peruerse desire, they chose to imbrace that which God had forbidden them. Neither is it for nothing that hee thus oft taxeth the vnmeasurable insolencie of men, who defrauding God of his right, care not a buttun for any thing he approues of.

Vers. 5. Heare the word of the Lord, all yee that tremble at his word. Your brethren that hated you, and cast you out for my names sake, said; Let the Lord be glorified: but hee shall appeare to your ioy, and they shall be ashamed.

*Or, draue you behind them.

Now hee directs his speech to the true seruants of God, and promiseth them a thing which they could hardly expect in these so sharpe afflictions. And he speakes in particular vnto them, in regard many at that time bragged fasly of Gods name. Yea, turning himselfe from the multitude, he preacheth to a small handfull: as hath bin shewed in Chap. 8. Seale vp the Law, and bind vp the testimonie among my Disciples. Now by this marke hee shewes, that Gods true and lawfull children are those that tremble at Gods vvord: which is a rare vertue indeed. He therefore opposeth it to their fained profession, who after they were circumcised, would needes bee held for Gods people, & outwardly made great shewes of holinesse; that we might vnderstand, that such onely feare and reuerence God, who honour and reuerence his vvord: that is to say, who being touched to the quicke with Gods voice, doe subiect all their senses vnder his obedience: for this is no small testimonie of pietie and godlinesse.

Heere hee turnes him againe to the godly.

Such onely feare God, as reuerence his word.

Besides, in as much as hypocrites are wont to cast a wonderful goodly varnish ouer their glorious ceremonies, the Prophets intent is, to arme and fortifie the faithfull, that they might be able to beare such assaults, lest they should faint when they should bee mocked and abused. As if he should say; You haue not onely to fight against strange nations, but also against home enemies, who hold a place in the Church, and who are your brethren, in respect of that couenant, which is common to you all. If they scorne your simplicitie, in the same sort as they haue proudly despised the Lord himselfe, you must constantly and couragiously resist this temptation.

Brethren, enemies both to the word, and to the godly that professe it.

He calles them brethren then, who notwithstanding were enemies, both to the faithfull, and to the vvord of the Lord. For he attributes this name vnto them by way of yeelding or granting it vnto them; who yet vsurped this title fasly. Whence wee gather, that it is no new plague wherewith the Church hath bin pestered; namely, that the enemies, who beare the name of brethren, should be nourished vp in her lap. Hence ariseth that perpetuall conflict vvhich vvee must needes haue vvith hypocrites, vvho cannot indure that vve should serue God in puritie and sinceritie of conscience.

VVho cast you out.] Word for word it is; Who draue you behind them. As wee see how the Pope thunders against vs horribly, as if wee were most abominable and wretched people. And thus the hypocrites reiect the little flock of the faithfull. For when they once get a head, and see themselues the stronger in multitude, authoritie, and power, then doe they exercise such tyrannie, that all things are allowed or disallowed, as they list, and cause the faithfull not onely to bee disgraced and despised, but they ouerwhelme them with their great multitude, as the chaffe doth the good corne, yea, they proudly trample them vnder their feete.

Popes thunderings.

The multitude reiecteth the little flocke.

Let the Lord bee glorified.] Some translate; The Lord is seuere: but let vs examine whether of the two expositions sutes best. Those who turne it, He is seuere; thinke that the wicked complaine, as if God dealt too seuerely in that he spared not his people, and handled them ouer rigorously. They therefore thinke that by this language the people were solicited to despaire: for when the wicked goe about to turne vs from God, they labour to plucke from vs all hope and assurance of our saluation. But I rather rest in the second exposition, which also is most receiued and approued of; to wit, that the wicked doe heere scorne both the promises and prophecies, because this glory which the Prophets do so oftē mentiō, did not appeare. As if they should say; Let the Lord shew some signe of his glory, that wee may boldly rest vpon it. And therefore the Prophet meant to arme the faithfull against such a blasphemie, that they should not suffer their faith to bee shaken by the flouts and mockes of the wicked.

This place also may be taken in this sense, namely, that the wicked promised themselues wonders and mountaines, as if by their good deedes they had merited Gods fauour. Which Amos, in Chap. 5. 18. reprocheth the Iewes withall; to wit, that they perswaded themselues God would bee mercifull vnto them, whilest they obstinately prouoked the Lord. In as much then as vnder pretext of their sacrifices, they despised all threatnings, and yet made their brags, as if God would aide them; the Prophet answers, that they shall see the glory of God, but after another maner then they expected. In a word, it is all one as if he had said; The Lord at his comming will cause the faithfull to know, that their hope was not vaine. For hee would appeare with fauour to the good: but to their shame and destruction, who affirmed that hee would come to maintaine their impietie, whereof hee is the enemie and auenger. The one sort should inioy gladnesse of heart and consolation: but the others, shame and confusion. For they should speedilie ſpeedilie taſte of Gods vengeance, at which they now ieſt.

1
2

Verſ. 6. A voice ſounds from the Citie, euen a voice from the Temple, the voice of the Lord that recompenceth his enemies fully.

A confirmation of the former ſentence.

HEe confirmes the former ſentence, namely, that God hath not threatned in vaine, that he wil quickly come to puniſh the hypocrites, that the faithfull may with the more cheerfulneſſe of heart, wait for this promiſed ioy. But all the difficultie is, to know of what enemies he ſpeakes: for wee may vnderſtand this place of the Babylonians, by whoſe ruine God deliuered his Church. It may alſo bee applied to the other enemies, who were entertained in the boſome of the Church. And I rather incline to this latter ſenſe, though I denie not but it may be vnderſtood of all ſorts of enemies. But hee reſpects the home enemies, of whom he hath hitherunto ſpoken, who reiected the voice of God, ſounding continually by the miniſtry of the Prophets. Well, ſaith hee, It ſhall come to paſſe that you ſhall heare a more horrible voice. And yet hee forthwith mitigates his ſpeech, leſt this terror ſhould diſcourage the ſeruants of God.

The ſumme.

The ſumme is, that the wicked reioice in vaine, when they oppoſe their rebellions againſt Gods iudgements. Why ſo? Becauſe they ſhall not eſcape his hand. Nay, which more is, his voice ſhall ſound from that Temple, wherein they put ſuch carnall confidence; and that the faithfull ſhall then receiue the fruit of their patience. Would to God that we at this day did not perceiue the like contempt among the rout of hypocrites, who care neither for admonitiõs nor threatnings at all: neither beare they any reuerence to Gods word. In ſtead of that ſweete and ſtill voice which they now heare, we are conſtrained to preach the voice of feare and tumult, which one day ſhall ring in their eares; but it ſhal be frõ ỹ mouthes of ſuch maſters, as ſhall be of a clean contrary diſpoſition. For ſeeing the world is ſo audacious, as with a ſacrilegious contempt to reiect Gods word, it ſhall bee conſtrained not onely to heare, but alſo to feele an armed voice: that is to ſay, fire and blood.

Verſ. 7. Before ſhee trauailed, ſhee brought forth: and before her paine came, ſhee was deliuered of a man child.

God prouides for the ſafetie of his children, whileſt he chaſtiieth the wicked.

THe Prophet hauing before comforted the faithfull, to the end the arrogancie and pride of their enemies (with which they ſhould be afflicted) might not aſtoniſh them: and after that hauing commanded them to wait conſtantly till the comming of the Lord; now he addes therewithall, that the wicked ſhall bee ſo puniſhed, that yet God in the meane while will prouide for the ſafetie of his choſen. Neither ſpeakes he onely of ſome one or two men, but of the vvhole Church, which he compares to a vvoman: which ſimilitude hee hath vſed heeretofore. For the Lords ſpeciall meaning is, to gather vs into a body, wherein wee may haue the teſtimonie of our adoption: as alſo to acknowledge him for our father, and that we may be nouriſhed vp in the Church, as in the lap of our mother. This ſimilitude therefore of a mother is very apt: for it ſignifies that the Church ſhall bee ſo reſtored, that ſhee ſhall haue a large and ample of-ſpring, though for a time ſhe was reputed for a widow and barren. And hee repeates the ſentence againe, which hee vſed heeretofore: but now hee expreſſeth ſomewhat more, namely, that this worke of God ſhall be ſudden and vnexpected. For he withdrawes the faithfull from all carnall conceits, that they ſhould not iudge of the reſtauration of the Church according to humane reaſon.

Women are wont to beare their children the ſpace of nine moneths in their wombes: then at laſt they bring them forth with great paine: but the Lord hath another way in begetting of his children. It ſhall come to paſſe, ſaith hee, that the fruit ſhall come into the world, before it can be either perceiued, or felt by any paine. And that is the cauſe alſo why hee attributes the whole praiſe thereof vnto himſelfe, in regard that ſuch a miracle farre ſurpaſſeth all the induſtrie of man.

Now hee ſpeakes eſpecially of a man child, to ſet forth the courage and agilitie of theſe children. For his meaning heereby is, that ſuch a race ſhall be of a noble kind, and not delicate or effeminate. As we alſo know that the faithfull are ſo regenerated by the Spirit of Chriſt, that they finiſh their courſe with an inuincible courage. And in this ſenſe Saint Paul ſaith, that they haue not receiued the ſpirit of bondage to feare againe, &c. Rom. 8. 15.

Verſ. 8. Who hath heard ſuch a thing? Who hath ſeene ſuch things? Shall the earth be brought forth in one day? Or ſhall a nation bee borne at once? For as ſoone as Zion trauailed, ſhe brought forth children.

HE extols the greatnes of this work, whereof he ſpake in the former verſe. For his meaning is, that the reſtauration of the Church ſhall be admirable, and extraordinarie, in ſuch wiſe that the faithfull ſhall confeſſe the whole worke hath proceeded from Gods meere grace, and not from the order or courſe of nature. For when men thinke of this, they are like to them that dreame, as it is ſaid in Pſalm. 126. 1. Moreouer, his meaning is not that the reſtauration of the Church, ſhall be perfected by and by. For the aduancements thereof are tedious and diuers, yea very ſlow in the iudgement of our fleſh; but he ſhews that the beginning it ſelfe ſurmounts ẏ reach of al mens capacities. And yet he ſpeakes not exceſſiuely neither. For we often ſee that the Church brings foorth, when ſhe was not iudged to be with child before. Nay, which more is, whileſt ſhee is thought to be barren, ſhee is made fruitfull by the preaching of the Goſpell; in ſuch wiſe, that we admire at the thing after it is come to paſſe, in reſpect it ſeemed incredible to vs before.

Theſe things were in part accompliſhed when the people returned out of Babylon. But we haue a much more euident proofe of it in the Goſpell; after the publiſhing whereof, what an infinite number of children hath there been borne in the Church? And haue not we in our times ſeene the accompliſhment of this propheſie? For ſince thirtie yeeres paſt that the Goſpell hath been preached, how many children hath the Church borne? Hath not the Lord now troupes of them diſperſed throughout the world? Nothing was here foretold then, which we ſee not at this day fulfilled euen with our eies.

Now he ſets foorth the glorie of this miracle by a ſimilitude. For what people or nation came there euer into the world all at an inſtant? For men are gathered and increaſed by little and little. But it is farre otherwiſe with the Church; who foorthwith brings foorth and repleniſheth many places with great numbers of her children. The ſumme is, that God will work ſo powerfully, ẏ by an extraordinary manner, the Church ſhal haue an infinite number of children in an inſtant. The word earth, may be taken for any countrie, or for the inhabitants of it.

The ſumme.

Verſ. 9. Shall I cauſe to trauell, and not bring foorth? ſhall I cauſe to bring foorth, and ſhall bee barren, ſaith thy God.

Gods power ought not to be called into queſtion.

EVen as in the former verſe the Prophet hath highly magnified the worke of God: ſo now hee alſo ſhewes that it is not to bee thought impoſſible; neither ought any to call his power into queſtion, ſeeing it farre ſurmounts all the whole order of nature. For if we conſider who it is that ſpeakes, and how eaſie a matter it is for him to performe that which he hath promiſed, we ſhall not bee ſo incredulous; but that wee ſhall foorthwith remember that the reſtauration of the whole world is in his hands, who in a moment can create a hundred worlds, if it pleaſe him. A little before by intermingling an admiration, he meant to extoll the greatneſſe of the worke: but now to the end the hearts of the faithful ſhould not be hindred nor depreſſed, he exhorts them to thinke well of his power. And that he might the better perſwade them that nothing is ſo impoſſible with man, but it is eaſie with him, and by and by obeyes his commandement; hee propounds and ſets before them the things which wee ſee euery day by experience. For who perceiues not euidently his admirable power in women bearing of children? But will not the Lord trow yee ſhew himſelfe, much more wonderfull in the increaſing and multiplying of his Church, which is the moſt excellent theater of his glorie? What a peruerſneſſe of mind is it then to limit and reſtraine his power, or to thinke that hee is leſſe able when it pleaſeth him by himſelfe alone to worke without meaees, and as it were with an out-ſtretched arme, then when he vſeth naturall meanes?

Verſ. 10. Reioice ye with Ieruſalem, and be glad with her, all yee that loue her: reioyce for ioy with her, al ye that mourne for her.

Who are fit to reioyce for the churches deliuerance.

ISaiah promiſeth an happie eſtate to thoſe who wept and lamented before: for he reſpects not his owne time, in which hee liued, but the captiuitie, during which the faithfull being oppreſſed and beaten downe with ſorrow, had almoſt fainted. He therefore exhorts and prouokes all thoſe who intirely loue the Church, and hold nothing more deare vnto them then her ſaluation, to reioyce. Hereby ſhewing that no man hath any part or portion in this ſo great a benefit, vnleſſe ſuch only as beare an holy loue vnto the Church, and are thorowly affected with a feruent deſire of her deliuerance: Yea, euen then when ſhee is contemptible in the ſight of the world, as it is ſaid in Pſal. 102. namely, That the Saints delite in the ſcattered ſtones of the Church, and that they haue pitie on the duſt thereof.

For this cauſe he addes, you that mourne for her. For in regard there was a lamentable and an horrible ſcattering in the captiuitie, ſo as there was no recouerie at all to bee expected; hee rouzeth vp the faithfull, and commands them to bee of good courage; or at leaſt, to prepare themſelues to ioy.

This exhortation containes alſo a promiſe & ſomething more then that too: For a bare promiſe would not haue been of ſuch efficacie: But, theſe things muſt not bee reſtrained to one time alone. We are rather to call to minde our generall rule, whereof wee haue ſo often ſpoken in this propheſie; namely, that theſe promiſes muſt be extended from the returne of the people, to the comming of Chriſt; and ſo to the full accompliſhment of all promiſes at his laſt appearing.

Verſ. 11. That you may ſucke and be ſatisfied with the breaſts of her conſolation: that you may milke out, and bee delighted with the brightneſſe of her glory.

The occaſion of the former ioy.

THis verſe muſt bee ioyned with the former. Becauſe the Prophet ſhewes what the occaſion of this ioy ſhall be; namelie, that the miſerable and ſcattered eſtate of the Church, ſhall in time turne to be happie and flouriſhing. By the word to ſucke, hee alludes to the actions of little infants. As if he ſhould ſay, Ioiey your mother, with all her good things, and hang continually at her breaſts. Note here that that he compares all the faithfull of what age ſoeuer vnto little children: to put them in mind of their infirmitie and weakneſſe, that ſo they might be confirmed by the power of the Lord. This ſimilitude therefore of milking and ſucking, is diligently to bee obſerued.

The oldeſt in the church muſt reſemble a little child.

Some take the word conſolations, in the actiue ſignification, and others in the paſſiue. But I incline to them of the latter ſort. For the Prophet meanes ſuch conſolations, as the Church receiues: and which ſhe imparts vnto her children. And indeed what conſolation is comparable vnto this? For in what can we find matter of more excellent or full contentment? which better appeares in the member following, where the delectation in the brightneſſe of her glorie is added.

Verſ. 12. For thus ſaith the Lord, Behold, I will extend peace ouer her like a flood, and the glorie of the Gentiles like a flowing ſtreame: then ſhall yee ſucke. Ye ſhall be borne vpon her ſides, and be ioyfull vpon her knees.

The former ſimilitude proſecuted.

HE proſecutes the ſame ſimilitude ſtill, and compares Gods children vnto little babes which are carried in armes, whom the mothers cheriſh in their boſomes: with whom alſo they vſe to ſport and play. Now that the Lord might the better expreſſe to the full the great loue he beares vs, hee compares himſelfe to mothers, who are wont to ſurpaſſe all others in kindneſſe to their children, as wee noted in Chap. 49.15. The Lord then will needes be our mother, as it were, that he may ſhew himſelfe to be tender ouer vs, (as if hee dandled vs in his lap: in ſtead of thoſe troubles, outrages, miſeries, and anguiſhes which we haue ſuſtained.

In verſ.13.

By peace, he meanes felicitie: and in the word glorie, there is a repetition, vnder which is comprehended all ſorts of riches: ſo as they ſhould want nothing appertaining to a full and perfect peace. For in as much as the Gentiles liued ſumptuouſlie before, and had all things at will; he affirmes that the faithfull alſo ſhall enioy whatſoeuer belongs to an happie life; euen in as great abundance, as the floods which flow into the ſea.

Vſe.

By the continuall courſe, is meant a perpetuitie. For God being in himſelfe a fountaine that can neuer be drawne drie: his peace muſt needs differ very much from that of the world; which is in a moment dried vp, and vaniſheth away. As oft then as wee behold the wofull and lamentable eſtate of the Church, let vs call to mind theſe ſweete promiſes; and remember that they belong no leſſe vnto vs then they did vnto that people. And ſeeing God hath floods of peace in ſtore, which he wil powre foorth vpon his Church: let vs not bee diſcomforted, no, not in the middeſt of the greateſt and ſharpeſt aſſaults. But rather let vs ſing, and be glad; when miſeries and anguiſhes doe moſt preſſe vs.

And whereas he delightes in vs as in children; and not as in men of a ripe age, let vs willingly acknowledge our condition to bee ſuch; that ſo we may gladly accept of theſe conſolations. For doubtleſſe it is a ſigne of Gods infinite goodneſſe towards vs, when he is thus pleaſed to ſupport our infirmities.

Verſ.13. As one whom his mother comforts, ſo will I comfort you, and yee ſhall bee comforted in Ieruſalem:

14. And when ye ſee this, your heart ſhall reioyce, and your bones ſhall floriſh like an Hearbe: and the hand of the Lord ſhall be knowne among his ſeruants, and his indignation againſt his enemies.

The firſt member of this verſe is expounded before in verſ.12.

IT is wonderfull to ſee how long the Prophet inſiſts vpon this renouation: for it might ſeeme that he had ſpoken fully of it before. But for as much as hee could not ſufficiently expreſſe the great loue and affection which God beares vs, nor content himſelfe to haue ſpoken of it, therefore it is that hee redoubles and repeates one and the ſame thing ſo often.

When he ſaith, they ſhall be comforted in Ieruſalem: it may be expounded two waies. For the meaning may bee, that the faithfull ſhall be glad, when they ſhall ſee the Church reſtord: or, the Church being reſtored, that ſhee will endeuour to comfort her children. The firſt expoſition ſeemes more copious: but we ought to haue an eie to the Prophets meaning, and not to that which carries a faire ſhew only. In the firſt place he makes 1
God the author of this conſolation. And hath 2
he not good cauſe? yet notwithſtanding ads in the ſecond place, that it ſhall be in Ieruſalem, by whom it was to be adminiſtred. You ſee then that this comfort is not offered nor giuen to the prophane contemners, who care not what becomes of the Church, but to thoſe who out of a true affection of godlines doe manifeſt themſelus to be her children.

The verbe to ſee, expreſſeth a ſure experience; that the faithfull ſhould not doubt of the euent: but fully imbracing this propheſie, they might patiently endure for a time their mothers barrenneſſe.

He illuſtrates this by a ſimilitude, when he ſaith, that their bones ſhuld receiue new force and vigor, euen as dead hearbs waxe greene, after winter. Now hee ſpeakes of the bones, which become withered with ſorrow, as Salomon ſaith: Prou.17.22. as on the contrarie, Ioy is wont to repleniſh and reuiue them. Thus he notes out a vehement, and an incomparable ioy: and it ſeemes he alludes to that ſorrow which had almoſt dried vp the bones of the faithfull in captiuitie; in ſo much that they were become withered, and like dead men. The Lord therefore comforts them, and promiſeth that his Church ſhall flouriſh and abound in all bleſſings. Afterwards, that he might giue them better aſſurance, hee commands them to lift vp their minds vnto God, who will then manifeſt his ſuccour.

It is added afterward, that the hand of the Lord

Lord was not alwaies reuealed, but remained couered for a time, as if he had been vtterly careleſſe of his choſen. For in appearance, it ſeemed hee had reiected them, ſeeing Daniel and other good men were carried away captiues, no leſſe then Zedekiah. When the Sunne ſhould ſhine againe vpon them then, there ſhould bee manifeſted ſuch a difference betweene the godly and the wicked, that his hand which before was as it were hidden, ſhould now euidently appeare, becauſe hee will no more diſſemble the matter, nor ſuffer the wicked any longer to take their full ſwinge, but will openly ſhew what great care he hath ouer his Church. Haue our enemies gotten the ſtart of vs then, & haue they made their part the ſtronger, ſo as wee ſeeme for a time to be forſaken, and left deſtitute of all helpe? Yet let vs not faint nor be diſcouraged, for a day vvill come, wherein the Lord will reueale himſelfe, and will ſet vs free from vnder the tyrannie and violence of the enemies.

Vſe.

Verſ. 15. For behold the Lord will come with fire, and his charets like a whirlewind, that he may recompence anger with wrath, and his indignation with a flame of fire.

THe end of this deſcription is, that when the faithfull ſhould ſee their miſeries to ſerue in ſtead of a may game to the wicked, whereat they would laugh their fill: yet they ſhould not therefore turne from the right way, nor be diſcouraged. For the Prophet meant not onely to gall the wicked, who are wont to be daunted with no threatnings whatſoeuer, but ſcorne all that is told them: but he therewithall comforts the faithfull, to aſſure them that they ſhould be in good caſe, being vnder Gods protection: as alſo that they ſhould not ioine in league with the wicked, though all things fell out according to their deſires. Thus then it is to the faithfull eſpecially, to whom the Prophet hath reſpect, to the end they ſhould content themſelues with Gods grace and protection. But it cannot well be affirmed, whether he heere comprehends the laſt iudgement, with thoſe temporall iudgements wherewith the wicked begin heere to be puniſhed withall. For mine owne part, I nothing doubt, but this iudgement is comprehended with thoſe puniſhments which are onely forerunners of eternall death.

1 The Lord vvill come.] This beganne to take effect at that time, in which the people being carried into Babylon, God ſhewed his vengeance vpon the domeſtike enemies of his
2 Church. Afterward, when the time of their deliuerance was accompliſhed, then hee incountred with an outſtretched arme, with the prophane nations, and neuer ceaſed to giue them diuers ſignes of his comming; by which he ſhewed himſelfe preſent to his peo-
3 ple, and came in fire to iudge his enemies. Laſtly, wee know that he vvill come in flaming fire at the laſt day, to reuenge himſelfe vpon all the wicked: 2. Theſ. 1. 8. 2. Pet. 3. 7. But this place muſt not bee reſtrained to the laſt iudgement, vnleſſe we alſo comprehend the reſt therewithall. Not withſtanding hee oppoſeth theſe threatnings eſpecially againſt the hypocrites, (as wee ſhall ſee heereafter) which were among the Iewes.

Now theſe metaphors are much vſed in the Scriptures: for we cannot otherwiſe comprehend this horrible iudgement of God, vnleſſe the Prophet ſhould vſe theſe ſimilitudes, taken from things in common vſe amongſt vs. The Prophets labour thereby to touch our ſences to the quicke, that ſo being mooued with the true feare of God, wee ſhould not enuie the eſtate of the wicked, for whom ſo horrible and fearefull a vengeance is prepared.

Fond ſpeculations of Sophiſters.

By this we may ſee how fond and vnfruitfull the ſpeculations of the Sophiſters are, who ſtand to diſpute about the qualitie and ſharpneſſe of this fire: ſeeing the drift of the holy Ghoſt is vnder theſe borrowed ſpeeches, to ſet forth the horrible iudgement of God: becauſe otherwiſe wee are not able to imagin, nor comprehend the ſame. And this appeares yet better by the word ſword, (which he vſeth in the next verſe) for there is the ſame reaſon to be giuen of it.

Verſ. 16. For the Lord will iudge with fire and with his ſword, all fleſh: and the ſlaine of the Lord ſhall be many.

A confirmation of the former denunciation.

HEe addes nothing different from the former, but onely confirmes the former ſentence; and ſhewes, that this iudgement ſhall be terrible, leſt any ſhould thinke the matter hee ſpeakes of were of ſmall conſequence. Thus then he amplifies this horror, the more to terrifie the wicked, as alſo to cauſe the godly to keepe themſelues in all puritie and integritie, by withdrawing themſelues from the ſocietie of the godleſſe. And that therewithall they ſhould alſo patiently beare the iniuries and cruell aſſaults of the enemies, vntill God ſhewed himſelfe with his reuenging hand from heauē, to execute his vengeance. Now he threatens the deſtruction of all men, in ſuch wiſe, that there ſhould be great heapes of dead bodies. And this hee added expreſly, in regard that impietie raigned in euery place; and the faithfull were ſharplie aſſailed, in reſpect of the wickeds proſperitie. For as our mindes are variable, ſo wee ſuffer our ſelues to bee carried away with bad examples, and the multitude puts many toies in our heads, as if the ſame were of ſufficient force to withſtand the hand of God. The Prophet corrects this peruerſe feare of ours; for by how much the more impietie, and the great troopes of the wicked beares the ſway, ſo much the more will Gods wrath be inflamed to burne the hotter: ſo as the numbers and plots of the wicked, ſhall not hinder the Lord from wrapping them alſo vp in the ſame ruine.

Verſ. 17. They that ſanctifie themſelues, *ſelues, and puriſie themſelues in gardens, *behind one tree, in the middeſt, eating ſwines fleſh, and ſuch abominations: euen the meaſe ſhall bee conſumed together, ſaith the Lord.

*Or, in a fountaine which is in the midſt. *Or, and.

NOw he notes out theſe enemies (as with his finger) againſt whom he ſaid, Gods ire ſhould be inflamed. For it was hard to diſcerne whether hee ſpake of forraine and open enemies; or whether hee directed his ſpeech to the contemners of God; who notwithſtanding were mingled among the godly. And therefore he taxeth the falſe hearted Iewes, which had reuolted. And I doubt not but in the firſt place hee gauls the hypocrites: and next of all, the wicked: that is to ſay, thoſe who ouerflowed in their inordinate luſts: which is meant by eating of ſwines fleſh.

The persons noted, to whom this vengeance belonged.

1 2

The hypocrites ſanctified themſelues: that is, they ſmoothed ouer things vnder the pretext of holineſſe: by which meanes they beguiled many.

1

They puriſied themſelues in gardens.] That is, they polluted themſelues with diuers ſuperſtitions. And yet by ſuch inuentions, they thought to make themſelues the purer in Gods ſight. Others, without any diſſimulatiõ, deſpiſed God and all godlineſſe. It is a generall ſentence then, vnder which he comprehends all idolatries, as well ſuch as manifeſted their wickednes in all mens ſight, as the others, who couered and cloaked the ſame vnder diuers ſhadowes.

2

When hee addes; by a garden vvhich is in the midſt: ſome expoſitors ſupply a pond or fiſh poole, as if in the midſt of the garden, there had beene ſome holy water put to waſh in. But the other ſenſe agrees alſo well, in regard y as euery one had his god apart, ſo did he alſo thoſe one ſome one tree among others.

Verſ. 18. For I will viſit their workes and their imaginations: for it ſhall come to paſſe, that I will gather all nations and tongues, and they ſhall come and ſee my glory.

A confirmation of the former ſentence.

HEe confirmes that which hee ſaid in the former verſe; namely, that all the wicked ſhould be puniſhed, to the end that howſoeuer the Lord was content to let them alone for a while to worke their wils; yet ſhould the faithfull be well aſſured to behold the day of their vengeance, and that this ſhould be as it were a preſeruatiue to let them from being carried away with the ſtreame of the multitude. The Lord teſtifies heere, that he ſo ſees and notes their workes, that it ſhall bee manifeſted by the effects one day, that none could flee from the regard of his eies.

Some take it as if the wicked were able to doe nothing without Gods permiſſion: which ſentẽce is true in it ſelfe; but yet it ſutes not with this place. And euery one may ſee it to be farre ſerched, and wide from the Prophets meaning: for he onely confirmes that which he ſaid before; to wit, that the hypocrites and notorious offendors, ſhould bee puniſhed at the laſt; becauſe God kept a regiſter of all their imaginations, deliberations, and wicked actions. So as they ſhould gaine nothing in the end by their ſhifts; as if it were vnpoſſible to bring them to iudgement.

Becauſe the time is come.] We haue heere the confirmation of that which hath been ſaid: for hee ſhewes that the time drawes neere, in which hee will call all nations together, and adopt them as one people vnto himſelfe, after he hath reiected the hypocrites, and the open vvicked ones. The Iewes were proudly conceited of themſelues, and contemned all nations beſides, as vile and prophane. But the Lord proteſts heere that hee will adopt them, that they may partake of his glory, whereof the Iewes had made themſelues vnworthy.

Truly this is an excellent place, in which we are taught that God is bound to no people in the world, but that it reſts in his will, freely to chuſe whom it pleaſeth him; and to reiect the vnbeleeuers, whom in times paſt hee had called to himſelfe. Which doctrine, Saint Paul diſcourſeth of at large, in Rom. 10.19. and 11.25. where hee ſhewes how wee are grafted as into an emptie ſtocke, after the Iewes by their infidelitie had been reiected. Iſaiah threatens them now with it: (as if he ſhould ſay;) I would not haue you ſo ſimple as to thinke that God can want a people, ſeeing you forſake him, and thereby make your ſelues vnworthy of his grace. For there are others in the world beſides you: and in the meane while he will ſhew himſelfe to be your Iudge, and will make you feele at length that he cannot alwaies ſuffer his patience to be abuſed.

Doctrine.

And they ſhall come.] For being grafted in by faith, they ſhall come together into the Church, with the true Iewes, who had not forſaken the true adoption. For the Iewes being neere vnto God, it was needfull that the Gentiles ſhould be made one with them, that ſo the diſcord being remoued, they might be ioined into one body.

To ſee the glory of the Lord, is nothing elſe but to inioy the grace which hee had ſhewed vnto the Iewes. For this was one ſpeciall priuiledge the Iewes had, namely, that they beheld Gods glory, and had with them the ſignes of his preſence. Now he ſaith, that the nations which were depriued of ſuch benefits, ſhould ſee and behold this glory, in regard the Lord was minded to manifeſt himſelfe vnto all without exception.

Verſ. 19. And I will ſet vp a ſigne among them, and will ſend thoſe that eſcape of them, vnto the riuers of Tarſhiſh, Pul, and Lud; and to them that draw the bow, to Tubal and Iauan, Iles a farre off that haue not heard my fame, neither haue ſeene my glory: and they ſhall declare my glory among the Gentiles.

An amplification of the former ſentence.

THis may be taken two waies; namely, either that God giues a ſigne; or, that hee markes markes his with ſome priuy token, to the end they might eſcape ſafe and ſound. The firſt expoſition is moſt receiued. But ſome childiſhly deſcant heere vpon the ſigne of the Croſſe: others referre it to the preaching of the Goſpell: and both of them, as I take it, are wide from the marke. For hee rather ſeemes to allude to that which was done at the going forth and deliuerance of the people: as Moſes deſcribes it in Exod.12. 22. And to that which is ſaid in Reuel. 7.4. namely, that the Lord marked all ſuch as ſhould be ſaued, when his wrath ſhould bee powred out vpon the whole world: as thoſe in Egypt eſcaped, whoſe doore poſts were marked with the blood of the Paſſeouer. Thus he ſhewes that none but the elect can eſcape the wrath of God, vpon whom this marke is ſtamped. In a word, the Prophet amplifies that which hath been already ſaid, touching the fearefull and horrible iudgement of God, which ſhould light vpon the wicked: for it ſhould conſume all, if he marked not ſome. He promiſeth then to reſerue a ſmall number out of this generall ruine of the whole people. This I take to bee the true meaning of our Prophet: according to which hee ſaid in Chap.1.9. and 10.22. that the Lord would reſerue out of this generall deuouring flame, a little remnant.

The ſigne of the Croſſe.

He addes, that ſome of theſe ſhall bee his heraulds, to magnifie his name among the Gentiles. And we know that the doctrine of ſaluation was publiſhed farre and wide, by the Miniſterie of a few ſillie men.

By Tarſhiſh, he meanes Cilicia; and vnder that, comprehends all the coaſt of the Mediterraneum ſea, which lay oppoſite to the lād of Iewrie. Others thinke that this word ſignifies Africa, and Cappadocia: but I rather reſt in the former expoſition. Some by Lud, vnderſtand Lybia: and others, Aſia. And by thoſe that draw the bow, the Parthians; becauſe they were good archers.

Vnder Tubal and Iauan, ſome vnderſtand Italy and Grecia: and by the Iles, hee ſignifies vnknowne regions. For vnder this word, the Iewes comprehend all the nations that lay beyond the ſea: as we haue noted before.

Which haue not heard.] He meanes that the knowledge of God ſhall bee ſpread through the whole world: for the Greekes, Italians, Parthians, they of Cilicia, and other nations knew nothing of the pure religion, nor of Gods true worſhip. To bee ſhort, the whole world was wrapped in deepe dungeons of darkneſſe: and therefore the Lord promiſeth that his glory ſhall be knowne euery where. But there is great weight in the word Gentiles: for at that time the Lord was onely knowne of the Iewes; but now hee hath manifeſted himſelfe vnto all.

Verſ. 20. And they ſhall bring all your brethren for an offering vnto the Lord, out of all nations vpon horſes, and in chariots, and in horſelitters, and vpon mules, and ſwift beaſts, to Ieruſalem mine holy mountaine, ſaith the Lord, as the children of Iſrael offer in a cleane veſſell in the houſe of the Lord.

HEere hee cleerely expounds that which was ſaid before; namely, that all thoſe which ſhall eſcape and ſuruiue the reſt, ſhall bee (notwithſtanding their ſmall number) Prieſts vnto God, and ſhall bring ſacrifices vnto him from all parts. Now he alludes to the ancient ceremony of the Law, though he therewithall ſhewes the difference which ſhould be betweene theſe oblations, and the ſacrifices ordained by the Law: for heere he inſtitutes new ſacrifices, and a new prieſthood. And as he affirmed that all nations ſhould be gathered, verſ.18. ſo now he ſhewes, that the Prieſts by him eſtabliſhed, ſhall not trauaile in vaine, becauſe the Lord will adde a gracious iſſue vnto their labours. An expoſition of the amplification.

He calles them brethren, who were ſtrangers before: wherein hee hath reſpect to that new coniunction which is made by faith. Others draw another ſenſe from this place, which I doe not altogether reiect; namely, that when God ſhall gather a new people from among the Gentiles, then the Iewes, who were ſcattered here & there, ſhould be gathered together againe: which alſo came to paſſe. But yet this ſeemes to agree better, if we referre it to the vocation of the Gentiles, in regard that the differēce being thē taken away, a brotherly coniunction beganne to be betweene all thoſe whom the Lord had purpoſed to adopt vnto himſelfe for his children.

Abraham was the father of one nation, and yet all that deſcended from him after the fleſh, were not reputed his children: for the Iſhmaelites and the Idumeans were reiected. He was then a father of many nations, Gen.17. 5. when God adopted and ioined vnto him by couenant the Gentiles; to the end they ſhould follow the faith of Abraham. Thus we ſee wherefore the Lord calles vs thē brethren of the Iewes; whereas before we were ſtrangers and farre remote from the Church of God: for before hee did caſt out the falſe brethren and reprobates from their place. Gentiles become brethren of the Iewes.

We are to note this fruit which iſſueth from the labours of ſuch as indeuour to ſerue the Lord faithfully; namely, that they thereby reclaime their brethren from all pernicious errors, to bring them to God, who is the fountaine of life. And this conſolation ought to cheere them vp, and to fortifie them euen in the midſt of all the calamities and afflictions which are incident vnto them. The Lord will not ſuffer one of his to periſh. Happy is our condition then, when after a ſort he makes vs ſauiours of our brethren.

From all nations.] His meaning is, that there ſhall bee no more difference betweene Iew and Gentile: becauſe God will breake downe the partition wall, and will ſet vp his Church in all nations. Thus was that ſaying of Dauid in Pſalm.2.8. touching Chriſt, accompliſhed: Aske of me, and I will giue thee the Heathen for thine inheritance, and the vttmoſt bounds of the earth for thy poſſeſſion.

In

In that hee mentions the holy mountaine: he applies himſelfe to the cuſtome of thoſe times. For God was worſhipped in ẏ Temple at Ieruſalem. But the Temple hath now ſpread
1. Tim. 2. 8. it ſelfe over all the world, in reſpect that it is lawfull for all men in al places to lift vp pure hands vnto God: ſo as all difference of place and perſons is now remooued and taken away. He ſpeakes alſo of the oblations, and ſacrifices which were offered in the temple: though the ſacrifices which wee are now to offer bee much different from thoſe of that time. But it was requiſit that ẏ Prophets ſhould borrow ſimilitudes from things then commonly in vſe; as we haue often ſaid. Vnder the Law, they offered brute beaſts: but the Apoſtles and other Prieſts of Chriſt haue ſacrificed reaſonable men: and haue offered them liuing
Rom. 15, 16. ſacrifices by the preaching of the Goſpell: Rom. 15. 16. The Apoſtle teſtifies that hee performed this office by offering vp the Gentiles, through the ſword of the Goſpell: that they might be an acceptable oblation vnto God ſanctified by the holy Ghoſt. It is no legall Prieſthood then: nor like to that of the Papiſts, which [illegible] touching the offering vp of Chriſt. But it is the Goſpell, by which men are mortified; that being renued by the holy ſpirit, they may be offered vp vnto God. Beſides, euery one offers vp himſelfe in vowing and dedicating themſelues to Gods ſeruice: and in yeelding him ſincere obedience, which is that reaſonable ſeruice whereof S. Paul ſpeakes in Rom. 12. 1. Thus the end of our vocation is here ſet before vs: namely, that all filthineſſes being purged away, and being dead to our ſelues, we may in the next place learne to loue and follow holineſſe.

The end of our vocation.

Some ſeeke out allegories vpon theſe words charets, and horſes; and they thinke the Prophet hath vſed the verb ſhall bring, in regard the Goſpel neither conſtraines nor terrifies men, but rather allures them ſweetlie; ſo as they come willingly vnto God, and haſten vnto him with ioyfull and glad hearts.

Obiect.

But I willingly expound this place without ſuch curioſitie: for in regard this ſcruple might come in the minds of many; How is it poſſible for ſtrangers ſo farre remote to come vnto vs? He anſwers, that horſes, charets, and litters, ſhould not be wanting vnto them. For the Lord hath many meanes at hand, to furniſh his ſeruants withall, and to bring them to his purpoſed end. Furthermore, I denie not, but the Goſpell may be called a chariot, in regard it brings vs to the hope of eternall life: but yet me thinkes the Prophet meant ſimplie to ſay, That no impediment ſhould be able to withhold the Lord from gathering in his Church. Alſo that he ſhall haue meanes readie, that not one of the elect which hee was pleaſed to cal, ſhuld faint in the mid way.

Anſ.

Verſ. 21. And I will take of them for Prieſts, and for Leuits, ſaith the Lord.

THe Prophet amplifies that which he hath alreadie ſaid touching this extraordinary grace of God. He hath already ſhewed that the Church of God ſhould be gathered out of all nations: ſo as in deſpite of all impediments and difficulties that might be oppoſed, yet the nations farre off ſhuld be brought to the holy mountaine. Now he paſſeth on further, and teacheth that the Gentiles ſhould be aduanced to a ſoueraigne degree of honour, beſides their adoption. It was much that they had attained vnto alreadie; to wit, that prophane people ſhould be receiued in among the holy people: but now behold here a thing more admirable, to ſee them exalted into ſo ſupreme a degree of dignitie. Hence we may perceiue that the Prieſthood vnder Chriſt, differs much from that which was vnder the Law. For vnder it only one tribe was admitted to offer ſacrifices: Exod. 28. 1. The Gentiles were reiected as vncleane, neither durſt they once enter into the Temple: ſo farre was it off that they might bee permitted to be Prieſts. But now all are indifferently receiued.

Great difference betweene the Prieſthood vnder Chriſt, and that vnder the law.

Some expound this place generally, That the Gentiles ſhall be Prieſts: that is to ſay, ſhall offer themſelues to God; for ſo the ſcriptures in many places calles all by the name of a royall Prieſthood: Exod. 19. 6. 1. Pet. 2. 9. Reu. 1. 6. and 5. 10. Yet it ſeemes hee ſhould eſpecially note out the Miniſters and teachers here, whom God ſhould choſe out from among the Gentiles; and ordaine them to execute that noble and excellent office: namely to preach the Goſpell. As for example, Luke, Timothie, and the reſt, who offered vnto God by the Goſpell ſpirituall ſacrifices.

Verſ. 22. For as the new heauens, and the new earth which I will make, ſhall remaine before mee, ſaith the Lord, ſo ſhall your ſeed and your name continue.

HEere hee promiſeth that the Church ſhal be ſo reſtored, that it ſhall indure for euer: for many might feare that ſhe would be laid waſte the ſecond time. Her eſtate then ſhall be perpetuall, after God ſhall haue once againe reſtored her: for which cauſe, he mentions two excellent benefits; to wit, reſtauration, and eternitie.

When hee ſpeakes of the new heauens, and new earth, hee hath reſpect vnto Chriſts kingdome, by whom all things are renued: as the Apoſtle ſhewes in Heb. 9. 8. 13. Now this renuēt hath this end; namely, that the church might continue alwaies in her happy and floriſhing eſtate: for that which is old, tends to ruine; but things which are new made and renued, are to laſt long.

God had promiſed that as long as the Sun and Moone ſhould remaine in the heauens, they ſhould be witneſſes of the eternall ſucceſſion of Dauids poſteritie, which ſhould neuer faile: Pſal. 89. 36, 37. But in reſpect that by the diſloyaltie and vnthankfulneſſe of this people which came betweene, there was ſome interruption: the reſtauration wrought by Chriſt hath really confirmed this propheſie.

The promiſe recorded in Pſal. 89. 36. 37. really confirmed by Chriſt.

fie. Iſaiah therfore rightly affirmes that their ſonnes, and their ſonnes ſonnes ſhould ſucceed. And as God hath eſtabliſhed the world, that it ſhould neuer periſh: ſo ſhall the ſucceſſion of the Church be perpetuall, that it ſhall endure from age to age. In a word, he explanes that which he had ſaid before touching the renuing of the world: leſt any man ſhould thinke he referres this to trees, beaſts or to the courſe of the ſtarres: for it ought rather to be applied to the renuement of the inward man. The ancient fathers haue miſſed the marke, whileſt they imagined that theſe things appertained precisely to the laſt iudgement, and haue neither weighed the ſcope of the text, nor the Apoſtles authoritie. And yet I denie not but we may extend theſe things to the laſt day, becauſe we cannot expect the perfect reſtauration of all things, vntill Chriſt, who is the life of the world, ſhall appeare. But we muſt begin higher, namely, at this deliuerance, by which Chriſt regenerates his, that they may bee new creatures: as it is in 2. Cor. 7. 1.

To what this renument ought chiefly to be referred.

Verſ. 23. And from moneth to moneth, and from Sabbath to Sabbath, ſhall all fleſh come to worſhip before mee, ſaith the Lord.

THe Prophet ſhewes againe what difference there ſhould bee betweene Gods ſpirituall worſhippe, ſuch as it ſhould be vnder the kingdome of Chriſt; and the carnall, which was vnder the Law. Euery moneth in the new Moone they ſacrificed; then there were Sabbaths, and other feaſts, and ſolemne daies appointed, which they carefully kept. But vnder the kingdome of Chriſt, there ſhall be a perpetuall and continuall ſolemnitie. For there is no more any certaine daies aſſigned to ſacrifice this or that in Ieruſalem, verſ. 19. But our feaſts, offerings, and daies of reioicing, haue a continuall courſe from day to day. In the meane while, hee alludes to the ancient cuſtome of the ſacrifices: and we haue ſeene in many places heeretofore, that theſe phraſes of ſpeech are very familiar with the Prophets. Thus then God would haue vs to offer him ſacrifices in righteouſneſſe daily: not at ſet times onely, nor ſuch as were offered vnder the Law, or according to theirs among the Papiſts, who now fondly reſt in their ceremonies, as if their ſinnes were aboliſhed by ſuch baggage; where with a deſperate ſhameleſneſſe, they dare brag that they ſacrifice Chriſt himſelfe. But of vs God requires ſpirituall ſacrifices: that is to ſay, that we honor and worſhip him with a pure and ſincere worſhip.

What ſacrifices God requires of vs.

Whereas ſome would prooue from this place, that the Law and ancient ceremonies are aboliſhed; mee thinks it hath but little ground. I grant that theſe legall ceremonies are aboliſhed, and it may bee ſo collected frō this place: but were I to proue this point, I would chuſe out other teſtimonies of greater weight. For he makes heere an oppoſition onely betweene the Sabbaths, and feaſt daies, which they ſolemnized vnder the Law, and that perpetuall Sabbath which is now celebrated.

Verſ. 24. And they ſhall goe forth, and looke vpon the carkaſes of men that haue tranſgreſſed againſt mee: for their worme ſhall not die, neither ſhall their fire be quenched, and they ſhall be an abhorring to all fleſh.

WEe neede not ſeeke out heere any far fetched interpretations. For in plaine termes hee admoniſheth thoſe which ſhould be gathered into the Church, that round about them, they ſhall behold the ſtarefull vengeance of God. His meaning is not that theſe calamities ſhall breake in among the troope of the faithfull; for it ſhould much leſſen the felicitie of the Church: vpon which God manifeſts all ſorts of teſtimonies of ioy and gladneſſe. But, as formerly he hath ſpoken of that perpetuall glory wherewith God will beautifie his choſen; ſo now he ſhewes what puniſhments the wicked ſhall indure, that the faithfull might bee the more carefull to hold themſelues in the feare of God.

Whereas he threatens them to be tormented with fire; I haue told you heeretofore, that this is a figuratiue kind of ſpeech, which alſo cleerely appeares by the other part of this verſe: for there ſhall come no wormes out of the earth, to gnaw the hearts of the vnbeleeuers. The plaine meaning is then, that mens euill conſciences ſhall play the tormentors to vex them continually, and that a more fearefull torment is prepared for them, then all torments (in the world) beſides. In a word, that they ſhall be affrighted, and cruelly diſquieted, after an horrible maner: as if a worme ſhould lie gnawing at the heart of a man: or as if a fire ſhould euer burne him, and yet they ſhould neuer die. Now in reſpect that the wicked are heere aduanced to great honours, from whence they ſcorne the godly, and trample them vnder their feete: therefore the Prophet denounceth againſt them, a terrible change, namely, that they ſhall bee inwrapped with extreame ignominie, with vnſpeakable torments. For it is good reaſon that ſuch as haue contemned and ſcorned Gods glory, ſhould be couered ouer with all reproches, and made abominable both to Angels, and to all the world.

Now vnto God onely wiſe, be honour, and glory, for euer and euer, Amen.

FINIS.

A Table of such places as are alleaged in this Commentarie, out of the old and new Testament.

The first numbers direct to the places alleaged: the second, to the Chapter and Verse in the Prophecie, where they are to be found.

Genesis.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
1	1	43	13
		45	12
	2	45	18
		41	29
		48	13
	7	45	12
	26	6	8
	27	17	7
		30	23
	28	65	25
2	9	38	7
	15	45	12
		51	3
	19	34	16
3	5	14	14
	6	43	27
	16	65	23
	17	24	6
	18	Ibid.
	22	16	3
	23	51	3
4	7	59	12
	11	26	21
	13	26	11
	26	43	22
6	5	22	13
		42	25
7	12	24	17
	15	34	16
9	9	45	18
	11	55	9
	13	38	7
			21
10	11	23	13
11	5	63	19
	7	Ibid.
	29	19	21
	31	37	12
		41	2
		44	7
12	3	14	30
		49	24
	7	41	2
	17	14	27
		29	22
		34	16
		41	2
			4
13	18	41	2
14	6	21	2
	15	41	2
	16	29	22
		41	4
	17	41	5
15	1	25	9
	1	37	23
	5	45	25
		51	1
		55	3
		56	3
	13	48	3
	14	45	4
16	2	51	1
17	1	23	18
		58	2
	5	51	1
		66	20
	7	14	32
		37	23
		41
		45	25
		55	3
	8	63	18
18	21	34	5
		3	9
	20	6	8
		63	19
	23	65	8
19	24	1	9
		13	19
		26	11
		34	9
	37	15	1
20	2	22	21
	3	14	17
		34	16
		38	4
		41	2
	14	29	22
	16	4	1
	18	41	4
21	10	4	1
22	1	6	8
	2	57	5
	10	37	38
		66	3
	12	57	5
	16	57	5
	17	10	22
		48	19
		56	3
		51	1
		61	9
	18	42	6
		60	3
			23

THE TABLE.

Genesis.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
23	6	41	2
25	1	19	21
	13	21	11
	22	4	1
	25	44	2
27	30	26	11
		28	19
30	20	65	11
32	10	26	12
30	28	1	3
		48	1
36	8	11	14
		34	5
		6	31
37	13	6	8
39	5	65	8
46	6	52	4
47	30	38	16
48	4	8	21
		63	18
	16	4	1

Exod.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
1	11	45	7
	14	10	24
2	11	51	8
	23	45	7
3	6	8	14
		38	10
	8	32	13
	12	37	30
	14	47	8
	15	55	3
	17	32	13
4	22	14	2
		43	4
5	3	52	12

Exodvs.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
7	13	26	10
	20	43	19
8	15	2	17
		28	16
	27	52	12
9	21	2	17
	34	2	17
10	22	43	19
		50	3
12	3	38	7
	13	66	19
	29	73	36
		43	16
	23	4	5
	31	52	12
	51	11	11
		42	24
		48	8
13	9	43	16
	21	4	5
		16	3
		38	7
		49	10
14	4	33	21
	4	43	21
	21	11	15
		23	11
		43	16
		50	2
		51	15
	22	55	12
	27	52	4
	28	10	26
		43	1
	29	17	16
		44	27
		63	13
15	1	51
16	35	49	10
17	2	63	10
	6	48	21
		49	10
18	21	32	1
19	6	1	9

Exodvs.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
			11
		17	7
		1	21
		41	8
			14
		43	14
		61	1
		66	21
19	20	2	3
20	1	25	9
	2	43	18
	4	36	10
	5	10	15
		42	8
	5	14	21
	8	58	13
	24	45	13
		37	26
		56	7
22	22	1	17
	27	10	2
23	8	1	23
		5	23
25	17	6	2
		38	15
27	1	17	8
28	1	66	21
29	13	53	10
	24	60	6
30	25	43	24
31	12	56	2
	15	56	2
32	13	64	8
	32	4	3
33	1	55	3
	9	6	4
34	6	9	19
		28	21
		30	13
	7	14	21
	30	29	12

Levit.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
4	4	53	10
6	13	2	7
8	29	60	6
10	1	6	7
11	7	65	4
18	5	53	11
19	17	1	11
23	39	54	2
25	20	61	2
26	3	30	23
		34	16
	8	17	9
	10	65	22
	11	66	1
	12	24	5
	16	24	6
	22	65	23
	26	3	1
	36	In the preface.

Numb.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
11	1	63	10
12	6	1	1
14	14	16	3
15	38	57	8
20	3	63	10
	12	43	27
21	8	38	7
	9	11	10
23	10	38	10
	19	26	19
	23	3	2
24	23	29	19
33	55	14	28

Devt.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
2	33	17	2
4	7	5	13
	12	40	18
	33	50	2
	37	41	8
5	32	30	21
5	9	14	21
6	3	32	13
	5	1	11
		65	10
	8	49	16
	9	57	8
	13	19	18
3	7	41	9
	8	63	9
9	5	41	9
10	12	1	4
11	11	30	20
	20	57	8
12	13	1	29
	18	9	3
		62	9
13	3	57	11
14	8	65	4
16	19	1	23
		5	23
17	16	2	7
		19	17
		30	1
	20	30	21
18	10	30	21
	11	8	19
		44	25
		65	4
	15	41	27
	17	In the preface.
24	1	50	1
28	11	1	19
	15	24	6

Devt.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
	25	3	12
	28	18	22
		22	2
		43	28
	30	65	22
	39	17	10
	33	62	8
	37	19	17
		43	28
	48	65	23
	62	30	17
	64	16	4
	65	65	23
	66	In the preface.
	67	21	12
29	4	63	17
30	3	43	5
	4	In the pref.
		11	12
	12	30	16
		48	17
		55	10
	19	48	17
		53	11
32	1	1	2
		5	1
		34	1
	4	24	16
		26	7
	9	19	24
	11	31	5
		46	3
		63	9
	13	49	11
	15	5	2
		44	2
		63	8
	21	55	6
	27	48	11
	29	27	11
		48	18
	30	17	9
		42	24

Ioshv.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
3	16	11	16
		43	16
		50	2
		55	12
			10

THE TABLE.

Ioshv.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
10	10	28	21
	13	30	26
23	2	29	22
		43	27

Ivdges.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
6	17	7	12
		38	7
	36	38	7
	37	7	12
7	16	9	4
	19	9	4
	22	49	26
	25	10	26
13	22	6	5

1. Sam.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
4	1	1	1
3	15	1	1
4	11	26	2
9	9	1	1
		21	6
10	10	48	14
25	12	1	12
			29
		38	3
		65	4
			11
16	11	11	1
24	4	7	20

2. Sam.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
5	20	28	21
	25	28	21
7	12	9	7
		10	27
		22	22
		55	3
		62	12
	13	29	1
	14	9	6
		37	35
		64	8
24	14	27	7

1. King.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
1	2	22	15
2	10	38	10
4	25	62	8
5	1	23	12
8	27	42	22
	30	6	1
	33	56	7
10	21	61	9
	27	61	9
11	7	15	2
		16	12
	11	9	1
	14	45	7
	36	7	2
12	28	22	23
17	1	38	7
19	11	2	22
	18	45	23
20	23	14	25
22	21	19	14
		41	13

2. King.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
3	5	16	1
	6	16	1
10	27	30	40
15	5	6	1
16	2	32	1
	5	7	1
	9	7	16
	11	8	2
17	1	7	16
18	4	36	1
			10
	11	9	1
		37	12
	14	33	7
		36	2
	17	7	3
		20	1
	27	7	3
		20	1
	37	22	15
19	2	22	15
	12	37	12
	28	43	3
	35	14	25
		22	3
		30	25
		31	8
20	8	38	7
			22
	11	30	26
21	13	28	17
		34	11
23	10	30	33

1. Chro.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
14	11	28	21

2. Chro.		Chap. Vers.
Chap.	Vers.	Isaiah.
26	21	6	1
30	5	36	1
32	31	39	1

Ezra.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
3	8	58	12
6	8	45	14

Nehem.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
2	8	45	14

Hester.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
4	3	6	3
7	10	22	17

Ioe.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Verſ.	Chap.	Verſ.
1	1	59	15
5	13	31	2
		47	10
7	1	16	14
	14	38	15
9	15	38	15
12	18	11	5
		22	21
		45	1
13	15	26	8
	24	38	15
14	5	38	5
	6	16	14
26	12	51	15
29	37	38	15

Psalme.		Isaiah.
	Verſ.	Chap.	Verſ.
1	5	37	7
		41	16
2	1	54	15
	7	42	7
	7	9	6
	8	42	7
		66	20
	9	42	3
	10	49	23
		60	16
	11	49	23
		60	16
5	9	45	13
6	4	38	13
		24	16
	7	38	3
7	9	38	3
	10	24	6
	15	10	1
	16	33	11
		59	5
	18	45	8
9	16	59	5

Psalme.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Verſ.	Chap.	Verſ.
11	7	14	5
		24	16
12	7	45	19
14	1	40	27
	3	53	6
15	1	11	9
	2	48	2
	5	57	6
17	3	38	3
18	2	38	9
	8	48	21
	10	63	19
	26	24	4
	27	13	9
		14	29
19	5	28	10
	9	6	10
	11	66	2
22	10	44	24
	11	46	3.4
	18	38	13
	19	50	4
	27	45	13
23	4	26	8
24	3	11	9
	4	48	2
25	3	54	4
27	1	38	9
	8	38	11
30	6	64	4
	7	38	17
	10	38	10
31	20	30	26
		55	1
32	6	55	6
	9	30	28
33	3	42	10
	9	48	13
	11	14	27

Psalme.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Verſ.	Chap.	Verſ.
	10	22	9
	22	33	2
34	11	33	16
	17	14	20
36	7	30	23
37	1	26	14
		45	16
	3	44	20
	5	26	7
		63	16
	15	33	11
38	4	38	13
39	2	3	10
	10	38	2
			15
40	7	50	5
41	2	16	4
42	3	38	11
45	8	11	2
	13	1	8
46	5	8	7
		45	13
	6	33	21
		45.	13,13
	10	32	18
47	3	48	13
48	2	14	13
49	15	50	9
50	10	66	2
	13	1	11
	14	34	7
	15	38	4
		43	22
		56	15
	23	12	2
		56	7
51	17	35	5
	19	66	2
53	4	53	6

THE TABLE.

Psalme.	Verf.	Isaiah. Chap.	Verf.
55	22	11	8
56	7	60	9
57	7	33	11
58	11	41	15
59	11	40	6
62	10	40	17
63	2	55	2
63	4	26	1
65	2	29	23
	4	45	24
66	12	43	2
68	19	53	12
69	10	22	4
71	9	46	4
72	3	45	8
73	1	60	21
	3	38	10
	13	13	13
	17	24	16
		26	14
74	1	14	1
	9	40	15
77	2	25	6
		26	10
		42	1
		45	14
		48	13
		54	5
78	28	57	16
	39	2	22
		57	16
	70	11	1
79	2	14	18
	12	65	6
80	9	3	13
		5	1
			7
81	6	33	19
82	1	3	13
			14
	6	14	10
83	14	9	18
		10	3
84	11	45	8
	12	4	2
86	4	51	9
87	7	44	5
89	5	12	27
		19	1
	26	11	14
	37	29	1
		38	5
		66	22
	38	38	5
		66	22
90	4	43	19
	5	46	5
	9	65	20
	10	23	15
		65	20
91	11	26	7
		37	36
		62	6
93	1	54	10
94	17	6	5
95	8	30	8
96	1	42	10
	4	36	18
			19
97	2	6	4
99	5	60	13
101	5	2	11
102	15	66	10
	19	29	23
		51	18
	24	53	18
	27	51	6
			8
	29	37	26
		51	8
		54	10
103	5	40	31
	11	55	8
	12	38	17
	13	57	16
	14	57	16
	15	40	6
		57	16
		64	5
	17	51	8
104	2	40	22
	3	19	1
	23	5	11
	29	2	22
	30	32	15
		40	7
		44	3
			4
105	14	41	2
			4
107	33	45	18
110	3	1	7
	6	42	3
112	6	14	20
	9	32	8
114	3	43	20
	4	43	20
		55	12
115	3	66	1
	8	41	29
	17	38	18
116	10	26	19
	12	24	15
	15	26	21
	16	4	1
118	8	31	3
	18	21	17
			22

THE TABLE.

Psalme.		Isaiah.
	Verſ.	Chap.	Verſ.
	22	8	14
119	103	66	2
	105	6	10
	24	39	3
120	5	63	18
121	4	5	27
	6	4	6
123	2	7	1
125	3	63	17
126	1	49	7
		66	8
	5	25	8
		30	19
127	2	71	11
		47	13
		57	9
	5	3	4
		48	19
128	2	17	11
		62	9
129	3	51	23
	6	37	27
	8	37	27
130	3	33	16
132	1	63	17
	7	60	13
	8	66	1
	11	22	22
	14	11	10
		29	1
		30	4
		37	10
		26	35
		45	13
		66	1
137	4	26	1
	5	33	20
	6	52	1
	8	1	8
	9	13	18
138	6	57	15

Psalme.		Isaiah.
	Verſ.	Chap.	Verſ.
	8	22	11
		16	12
		46	4
139	7	24	21
141	2	37	4
142	6	12	3
		44	3
		55	2
144	15	51	21
145	8	9	10
	10	1	15
146	3	31	3
	4	31	3
147	2	56	8
		60	4
	4	40	16
	9	26	7
	20	19	24

Prov.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Verſ.	Chap.	Verſ.
1	7	19	11
		27	11
		33	6
9	10	33	6
10	1	29	22
	7	14	20
14	13	51	11
	16	59	15
16	1	26	7
	12	22	23
17	22	76	13
21	30	8	9
25	5	22	23
29	18	3	4
30	19	9	14

Eccles.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Verſ.	Chap.	Verſ.
8	11	2	11
		24	16
		28	24
10	12	5	11

Ierem.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Verſ.	Chap.	Verſ.
1	5	49	1
	6	6	11
	10	47	1
	18	50	7
2	11	44	14
	21	3	13
		5	1
3	1	30	1
	2	57	5
4	31	22	4
7	4	1	11
		8	18
		22	3
		29	1
		64	10
	11	56	7
	13	65	2
	21	1	11
	21	22	4
10	8	40	18
	14	2	8
	23	26	7
	24	27	8
		30	18
		64	8
11	7	65	2
	21	30	10
17	1	30	8
		65	6
	5	2	22
		9	6
		31	3
		36	6
			10
		57	13
18	12	57	10
19	6	30	33
			22

THE TABLE.

Ierem.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Verſ.	Chap.	Verſ.
22	19	14	18
23	7	43	18
	24	66	1
	36	13	1
24	6	49	16
	9	18	2
25	15	51	17
27	10	2	4
30	11	30	18
31	25	29	22
	34	11	9
32	18	14	21
		65	6
35	14	65	2
43	2	30	10
48	2	25	10
	7	15	2
	13	15	2
	14	16	6
	32	16	8
			9
	34	15	5

Lament.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Verſ.	Chap.	Verſ.
1	4	32	10
	7	30	10
	20	41	27
2	5	29	2
	7	32	10
3	22	1	9
	29	29	22
		52	8
	38	41	23

Ezek.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Verſ.	Chap.	Verſ.
3	8	50	7
8	3	48	5
16	3	1	4
		57	3
	26	30	1
18	2	50	1
	20	14	21
		43	27
		65	7
	21	31	6
20	21	26	13
	22	56	2
	24	26	13
	29	57	6
26	2	23	1
33	31	48	1
34	4	56	11
	23	2	4
	24	2	4
36	22	37	35
		43	25
	25	1	16
		44	3
37	12	9	2
	24	2	4
		9	7
		37	35
		45	1
	25	2	4
43	15	29	1
45	22	53	10
47	1	2	3

Daniel.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Verſ.	Chap.	Verſ.
1	6	66	13
2	14	46	11
5	2	45	9
	28	21	7
	30	13	12
		47	11
		21	4
7	27	9	7

Daniel.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Verſ.	Chap.	Verſ.
		16	5
9	2	40	1
	24	10	23
			27

Hosea.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Verſ.	Chap.	Verſ.
1	7	27	12
	10	9	2
		56	3
		57	19
2	2	44	9
		57	5
	5	2	20
	18	11	6
		35	9
	19	1	21
	20	56	6
		61	10
		62	4
3	4	3	2
	5	37	35
		45	1
4	15	57	5
6	6	1	18
		58	9
		61	8
12	1	55	2
13	11	3	4

Ioel.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Verſ.	Chap.	Verſ.
1	14	20	2
		58	5
2	13	22	12
	28	19	19
	31	13	13
	32	4	3
		14	22

Amos.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Verſ.	Chap.	Verſ.
1	3	17	3
3	6	41	22
			7

THE TABLE.

Amos.	Isaiah.
Chap. Vers.	Chap. Vers.
1 7	41 23
11	7 8
4 1	17 4
	28 1
5 10	21 21
11	5 9
18	66 5
19	24 17
6 11	51 9
8 11	30 21
9 11	9 7

Ionah.	Isaiah.
Chap. Vers.	Chap. Vers.
1 2	14 27
	34 16
	38 4
3 4	38 4
10	14 27

Miche.	Isaiah.
Chap. Vers.	Chap. Vers.
1 11	10 2
2 11	30 10
5 10	2 13
6 7	1 11
7 9	26 20
16	29 22
18	38 17

Nahvm.	Isaiah.
Chap. Vers.	Chap. Vers.
3 8	19 13
15	34 4

Habac.	Isaiah.
Chap. Vers.	Chap. Vers.
1 16	10 10
	45 3
	36 18
2 1	18 4
	26 20
2 8	1

Habac.	Chap. Vers.
Chap. Vers.	Isaiah.
11	34 14
18	40 18
3 2	36 18
	19
	47 6
	60 10
	64 11
14	40 3
	45 1

Soph.	Isaiah.
Chap. Vers.	Chap. Vers.
1 5	8 21

Haggai.	Isaiah.
Chap. Vers.	Chap. Vers.
1 4	44 28
2 4	9 3
7	43 19
10	54 2
	1
14	1 16

Zacha.	Isaiah.
Chap. Vers.	Chap. Vers.
1 12	62 7
15	47 6
2 5	54 2
8	14 14
	16 4
12	4 2
13 4	20 2

Mala.	Isaiah.
Chap. Vers.	Chap. Vers.
1 4	34 11
4	23 17
4	34 10
6	46 3
11	19 19
2 7	42 19
4 2	25 7
	54 2
	60 3
14	40 1

Mat.	Isaiah.
Chap. Vers.	Chap. Vers.
1 15	16 1

Matth.	Isaiah.
Chap. Vers.	Chap. Vers.
2 24	7 14
2 11	60 6
4 14	19 1
3 2	6 10
3	40 3
12	26 2
	66 21
12	18 6
16	6 1
	42 3
4 14	9 2
5 10	16 5
11	16 5
13	28 7
44	41 15
45	5 2
	13 10
	30 26
6 8	37 14
23	28 7
	29 14
21	12 6
24	39 8
7 2	16 3
	2 12
	30 31
	41 15
7	55 6
11	49 15
23	43 1
8 4	42 2
16	53 4
	1 18
9 13	58 9
	61 8
38	49 17
10 1	60 10
5	6 1
27	22 1
28	2 22
29	45 12
11 5	11 4
5	35 5
19	41 26
	27

THE TABLE.

Matth. Chap.	Matth. Vers.	Isaiah. Chap.	Isaiah. Vers.
	27	2	5
	28	11	4
		28	12
		50	4
		61	1
11	30	30	6
		42	3
12	7	50	9
		61	8
		1	18
	17	42	1
	29	49	24
	39	42	3
13	25	11	18
15	7	29	13
	9	29	13
	13	60	21
	14	8	20
16	18	49	16
	19	22	22
17	21	58	5
19	7	50	1
	11	19	21
	12	19	21
20	13	56	7
21	23	29	21
	43	65	2
	44	8	15
22	2	25	6
	17	29	21
	18	43	3
	23	26	19
	37	26	9
23	13	42	3
	23	1	18
	37	31	05
25	1	43	1
26	66	53	9
27	12	53	7
	14	53	7
	31	50	4

Matth. Chap.	Matth. Vers.	Isaiah. Chap.	Isaiah. Vers.
	51	56	7
		65	24
28	18	14	2
		61	6

Marke. Chap.	Marke. Vers.	Isaiah. Chap.	Isaiah. Vers.
1	3	40	3
4	32	11	1
5	43	42	2
11	17	56	7
12	10	8	14
15	14	53	9
	28	33	12
16	15	2	3
		56	3
		65	2
	20	10	22
		60	8

Luke. Chap.	Luke. Vers.	Isaiah. Chap.	Isaiah. Vers.
1	34	9	7
		16	5
	35	53	2
	75	9	7
		32	16
		43	21
2	7	1	3
	46	2	3
	50	7	15
3	4	40	3
	17	18	6
	18	61	1
6	25	12	2
7	35	41	26
10	16	7	13
11	17	11	3
	22	49	24
12	32	1	9
		44	2

Luke. Chap.	Luke. Vers.	Isaiah. Chap.	Isaiah. Vers.
13	17	1	21
16	15	45	20
		55	8
	29	8	20
17	27	22	13
18	7	26	21
21	18	47	6
	19	38	10
22	25	13	2
	37	2	4
23	30	12	21
24	47	2	3
		45	14

John. Chap.	John. Vers.	Isaiah. Chap.	Isaiah. Vers.
1	13	49	21
	14	25	9
	16	11	2
		12	3
		55	1
	18	9	6
		25	9
	23	40	3
	29	40	3
		53	7
	32	6	1
		42	3
2	22	43	10
3	14	11	10
	16	12	5
		45	22
	29	5	1
4	10	55	1
	12	5	16
	22	25	9
		45	14
	23	46	2
		56	7
		66	23
	24	6	1
		66	1
5	29	26	19
	33	50	11

THE TABLE.

IOHN.		ISAIAH.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
6	27	49	5
	44	6	10
		8	18
	45	50	5
		54	13
7	12	50	6
8	6	29	21
	36	35	10
		42	22
		43	8
		53	6
		61	1
	44	41	22
10	3	45	3
	16	42	4
		49	17
		59	20
	27	11	12
	28	8	18
	29	40	12
12	35	55	6
	37	53	1
	38	53	1
	39	6	10
	41	6	1,10
	48	55	11
13	3	42	1
14	6	22	22
		49	6
14	17	11	2
15	1	5	7
	2	5	7
	8	49	4
	15	9	6
		41	8
		43	4
16	8	2	4
	21	26	17
17	1	49	3
	3	9	11
	6	8	18
	10	42	1
	19	53	11
	20	53	17

IOHN.		ISAIAH.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
18	36	60	10
	38	53	4
19	16	53	9
	17	9	6
	24	50	4
	38	53	9
20	8	43	10
	22	6	1
	23	43	25
		63	12

ACTS.		ISAIAH.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
2	3	4	5
		6	1
	16	19	19
	41	43	8
3	12	48	5
	21	26	19
		35	1
		65	17
	22	In the preface.
4	11	28	16
5	41	35	10
		51	8
7	2	37	12
		44	7
	4	37	12
	48	66	1
	51	43	27
8	22	37	4
10	24	56	3
	26	49	23
	27	1	1
13	5	1	1
	47	49	6
	48	8	18
		54	13
14	1	1	1
	14	49	23
	17	40	21
15	20	50	6

ACTS.		ISAIAH.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
17	2	1	1
	10	1	1
	24	66	1
	25	46	5
	28	10	5
		40	17
	29	40	18
18	4	1	1
	19	1	1
20	35	6	16
21	4	23	18
	28	56	5
23	8	29	12
		30	33
24	15	26	19
27	24	65	24
28	25	6	10
	27	6	10

ROMANS.		ISAIAH.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
1	5	55	5
	8	37	4
	17	10	22
	19	42	18
	20	38	11
		63	17
2	5	22	14
	15	58	1
	26	52	1
	27	50	8
3	2	61	9
	3	46	13
	12	35	6
	17	59	8
	20	53	11
	24	42	6
	26	45	25
	29	54	5
4	2	45	25
	15	53	11
	17	66	20
	18	36	15
		40	12
		43	14
			19

THE TABLE.

Romans.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Verſ.	Chap.	Verſ.
	19	40	12
		51	1
		56	3
	20	40	12
		56	3
	24	51	3
5	1	9	6
		28	16
		32	18
		45	24
		53	5
		56	7
		57	2
	2	45	24
	3	35	10
	10	53	11
	19	53	7,13
6	9	9	7
		53	8
7	14	10	1
8	3	53	10,11
	15	50	7
		66	7
	12	61	1
	22	38	10
	23	35	7
		45	15
	24	9	6
		36	15
	25	26	16
		38	2
			4
			14
	27	16	5
		26	19
		55	13
	29	8	18
	30	8	9
	31	51	12
	32	55	10
	33	50	8
	38	37	36
9	3	17	12
	4	41	8
		56	7
	6	1	9
		43	6
	7	66	20
	18	63	17

Romans.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Verſ.	Chap.	Verſ.
	21	49	9
	22	13	5
		27	7
	25	9	2
		57	19
	28	10	23
	29	1	9
	33	8	14
		26	16
10	5	53	11
	8	55	6
			10
		53	11
	10	45	23
	12	49	6
	14	19	21
			22
		33	2
	15	62	7
		52	7
	16	53	1
	17	55	3
		65	11
	19	65	2
		66	18
	20	65	2
11	1	59	20
	4	45	23
	12	6	3
	17	5	7
	24	65	5
	25	66	18
	26	59	20
	29	19	25
		41	9
		59	20
	34	40	13
12	1	19	21
		60	6
		61	6
		66	20
	8	23	18
	20	11	14
13	1	16	5
		22	20
			23
	12	56	1
14	10	45	23
	11	19	18
		45	23

Romans.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Verſ.	Chap.	Verſ.
	17	1	11
		35	10
		56	7
15	6	12	1
	8	42	6
	16	11	4
		18	7
		61	6
		66	20
	21	52	15
16	9	53	8
	20	27	1
	27	55	5
		61	2

1. Cor.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Verſ.	Chap.	Verſ.
1	20	33	18
2	9	64	3
3	2	54	13
	6	52	11
	7	55	10
		61	3
	10	54	12
	11	28	16
	12	54	12
	13	54	12
	16	61	1
	19	31	2
4	4	49	4
		50	8
	9	25	8
	11	65	13
	13	51	8
6	11	41	8
	19	52	11
7	7	19	21
	9	19	21
	29	38	16
8	4	41	24
9	16	40	6
10	11	2	2
	13	27	8
		45	11
11	3	4	1

THE TABLE.

1. Cor.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
	30	38	16
12	3	35	5
		48	16
	4	48	16
		61	1
	12	49	3
13	3	58	10
14	20	28	9
	21	28	13
15	32	22	13
	36	6	13
		26	19
		28	23

2. Cor.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
1	20	7	14
		9	6
	42	1	9
		63	17
2		16	11	4
		14	29
		49	5
		62	7
3	5	45	4
		49	17
	6	44	22
	7	55	3
	16	29	12
	18	2	2
4	3	49	19
	6	25	1
	8	40	31
	13	26	10
	17	26	20
		54	7
		61	7
5	15	18	7
	17	61	3
		66	22
	18	2	4
	20	53	11
		57	19
	21	53	10
6	2	49	8

2. Cor.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
	2	49	8
		61	2
	8	50	6
	16	44	28
	17	52	11
7	1	52	11
	10	22	13
9	7	23	18
		43	22
		56	5
	9	32	8
10	4	62	6
	6	11	4
11	2	5	1
	2	62	5
	14	36	10
12	7	39	5
	9	40	29
			31
	9	14	18
	10	14	18
13	4	53	12

Galat.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
1	8	8	20
	15	49	1
2	8	1	1
3	12	53	11
	13	53	10
	16	49	3
	24	65	20
4	4	49	8
		61	2
	6	56	57
	28	60	21
5	6	52	1
	22	58	6
6	1	11	2
	6	32	8
	10	28	13
	14	14	18
	16	45	25

Ephes.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
1	3	32	3
	4	24	1
		37	26
		41	8
		43	21
		49	1
		60	21
		61	3
	5	7	14
	6	46	13
	8	42	1
		54	10
	10	11	6
		49	5
		51	16
	12	60	21
	17	9	6
	21	37	36
	23	37	26
		45	14
2	2	10	6
	10	19	25
		27	11
		37	26
		43	1
			15
		15	13
	12	19	25
		56	3
	13	54	5
		56	3
	14	27	6
		49	8
		66	22
		26	6
		45	20
	17	42	6
		46	8
		57	19
	18	65	24
	19	63	7
	21	6	13
3	9	49	6
	10	49	6
	12	45	24
		65	24
	17	45	24
	20	2	7
4	7	54	13
	8	53	12
	11	49	5
			13

THE TABLE.

Ephes.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
	13	54	13
	15	28	16
	28	23	18
	30	63	10
5	14	9	2
	29	9	16
6	9	24	2
	12	9	6
	17	8	20

Philip.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
1	6	22	11
		26	12
		35	9
		40	31
2	6	42	1
		52	14
	8	53	7
			12
	9	53	8
	15	44	21
4	1	49	5
	4	22	13
	5	35	4
		55	6
	6	35	4
	7	32	18
		33	20
		61	7

Colos.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
1	13	6	1
		37	26
2	9	9	6
		33	6
	14	23	15
	23	1	14
			29
		19	21
3	1	6	7
	3	26	19
	15	9	6
		12	2
		61	7

1. Thes.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
2	19	49	5
4	7	44	20
5	3	15	1
		47	11
		29	17

2. Thes.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
1	6,7	51	23
		61	2
	8	66	15
2	3	54	9
	8	11	4
	9	41	23
	11	41	22
		44	18
		57	5
		63	17

1. Tim.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
1	5	38	3
2	8	1	15
		56	7
		65	16
		66	20
3	15	40	9
		43	10
		49	3
		65	9
	16	2	4
			14
4	1	54	9
	8	30	23
		65	10
6	10	57	17
	15	37	15
	16	25	9

2. Tim.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
1	7	11	2
	12	40	12
2	13	41	10
		64	11

2. Tim.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
	19	63	8
	25	2	6
3	16	30	8
		50	4

Titus.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
1	2	25	8
	9	11	4

Hebr.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
1	3	52	9
	5	9	6
	14	62	6
		63	9
2	8	61	6
	13	8	18
	14	12	5
	17	42	1
4	9	66	23
	12	11	4
		49	2
	13	37	4
		41	25
		45	23
	15	7	15
		53	6
	16	65	25
5	4	49	1
6	16	45	23
		62	8
8	8	66	22
	13	66	13
9	12	61	6
10	31	28	19
11	3	38	11
	6	40	10
	26	51	8
	27	7	4
12	3	31	4
	12	35	4
	17	26	11
		28	19
			26

THE TABLE.

Hebr.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
	26	43	26
	29	10	17
		33	14
13	16	23	18

Iames.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
1	2	43	2
	5	47	13
	17	1	13
	18	37	26
2	13	10	3
		16	4
		47	6
4	6	10	12
		16	7
	12	33	22
	13	14	13
		26	7
5	17	38	7
	18	38	7

1. Pet.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
1	23	40	8
		29	21
	25	40	8
2	2	28	9
	4	8	15
	5	60	13
	5	60	6
		66	23
	6	28	16
	9	23	18
		41	8
		52	11
		61	6
		66	21
	9	43	21
		60	21
	22	53	6
	23	53	7
3	13	32	17
	14	8	12
4	11	21	10
	17	10	12
		13	1
		22	5
	18	21	11
5	5	16	7
	6	45	9
	7	1	17
		26	7
		41	27
		43	3

1. Pet.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
		60	19
		63	15

2. Pet.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
1	19	45	19
3	4	1	19
		38	16
	8	43	19
	18	11	9

1. Iohn.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
2	18	14	18

Ivde.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
1	7	34	9

Revel.		Isaiah.
Chap.	Vers.	Chap.	Vers.
1	6	66	21
5	10	66	21
7	4	66	19

FINIS.

A TABLE OF THE PRINCIPALL THINGS CONTAINED IN THE Commentarie: the first number shewes the Chapter: the second, the Verse.

A

Abee of the Iewes 1.13
Abimelec, what it signifies 22.21
Abstinence from flesh in the Papacie, what 22.13
Absurd collections of Iewes and Papists 60.6,7,10
Abundance sometimes blindes men 35.2
It profits nothing without Gods blessing 3.1
Abundance and excesse vsually goe together 5.11
It ordinarily begets dissolution 21.2
Abundance of the wicked accursed 3.1.& 35.6
Abraham once an Idolater 29.22
The father of many nations, and when 66.20
Deliuered often 29.22
How ignorant of the Iewes. 63.16
How far his example must be imitated 57.5.& 66.3
Why called the friend of God 41.8
Why called iustice 41.2
Brought out of Vr, in Chaldea, by the Lord 41.2
Called 51.1
His example peruersly imitated 66.3
Acception of persons hurtfull in Iudges 1.23
God accepts no persons 55.1.& 56.36
Acceptable day 49.8
Acceptable yeere 61.2
Achor a place of pasture 65.10
No acquaintance with God, vnlesse we come out of our sinnes 55.7
Adam and Christ, wherein they differ. 65.25
Adoration called Dulia, a Popish inuention 2.8
Why mens affaires haue commonly ill successe 61.8
How the affections of the faithfull must bee ordered 12.4
Naturall affections must not hinder the performance of our particular vocations 6.11
Afflictions short and momentanie 51.14. & 54.7.9. & 63.18.
Of diuers sorts 42.25.& 43.1
They must be imputed to our sinnes 1.19.& 6.4. and 65.20.25.
Sometimes grieuous 51.21
Their fruit, end, and vertue 9.1. and 10.18.20. and 19.22. and 21.11. and 22.12. and 25.3. and 26.9.10. and 16.20. and 27.7.9. and 29.19. and 35.1. and 38.13.17. and 40.31. and 41.17. and 48.10. and 59.15.
Why they tarry long 24.22.& 32.24.
Afflictions sent of God 5.26.& 10.5.26.& 13.1. and 14.5 & 16.4.& 18.3.& 19.1.& 21.1.& 22.5.& 28.& 24.6.& 29.3.& 41.25.& 42.24.& 45.7.& 47.6.& 51 17.20 & 60.10.& 61.8.& 53.6.
Afflictions no satisfactions 38.15
The best fence against afflictions 64.5
Neuer thinke of afflictions, without calling to mind thy transgressions 54.5
Ahaz ingratefull and rebellious 7.12
Ouercome in all his battailes against the Philistims 14.29
Many, taken for all 53.12
And all, taken for many 64.5
The word All, of great emphasis 10.6.7
Alluding to the deluge 24.18 & 25.2
Alluding to the pillar of fire 4.5.& 49.10
Alluding to the redemption out of Egypt. 10.24. 26. and 11.16. and 43.16. and 44.27. and 48.21 and 50.2. and 51.9,10,15. and 55.12.
The Prophets in all their sermons allude to Moses 3.12.& 11.12.& 17.9.& 22.2.& 33.14.& 43.5.28.& 49.10.
Alluding to Mount Sinai 64.1
What Almans are in warre 13.17
Alexandria, an ancient and rich Citie 19.13
Altar, taken for Gods seruice 19.19
Christ our Altar 56.7
Why God would haue but one Altar consecrated to him 1.29
Why that at Ierusalem was more holy then the rest 17.8
Christ, Gods Altar 60.7.& 56.7
In what part Amath a Citie situate 3.6.19
Ambition condemned 5.8. 22.18. & 39.5
Ambition of Hezekiah 39.2
The fond ambition of such as desire to bee subiect vnder a King that is Lord of many Countries 8.7 and 19.4.
What amitie may be had with the wicked 30.3
Amos father of Isaiah 1.1.& 2.1. & 13.1.& 20.2
Amos the Prophet foretels the captiuitie of the ten Tribes 7.8
Anabaptisticall reuelations taxed 54.13
Anabaptists would haue no Kings 60.10
Angels and their office 63.9
Christ the great Angell of the couenant 63.9
Angels Ministers of God 6.7.& 37.36
They cannot beare the Maiestie of God 6.2
Called Seraphims, powers, and why 6.2.& 37.36
God may be angry with vs, and yet loue vs 47.6. See 27.4.
Answer, to witnesse or confesse 3.9.& 59.12.
Answers giuen by false gods, what 42.9
To answer what 30.19
Antichrist shal be consumed by the breath of Gods word 11.14
The whole estate of his kingdome comprized vnder this title 14.18
The power of Antichrist decaies by little and little 14.3
Antiquitie of Israel, whence hee takes his beginning 44.7
Such as plead antiquitie, refuted 19.11.& 65.7
Errors must not bee entertained vnder pretext of

THE TABLE.

of antiquitie. 65.7
What honour is to bee attributed to antiquitie 65.7
Antwerpe a Citie, her Marchants and factors very rich 23.8
Apostasie of the Iewes 1.2. 4.21. & 5.24.
The cause of apostasie 44.21
Apostles vsed great libertie in alleaging texts of Scripture 28 16
How they are wont to alleage the prophecies 9.2
Custome of the Apostles 64.3
Arabians ruine foretold 21.13
Miserable flight of the Arabians 21.14
Arabians, vagabonds and theeues 13.20
Arke of the couenant, a testimonie of Gods presence 37.26. & 46.2
Not worshipped in stead of God, but a signe to draw the peoples mindes vp to heauen vnto the Lord 46.2
Arme taken for worke 48.14
For power 33. & 51.5. 59.16. and 62.8. & 63.12.
What difference betweene arme, and saluation 33.2
To discouer the arme 52.9. See 53.1
Ierusalem called Ariel 29.1
Armies of Easterne people very great 38.36
Armorie in Iudeah. 22.8
Senacharibs armie suddenly discomfited 37.36
Ar-Moab 15.1
Aroer, a country 17.2
Art of diuination condemned 19 12
Art Magike detestable 6.7
All liberall Arts the gifts of God 29.29
To eate ashes, what it signifies 44.20
Whether sackcloth and ashes are fitting now 58.5
Why Ashur is called Gods rod 10.5
His pride 10.9.12
Astonishment, why attributed vnto God 59.16
Assyrians taken for Chaldeans 52.4
Their armie composed of diuers nations 8.9
Why compared to a violent flood 7.20
Why to a rasor 7.20.
At what time in league with the Egyptians 19.23
Chiefe enemies of the Church 30.27
Their crueltie 30.31
In what sense called vessels of Gods wrath 13.5
Their ruine foretold 30.27,28, & 30.1.2.
Their armie discomfited 37.36
Their Monarchy composed of many nations 8.9. and 17.12
Conuerted vnto God 19.23,24
Their manner of fight 5.28
Astrologie iudiciall, and its beginning 39.12. and 44.25
Condemned 47.14
Whether vtterly or not 19.12. & 44.25
Authoritie of Christ 42.7

B

Babylon in what part situate 14.23
Why called golden 14.13.
Why called beautie of kingdomes 13.19
Why expressed vnder the name of a mountaine 13.2
Why signified vnder the word World 13.11
Punished for her idolatries 21.9
Twice subdued 13.12
Much renowned after she was subdued by the Persians 13.12
Her ruine foretold by Isaiah an hundred yeeres before it came to passe 13.1. and 21.2. and 47.9
Her ruine came of God 21.1. and 48.14
Her calamitie sudden and horrible 13.12. & 21.4
How her ruine is said to come from Iudeah 21.2
Her Monarchy tyrannous, and more mightie then any other 13.11. and 14.5.26. and 47.5
Why her King was depriued of common buriall 14.19,20
The captiuitie of the Iewes in Babylon a kinde of diuorce 50.1. and 54.5
Why compared to darknesse, death, and to a flood 9.2. and 54.9
Pleasures of Babylonians conuerted into horrors 21.4
Their couetousnesse and pride 14 3.47.7
Their pride ioined with violence and crueltie 13.11
Barrennesse of the earth a curse of God 5.10. and 15.6. and 24.5,6. and 32.13.
How much a bath containes 5.10
If Gods care extends it selfe to beasts, much more to vs 65.10
Why beasts are hurtfull to men 11.8. & 65.25
Why God sends vs to schoole to the brute beasts 1.3
In how many things they surmount man 1.3
What effects the inioying of temporall benefites ought to worke in vs 66.4.65.10. and 65.21
Gods benefits must be vsed moderately 32.10.13
Benefits of God towards Israel 1.3
End of Gods benefits 12.1
Bill of diuorce 50.1
Birds naturally desire to keepe their nests 10.14
Blessing for mirror of blessing 19.24
To make blessing what 36.16
All blessings proceed from Gods free goodnesse 65. 23
How many sorts of blessings vnder the kingdome of Christ 65.23
Gods blessing the cause of all benefits 65.23
What it is towards the faithfull 30.23
How slackened 33.6
Men nourished by Gods secret blessing 3.1
To blesse, put for Gods seruice 65.16
Few whilest they labour fix their eies vpon Gods blessing 65.23
A desirable blinding 42.16
What blinding is to be eschewed 42.18
Wilfull blindnesse of the Iewes 6.10. 29.10,11. and 42.19.21
Blood taken for inhumanitie 59.3
Bloods for murther 35.15
Bloods of the earth what 26.21
Booke taken for the Law it selfe 34.16
How the books of the Prophets were gathered 30.8
Booke of life what 4.3
Reprobates not written in it 4.3
To render into their bosome what 65.6
Brags of the wicked 59.4
Proud bragging of the Iewes 57.4. & 65.15
Brags of Papists 1.30. and 29.14. and 36.19. and 45.20. and 49.21. and 62.5
Branch put for the strongest 9.14
Bread and wine taken for ordinary food 33.16
Not bread, but Gods blessing that nourisheth 3.1
Gentiles become brethren of the Iewes 66.20
Brethren falsly so called 66.5
The hurt that comes by taking bribes 1.23. & 5.23
Burden, what it signifies 13.1. and 14.28

Buriall,

Buriall;a signe of the last resurrection 14.18
The care of buriall not to be condemned 22.17
Whether the depriuation of buriall is to bee esteemed a curse of God 14.8. See more of this in 14. 20. and 22.17.

C

CAines repentance 26.11
Why Isaiah laments the calamity of the church 15.4. and 16.9. and 21.3
Why we are called into the Church 56.7
Calling of Christ what 49.1
Calling of God cannot be disanulled 63.19
What efficacie is in Gods calling 11.12
Calling of the Gentiles foretold 2.3,4. and 11.10. and 12.5. and 14.1,2. and 19.22,23. and 25.7. and 26.15. and 42.4. 6.11. and 45.22,23,25. and 49. 6.22,21. and 52.8.15. and 54.5. and 55.4,5. and 56. 3.7. and 60.9. and 65.2. and 66.19,20.
The certaintie of our calling 65.2
The end of our calling 43.21. and 55.5. and 56.6. and 60.21. and 61.3. and 63.8.
The calling of the Gentiles admirable to the Apostles 56.3
Isaiahs calling confirmed the second time 6.1
No man ought to take vpon him the office of teaching,vnlesse he be called 61.1
God hath neuer been called vpon as a Father in the Church,otherwise then by Christ 63.16.and 65.24.
To call,what it signifies 44.5
To be called of God 43.1
Canaan,a pledge of adoption to Abrahams posteritie 14.1
Captiuitie in Babylon a kind of diuorce 50.1.54.5
Why compared to a deluge 54.9
Why to darknesse and death 9.2
Carmel a fruitfull soile 10.18. & 33.15.
The cause from whence all Gods benefits proceed 63.9
Ceremonies must not bee separate from the word 1.11
Not simply required in respect of themselues 1.11
Why ceremonies were instituted 1.13
Why reiected 1.11
Why necessary 1.11
Of themselues considered apart, vaine and friuolous 66.3
Vse of ceremonies 1.11
Abolishing of ceremonies 2.3
Vaine ceremonies established in the Papacie in stead of sacraments 20.2
Ceremonies of the Law obolished,and how 66.23
Chapters ill diuided 4.1.14. and 10.33. and 14.28. and 24.17. and 46.1. and 53.1. and 58.1. and 64.1.
Chaldea signified by the word Desert,and why 21.1
Chaldeans seuere & cruell, compared to the Egyptians 5.29.52.4
Chamos an Idoll of the Moabites 15.2
No change in God 14.17
Change of kingdomes comes of God 19.1. and 22. 21. & 41.4. & 51.6.
Change of the number vsed among the Hebrewes 23.6
A change of the person 41.24
Charra a citie 37.12
Chariots had a double vse of old 22.6
Why the chastisement of the wicked is deferred 10. 13. & 13 6. & 18.5. & 26.1. & 28.24.25. & 63.4. & 65.6.56. & 66.18.
Vnto vs a child is borne 9.6
In what sense the Church is said to bring forth a man child 66.7
In what sense the word child is taken 3.4
A child vnthankfull to his father, a double monster 1.2
All the children of the Church taught of God 54.13
Why God giues children 38 9
Children not punished for their fathers offences 14.21. & 43.27. & 65.7

Christ.

God eternall 2.4. & 6.1.10. & 8.14. & 9.7. & 25.9.
True man 7.15. & 11.2. & 42.1. & 53.11.
Wonderfull 9.6
Why worshipped in the Church 60.14
Altar of the faithfull 56.7
Soule of the Law 29.11
Author of peace 57.19
Onely author of righteousnesse 53.11
Head of the Church 54.1
Head of the faithfull 25.9
Counseller 9.6
Why called Dauid and the sonne of Dauid 37.35. and 45.1.
Why called Immanuel 7.14. & 8.10
Iudge of the whole world 32.6
Light of the faithfull 42.6
Mediator betweene God and man 8.10. & 19.20. & 37.35. & 49.8. & 53.12. & 63.17. & 65.24.
Physitian of soules 53.4
Why sent of God 42.7
Exposed to the wickeds reproches 53.9
Father of eternitie,and why 9.6
Cornen stone 28.16
A tried stone ibid.
A stone to stumble at, and why 8.14. 15. & 28.16
The first borne of euery creature 37.28
Prince of peace 9.6
Promised to all the world 11.1. & 2.4. & 42.6. and 55.5
Promised to be borne of the virgin Mary 7.14
Where to be sought 16.5
Onely redeemer 35.10
Onely and most sure refuge of the faithfull in trouble 32.2
King of Gods people 52.13
King eternall 9.7
Hee onely raignes where his Gospell is preached 11.4
The end of all the Prophets and promises 29.11. 42.1
The Sauiour of his Church 62.11
Gods seruant,and how 42.1. & 43. 10. & 53. 11. & 55.5
Sonne of righteousnesse 25.7. & 60.3
Spouse of the Church 62.5
The protector of the poore 11.4. & 16.5
The way, the truth, and life,and how 49.8
He ouercame in the midst of death 53.8.12
Iustified as he is man 53.1
Brought in speaking 49.1
Alwaies the gouernor of his Church 63.16
Wherein his dominion consists 92.2
He raignes not for himselfe,but for his 11.8
Why silent before Pilat 53.3
His comming foretold 9.6.7
He came in a contemptible estate 42.2
The Papists brag of his name falsly 55.4
We are none of Christs, vnlesse we be giuen to vprightnesse 9.2

THE TABLE.

The nature of Christs kingdome 11.4
All things subiected vnder him 14.2. & 45.23.
All haue need of him 53
The name Christ, attributed to Israel 49 3
Difference betweene Christ and other men 9.6. and 11,3
Difference betweene Christ and the Kings of the earth 42 2. & 49.2
Christ must be the matter and end of our ioy 9.6
Called Sonne by way of excellencie ibid.
His two natures in one person noted 7.14
Christ had no father on earth ibid.
Whence it is that we are called Christians 11.2
A note to discerne true Christians from hypocrites 26.8

Church.

The Church Christs rest 11.10
The mother of the faithfull 40.9. & 66.11
What the true Church is 33.22
Compared to a building 54.12
To a citie 60.10.13
To a widow 49.21
To a woman that brings forth 66.7
To a tent 54.2
To a fanne 41.16
To a vine 3.13. & 5.1.7. & 27.2
Why said to publish good tidings 40.9. & 41.27
A most sure refuge 26.1
Contemptible in the world 1.9
Why the crowne of God 62.3
Gods perpetuall mansion 11.10. & 49.6
She must not be measured by her multitudes 1.9. and 4.3.
Why called miserable 51.21
She is the worke of Gods hands 17.7. & 19.25. & 22.11. & 27.11. & 29.23. & 37 26. & 43.1. & 44.2.21. 24.& 54.5. & 64.7.
She onely partakes of Gods blessings 65.10
Why called barren 54.1
Why called a widow ibid.
She is Gods wife 1.21
The Citie of God 49.16
What Church is in the Papacie 11.2. & 36.6.22.
The Church wonderfully conserued in the world 1.9. & 7.17. & 29.18. & 37.26. & 51.6.
Why she cannot be abolished 1.27.
Why she is not forthwith deliuered 57.21
She onely obtaines remission of sinnes 33.24
Why she is preferred before all the world 37.26
In what sense she is said to be vncleane 43.28. and 47.6
How sanctified 62.12
Her infancie and perfect age 54.2
Her extreme calamitie 51.18
The meanes how she may be gathered 2.3
Her condition must not be iudged of according to her estate in this world 37.37
Her ordinarie condition 8.7. & 33.20
Her condition miserable in outward shew 6.13. & 51.23.
Her true establishment 60.21
Her dignitie inward 49.18. & 56.4. & 62.3
God is in her 45.14
In what sense her children are called bastards 51.18
Her fruitfulnesse 66.8
Her felicitie perpetuall 60.19
She hath alwaies had some forme 54.9
No forme of her left, where prophecies cease 41.27
Wherein her true glory consists 4.3. & 49.18. & 60.6
She hath two sorts of enemies 41.12
Domesticall 24.16. & 41.12. & 66.25
And these the worst 25.10
Her enemies shall be sharply punished 31.9. & 34.8. & 49.29. & 63.1. & 66.25.
Her restauration promised 1.25. & 11.10. & 24.13, 14. & 27.13. & 28.16. & 29.18. & 32.1. & 35.1. and 40.1.15. & 43.5. & 46.11. & 51.11. & 52.1,2. & 58. 12. & 60.4 & 62.4. & 65.17. & 66.7.8. 22.
The true way to procure her restauration 49.17
Her restauration a manifest argument of Gods power 44.26
And onely appertaines to God 11 11. & 16.5. & 28.16 & 29.18.23 & 31.7 & 32.15. & 41.20. & 42. 16. & 44.3. & 49.19 24. & 52.9. & 56.8. & 60.21.
Onely founded vpon the kingdome of Christ 4.2
Her deliuerance, a speciall worke of God 31.8. and 49.7
Her conflict continuall 43.2
How she is said to haue a new name 62.2
Her ornaments 49.18. & 54.13
Her peace 11.13
Her perpetuitie 17.6,7. and 28.5 and 29.18. & 37. 26. & 43.1. & 45.18. & 53.8. & 54.10. & 55.13. and 65.8,9. & 66.22.
Her inlargement, Gods peculiar worke 1.25. & 60. 16.21. & 66.7
Her complaint 49.4
Her true reformation 2.4. & 32.5.8
Her deliuerance, an admirable worke of God, and his onely worke 49.7. & 54.12
Her saluation eternall 45.1. & 51.6
Ioined with the ruine of the wicked 59.18
Her certaine victory 11.14
Her estate among the Iewes, how much deplored by Isaiah 29.7. & 46.13
What honor belongs to her 45. & 49.23. & 60.3
To forsake her, is to renounce eternall life 34.4
Dangerous to forsake her for feare of afflictions 21.11
Ornament of the Popish Church 48.18
The Church sustaines no losse by her afflictions 4.3
Her true glory ibid
Wee must impute her wants to our owne wickednesses 5.6
Why God keepes her low 8.7
Her calamities must thorowly affect vs 22.4
To chuse, to discerne 7.15. & 48.10
Also to be accepted 58.5
The difference betweene the circumcised and the vncircumcised taken away 56.7
Vse of circumcision 52.1
Cities of Gods holinesse what 64.9
Citie of Dauid 22.9. & 29.1. & 33 20
Citie of Ierusalem double 22.9
Citie of iustice 1.26
Cilicia, called Tharsis by the Hebrewes 33.1
Opposed to Tyre 23.6
In what sense the faithfull terme themselues clay 64.8
Common-wealth, how it may be well gouerned 3.4 and 32.1
How wee ought to esteeme of the communion of Saints 63.7
Things spoken by comparison 2.22. & 43.18. & 54. 9,10,13. & 60.16
Gods commandements called paths, and why 2.3
We must distinguish betweene two sorts of commandements 10.6

Compassion

THE TABLE.

Compassion commended 20.2. & 22.4
Complaints of the faithfull vnder the Papacie 26.13
Complaint of the faithfull 63.15
Complaint of the Church 49.4. & 63.15
Complaints of hypocrites 1.18
Complaints of Papists touching the abolishing of their diuine seruice 36.10
The company of the wicked to be eschewed 33.15. and 59.5
Brotherly concord commended 11.6
It flowes from pietie 19.23
Vpon what conditions to be desired 19.18
Mens condition out of Christ miserable 49.8,9
Condition of Pastors 50.6. & 51.8
Condition of the Iewes miserable 3.12
The condition of the wicked wofull 3.11. & 5.18. and 15.2. & 21.12. & 28.20. & 57.2.20.
Condition of the faithfull happy 4.6. & 30.26
Condition of the faithfull miserable in appearance 26.19. and 33. 20. and 41.14. & 49.7. and 51.23. & 54. 3.
Confidence in man vaine 2.22. & 29.5
Confidence of hypocrites vaine 1.28. & 10.20,22
Confidence in Idols vaine 8.21
Confidence of the Israelites false 17.9
Of the Iewes 30.17
Of the Egyptians 19.1
Of the Iewes 20.1. & 22.3. & 29.1. & 30.1,2. & 66.1
Of the Philistines 14.29
Confidence ought to be placed in God 7.4. & 8.12. and 17.8. & 26.19. & 30.15,16. & 31.1. & 33.20,21. and 36.15. & 42.13.17. & 43.6. & 50 11. & 51.12. & 57.13. & 59.16.
Confession, a fruit of faith 26.19
Confession of sinne, necessary 64.5
Outward confession required in Gods true seruice 19.18
Auricular confession a deuice of the Papists 38.15
Coniunction of God with the Church 60.11. and 65.19
Coniunction of God with Idols in the Papacie 17. 8
The wicked alwaies miserable, because they cannot inioy their goods with a good conscience 65.13
A good conscience how necessary 58.4
A quiet conscience onely proper to Gods children 32.18
A wicked mans conscience neuer quiet 65.13
Peace of conscience a fruit of the Gospell 2.4
An euill conscience alwaies flees Gods presence 31.2.
Alwaies vnquiet 32.18
How sleepie consciences must be awakened 58.1. 8.13
The conscience of Papists 32.18
An euill conscience discouers it selfe in the countenance 2.11. and 3.9
A generall consent a shrewd temptation 8.11
Consolation for the faithfull 1.25,28. & 4 2. & 5. 17. & 6.13. & 7.4.19. & 8.10.17. & 9.1. & 10.5,12. 22.24.26 & 11.1. & 12.3. & 14.14.24.28,32. & 15.9. and 16.14 & 17.61. 1.14. & 18.4,5. & 19 18. & 21,1. 15.16. & 22.11. & 23.17. & 24 13.14.22 23. & 25,10. & 26.12,13 21. & 27.4 & 28.16.25. & 29.21 22. and 30.19.21.29. & 31.9. & 32.15. & 33.5. & 35.5. & 37. 26. & 40.1 8.29. & 41 8,9 10.14 & 43.1.14.25. & 44. 3. & 48.11. & 49.24. & 50.10. & 51.1,17,21. & 52 9. & 54 11. & 55 6. & 57.15. & 59 15. & 63 49 & 65. 8. & 66.2 5.
Consolations for the poore 10.2
Consolations added to threatnings 4.2 & 5.17. & 27.6
A consolation for good Princes 22.23
To whom consolation belongs 40.7
Whence it is to be drawne 37.2. and 40.8 and 50. 4.11. and 51.3.16. & 52.9. and 57.18. and 66.11
Conspiracie taken in good part 8.12
Conspiracie of the Papists 44 11
Constancie of the faithfull 8.12.56.2
Constancie of Pastors 8.16. and 29.21 and 50.7
The constancie of Isaiah 8.18. and 30.8. and 39.3. 5
Contempt of Gods word, the perfection of all euill 5.24
Contentment consists not in abundance 65.13
Continencie a rare gift 19.21
God lookes that our conuersation should answere our vocation 63.8. and 43.21
Conuersion of the Egyptians to God 19.19.21
Conuersion, a kind of resurrection 19.22
What men are without conuersion 65 25
No saluation without conuersion 59.20
The conuerted ought to labour the conuersion of others 2.3
Conuersion of the heart, and change of the life must goe together 55.7
Conuersion what 19.13. and 28.16
How corne and wine is said to be ours 62.9
Corrections benefit vs nothing, vnlesse God touch our hearts by his holy Spirit inwardly 1.25
A signe of desperate malice, not to benefit by corrections 9.13
When God begins to correct, he makes not an end by and by 1.7
Necessitie of corrections 25.3
God corrects in measure 27.8. and 64.9
Couenant of God cannot be disanulled 7.14. and 19.25. and 24.5. and 45.25. and 55.4. and 59.20. and 65.1.
Couenant of God free 55.3. and 61.9. and 64.7.
Couetousnesse condemned 1.23. and 5.8.23. and 33.15. and 57.17.
Cursed of God 5.10
Exceeding hurtfull in Iudges 1.23
God will create Ierusalem a reioicing 65.18
God creates new heauens, and a new earth 65.17. and 66.22
The end of our creation 29.23
Creation taken for regeneration 17.7. and 19.25. and 27.11. and 37.26. and 43.1.15.21. and 44.2.21. 24. and 51.13. and 54.5 and 64. 9. and 66.22.
God the creator of all 37 15
In what sense God is called the creator of Israel 43.15
The confusions which are among the creatures, the fruits of our sinnes 65.25
All the creatures are vnder Gods command 11.15
All creatures are ready armed against the wicked 13.10
The creatures grone in regard of our offences 65 17
If insensible creatures bee moued at Gods voice, much more we 6.4
All creatures at Gods becke 55.12
Many depart from Christ, because of the crosse 53.5
Christs gouernment laid on his shoulder, fained to be be his crosse 9.6

Signe of the Crosse 66.19
Crueltie alwaies ioined with impietie 51.23
Crueltie of the Assyrians 30.31
Crueltie of the Babylonians 13.11
Of the Medes 17.17
Of Babylons King 14.17
Of the Moabites 15.1. & 16.3
Of Satan 49.24. and 59.17. and 66.3
Of Sennacherib 33.7
Cup of wrath taken in a double sense 51.17
Curiositie ought to be auoided 9.4
Cyrus called of God, and how 48.15
Named a long time before he was borne 44.28
In what sense he is said to obey God 41.25
Gods hired souldier 43.14
How said to be fauoured of God 44.14
Why called anointed 45.1
How he builded Ierusalem 45.13
Very vicious 48.15
Whether he became a conuert 45.1
His prosperitie proceeded from God 48.15

D

DAmascus a capitall Citie of Syria 7.8
The ruine of Damascus 17.1
Darius the seruant of God 21.9
Darius signifies a lion 21.7.8
Darius an herauld of Gods iudgement 21.9
Darknesse taken for affliction 8.21. & 50.10.18. and 58.10. and 59.9.
Dauid a figure of Christ 37.35. & 55.3.4
Why Dauid called Gods seruant before hee was borne 44.1
Why Dauids name is sometimes put for Christ 2.4
Citie and house of Dauid what it is 7.2. and 22.9
Daies of a tree what 65.21
In what sense it is that daies will seeme yeeres 54.8
What the day of the Lord signifies 13.6
Day put for time, prefixt 22.5
Why the day of the Lord is called terrible 13.9
The Iewes began their day at Sun setting 30.29
Death of Christ the cause and fountaine of life 53.8
Fruit of Christs death 53.5.11
Death often noted out by the word Graue 53.9
In what sense it is said, the dead sing the praises of God 38.18
Whether the dead know our necessities 29.22
Delicacie, the ruine of the Roman Empire 2.16
Deliuerance of the Church admirable, and Gods proper worke 31.8. & 49.7
Difference betweene the deliuerance out of Egypt and Babylon 52.12 See Redemption.
Deafenesse of the Iewes proceeded from their rebellion 28.12
Why God deferres to succour his people 33.9
Demosthenes alleaged 47.3
Denys the second, how he became blind 28.4
Denys the tyrant, a contemner of religion, and his impietie 36.18
What a miserie it is to be depriued of the vse of holy things 48.19
Deserts for medowes 63.13
Desert taken for Chaldea 21.1
When descriptions are necessarie 21.3
Disloialtie of the Israelites 17.9
Disloialtie of Senacherib 33.8
Diuination condemned 19.12. & 44.25
Papists will not haue their diuine seruice examined 44.20
Complaints of Papists touching the abolishing of their diuine seruice 36.10
Deuotion of Papists what 1.14
Superstitious deuotions 65.3
The diuell serues to Gods glory 2.19
Difference betweene Dauids kingdome & Christs 2.4
Difference betweene him that feares God, and him that feares him not 5.20
Difference betweene God and men 1.15.18. & 30. 30. and 31.3. & 40.30. & 48.12. & 55.8. & 57.15. & 59.12. & 60.22.
Difference betweene the elect and reprobate 5.19
Difference betweene God and Idols 21.9. and 37. 18. & 40.18.28. & 41.21,22. & 42.8,9. & 43.9. & 44. 7. & 46.3. & 48.12. & 64.3.
Difference betweene true and false worshippers 29.13
Difference betweene a true seruant of God, and a false 22.20
Difference that is among men, proceeds from Gods vengeance 19.2
Difference betweene the affliction of the elect and reprobate 12.3
God will be the defender of his discipline perpetually 49.10
Dimon a flood of Moab 15.9
A right order of discipline described 49.16
Distrust of the Iewes 30.1. & 49.14
Distrust naturally in men 8.7. & 43.5
Docilitie a gift of God 30.21. & 32.2. & 42.4. & 43.8
Docilitie how necessary in the faithfull 48.17. and 50.10
Docilitie proceedes from vnderstanding 41.22
Doctrine of Gods word most necessarie 3.4
Doctrine onely makes the sacraments 20.2
A generall doctrine drawne from a particular 54.8
Particular doctrine necessarie 1.17
Doctrine of the Prophets indures euer 37.2
Doctrines false, refuted by Gods word onely 11.4
Doctrine, Gods scepter 2.4
Domitian and his crueltie 59.7
Diuersitie of gifts, the ornament of the Church 54.13
Drunkennes spirituall 19.14
Drunkennes detestable in Ministers 56.12
Dumbe dogges 56.10
Drunkennes condemned 5.11.22. & 22.13. & 24.9. and 28.1. & 56.12.
Dutie of the faithfull 43.10
Dutie of Pastors 6.9,10. & 8.16.18
Ruine of Duma foretold 21
Dumeans and their originall 21.10

E

EAre, what the opening thereof signifies 50.5
Earth taken for such Countries as were knowne to the Iewes by traffique 24.1.17
Earth taken for her inhabitants 66.8
New earth what 66.22
Fruitfulnesse of the earth proceeds from Gods blessing 1.19. and 35.1.
The earth barren by Gods curse 5.10. & 15.6. and 24.5,6. & 32.13.
The word Earth, put for all the world 65.16
Earth couered or discouered, what 33.1
Why the earth sustaines vs not 24.5
Earth taken for any Country 66.8

Those

THE TABLE.

Thoſe of the Eaſt abounded in ceremonies 58.5
The ſignes of their ſorrow 41.4. and 43.27. & 51.1. and 65.7.
Egyptians groſſe Idolaters 19.1.3
Puniſhed for their pride 19.4.2
Egypt abounding in Cities 19.8
Would bee eſteemed the ſtorehouſe of all liberall ſciences 19.3.1
Deliuered by Chriſt 19.19
How it was giuen in ranſome for the Churches deliuerance 43.3
Her perdition 19.1
Egyptians ſwollen with a falſe opinion of wiſdome, proudly deſpiſed all nations beſides as Barbarians 19.3.16.1
More effeminate then other nations 19.16
In what time they had truce with the Aſſyrians 19.13
And in continuall warre with them ibid.
In what ſenſe their ſenſleſneſſe is attributed to God 19.14
Their pride 19 15
Ther conuerſion 19.19.21
Elam taken for the Country of Perſia 21.2
Gods election free and vnchangeable 14.1. and 44. 1. and 66.18.
Gods free election the beginning of our ſaluation 45.4
Election depends vpon Gods promiſe 41.8
The end of our election 41.10. 43.10.21
Elect taken for excellent 4.21
Elect onely beleeue 8.18. & 53.1. & 54.13
Elect onely eſcape Gods wrath 66.19
Elect onely inioy the redemption purchaſed by Chriſt 59.20
Elect onely ſaued 66.19
Elect cannot periſh 8.18
Difference betweene the elect and reprobate 2.10. and 3.10. and 4.3. and 5.20. and 7.2.4. and 8.12. and 10.15.18. and 12.1,2. and 13.3.5.9.19.& 14.1.5. 20.29. and 16.6. and 19.22. and 21.11.12.17. and 25.10. and 26.10.16.19. and 27.4.7. and 28.15. and 29.13.17. and 30.26.28.32. and 32.17. and 33.6.14. and 35.4.10. and 39.8. and 40.30. and 41.22. and 42.17. and 43.1.2.21. and 45.2. and 48.10. and 51. 8.17.23. and 54.7.13. and 55.6. and 26.5. and 57.2. 20. and 59.12.13.20. and 60.2.6.19.21. and 63.5. 19. and 64.3.11. and 65.8.10.13.14. and 66.2.5.12. 16.19.
God ſometimes ſpares the wicked for the elects ſake 65.8
Eliakim of the blood royall 22.24
Put in Shebnaes place 22.20
In what ſenſe he is ſaid to be called of God ibid.
Enemies domeſticall 24.16. and 36.3. and 66.5.
Enemies of two ſorts 41.12
Brethren enemies 66.5
Enuie the welſpring of diſſenſions 11.13
Epicures and their language 39.8
Epha, a meaſure of dry things 5.10
Ephraim taken for all Iſrael 17.3
For the ten Tribes 28.1
An ancient error muſt not bee receiued as a law 65.7
Efficacie of error giuen to ſeducers to deceiue the world 19.14
Two parts of equitie 58.7
Eſau and his repentance 26.11
Eunuch, who 56.3
Obſtinacie of Europ 9.10
Exceſſe in apparell eazed 3.16
We muſt not be led by ill examples 2.6
Execrations muſt be auoided 5.9. and 14.24
Exorciſmes condemned 19.12
Expoſitions forced and wreſted, to bee auoided 48.16
How we are ſaid to ſinne before Gods eies 65.12
Womens wandring eies 3.16
Iſaiah ſaw God with his eies 6.5
Wee muſt not follow that in Gods ſeruice, which ſeemes beſt in our eies 65.12
Few whileſt, they labour, fix their eies vpon Gods bleſſing 65.23

F

FAble of the Papiſts touching the oxe and the aſſe 1.3
A fable of the ancients, touching the cities of Egypt 19.18

Faith.

True faith what 43.10
Not common to all 53.1
It muſt not be ſeparate from the word 55.3
The mother of praier 1.15. and 33.2
It conſiſts in certaintie and ſound knowledge 52.15
It hath need of confirmation 37.2.21
It makes vs partakers of all Chriſts benefits 11.2
It begins at obedience 41.22
It goes before confeſſion 43.10
Implicit faith of Papiſts 43.10. and 52.15. and 54.13
The nature of faith 55.3. and 64.3
Propertie of faith 64.4
Preparation of faith 43.10
Triall of faith 33.2
Power of faith how great 43.14
The vnitie of faith muſt be held 12.6
Difference betweene faith and a bare knowledge 45.24
Difference betweene faith and experience 60.6
Thoſe that are deſtitute of faith, no members of Chriſt 65.21
The principall fruit of faith 65.14

Faithfull.

All the faithfull are friends of God 41.8
Why called trees of righteouſneſſe 61.3
Happy in euery reſpect vnder the kingdome of Chriſt 32.25. and 35.5. and 65.3.
Expoſed to diuers ſlanders 36.10. and 41.12
Exhorted to conſtancie 8.19
Compared to doues 60.8
They onely fit to ſing Gods praiſes 42.10
Why compared to little children 66.11.12
Why held for monſters 8.18
How called the worke of Gods hands 29.23
Compared to ſheepe 14 30
The faithfull Gods plant 60.21.61.3
Precious in Gods ſight 43 4
Regenerate onely in part 65.7
They are carefull of others 2.3
All Prieſts, and how 23.18. and 52.11. and 56.7. and 61.6. and 66.10.21.
All the ſeed of Chriſt 53.10
They onely obtaine remiſſion of ſinnes 33.24
Why ſometimes left deſtitute of humane helpes 59.16
They are ſaid to dwell before God 23.18
They offer themſelues in ſacrifice to God 8.7
Sometimes conſtrained to bluſh 29.22

Why often wrapped in the ſame puniſhment with the wicked 65.8
Gods witneſſes 44.9
They are brought to Chriſt 16.5
They ouercome by patience 11.14
In what their affection ought to appeare 12.4
Their afflictions diuers, ſharpe, and tedious 26.17. & 43.1. & 51.21
The faithfull ſubiect to many miſeries 4.6
Hated of all ſorts 8.18
How t heir afflictions are of ſhort continuance 26. 20. and 65.16.
Their cheerefulneſſe 11.2. & 40.31
Their extreame calamitie 51.8
Their condition happy 4.6. & 30.26
Yet miſerable and contemptible in appearance 26. 19. and 33.20. and 41.14. and 49.7. and 51.23. and 54.2.
Their conſolation 4.2. and 5.17. See conſolation.
Their conſtancie 8.12. and 56.6
Their principall exerciſe 58.2
Their felicitie 65.13
And ioy 9.3,4. and 12.6. and 30.16.29. and 35.10. 41.16. and 43.3. and 51.3.8.11. and 56.7. and 61.7. and 65.10.18. and 66.5.10.11.14.
Their imprecation againſt the Babylonians 13.12
Their magnanimitie vpheld by the word of God 8.9
Their perpetuall conflict 8.9. and 11.13. and 26.8. and 36.15. and 54.15,16. and 66.5.
How they ought to behaue themſelues 11.6.9
Their death 57.1.2
Their obedience 11.6
Their office 43.10
Their praiers not in vaine 47.8. and 65.24
Their patience 10.12. See patience.
Their number ſmall 1.9. and 4.3. and 8.16. and 11. 11. and 26.2. and 43 6. and 45.20. and 50.10. and 51.1. and 58.1. and 60.22. and 65.25. and 66.5.
Their perſeuerance 25.6
Their complaint vnder the Papacie 26.13
Their perpetuall Sabbath 58.13. & 66.23
Their ſpirituall ſacrifices 66.23
Their ſaluation euerlaſting 51.2.8
Their ſaluation ioined with the ruine of the wicked 63.4. and 66.7
Their ſaluation ioined with Gods glory 43.7. and 46.13. & 48.11. and 60.2.
Their poſteritie bleſſed 65.23
Their victory certaine 8.9. and 9.4
Their zeale muſt be moderate 36.21
Whether it be lawfull for them to deride others in their miſeries 14.3
Faithfull for firme and ſtable 22.23
Falſe teachers dangerous 56.10
Famin of the word what 30.21
Mens fantaſies the fountaines of ſuperſtions 1.29.
Error of fantaſtikes, touching the ſleeping of ſoules 57.2
Of ſuch as ſeparate the word from the Spirit 59.21
Falſe doctrines onely refuted by the word of God 11.4
Fauour of God towards his Church 1.9
Fatneſſe for proſperitie 10.16
Faſting depends vpon praier 58.5
Faſting a ſolemne part of repentance 22.12,13
How acceptable vnto God 58.5.6
Vſe of faſting 1.11
What the faſt of hypocrites is 58.4
What the faſt of Papiſts is ibid.
Lenten faſt ibid
Faſting the handmaid of praier 58.5
The Iewes faſt not to be condemned 58.4
Faſting approued when charitie is ioined with it 58.6
The bad example of our fathers not to be followed 65.7. Sect.2.5.
The abuſe, and not the vſe of faſting taxed 58.4.5
A ſoueraigne remedie to moderate inordinate feares 8.13
A double feare in the faithfull 7.4
Where the feare of God is, there is ſtedfaſtneſſe 22.17.
Such onely feare God, as reuerence his word 66.5
Feare of the faithfull differs from the feare of vnbeleeuers 8.12.
Feare of God 50.10.
Feare of God taken for a pure affection to ſerue him 11.2
Taken for a certaine rule of iuſtice 11.3
How neceſſary it is 8.13. and 29.23. and 65.7
The fountaine of wiſdome 19.11
In what ſenſe called the beginning of wiſdome 33.6
What feare neceſſary in the faithfull 66.2
Two ſorts of feare ibid.
Feaſts of Chriſtians 66.23
A fiction confuted 19.1
A fiction of the Poets 3.12
Fifties among the Iewes, what 3.3
Fire for extreame torment 30.33. and 66.15.24
For Gods vengeance 26 11
Fire of Purgatory inuented by Papiſts 33.24
Fire and water taken for all ſorts of miſeries 43.2
Two fiſh pooles in Ieruſalem 7 3
Food taken from men two waies 3.1
To turne the foote from the Sabbath, what 58.13
Force of Chriſt inuincible 42.4
Foreknowledge of God, what 41.22
Foreknowledge and power belongs to God onely 45.10
Forgetfulneſſe of God the cauſe of all ſinne 17.7
Forgetfulneſſe of God puniſhed 17.10
Forme of an oath 5.9. and 10.4. and 22.14. and 45.23. and 49.18
A right forme of teaching 2.3. & 55.12
The foundation of our ſaluation 63.7
Mens fantaſies the fountaines of all ſuperſtitions 1.29. and 65.3
The fountaine from whence all plagues iſſue 5.13
Chriſt the fountaine of liuing waters 12.3
Free will confuted 1.19,20. and 49.9. and 2.22. and 52.2.
What it is in man 1.15.16.19. and 2.24. and 54.13
Frenchmen naturally imitate the vices of others, rather then their vertues 30.1
Frenchmen brag to their hurt, of being ſubiect to great Princes 19.4

G

GAbrias, his coniuration 21.5
Situation of Galile, and why called Galile of the Gentiles 9.1
Gates for places moſt frequented 14.31
Mourning of the gates 3.25. and 14.31
Calling of the Gentiles foretold 2 3,4. and 11.10. and 12.5. and 14.1,2. and 19.22,23. and 25.7. and 26.15. and 42.4.6.11. and 45.22.23.25. and 49.6. 12.21. and 52.8.15. and 54.5. and 55.4.5. and 56. 3.7. and 60.9. and 65.2. and 66.19,20.
Glory of God ioined with the ſaluation of the faithfull

THE TABLE.

faithfull 43.7. and 46.13. and 48.11. and 60.2.
The glory of God shines in the accomplishment of his promises 42.8
In his workes 26.11
And in the restauration of his Church 26.11. and 42.8. and 45.23
His glory spread thorowout the world 6.3
His glory must be aduanced aboue all things 43.21
His glory must not be prophaned 48.11
Why the wicked see not Gods glory 26.10
Gods glory aduanced in the destruction of the wicked 63.3
Glory taken for saluation 62.2
God is robbed of his glory, whilest men glory in themselues 64.8
Gods glory ioined with our saluation 48.11. and 64.12
Gods glory must be sought in him onely 45.25
Christs glory hidden 52.14
Christ shall be glorified and his Ministers, though the wicked be not bettered by their ministerie 49.5
Wee must not iudge of Christs glory according to carnall reason 53.2
Gluttonie condemned 5.11.22. and 62.13. and 38.3

God.

What God wee must worshippe and acknowledge 21.17
God eternall 40.28. and 43.13. and 48.12
Why he is said to hide himselfe 45.15
No accepter of persons 55.1. and 56.36
Why called Isaiahs friend 5.1
In what sense author of all things 42.24. & 45.7
God is not the author of euill 19.14. and 45.7. and 63.17
Whether the author of mens blinding 19.14
The author of Babels ruine 13.17. and 14.5
Author of Ierusalems ruine 22.5
Author of peace 32.17
Onely author of our purgation 6.7
Bountifull by nature 1.19. & 24.19. & 40.28. & 63.10. & 64.4
Gratious by nature 55.7,8
The comforter of his Church 51.16
The creator of all 37.15
Why called Isaiahs God 7.13. & 51.21
Why called the holy one 1.2.6. & 40.25. & 43.15
Why called God of Israel 21.10
Why called Lord of hostes 3.1. & 14.22. and 21.10. and 51.15 & 54.5
God the onely teacher of his Church 2.3. and 8.19. and 30.21. and 41.21. and 48.17. and 54 13.
God the only Lord by nature 11.15
Onely conducter of the faithfull 35.9
Why called the former of Israel 17.7
Why compared to a lion 31.4. and 38.13. and 40.18
And why compared to a mother 42.14. and 46.3. and 59.15. and 63.9. and 66.12.
Why called the mighty one of Israel 1.24. and 30.29
Why compared to fire 31.15
Why called the mightie one of Iacob 60.16
God faithfull and true 42.9. and 49.7
Creator of Israel 17.7. and 22.11. and 27.11. & 43.1. and 45.11
Enemie of the proud 2.11
Iudge of the whole world 3,13. & 5.16. & 19.14. and 21.15. and 22.14. and 33.22. and 59.12.
God the onely Lawgiuer 33.22
God the onely King ibid.
Onely wise 31.2
Onely Sauiour 43.11. and 65.8
Onely husband of his Church 57.8
God mercifull 54.10. and 55.7
Almighty 41.22
The creator of his Church 22.11
The feeder of his flocke 14.30. and 44.6
How he is neere vs 55.6
How we must seeke him 9.13. and 30.4. and 55.6. and 65.10
In what sense said to be first and last 41.4. and 44.6
King of Iacob and Israel 41.21. and 43.15. and 44.6
Alwaies like himselfe 2.3. and 14.1.27. and 26.4. and 31.5. and 41.9. and 44.6. and 45 4. and 48. 12. 16. and 51.6.9. and 59.20. and 63.7.
God the feare and dread of his people 8.13
The perpetuall protector of his Church 37.35. and 54.14
True in all things 14.26
The chiefe minister of his word 50.8
A most iust reuenger 9.19
Why he is said to hasten his worke 21.16
He workes three waies by men 10.5
How he workes by Satan 19.4
How he handles the reprobate 16.3
Why he handles the obstinate so seuerely 1.7
God drawes men to him by two meanes 65.2
How he appeared to the fathers 6.1
God heares two waies 37.4
Why he doth good to his Church 42 21
How God created all things together 48.13
Why he deferres his helpe 42.14. & 51.9
Why he deferres to punish the wicked 10.3. and 13.6. and 18.5. and 26.21. and 28.24,25. and 63.4. 65.6. and 66.18.
God teacheth two waies 54.13
He heares two waies 65.24
Onely one true God 47.8
How he blindes and hardens men 19.14. and 44.18. and 63.17
He can manifest his power euery where 14.25
God hath a speciall care of his elect and faithfull ones 1.17. and 8.14. & 11.11. & 13.1. & 14.1.5.7. 14.25.30.32. and 15.1. and 16.3,4. & 17.3.13.14. and 18.4.7. & 21.1.12. & 26.1,4,7. & 27.2.3. & 30.25. & 31.5. & 33.2. & 37.7.9,30,31,35. & 41.10,18. & 42.14. & 43.3,7. & 45.4,12,18. & 46.3. & 48.16. & 49.9,15,16,24. & 51.3,6,22. & 54.17. & 57.1. & 58.11. & 5.59,18. & 60.2. & 62.12. and 63.9. and 65.8.
God dwels alwaies in his Church 10.19
How God driues men into error 63.7
He beholds the heart 1.16
Neuer angry causlesly 24.19
Why he sweares, and that by himselfe 14.24. & 45.23. & 62.8
God speakes after the maner of men 1.24. and 5.3. & 6.8. & 14.22. & 43.24. and 48.18.
God cannot hate his chosen 27.4
God commands two waies 10.6
He punisheth mens impietie two waies 29.11
How God raignes 51.4
Why hee reiects the ceremonies which himselfe hath commanded 1.11
How God sanctifies his chosen 8.14
God robbed of his honour in the Papacie 43.11
God al-sufficient in himselfe 40.10
The faithfull content themselues with one God onely 8.7,19. & 10.21

THE TABLE.

How he is ſaid to riſe 2.19.
How he handles the wicked 9.12
In what time he comes 50.2
God calles two waies 44.7
God allures men to repentance by two meanes 22.12
How and how far he ſerues himſelfe of the wicked 7.18. & 10.5.15. & 13.3.17. & 14.21,22. & 21.7. & 27.7. & 36.19. & 43.14. & 45.7. & 54.16,17.
God ſometimes chaſtens the wicked by degrees 24.22
God loues his choſen with an infinit loue 40.3. & 42.14. & 43.4. & 46.3. & 49.11,15. & 53 10. & 59. 18. & 65.19. & 66.12,14.
How great Gods authoritie is 45.9
To whom God promiſeth ſuccour 42.16
Gods loue to his Church 1.9
Gods ſecrets muſt not be ſearched into 14.26
His counſell muſt not bee ballanced by our reaſon 26.3
His counſell manifeſted in his word 46.12
His counſell vnchangeable 14.27. and 38.4. and 65 15
What his purpoſe is in requiring ſacrifices 1.11
God, a wonderfull workeman 10.7
God rules all actions 10.15
Why God is ſaid to hold in the Miniſters with his hand 8.11
God wil be a ſanctuary to ſuch as ſanctifie him in their hearts 8.14
He pleades not with vs to purſue vs in rigor 1.18
He iudgeth otherwiſe then men doe 1.15
He cannot away with exceſſe 3.24
What is meant by the turning of his hand 1.25
In wrath he remembers mercy 1.9
God takes ſtrength from bread two waies 3.1
Nothing can pleaſe him that comes not from a pure conſcience 1.18
God the author both of weale and woe 62.8
Godlineſſe hath the promiſe both of this life, and of that to come 65.10
Two offices of godlineſſe 58.6
The golden world 11.6
Not vnlawfull to haue abundance of gold and ſiluer 2.7
Good alwaies mingled among the bad 2.4. & 8.14. & 26.2. & 6 21
The good, thin ſowne in Iſaiahs time 26 2
Goodneſſe of God towards his children 41.13
Goodneſſe of God manifeſted in Chriſt 12 3
Wherein the ſoueraigne good conſiſts 64.6

Goſpell.

The Goſpell the ſpirituall food of the ſoule 25.6. and 55.1
A two edged ſword 11.4
Why compared to a Sine 60.21
Why compared to a ſtandard 11.12
Goſpell, the doctrine of reconciliation 2 4. and 57.19
Why ſo hated in the world 23.5
It came forth of Mount Zion 23.6.25
Preached thorowout the world by Gods commandement 45.20
The praiſe of the Goſpell 25.7
Vpon whom it workes 61 1
Who are capeable of it ibid.
The doctrine thereof not new 42.4
The dignitie and excellencie thereof 33.6. & 49.9
The end 61.1,2,3
Natureof the Goſpell 14.21
And office 11.4. and 49.2
The preaching of the goſpell Gods gift 32.7
Difference betweene the law and the goſpell 56.7. and 66.21
The goſpell not onely ſets God and man at one, but man with man alſo 2.4
The onely meanes to quiet diſſenſions ibid.
Gozan, a Citie of the Medes 37.12

Grace.

Fruits of Chriſts grace 25.2
Seuen formed grace fondly inuented by Papiſts 11.2
Grace of God preuents men 19.20
Gods grace freee 14.21
Praiſe of Gods grace 43.7
To be publiſhed and communicated to all 35.4
Contempt of Gods grace ſhall bee ſeuerely puniſhed 5.5
Tenure of Gods grace 41 8. & 46.4
Graue put for death 53 9

H

HAnd of God neuer ſeparate from his mouth 14.26
Turning of Gods hand, what 1.25
Hand put for ſuccour 25.10
To miniſter 53 10
To worke 26.11
Put for rule 11.14
They were wont to ſpread the hands in praier 1.15
What profit comes by handicrafts 3.2
Wherein true happineſſe conſiſts 25.8
God is ſaid to heare two waies 65.24
No true feare of God, where the hearing of his word is contemned 50.10
Integritie of the heart required 29.13. & 38.3
Hearts of men in Gods hands 13.3,14. & 19.2
Heauen ſpread out like a curtaine 40.22
How heauen is ſaid to be Gods ſeate 66.1
To breake the heauens, what 63.19
Heauens new 65.17. 66.22
Helpe of the wicked vaine 30.1.31.1
How farreforth it is lawfull to ſeeke the helpe of man 8.7
Hell taken for the graue 5.14
Heſhbon a citie of Moab 15.4
Hezekias a louer of peace 36.3
Wonderfully troubled 37.1
His faith 34.4
His ſickneſſe 38.1
His pride 39.2
His ſinne 39.2.5
The higheſt ſeruice we can performe to God 6.3
Hiſtory of Alexander 45.4
Of an ambitious Preacher 42.4
A pleaſant hiſtory of Maximilian the Emperour 10.11
Hiſtorie of Sir Thomas Moore 22.17
Vſe of hiſtories 26.2
Why God vſeth the word Hiſſing, rather then the ſound of a trumpet 5.26
The reaſon why the Prophet vſeth this word Ho, 55.1
Hobgoblins 13.21. & 34.14
The holy Ghoſt ſends the Prophets 48.16
The holy Ghoſt God eternall 6.10. & 48.16
Why compared to water 1.16
The true teacher of the faithfull 29.24. & 53 1

His

His efficacie must not bee separate from the preaching of the Gospell 49.22. and 59.21. See Spirit
Hope ought to be confirmed by the remembrance of benefits formerly receiued 11.11. & 22.10. and 29.22. & 30.18. & 37.31. & 41.5. & 42.9. & 43.3. 16. & 44.24,27. & 48.21. & 51.9. & 63.7 & 64.3.
It is not expedient that the faithfull should fixe their hopes vpon earthly commodities 65.13
House put for Temple 15 2
House of Dauid put for the Kings palace 7.2. and 22.22
House of praier 56.7
House put for all ceremonies 66.1
Humanitie commended 11.4.6 & 16.4, & 53.7. and 57.15. & 59.34. & 61.1.
Humilitie the beginning of faith 43.10
How necessary in the faithfull 16.7. & 26.5. & 30. 17. & 57.15. & 61.1. & 66.2.
Humilitie of Christ 7.15. & 42.2. & 52.1
Husbands proper office to prouide for the familie 4.1
Husbandry a gift of God 28.29
Hypocrisie the mother of all vices 10.6
Alwaies ioined with disdaine and pride 65.6
Discouered by the Gospell 32.5
How detestable 1.15. & 9.17. & 10.6. & 26.2. & 29. 13,14. & 48.1,2. & 50.10. & 63.8. & 66.17.
Discerned from Gods true seruice by the workes of charitie 1.18
No true praier where hypocrisie raignes 1.15
Hypocrites greatly giuen to ceremonies 1.11,18
Mingled among the faithfull 1.28
Alwaies proud 65.5
How they seeke God 9.13
Why compared to bulrushes 58.5
Casher ied 52.1
Their fond confidence 10.20,22
Their complaint against God 1.18
Their babling 1.15
Their customes 1.22
Their workes abominable before God 58.4
Their praiers and sacrifices vaine 1.15
Their vowes what 19.21
They onely gape after earthly felicitie 1.19
They are wont to quarrell with God 1.18
Threatnings must be redoubled against them 4.1
Hypocrites onely carefull about ceremonies 1.18
Neuer the better for the promises 1.28
How they must be handled 1.4,10,18
Distinguished from the faithfull 65.13,14

I

IAcob put for the ten Tribes 17.4
How hee is said to bee confounded being dead 29.22
His wrestling what 48.1
Iauan, what 66.9
Iazar, a Citie of Moab 16.8
Idlenesse condemned 32.9
It is begotten by riches and abundance 32.10
What vse we are to make of the furious zeale of Idolaters 44.14
Idolaters vaine and miserable 41.2,9. & 44.9
Their zeale 44.12
Their hypocrisie 10.10
Their horrible ruine 1.31. and 2.18. & 65.12
Their liberalitie 65.11
Carnall sense the schoolemaster of Idolaters 16.12
They wholly depend vpon euents ibid.
Their obstinacie 2.20. and 44.19
Sottishnesse 42.17
Furie 46.6
Idolatry possesseth mens mindes 1.29
How augmented 41.7
The spring of all mischieses 27.9
The most hatefull kind of whordome 57.5,7
How detestable 41.22,24
From whence it springs 40.19
Outward idolatry condemned 2.8
How fearefull wee should bee of being corrupted with idolatry 44.14
Idoll ministers 56.10
Roman idoll 60.14
Idols matches to kindle Gods wrath withall 1.31
Things of nought 2.8
They must bee vtterly reiected 17.8. and 30.22. and 31.7
How they are said to be made of nought 41.24
The works of mens hands 2.8. and 17.8. & 31.7
The trust in idols vaine 8.21
Their Oracles, how ambiguous and deceitfull 41.9,22
Their vanitie how great 41.29. & 46.2
Idumeans, and their beginning 63.1
Sworne enemies of Gods people 63.1,2
Their ruine foretold 34.1,10,11. & 63.1
Iehu prophaned Baals altars 30.22
Iereboam hath many followers 22.23
Ierusalem miraculously saued 10.32
Why called the Citie of God 45.13
Why called the daughter of Zion 1.8
Why called Citie of vanitie 24.10
How said to be formed of old 37.26
How she is said to haue plaid the harlot 1.21
In what sense called virgin 37.21
How her foundations are said to bee euerlasting 44.7

Iewes.

Iewes originall 41.4. & 43.27. & 51.1. & 65.7
Apostates 1.4
Bold in forging fables 37.36. & 40.31. & 48.21
Corrupters of the Scripture 49.6
Why called a nation spoiled 18.2
A paterne of cursing 65.15
Their children degenerate 29.22. & 31.6. & 48.1 and 57.3
How enemies of God 1.24
Inexcusable 2.5,3. & 31.4. & 40.28. & 42.20. & 44. 8. & 48.5. & 50.1,2. & 65.12. & 66.4.
Defiled with the corrupt customes of the Gentiles 2.6. & 48.5
The first borne in the Church of God 14.2. & 19.25
Why compared to a worme 41.14
They leaned vpon the power of the Egyptians 19. 1. & 30.1. & 31.1
Why it is said they offered no sacrifices to God 43.23
Their afflictions diuers 1.2
Their apostacie 1.2,4,21. & 5.24
Their insatiable couetousnes 2.5
Their blinding 6.10. & 29.10,11. & 42.19
Their wilfull blinding 42.21
Their wofull condition 3.12
Their false confidence 30.17
Their rebellion and obstinacie 1.5. & 6.9,10. & 9.8, 13. & 22.6,7. & 29.7. & 30.1. & 31.1. & 48.4. & 49.6. & 57.10,17. & 59.1. & 65.2,5. & 66.4.
Their distrust 30.1. & 49.14
A fable of theirs touching Senacherib 37.38

THE TABLE.

Their vaine confidence 20.1. & 22.3. & 29.1. and 23.1,2. & 66.1
Their boasting 57.4. & 65.15
Their hypocrisie 20.13,20. & 30.10. & 58.3
Their pride 22.3. & 65.15
Idolatry 1.29. & 2.8
Impudency 48.3
Infidelitie 65.3
Ingratitude 1.2. & 2.5. & 5.2. & 22.11. & 24.5. & 26. 10. & 27.11. & 28.7. & 29.22. & 31.1. & 41.9. and 46.8. & 48.3. & 50.3. & 63.8. & 65.3
Their desperate malice 1.4
Their diseases incurable ibid
Their fathers how wicked 43.27
Their prerogatiue 19.25. & 22.1. & 42.6. & 61.9
Their presumption 30.12
Headinesse 20.2. & 26.2. & 29.1
Their sottish brutishnesse 29.9. & 42.22,25. & 57.10. and 60.9
Their superstition 65.11. & 66.3
Carelesnesse 1.7. and 28.9
Equalitie of Iewes and Gentiles 45.23
Whythe Iewes were discontented with their estate 8.6
Titles giuen the Iewes to their disgrace 7.13
Prouoked by the Gentiles 2.5. & 55.6
Ignorance voluntary condemned 5.13
Whether it be the cause of all euils 5.13
Ignorance excuseth not 27.11
A learned ignorance 6.4
Why the Hebrewes call all sinnes ignorance 27.11
Of a simple and an affected ignorance 5.13
Nothing more vnseemly in Ministers of the word, then ignorance 56.10
Iim 13.21
An abomination to erect and set vp Images 40.18
Images held to be lay mens bookes 2.8
And what fruit they reape by them ibid
A wicked imitation 57.5. and 66.3
Immortalitie of soules 57.2
Impatience must be corrected 16.5
Impenitencie how displeasing to God 22.14
A great sinne ibid.
Implicit faith of the Papists what 52.15
Imprecation of the faithfull against the Babylonians 13.12
Incredulitie a dangerous sicknes 42.8
It onely prouokes God to wrath 45.24
The punishment of it 6.10
Signes of infidelitie 40.5
Infidelitie cause of trouble in the mind 30.15
Infirme, how they must be supported 42.3
Ingratitude a detestable vice 44.21
It ought to be eschewed 60.15
Inhumanitie flowes from the contempt of God 59.3
Inhumanitie condemned 16.4
Innocencie of Christ 53.9
Good intents of Papists confuted 66.4
God reiects our good intentions, if they bee not warranted by his word 65.7
Vse and force of interrogations 23.9. and 43.19. & 48.11. and 51.19. and 57.6. and 63.1,12.
All inuentions of men condemned 1.29
Why men please themselues so much in their inuentions 1.12
Nothing angreth God more, then when we follow our owne inuentions 65.2
Inuocation of Gods name accompanied with true repentance 19.22
Inuocation put for Gods whole seruice 64.6
Very necessary in the faithfull 41.17. & 55.6
Inuocation of Saints departed, confuted 65.24
True ioy flowes from Gods fauour 12.2,6. See Faithfull, Wicked.
Isaiah, the kinsman of Christ 5.1
Exposed to the outrages of the wicked 50.4
Why he was commanded to walke naked 20.2
A Prophet appointed for the Iewes 1.1. and, 6 and 23.18
He bewailes the desolation of the Church in pitifull maner 22.4
Why hee bewailes the calamitie of the Churches enemies 16.9.
In what sense he termes the Idols prophaned 30.22
Why hee separates himselfe from the crew of the wicked 42.24. & 59.3
How he is said to command the Medes and Persians 13.2. & 21.2
He speakes in the person of another 16.9. and 21.3
He represents Gods person 21.2
Why hee preacheth to the afflicted Iewes of his time 1.7
How he is said to see God 6.1
Why called Gods friend 5.1
His authority confirmed 6.8. and 7.11. and 13.2. & 16.13. & 50.4
His inuincible constancie 8.8. and 22.17. and 25.1. and 30.8. and 39.3.5. and 62.1.
Whether his nakednesse was vnbeseeming him or no 20.2
His vocation newly confirmed 6.1
Isaiah the sonne of Amos 1.1. and 2.1. and 13.1. and 20.2
Israel a name most honourable 1.3
Named by way of dishonour 4.7
Israel double 43.6
Cause of the Israelites ruine 17.10
Their false confidence 17.9
Their ingratitude 17.9,10
Their disloialtie 17.9
Their pride 28.1
Italians, and the signes of their sorrow 15.2
Iudah put for the whole nation 1.1
Iudeah and the ruine thereof foretold 22.1
Why called the valley of vision 22.1
Iudea full of mountaines 65.9
Why called Ile 20.6
Iudgements of God true 1.15. and 59.12
Why compared to fire 66.15
Gods iudgements against the wicked, terrible 9.17
How they ought to be pondered 19.13. and 28.13
Alwaies most iust 14.21. and 16.3. and 21.2. and 30. 31. and 33.1. and 39.5. and 41.15. and 65.7.
Their vse 26.9
To iudge, put to rule 2.4. 16.5
Iudges ought to be eies, eares, hands, and mouth for the widowes and fatherlesse 1.23
Iudges put for all sorts of gouernours 3.2
Iudgement put for right 40.27
Taken for moderation in afflictions 30.18. and 64.8
Put for forme of gouernment 51.4
For right 1.17,21. and 4.4. and 32.16. and 61.8
For protection 16.5. 59.9
Iustice taken for equitie 33.15
For succour 46.13
For protection and faithfulnesse 16.5. and 45.13. and 51.5. and 54.14. and 59.9
For integritie of heart 48.1
For right 54.17. and 62.1

For

For a State well gouerned 48.18
For testimony of iustice 58.8
For truth 63.1
What true iustice is 57.1
It must be sought in God onely 45.25
Iustice hath two parts 58.7
Iust taken for tried 41.26

K

KEyes of the kingdome of heauen what 22.22
Keyes a signe of possession ibid
Key of the house of Dauid ibid
The key that opens vnto vs the doore of Christs kingdome 65.2
King of Iudah figure of Christ 14.30
King of Babylon, why compared to the morning starre 14.12
Cruelnie of the King of Babylon 14.17
His pride 14.13
A King ought to be a father of the Country 22.21
See Princes.
Duties of Kings 49.23. and 60.16
In what sense called nursing fathers of the Church 49.23. See more in 60.11. and 62.2
No true rest out of Christs kingdome 65.21
Kingdome of Christ eternall 6.7. and 16.5
Established in despight of all his enemies 29.22
Why called the end of daies 2.2
Contemptible in appearance 53.2
Kingdome of Christ and Dauid, in what they differ 2.4
Kingdome of Christ not yet compleat 60.18
Prophecied of 2.2
Peaceable 2.4
Spirituall 11.2,4,14. and 16.5. and 42.1. and 56.7. and 60.2. and 61.6. and 62.6
Beginning of Christs kingdome 53.2
Kingdome of Iudah a figure of Christs kingdome 33.17
Why the kingdome of Israel is called anointing 10.27
Wherein the defence of kingdomes consisteth 19.3
To bow the knee before Christ, what it signifies 45.23
The knowledge of Gods name consists in three things 52.6
Knowledge of God ingrauen in the mindes of all men 33.15
The foundation of all true religion 19.21
Men cannot attaine the perfection of it in this life 6.2
Men may come to the knowledge of God by beholding the heauens 40.26
Knowledge of God certaine in the gospell 25.9
How necessary the knowledge of God is 11.9. and 26.8. and 54.13

L

FEw whilest they labor, fix their eies vpon Gods blessing 65.23
Land of the liuing 38.11
Law and the Gospell wherein they differ 66.21,27
Law called Oppia 3.17
Law taken for gospell and doctrine 42.4
For the word of God 2.3
The praise of the Law 8.20
The principall end and vse of the law 45.18.19. & 51.4
The excellencie of the Law 8.20
How needfull the publishing of it is 42.21
The seat of the Law in the heart 51.7
The difference betweene the law and the gospell 66.21,23. & 61.1
Leprosie a ciuill death 6.1. 58.4
Lenten fast 58.4
Leuiathan what 27.1
Lycurgus made no law against the ingratefull 1.2
Liberality of God towards his 12.3. and 65.10
True liberalitie what 32.8
Our life but a vaine imagination, till Gods presence hath awakened vs 6.5
Life, how it ought to be ruled 33.19
Life of man limited 38.5
Shortnes of mans life 38.12
The end of mans life 38.11.18.22
Fragilitie of mans life 40.6
We must labor after integritie of life 26.2. and 43. 23. and 52.11. and 56.1
How far lawfull to desire long life 38.10,22
Light taken for prosperitie 58.8,10. and 59.9
No light where the doctrine of the Prophets is wanting 60.3
Libnah a Citie what 37.9
Lip put for tongue 19.18
To looke put for hope 20.3. and 31.1
To looke to God what 17.7
No loue comparable to Gods loue 63.9
Infinit loue of God towards his 40.3. and 42.14. & 43.4. and 46 3. and 49.11,15. and 50.10. and 59. 18. and 65.19. and 66.14
Selfeloue the welspring of all euils in men naturally 11.9
A notable description of Gods loue 65.19
Lucifer held for king of diuels absurdly 14.2
Iudgement day terrible 10.3
Luther a Prophet of God and of his death 37.1

M

MAdian 10.16
Madianites subdued by Gedeon 9.4
Magike condemned 19.3
Magistracie and ministerie what 56.10
Magistrates called of God 22.10
A singular blessing of God to haue a good Magistrate 1.26
Euill Magistrates sent of God in his wrath 22.21
Authoritie of Magistrates 3.13
Their dutie 3.4.22.21,24. and 20.22
Consolation for them 22.23
Their office an office of labour 22.4
They ought to be the fathers of the Country 3.5
Gods maiestie opposed to the pride of Magistrates 3.15
In what sense God is said to be our maker 17.7. & 37.26. and 51.13. See creation new.
The word Many, taken for All 53.12
Whether marchandising be lawfull 23.15,17
Oft times replenished with deceits 2.16
Marchants of Venice 23.8
Sacrifice of the Masse impudently maintained by Papists 19.19
Meeknes in Pastors required 42.4
Meeknes commended 11.4,6. and 53.7. and 57.15. and 61.1
No true meekenesse without the Spirit of Christ 11.6
Meeknes of Christ 42.3
All the promises grounded vpon the Mediator 9.6
The benefit of meditation 26.8
We must meditate in Gods workes of old 51.9

What ought to be our meditation in the day of affliction 63.7
The Medes authors of Babels ruine 13.17
Their crueltie 13.18
In what sense called vessels of wrath 13.5
How said to be sanctified 13.3
Men miserable by their owne fault 59.11
Why compared to grashoppers 40.22
They doe in vaine promise vnto themselues any certaine abiding heere 34.17
To trust in men vaine 29.5
Their felicitie consists in obedience 1.19
Their glory vaine 19.11
Their blockishnes 55.2
Their hearts are in Gods hands 13.3.14. and 19.2
Their condition out of Christ 49.8.9
Their nature before their conuersion 65.25
Mens daies limitted 38.5
That which is attributed to them, is taken from God 31.3
Their power not to be feared 7.4
Why that is sometime attributed to men, which belongs to God 1.16. and 41.16. and 45.14. and 62.12
God corrects in measure 27.8. and 64.9
Menaces of the Prophets to be feared 13.5
Mercy a testimony of pietie 1.18
It ought to be preferred before sacrifices 58.9
To whom it is promised 64.11
Mercy of God great 23.17. and 19.24. and 30.18. and 31.6. and 33.2. and 40.2. and 54.7,10. and 55.7. and 57.16,18. and 63.7.15.
Merits of men refuted 43.4,25. and 44.2. and 63.7. and 65.2
What ought to be the principall care of Ministers 62,1
Ignorance in Ministers vnseemly 56.10
Ministry of Christ effectuall 42.4. and 53.10
Acommendation of the ministerie of the word 50.10. and 62.7
With what authoritie Ministers must be furnished 21.10
What a maiestie the word hath in the ministry of man 13.2.4. & 21.2
A lesson for Ministers 2.10
The voice of Gods Minister, the voice of God 50.10
Ministers must looke to meete with oppositions in their ministery 50.6. See Miracle.
What discretion ought to be in Ministers 1.28
Miracles joined with the word, are as seales put vnto it 7.10
No new miracles must bee forged to purchase authority to Christ 1.3
Vse of miracles 7.10
It is a miracle that a faithfull Minister should stand 49.2
Moabites and their originall 15.11
Their crueltie and inhumanitie 15.1. and 16.3. and 25.10
Their ruine foretold 15.1
Their flight 15.4. and 16.2
Their obstinacie 16.1
Their pride 16.6
God must not be mocked 30.28
Monkes and their vowes 19.21
Monarchy of the Babylonians composed of diuers nations 8.9. & 17.12
Stronger then other Monarchies 13.11,14.26. and 47.5
Monarchy of Tyre very renowned 23.12
Mount Olympus 2.2
Mountaine put for Temple 16.1
Mount Zion put for the Church 10.12
Consecrated vnto God 18.7
Mountaine of holinesse put for the rule of well liuing 65.11
High mountaine for Babylon 13.2
The multitude reiects the little flocke 66.5
In what sense the word Murtherers is taken 1.15.21
Musicke not to be condemned 5.12

N

NAbalists described 58.7
Nabuchadnezar Gods scourge 42.25
Name taken for renowned 62.2
A new name giuen the Church 62.2
Fathers must impose the name vpon their children 7.14
Name of God for God himselfe 30.27.32
Name called vpon what 4.1
Nature of Christs kingdome 62.6
Nature in a maner restored by Christ 16.8
Nauigation not to be condemned 2.16
Nebo an Idoll of the Chaldeans 46.1
A Citie of Moab 15.20
No new thing for brethren in the Church to bee enemies 66.5
New heauens and a new earth 65.17. & 66.22
New for notable and excellent 42.10
Nilus 11.15. and 18.2. and 19.5
A flood watering Egypt, and seruing in stead of raine for the Country 19.7
The drying vp of Nilus, a signe of barrennes ibid.
Niniue the capitall Citie of the kingdome of Assur 37.37
Noph a renowned City in Egypt 19.13

O

OBedience the mother of true religion 1.29
Most acceptable to God 1.12.19.29. and 6.8. and 43.23. and 58.14. and 65.4.
Obedience nothing without faith 65.11
Passiue obedience of Christ 53.7
Christs obedience absolues vs before God 53.11
Obediencee to the first Table, must bee tried by obedience to the second 1.18
Obedience better then sacrifice 1.29
He that is oldest in the Church, must resemble a little child 66.11
Oath, a kind of Gods seruice 19.18. & 45.23. & 48.1. and 65.16
An oath must be taken with reuerence 45.23. and 62.8
Forme of an oath in the Scriptures 5.9
Why the forme of an oath is not fully vttered 14. 24. and 62.8
How much an Omer containes 5.10
Onias and his counsell to Tholemeus 19.19
Oracles of the Idols false 41.22. and 42.9
Oreb a Citie, whence it tooke her name 10.26
Order peruerted 5.27. and 38.22
God hath care of orphans 1.17.23
Ornaments of the Popish Church 48.18
Organs 1.30
Ouerweening of the Iewes 29.9. and 57.10
Pride and ouerweening vaine in the wicked 5.26. and 7.2. and 9.19. and 16.1. and 24.17. & 28.1 5.18. and 29.1.15. and 32.10.17. and 47.7. and 50.11. and 59.4

Ouer-

Ouerweening rooted naturally in the flesh 44.19

P

THe impietie of the Papacie discouered by the gospell 32.6
Papists the sworne enemies of the gospell 34.5
Why they cannot agree with the gospellers 31.3
Papists abhorre gospellers as strange monsters 8.18
Papists confound remission of sinnes with repentance 59.20
Papists ioine God with Idols 17.8
Papists rob God of his honour 43.11
What schoolemaster hath taught the Papists to speake like Christians 36.13
Papists glory in their multitude 44.11
How Papists take Kings for nursing fathers of the Church 49.23
Papists preferre their idle ceremonies before the true Sacraments 20.2
Papists will none of Christ for their teacher 55.4
Whence the Papists fetch their authoritie for abstaining from flesh 22.13
Whence the Papists proue auricular confession 38.15
Whence they haue drawne their seuen formed grace 11.2
How they establish their free will 1.19.20
How they proue the dead see all wee doe 29.22
Vpon what they ground the intercession of Saints 37.35. and 63.17
Pride of Papists 1.26. and 8.14. and 41.19. and 61.3
Their boldnesse in prophaning Gods mysteries 1.3
Their sottishnesse touching the worshippe called Dulia 2.8
Their execrable blasphemie touching the reading of the Scripture 48.17
Their blindnes 44.15
Their slanders against the Ministers of the gospell 32.6. and 36.7.10.14. and 54.17.
Their conscience alwaies in perplexitie 32.18
How vaine their seruice is 29.13
Their childish distinction touching remission of sins 33.24. and 38.17. and 43.25. and 53.5
Their doctrine touching repentance 55.7
Their Church what 11.9. and 28.17. and 3?.6.22
Their Bishops what 48.16
A fable of theirs touching the Oxe and the Asse 1.3
Their implicit faith 43.10. and 52.15. and 54.13
Their opinion touching the worke wrought 1.11
Their felicitie 46.5
Their fury in maintaining their superstitions 44.14
Their idolatry 1.29. & 40.18. & 41.7. & 44.10
Their impudency 11.4
Their wofull perplexitie of spirit 28.12
Their vaine trauailes 30.6
Their bounty in Idoll worship 65.11
Their language heeretofore barbarous, now what 36.13
Their obstinacie, and whence it springs 41.1
Their sacrifice full of sacrilege 61.9
Their sacraments what 20.2. and 66.23
Their satisfactions confuted 33.24
Their hurtfull simplicity 6.4. and 44.20
Their superstitious seruice of Angels 37.36
Their extraordinary praiers 16.12
Their bragging 1.30. and 29.14. and 36.19. & 45.20. and 49.21. and 62.5.
Their vowes what 19.21

Pastors.

Pastors must not onely feed, but defend the flocke 62.6
Pastors faithfull, a singular blessing ibid.
How necessary in the world 49.17
Why so hated of men 30.10
Exposed to the slanders of many 29.21. and 30.6.8. and 51.8
All Priests 23.18. and 61.6. and 66.20.21
How the spouse of the Church 62.5
They haue need of confirmation 8.11
How they are said to remit sinnes 43.25. and 63.12
Their cheerefulnesse 51.8
Couetousnes in them condemned 56.10
What the authority of Pastors is 43.25. & 47.1
Their condition 50.6. and 51.8
Their consolation 6.10. and 8.16. and 28.14. and 29.21. and 49.4. and 51.16. and 62.7.
Their constancy and magnanimitie 8.16. and 29. 21. and 50.7
Their contempt 59.21
Drunkennes detestable in Pastors 56.12
Confidence of Pastors 7.13. and 50.8
Their glory 49.5
Their labor most acceptable vnto God ibid.
Their meeknes 42.3
Their conflict 42.1. and 49.4. and 50.7
Their sending 52.7
Their dutie and office 2.10. and 5.23. and 7.13. and 11.4. and 21.10. and 22.4. and 35.3.4. and 39.3.8. and 40.6. and 42.3. and 47.1. and 49.3. and 50.4. and 51.6. and 56.10. and 62.1.6.10.11.
Two offices in Pastors 4.30
Their praiers 62.7
They must be regarded 46 23
Their patience 51.8
How necessary their presence is 49.17
Their discretion 1.28
Complaint 49.3. and 53.1
Seuerity 58.1
Vehemencie ibid.
Slothfulnes condemned in Pastors 56.10.11
What care Pastors ought to haue for the saluation of the people 6.11
What trust God commits to Pastors 5.1

Patience.

Patience of God 42.14. and 57.11. and 65.6
Gods patience must not be abused 65.6
Patience necessary in the faithfull 13.22. and 16.5. and 18.7. and 24.22. and 26.8. and 20.21. and 30. 18. and 33.2. and 34.8.16. and 40.26.31. and 42. 10. and 45.9.15. and 49.14. and 51.4.7. and 53.7. and 61.7. and 62.1. and 65.24.
Peace promised to the Church 11.13
Peace put for prosperitie 9.6. & 26.3.12. & 48.18. & 52.7. & 54.10.13. & 66.12.
Peace proceedes from Gods presence 41.10
Peace nourisheth iustice and integritie 59.8
How farre to be sought 32.17. & 38.17. & 59.8
Peace of conscience the fruit of the gospell 2.4
Peace of conscience proper onely to the faithfull 32.18
The gospell sets man at peace with man 2.4
Way to seeke peace 32.17
Pellagians, heretikes 54.13
Papists become Pellagians 54.13
The chiefe perfection of righteousnes 1.4
Three persons in one diuine essence 6.3.8

Perſeuerance of the faithfull 25.9
Whether Peter were at Rome or no 29.1
Peter made to worke miracles by the Papiſts being dead, who proteſted he did none by his owne power being aliue 48.5
How Philoſophers diſpute of vertues & vices 32.5. and 53.11
Phyſicke not to be contemned 38.21
In what ſenſe it is ſaid that a piller ſhould be ſet vp in Egypt 19.19
Wee muſt not plead nor contend with Infidels 36.21
The end why we are planted in the Chnrch 60.21. and 61.3
Two ſorts of planting 61.3
Poperie, with all the filth thereof, hath proceeded from the domeſtike enemies of the Church 24.16
Popiſh Prieſts ſacrilegious 61.6
Popiſh preparations 61.3
Pope, Antichriſt 49.23
He impudently brags to be Chriſts Vicar 60.10
Thunderings of the Pope againſt the true ſeruants of God 66.5
Why his impietie was not forthwith diſcouered 29.15
Whence it comes that many defend his tyrannie 49.23. and 60.9.10
His Perſianlike pride 49.23. and 60.10
And his Clergies alſo 60.10
A prophane King 49.23
Poſterity of the faithfull bleſſed 65.23
Poſteritie of vnbeleeuers accurſed 14.20. and 34.11
Care muſt be had of the poſteritie 38.9.16.19. and 39.8. & 41.25. & 43.10. & 49.18.
The faithfull oft times richer in their pouerty, then the greateſt kings of the earth in their ſuperfluitie 65.13
Power of Chriſt inuincible 9.6
Power of God muſt be conſidered two waies 52.10
Gods power muſt be ioined to his promiſes 14.26
His power not idle 26.4
It muſt not be meaſured by mens capacitie 21.10
It muſt not be tied to ſecond cauſes 42.15. & 43.21
Inuincible 28.21
Infinit 21.10. & 40.22. & 46.5. & 48.13. & 49.24. & 50.2. & 51.9.12. & 54.5. & 55.12,13. & 59.17. & 62.10. & 63.5,6,15. & 66.19.
We muſt not feare the power of men 7.4
Gods power muſt not be ſeparate from his word 44.24
What the Papiſts meane by Gods abſolute power 23.9
How Gods power muſt be conſidered 14.26. & 21.10. & 29.22. & 30.30. & 40.12.26. & 42.5. & 43.11, 12. & 44.24. & 45.7,16. & 49.10. & 61.11.
Praier put for Gods whole worſhip 64.6
Praier is a powring out of our hearts before God 63.16
Praier neceſſary in the faithfull 41.17. & 51.9
To lift vp praier what 37.4
Praier of Papiſts full of doubtings 33.2
Praier ioined with praiſe 12.4
Praier and preaching muſt goe together 62.7
Praier the greateſt ſeruice of God 56.7. & 64.6
Praiſes of God ought to ſound without ceaſing 6.3. & 38.18. & 42.10.12. & 44.23. & 49.13.
Gods praiſes muſt proceede from affection of the heart 25.3. & 29.23
Gods praiſes muſt bee ſounded forth euery where 24.16. & 43.21
Who fit to praiſe God 12.4
High Prieſt, a figure of Chriſt 29.14
Euangelicall prieſthood 66.20
Popiſh prieſthood what 61.6. & 66.20
Prerogatiue of the Iewes 19.25. & 22.1. & 42.6. and 61.9
Preſence of God chaſeth away feare 41.10. & 43.5
A dangerous thing to accept preſents 5.23

Pride.

Pride of women 3.16
Pride of the Iewes 22.3. & 65.15
Pride of the Iſraelites 28.1
Pride of the Moabites 16.6
Pride of Papiſts 126. & 8.14. & 41.19
Pride of Babels King 14.13
How deteſtable pride is before God 2.11,13.11. & 14.15. & 16.6. & 23.9. & 26.5. & 30.17. & 39.5. & 47.8
Pride alwaies ioined with impietie 51.23
How pride muſt be repulſed 2.22
Pride the cauſe of ruine 16.6,7
Princes are called of God 22.20
They ought to be fathers of the people 22.21
Their dutie and office 30.22. & 32.1. & 49.23
What courſe Princes take to plunge themſelues the more freely in their pleaſures 21.5
It is not alwaies profitable to bee ſubiects of great Princes 8.7. & 19.4
Princes doe great harme by their bad examples 1.23
Good Princes muſt not onely care for their owne times, but for the poſteritie alſo 22.24
Princes haunted with flatterers 19.11
Princes muſt beware whom they aduance 22.18
A conſolation for good Princes 22.23
Princes can hardly bee brought to thinke themſelues men 10.18
Princes houſes ſhould be Gods houſes 3.14
Principalitie of Chriſt 9.7
Prophanation of Gods ſeruice 1.14
Outward profeſſion neceſſary in the faithfull 45.25
Promiſes of God moſt certaine 52.6
Wee muſt patiently wait for the performance of Gods promiſes 7.9
The promiſes of God include temporall bleſſings as well as ſpirituall 65.10
The promiſes and the execution thereof goe together 52.6
The neceſſity of prophecie 42.27
In what time the prophecies were gathered 7.7
Prophecies were not orderly collected 22.9. and 44.17
Prophecies were not written for the men of one age onely 30.8
Authority of prophecies eſtabliſhed 44.28
Vſe of prophecies 41.17
Prophecies agreeing to Chriſt 11.1
Whereunto the prophecies tend 15.1
Vehemencie of the Prophets 1.2. & 2.9. & 3.15. and 7.13
Prophets put for all teachers 3.2
Prophets Gods ſeruants 43.10
How far ſubiect to Kings 39.5
Why in old time called ſeers 1.1. & 21.5.6. & 29.10. and 30.10
Counſels muſt bee asked of the Prophets in times of of calamitie 37.2

Prophets ſpake not of themſelues 1.1
God neuer threatens ſo ſeuerely by them, but hee leaues ſome hope of pardon 65.8
They ſpake of Babylon obſcurely 21.1.3
The Prophets in their ſermons are wont to allude much to Moſes 3.12. and 8.20. and 11.12. & 17.9. 10.12. & 22.2. & 33.14. & 34.16. & 43.5.28. & 51.3. and 65.21.
Prophets the mouth of the Lord 9.19
Why the Prophets are wont to inforce the duties of the ſecond Table rather then thoſe of the firſt 1.18
To reiect the Prophets, is to reiect God himſelfe 30.10
The Prophets ſometimes ſpeake in the perſon of another 21.3
The doctrine of the Prophets indures for euer 37.2
Prophets neuer void of humane affections 6.11. and 22.4
They often take vpon them the perſon of the Churches enemies 15.5. & 16.9.11. & 21.3
In denouncing iudgements againſt nations, they mention thoſe things chiefly in which they moſt abounded 16.8. & 19.8
Prophets, the friend of the bridegroome 5.1
Rules to be obſerued in reading the Prophets 1.2. 18.29. & 5.17. & 7.14. & 9.6.7. & 10.24. & 13.9,10, 19. & 14.22. & 27.10.13. & 30.8.25.30. & 32.1.16. 19. & 34.1.4. & 41.16.24. & 42.1. & 44.1. & 48.14. 21. & 49.1.3. & 54.2. & 55.12. & 56.1.7. & 57.3. and 60.6.10. & 61.21. & 64.1.4. & 65.13.21. and 66.15 20.25
Proſperity of Cyrus was of God 48.15
Proſperitie of the wicked tranſitory 5.16. & 7.2. & 8.21. & 13.13. and 15.4. and 16.3. and 18.5. and 26. 14. and 28.1. and 32.10. and 34.5. and 41.14. and 45.16. and 47.7.8. and 51.7. and 61.7. and 66.15.
Proſperity muſt not be abuſed 38.17
Proſperitie muſt be vſed with ſobrietie 32.13
God cannot indure the proud 13.11. & 16.6,7. and 22.17

¶ Prouerbiall ſpeeches, applied to ſundry vſes in the Commentary: and noted out in Chapter, verſe, and ſection.

As like as one egge is to another 1.10.1
Euery one hath the heart of a King 2.11.2
The vine loues the high hils, the Weſt, and the ſide of a wood 5.1.5
An ill weed growes apace 14.21.4
Venetians reuenues lie in the ſea 23.3.1
The daughter deuoured the mother 23.12.3. and verſ.13.2
Ioy ſhines then in her perfection, when there is matter of ioy 24.11.2
The Church cannot flee her home enemies 24.16.6
It is beſt neuer to be borne, or being borne, to die quickly 26.17.4
To flie without wings 30.1.9
An houres bird 32.8.2
Caterpillars the calamitie of the Common-wealth 33.4.2
A rich ſonne of a great theeſe 37.10.2
Man, a daies bird 38.13.1
It is harder to beare proſperity, then aduerſitie 39.2.2
The Prophets trouble the feaſt 39.3.1
The Eagle in the cloudes 40.31.2
Of a naughtie Crow, a naughty egge 43.27.1
Money the ſinewes of war 44.2.1
To howle amongſt wolues 59.15.1
Such birds, ſuch egges 65.7
A terrible prouerbe 65.15

Prouidence of God how conſidered 10.13. and 18.4. and 23.9. and 25.1. and 40.22.23. and 42.24. and 43.9. and 44.28. and 45.18. and 51.6. and 54.16. and 57.1.15
That the world is guided by Gods prouidence, is not a thing eaſilie beleeued 13.1
In what ſenſe the word Prouerbe is taken 14.3
Purgation of ſinnes muſt be ſought in Chriſt onely 53.10
The Church is purged by the Spirit 4.4

Q

DIuers queſtions with their ſolutions 1.7.18. & 6.1,4,10. and 7.12. and 7.12. and 10.6.15. and 11.13. & 14.21.27. and 19.14. and 27.9. and 37.26. and 38.4.7. and 44.25. and 54.16

R

RAbbins coiners of fables 37.36. and 38.1
Rabbines carefull obſeruers of the leaſt prickes in the Hebrew 9.7
Rabſeche proud and a blaſphemer 36.10
Rabſeches ſpeech full of pride and outrage againſt God 36.13
Rabſeche the diuels mouth 36.10
Raine, rare in Egypt 19.7
Rebellion the cauſe of all euils 6.10
Rebellion of the wicked 5.24. and 16.1. and 18. 19. and 57.11
Rebellion of the Iewes 1.5. and 6.9,10. and 9.8,13. and 22.6,7. and 26.7. and 30.1. and 31.1,1. & 48. 4. and 49.6. and 57.10,17. and 59.1. and 65.25. & 66.4
The true way to be reconciled vnto God 59.20
Renouncing of our ſelues goes before our reconciliation with God 55.7
Redemption a ſpeciall gift vnder the kingdome of Chriſt 35.10
Redemption obtained by Chriſt, ought to bee prized aboue all other benefits 9.6
Redemption wrought by Chriſt, excels all things in the world beſides 43.18,19. and 52.12
Redemption muſt be extolled openly 42.12
The end of our redemption 27.13. & 29.23.32. and 35.10. and 43.2. and 44.28. and 55 13 & 63.18.
Difference betweene the redemption out of Egypt, and that out of Babylon 52.12
The true reformation of the Church 2.4. & 32.5.8
Our regeneration onely in part 65.17
The end of our regeneration 43.7.21 See new creation.
All religion out of Chriſt, falſe and vaine 25.9
Difference betweene religion and ſuperſtition 41.22
But one remedy left to cure our vices 66.4
Remedies lawfull not to be neglected 31.1
Popiſh diſtinction betweene the remiſſion of the fault, and puniſhment refuted 19.22. and 33.24. and 38.17. and 43.25. and 48.9. and 53.5
The renouncing of our ſelues needfull 55.7
Repentance true, what 19.22. and 30.22. and 55.7. and 59.12
The doctrine of repentance handled 22.12
The nature of repentance handled 55.7

What

What our repentance ought to be 27.9
Repentance the proper worke of the holy Ghost 1.25
Repentance the beginning of healing 6.10. and 19.21,22
Repentance commended 31.6. and 33.15
It is the proper worke of God 1.16
Late repentance taxed 16.1.3
No repenting in God 14.27. & 19.25. & 41.9. and 59.20
Repentance of Cain and Esau 26.11
Repentance must neuer bee seuered from the promise of saluation 55.7
Fruits of repentance 1.16. and 27.9. and 31.7 and 56.1
Beginning of repentance 9.21. and 31.7
Two parts of repentance 1.16
The true meanes to attaine repentance ibid.
Signes of repentance 22.12. and 30.22. and 37.1. and 45.14. and 58.5
Repentance containes in it the change of the whole man 55.7
When reprehensions haue their vse 7.13
Reprehensions how necessary 29.21. and 39.8
Reprobates tamed by Gods scourges, and how 2.17
How dead whilest they liue ibid.
How instruments of Gods glory 43.21
Inexcusable 10.6. and 8. 4. and 16. 3. and 26. 10. and 40.21
God forgets their names 43.1
Their names not inrolled in the booke of life 4.3
Difference betweene the elect and reprobate 5.19
Where God is said to rest 11.10. and 29.1. & 30 and 37.10,26,35. and 45,13. and 66.1 4.
Rest for the Church 11.10
Restauration of the Church, a singular argument of Gods power 44.26
The restauration of the Church belongs to God onely 11.11. and 16.5. and 28.16. and 29.18.23. & 31.7. and 32.15. and 41.20. and 42.16. and 44.3. and 44.19,24. and 52.9. and 56.8. and 60.21
The restauration of the Church founded vpon the kingdome of Christ 4.2
Restauration of the Church a speciall worke of God 25.3
Resurrection of Christ 52 14. and 53.8
Resurrection of the wicked shall turne to their ruine 26.19. & 66.3
Resurrection common both to good and bad 26.19
To returne into ones heart, what it signifies 49.19
We must looke for no new reuelations 59.21
Two ordinary meanes of reuelation 1.1
Whether it be lawfull to reuenge 41.15
No riches can satisfie a wicked man 65.13
To rise in the morning, what it signifies 5.11
How God is said to rise 51.9
Rome once how great, and what now 37.16
Rome a shop of all wickednesse 37.16
Romans sacrificed men aliue 66.3
Romanists ridiculous 29.1
Whether Peter were at Rome ibid.
Roman Idoll 60.14
Ruine of Assyrians foretold 30.27,28. & 33.1
Ruine of the Babylonians foretold 13.1. and 47.9
Of Damascus foretold 17.1
Of Duma foretold 21.1
Ruine of Idolaters fearefull 1.3.1. and 2.18. and 65.12
Ruine of the wicked incomprehensible 30.33
Why compared to a sacrifice 34.6
Ruine of the wicked aduanceth Gods glory 63.3
The horrible and sudden ruine of the wicked described 3.1. and 5.16. & 10.17,18,26. & 13.6. and 14.30. & 15.1,9. & 16.9. & 17.12,14. & 18.5,6. and 19.1. and 21.10. and 24.17. & 26 14. and 29.17. & 30.13,14,27,30. and 31.9. & 33.4,11,23,24. & 34.4, 7. and 37.38. & 40.24. and 43.17. and 47.11. & 49. 24. & 50.9. and 51.23. and 59.17,19. and 63.1. and 66.6,8,24
Ruine of Iudeah foretold 22.1
Ruine of the Moabites foretold 15 1
Ruine of Palestina foretold 14.28
Ruine of Syria foretold 17.1
Of the Idumeans 34.1,10,11. and 63.1

S

SAbbath put for Gods whole seruice 56.2,6
The Sabbath of the faithfull perpetuall 58.13. and 66.23
Why the Sabbath is carefully commanded 58.13
Sackcloth and ashes signes of repentance 22.12
Sackcloth in old time a garment testifying sorrow 20.2. & 58.5
Whether sackcloth & ashes be fitting for our times or no 58.5
Sacraments must not be e separate from the word 6.7. and 20.2
Sacraments serue as ladders to Gods children 37.15
The end and vse of Sacraments 6.7. and 20.3. and 38.7. and 40.19
The thing it selfe is giuen in the Sacrament with the signe 6.7
Sacrifice of the Masse impudently maintained by the Papists 19.19
Spirituall sacrifices of the faithfull 66.23
Sacrifices of hypocrites execrable 1.15
Sacrificing of children 57.5
Sacrificing of men aliue 66.3
Three things noted in the sacrifices of the Iewes 60.6,7
Saduces and their error refuted 30.32
Saints departed, no intercessors 63.16. vers.17. sect.6. & 65.24
Whether the Saints dead, pray for vs 63.16
Intercession to Saints inuented by Papists 63.17
How wee ought to esteeme of the communion of Saints 63.7
How Papists snatch vp words to prooue the intercession of Saints 63.17
Salmanazar an enemie of the Iewes 9.1
Saluation must be expected from God onely 63.5
Saluation of the Church eternall 51.2,8
Saluation of the faithfull ioined with Gods glory 48.11. and 64.12
Saluation of the Church ioined with the ruine of the wicked 59.18
So the saluation of the faithfull 63.4 and 66.7
Why the Medes and Persians are said to be sanctified 13.3
Sanctuary, what 8.14
Satan minister of Gods vengeance 19.14
How hee serues to Gods glory in despight of him 2.19
How he turnes men from their confidence in God 36.17
How powerfully he workes in the wicked 57.5
His guiles 26.20. and 27.1. & 30.6. and 36.6,10,13, 15,16, and 37.2. and 38.3. and 40.17. and 41.12. and

and 42.8. & 45.20. & 49.17.
His tyranny against the Church 21.21
His kingdome shall be destroied 27.1
Satisfaction for sinne must be sought in God onely 33.24
Popish satisfactions refuted ibid.
Whence the doctrine of satisfaction came ibid.
Satyres, how called by the Frenchmen 13.21. and 34.14
To say, put for to thinke and resolue 3.10
To Say, To conclude 14.13. and 47.7
Scribe put for Clerke of the tributes 33.18
The holy Scripture speakes after the manner of men 40.12. & 59.16. & 63.19. & 65.6
How needfull it is to reade the Scriptures 48.17
Vtilitie of the Scriptures 30.8. & 48.17
Vse of the Scriptures 50.4
Seleucia builded neere Babylon 13.12
Inordinate vse of smels taxed 3.14
Sennacherib slaine by his owne sonnes 37 38
His desperate fury and cruelties 33.7
His disloialty 33.8
His pride 14.14
He committed a double blasphemie 10.10
Sepulchre put for death 53.9
Why the Angels are called Seraphims 6.2
The seruice of Angels 63.9
Gods seruice spirituall from the beginning of the world 1.13. and 56.7. and 66.1
Seruice of God spread euery where 65.16
Which is the true and lawfull seruice of God 1.12. and 45.24
God requires as well the outward, as the inward seruice 45.23
Seruice to the Saints in the Papacie 48.5
Seruants of God who 11.3
How Christ is said to be Gods seruant 42.1. and 43. 10. & 52.13. and 53.11. and 55.5
Seueritie in Pastors 58.1
A note how to discerne Christs sheepe from goates 65.10
Shebna the Chancellor of the King 22.15. and 36.3
A traitor and an hypocrite 22.15. & 36.22
Why sent to Rabsheche 36.3
In what sense his state is said to be firme 22.25
His pride 22.16
His banishment foretold 22.15
Sidon, a Citie much renowned, and her situation 23.2
Signes for the situation, course, and diuers aspects of the starres 44.25
Signes of infidelitie 7.19
Signes of sorrow particular to euery nation 15.2. and 32.11
How farre lawfull to require signes 7.12
Signes of repentance 22.12
Two sorts of signes 7.12. & 37.30
Vse of signes 7.10. and 38.7
The truth neuer separate from the signes, though distinguished 6.7
The thing it selfe giuen in the Sacraments with the signes 6.7
Siim, what 13.21
Silence put for death 6.5.15.1
Silo a flood 8.7
Single life rashly vowed among the Papists 19.21
Simplicitie of Papists, what 6.4. & 44.20
That sinne is not to be esteemed light, which God hath forbidden 65.4
Sinne put for offring for sinne 53.10
Confession of sinne necessary 64.5
Remission of sins proceedes from Gods free mercy 43.25
How men suffer themselues to bee allured by sinne 5.18
Sinners put for wicked 13.9. and 33.14
Slowneſse of men to acknowledge Gods iudgements 21.3
Prosperity must be vsed with sobrietie 32.13
Sobriety commended 19.13
Sensleſnes of the Gentiles 45.20
Of men 55.2
Of Idolaters 42.17
Of the Iewes 1.7. & 28.9. & 29.9. & 57.10
Wicked willingly senseſſe 26.11
We must shake off all senſleſnes betimes 5.4. & 7. 25. & 9.14. & 31.9. & 38.17. & 41.17. & 43.3. & 44. 19. & 50.4. & 51.12. & 55.2
The ouerthrow of Sodome, set as an example before all reprobates 13.19. and 34.9
Song of the harlot 23.15
Song of Hezekiah 38.20
A new song 42.10
Of songs, See Chap. 5.1. & 12.1
Sonnes of the Church taught of God 54.13
The Sophisters distinction touching the fault and the punishment 33.24. and 38.17. and 43.25. and 44.22. and 48.9
Tattle of Sophisters touching the nature and qualitie of hell fire 30.33. and 66.15.24
Soueraigne good, what 64.6
Soule immortall 57.2
Principall parts of the soule 26.9
Soule put for the stomacke 5.14
Error touching the sleeping of the soule 57.2
Spaniards addicted to spoile in warres 13.14
Speeches of the wicked 9.10. and 10.13. and 22.13. and 28.15,19. and 29.15. and 33.14. and 41.5. and 56.12. and 66.5
Speech of Idolaters 42.17
To speake to the heart, what 40.2
Speaking by way of comparison 2.12. and 43.18. and 54.9,10,13. and 60.16
Wicked spirits why they seeke places vnhabited 13.21
Spirit put for vnderstanding 40.14
Office of Gods spirit 40.7.
Gods spirit wont to attribute that to men, which himselfe worketh 1.16
Why the Spirit of God hath composed some writings in verse 5.1
Starres infinite in their multitudes 40.26
Their darkening put for Gods extreame indignation 13.10
Superstition the cause of all euils 1.29
Alwaies accompanied with pride 36.18
Painted ouer with the colour of deuotion 1.29
Welspring of superstitions 8.11. and 65.3
Superstition of the Iewes 65.11. and 66.3
Of the Israelites 17.8. and 65.4
Of the Papists in worshipping Angels 37.36
Heape of superstitions in the Papacie 66.3
How to discerne superstition 1.14
Superstitions so many corruptions of Gods true seruice 1.14
The superstitious sinne not of ignorance 44.18
Supply to the text 1.16. and 8.21. & 24.11. & 44 2. and 50.4
Extraordnary supplications of Papists 16.12
Against such as denie the vse of the sword 2 4. & 3.4

Why God is faine to sweare 14.24. and 45.23. and 62.8
To sweare, put for Gods whole worship 65.16

T

FEast of Tabernacles 54.2
Why the Prophet vrgeth the duties of the second Table rather then those of the first 1.17
The sum of the second Table 56.1
The duties of both Tables must goe together 56.2
The obseruation of the whole Law comprehended vnder the duties of the second Table 58.6
Taile put for false Prophets 9.15
Taile put for the meaner sort 19.15
True maner of teaching 2.3. and 55.12
None shall euer be a good teacher in the Church, that hath not first beene a good disciple of the Church 50.4
None fit to teach others, but such as haue been first taught of the Lord 50.4
The excellencie of Christs spirituall Temple 60.17
Temple taken for all the ceremonies 66.1
Why the Temple is called Gods rest ibid.
The Temple of God, indifferently in all places 66.20
The Temple in Ierusalem inclosed with walles 22.9
How it is Gods house 56.7. and 66.1
How sanctified 64.10
The second Temple farre inferior to the first 60.17
Temple of the Iewes prophaned 56.5
Vse of the Temple 64.10
Temple of Ianus 2.4
The Church compared to a Tent, and in what respect 54.2
Tentations of the faithfull 25.21. & 36.10. and 63.17
To tempt God, what 7.12
Testament old and new, how they differ 19.21
Those taxed that alleage texts insufficient, to proue the thing in question 4.2. and 6.3. and 26.12. and 53.8. and 64.6
Thanksgiuing commanded 12.1. and 25.1. and 26.1. and 41.16. and 42.10. and 44.23. and 49.13. and 51.11. and 52.9. and 61.11. and 62.9
Tartan a Captaine 20.1
Tharsis, and what is meant by it 2.16. & 31.1. and 66.19
All things both in their beginning and end, depend vpon God 19.15
A great misery to be depriued of holy things 48.19
Things to come may bee preuented three waies 19.12
God hath two thrones 57.15. and 66.1,2
Titles of Christ 9.6
The tongue the instrument of speech 3.8
The tongue the image of the mind 59.4. and 33.15
Tongue of the Egyptian sea 11.15
The tongue a pestilent enemie 54.17.
Tophet, how it signifies hell 30.33
Mens traditions and their worth 29.13
Traffiques of Papists 33.21
Tranquillitie of the faithfull, what 3.22
Trauaile of the wicked vaine 17.11. & 57.9,10
Trembling double 66.2
What necessary in the faithfull ibid.
Trembling of the wicked 7.2
Trust in man vaine 2.22. and 29.2. See confidence.
Tumults of people come of God 29.2
Turkes prosperity, whence it comes 36.9
Pride of the Turkes in regard of their multitude 45.20
Pride of the Turkes in respect of their victories 36.19
Turkes haue gotte great ground within few yeeres 13.5
What god the Turkes and Iewes worship 25.9
Whether towers and foretresses bee pleasing vnto God 26.5

Tyrants.

How odious Tyrants are to all the world 14.7
Why compared to cloudes 14.16
Their death 14.7,18
Their dominion proceedes from Gods wrath 26.13
Tyrants haue their bounds limited, which they cannot passe 33.1
Tyrants had rather be feared then loued 14.17
Tyrants flattered of all whilest they liue, but detested of all being dead 14.20
Why God suffers them to take their swinge for a time 22.23
Tyre, a rich and renowned Citie 23.1
Why called the daughter of Zidon 23.12
Why compared to an harlot 23.16
The Monarchy of Tyre in times past very renowned 23.12
The wealth of Tyre described 23.3
Her ruine foretold 23.1
Her conuersion 23.17,18

V

VAlley of Achor 65.10
Valley of vision put for Iudeah 22.1
Vanitie of men 40.6,15,17.30
Vanitie of Idols, how great 41.29. & 46.2
Vaine boasting of the wicked 59.4
Of Papists 1.30. & 29.14. and 36.19. & 45.20. and 49.21. & 62.5
Vanitie and pride of the Iewes 57.4. & 65.15
Vehemency of Pastors 58.1
Of the Prophets 1.2. and 2.9. and 3.15. & 7.13
Venice a Citie most wealthy 47.1
Neuer taken 23.12
Venetians rich Merchants 23.8
Victory of the Church certaine 11.14
Victory of the faithfull certaine 8.9. and 9.4
Victory comes wholly from God 47.6
We must not glory in victories ibid.
Christs victory made ours 53.12
Victuals are taken from men two waies 3.1
Vision of God why it brings death to men 6.5
Visions and dreames, the two ordinary meanes by which God manifested himselfe to the fathers 1.1. See Chap. 21.2. and 22.1,5. & 29.11.
Visitation put for iudgement 10.3
To visit, for to iudge, and destroy 13.11. & 24.21
To visit, put for to behold 24.22
In what sense God is said to visit 24.2
Of the vncircumcised 52.1
Vnion betweene Christ and his Church described 49.3,8
A place misapplied to the Virgin Mary 53.2
Virgins but too curious in decking their haire 47.2
For the phrase of virgin daughter, see 23.12. & 37.22. and 47.1
Voice of God vnderstood of dumbe creatures 1.2
Vowes, a part of Gods worship 19.21
Vowes of hypocrites, what ibid.

Vowes of Papists, what ibid.
Gods word the rule of vowes ibid.
Why God yeelds not forthwith to our vowes 30.19
In what sense Vriah is said to be a faithfull witnesse 8.2
Gaine of vsury 58.4

W

A Lawfull warre is a meanes of peace 3.4
A Warre not condemned of it selfe 2.4. & 3.4
Warre against the Babylonians, fierce and cruell 13.12,16
Warres proceed from Gods wrath 32.17
Euery war not lawfull 3.4
Warres fall not out by chance, but by Gods direction 5.26. and 7.16. & 13.5. & 19.2
Waters put for the holy Ghost 44.3
Water of the feet for vrin 37.12
Water how necessary 12.23
Way put for estate and affaires 47.27
There is but one way of well liuing 33.6
How Christ is called the way, &c. 49.7
Waies of God for happinesse 64.6
The weake must be supported 42.3
How those of the West testifie their sorrow 15.2

Wicked.

The wicked shall be euerlastingly tormented 66.24
No peace to the wicked 57.20,21
The wicked inexcusable 10.6. and 8.4. and 16.3. & 26.10. and 40.21
The wicked vnprofitable 59.6
The wicked, ministers of Gods wrath 10.5. & 17.3
The wicked mingled among the good 1.28, & 8.18. and 11.9
The wicked not to be feared 8.12
How the wicked and hypocrites must be dealt withall 1.4,10,15,18. & 2.6,10,21. & 3.9. & 8.18. and 9. 12. & 13.9. & 28.7,22. & 29.15,16. & 30.8,15. and 23.14,15. & 42.3. & 48.1,22. & 56.9. & 57.4,15, 21. & 58.1,2,8,13. and 65.15. & 66.6.
The wicked neuer the better for their chastisements 8.21. and 9.10,11,26. and 28.19. and 29.2. and 57.17
How God blindes the wicked 44.18
How they denie that GOD hath formed them 29.16
They cannot hurt as they would 7 9. & 14.25. and 17.6. & 26.5. & 27.1. & 29.6. & 33.1. & 37.7,29. & 42.8. & 43.3. & 54.16. & 59.19.
Their abudance accursed 55.6
Their distresse 21.12
Their pride 8.10
Their succour vaine 30.1. & 31.1. & 57.9
How their blasphemies must be refuted 36.21
Their blinding voluntary 28.13
Their vaine indeuors 17.3. and 54.15
Their estate miserable 3.11. and 5.18. and 15.2. & 21.12. and 28.20. and 57.2.20.
Their euill conscience 59.12
Their vaine and feeble counsels 8.10. & 16.6. and 19.3. and 33.11. and 37.28. and 47.13.
Their company must be eschewed 33.15. and 59.5
Their vaine confidence 14.29. & 16.9,10. & 28.18
Their ioy accursed 22.13. and 28.11
Two sorts of the wicked 66.17
Their vaine boasting 59.4
Their ignorance inexcusable 27.11
Their crueltie 59.8
Their impudencie 57.4
Their horrible ruine vnutterable 30.33
Why compared to a sacrifice 34.6
Their horrible and sudden destruction 3.1. & 5.16. and 10.17,18,26. & 13.6. & 14.30. and 15.1.9. and 17.12,14. & 28.5,6. & 19.1. & 21.10. & 24.17. and 26.14. and 29.17. & 30.13,14 27,30. and 31.9. and 33.4,11,23,24. & 34.4.7. & 37.38. & 40.24. & 50.9. and 51.23. & 59.17,19. & 63.1. & 66.6.18,24.
Their labour is in vaine 17.11. & 57.9,10
Their memory dishonourable 14.22
Their death full of feares 57.2
Their nature 5.27
Their workes, what 59.5
How God serues his turne of them 5.26. & 7.18
God heares none of their praiers 59.1
Their terrors come of God 13.8
Their obstinacie 5.24. and 16.1. & 18.19. and 48.4. and 57.11
Their prosperitie transitorie 5.16. & 7.2. & 8.21. & 13.13. and 15.4. and 16.3.5. and 24.14. and 28.1. & 32.10. and 34.5. and 41.14. and 45.16. and 47.7,8. & 61.7. and 66.15.
Their resurrection shall turne to their eternall perdition 26.19. & 66.3
Their wisdome dangerous 5.21
Their vaine confidence 5.26. and 7.2. and 9 19. & 16.1. and 24.17. and 28.15,18. and 29.1.15. & 32. 10,17. and 47.7. and 50.11. and 59.4.
Their posteritie accursed 14.20. and 34.11
Their voluntary sottishnes 26.11
Their estate eathie ouerthrowne 14.3
How great their pride 2,12
Their pride in regard of their victories 10.10
Their pride shall be ouerthrowne 2,11
Their wicked sayings 9.10. and 10.13. and 22.13. & 28.15,19. and 29.15. & 33.14. and 41.5. and 56.12. and 66.12
God spares the wicked sometimes, for the godlies sake 65.8
We must not alwaies reason with the wicked 36.21
Widowes vnder Gods protection 1.17,23
The widowes cause seldome defended, and why 1.7
Red wine, what it signifies in the Scripture 27.2
East wind hurtfull to Iudeah 27.8
Wind of the Lord for whirlewind 11.15
Wisdome true, what 33.6
Christs admirable wisdome 11.3
Wisdome of the wicked dangerous 5.21
In what sense God is called wise 31.2
How the faithfull may serue for Gods witnesses 44.8
One woolfe will not deuoure another 9.19
Woes 3.9,11. and 5.2,21,22. and 10.1. and 28.1. and 29.15. and 30.1. and 31.1. and 33.1. and 45.9 10.
Pompe and pride of women condemned 3.16,17
Women beare in sorrow because of sinne 65.23
Womens wandring eies true messengers of a dishonest heart 3.16
What vice most predominate in women 3.17
Womens superfluitie flowes from pride 3.16
Womens replies met withall ibid.
A womans cabinet called a world 3.17
Women made an vproare at Rome, because of a law made for restraint of braue apparrell ibid.
Women afraid of Sunburning 3.24
God shewes an admirable power in womens bearing of children 66.9
Word of God, how eternall 40.8
Why compared to letters sealed 8.16
Why resembled to raine 55 10

THE TABLE.

Gods word the rule of vowes 19.21
The rule of all our actions 29.13
The word must not bee separate from the Spirit 59.21
How the word blindes the reprobate 6.10
Why the word is preached to the reprobate 6.10. and 8.4,16
Gods word sufficeth Gods people 14.16. & 28.12
Authoritie of Gods word 8.20
Certaintie of Gods word 52.6,7
Contempt of Gods word the fountaine of all euils 30.9
Whence the obscuritie of Gods word proceedes 45.19
Gods word is plaine ibid.
The maiestie of the word 50.10
Worke put for iudgement 5.19. and 15.19
New worke put for extraordinary 43.19
Worke wrought a popish inuention 11.1
What the workes of the wicked are 59.5
Workes of God how they ought to bee considered 5.12. & 14.5. and 34.16. & 41.5.
The world as it were renued by Christ 65.17. and 66.22
Vnthankfulnesse of the world 41.5. & 49.4
World taken for Babylon 13.1
Taken for the reigons knowne to the Iewes 4.17. See 14.26. & 24.1.4
Worme that dieth not 66.13
Worme Iacob 41.14
Gods worship must be answerable to Gods nature 66.1
Wrath of God much to be feared 9.14. & 13.9
Wee must not iudge of it by outward appearance 5.26
How wrath is attributed to God 47.6
Gods wrath towards the godly lasts not long 12.1. and 54.7,16. and 57.16
Gods wrath against the wicked terrible and insupportable 9.18,21. & 10.4,6,25,26. & 12.1. & 15.9. & 21.17. & 24.1. & 26.17. & 27.4. & 28.19 21. & 30. 31. & 34.10. & 38.12. & 42.25. & 63.1.3.6. & 64.5. 8. & 66.6,15,16, 19
Why Gods wrath is compared to a fire 1.31
Signes of Gods wrath in the starres 13.10
An hyperbolicall description of Gods wrath 13.10
God in wrath remembers mercy 30.18,19. & 47.6 and 60.10. & 64.11
In what sense God is said to haue things written before him 65.6

Y

The acceptable yeere put for the preaching of the Gospell 61.2
Yeere of Iubile ibid.
Yeeres of an hireling 16.14
Yeere of my redeemed 63.4
A yeere in daies 32.10
A child of yeeres 65.20
A sinner of an hundred yeeres 65.20
Fifteene yeeres added to the daies of Hezekias 38.5
Isaiah walkes naked three yeeres 20.3
Iles put for regions lying beyond the seaes 41.1. & 42.4. & 59.10. & 60.9. & 66.19.

Z

Zeale put for indignation 26.11
Inconsiderate zeale taxed 56.4
The zeale of the faithfull moderate 36.21
Zeale of Idolaters 44.8
Zoan, a Citie renowned in Egypt 19.3
Zoar a towne far remote from the Moabites 9.5
Why compared to an heifer of three yeeres old 15.5
Mount Zion consecrated vnto God 17.8
Zion, a Citie of Dauid 33.20
Why preferred before all other mountaines 18.7
In what time founded by the Lord 14.32
Zion publisheth good tidings 40.9

FINIS.

Authors alleaged in this Commentarie: the third number notes the section.

Anacharsis, his saying 5.9.2
Aristotle 40.31.2
Athanasius 14.16
Augustine 6.4.3. & 39.5.1
Taxed 41.22.7. & 42.4.4
A place of his alleaged against the Pelagians 54.13.6
Why Calum is brife in his expositions 53.5.3
Calvins Institutions 58.4
Chalde Paraphrast 11.5.2
Chrysostom his elegant speech 5.8.1
His exposition taxed 53.8
Demosthenes, his saying 47.3.1
Ierom 1.2.3. & 8.7.2. & 14.18.1. & 40. 2.6. & 41.14.2. & 46.7.3. & 49. 12.1.
Horace 21.16.1. & 23.16.1. & 44.15.1
Ionathan 13.15. & 38.1.5
Iosephus 5.10.1. & 19.19.2
An historie of his in 45.4.4
Isocrates 19.1.4
Lycurgus 1.2.3
Lucanus 4.1.3
Plato 3.4.1. & 11.9.1
Plinie 23.4. & 37.12. & 40.31. & 59.6
Physitians of our time 38.21
Sayings of prophane Poets 30.27.2. & 37. 10.3. & 40.26.2
Oecolampadius 53.9.1
Satyrike Poet 14.10.2
Virgil 16.10
Xenophon 13.15.1. & 21.5.1

The names of diuers persons mentioned in the Commentarie.

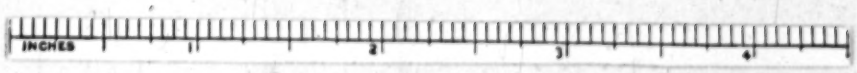
Alexander 13.3. & 23.1.1. & 45.4.4
Athens 16.4
Apollos 41.25.3
Antiochus 54.9.3. & 54.16.1. & 56.9.3
Crassius 37.12
Crœsus 44.2.1.
Saint Clade, Laudis of Lauretta 16.12
Cyrus 44.28. & 45.1
Darius 21.9.1
Domitian 59.12. & 59.6
Dionysius a tyraut 28.4.1
Euill Merodach 14.18.1
Erasmus 22.17.7
Gabrias 21.5.3
Herod 60.6
Iaddus 45.4.4
Ioseph of Aremathea 53.9.1
Iupiter 41.25.3
Iupiter God of the Marchants 65.12
Lyddia an harlot 23.16.1
Lucianists 28.15.3
Luther 57.1
Maximilian the Emperor pretily flouted by his Cooke 19.11.5
Milo 51.9.6
Nebuchadnezzar 23.1.1
Nerua 32.1.3
Nero ibid
Onias 19.19.2
Parmenion 45.4.4
Philip King of Macedon 47.3.1
Pyrrhus and Crœsus 41.22.5
Seleucus 13.12.4
Thomas Moore 22.17.7
Zadius a Iew 40.31.2

FINIS.

PLACES CITED OVT OF THIS Prophecie, in the new Teſtament, and by Maſter Caluin compared and reconciled. The firſt number notes out the Chapter and verſe in the Prophet: the ſecond, the Chapter and verſe in the bookes of the new Teſtament.

Iſaiah
1.9. Rom.9.2.
2.3. Luke 23.30
6.10. Iohn 12.41. Acts 28.25. Rom.11.8
8.1,2,13. 1.Pet.3.14
8.14,15. Matthew 21.44. Luke 2.34
8.18. Rom.9.33. 1.Pet.2.8. Heb.2.13
8.20 Luke 16.29
9.2. Matthew 4.15
9.6. Luke 2.11
9.7. Luke 1.33
10.22 Romans 9.27
10.23. Rom.9.28
11.4. 2.Theſſalonians 2.3
11.10. Romans 15.12
25.8. Reuelations 21.4
28.12. Matthew 11.28
28.16. Rom.9.33
29.13. Mat.15.7,8
31.5. Mat.23.37
35.3. Heb.12.13
40.3. Matthew 3.3
40.14. Romans 11.34

Iſaiah
42.1. Matthew 12.18,19 20
45.9. Rom.9.20,21
45.23. Rom.14.11
49.8. 2.Cor.6.2
50.8,9. Rom.8.33
52.7. Rom.10.15
52.11. 2.Cor.6.17
52.15 Rom.15.21
53.1. Iohn 12.37. Rom.10.16
53.3. Matthew 8.17
53.7. 1.Pet.2.22,23
53.7,8. Acts 8.32 33
53.12. Marke 15.28
54.13. Iohn 6.45
57.7. Matthew 21.13
57.20. Epheſians 2.17
59.7,8. Rom.3.17
59.20. Rom.11.26
61.1. Luke 4.18
64.4. 1.Cor.2.9
65.2. Rom.10.20
66.1. Acts 7.48. and 17.24



FINIS.

Faults eſcaped.

The firſt number notes out the Chapter: the ſecond, the verſe: the third, the ſection: the fourth, the line.

R. P. A. ſignifies { reade. put out. adde.

Chapter 1. verſe 7. ſection 3. line 21. adde, the. 1.16 3.16. reade, ceaſe. 1.24.3.31.r.quiet. 3.12.1.17.a.euen. 5.6 2.10.a.ought. 5.7.2.19.put out, 5.9.1.20.adde a. 6.19.1.32.a.it. 9.12.1.14.a.i. 9.12.1.15.a.i. 9.19.2.12.r. yet he.14.30.3.5.r.of which the King was. 21.1.2.2.a.that. 21.5.1.10.p.yet. 21.5.2.13.p.and. 22.17.2.6.a.Now. 23.2.1.20.a.loſſe. 25.9.3.16.a.ſomewhat. 26.21.5.12.a.it. 27.4.2.69.p.not. 27.8.4.11.put; before and. 27.8.4.12. a.that. 30.1.6.14.p.owne. 32.6.2.18.r.the, for ſow. 32.18.1.33.p.s. 32.19.1.11.a.wee. 33.15.4.6.r.polleth. 33.22. 1.1.r.ſits. 34.7.1.7.r.bounded. 34.11.2.15.a.ought. 35.5.2.13.a.ſwift. 35.8.4.6.place period after the word before, & make period following, a comma. 35.9.1.39.a.that. 35.10.1.28.r.we. 35.10.3.5.p.And. 36.6.3.25.a.not. 36.16.1.10.mend thus: he couertly ſets vp himſelfe, or the Aſſyrian, &c. 36.19.5.22.p.ſo. 36.19.5.23.p.much as. 36.22.1.26.a.nor godlineſſe. 37.4.2.2.r.vnderſtood. 38.10.1.24.p.rather. 38.10.3.42.r.pangs. 39.3.2.2.a.to. 40.2.4 17.a.will. 40.11.2.5.r.meeknes. 40.24.2.3.r.tickle. 40.30.1.26.p.proſperitie. 41.22.3.21.r.reiected. 42.3.4.7.r.furious. 42.16.3.8.a.although. 42.17.2.27.a.their. 42.20.1.7.r.wee. 44.19.1.12.r.but. 44 24.3 20 r. had. 45.9.3.4.a.to. 45.11.5.15.r.it. 45.18.6.16.p.and not. 46.6.8.3.p.ing. 47.13.4. a note in the margine ill pointed. 48.5.2.6.p.came. 48.5.2.6.a.by. 50.4.5.7.r.him. 51.6.1.9.after tempeſts, a period. 54.7.3.13.a.not. 54.16.3.5.after ſimple, a period. 58.4.2.16.a.take. 58.6.1.3...recommended vnto vs. 59.16.4.8.a.the. 61.10.a note miſplaced in the margine. 63.17.6.15.r.which as; for, with. 65.12.6.3.a.are. 65.17.2.13.a.period.

INCHES
1
2
3
4